

Collaborative Outreach

How to Fit the Library into
the Schedules of Students
over-scheduled

Carrie Macfarlane, Amy Frazier
Mary Ellen Bertolini, Jerrica Davy
Middlebury College

Peer Writing Tutor Training

“I learned a lot more about how to navigate the library site and some of the resources that are behind the scenes there. I also feel more comfortable knowing when to answer research and citation questions myself, and when to pass students along to librarians.”

“I have brought it up informally with multiple friends, especially in the first couple of days after the meeting. Specifically, how the research desk can be used for many different types of questions at different stages in the research process.”

~ Peer Writing Tutors

“A bigger, conceptual conversation we had was about reframing research. For example, instead of going into a project looking for a specific, narrow answer... it can be helpful to observe and explore many different arguments to expand your knowledge on your topic.”

~ Peer Writing Tutor

The Write-In

Anderson Freeman Resource Center

Davis Family Library

Choose Your Own Adventure!

Option 1

List a few potential candidates for collaboration on your campus (academic departments, offices, student groups). Or, share a success story!

Option 2

List a few events on your campus that are prime targets for collaborative outreach. Or, share a success story!

Option 3

Already have something in mind? What next steps might you take to make it happen?

Collaborative Outreach

How to Fit the Library into
the Schedules of Students
over-scheduled

Mary Ellen Bertolini: mbertoli@middlebury.edu

Carrie Macfarlane: cmacfarl@middlebury.edu

Amy Frazier: aifrazier@middlebury.edu