

Eduardo Lozano 1931-2007 - A biographical note

Eduardo Lozano was a legendary figure in his own right. He wore so many interlocked hats. During his life time, his sensibilities and interests were wide, deep, diverse, and well-grounded. Indeed! He was versatile in his social, artistic and intellectual tastes and interests. He loved art, literature, politics, music, plants, traveling, animals, nature, ideas, and above all else, people. All-in-all, he was a legend among legends, especially, but not exclusively, in his field: librarianship.

Martha E. Mantilla

Published in Osa Mayor Graduate Student Review

Año XVIII, Número 18, 2007