Community college's fate examined

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Changing the community college to a state college and strengthening some of its courses are parts of an alternative recommendation for State Community College in East St. Louis, which legislators have proposed placing under SIU control.

The Illinois Community College Board will discuss the recommendation Friday at its meeting in Springfield.

A bill has been introduced to the state House of Representatives that would bring the community college and its funding under SIU control because the college has not solved problems found by the Auditor General's Office.

Among the problems, were the overawarding of financial aid, incomplete records of registered students, delays in remitting tuition to the state comptroller and money not returned to the state's General Revenue Fund, John Day, executive director of the Legislative Audit Commission, said.

David R. Pierce, executive director of the community college board, said the staff recommendation proposes that State Community College become a state college, not under the realm of the community college board.

The plan also recommends the college continue its comprehensive curriculum and strengthen adult education, vocational studies and remedial courses; that the college consider contracting out to nearby institutions for some courses and that members of the college's governing body reflect the interests of the state and the East St. Louis area.

Rep. Ted Leverenz, D-Maywood, who sponsors the bill in the Illinois House, said the bill would repeal the 1969 act that created the community college, and it would change the manner in which the college would receive funds.

Although most of the community colleges in Illinois receive funding through the legislature, tuition and fees and local tax revenues, State Community College currently receives funding directly from the General Assembly.

Report places BAS in COLA, advises increase in faculty

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

A consultants report on the future of the Black American Studies program recommends that the program be moved to the College of Liberal Arts and that four professors be hired over two years to reinvigorate the program.

But Seymour Bryson, special assistant to the president for affirmative action, and Jim Scales, chairman of the task force that received the document, said no decision or even recommendation has been made as to what will be done with the program. Bryson did say, as he has in the past, that the question is not whether there will be a BAS program, but what to do with it.

According to the report, which was received from Northwestern educator Jan R. Carew in August, the program's "placement under the School of Social Work, makes its acceptance as a valid part of the University as a whole more difficult."

Carew wrote that the BAS should be more concerned with academic research and that a "special African-(American) collection" should be started in the library.

Scales said his task force is surveying 100 universities to see how their departments or programs have progressed, as well as students to determine their attitudes toward the program.

USG wants to end last semester's controversy

By Miguel Al' a
Staff Writer

The Campus Judicial Board of Governance put an end to last semester's controversy surrounding former Undergraduate Student Government Sen. Juliana Taylor and her fight to keep her position in the senate even though she did not meet academic requirements.

Late last semester the board declared the Undergraduate Student Government's decision not to impeach Taylor unconstitutional.

The Campus Judicial Board of Governance is USG's judicial branch and is responsible for interpreting the constitution. But according to some USG officials, it is unusual for the board to intervene in USG's decision making.

The board also ruled that anyone who is elected or appointed to a senate seat can not accept or remain on the Senate unless that person possesses and maintains the required grade point average.

Controversy surfaced in the USG in the fall after it was revealed that Taylor and other senators did not meet the 2.0 GPA required by its constitution.

While some senators resigned, Taylor refused to give up her position. She maintained that the constitution permitted her to

Taylor also served as the chairwoman for the Committee of Internal Affairs, which — ironically — is the committee that is notified of any GPA violations and partly responsible for upholding USG standards.

Education priority for Southern Illinois

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Education in Southern Illinois will be a priority for the area's newly elected politicians.

State Sen. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, who succeeded Glenn Poshard in the 59th District Senate seat, said he will use influence gained during his 10 years in the Illinois House to work for education.

Rea said that a strong base in the Illinois House as well as a growing base in the Senate will allow him to gather support for education in the Southern Illinois area.

"We're very concerned about funding for education in Illinois," Rea said.

"Education is under funded and the percentage the state pays for education must go up," Rea said

The school districts are carrying a heavy financial burden and the state must take some of that burden away, Rea said.

"The state should have a commitment to education," Rea said.

Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, who is settling in for his first term as a U.S. representative, hopes to influence decisions which will benefit education in Southern Illinois by serving on the Education and Labor Committee.

New State Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Carterville, who took over the 117th District seat in the Illinois House vacated by Jim Rea, was unavailable for comment on his goals for educational issues.

Chemical weapons talks get underway in Geneva

GENEVA (UPI) — The 40-nation Disarmament Conference began preparatory talks Tuesday for a new round of negotiations that were bolstered by an urgent international call this month for a global treaty. The Conference is in a 15-year-old deadlock but analysts said the chances for progress were heightened by Moscow's recent agreement in principle of on-site industrial inspections to discourage treaty violations.

Suspected kidnappers threaten to take action

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The suspected kidnappers of a former prime minister Tuesday threatened to take "all necessary measures" if their demands for a $770,000 ransom and publication of letters sent to two local newspapers were not met. A spokesman for the city public prosecutor's office earlier Tuesday told reporters about the contents of the letters sent to the newspapers Le Soir and Het Laatste Nieuws by the hitherto unknown Socialist Revolutionary Brigade.

Police identify compartment that held bomb

LOCKERBIE, Scotland (UPI) — Police investigating the bombing of a Pan Am jetliner last month that killed 270 people said Tuesday they have identified the baggage compartment where the explosive was hidden, information that would reveal when it was planted. Authorities also know the names of passengers aboard Flight 103 whose luggage was packed in the baggage container and their backgrounds will be checked, police said.

Harsh measures to be taken against rioters

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday the government has authorized harsher measures against stone-throwing Palestinians, including the more liberal use of gunfire by soldiers and the demolition of protesters' houses. The new measures came on the day that three Palestinians died from army gunfire.

Catholics urge normal U.S.-Vietnam relations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A delegation of high-ranking U.S. Roman Catholic officials, just back from Vietnam, urged the United States Tuesday to move toward "more normal" relations with its one-time enemy. "This relationship," the prelates said, "could address both our real problems and our future possibilities by candid diplomatic dialogue and regular contact, rather than isolation and hostility."

Soviets make large purchase of U.S. wheat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union, one day after reporting its grain crop was smaller than expected, bought 530,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat at subsidized prices, the Agriculture Department announced Tuesday. The sale means the Soviets have purchased 13.6 million tons of U.S. corn, wheat, soybeans, soybean meal and sorghum since last Oct. 1.

Final test of shuttle's booster is postponed

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (UPI) — The sixth and final full-scale test firing of a redesigned shuttle booster has been rescheduled for Friday, three days later than had been planned, because of pesky technical problems, officials said Tuesday. Although two shuttles, Atlantis and Discovery, have been safely launched since the January 1986 Challenger disaster, the booster redesign program called for six full-scale ground test firings.

Proposed welfare reforms focus on jobs, child care

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — After more than four months of listening to the ideas of more than 1,100 welfare workers and recipients, a group examining the state's welfare system Tuesday approved reform recommendations ranging from higher benefits for welfare recipients to requiring able adult recipients to work or enroll in education programs. The set of about 100 suggestions was compiled during a series of Illinois Forums on Welfare Reform.

Drug legalization opposed in survey

DEKALB, Ill. (UPI) — Seventy-eight percent of Illinoisans oppose legalizing drugs such as marijuana, heroine or cocaine, according to a survey released Tuesday by Northern Illinois University's Center for Governmental Studies.

"Although it appears that Illinois citizens are a long way from accepting the pro-legalization arguments, the substantial increase in support if crime would be reduced shows that many citizens are open to legalization considerations," said Ellen Dran, a research associate at the center.

The telephone survey of 805 Illinois adults from Nov. 9 to Dec. 4, also shows that such opposition drops to 50.4 percent when Illinois residents are asked about legalizing such drugs if it also means a lower crime rate.

Only 16 percent of the state's residents favor street drug legalization without any qualification, the survey showed.

Opposition to legalization appears strongest in northern Illinois counties, with 59 percent opposed, and weakest in Southern Illinois, with 46 percent opposed, even if crime were to be reduced, Dran said.

Among blacks, 59 percent said they were opposed to legalization, compared with 49 percent of whites, according to the survey.

Another 28 percent would favor legalization if convinced the crime rate would fall, the survey shows. Another 4 percent have other qualifications for legalizing street drugs, such as which drugs would be legalized.

But gender seems to make little difference on the issue. Fifty percent of men and 51 percent of women were opposed to legalization, even if crime would be reduced.

Workshop to help farmers in basic aquaculture

Farmers interested in producing fish as a cash crop can learn all about it at a spring workshop sponsored by SIU-C.

The workshop, held at the Student Center March 14 to 16, offers basic knowledge about species and farming techniques suitable for a

Thomas L. Wellborn, professor of extension fisheries and aquaculture at the University of Florida in Gainesville, will teach the bulk of the course.

Recent changes in dietary habits have led to an annual growth of 5 percent in public demand for fish, a demand now being met largely through imports.

As fish feed consists mostly of corn and soybean products, farmers growing those crops could find aquaculture a profitable sideline business.

The workshop will cover investment requirements, site selection, water quality management, stocking, feeding, fish diseases and treatments, harvesting, trouble-shooting, record-keeping and marketing.

It ends with a tour of the Fountain Bluff Fish Farm in Gorham, where the crop includes catfish, sunfish and largemouth bass.

The sessions are sponsored by the zoology department and the Cooperative Fisheries Research Laboratory, a facility with 30 years experience in aquaculture research.

The workshop fee is $40 and the registration deadline is Feb. 15.

Halloween phase-out troubles officials

HALLOWEEN WON'T give up the ghost — at least not this year.

But 1989 could mark the end of Halloween as we know it — complete with packed streets, hurled beer cans and drunken brawls — if city and University officials follow through with plans for a fall break over Halloween or repeal the City Fair Days.

Since officials will have to deal with at least one more Halloween, the Citizens Advisory Committee is gathering ideas from the Halloween Core Committee, Carbondale Chamber of Commerce and Carbondale Police Department on how to safely survive another year.

ONE SUGGESTION was to give temporary licenses to businesses who already hold liquor licenses so they could sell beer outside from booths. Beer could be served in paper cups as large as a quart to keep the lines from growing long. This is the most feasible and safest idea suggested, but the committee did not seem to take it too seriously.

If Halloween is to happen, and it looks unavoidable, this idea would help ensure safety.

ONE OF THE more popular ideas is to repeal City Fair Days, which allows public consumption of alcohol for two days during the Halloween weekend. But concern has been voiced that this could cause a bigger problem — rioting. Many committee members agreed riots could result if 20,000 people showed up expecting to drink and were not allowed to.

Another suggestion was a can ban. But the committee agreed this also could cause rioting. Doug Diggle, manager of Old Town Liquors and a member of the Halloween Core Committee, said according to a study that he and another liquor store owner conducted, at least 10 beer trucks would have to be brought in along the strip to adequately serve the crowd. But there are not 10 locations where they could be safely placed and serviced.

As for the future of Halloween, President Guyon has called for an end to it. He has called Halloween an "unmitigated disaster," and has suggested the fall break. This would close the University and dorms during the week of Halloween, but because the University does its scheduling so far in advance, Guyon said this could not take effect before 1990 without being "terribly disruptive."

GUYON ALSO HAS called for an end to City Fair Days. But, as several members of the committee agreed, without a fall break, Halloween might revert to what it was before the city implemented Fair Days — students "taking the streets."

Carbondale City Councilman John Mills was concerned about the idea of a fall break because he said he knew of some "very creative" individuals who already were planning for a week-long party in case the break is implemented.

Conspiracies for a week-long party notwithstanding, the fall break seems the best tool for breaking up Halloween, if not ending it altogether.

POLICE CHIEF Ed Hogan seemed to think that many students are bored with Halloween and that some would even be happy to see it go. If this is the case, the combination of a fall break and sheer boredom on the part of the students probably will be a match for any goblins that remain.

Quotable Quotes

"They either throw cans or wet their pants." — Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan describing to the Citizens Advisory Committee the options of bored Halloween revelers.

Reagan's charmed existence

WE HAVE REACHED the last days of the Reagan years, a time for early assessments of his presidency. I thought his "farewell address," delivered last week, said a lot about him. Almost all outgoing presidents deliver a farewell address, some are better than others. George Washington took the opportunity to warn against "entangling alliances," Dwight Eisenhower against the "military-industrial complex." President Reagan spent his time telling us what a great job he'd done.

"We meant to change a nation," he said, "and instead, we changed a world."

It was a vintage Reagan performance, filled with sappy anecdotes, cockeyed history and stories that would bring a tear to the eye of an investment banker. Laugh, I thought I'd die.

Reagan's was a triumph of the California style, that laid-back, looking-fit, what-me-worry manner that the rest of the country used to make fun of. Woody Allen derides California as a place where "the main cultural advantage is making a right turn on red."

I ADMIT to being all but immune to the famous Reagan charm. I remember following him around New Hampshire for a day in 1980 when he was running for the Republican nomination for the presidency. This was at a time when the Iranians were still holding our embassy people, remember. At each stop, with variation in neither word nor emphasis, he would say, approximately: "There was a time when all an American citizen had to do was to put a small American flag in his lapel and he could walk through any revolution anywhere in the world and no one would dare touch him. Such was the respect the world had for our flag. I intend to restore that respect."

It was a heroic performance,

Donald Kaul

Tribune Media Services

and it never failed to bring the crowd to its feet. It convinced me that Mr. Reagan would never be president.

"THE MAN IS either a fool or a phony," I said to myself. "Surely the American people will see through him."

Well, to make a long story short, they didn't. The more they saw of him, the more they liked him. He was not only elected, he was re-elected and leaves office as one of the most popular presidents in our history.

His was a triumph of the California style, that laid-back, looking-fit, what-me-worry manner that the rest of the country used to make fun of. Recall the scene in "Annie Hall" when Woody Allen derides California as a place where "the main cultural advantage is making a right turn on red." Well, we all make right turns on red now. Ronald Reagan turned out to be surfing the wave of the future.

I STILL DON'T understand it fully. Surely part of his attraction is the grace and courage with which he overcame an assassin's bullet and several bouts with cancer. His remark that he didn't have cancer, his nose did, was typical of the goofy optimism of the man and that optimism spilled into every area of his public life. He made being president look like fun and after Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter, to whom it seemed a cruel sentence, that was welcome.

But there are a lot of college students who make school look like fun, largely because they ignore their responsibilities; that doesn't make them good students. Ronald Reagan's presidency looked easy because it was easy; he didn't spend much time at it.

THAT SEEMS TO be a minority view these days. Commentators are falling over themselves in praise of the departing president. Some say he's been a great president, some merely a good one. George Will, the tin-whistle Walter Lippmann, says "When passions cool and the dust raised by current contentions settles, judicious historians are apt to place Reagan in the front rank of the second rank of American presidents."

I don't know what George smokes but I wouldn't do it in public. One looks at the Reagan presidency and sees the prosperity and the improved relations with the Soviet Union, yes. But one also sees environmental problems ignored, sleazy influence peddling by high-ranking officials, a corporate economy gone mad with greed, a financial system flirting with disaster, an increasing disregard for the less favored of our society, a loss of international leadership in commerce and, above all, a huge budget deficit that begins to resemble the eggplant that ate Chicago.

One looks at the Reagan Presidency and sees a nation that has been led into a dream world that is as resistant to reality as a Hollywood musical

MORE THAN THAT, one sees a nation that has been led into a dream world that is as resistant to reality as a Hollywood musical. It's a comforting world, but someday we're going to have to face cold, hard facts.

I think that judicious historians of the future will seat Ronald Reagan near the back of the bus, right next to Calvin Coolidge. Like Coolidge, he was a lucky man who lived a charmed career and whose successor, far more competent than he, pays the price of his encyclopedic disinterest in governing.

There's no sense arguing about it now. There'll be plenty of time for that when the results are in.

Godspeed, Mr. President. I hope I'm as wrong about you now as I was eight years ago.

Coming attractions at SIU-C: Anarchy, apathy and order

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

With the spring semester comes the new year and the time for all good journalists to come to the aid of their readers with predictions for 1989. I boast no psychic abilities, but say of the following what George Orwell said of "1984": it's not that I think these things will happen just that (with the correct circumstances and lunar configurations) they could happen.

JANUARY: City Councilman John Mills says he is onto a plot that would foil the city's plans to put an end to the Halloween street party. Undertaken by what Mills calls "very creative individuals," the conspiracy presumably would instigate a sort of marathon party for the entire week of the midsemester Halloween break. A break that President John C. Guyon hopes would rid Carbondale of its annual celebration.

Embattled Undergraduate Student Sen. Juliana Taylor says the fact that she is on academic suspension is no reason for the Undergraduate Student Organization to impeach her from her seat. Taylor says the USG constitution is "ambiguous" on this point and refers the matter for further study to the committee of which she is chairwoman.

FEBRUARY: Police Chief Ed Hogan recommends to the City Council that all liquor stores be closed over Halloween weekend. Councilman Mills shoots down the idea as authoritarian and insists on interrogation of those he labels "creatives."

The USG passes a resolution condemning efforts by the city and University to do away with Halloween saying the "the city and University search for more creative solutions to the problem of Halloween violence." Councilman Mills orders that the USG be detained for questioning.

MARCH: The race for the City Council heats up as the "C" word becomes a campaign issue — each side hurling accusations that other candidates are too creative.

Juliana Taylor says that her committee should have a recommendation before the end of the school year on whether she should be impeached. When she is accused of delaying tactics Taylor retorts: "I only use the rules I don't make them."

USG committee member Marvin Tanner is endorsed by USG committee member Drayton Roose in his bid for city councilman. Roose and Tanner's rally in the free forum area to combat student apathy is highly rated by the six people in attendance.

APRIL: A European society that recognizes slapstick talent in the United States presents the USG with a first place for best performance by a comedy troupe.

City elections are finally here as students stay away from the polls in droves. After his defeat, Marvin Tanner blames student apathy for the loss. One analyst notes that the American Tap held a "two for one" special all night before the election.

MAY: Juliana Taylor announces that the USG constitution allows a student who is on academic suspension to remain in the organization as long as they are reinstated the next semester. Her detractors call the interpretation "creative."

JUNE: The City Council calls in consultants from Israel, South Africa and the Marion Federal Penitentiary for advice on how they might quell unrest on the black holiday. Council members express pleasure with the results of their meetings. "Not a creative one among them," one council member says appreciatively.

JULY: A bureaucratic mix-up causes a delay in federal money for the proposed mass transit system. USG members expect the system to be operational before the second millennium.

The battle for a state tax increase to support education and human services sends the lobbying forces back home beaten. Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit introduces a plan to reduce conflicts of interest by University bureaucrats in which administrative salaries would be doubled but no money paid for speaking engagements would be allowed. Pettit says these steps are necessary to "keep pace with other state universities."

AUGUST: A student group called Organized Anarchy is formed. Their meeting places, or "spontaneous assimilation locations, are determined by throwing a dart into a University parking map. The group's "chief by fiat" says his organization "was collated to combat the unorganized apathy on campus."

SEPTEMBER: Heeding advice from Marion prison officials the city announces a "kinder gentler lockdown" for Halloween. People are allowed out doors for two hours a day during the weekend, longer on weekdays. Astute party observers notice that only foreign students and midlevel University bureaucrats flee the city.

OCTOBER: The Carbondale police launch "Operation Big Mother" as they purge the city and University community of suspected creatives. No one on the staff of the student publication "Grassroots" is incarcerated.

A poor dart thrower in Organized Anarchy misses the University parking map upon which they determine where to hold their weekly meetings and careful transposing reveals that the dart would have landed on South Illinois Avenue, the traditional location for the Halloween street party.

As Organized Anarchy marches toward the Strip, students and others all over the city shunt the bonds of the lockdown and revel the entire night. Organized Anarchy leaders later refer to the event as one of author Thomas Pynchon's "anarchist miracles." As a result of the spontaneous mass assimilation SIU-C jumps from no. 17 to no. three in Playboy's party school ratings.

NOVEMBER: Asserting that no student who voted on the referendum for a mass transportation system will be at the University when buses actually go into service in 2001, the city takes de facto control over the proposed system. The move is generally seen as retaliation for the Halloween incident.

DECEMBER: The Board of Trustees pass Chancellor Pettit's recommendations for an administrative pay doubling, a faculty pay raise and a tuition hike for students — the third in three years — as Morris Library falls out of the top 60 rated research libraries in the country. Former president of the University Delyte Morris turns over in his grave.

Prof speaks for the rights of unborn children

Recently we read in the paper about the girl in Carbondale that allowed her newborn baby to die then put the baby in a dumpster. We all felt remorse and probably some anger. But let us look at this further. Several years ago in Los Angeles there were over 500 babies that were found in a dumpster. But what happened in Los Angeles was legal. What happened in Carbondale was not. What was the difference? The 500 dead babies were the result of legal abortion. Amazing isn't it! Amazing that we legally kill over 1.5 million little children like this every year.

But you can do something to speak out for the children who cannot speak out for themselves. This Sunday is Sanctity of Life Sunday, the 16th anniversary date of the Roe v.

Wade decision for allowing unborn children to be killed. The annual march will start at the old train station in Carbondale at 2 p.m. From 3:00 to 4:30 p.m. there will be a pro-life rally at the SIU-C Student Center in Ballroom B. Be a part of the activities to uphold the value of human life. —

Child porn law questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Massachusetts law that made it a crime to photograph children in the nude should not have been struck down as unconstitutional, the state attorney general told the Supreme Court Tuesday.

Despite the assertion by James Shannon, members of the court repeatedly brought the argument back to the fact that the law has since been amended by the Massachusetts Legislature to narrow its scope.

The line of questioning by Justices Antonin Scalia and Sandra Day O'Connor suggests that it may not be necessary for the court to reach the constitutional question of whether the original law violated the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech.

Nonetheless, Shannon argued that it was important to uphold the original version of the law because of some 27 prosecutions under the old law and uncertainty over how the new statute will work. Only Kansas has a similar law.

Richard Vita, arguing on behalf of a man convicted under the old law, argued the lower court decision to strike down the law was correct.

Media attention affects jury selection for trial

Murder trial held for half-brother of Jesse Jackson

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Jury selection was speeded up Tuesday in the murder trial of Jesse Jackson's half brother, Noah Robinson, who is accused of hiring a Chicago street gang to wipe out a former friend.

Seven of the 14 needed prospective jurors had been seated by Tuesday afternoon and Circuit Judge James E. Moore split the remaining panel into four groups in an attempt to hasten the jury selection process.

A defense request to move the trial from Greenville to Charleston County, about 200 miles away, was denied by Moore when the trial began Monday, but the judge said he would reconsider the issue upon completion of jury selection.

Robinson's lawyers contend the 46-year-old millionaire businessman cannot receive a fair trial in Greenville because of the extensive media attention the case has attracted. They asked each potential juror whether the coverage had affected their ability to hear the case without prejudice.

Defense attorney Robert Simone of Philadelphia, noted for his success in defending organized crime figures, said he was disappointed that Moore has not disqualified more of those who admitted being influenced by the news coverage.

"It seems everybody has read something about the case, and some of them have formed an opinion," he said. "I don't want to get stuck with some of these opinionated jurors."

Twelve jurors and two alternates were being selected for the case, and Simone predicted the process could be completed sometime Wednesday, allowing for opening arguments and testimony to begin.

Robinson could face the electric chair if convicted of murder and conspiracy in the January 1986 slaying of one-time friend Leroy "Hambone" Barber, a paroled armed robber who was gunned down in Greenville at a building owned by Robinson.

Authorities allege Robinson solicited members of the El Rukn Chicago street gang to carry out the killing, but Robinson has denied involvement in any criminal activity.

He also has been charged with arranging a knife attack on a woman who initially said she witnessed Barber's violent death. However, Janice Denise Rosemond retracted her story after recovering from the stabbing incident in her Greenville apartment.

Moore ordered tighter security measures, apparently out of concern that members of the El Rukn gang would attempt to disrupt the proceedings or intimidate potential witnesses.

Robinson and Jackson, who have the same father, both grew up in Greenville. Jackson gained fame as a civil rights leader and later as a presidential candidate, while Robinson built a business empire that includes construction companies and fast food franchises in Chicago, as well as extensive real estate holdings in his hometown.

Car accident claims the life of Bentsen's elderly father

EDINBURG, Texas (UPI) — The 95-year-old father of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, was killed in an automobile crash Tuesday when he pulled into the path of another car on a rural road in South Texas, authorities said.

Lloyd Bentsen Sr., introduced to much of the nation when he campaigned for his son's vice presidential bid last year, was pronounced dead at the scene of the wreck about 5 miles west of Edinburg, not far from his large estate in Mission. Two people in the other car were injured and hospitalized.

"It was reported by troopers at the scene that Mr. Bentsen failed to yield the right of way at a stop sign," Cox said.

Bentsen Jr. learned of his father's death when he returned to his Senate office after introducing fellow Texan James Baker to the committee weighing Baker's nomination to be secretary of state. Spokesman Jack Devore said the senator had no comment and had arranged to fly home.

Bentsen Sr. had been introduced to many Americans in person or on television last year when he campaigned actively for his son despite his age and made an appearance at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

Originally from White, S.D., Bentsen Sr. moved to South Texas on military assignment in 1917 and returned after World War I to seek his fortune.

Bentsen Sr. married Edna Ruth "Dolly" Colbath Bentsen, who died thirteen years ago.

Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday, "Mr. Bentsen was a great Texas entrepreneur who contributed much to the people of our state, particularly those in South Texas."

New policy allows Koreans to travel more freely

By K. Connie Kang
San Francisco Examiner

SEOUL — After decades of being forced to keep themselves and their money at home in order to amass foreign exchange for national development, South Koreans are finally able to live it up abroad.

Under a new policy which took effect this month, Koreans can freely travel abroad and take as much as $10,000 with them. The liberalized travel policy, combined with the rapidly appreciating Korean currency — the Korean won increased 17 percent in value against the U.S. dollar last year alone — has suddenly made foreign travel a favorite way for South Koreans to spend money.

"We've worked very hard and earned a lot of money, so we should enjoy the fruits of our labor," says Lee Jun-sok, a magazine writer who has helped coordinate overseas travel.

Travel agents say business is brisk and foreign embassies in Seoul report an unprecedented request for visas.

"We're busy as the dickens," said U.S. Consul General Edward Wilkinson. He said the U.S. Embassy here issued 11,787 visas last month — an all-time record and a 100 percent increase over the same month in 1987.

"We want Koreans to bring bags of won and spend their money in the U.S.," Wilkinson said. "Koreans have disposable income. We know Koreans, like Japanese, spend money when they travel — three or four times more than we do."

Some of Seoul's major travel agencies say they have so much business they are being forced to turn down clients.

"I have a lot more people who want to travel than there are seats available," said Hwang Jun-bae, of Daehan Travel in downtown Seoul.

Choi Won-bom of Hanju Travel says people are snapping up package trips to Southeast Asian countries, costing from $2,000 to $3,000.

"I am really looking forward to seeing places I have only seen on television and movies," said Kim Soon-ae, who will be traveling with her husband to Taiwan, Hong Kong, Bangkok, Singapore and Bali. This will be the first overseas trip for the couple, both in their 50s.

He said none of the information gained will be given undue weight in the recommendation the task force plans to make to Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs, by the third week in February.

Speculating on the results of a student survey, Scales related the problem of drawing conclusions from the data. "You're probably going to get a lot of black students say 'yes by God we ought to have a degree granting program (in BAS).' You're probably going to get a lot of white students who say 'I don't give a damn.'" Bryson said, "It's a lot more complex than the students realize."

There have been loud complaints from students and Luke Tripp, the only professor who works exclusively within BAS, that administrators are attempting to do away with BAS by denying faculty in tenure track positions tenure.

Tripp and another BAS faculty member Maria Mootry were denied tenure on the basis of a lack of published material.

The college does not receive funds from tax revenues. Economically, the East St. Louis area could not support an institution of higher education.

Leverenz, a member of the Legislative Audit Commission, said the college needs a new form of control. "I have been on the audit commission for 12 years, and this is the worst run institution in state government," Leverenz said.

Richard Bonner, president of State Community College, said the legislation is "ludicrous." "SIU is a senior institution and we are a community college. They have two different missions."

Bonner also noted that the college has contested the audit's findings and that the finding contained factual errors and is being reworded.

SIU administrators and the Board of Trustees will take a "closer look" at legislation to put State Community College under the wing of the SIU System, Vice Chancellor James Brown said.

"It is an interesting bill," Brown said. "It has to be looked at closely. It would call for the Board of Trustees to take on considerable responsibility." Administering a community college has not been in the realm of SIU's thinking, Brown said.

D-Murphysboro, said his close association with the University and his serving on the Higher Education Committee will prompt him to continue working hard for education.

Beginning his eighth term as an Illinois legislator, Richmond said his past record shows his dedication to education for Southern Illinois and added "anything which benefits education, I will get behind."

State Rep. David Phelps, D-

Eldorado, serves on the Elementary and Secondary Education Committee and is in his third term in the Illinois House.

Phelps said he hopes legislators and Gov. James R. Thompson are able to work out a plan so that funding for education is not spread too thinly.

"The No. 1 priority is taking care of education," Phelps said.

said only the president and CIA chairperson know who is in violation of the academic requirements.

"When I confronted her or her GFA she said she would put up a fight," Hall said.

John Steinbeck, a former East Campus senator, said he resigned from his position because of the controversy surrounding Taylor and the "big mess" in the USG that resulted from it.

"Juliana Taylor was a bad egg," Steinbeck said. "Instead of resigning, she dragged it on. It was just one bad person who gave USG a bad name."

However, Sen. Mike Putzek supported Taylor in her attempt to remain on the Senate. Putzek said the main issue was not Taylor's GPA, but the constitution's ambiguity.

"I wasn't about to impeach anyone without solid ground rules," Putzek said. "The constitution's wording was just too vague."

Vice President Larvester Gaither said he "was appalled" that the senate dragged out the issue, but now the controversy is over. He added that academic eligibility would continue to be one of the USG's biggest concerns.

Metal detectors to be used for security at inauguration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With a president, a president-elect, his vice president-elect and almost all the nation's leadership on an inaugural platform before 140,000 people, their safety — and their government's stability — is paramount.

For this Inauguration Day, law enforcement agencies have erected the most extensive security system ever seen on Capitol Hill — one so tight that for the first time, every inaugural visitor Friday must pass through metal detectors at just four entry points.

"It's a unique responsibility," said officer Dan Nichols, a Capitol Police Department spokesman. "Events in the world today have changed the face of the inauguration, and changed the way we have to respond to the possibility of events, threats.

We learn something new every time we do this."

Gone are the days when an inaugural ticket holder could park nearby, stroll to the grounds and take a seat.

This year each of the 140,000 people with invitations must go through a magnetometer to enter the Capitol grounds. The Secret Service wanted to do that in 1965, but bitter cold forced the ceremony indoors.

The security chores are spread among a number of agencies: the Capitol Hill police, the Secret Service, the District of Columbia Police Department, the FBI and others.

There is no firm number of officers and agents involved, but the entire 1,270-person Capitol Police force will be at work Friday, and many in the 4,055-person city police department will be detailed to the parade route and other duties. The Secret Service's uniform division will be helping out at Capitol Hill.

Law enforcement authorities, who will work out of several command posts in and around Capitol Hill, were reluctant to discuss specifics of the plan assembled with a year of planning.

But because of the use of metal detectors, they warn those coming to the West Front of the Capitol to come early, use public transportation and not bring coolers, thermos bottles or packages onto the grounds. Tickets are color coded to direct visitors to their particular entrance and viewing area.

Entry to the Capitol itself will be severely restricted — different passes are needed to enter the House and Senate side, and both are needed to move back and forth within the building.

Inauguration attracts attention of opposers

WASHINGTON (SHNS)

— While inaugural planners put the finishing touches on the $25 million extravaganza for President-elect George Bush, more than 75 groups have organized counter-inaugural events to espouse everything from anti-fur to ERA to Iran-Contra conspiracy theories.

"We came together to oppose the extravagant inauguration and express outrage with a government that's failed to meet the needs of its people," Lisa Fitchian, co-coordinator of the Washington Peace Center, said. "We saw this as a time to come together in a united voice."

The center is one of the main groups behind the "Counter Inaugural Coalition for a People's Agenda," which has scheduled several anti-inaugural protests, demonstrations and educational events to coincide with official events. Coalition supporters and other groups plan to assemble outside most of the inaugural events to distribute leaflets.

Among the counter-inaugural events:

On Wednesday night, those attending the inauguration's most expensive and exclusive event, the black-tie, $1,500-a-ticket inaugural Dinner at Union Station, will enter past a free outdoor banquet for the hungry and homeless.

Young AIDS victim anxious to see hero, George Bush, at inaugural

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A 7-year-old boy who contracted the AIDS virus through blood transfusions plans to attend the inauguration this week of his hero, George Bush — a trip made possible by newspaper readers who donated money for the trip.

Although Keith Croffoot of Belleville, Ill., became ill during the weekend and remained hospitalized Tuesday, his mother, Deanna Croffoot, said she expected he would be able to make the trip to Washington for the Friday inauguration.

Keith became ill Sunday with flu-like symptoms and was admitted to Cardinal Glennon Children's Hospital in St. Louis, his mother said.

"I've talked to the doctors — and nothing is 100 percent guaranteed — but they say he definitely should be able to make the trip," Croffoot said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "His system is being built up so that when he does get out there, he'll feel a lot better."

Croffoot said she and Keith planned to leave Thursday morning for Washington.

Keith first began to appreciate Bush last year when the vice president talked about AIDS in a newspaper interview. Bush had said that if his grandchild got AIDS through a blood transfusion, he hoped that the child would not be subject to discrimination from people who believe mistakenly that the disease can be transmitted through casual contact.

"I read Keith virtually all there is about AIDS because he wants to know," Croffoot said. "If I don't read it and he sees it in the paper, he insists I read it or he tries to read it himself. I always share the positive news with him."

"When I read him what Bush said, he said, 'Mom, that's the vice president saving that...'"

Woman buys $1,200 pair of shoes

Scrrips Howard News Service

Norma Ikard of Santa Teresa, N.M., is getting a real kick from her newest shoes.

For $1,200, Ikard has purchased a pair of drop-dead-chic shoes from Neiman Marcus: white satin high heels decorated with red, silver and blue rhinestones that create a Stars and Stripes pattern.

Neiman Marcus, the swanky Dallas-based department store, offered the shoes in mid-December as the perfect patriotic footwear for the Bush inaugural celebration.

Ikard, however, is the only person in the country to purchase the shoes, which were made to order for her size six-and-a-half foot. She also bought the matching $875 handbag.

The shoes have attracted worldwide attention. Camera crews from Japan and Australia have filmed them, and they were scheduled to be featured on "Good Morning, America" on Wednesday.

"I'm crazy about shoes," Ikard said. "I buy shoes and then find something to go with them." She says she can't even estimate how many pairs of shoes she already owns.

The biggest problem was finding a gown to complement the shoes, which have red and silver horizontal stripes running along the outside

Housewares industry sales up, exports doubled

CHICAGO (UPI) — Housewares industry sales climbed 12.6 percent to $35.2 billion last year and exports more than doubled, the National Housewares Manufacturers Association reported Tuesday.

The NHMA "State of the Industry," released at the association's International Housewares Exposition, was prepared by the Braxton Associates division of Touche Ross based on a survey of NHMA members.

"The state of the housewares industry is excellent," Don C.

Hawley, a Braxton Associates partner, told NHMA members at the exposition.

Industry sales were up 12.6 percent, to $35.2 billion, in 1988, compared to $31.3 billion in 1987, Hawley said.

"If we eliminate inflation from that figure, it is still outstanding growth," Hawley said.

Government figures show the general level of inflation for the past year at about 4.5 percent.

"Subtracting this 4.5 percent from 12.6 percent nominal growth gives us a real growth rate of 8.1 percent. This real growth rate exceeds historical rates for both GNP and disposable personal income, and from our experience, it is among the highest growth rates for any U.S. industry segment," Hawley said.

Stockpiled wares up in industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Business stockpiles swelled 0.4 percent in November, the biggest increase since September, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

Manufacturers' and trade inventories, adjusted for seasonal variations but not for price changes, were estimated at $753.6 billion at the end of November, the department's Census Bureau said.

The inventories were 0.4 percent ahead of the end of October level and 7.6 percent above the end of November 1987, the bureau said. It was the steepest rise since a 0.9 percent jump from August to September.

Stockpiles rose less than 0.1 percent from the end of September to the end of October, revised Census Bureau figures showed.

Bulging inventories could mean either price cuts or factory slowdowns in coming months to move goods of warehouse shelves and backlots.

However, the ratio of inventories to sales has stayed at a steady 1.5 months' supply for the past two months, which is considered a healthy level and one not likely to prompt sales.

"Our information is that inventories are really pretty good" except for a "little overhang" in automobiles, said Lawrence Chimerine, chief economist for the WEF, Group of economic forecasters in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

"What today's numbers suggest is that ... inventories are not going to be a big limiting factor on growth as we go forward," Chimerine said.

Excluding the huge automotive sector, total retailers inventories were up 0.7 percent, the bureau said.

Rising stock leads firm to drop offer

By Joe Blade
Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune

The rising price of CVN Companies stock has forced the withdrawal of an acquisition offer by Tele-Communications Inc., a Denver cable-TV company that already owns part of CVN.

Tele-Communications withdrew its offer of $14 in cash and $4 in subordinated debt per share after CVN's stock closed above $18 Friday. The stock's higher price in over-the-counter trading made it likely that shareholders would vote down a lower-priced takeover offer.

However, after word was released that Tele-Communications had dropped its offer, CVN's stock dropped $2.75 a share Monday.

Satellite backlog will take many years to rectify

PATRICK AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (UPI) — The backlog of high-priority satellites grounded by the Challenger disaster and other rocket failures will not be eliminated until at least 1992, even though up to 26 major rocket launches are planned for the East Coast this year alone, officials said Tuesday.

Col. Lawrence Gooch, commander of the Eastern Space and Missile Center at Patrick Air Force Base, said the Air Force is finally on the verge of overcoming a string of rocket failures in 1985 and 1986 that devastated the nation's military space program.

Even so, the sheer number of grounded payloads will not be erased for years to come.

"I don't think that we will have worked off the backlog of satellites until probably 1992 or 1993," Gooch said. "I believe we probably have on the order of 40 satellites (stored) in clean rooms."

Gooch said 25 to 30 satellites in the backlog are military payloads, the rest belonging to NASA or private industry.

As a result of the Challenger disaster and the back-to-back failures of powerful unmanned manned space shuttle with a robust fleet of unmanned launchers to insulate high-priority national security payloads from delays caused by problems with any single rocket system.

Gooch said the mixed fleet policy will begin paying off this year with the debut flights of new Titan 4 rockets, upgraded Delta 2s and more powerful Atlas-Centaur space boosters.

The Air Force operates two major space launch facilities: one in the Cape Canaveral area and the other at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. Space shuttles are only launched from the East Coast and, in general, fewer major launches take place on the West Coast.

Given NASA's plans to launch seven shuttle flights this year, Gooch said up to 26 major East Coast space launches are planned for 1989.

The first of at least 23 Titan 4s, second only to the space shuttle in payload capacity, is scheduled for its maiden blastoff in the next two months. Launch had been planned for last October but it was delayed by problems with the rocket's giant nose-cone the Air Force to launch Global Positioning System navigational satellites, is scheduled to make its debut around Feb. 7.

That flight will mark the first of at least six and possibly seven military Delta 2 launches scheduled for 1989. In addition, rocket builder McDonnell Douglas is readying two commercial Delta 2s for launch along with an older Delta scheduled for blastoff in late February or March to carry a Strategic Defense Initiative payload into orbit for the "Star Wars" program.

And finally, the first new Atlas Centaur rocket, carrying a commercial payload, is scheduled for a fall liftoff. Altogether, three Atlas Centaurs, built by General Dynamics Corp., are scheduled for blastoff in 1989, including one damaged in 1987 in a launch pad accident.

"The action is upon us," Gooch said.

"I don't think that we will have worked off the backlog of satellites until probably 1992 or 1993."

—Lawrence Gooch

Titan 34D rockets, the Air Force embarked on an unprecedented military space buildup to guarantee "assured access to space" for important military payloads.

The buildup reflected a move toward a "mixed fleet" strategy combining NASA's fairing, minor trouble with its refurbished launch pad and other technical snags.

Two Titan 4s and the last two Titan 34Ds in the Air Force inventory are scheduled for launch in 1989, along with two commercial Titans marketed by builder Martin Marietta.

Shooting results in 5 deaths

STOCKTON, Calif. (UPI) — A man in combat fatigues opened fire Tuesday with an automatic rifle and two pistols in a school playground, killing at least five students and wounding about 30 others, many critically, then committed suicide, police said.

The attacker entered the playground of the Cleveland Elementary School between 11:30 a.m. and noon and fired with two handguns, possibly automatic pistols, and an AK-47 assault rifle, Deputy Police Chief Ralph Tribble said.

Bullets hit at least 35 youngsters, killing five of the children playing in the quiet, tree-lined enclave of downtown Stockton, 120 miles east of San Francisco, Tribble said.

Fifteen were hospitalized in critical condition, Tribble said. Mike Cockrell of the San Joaquin County Office of Emergency Service said only that "many of the students" were in critical condition. The victims were taken to hospitals in Stockton as well as in neighboring Modesto.

The motive and the identity of the assailant were a mystery, officials said.

"We've had a very terrible tragedy in our community," Tribble said.

Ellen Rich of St. Joseph's Medical Center in Stockton said the young survivors told her the attacker was "dressed in satanic attire."

But Deputy Police Chief Jack Calkins said the gunman was clad "in military fatigues clothing, wore a black vest."

Tribble said the gunman was wearing full combat fatigues, a flak jacket and ear plugs. He was firing an AK-47 "with a full banana clip."

Stockton Unified School District spokesman John Klose said the attack occurred between 11:30 a.m. and noon during recess on the recreation yard at the school.

Death penalty date set 10 years after crime

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Gov. Bob Martinez signed a new death warrant Tuesday for mass murderer Theodore "Ted" Bundy, who lost his bid to have the Supreme Court overturn his death sentence for the slaying of a 12-year-old girl.

"Ted Bundy is one of the most notorious killers in our nation's history, and he has used legal maneuverings to dodge the electric chair for 10 years," said Martinez, who signed the warrant after Bundy's appeal was rejected Tuesday morning.

"Justice has been on hold for a decade," the governor said, "and it's about time Ted Bundy paid for his crimes."

Bundy's new death warrant is the second he has received after his conviction in the death of Kimberly Diane Leach of Lake City, Fla. He is scheduled to die Jan. 24 at 7 a.m.

In Washington, Bundy's lawyer Jim Coleman said he was "shocked" that Martinez had signed a warrant giving him only one week to mount an appeal.

"It almost amounts to playing games with the judicial system, to treat something as serious as an execution — regardless of who the defendant is — in a manner that requires a defendant to try and save his life in just seven days," Coleman said.

Coleman plans to seek a stay of execution in Florida and federal courts. He said he would ask the courts to let him present a new argument about the constitutionality of Bundy's trial, but declined to specify what that argument would be.

"If the (legal) process works, I believe we have a good chance of winning a stay," he said.

Martinez countered that Bundy has had 11 years to defend himself.

Beer drinkers will pay more to enjoy a drink next month

Scripps Howard News Service

How's this for the couch potato blues? First cable TV, now beer.

That's right, that bottle of Bud is going to cost more next month. And very likely, that can of Coors, too.

Industry leader Anheuser-Busch recently notified wholesalers in various sections of the country that it will raise prices about 23 cents a case Feb. 1.

Three other brewers — Stroh, Miller and G. Heileman — followed Busch on what has become a nearly annual price hike.

Adolph Coors Co. has not announced an increase, but industry insiders expect the Golden, Colo.-based brewer, the nation's fourth-largest, to join in.

"We can't comment on prices until it's appropriate — if then," a Coors spokeswoman said.

In some areas, supermarket beer could cost a dime more a six pack, and some liquor stores plan to raise prices up to a quarter a six-pack.

"The increases are very similar to last year at this same time," said Russ Dispense, vice president of King Soopers. The grocery chain plans to pay from 30 cents to $1 more a case, depending on the distributor.

"We're being told the increases are due to the cost of ingredients, particularly barley and rice, going up because of last summer's drought."

"Everything points to a Feb. 1 increase," said Don Taylor, vice president of Murray Distributing Co., a Denver distributor of Heileman.

"We've been told Busch has already notified the grocery chains, who are always the first to know. That means the liquor stores and bars should follow suit within the next week, at the outside."

'Moonwalker' video rich in special effects

Scripps Howard News Service

Let's face it: Michael Jackson will never have to worry about being called a starving artist.

Based on CBS Music Video's 300,000 pre-orders for his latest video — half the number of Thriller videos sold — the gloved one is already moonwalking his way to the bank.

"Moonwalker" is a lively, sophisticated and at times gratingly trite video that couches Jackson's acrobatic dancing in a sea of special effects. We're talking Spielbergian levels here: exploding spaceships, dissolving freeze-frames and an obligatory cast of thousands.

The video opens with a live stage version of "Man in the Mirror," taped on Jackson's recent worldwide tour. It then breezes into a retrospective of the singer's 24-year career, complete with glimpses of early television specials he did with The Jackson 5.

But the production values hit their peak in the next quartet of "Badder," a cute spoof on the "Bad" video that uses a cast of children; the expensive and expansive animation of "Speed Demon," which unfolds like a Road Runner cartoon, and "Leave Me Alone," recently hyped on music video shows for its brisk sense of self-parody. In this collage of images, Jackson pokes fun at himself and the media by incorporating scenes of a shrine to Liz Taylor, a duet with the Elephant Man's skeleton and scenes of Bubbles the chimp.

But the highlight of "Moonwalker" is the 40-minute "Smooth Criminal" film, a movie within a movie that casts Jackson as a low-key superhero pitted against Joe Pesci as a zealous drug lord out to corrupt the minds of all children.

Like so much about the Michael Jackson of the '80s, "Smooth Criminal" is both slick and excessive. Children will delight in the loads of special effects and suave dance steps. But, somehow, the music gets lost in the mayhem. Jackson goes through a metamorphosis in one scene that makes the Transformers look like recycled Tupperware.

The real surprise of "Moonwalker" is Jackson's stage version of the Beatles' "Come Together." Simply put, it's electrifying.

Technically, "Moonwalker" is the most complex made-for-tape music production ever mounted. Every frame oozes money.

Still, one hopes the next Michael Jackson video will be a little more down to earth. A man of his talent doesn't need overwrought special effects to leave a lasting impression.

Toronto-based Canada Malting Co. is largest producer of malt in world

Toronto Globe and Mail

TORONTO — Canada's largest producer of malt for the beer, spirits and food sectors is becoming a major player on the world scene by acquiring a large U.S. malt producer for $125 million.

Toronto-based Canada Malting Co. Ltd. said the purchase of Great Western Malting Co., a division of Penwest Ltd. of Bellevue, Wash., makes the Canadian company the largest producer of malt in the world.

Neil Wickham, an analyst with Canarim Investment Corp. Ltd., hailed the move as a good one for the company that will probably prompt it to "really blossom" within two years when about half the debt related to the purchase should be paid off.

The takeover comes at a time when Canadians' consumption of alcoholic beverages is sliding as the population grows older and watches its health and waistline more closely.

Because of the stagnant market for beer, liquor and wine, Canada Malting had the options of either moving into some other industry or going outside the country if it wanted to grow, said Jonathan Bamberger, vice president of finance and corporate development.

It chose the latter option, he said, because "we feel most comfortable in malting and we know it well."

Penwest selected Canada Malting over several international bidders, the Canadian company said.

Great Western, the largest malt producer in the western United States, has plants in Vancouver, Wash., Pocatello, Idaho, and Los Angeles.

Gadhafi wants worldwide regime, abolishes state

LONDON (UPI) — Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, saying he wants to set up a worldwide popular regime, announced he will abolish state institutions in Libya because the country should be ruled by its people.

"All the institutions which are traditionally considered state institutions are to be abolished," Gadhafi said in an address Monday night to a People's Congress in the municipality of al-Jabal al-Akhdar.

His speech was broadcast by Libyan television and monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London.

Gadhafi said his ideals would be the cornerstone of a new world known as "the era of the masses."

"I am determined to set up a popular regime in the world whose basic foundation is Libya. A real popular regime and truly people's power," he said.

"The struggle for power must end. The demonstrations, the sit-ins and the protests are all against authority, a struggle for power."

Gadhafi said among the institutions he intends to abolish is the Libyan news agency JANA, which he said

"is housing a huge octopus with hundreds of officials and still is useless."

"Hot and fast news never arrives. The news item broadcast by the world today, our agency reports it to us the day after tomorrow," Gadhafi said.

Church, government in agreement to invite pope for visit to Cuba

State tolerance of religion may be developing

Scripps Howard News Service

HAVANA — The Roman Catholic church and the government of Fidel Castro have agreed informally that Pope John Paul II should be invited to Cuba, a development that shows signs of greater state tolerance toward religion.

Havana Archbishop Jaime Ortega affirmed in a recent interview that the government and the church basically agree the pope should be invited.

"This will depend on more conversations between the church and the state," Ortega said. "But I believe the state views the pope's visit not only as something acceptable but as something positive, and it is now a question of fixing a date for the invitation."

Church officials said an invitation probably will be extended this year, although they believe it is unlikely the pope will be able to visit in 1989. As a matter of protocol, the church and the state would issue separate invitations to the pope.

An extensive dialogue aimed at diffusing tensions between the state and the church has preceded discussions about inviting the pope. The government has begun to make concessions to Catholics and other denominations that helped to ease a tense relationship.

Among the concessions, the church has received permission to open its own printing press, which will provide religious materials to all parishes and seminaries in Cuba.

Another positive sign of improving relations was the presence of Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, a Vatican representative and head of the Pontifical Commission of Justice and Peace, at a New Year's Day mass in the Cathedral of Havana. Etchegaray met with Castro during his stay in Cuba.

Ortega, archbishop of Havana for six years, said the invitation to John Paul II is no longer conditioned on certain requirements concerning the normalization of church life in Cuba.

"To a degree, these requirements have been fulfilled and the task ahead is one of extending a formal invitation to the sovereign pontiff, although all the difficulties between the church and state cannot be solved before the pope arrives," Ortega said.

Train collides at crossing killing 41, injuring 81

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — A fast-moving train slammed into a school bus Tuesday at an unmanned crossing in southern Sri Lanka, killing 41 people — most of them children — and injuring 81, police said.

The bus driver apparently misjudged the speed or distance of the train when he decided to drive over the unattended crossing at Ahungalla, 48 miles south of the capital of Colombo, police officials said. The impact of the train, travelling at about 50 mph toward the town of Galle, crushed the bus and dragged it about 250 yards along the track before the engine and the lead car derailed, they said.

Police officials said 41 people died instantly and 81 people were injured.

Most of the dead were students 11- to 16-years-old aboard the bus.

Report reveals intolerable conduct by Meese

Meese's lawyers say report is irresponsible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a scathing report released Tuesday, the Justice Department's internal watchdog rebuked former Attorney General Edwin Meese for violating numerous ethics rules and "conduct which should not be tolerated of any government employee."

The 61-page report by the department's Office of Professional Responsibility said that if Meese, who was one of President Reagan's closest confidants, were still in office "we would recommend that the president take disciplinary action."

The report by OPR counsel Michael Shaheen sought to debunk Meese's contention that he was "completely vindicated" when a special prosecutor decided last July not to seek his indictment — although concluding Meese "probably violated" federal tax and conflict-of-interest laws.

SHAHEEN EXCORIATED Meese for repeatedly, in his conduct as presidential counselor and later as the nation's top law enforcement officer, failing to abide by a 1965 executive order requiring government officials "to avoid even the appearance of impropriety."

His report focused particularly on Meese's close ties and assistance to his personal lawyer, lobbyist and law school classmate E. Robert Wallach of San Francisco, who secured Meese's influence for his legal clients on several occasions.

"We trust that this analysis will lay to rest the claims by Mr. Meese that the appropriate standard for official behavior is whether an independent counsel seeks an official's indictment," Shaheen wrote.

"WE FOUND THAT the independent counsel's report far from vindicates Mr. Meese; rather, it details conduct which should not be tolerated of any government employee, especially not the attorney general of the United States."

Shaheen was asked last July by acting Attorney General Charles Fried to review an earlier, 830-page report in which independent prosecutor James McKay detailed a 14-month criminal investigation of Meese. Shaheen's report addressed only whether Meese may have violated federal and department rules and regulations for government employees.

In a 16-page response, lawyers for Meese called the report "flagrantly irresponsible" and "a travesty of justice," alleging it stemmed from an "effort to defame (Meese) inspired by the media and his political opponents." They also complained that, while Shaheen's office interviewed Meese during the course of its inquiry, he was denied "any opportunity ... to respond with argument before OPR's judgment was made."

MEESE, WHO WAS ON vacation in Florida, could not be reached for comment.

Shaheen's report to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh was dated Oct. 28, but was not released for 10 weeks — after President-elect George Bush announced that Thornburgh would stay on in the new administration and just a few days before Reagan leaves office.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the report did not change Reagan's mind about his longtime trusted aide. He said Reagan considers the report "unnecessary, partially because Mr. Meese has not been in office for some time and partially because it's unwarranted."

"The attorney general has always acted properly in carrying out the conduct of his office," he said.

FITZWATER SAID Reagan "feels that there have always been political enemies of Attorney General Meese who have chosen to attack him for various reasons" and that Meese "has, performed in outstanding fashion his public service, has been dedicated and shown great loyalty to the government and to his president."

Meese announced his resignation July 5, reportedly after aides to Bush expressed concerns that the continuing controversy over his conduct would become a campaign issue that would jeopardize Bush's bid for the presidency.

Shaheen's report concluded that Meese violated federal ethics rules and the 1965 executive order in each of three instances in which independent prosecutor James McKay concluded he "probably violated" the law: by paying his 1985 taxes 15 months late; by underestimating profits from the sale of securities, and by holding stock in the Bell telephone system at the same time he was assisting regional Bell telephone companies in seeking to revise a court antitrust order.

THE WATCHDOG'S report also said "there is evidence" that Meese and Wallach were aware of a possibly illegal scheme to pass millions of dollars to the Israeli Labor Party to win its support for an Iraqi pipeline project. In releasing the report, Thornburgh said he had accepted Shaheen's findings and considers the matter closed. However, he defended Meese on one count by adding:

"It appears to me that Mr. Meese's failure to fully dispose of his financial interest in the regional Bell operating companies resulted from a failure to obtain or act upon adequate legal advice rather than an intent to violate ethics standards."

"BASED UPON the facts that are available," Shaheen wrote, "we must conclude that Mr. Meese, in certain instances involving Mr. Wallach, either did not understand, or did not appreciate, or simply did not care what impression could be left with the public about his own integrity and the integrity of the functions he oversaw."

The report detailed three instances "in which friendship dictated government action:"

■ Meese's intervention to help Wedtech obtain a $30 million Army engine contract.

■ His assistance in obtaining a loan subordination agreement from the Commerce Department that would enable the firm to become a publicly held company.

■ His role, while attorney general, in helping Wallach promote the Iraqi pipeline project on behalf of a client, Swiss financier Bruce Rapaport.

Report: Meese had alter ego

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From the day Edwin Meese rose to national power, his longtime friend E. Robert Wallach was in his shadow, offering suggestions on subjects ranging from Meese's dietary habits to ways to torpedo administration rivals, their calendars and logs show.

Wallach went so far in 1983 as to send a memo to Meese at the White House with "suggestions for increasing EM's (Ed Meese's) power, while decreasing the power of James Baker," the influential Treasury secretary who later became presidential chief of staff.

According to the logs, Wallach urged Meese to persuade President Reagan to reassign Baker as CIA director, creating the vacancy by moving CIA chief William Casey to the National Security Council.

The compilation of phone logs, calendars, diaries, schedules, memos and letters, released Tuesday, suggest that Wallach sought to become an alter ego to Meese.

The logs describe these Wallach contacts with Meese:

■ On Oct. 26, 1981, Wallach sent Meese a letter saying he envisioned himself as "an intensive support role, low profile but significant, drawing on my talents for organization and leadership to accomplish tasks."

■ On Jan. 13, 1982, Wallach sent Meese a letter with "suggestions on how EM can better his press image."

■ In early 1984, Wallach memos focused on subjects ranging from the Soviet Union to El Salvador, South Africa and Angola.

Higher oil quota needed by OPEC nations — UAE

ABU DHABI (UPI) — Venezuelan President-elect Carlos Andres Perez said Tuesday his country will support the United Arab Emirates' demand for a higher production quota within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"I allowed myself to offer our support for such an increase," Perez said at a news conference in Abu Dhabi after talks with UAE leaders.

Venezuelan officials traveling with Perez qualified his pledge, saying "The UAE will have to cooperate by adhering to their quota."

The Emirates has an OPEC quota of 998,000 barrels a day but wants to pump at least 1.5 million barrels daily.

It pumped at least 2 million barrels a day in the last three months of 1988 but oil industry sources said the UAE's daily production in January declined to about 1.4 million barrels.

The UAE's overproduction threatens new OPEC quotas that were intended to stem a two-year glut and reach the cartel's price target of $18 per barrel. The quotas slashed overall production by 4 million barrels.

The UAE is expected to lobby for a new quota at the next OPEC general meeting in June. Perez said he will support the UAE's efforts then.

Perez arrived Monday in the UAE, the first stop on a Persian Gulf tour to promote his call for a summit of OPEC's 13 heads of state. His trip also will include Iran and Iraq.

The only previous gathering of OPEC heads of state was in Algiers in 1975, when Iraq and Iran signed a peace agreement.

In Mexico City, Indonesian Energy Minister Ginandjar Kartasmita said the United States is not interested in cooperating with OPEC's efforts to stabilize world oil prices.

The United States is the world's second largest oil producer but also its largest importer.

"Americans are not keen on cooperating with us, but as long as they are not hostile towards OPEC we don't have any problem," said Kartasmita, whose country is a member of OPEC.

"We must understand that Americans have a different way of seeing things. They are creating pressure groups among consumer countries. We don't expect them to cooperate with OPEC."

Islamic guerrillas closing in on key Afghan city

SHAGA, Afghanistan (UPI) — Two Soviet-made fighter-bombers roared over the strategic village from behind the snow-capped mountains without warning, the first releasing marker flares and the second unloading its deadly cargo.

The bombs destroyed two houses and blew a crater in the main road through the village of Shaga on the rebel front lines in northeastern Afghanistan.

Islamic guerrillas battling the Soviet-backed regime responded with Stinger anti-aircraft missiles, which have downed hundreds of warplanes since the rebels began receiving them from the United States more than two years ago. This time the pilots were lucky and the two MiG-27 jets streaked off safely in the direction of Kabul.

"Bombing, every day and every night — this is our life," Abdul Qahir, an elderly commander of the Islamic guerrillas, said during a recent visit by a Western reporter into Afghanistan. "The Soviets say they are seeking a political solution but they're still bombing us."

Shaga lies only 8 miles north of the besieged government-held city of Jalalabad. The city's capture would be a major blow to the Afghan regime once the Soviets complete their scheduled withdrawal from the country next month.

A Western diplomat in Pakistan Tuesday quoted diplomatic sources in Afghanistan as saying the morale of government troops in Jalalabad is deteriorating and "heavy fighting" was continuing around the city.

Another diplomat said Soviet troops continue to leave Kabul, the Afghan capital, as part of the withdrawal. He said the pullout could be over by the end of this month but "for political reasons the Russians may wish to keep a military presence in Kabul" until the Feb. 15 deadline.

The Soviets began withdrawing May 15 as part of U.N.-mediated accords, but suspended it in November in the face of military successes by the guerrillas.

Czech police disperse crowds with water cannon

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — Hundreds of riot police charged into crowds and fired water cannon Tuesday to disperse workers and shoppers who refused to leave Wenceslas Square in the third day of disturbances in the Czech capital, witnesses said.

Witnesses said it was not clear what precipitated the massive deployment of police. During the day, heavy patrols of police approached people and asked them to leave the square.

One witness said "busloads" of citizens were detained among those who remained during the cleanup operation, which lasted about two hours.

On Sunday, several thousand people led by a small group of human rights activists tried to mark the suicide 20 years ago of student Jan Palach, who set himself on fire in the square to shock the nation out of apathy following the 1968 Warsaw Pact invasion to crush "Prague Spring" reform movement of Czech leader

Alexander Dubcek.

Police broke up that commemoration before it began. When 14 activists returned Monday to try to lay flowers at the spot, police charged into the square again at rush hour and threw teargas down the subway entrances, surprising thousands of workers en route home.

"There was lots of water cannon and police used the same brutal force as yesterday, although there were not so many on the square," said one witness, who added no tear gas was used Tuesday. "It was quite surprising."

"My girlfriend was just there and asked some people what happened and they said nobody started it — just police," said one activist who was not at the square.

Fourteen activists who attempted to lay flowers Monday remained in detention Tuesday at Prague's Ruzyně prison. Authorities announced 91 were detained Sunday but gave no figure for Monday.

"A man released today claims there is a whole floor occupied by freshly detained people, which makes figure of 91 ridiculous," said independent journalist Jan Urban.

Urban said the wives of two of the detained activists, Alexandr Vondra and David Nemeč, were told by the prosecuting attorney that he would ask the court to keep them longer — an indication they may be charged with criminal acts.

7 high schools closed; 19 Palestinians injured

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Tuesday the government has authorized harsher measures against stone-throwing Palestinians, including the more liberal use of gunfire by soldiers and demolitions of protesters' houses.

The new measures came the day three Palestinians died from army gunfire. It was the sixth day that clashes with Israeli soldiers resulted in deaths. Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Tuesday troops in Lebanon and he was angry at Palestinian activists because "they force us sometimes to kill people we don't want to kill."

At least 19 Palestinians were wounded by lead or plastic bullets in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, Palestinian sources said. Another 12 Palestinians were hit in the hands or legs by a new type of ammunition used by soldiers — round rubber bullets with metal cores, the sources said.

In the past, only officers were permitted to fire plastic bullets at stone-throwers but the new regulations give non-commissioned officers the same authority.

Seven high schools were closed Tuesday in the latest closures attributed to disturbances, state-run Israel Radio reported. In the past, schools have served as organizing centers for stone-throwers.

Military officials said the measures announced by Rabin were not a new policy but an intensified campaign to respond to the major weapons of the 13-month-old Palestinian uprising — stones.

Rabin has said stone-throwing accounts for about 85 percent of the disturbances in the occupied territories. Many of those killed or wounded in recent days have been under 18.

Cardinal pleads with subway rapist to surrender

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cardinal John O'Connor issued an urgent plea Tuesday to a man who called police to identify himself as the subway rapist to turn himself in for his own protection "and for the protection of others."

The suspect, believed responsible for seven attacks in the subway system within the past four months, is believed to have extensive knowledge of the city's maze-

"Please, I ask you to refrain from any further violence, from violating any other women."

—John O'Connor

like subway system, striking fear in many riders.

The man described himself in two different phone calls to police as a crack addict and said he would only surrender if the cardinal made a televised appeal, Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward told a news conference with O'Connor.

"Please, please, not only stop what you are doing for your own protection, but for the protection of others. Turn yourself in," O'Connor said. "Please, I ask you to refrain from any further violence, from violating any other women."

O'Connor promised the man would receive "just treatment. You won't be brutalized," he said.

O'Connor played a similar role two years ago when a suspect in the bombing of abortion clinics told authorities he would only surrender to the cardinal.

Ward said the man believed responsible for seven rapes in the subway system since September called 911 at 12:45 p.m. Monday and again at 10 a.m. Tuesday and identified himself as the rapist.

"We are 99 percent certain this is the same person," the police commissioner said.

Alleged police brutality and racism to be investigated

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — At the request of the Long Beach Police Department, county prosecutors have started a review of a videotaped weekend incident of alleged police brutality and racism, officials said Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorney Curt Livesay, the No. 3 official in the District Attorney's Office, said prosecutors would try to determine whether Long Beach Officer Mark Dickey used excessive force in arresting Don Jackson, a black activist and Hawthorne police officer.

The Saturday evening arrest was secretly videotaped by a news crew from NBC's "Today Show" as part of a sting operation engineered by Jackson and his supporters to demonstrate rampant abuse of minorities by Long Beach police. The videotape shows Dickey pushing Jackson up against a store window, which shattered. Police say Jackson's right elbow broke the window, but Jackson says his head shattered the glass.

Dickey, who has been taken off active duty, is then shown throwing Jackson onto the police car's hood.

Livesay said Long Beach

Acting Assistant Chief Eugene Brizzolara contacted prosecutors Monday and asked that the district attorney's special investigations division review the incident.

"We will be reviewing all reports, the videotape and any other information we can obtain to determine if an investigation is appropriate into allegations of excessive force," Livesay said.

The review, which will be conducted by Deputy District Attorney Herb Lapin, is a precursor to a full-blown investigation, Livesay said.

Jackson, 30, claims the videotape shows Dickey and his partner, Mark Ramsey, stopping his rented car for no apparent reason less than three minutes after the vehicle entered Long Beach.

Inaugural balls not the best for clothes

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — An inaugural ball may be an opportunity to ankle close to Washington's new high and mighty, but as social events they're grueling, crowded and glamorous only in retrospect.

Jackie Kennedy commented that the guests at her husband's inaugural balls in 1961, milled "around like a bunch of mesmerized cattle." Diana McLellan, Washington editor for Washingtonian Magazine and a veteran observer of the capital's social antics, says most ball novices make the mistake of dressing up in expensive new duds for the affair.

"Some women buy a spectacular ball gown for their first one, but the fact is that nobody cares what you wear, just as long as it's long and decent," she says. "To do it for show, unless someone is conspicuous, is ridiculous. Who notices you in that zoo?"

McLellan recalls that past balls have been so jammed "that medals or military uniforms have gotten tangled into sequins on gowns, and expensive formals have been torn and ripped." In previous years, some balls have become so crowded the capital fire marshal has closed the doors to late-comers.

Jayne Ikard, the socially active wife of oil industry lawyer Fred Ikard, agrees. Ikard said she's going to spend as much of inauguration week in tennis shoes as possible, and advises others to do the same.

"People who buy a gorgeous new dress, new shoes, and wear their expensive furs are on the path to destruction here," she says. "They're likely to have their dress ruined, their new shoes stained with wine all over them, and they can wait two hours to check their coats in, and two hours to check their coats out for the balls."

There are other embarrassments. In 1985, many Republican wives who danced at the seedy D.C. Armory had to go home in sub-freezing temperatures coatless because their minks were stolen from the coatroom there.

'Rainman' profits $10 million to take week's torrential top

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Rain Man" poured it on at the nation's box offices last week with a torrential draw of $10.1 million at the box office, drowning out all other motion pictures in release.

The blockbuster's $10.1 million haul at 1,482 theaters was almost $1 million more than it registered the previous week, partly because it played at an additional 226 screens.

In its five weeks, the Dustin Hoffman-Tom Cruise tour de force has turned a spectacular $69 million.

Civil rights experts ask Bush to create task force

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing a dramatic rise in racial violence, a panel of civil rights experts called on President-elect George Bush Tuesday to establish a cabinet-level task force to deal with the problem.

The call came on the heels of recent incidents of racial violence in Miami and Long Beach, Calif.

"The president should ask that an action plan from this task force be on his desk in 60 days," said Arthur Flemming, chairman of the Citizens' Commission on Civil Rights, a bipartisan group founded in 1982 to monitor federal civil rights activities.

Flemming issued the call for a cabinet-level task force as the commission released a 39-page survey, "One Nation, Indivisible: The Civil Rights Agenda for the 1990s." The report records the breakdown of civil rights enforcement over the past eight years and includes recommendations for Bush to restore the nation's commitment to equal rights and opportunities.

"The area we have singled out is the area of racial and ethnic tension and conflict," Flemming, fired by President Reagan as chairman of the official U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, told a news conference releasing the report. "Members of the commission were very, very concerned about the widespread manifestation of racial and ethnic conflict.

"An event in Miami, an event in Long Beach definitely come under this heading," Flemming said.

Rioting in Miami was touched off Monday after the death of a black motorcyclist being chased by white police officers. And during the weekend in Long Beach, there were allegations of police brutality against a black man.

"We feel very keenly the nation once again is confronted with a very serious situation," Flemming said. "The leadership must come from the president of the United States."

The report — a summary of a report to be published in March — charged that in the eight years of the Reagan administration, civil rights enforcement had ground to a virtual standstill and in some cases the administration had sought to undo and reverse past progress.

U.S. buying Soviet fighters, equipment for testing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States for the past year has been buying on the "open market" Soviet MiG fighters and Soviet air defense equipment for testing and evaluation by the U.S. military, a defense official said Tuesday.

The deputy director of the Pentagon's Operational Test and Evaluation office, Karl Pflock, said Washington for the first time bought "on the world market" Soviet MiG-15s, 17s, 19s and 21s — both unarmed and armed with Soviet weapons.

In addition, the Pentagon is buying Soviet air defense equipment that, when completed, will amount to that of an air defense system of two Russian ground regiments and be similar to what U.S. pilots might face in event of war.

"We get them on the world market," Pflock said. "Basically we get them through source or through (arms) dealers."

He explained that "through source" meant some of the older MiGs were bought through aircraft trade publications. "To my knowledge, no one has sent an order into the Kremlin for these babies," he said.

The United States previously obtained most Soviet planes and weapons via clandestine or "spooky means," Pflock said. As a result, he added, it was "very difficult to get them out in public for operations tests."

"So we went out into the open market and we have obtained Soviet or Soviet-like threat equipment," he said. "We have been quite successful."

The most advanced Soviet aircraft and weapons are still obtained "through the customary government means" to prevent the Soviet Union from knowing Washington has obtained and tested them, he said.

But beginning last year, the United States for the first time purchased other aircraft, weapons systems and equipment on the open market.

The director of the Operational Test and Evaluation office, John Krings, developed the "Capability Improvement Program" and envisions the plan will save the government tens of millions of dollars.

Previously, the unclassified portion of the weapons testing program relied solely on U.S. simulations of Soviet aircraft. American warplanes would be reconfigured into Soviet MiGs so they could fly in mock dogfights.

A "simulated" MiG created from an old F-4 might cost "millions of dollars" compared to the cost of $200,000 for an actual MiG, and the latter would provide more accurate and extensive data on the Soviet fighter, Pflock said.

Baker vows attention to Mexico

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State-designate James Baker, pledging close attention to Latin American problems, told Congress Tuesday the United States must treat Mexico "with the respect and seriousness it warrants."

Discussing Central American strife and Latin American debt during Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings on his nomination to the Cabinet post, Baker underscored a deep political and economic awareness of the region's difficulties and potential problems for the United States.

Mexico has a huge foreign debt, worsened by falling prices in this decade for its major export — oil — and is burdened by high unemployment and a booming population. But Baker, who served President Reagan as Treasury secretary, said that under the new leadership of President Carlos Salinas, Mexico is making significant progress toward easing its economic woes.

"It is time we regarded Mexico with the respect and seriousness it warrants. Whatever the past, we must all be aware that America's relationship with Mexico means a great deal — it is as important as our relationship with any other country in the world."

Baker said the burdens that Mexico and other nations suffer from in repaying their foreign debt can best be resolved by economic reform, growth, and capital investment — not foreign governments and banks forgiving their debts.

"There is no magic bullet cure," he said.

Baker did not indicate whether President-elect George Bush, who takes office Friday, will seek to resume military aid to the Contra guerrillas fighting the Soviet-supported Nicaraguan government.

Technique helps in search for defective genes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A new technique may pave the way for locating disease-causing defective genes and mapping the entire human genome, scientists reported Tuesday.

Radiation hybrid mapping has already enabled researchers to narrow their search for the genes linked to Huntington's disease, a crippling brain disorder; a type of Alzheimer's disease and a form of manic depression, said Dr. David Cox, who developed the method with Richard Myers.

Scientists have been able to track many defective genes to specific chromosomes — and even to regions of a chromosome — but few have pinned down the exact location or the gene involved, said Cox, associate professor of psychiatry, pediatrics, biochemistry and biophysics at the University of California, San Francisco.

"Finding these genes will help develop better diagnostic tests and therapies and may eventually allow doctors to attempt gene therapy to cure the disease," Myers, assistant professor of physiology and biochemistry at UCSF, said at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"The technique does not solve all our problems but it takes us part of the way towards the gene. There were gaps in available technologies for mapping the genome and this technique helps fill some of those gaps."

The researchers hope the method will prove useful in one of the most mammoth scientific endeavors of all time: mapping and analyzing all the genetic material — the genome — contained in human cells.

The genome project, controversial since its inception three years ago, will aim to identify the specific site of every gene that sits on the 46 chromosomes in humans cells: of an estimated 100,000 human genes, only 1,400 have been mapped.

The federal project also plans to analyze sections of the genome to determine the precise sequence of four chemicals that make up the chains of DNA, deoxyribonucleic acid, the major hereditary molecule of living things. So far, only about 600 genes have been sequenced.

Information from these efforts is expected to help in developing diagnostic tests and even cures for the 3,500 disorders such as cystic fibrosis and sickle-cell anemia that are known to be caused by genetic defects.

Study reveals new early warning sign of heart disease

Scraps Howard News Service

MONTEREY, Calif. — A cholesterol-carrying particle that turns up in high numbers in the bloodstream of about one in 10 Americans shows promise as an early warning of heart disease.

The tiny particles, a form of the low-density lipoprotein which is known to encourage clogged arteries that lead to heart attacks, are not affected by diet or even by most new drugs that usually can lower blood cholesterol levels.

New studies at the University of Washington at Seattle indicate that levels of the carrier particles are highest in men with high cholesterol and severe blockage of the heart arteries.

The studies examined 200 coronary care patients in Seattle and Boston and found one-third had high levels of the particles, called Lp(a). In a control group of non-heart patients, fewer than 5 percent had high Lp(a). All, however, had some Lp(a).

That probably means Lp(a) helps cause heart disease, but doesn't act alone, researchers said.

Largely ignored since its discovery 25 years ago, the cholesterol carriers may be a more reliable early predictor of the severity of heart disease than any other known marker.

"Subjects with the least amount of blockage of the coronary vessels had the lowest amounts of Lp(a), while those with intermediate levels of blockage had intermediate levels of Lp(a) and those with the most severe coronary disease had the highest Lp(a) levels," Dr. John Albers, associate director of Seattle's Northwest Lipid Research Center, said.

The Seattle findings were a highlight of the second day of an American Heart Association science writers forum here.

Risk factors aiding Lp(a) in its destructive work include high levels of blood fats, cigarette smoking and high blood pressure, Albers reported.

The Washington laboratory has developed the world's first test for Lp(a), results of which could warn persons with high levels that they greatly increase their heart attack risk if they don't avoid the other risk factors.

"We also believe the high Lp(a) trait may enhance the risk for stroke and premature heart disease when associated with other risk factors," Albers said.

Study finds heart disease can be detected in children

MONTFREY, Calif. (UPI) — A 15-year study of 10,000 children indicates that signs of potentially fatal heart disease can be detected as young as 6 months, a researcher said Tuesday.

Dr. Gerald Berenson, of Louisiana State University, said he found early signs of cardiovascular disease and striking differences in the development of disease between blacks and whites in a heart-risk analysis of school children.

While early indications of hypertension were more prevalent among blacks, signs of coronary artery disease were more prevalent in whites, especially boys, Berenson said.

The aim of the study of children from Bogalusa, La., a rural area about 70 miles north of New Orleans, was to track tendencies towards heart disease and to pave the way for prevention programs.

"Adult heart diseases and hypertension very clearly begin in childhood — even infancy," Berenson told an American Heart Association seminar.

Abnormal levels of fats in the blood can be detected in 6-month-old children, especially those who inherit a gene that causes errors in fat metabolism, he said.

"There's also a racial contrast that continues to show up throughout life," Berenson said. "White men have eight times more coronary artery surgery than other groups."

He said his study also bolsters findings by the National Center for Health Statistics that 39 percent of black women and 38 percent of black men suffer hypertension, a leading cause of stroke and other cardiovascular disorders.

NCAA president rejects request for rule review

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying there is no "sense of urgency," the president of the NCAA said Tuesday he will not order an expedited review of a controversial new rule that triggered a basketball coaching boycott by Georgetown University's John Thompson.

NCAA President Albert Witte said he sees no reason to call a special convention to reconsider Proposition 42, a rule approved on Jan. 11 during the NCAA's annual convention that bars colleges from giving scholarship money to athletes who fall below certain minimum academic standards.

Thompson blasted the new rule as "discriminatory" against black and underprivileged athletes and walked off the court in protest before the start of his team's Saturday night game against Boston College.

Bill Shapland, Georgetown sports information director, said Thompson will not travel with his team for Wednesday night's game in Providence against Big East conference opponent Providence College.

Thompson, the coach of the 1988 U.S. Olympic team who guided Georgetown to the 1984 national championship, reiterated Tuesday he will not coach until he is satisfied the NCAA, which governs the nation's college sports, is moving toward reversing Proposition 42.

"What I want to do is to come to some reasonable satisfaction that this thing is moving in the right direction," Thompson said Tuesday in an interview with a Washington television station.

"I really don't want to say what would make me come back because, then, I think I would be imposing on somebody else an ultimatum and that has never been my intention," he said. "This thing took off like a rocket because it is sensitive and because it did step out of the realm of athletics."

The only way the NCAA could reverse the new rule before next January's annual convention would be in a special convention called by Witte.

"In terms of the information that's available to me right now, I don't see any special need to call a convention before next January," Witte, a professor of law at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, Ark., said in a telephone interview with United Press International.

"You would involve many people and much expense," Witte said. "If there is a desire to repeal (Proposition) 42, it can be handled as efficiently and without any extra expense at the next regular convention."

Thompson's unprecedented protest has gained nearly unanimous support from fellow coaches and strong support from many college presidents and athletic directors.

But Witte said no one has asked him to call a special convention.

"I'm not aware of any sense of urgency and I'm not even sure that (calling a special convention) is the meaning of his protest. But you have to realize I'm quite a ways from the site of his protest, so I'm not really fully informed of all the pertinent circumstances," Witte said.

NCAA Director of Communications Jim Marchiony said Witte is empowered to call a special convention with written recommendations from at least 24 members of the 44-member NCAA Presidents Commission made up of college presidents, or from 24 members of the 44-member NCAA Council.

Illini's No. 1 critic coach Lou Henson

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — Illinois, the second-rated basketball team in the nation, is not getting such high marks from Coach Lou Henson.

Henson Tuesday gave the 15-0 Illini a "C" on rebounding and a "B-minus" to a "C-plus" on defense. The coach graded the club's high-scoring offense a "B-plus" but came through with "A's" for the team's effort and stamina.

"We're not as good as we've been in the past on defense," he said. "People are getting behind us and they're getting too many easy shots on us."

Some people are never satisfied.

"Offensively, it's one of the best ball clubs we've had," he added. "I hope there is a lot more potential. I know there is room for improvement. I don't think we have as much room as some other teams."

Illinois travels to Evanston Thursday night for a game with Big 10 rival Northwestern, 7-7 overall and 0-4 in conference games. Next Sunday, the Illinois hosts No. 20 Georgia Tech, which the Illini beat 80-75 in the Rainbow Classic last month. Georgia Tech is 10-4 and 1-1 in Atlantic Coast Conference matches.

Henson's team, 3-0 in the Big 10, is fresh from its most important victory of the year, a 96-84 win over fifth-rated Michigan. Illinois did it look easy Saturday behind a 26-point performance by ever-improving guard Kendall Gill.

"Kendall has really done an exceptional job," said Henson. "He played forward in high school (at Olympia Fields Rich Central). Last year he shot the ball well but didn't have quite enough confidence. This year he's working very hard."

Despite Henson's concern about Illinois' "problem spots," Northwestern Coach Bill Foster said Tuesday the Illini's defense is as intimidating as their offensive potential.

"They have such a fine pressure defense," Foster said. "Their defense is a great concern of ours along with their great jumping ability."

"But they're just so explosive and quick and they can score in so many ways. They're just so capable of scoring so many points so quickly and they deserve to be where they are (in the polls)."

Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said he was impressed with Illini's "chemistry" when the two teams played in Hawaii Dec. 29, a characteristic his team has not displayed in every outing.

Pac-10 conference features top players

United Press International

The much-maligned Pacific 10 may have two of college basketball's top five players.

At the season's halfway point, Arizona's Sean Elliott is a lock for every All-America team, and Stanford's Todd Lichti deserves serious consideration.

In some respects, Lichti is having a better season than Elliott. The 6-4 Stanford guard matched Elliott's 35 points in their only meeting, and Lichti did most of his scoring in the second half to rally the Cardinal to victory.

Elliott and Duke's Danny Ferry have been tops among a strong group of college forwards. Their ability to make teammates better — re-passing — sets them apart from others. Among those just behind are Michigan's Glen Rice, Tennessee's Dyron Nix, Georgia Tech's Tom Hammonds and BYU's Michael Smith. All are seniors and sure to be first-round NBA draft choices.

As a big guard, Lichti's competition includes Florida State's George McCloud, Indiana's Jay Edwards and N.C. State shooter-deluxe Rodney Monroe.

The small guard spot is loaded with candidates. However, it's hard to go against Oklahoma's Mookie Blaylock, who can have an impact with scoring, passing or defense. Syracuse's Sherman Douglas, Iowa's B.J. Armstrong, Michigan's Rumeal Robinson, Texas-El Paso's Tim Hardaway, Ohio State's Jay Burson and LSU freshman Chris Jackson are also having superb seasons.

That leaves the center spot, where most voters are likely to favor Louisville's Pervis Ellison or Oklahoma's Stacey King. Either is deserving, but the choice here would be Georgetown freshman Alorzo Mourning. He has the greatest impact because of shot blocking.

Kampwerth receives weekly conference honor

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Women's basketball coach Cindy Scott has searched high and low for a way to increase their confidence level of center Cathy Kampwerth.

Scott just got an assist from the Gateway Conference when the league named Kampwerth as its player of the week.

"This will definitely give me a boost in my confidence," said Kampwerth, who has been the Salukis' leading scorer in the last three games.

Kampwerth is averaging 10.2 points and 6.9 rebounds per game, coming off a 17-point performance against Western Illinois Saturday. She had 14 against Northern Iowa and a career-high 23 against Bradley.

Scott said those results are indicative of the kind of play Kampwerth can produce, but the key is to get the 6-4 senior to come up with such statistics on a regular basis.

"The biggest thing with to score — the team has lost when she has led in points — she vows to be more assertive on the floor.

"I have to post up more," Kampwerth said. "I think I should ask for the ball more often when I'm in a position to score."

In the past six conference games, Kampwerth is averaging 13.5 points and 7.0 rebounds. She is shooting 6.6 percent from the field and 6.8 percent from the line.

Defensively, Kampwerth makes her presence known. Her 59 defensive rebounds and 16 blocks are team-highs.

Kampwerth, 23, a plant and soil science major, is from Highland. In 1987 she was selected to the North squad to the U.S. Olympic Sports Festival.

Rare tribute

According to Scott's notes, this was only the third time the Gateway Conference has selected a Saluki for its weekly award.

"Because they make the award strictly on statistics," Scott said, "we don't play a style of ball that would reflect those kind of numbers for a single player. We are very team oriented."

Scott doesn't believe that the award was recognition of the entire team, which was picked to finish fourth in the preseason yet is now in contention for the title after winning five straight.

Standing tall

The Salukis are 7-6 overall and 5-1 in the Gateway, good enough to move into second in the standings.

Illinois State, empowered by the likes of guard Pam Tanner and center Leslie Ferrell, still leads the Gateway at 9-5 and 5-0.

"Illinois State is a step ahead of everybody," Scott said. "They are the best team. They play so well together, shoot well, and, of course, are well coached."

Illinois State is led by Jill Hutchison, who after 17 years is the dean of conference coaches.

The Redbirds beat the Salukis 76-53 on Jan. 2 in Normal, Illinois State, which has won the last three meetings, visits the Arena on March 3.

Get well soon

Senior guard Deanna Sanders and freshman forward Grace Johnson are expected to rejoin the team's active roster later this week after being bedridden by chicken pox.

Stat sheet

Dana Fitzpatrick leads the team with 11.0 ppg, 47 assists, 50 turnovers, 29 steals and an average of 33.5 minutes played per game.

Amy Rakors has 94 rebounds, an average of 7.2. Among starters, she has the highest field goal percentage (44.7).

LEAD, from Page 32

Illinois State is 2-0 on its new floor, which it debuted Jan. 11 with a win over Chicago State.

In other Redbird notes, center Jon Pemberton will miss the remainder of the season after reinjuring his ankle.

"The bone was not healed," Donewald said. "We knew he would ultimately blow it so we tried to get him through as many games as possible."

Splinters for Sasha

Creighton's win over Wichita State dropped the Shockers for the second time in league play.

"We have not played an excellent 40 minute game yet," said Shocker coach Eddie Fogler. "We played an excellent first half against Tulsa, but then held on to barely win."

Senior Sasha Radunovich, the Valley's preseason Player of the Year, has slumped to the point where Fogler has benched the 6-foot-0 center.

"I think it (the slump) is more than just his scoring," Fogler said. "I would not be as concerned if he were taking good shots. He is not rebounding as well as he could, and he is not playing mentally as well as he could."

Fogler said he hesitated to move Radunovich to sixth man.

Valley coaches voice views against NCAA's rule

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Coaches in the Missouri Valley voiced their displeasure with the NCAA's newly adopted Proposition 42 in their weekly teleconference.

The new rule, which will considerably stiffen regulations covered in Prop 48, was passed 163-154 on Jan. 11 at the NCAA Convention. The rule is scheduled to go into effect in August of 1990.

Prop 48, which took effect in 1986, required incoming freshman wishing to participate in athletics to have a grade point average of 2.0 or higher in core classes and score 700 or higher on the SAT or 15 or higher on the ACT, two national college entrance exams.

Under the previous regulations, an incoming freshman not meeting the Prop 48 requirements could still receive financial aid, but lost one year of eligibility.

The newly passed rule does not allow incoming students to receive financial aid if they do not meet the Prop 48 requirement.

Most of the attacks, both by the Valley coaches and nationwide, are aimed at Prop 42's focus on the absolute use of entrance exam scores to determine eligibility.

"It is discriminatory," said Bradley coach Stan Albeck. "I look for it to be rescinded. There is a lot of argumentation on both sides, but I honestly don't believe it has a chance of passing."

Creighton coach Tony Barone said members of the convention should have given more consideration before the adoption of the new rule.

"They acted too hastily in making the decision they made," Barone said. "They need to look at the big picture.

It will limit the opportunity for some young people to get an education."

Barone said using the SAT and ACT exams to determine eligibility is wrong.

"The ACT and SAT are economically and socially biased," Barone said. "It (passing the rule) is an example of a body not being concerned with something and the vote was taken. To legislate against those kids I know was not the intent, but that is exactly what happened."

Illinois State's Bob Donewald said the new rule is a closing of the door to prospective student-athletes from economically low-income families.

"Any young person who comes from an affluent part of our society can pay their way through (college)," Donewald said. "You've told him, 'That's OK, we know you've got the money.' If you're not a member of the affluent, that's too bad. Since you can't pay for it, you can't go to a Division I college."

"That kind of mentality and rationalizing is mind-boggling to me."

highest GPA with a 3.2. Outgoing coach Debbie Hunter said she is very pleased with the results of her player's work.

"This may be the best volleyball performance academically since I have been here," said the 14-year coach. "I am ecstatic, nothing short of that."

Hunter said it is a tribute to the players to score just a high team GPA.

"For the level they compete at and still perform that well in the classroom is a clear message they are doing what I want them to do," Hunter said. "I think they are all role models. That is what we like to create out of a program."

Volleyball recruiter and assistant coach Sonya Locke said the players proved they have their priorities straight.

"In their time when they are not with the volleyball team, we hope they spend it with their studies," Locke said. "They proved that they are. It shows the maturity the girls have, because when you are away from the court on free time it is easy not to study."

Locke said grades are important when recruiting players, but only to a certain extent.

"Obviously we pay close attention to the athlete's grade situation, but we do not use it as a criteria in recruiting," Locke said. "We show we care about that part of their lives as much as the volleyball court. I think that makes a difference."

The top men's team was tennis at 3.04. The men's cumulative average was 2.45 for the fall term, while the women's teams compiled a 2.90.

Athletics Director Jim Hart said the lower GPAs for the men is characteristic of most universities.

"We could probably find all kinds of excuses for it," he said. "I don't think you'd find it a whole lot different throughout the country."

Hart said the department is concerned about the men's GPAs but that there is no

IAAC hires 2nd adviser

Associate athletics director Charlotte West announced the hiring of a second academic coordinator at the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee Tuesday.

The athletic department hired Mary Beth Skelly to assist current adviser Nikki Chambers with the advisement of the program's 435 athletes.

Skelly has a master's degree in counseling and formerly coached at College of Wooster in Wooster, Ohio.

"I think she'll be very good," West said. West said she feels Skelly's counseling and coaching experience good for the job.

Skelly is replacing assistant baseball coach Dan Callahan, who served as an adviser in addition to coaching.

The IAAC also voted two of its members to a search committee to replace volleyball coach Debbie Hunter, who resigned to take a national position with the U.S. Volleyball Association.

Track member suffers injury

The Saluki men's track squad suffered their first setback of the new year. This loss, however, will not enter into the win-loss column.

Three-time Missouri Valley Conference long jump champion Brian Bradley suffered a possible hamstring tear at Friday's Shearson Lehman Hutton Games in Jonesboro, Ark.

"It's probably torn and it's terribly swollen," Coach Bill Cornell said.

"Brian is going to see a specialist on Thursday, we will know more then. It doesn't look promising.

Assistant coach feels racial question irrelevant

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The opportunity to become the first black head coach in the University's 75-year sports history is not something Sonya Locke dwells on.

"Being black, well to me, that just isn't a factor," said Locke, who has applied for the head volleyball coaching position that will be vacated by 14-year coach Debbie Hunter at the end of this month.

Locke, an All-American middle blocker for the Salukis in 1981 and a member of Hunter's staff since 1983, said she offers her playing and coaching experiences as her qualifications.

"I know how to play," Locke said. "After coaching for almost six years, I think I know how to evaluate talent, and I have a good grasp of what this team needs to continue to compete in the conference."

Locke said race has not played a part in the three years she has been the team's chief recruiter, even though the majority of players recruited in Division I volleyball are white.

"I have confidence in the way I can communicate with people," Locke said.

A larger priority right now for the 27-year-old Locke is the continuation of the recruiting process. The national signing day is Feb. 8.

Charlotte West, associate athletics director, assured Locke that she would be retained as an assistant coach if she was not chosen for the head job.

Not only did the guarantee of job security "show some loyalty on the school's part," but Locke admitted it would have been very hard to recruit not knowing if she would be around to see the results of her efforts.

Sonya Locke

With the head coaching job up in the air, Locke reports that the prep players she has had contact with are understandably uncertain about a possible future with SIU-C.

"If I was a player coming out of high school, and this was happening at a school I was looking at, I would be hesitant," Locke said.

"I've tried to be honest with them," she said. "I ask them point blank if it will change their view of the program. Some of said they'll pursue other schools and other said it has not changed how they'll look at things."

"I've told the players and their parents that I've applied and exactly what the situation is. They have been very understanding. If it comes down to a decision on that basis, then at least they'll know I've been very open."

When Locke meets with recruits on official visits later this month, she'll emphasize aspects of the program other than the coaching dilemma.

"I want them to imagine coming here without volleyball," Locke said. "I'll definitely be stressing the campus and its surroundings, academics and the people they'll meet."

Locke was inducted into the SIU Sports Hall of Fame last fall. She holds school career records in attack percentage (.302), block solos (135) and block assists (331). She also holds two season records.

Locke, who was an alternate to the World University Games in 1982, was Most Valuable Player in the Gateway Conference in 1982. She also was SIU-C's Female Athlete of the Year and an AIAW All-American in 1981, and a silver medalist in the 1980 National Sports Festival.

Locke, who is originally from South Bend, Ind., has been the head coach of the Southern Region volleyball team in the Prairie State Games the past four years.

Locke has a bachelor's degree in journalism from SIU-C, 1983.

NBA game in Miami feels effect of city's turmoil

MIAMI (UPI) — Rioters throwing rocks in a second day of racial violence in a ghetto surrounding the Miami Arena forced the NBA to call off Tuesday night's scheduled game between the Miami Heat and Phoenix Suns.

Although players and about 500 fans had already made their way inside the arena, Heat managing partner Lewis Schaffel, after speaking with Police Chief Perry Anderson and City Manager Cesar Odio, asked the NBA to call the game, which was scheduled for 7:30 p.m. EST.

"The safety of the fans is everything," Schaffel said. "We listened to their (city officials) advice. When the police chief says the safety of the fans and players is in danger, we can't play the game."

No makeup date was announced. The Heat's next home game is scheduled for Thursday night against Chicago.

The game was to be played in the new, $50 million Miami Arena, which is on the edge of Overtown. Racial violence erupted in the neighborhood Monday night when a Miami police officer shot and killed a black man on a motorcycle. A passenger on the motorcycle died Tuesday of injuries suffered when the motorcycle crashed.

About an hour before the game, police barricaded all access roads to the arena and refused to let anyone in.

Heat official Joe Crawford, arriving with other NBA officials for the game, rode through the main area where scattered violence continued during the day.

"On the way down to the arena, a rock went through our windshield and covered all the officials with glass," Crawford said. "However, this did not have a significant effect on our decision to cancel the game."

Terry Lyons, assistant director of public relations for the NBA, said the league kept in contact with Miami team officials and the city about developments. The official decision to cancel the game was not announced until after 7 p.m., after part owner Billy Cunningham asked the league to postpone the contest.

"We were asked by the Heat to cancel the game, which we did," Lyons said.

NBA vice president of operations Rod Thorn was the league's representative in the issue. The last game postponed by the NBA was Nov. 11, 1987, Philadelphia at Washington because of inclement weather.

It was not known if a game had ever previously been called for reasons other than those caused by weather or mechanical problems.

The violence comes days before Super Bowl XXIII is scheduled to be played in Joe Robbie Stadium Sunday between the San Francisco 49ers and the Cincinnati Bengals. The stadium is in north Dade County, far from the inner city.

Discrepancy found in academic report

By Stephanie Wood
and David Gallanetti
Staff Writers

A discrepancy within the athletics department has arisen following the presentation of fall grade point averages for SIU-C's 16 sports to the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee Tuesday.

Men's basketball is listed on the report, compiled by the athletics department, with a GPA of 1.94 for the fall. But coach Rich Herrin said the

"That's not right," Herrin said. "There are two students listed on there that are not players. There are a couple ones on the other end, but two players on the list really brought things down."

Herrin said a walk-on and another player, both of which he declined to name, had GPAs of 0.4 and 1.8, which dropped the team's GPA considerably.

"I guess they were here at the start of the fall, but they did not start practice," Herrin said. "I realize they (the athletics department) may have reported that, but it is not correct."

Associate Athletics Director Charlotte West said the grades are totaled based on a list of athletes given to the department by each sport's respective coach.

"That statement (Herrin's) is probably true," West said. "The department had a standard by which all the figures are done, by the names a coach lists and the ones eligible (to participate). It definitely does more often than not play to a disadvantage."

West said despite the discrepancy, the report is 100 percent accurate, because all athletes, whether they are participating or not, have to be included for the study to be complete.

"What do you define as an athlete?" West said. "We're not saying these are the X number on the schedule. They are all important for us if they are prepared to play."

Despite the inaccuracy, Herrin said his players' GPA is not where he likes to see it.

"The staff is definitely unhappy," Herrin said. "Still, some of the men did well academically. I think the others will bounce back. We'll be all right academically."

On the other end of the scale, the volleyball team scored the

Creighton takes MVC lead spot

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

With an 81-80 overtime victory over Wichita State Monday, the Creighton Blue Jays claimed sole possession of the Missouri Valley top spot at 3-0.

But despite the quick league start and the importance of Monday's game, head coach Tony Barone said the season is far from over.

"It is too early in the season for it to be a critical game," Barone said. "We consider it an opportunity to do something we want to do at this time of the year. Critical is too tough of a term right now."

The Bluejays, 8-6 overall, will invade the SIU-C Arena Jan. 23 to face the Salukis, who meet Bradley Thursday night in Peoria and Drake in Des Moines on Saturday.

Redbird review

Illinois State's 91-83 upset of Bradley in the new Redbird Arena Sunday was the 200th career victory for Redbird coach Bob Donewald.

"That's exciting, but it is an individual type thing," Donewald said. "It was a really good win for our young basketball team at this point."

Diver Owen makes two NCAA events

By Tricia Jording
Staff Writer

One year ago, Laine Owen gave no inkling to the possibility of being a collegiate diver. She thought she would have to be content making a splash in Lake Thunderbird, which is near her home of Norman, Okla.

But now she's training at the Recreation Center pool and turning in the kind of performances that shatter NCAA qualifying marks.

"I didn't even plan to dive in college until being recruited last year," Owen said. "Now it is definitely a dream come true for me."

Owen did herself and the Saluki diving team proud by earning a spot at the NCAA preliminary zone meet with outstanding showings on both the 3- and 1-meter boards Sunday in Cincinnati.

"I'm so proud," Owen said. "I was relaxed at Cincinnati because there was no pressure. It's been in my mind to qualify, but I really didn't expect to at this meet."

Owen took first in 3-meter diving with a score 255.15, which met the qualifying mark of 250.00. She hit a career-high 260.25 on the 1-meter, besting the qualifying standard of 245.00.

"Mentally, this year has been tough on her," swim coach Dave Ardrey said. "She's an elite diver, but people forget that she's a true freshman. She's had to adjust to college, a new school, a new life."

Owen was a two-time Oklahoma state champion and a two-time runner-up. She also was honored as her school's most outstanding athlete.

Perhaps the biggest obstacle Owen had to overcome was an injury to her lower back, the result of exhaustion from two weeks of hard training.

"She had been on the edge all semester," Ardrey said. "But I really think the injury and fatigue helped her. She had been thinking about (the injury) so much, and she was so tired and broken down from training, that her mind didn't think about diving."

"She let her body do the work and that's the nature of the sport."

Administrators vote in favor of Proposition 42

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

SIU-C voted in favor of the controversial Proposition 42 at the NCAA convention, Athletics Director Jim Hart told the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee Tuesday.

The NCAA passed the proposition at its convention by a margin of 145-137 on Jan. 11. On the first ballot, SIU-C voted against the proposition, but voted for Prop 42 when the motion was reconsidered. It is scheduled to take effect August, 1990.

Although the four University representatives to the convention voted in favor of the proposition, Hart and Charlotte West, associate athletics director, said they oppose Prop 42.

"We changed our minds," Hart said. "We oscillated at the time of voting. Fortunately, it's not a case where it takes effect immediately."

"We probably should have voted no," West said.

Prop 42 states that any athlete that doesn't meet standard NCAA requirements can not receive financial aid in his first year. The student-athlete also loses one year of eligibility.

The current rule, Prop 48, requires an incoming athlete to have a 2.0 high school grade point average in a core curriculum course (math, science, history and English) and a minimum score of 706 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT, both standard college entrance examinations. If athletes don't meet both of these criteria, they lose a year of eligibility, but are still able to receive financial assistance.

West said she favors more lenient admission requirements, but stricter

MVC coaches react to rule

requirements for athletes to retain their eligibility.

"I'm not an advocate of Prop 48. I'm a very strong advocate of academics. I think my record has shown that," she said. "And I can't see closing the door to people who want a chance."

Men's basketball coach Rich Herrin said, "We need to help those young men. We need to work with them, not turn our backs on them."

Herrin said he feels the NCAA should go back to the prior-1973 rule which did not allow freshman to compete.

"Let them all come in and practice," Herrin said. "I think we're taking a step backward. We need some guidelines. I believe in academics and GPA, and have always pushed my players."

Head football coach Rick Rhoades said, "I support it professionally because I work at SIU, but I'd like to see the whole testing procedure looked at."

Rhoades said he feels many athletes have been turned away by U.C. decision.

West said she was surprised about the controversy surrounding Prop 42.

"I didn't even flag it as something serious," she said. "I didn't think it had much of chance."

Hart said, "I don't think anyone thought there would be this sentiment of the universities. I didn't think there would be any controversy."

The arguments against Prop 42, including Georgetown coach John Thompson's protest Jan 14, were too late, West said.

"There just was not the debate on the negative side," West said. "The John Thompsons and others just didn't do their homework."

Rhoades said, "I think John Thompson has gotten people to think about it. I agree with what he is doing. I think it will be discussed a lot."

Hart said, "It's unfortunate that those (negative) feelings weren't made known before."

Hart and West are comfortable that Prop 42 will not pass at the 1990 convention.

"There's no doubt," Hart said. "It will never come to pass. We think now it will be defeated eventually."

He speculated on SIU-C's decision at the 1990 convention. "I think we would vote against it," he said. "That would be my sentiment anyway."

ISC: International Festival will occur

By Fernando Felii-Moggi
Staff Writer

The resignation of several staff members of the International Student Council at the end of the fall semester will not affect the International Festival scheduled for February. M. Ali Firouzi, president of the International Student Council, said.

Several staff members resigned after a November meeting of the council, when Firouzi vetoed a motion allowing Teck Hong "Robin" Tan to continue as one of the vice presidents of the organization.

Tan's grade point average had fallen below the required 2.0 needed to serve in the executive committee of ISC, but the council had voted to retain him as vice president.

Firouzi's veto was seen by some ISC staff members as an abuse of power, and they circulated a letter condemning the president's attitude. The letter was signed by 26 staff members.

Firouzi said the letter didn't represent the international community because it was signed by only 26 people.

Those who had signed the letter stopped participating in ISC activities.

The presidents of the various International Student Associations met with Firouzi Tuesday to present their ideas about the festival to the council. ISC showed a video of last year's festival, presented the schedule for this year's and offered economic support for various activities.

Firouzi said he had begun organizing the festival before Christmas break by mailing brochures to the various International Student Associations.

He said the organization of the festival had not been influenced by the absence of any staff members because the staff consists of all students willing to help and give ideas for the festival.

"Anyone can become a member of the staff, all they have to do is sign up," he said.

"It is very hard to make all the people work together, but if just because there's a disagreement people start walking out on us instead of trying to solve the problem as a team, we won't get very far," Firouzi said.

Maria Freitas, president of the European Student Association, said ISC had done a good job organizing the

Search on for vacant VP post

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The search is on for a new associate vice president for academic affairs, Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research planning, announced Wednesday.

The position was held by Shepherd prior to July 1, 1987, when he took over as acting vice president. He officially was named the vice president May 15, 1988.

The vacant position has been filled by Mary Lou Higginson, as acting associate vice president.

The associate vice president works with the vice president in creating and implementing academic planning methods and reviewing collegiate and departmental programs, along with undergraduate programs and curriculum, Shepherd said.

The associate vice president administers programs of academic support areas, including the Army Military Science (Army ROTC), Aerospace Studies (Air Force ROTC), the Clinical Center and Undergraduate Academic Services.

Shepherd issued a campus-wide memo to start the search. Candidates nominated for the position must currently be tenured associate or full professors within the University. Experience with academic administration is desirable, he said.

The nominee should be prepared for involvement in such matters as academic

Cutting judged legal in bat's habitat

Area residents, environmentalists way of change

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

A clearcutting operation in the Shawnee National Forest was judged not to be illegal by officials at a meeting Wednesday morning, although the operation may have destroyed the habitat of the endangered Indiana bat.

Local citizens have filed a complaint against the federal government for violating its own standards in respect to the 1987 tree cutting in the Bear Creek area. After meeting with concerned citizens Wednesday morning, officials from Fish and Wildlife Service and the Forest Service said they were not at fault.

Bruce Stebbings, of the Fish and Wildlife Service, said he is in favor of the service's standards and guidelines. "Guidelines are something the service can use at its discretion," he said.

The controversy began in 1983 when the U.S. Department of Conservation's Forest Service announced plans to cut down some of the trees in the national forest a few miles from Pomona. Nearby residents were aware that the Indiana bat lived in the area.

Research done by Dr. J.O. Whitaker, professor of biology at Indiana State University, said the one and one half inch-long bats sometimes roost in Shagbark Hickory trees.

Dr. Whitaker said, "If Shag and Shalebark trees were not cut down during the bats' maternity season, May 1 through Aug. 31, and if a 100-foot wide foraging area was left on either side of nearby creeks, the biological assessment will not affect the Indiana bat."

David Nadolski and Joe Cloar, residents of the area, sent this information to the Forest Service in 1985. The Service's 1986 contract for cutting down trees in the Mud Run and Bear Creek area included the guidelines outlined by Dr. Whitaker, and extended the "no-cut" period to April 1 through Sept. 15.

But in July, October and November of 1987, the Mud Run and part of the Bear Creek area was clearcut, extending in some places all the way to the creek, and including some Shagbark trees.

Larry Burkhardt, of the Forest Service, described the contract's guidelines as a goal, and "a goal is something you try to achieve."

Stebbins admits that this is a borderline case, but feels that nothing has been done that would jeopardize the continued existence of the Indiana bat.

Thompson puts off tax increase push

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Gov. James R. Thompson's announcement that he would not push for a tax increase will not be official until March 1, when his budget is announced, James Bray, a spokesman for the governor, said.

"The governor is still strongly in favor of a modest income tax increase," Bray said. But unless Democratic House Speaker Michael Madigan, who strongly opposes an increase, and other Democrats change their minds, the governor will not pursue the increase, he said.

"We'll do the best we can with what we have," Bray said. "The state will live within its means."

Thompson has been unsuccessful in raising taxes in each of the last two legislative sessions.

"The governor has not provided an affidavit stating he will not pursue a tax increase, a lot will depend on the budget proposal and the projection of state revenues," Steve Brown, a spokesman for Madigan, said.

Brown said the majority of people in Illinois as well as Illinois legislators seem to feel there is no need for increases in taxes. This is clearly indicated by last year's elections. Madigan and opponents of the increase will have to wait
