

Women and Liberty, 1600–1800:

Philosophical Essays

Edited by Jacqueline Broad and Karen Detlefsen

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements

Notes on Contributors

Introduction Jacqueline Broad and Karen Detlefsen	1
Part I: Ethical and Political Liberty
1. Liberty and Feminism in Early Modern Women's Writing Karen Detlefsen	29
2. François Poulain de la Barre on the Subjugation of Women Martina Reuter	64
3. Gabrielle Suchon's 'Neutralist': The Status of Women and the Invention of Autonomy Lisa Shapiro	99
4. Marriage, Slavery, and the Merger of Wills: Responses to Sprint, 1700–01 Jacqueline Broad	133
5. Locke, Enlightenment, and Liberty in the Works of Catharine Macaulay and her Contemporaries Karen Green	170
6. Mary Wollstonecraft and Freedom as Independence Lena Halldenius	199
7. Sophie de Grouchy, The Tradition(s) of Two Liberties, and the Missing Mother(s) of Liberalism Eric Schliesser	230
8. Liberty of Mind: Women Philosophers and the Freedom to Philosophize Sarah Hutton	262

Part II: Metaphysical and Religious Liberty

9. Freedom and Necessity in the Work of Margaret Cavendish Deborah Boyle	294
10. Anne Conway on Liberty Marcy P. Lascano	343
11. Mary Astell on Liberty Alice Sowaal	375
12. If I were King! Morals and Physics in Emilie Du Châtelet's Subtle Thoughts on Liberty Ruth Hagenruber	411
13. Creation, Divine Freedom, and Catharine Cockburn: An Intellectualist on Possible Worlds and Contingent Laws Emily Thomas	434
Biographical Appendix	467
Bibliography	478
Index	