Derick Kennedy businessman

by RALPH RESCHKE
Herald Staff Writer

TERRACE— To spend 17 years running a successful business in a town that has seen the good along with the bad is no mean feat.

Derick Kennedy, owner-operator of Richards Cleaners has seen his business and his community come a long way since he first moved to the area in 1967.

"When I first started with the laundromats and drycleaning operation," he explained, "the business was located in the center of what was the downtown area."

He says the laundromat used to be the gathering place where people would come not only to wash their clothes, but also to meet with friends and find out what was going on in the community.

He says the laundromat isn't too busy anymore because the center of the downtown area has shifted towards the two malls.

Derick Kennedy is a busy man; one look outside his office will tell you that for him, business is going good.

Customers were dropping by with clothing to be cleaned and a full rack of cover-alls were waiting to go through the cleaning machines.

In the back of the shop, shirts and pants are ready to be pressed, and downstairs, bags of laundry sit and wait to be washed in one of three washing machines.

Derick says that the dry-cleaning business has seen many changes over the years, mostly to keep up with the changes in materials that our clothes are made of.

He pointed out that dry-cleaners used to use varcol as a cleaning agent, but with the advent of synthetic materials for clothing, a cleaning fluid that wouldn't dissolve the clothes had to be developed.

"Even so, there are a lot of clothes on the market nowadays that can't be dry-cleaned because they're made of materials that won't stand up to the dry-cleaning process."

And what else does Derick do besides making us look clean?

"Well," he begins, "I enjoy curling very much and try to play in at least one bonspiel a season."

He further explained that he has curled in the Loggers Bonspiel and two years ago, his team won the Rotary District Bonspiel two years ago.

He plays both the position of third and lead, and when it comes down to choosing his preferred lead, because as he puts it, "there's less pressure on whoever's handling that position."

He also likes fishing and duck hunting, when he has the time.

He recalls the times he spent on Sea Island in Vancouver, where the Vancouver Airport is presently situated. The tidal flats used to be a good location for getting ducks, according to Derick, but everytime he flies down to Vancouver he notices the areas he used to hunt are now suburbs and city streets.

Derick, was born in Kelowna, on November 16, 1940. However, Vancouver is the town he calls home, or spent to anyways.

He spent his formative years attending Sexsmith

Derick Kennedy

Elementary School in Vancouver and graduated from John Oliver High School.

He's come to believe in the saying, "It's a small world" because when he moved to Terrace, he discovered another member of the class of '59, none other than Caledonia Senior Secondary School Principal, Bill Sturn.

He's also met one other student that had attended John Oliver the same time he did.

Bill met his wife Eileen in Vancouver and as the result of a 19 year marriage, have three children: Cathy, who is 17, John, currently at 14, and the youngest of the Kennedy clan, Barbara, who is 10 years old.

Community wise, Derick is a past member of the Lions Club, of which he was a member for four years. At present, he's a director in the Terrace Rotary Club.

He has put in three and a half years of service with this organization.

When asked what made him come to Terrace, he replied that it was to buy a laundromat and dry-cleaning business, namely that of Bill Richards.

As a businessman, he feels that the Terrace economy has hit the bottom of the barrel and that the community is on an upswing.

He pointed out that many business have re-organized their approach to the economic situation and are preparing for better times.

He's all in favour of having the Kemano Completion project go ahead and thinks Terrace is in desperate need of something like this.

"Alcan has always been a good corporate citizen and I can't see them deliberately trying to ruin the environment," he says.

He plans to stay in the cleaning business for a few more years but one of his eventual goals is to get into politics.

But, he adds, this will have to wait until his children are older because he doesn't want to involve his family in the political life.

Space shuttle lands

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. space shuttle Challenger, diverted from a Florida landing by bad weather, swooped out of orbit and glided to Earth today on a California desert lakebed after a weeklong mission that saved a derelict satellite and opened an era of spacecraft servicing.

Commander Robert Crippen and pilot Dick Scobee guided the 98-tonne shuttle to a perfect touchdown at 16 minutes after sunrise, 5:38 a.m. PST (8:38 a.m. EST), and rolled to a stop on the hard-packed sand.

Only a few spectators were on hand to greet the shuttle and its five astronauts because of the late decision to shift the landing to Edwards, where eight of the first 10 shuttle missions also ended.

"Welcome back on Friday the 41-Charlie," Mission Control in Houston, Tex., told the astronauts, continuing a running joke. The current flight was originally designated STS-13, but NASA changed its name to 41-C, and the astronauts took to calling any number 13 "41-Charlie."

Skies were bright blue at Edwards, in contrast to pouring rain at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The shuttle was over the Indian Ocean in its 107th orbit when Crippen and Scobee fired its orbital engines for four minutes. That slowed the speed by 503 kilometres an hour, enough to start its one-hour plunge on a supersonic glide over the Pacific Ocean and into Edwards in the Mojave Desert.

10 MINUTES AWAY

Challenger's five crew members — who dubbed themselves the "Ace Satellite Repair Co." for their fix of the orbiting Solar Max satellite thanks to the shuttle's Canadian-developed robot arm — had planned to land at their home port of Cape Canaveral after a 4,827-million-kilometre journey. They were just 10 minutes from firing the braking rockets when a weather plane reported low clouds and rain moving over the Kennedy Space Centre runway.

NASA, which brought the shuttle down in Florida for the first time last February, prefers landing there because of the time and money it saves preparing for future flights.

But after realizing the Florida weather was only going to get worse, Mission Control waved the astronauts off.

In addition to Crippen and Scobee, the crew included mission specialist Terry Hart and spacewalkers George Nelson and James van Hoften.

VICTORIA (CP) — The fate of Expo 86, the $1.2-billion transportation and communications fair under construction in downtown Vancouver, will be decided today or Saturday, Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday.

The haggard and obviously exhausted premier emerged from a two-hour meeting of the provincial cabinet and told reporters that they had adjourned for the night without arriving at a decision.

The premier, who summoned Roy Gaudier, president of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, and Vancouver Mayor Mike Harcourt to Victoria for discussions, said he will meet in Vancouver today with Senator Jack Austin, the British Columbia minister in the federal cabinet.

"Bennett said he will be trying 'to clean it up as quickly as possible, (however) I'm not promising anything'."

The world-class exhibition is facing cancellation for lack of labour peace guarantees, on the recommendation of Expo chairman Jim Pattison who said he is not prepared to saddle provincial taxpayers with a potential debt of $860 million.

OPEN SITE

At issue is the Social Credit government's demand that the site be totally open to union and non-union workers, with a guarantee of labour peace. The building trades council has agreed not to strike, and to work alongside non-union employees — but only if the non-union workers are paid union rates.

Bennett claims the difference in union and non-union scales could be up to $50 million on $450 million of construction costs, while the council says that Expo officials have estimated that paying union scale on the entire site would add only $4 million to the cost.

The council also has suggested that the government wants to use unions as a scapegoat in cancelling Expo because of escalating costs.

Expo has a budget of $800 million, with an additional $400 million to be paid by participants in the 5½-month fair, scheduled to begin May 2, 1986.

Gaudier, who spent three hours — mostly on the telephone in an office in the premier's suite while Bennett was at cabinet and after he had gone for the night — said he had had a good discussion with the premier.

He said he has been "optimistic all along" of reaching a satisfactory resolution.

Harcourt, who also met with Bennett for 30 minutes, said he told the premier that the fair should proceed, and if it does, "the construction trades will make the commitment to get the project done on time and on budget."

NOT NEGOTIATING

Bennett, who spent most of the day on the telephone and in meetings with various officials and civic officials, said he does not negotiate, "I listen."

His 30-minute meeting with Gaudier came less than 24 hours after the premier had stated emphatically he would not be meeting with the union leader because "if Mr. Pattison can't come to an agreement with the building trades, then nobody can."

Bennett said he is a matter of keeping the government of Canada informed, and "heck, maybe they've got a good idea."

The federal government currently is building a $137-million pavilion in Vancouver which later will become that city's trade and convention centre.

In Ottawa, federal Secretary of State Serge Joyal said Thursday that the government will not come to the rescue of Expo if it is cancelled, because it has never been the government's policy to take over projects under provincial jurisdiction.

Pattison said he was recommending cancellation because he was unable to assure the countries, provinces, states and corporations that would be committing $400 million to participate in Expo, that there would be no interruptions in the construction schedules, and that the fair would open on time, and on budget.

He said that shutting down Expo now could cost British Columbia $90 million, but to do so a year from now because of labor problems would cost $750 million plus $200 million more to cover the resulting lawsuits.

Hospital deaths inquiry won't name suspects

TORONTO (CP) — As nurse Phyllis Trayner contradicted testimony given earlier by her colleagues in a royal commission inquiry into 36 mysterious baby deaths at a Toronto hospital, the Ontario Court of Appeal decided Thursday the commission may not name anyone it suspects of causing the deaths.

The appeal court, overturning a lower court ruling, said Mr. Justice Samuel Grange, head of the commission, may not identify anyone he suspects of causing the deaths by actions "accidental or otherwise."

The ruling followed an appeal by a nurses' group of a divisional court decision that Grange could name names when his commission issues its final report on the deaths at the Hospital for Sick Children.

Meanwhile Trayner, who has emerged as a central figure in the inquiry, denied previous statements by two colleagues that she left a baby alone on cardiac ward 4A while another nurse took a break.

Trayner, speaking in a subdued voice, said she would not have left Janice Estrella alone the night she died because the child had to have constant attention.

Nurse Sul Scott, who was in charge of giving constant care to Estrella, testified earlier that when she took a meal break, she was relieved by Trayner.

During the break, Scott said, Trayner came out to the nursing station to do some paperwork.

Nurse Marianne Christie also testified she had seen Trayner and Scott at the nursing station together.

But Trayner said she "would never have left the child on constant care with the monitor on."

Estrella died a few hours later that night. Her body was found to contain high levels of the powerful heart drug digoxin, even though she had been taken off the drug several days earlier.

A report prepared for the Ontario government by the U.S. Centres for Disease Control in Atlanta into the baby deaths in the cardiac unit between July 1980 and March 1981 said seven of the deaths could have been caused by deliberate overdoses of digoxin and 29 were suspicious. The report also said Trayner was on duty within hours of all 29 suspicious deaths.

Trayner, the subject of some potentially damaging testimony in earlier sessions of the commission, was asked by commission lawyer Paul Lamek how she coped with the high number of infant deaths her nursing team experienced in the summer and fall of 1980.

Trayner, the team leader, said she often wept.

"It's upsetting when any child dies," she said. "We were having a lot of deaths. There was a lot of feeling, a lot of emotion, there was a lot going on."

Four of the deaths, including Estrella's, were ruled as murders at a May 1982 preliminary hearing at which nurse Susan Nelles was discharged for lack of evidence on four counts of first-degree murder.

Nelles's lawyer, John Sopinka, had joined with lawyers representing Trayner and the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario to appeal the earlier ruling on Grange's stated intention to identify suspects.

Sopinka had argued that for the commission to do so would "go against hundreds of years of our law."

In handing down its ruling, the appeal court said it had to respect the civil rights of people who might be named in Grange's final report over the need of the public and the parents of the dead babies to know all the facts about the deaths.

Claude Thomson, Trayner's lawyer, said he would have to study the ruling "to see if it affects the kinds of questions that should be asked of my client in the balance of the inquiry."

Lawyer Morris Manning, who represents the parents of six of the dead infants, said the ruling would stop Grange from coming "to any worthwhile conclusion."

"I don't see any point to the commission now," he added.

Alan Borovoy, general counsel for the Canadian Civil Liberties Association, said Thursday night he saw some problems with the appeal court's ruling, even though his organization had expressed concern that the commission hearings could trample the reputations of some of the parties involved.

Israeli troops storm hijacked bus

DIR AL BALAH, Gaza Strip (AP) — Israeli troops today stormed a hijacked bus, freed about two dozen hostage passengers and killed the four Arab terrorists who had threatened the hostages with a bomb during a 10-hour ordeal.

A woman passenger also was killed in a fierce pre-dawn assault on the bus in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip that lasted only seconds, the military said. It identified her as an Israeli soldier who had been travelling on the bus.

Seven other passengers were wounded, military officials said.

The military today confirmed reports by army radio and Israeli radio that all four hijackers were killed. Earlier in the day, a military communique said two hijackers were killed and two were captured.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist wing of the Palestine Liberation Organization, issued a statement in Damascus, Syria, claiming responsibility for the attack.

The bus, carrying 35 passengers, was hijacked near the Mediterranean coast city of Ashdod. About nine of the passengers escaped before the bus was disabled 16 kilometres north of the Egyptian border by army sharpshooters who shot the tires out.

NEGOTIATE TERMS

From there, authorities negotiated for hours with the terrorists, who demanded the release of 500 guerrillas held in Israeli jails and safe passage to Egypt for themselves, said Defence Minister Moshe Arens, who watched the rescue mission from the scene.

"They had a bomb they threatened to explode, but we managed to take control before they had a chance to detonate it," Arens told Israel radio.

The hijackers also were armed with bottles of acid, knives and a grenade, officials said. A passenger said one hijacker threatened repeatedly to kill everyone aboard.

The troops stormed aboard the bus just before dawn.

"I heard a tremendous burst of gunfire. I said to myself 'This is it,' " an unidentified passenger told Israel radio.

"I immediately lay on the floor... someone fell on top of me," he said. Soldiers told the passengers to stay on the floor "until they know what's going on around us."

"There were shots, lots of them, for about 15 seconds and then it was all over," said Associated Press photographer Max Nash, who was 250 metres from the bus when it was stormed.

The hijackers seized the bus Thursday evening after it left Ashdod on its run from Tel Aviv to the port of Ashkelon.

FORCE DRIVER

They boarded the bus by paying passengers, then pulled their weapons and forced the driver to take the vehicle to the border, military sources said.

The bus broke through two roadblocks before the Palestinian refuge camp of Dir el Balah, about 80 kilometres south of Tel Aviv in the territory captured from Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

A pregnant woman who became hysterical was released from the bus south of Ashdod, and about nine passengers escaped when the bus stopped, the military said.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir announced on Israeli radio that the rescue operation had ended successfully with the release of all passengers, and said it proved terrorists had no chance of "imposing their will on us and escaping unpunished."

The Israeli military censor initially blacked out all coverage of the hijacking for several hours, but rumors of it spread nonetheless.

The bus hijacking was the first incident of hostages being taken in Israel since March 12, 1978, when a dozen Palestinian guerrillas landed in northern Israel in rubber dinghies. They seized two buses filled with Israeli nightseers near Kibbutz Maagan Michael, north of Tel Aviv.

The guerrillas forced the occupants into a single bus and drove down the coast toward Tel Aviv. A shootout with Israeli forces at a highway junction just north of the city left 38 Israelis and nine guerrillas dead.

Harbour mining stopped

MANAGUA (AP) — A senior Nicaraguan military official says mining of the country's harbors by U.S.-backed rebels appears to have ended, since no port traffic has been disrupted for two weeks.

In Panama, a spokesman for a Nicaraguan rebel group claimed his forces overran a major town in southern Nicaragua on Thursday, killing 150 of the leftist government's troops, as well as a Cuban commander who was carrying a Panamanian passport.

That clash was the latest in a series of guerrilla attacks that Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge called "the biggest offensive since the triumph of the revolution" in 1979. At a news conference Thursday, Borge said the Sandinista government was engaged in a "war against imperialism."

Borge also said 219 government soldiers had been killed and 204 wounded by rebels in the last month.

Earlier Thursday, Nicaraguan Army Chief of Staff Joaquin Cuadra Lacayo recounted mine explosions in Nicaraguan waters in the last month and said it appeared the U.S.-directed mining operation had been halted.

SHIPS DAMAGED

Cuadra said of 18 mines that had exploded at Atlantic and Pacific ports, seven damaged commercial ships and wounded a total of 10 sailors. The other 11 mines were activated by the Nicaraguan navy to clear the harbors.

"The possibility that mines remain is very remote, because they would have exploded already with the passing of ships. No new mines have exploded. But we can't rule out future mining, considering the propensity of Mr. Reagan."

The last vessel to be damaged by a mine was the Japanese freighter Taushiro Mahuro, which hit a mine March 30 at El Bluff, an Atlantic port. The other harbors where mines exploded were Puerto Sandino and Corinto on the Pacific coast.

CIA officials in Washington said the mining operation was completed early this month, adding they doubted new mines would be placed because of the international furor that followed disclosure of the American involvement.

Late Thursday, the U.S. House of Representatives joined the Senate in approving a non-binding resolution condemning the American role in the mining.

REPORTS ATTACK

In Panama, Alvaro Altamirano, a spokesman for the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, said 1,500 alliance rebels overran the Nicaraguan city of San Juan del Norte, southeast of the capital, late Thursday, killing 150 government soldiers.

Among those reported killed was a Cuban base commander whom Altamirano identified as Lino Mendoza. He said the commander was carrying a Panamanian passport but had been identified previously by alliance forces as a Cuban.

Five rebels were killed in the clash and 18 were wounded, rebel spokesman Orion Pastora said in San Jose, Costa Rica, where the alliance is based.

Late Thursday, the Nicaraguan government lodged a protest with the Costa Rican Foreign Ministry, claiming the attack had been launched from Costa Rican soil. Foreign Minister Carlos Jose Gutierrez said the claim would be investigated.

In Guatemala City, a judicial source said human rights activists have submitted writs to the Supreme Court demanding that the state account for 167 Guatemalans they say disappeared after being detained by security forces.

Vatican shake-up answers internal criticisms

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — Pope John Paul has carried out a major shakeup of the Vatican Curia in what church and diplomatic sources see as a move to broaden the international flavor of the church's hierarchy and distance himself from its daily bureaucracy.

Last Monday's (April 19) sweeping changes in the Roman Catholic Church's staid central administration were headlined by Italian newspapers as an Earthquake in the Vatican.

The sources said the long-awaited changes clearly showed the Pope's intention to make Vatican government departments more international and less Italian. Eleven of the 16 prelates appointed or reassigned to important Curia posts are non-Italians.

The pontiff's shakeup directly addressed some Vatican problems and some criticisms of his papacy, the sources said.

Some leading churchmen around the world had privately complained that the Curia was dominated by Italians who often did not understand the problems and methods of the Catholic church outside Italy.

Pope John Paul, who in 1978 became the first non-Italian pontiff in 455 years, answered those complaints by appointing or reassigning to key Curia posts two Africans, an American, a Frenchman, a Belgian, a Pole, a Hungarian, a German, a Brazilian, an Irishman, and an Argentinian.

REPLACES ITALIAN

Bernardin Cardinal Gantin of Benin, who already held Curia posts, became prefect of the Congregation for the Bishops, one of the most powerful Vatican positions and one traditionally held by an Italian.

preferred to concentrate on the church's pastoral and spiritual problems, gave Agostino Cardinal Casaroli, the Vatican secretary of state, a special mandate to oversee all the internal affairs of Vatican City.

This means that Casaroli will closely oversee the day-to-day running of the Vatican, including its expenditure and the administration of the Vatican Bank.

Sources said Casaroli's unprecedented mandate indicated the Pope's concern over Vatican budget deficits, which have been about $30 million a year lately, and over the bank's involvement with the failed Banco Ambrosiano.

Trudeau investigates complaints

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he will check into complaints that two cabinet ministers seeking the Liberal leadership are using government employees as key workers in their campaigns.

Trudeau repeated in the Commons that no cabinet minister running for the leadership should be using publicly salaried staff in a major way for their leadership organizations.

Conservative justice critic Allan Lawrence asked Trudeau to investigate the role of an aide to Energy Minister Jean Chretien who accompanied Chretien on his leadership tour of the Atlantic provinces last week and now is with him on a western swing.

Lawrence also said Michael Ronan, a co-chairman of Employment Minister John Roberts' leadership campaign responsible for public relations and advertising, is working under contract for the federal government's Privy Council Office.

Trudeau, facing questions for the second straight day on the role of government staff in the leadership campaign, said if Ronan is working full-time on the leadership, "obviously one of the two should be stopped."

Munro had accepted $9,000 from an Indian tribal council in Manitoba as a contribut on to his leadership campaign, but reported to the Commons that the money did not come from federal coffers. The prime minister said the council, which receives most of its funding from Ottawa, also has a private corporation which earned the money donated to Munro's campaign.

CHANGES POSITION

Casaroli is to give up his post as head of the Patrimony of the Holy See, which manages the Vatican's investments and other assets. His successor will be Agnelo Cardinal Rossi of Brazil.

Rossi is replaced as director of the Office for Evangelization by Archbishop Dermot Ryan of Dublin, who appears certain to be named a cardinal at the next consistory.

Lawrence complained Wednesday that Justice Minister Mark MacGuigan's campaign manager was working out of the justice minister's office on Parliament Hill. MacGuigan later admitted to reporters that Jim McDonald, his campaign manager, was on the public payroll until April 12, three weeks after MacGuigan entered the leadership race.

Trudeau said it would be possible for a person to work on contract for the government two days a week without being precluded from political activity for the rest of the week, but added that does not apply to full-time civil servants.

"It is worth looking into," he told Lawrence.

MacGuigan later admitted to reporters that Jim McDonald, his campaign manager, was on the public payroll until April 12, three weeks after MacGuigan entered the leadership race.

By appointing some of the non-Italians to posts that traditionally lead to the cardinalate, the Pope may be trying to improve the chances that a non-Italian will succeed him after his death, the sources said.

NOT ENOUGH TIME

The shake up was also a reply to criticism from within the church hierarchy that the Pope's frequent world travels have left him insufficient time to look after Vatican administration.

Church officials had privately said he did not give enough attention to several Vatican problems, including the activities of the Vatican Bank.

The Pope, acknowledging that he

National security debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Under certain controls, the RCMP should be allowed to open first-class mail for both criminal and security investigations, Commissioner Robert Simmonds said Thursday.

"I think mail-opening is something that should be allowed under proper controls," he told the Commons justice committee.

Simmonds said the ability to open mail would have given the RCMP flexibility when investigating an organization with international connections that was involved in a "very serious crime."

But he wouldn't give the committee any details about the organization or the nature of the crime.

"I won't go into the case or the group at all," he later told reporters. "We investigated and had some reasonable success... perhaps much more slowly and at much greater expense than might otherwise have been necessary."

Asked whether mail-opening is vital to protecting national security or would simply make the RCMP's job easier, Simmonds said: "Well, if I don't know what's in the mail, how can I answer?"

WARRANT NEEDED

Simmonds said mail-opening should have the same sort of controls as wiretapping, which requires a judicial warrant be obtained and the individuals involved be notified.

The McDonald commission on RCMP wrongdoings found that the RCMP security service conducted 94 security mail checks between 1970 and 1977, opening mail in 66 of those cases.

Chretien addresses women liberals

VANCOUVER (CP) — If there aren't many women elected to the House of Commons, it is up to women to do something to change that, Liberal leadership hopeful Jean Chretien told about 100 members of the British Columbia Liberal Women's Commission on Thursday.

While he doesn't favor testing of the cruise missile in Canada, Chretien said, "we can't be a member of the club if we don't pay our dues."

"I hope it (the cruise testing) will lead to a reduction in the nuclear arsenal and there might be no need for further testing. I would try to avoid further testing, but if it's necessary we must always pay our dues."

KNOWS PROBLEM

On the issue of B.C.'s fisheries, Chretien said he knows there is a severe problem with an over-supply of fishing boats, a decreasing number of fish, native Indians' wish to have more rights to the fishery and continuing negotiations between the United States and Canada over fishing quotas.

But, he said he is no expert and couldn't say what he as prime minister would do to improve the situation. He did, however, reject the suggestion of a Canadian merchant marine saying that it would only aggravate the world over-supply of ships.

The former finance minister said he isn't doctrinaire about the federal deficit. He rejects what he calls the myth that a deficit means the dollar drops and the interest rate rises.

The costliest nationalized concern — and the one that stands to lose the most jobs — is the steel industry, which lost $1.25 billion last year.

During the last two weeks, steel workers staged wildcat strikes, blocked highways, halted rail traffic, attacked public buildings and pelted police with bottles of acid, rocks and steel bolts during demonstrations.

"Don't ask us to do your job," he said. "It's up to you to run in your ridings and get elected. You have the numbers, you only need the will."

He said he was the one who telephoned former B.C. member of Parliament Iona Campagnolo to ask her to take on the task of party reform.

"I called Iona Campagnolo and asked her to run (for the presidency) because she is from B.C. and she is a woman. I figured I could not miss."

About 20 women and a handful of men sported Chretien buttons at the late afternoon cocktail party even though the women's commission is urging its members to remain uncommitted until the June convention.

But, he said he is no expert and couldn't say what he as prime minister would do to improve the situation. He did, however, reject the suggestion of a Canadian merchant marine saying that it would only aggravate the world over-supply of ships.

Another 30,000 jobs are expected to be cut from the coal, ship building and automobile industries under the governing Socialists' plan to restructure money-losing state-owned industries and make them more competitive on the international market. The targeted industries are now costing the government more than $1 billion a year in subsidies.

In response to a question about Canada's role in promoting world peace, Chretien suggested opening a dialogue with the middle powers from both the Eastern bloc and from the West.

He said Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau made the first step toward that with his visit to East Germany late last year.

The energy minister said he favors no intervention by the United States, Cuba or the Soviet Union into Central America. But said that would be in an ideal world.

McEwan donates equipment to Caledonia

General Motors of Canada through and in conjunction with McEwan GM, of Terrace, recently donated a number of automotive training aids to Caledonia Senior Secondary School.

The major items were two complete rear differential assemblies. These units are complete in every respect. They include the differential assembly, rear axle housings, rear axles and the complete rear braking system including drums, shoes, wheel cylinders and emergency brake cables. The value of these units at retail prices would exceed

$2,000 per unit. Doug Brewer, Auto Mechanics Instructor at Caledonia felt these units will enable him to offer "hands on" instruction to students without the need to bring a complete vehicle into the shop. Instruction may be given on the differential gears and axle assembly as well as the entire wheel rear wheel brake system.

As the units are removed from the vehicle they lend themselves to relatively large groups around the equipment without restricting visibility or access. With a small shop and a large class this feature is a definite advantage.

Mr. Brewer was also appreciative of the other training aids recently supplied by General Motors. These included filmstrips and training manuals on General Motors carburation systems. Training aides were provided on the braking system used on GM cars and trucks.

Caledonia Senior Secondary School in Terrace each year processes seven classes of approximately 20 students each in Automotive Mechanics 11 & 12. Mr. Brewer stated that he has been teaching Auto Mechanic classes at Caledonia for 11 years. On this basis he would appear to have provided an insight into the operation and repair of automobiles to nearly 1400 Terrace students.

Mr. Brewer of the school On behalf of the school Mr. Brewer expressed his appreciation to Jim McEwan for the support given and training aids supplied by the General Motors organization. He particularly wished his thanks be passed to the following GM personnel. Mr. Peter Bagnall, Zone Manager; Mr. Brian Robertson, Consumer Relations Manager, Vancouver Zone and Mrs. Rosemarie Kopitaki, Public Relations Department in Ottawa, Ontario.

Mr. Brewer extended an invitation to any and all of these GM people to visit Caledonia's Mechanical Training Department when next in Terrace.

Jim McEwan of McEwan GM in Terrace indicated that his company is always interested in cooperating with any local education institutions in the promotion of Automotive Mechanical Training. In the eight years that McEwan GM has been in business in Terrace they have sponsored a total of over 8 mechanics and 4 bodymen through the apprenticeship training program of the B.C.

department of Labour. They have provided many man hours of training to their own staff of mechanics and bodymen in the GM Factory Schools in Vancouver. GM Factory mobile schools have also been held in Terrace with the cooperation of the Northwest Community College. A number of management staff of McEwan GM have attended Computer training classes in the Los Angeles area. Several students from local schools have been involved in work experience programs operated jointly by Caledonia and community employers including the Service Department of McEwan GM.

They've got a good reason to be happy in the Caledonia Senior Secondary Auto Mechanics shop. General Motors of Canada and McEwan GM of Terrace recently donated $4,000 worth of rear differential assemblies to the school to enable students in the mechanics course to get hands-on

BCGEU retirement banquet

On Saturday evening, March 31, 1984, the Terrace Hotel was host to the British Columbia Government Employee's Union retirement banquet.

Approximately ninety people (including retirees and spouses, B.C.G.E.U. Executives and numerous Stewarts) were in attendance to enjoy a delicious meal served buffet style. Hats off to Pat Dougherty and staff.

The geographic area represented by those in attendance covers from Burns Lake west to the Queen Charlotte Islands and is known as the Northwest Area No.12. It is one of three broad geographic areas comprising the B.C. Government Employee's Union, known as Region No.5 Northern. On hand from headquarters in Burnaby to present the retirement plaques and give the farewell speech was John Shields, 1st Vice-President, B.C.G.E.U. Those employees receiving retirement plaques were the following: Doris Acton, Ministry of Health, Terrace; Ellen Agnew, Ministry of Health, Terrace; John Anderson, Ministry of Highways, Houston (formerly of Terrace); Hilda Beddows, Ministry of the Attorney General, Smithers; Rita Burkett, Ministry of Health, Terrace; Joe Cournoye, Ministry of Highways, Hazelton (unable to attend); Ken Harris, B.C. Timber Local 64, Prince Rupert (unable to attend); John Klassen, Ministry of Highways, Burns Lake; David Martens, Ministry of Highways, Burns Lake;

Bud Pierce, B.C.B.C., Prince Rupert; Joe Schulmeister, B.C.B.C., Terrace; Wid Smith, B.C. Forest Service, Houston; Joan Sparks, Ministry of Health, Terrace; Allan Stanyer, Ministry of Highways, Burns Lake; Charlie Stephenson, Ministry of Highways, Burns Lake; and Dorothy Van Tine, Ministry of Finance, Smithers.

In addition, the following persons who are scheduled for retirement with the impending closure of Skeena View Lodge in May, will be given their retirement plaques at a future occasion: Helen Bush, Marg Goodlad, Nelle Matwick and Joe Wideman, Ministry of Health, Terrace.

The head table comprised of the following people: Jim Fulton, M.P. for Skeena; Dave Gellately Region No.5

Vice-President B.C.G.E.U. (Master of Ceremonies) and Jane Gellately; John Shields, 1st Vice-President B.C.G.E.U. Headquarters; Norma King, Secretary B.C.G.E.U. Northwest Area Officer; Dave MacKinnon, Northwest Area Staff Representative B.C.G.E.U. and Dorothy MacKinnon. Also invited, but unable to attend, was Mayor Helmut Giesbrecht, District of Terrace.

The big surprise of the evening was a well-deserved special bouquet and gift presented to Norma King, for her many years of untiring and dedicated service, as secretary par excellence at the Northwest Area Office. Ian Carney of Burns Lake made the presentation to Norma King.

Police News

TERRACE— Terrace RCMP have one young male offender in custody as a result of a break and enter into a home on Graham Avenue, Wednesday afternoon. Although a large amount of valuables were taken, police have recovered most of them through the resulting investigation. Entry was gained through a basement window. The man will appear in Terrace court today.

Utah Jazz wins midwest division title

Utah Jazz reached the mountaintop, and they like the rarified air. "You know, they wrote an obituary on us a couple weeks ago, but we came back from that," Jazz coach Frank Layden said after his team won the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division with a 113-84 victory Thursday night over San Diego Clippers. "I'm very proud and very happy for this team. They have been criticized, but they have played well this season." Andrian Dantley scored 31 points and Darrell Griffith became the NBA's best three-point scorer in one season as the Jazz earned its first divisional title in the franchise's 10-year history. In other NBA games Thursday, it was: Kansas City Kings 114, San Antonio Spurs 102; Phoenix Suns 119, Dallas Mavericks 118; and Seattle SuperSonics 106, Golden State Warriors 100.

Griffith hit his 91st three-point goal of the season with 5:17 to play in the third quarter. That broke Brian Taylor's record of 90 in the 1978-

1980 season. Dantley's two free throws at the beginning of the third quarter gave him 800 for the season, only the fourth time an NBA player has achieved that. "We only got 16 points in the fourth quarter, and that speaks for itself," said San Diego coach Jim Lyman. Kings 114 Spurs 102 Eddie Johnson scored 16 of his game-high 31 points in the fourth period to help Kansas City down San Antonio and keep alive its slim hopes for the eighth and final Western Division playoff spot. Kansas City must win its final game and Golden State must lose one of its two remaining games for the Kings to earn the final berth. Johnson scored the Kings' first 14 points to open the fourth quarter. Suns 119 Mavericks 118 Larry Nance sank a free throw with five seconds left to lift Phoenix over Dallas. The loss kept Dallas from clinching the No. 4 berth in the Western Conference playoffs, while the Suns won their season-high fifth straight game. Mark Aguirre, the NBA's second-leading scorer, finished with a game-high 34 points, but had only two in the fourth period. Sonics 105 Warriors 100 Centre Jack Sikma scored 13 of his 25 points in the final 6½ minutes for Seattle. Gus Williams paced the SuperSonics with 34 points. Golden State was led by Joe Barry Carroll with 24 points and Purvis Short with 23.

Detroit Tigers undefeated

Detroit Tigers, the only undefeated team in major league baseball, are off to the best start in their 84-year history. A 9-4 victory Thursday night over Texas Rangers was the seventh in a row since the opening of the American League baseball season for the Tigers. One has to go back 73 years to find a better Detroit start, a 6-0 leap into spring in 1911. "The record speaks for itself, we're hot," said Jack Morris, who pitched his way to a third straight triumph. "We want eight now."

The Tigers get that chance today when they begin a weekend series against the Red Sox in Boston.

There were three other games in the majors Thursday: Minnesota Twins shut out New York Yankees 3-0 and California Angels edged Oakland A's 3-2 in other AL games, while San Diego Padres defeated Atlanta Braves 6-1 in the lone National League game. In an exhibition game, Cleveland Indians dropped a 3-2 decision to Buffalo Bisons, their Eastern League affiliate. Toronto Blue Jays, second in the AL East three games behind the Tigers, are back in action today against the Rangers in Texas, and Montreal Expos play their home opener against Philadelphia Phillies.

Twins 3 Yankees 0 In New York, Mike Smithson and Ron Davis combined on a six-hitter and Minnesota got consecutive hits by Dave Engle, Gary Gaetti, Tim Laudner, Lenny Faedo and Darrell Brown with two out in the second inning to beat the Yankees. Smithson improved his record to 2-0, while New York's Ray Fontenot fell to 0-2. Angels 3 A's 2

In Oakland, Gary Pettis had a double and scored two runs and Doug DeCinces singled to stretch his hitting streak to eight games for California. Winning pitcher Geoff Zahn scattered eight hits in 6 2/3 innings in his first start after two weeks on the disabled list with a pulled thigh muscle. Dave Kingman's two-run homer accounted for the home team's runs. Mike Warren, 0-2, took the loss.

Padres 6 Braves 1 In San Diego, Kevin McReynolds homered to lead off the bottom of the seventh inning and spark San Diego's seventh win in eight starts — the best start in the team's history. Ed Whitson, 1-0, went the first seven innings, giving up all five Braves hits, and Dave Dravecky worked the final two innings for his second save. Pete Falcone, 0-2, was the loser. Terry Kennedy drove in two runs with a double in the San Diego eighth.

Laughlin lifts Caps to victory

If the defending Stanley Cup champion New York Islanders thought they had a tough time getting past New York Rangers, they now are fully aware Washington Capitals will be even tougher.

The Islanders were forced into overtime in a deciding game Tuesday before eliminating the Rangers. On Thursday night they ran out of gas, failing to protect a 2-0 lead and losing 3-2 to the Capitals in the opening game of the National Hockey League Patrick Division final.

In other opening games of best-of-seven division finals Thursday it was: Quebec Nordiques 4, Montreal Canadiens 2 in the Adams; Edmonton Oilers 5, Calgary Flames 2 in the Smythe; and Minnesota North Stars 2, St. Louis Blues 1 in the Norris. Second games are tonight.

Washington's Craig Laughlin scored the winning goal with only 62 seconds remaining.

With Islander defenceman Denis Potvin draped all over him, Laughlin fanned on a shot and, as he fell to the ice with Potvin still holding him, managed to flick the puck over goaltender Billy Smith's right shoulder.

New York rookie Pat Flatley scored the only goal of the first period and Mike Bossy made it 2-0 with a Cup-record 30th power-play goal at 7:46 of the second period.

Then the Capitals started their comeback. Alan Haworth tipped in Rod Langway's shot on a power play 05 seconds after Bossy's goal and Dave Christian tied it with another deflection off a Langway shot, also on a power play, at 6:13 of the third period.

Washington outshot New York 37-18, with Al Jensen picking up the goaltending victory.

Nordiques 4 Canadiens 2 In Quebec, the Nordiques' Blake Wesley scored from the boards to the distant right of Montreal goaltender Steve Penney at 17:54 of the second period to break a 2-2 tie and Louis Sleigher added an insurance goal early in the final period.

Marian Stastny and Jean-Francois Sauve, on the power play, scored for Quebec and Chris Nilan and Mark Hunter scored for Montreal in the first period.

Quebec, with Dan Bouchard in goal, outshot Montreal 32-18.

Oilers 5 Flames 2 In Edmonton, where the Oilers outshot the Flames 54-29, Wayne Gretzky scored twice and set up two others. Jari Kurri, Ken Linseman and Kevin Lowe also scored for the Oilers, while Mike Eaves and Lanny McDonald replied for Calgary.

the third period, gave Edmonton a two-goal cushion.

Stars 2 Blues 1 In Bloomington, Minn., Dino Ciccarelli scored the winner during a scramble in front of St. Louis goaltender Mike Liut with 11:37 remaining.

There was no score through 32 minutes until the North Stars' Mark Napier shoved the puck over the goal line after Liut stopped a shot by Ciccarelli on a power play. The Blues tied it six minutes into the third period when Pat Hickey swatted a rebound of Doug Gilmour's shot past goaltender Don Beaupre.

Two Caledonia students, Nelson Botello (left) and Wade Schmidt (right), will be travelling to Kelowna to try out for the B.C. youth soccer association interior district select team. Botello will be trying out for the under 16 select team and Schmidt will try out for the under 18 team. The interior select team is chosen from representatives of nine interior and northern communities. Players who attend the interior camp have a chance of being chosen to play on the B.C. select team. This provincial representative team holds a training camp for players in July and August and participates in international competition.

Hall of famers announced

TORONTO (CP) — George (Punch) Imlach and John (Jake) Milford have been elected to the Hockey Hall of Fame in the builder category, hall officials announced today.

As general manager and coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, Imlach, 66, a native of Toronto, guided the National Hockey League team to Stanley Cup championships in 1961-62, 1962-63, 1963-64 and 1966-67. He was also instrumental in development of Buffalo Sabres as the NHL team's first coach and general manager.

Imlach came to the Leafs in 1968 as assistant general manager after a two-year stint as general manager, coach and director of player personnel of Springfield of the American Hockey League.

He took over as coach-general manager of the Leafs part way through the 1959-60 season. In 11 seasons with the Leafs, his teams made the playoffs 10 times.

Fired after the Leafs missed the playoffs in 1969, Imlach spent the next season as a syndicated hockey columnist before joining the Sabres organization in 1970. Heart problems forced him to relinquish coaching duties temporarily during the 1971-72 season.

Three seasons after the Sabres joined the NHL, Imlach had the expansion franchise in the playoffs and in 1976 Buffalo made it as far as the Stanley Cup final. He was relieved as general manager in 1978 and rejoined the Leafs in 1979 as general manager-coach until he suffered more heart problems in the 1981-82 season.

Milford, 67, a native of Charlottetown and currently senior vice-president of the NHL's Vancouver Canucks, is noted as a shrewd judge of talent and an astute dealer in trades.

He started Brandon Wheat Kings of the Western Hockey League in the early 1950s before moving to the New York Rangers organization in 1959 in the Central Hockey League. In 1966, he organized a CHL club in St. Paul, Minn., winning four titles in eight seasons. The CHL coach-of-the-year trophy is named after Milford.

In 1973, Milford joined the NHL Los Angeles Kings, becoming general manager later that year. He became general manager of the Canucks in 1977.

Milford once made hockey history when Eddie Shore traded him to Buffalo of the American Hockey League from Springfield for two sets of used Art Ross nets.

Crenshaw takes the lead

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw played better than anyone else in the first round of the Masters golf tournament — yet the easy-going Texan said his score was not as good as it should have been.

"I could have easily shot two to three shots better," he said after a five-under-par 67. Thursday gave him a one-shot lead over Lee Trevino. "I missed some makeable putts."

"The putts were good angles to make putts, too, and that's what leaves me a little perplexed."

It's also unusual for Crenshaw, considered to be one of the better putters on tour.

"My putter hasn't been that sharp this year," he said.

His previous best opening round in the Masters was a 70 in 1976 when he went on to the first of his two second-place finishes. He also was second last year.

Trevino's 68 was his best score ever on the 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course, a layout he has insisted does not suit his game.

It left him in a jovial mood.

"I'm putting extremely well," he said. "Today I made 'em all and, if it keeps going, I wear a 42 short, but I'll take a 46 long."

He was referring to the green jacket given the champion during the victory ceremony each year.

"I'm very excited about it, because I think the first round in any golf tournament is the most important one."

FAVORITES TRAIL
The excellent starts by Crenshaw and Trevino contrasted dismal beginnings for three golfers generally cast in the favorite's role — defending champion Seve Ballesteros, five-time winner Jack Nicklaus and two-time champ Tom Watson.

Ballesteros, the Spaniard who also won in 1980, and Nicklaus each shot 73 and Watson had a 76.

Hal Sutton, player of the year in 1983 and the reigning PGA champion, and Larry Nelson, the 1983 U.S. Open champion, also had their problems. Sutton had a 74 and Nelson a 76.

Billy Casper, 52, in his 28th consecutive Masters, appeared to be in the hunt for the lead. He was at four-under par through 14 holes before taking a bogey on 15 and a round-destroying quadruple-bogey seven on the 16th where he played games between a bunker on one side of the green and water on the other.

Another veteran, four-time winner Arnold Palmer, had a 77.

22 BREAK PAR
Ideal conditions produced a bevy of outstanding scores, including 22 subpar rounds. Deadlocked at 69 were Japan's Isao Aoki, Australian David Graham, Mark Lye and Tom Purtzer.

Six others were at two-under 70 — former champions George Archer and Ray Floyd, Hale Irwin, Tom Kite, Britain's Nick Faldo and Gary Koch, the only two-time winner this season.

Ten players were tied at 71.

Crenshaw's disappointment in his putting was well founded. He made only two putts longer than 30 inches — a six-foot par-saving putt on the 10th and a 12-foot birdie on the 13th.

With a history of playing well after his Masters opening rounds, Crenshaw was asked if he was thinking about winning now.

"I've got this job to do," he said. "That's what I'm concerned about."

"I can't think about winning. There's a lot of road in front of me."

Alberta rink postal champs

EDMONTON (CP) — Nick Ronsky's Alberta rink clinched the national postal curling championship with a pair of victories Thursday.

Ronsky dumped John Davis of Prince Edward Island 9-2 in the ninth round and then downed British Columbia's Ray Vetter 8-5 later in the day to run his record to nine wins and one loss.

Diz MacNeil of Nova Scotia, John Gifford of Manitoba and Saskatchewan's Wendel Charbonneau were tied for second with 7-3 records heading into today's 11th and final round.

All About PEOPLE

Crusty newspaperman Lou Grant wouldn't have stood for it.

But actor Ed Asner, who played the television newsman, suffered a badly sprained foot when he was pinned against the trunk of his car in a parking lot in a hilly area of Hollywood.

Asner said a three-year-old child in another car released the brakes and it rolled toward him as he was putting his laundry into the trunk.

The portly actor is now hobbling around on crutches, having learned that recalcitrant reporters have nothing on a bored three-year-old.

Queen Elizabeth, who has a particular fondness for doming sturdy shoes and walking in the country, will pay tribute to a Canadian fitness buff when she visits Toronto in July.

On July 21 the Queen will officially open the Martin Goodman Trail - a waterfront path created in memory of the late president of The Toronto Star.

The eight-kilometre trail along Toronto's Lake Ontario waterfront between Bathurst and Leslie streets is predicted to be a favorite among joggers, cyclists and walkers.

Before Goodman died in 1982 at 46, he was a fitness enthusiast and intense athlete. He had a passionate belief that city amenities should be open to all its citizens.

The Star has contributed the initial $90,000 of the $380,000 estimated cost, with the city and the province paying the rest.

It seems not everyone was glued to the tube the night of the Academy Awards presentation in Hollywood.

Swedish director Ingmar Bergman says he was so immersed in a new play he's directing in Stockholm that he didn't hear until the next morning that his film Fanny and Alexander had won four Oscars.

"The play I'm directing is opening on May 4 and I have to shut out everything else," Bergman said, explaining why he had unplugged his telephone the night of the awards.

Challenge is what life is all about, says Terry Moran, 47, who has been named citizen of the year for 1984 in the St. Lawrence community of Gananoque.

"I'm a more effective person when I'm busy," says Moran, a self-employed operator of a gas station and car wash.

One of Moran's challenges over the years has been the federal government. As a member of the St. Lawrence Islands National Park advisory committee, he took on Ottawa and convinced the government not to expropriate islands in the Gananoque area for park expansion.

This is not just another used car. The automobile awarded Roberto Clemente as the most valuable player of baseball's 1971 World Series is on sale in Puerto Rico for $12,000. But family of the late Pittsburgh Pirates star is upset because the seller is using a picture of the baseball hero to flog the 1972 Dodge Charger.

Clemente's widow, Vera, said she let a family friend have the car last year for a token payment and apparently it was resold.

"A lot of people think I'm selling the car, but I don't use Clemente's belongings for profit," she said. Having kept all her husband's possessions, including his uniforms, she said: "I could be a millionaire and set up a museum and get rich, but I want to always keep Clemente's name clean, the way he always was himself."

Clemente was killed in a plane crash in 1972 while on a mercy mission taking relief supplies to earthquake victims in Nicaragua.

Despite a London newspaper editor's claim that French film actress Brigitte Bardot has had a lifelong love affair with cameras and the press and has rarely tried to hide from public view, the paper has had its knuckles rapped for using a long-distance photograph of her topless beside her swimming pool.

Britain's press council has ruled that the London Sun made a "gross intrusion" into Bardot's privacy by publishing the photo. Papers should, in some circumstances, stop taking and printing long-range pictures of unsuspecting subjects, the council added.

Cancer genes discovered

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Genes suspected of causing cancer have been found in 20 types of human tumors, evidence that may help scientists develop safer, more effective treatments and leave the "Dark Ages" of chemotherapy and radiation, a researcher says.

"We have new evidence linking cancer genes to human malignancies," said Dr. Dennis Slamon, whose study was published today in the Journal Science.

"The evidence is that many of these oncogenes (cancer genes) are active in freshly obtained human tumors."

Genes control the hereditary characteristics of all living things and direct the growth and development of normal body cells and tissues. But scientists believe that some genes — named oncogenes after "onkos," the Greek word for tumor — sometimes cause cells to become cancerous.

Chemical activity from 15 oncogenes was found in 20 different types of human tumors studied by Slamon, an assistant professor of medicine, his colleagues at the UCLA Center for Health Sciences in Los Angeles and researchers at the Salk Institute in San Diego.

Teachers frustrated with fallout

OTTAWA (CP) — "So many children today need a bath, a bite to eat, a good night's sleep and a hug before they can sit in a classroom all day and be expected to function and to learn."

The statement by a Grade 5 teacher in Prince Edward Island expressed poignantly some of the fears and frustrations of teachers across the country grappling with the fallout from tough economic times.

A study commissioned by the Canadian Teachers' Federation and released this week paints a disturbing picture of how some of the voters, workers and leaders of tomorrow are coping with more joblessness among their parents, financial strains and a deteriorating school environment. The study's chief finding was an "overwhelming sense" that the economic recession of 1981 and 1982 has hurt both students and teachers.

The study, done by Ronald Burke of the faculty of administrative studies at York University in Toronto, is based on responses to a detailed questionnaire from 3,724 teachers, principals and guidance counsellors. It involved elementary and secondary schools.

Burke essentially sought to compare classroom conditions in mid-1983 with conditions before the country was gripped by recession in 1981.

Among other things, he found the most pressing student problems were a lack of interest in learning and negative attitudes in the classroom, ranging from poor attendance and discipline problems to bad language.

MORE DISTRESS

Students having the toughest time were depressed about their own job prospects, had parents drawing unemployment insurance, had fathers who were forced to move away from home to search for work or had mothers returning to work.

Burke acknowledged that students and their performance at school have always been affecting by a disruptive homelife, but he said they are "experiencing more distress because of economic factors."

"These threatening trends must be reversed if Canada's major resource for the future — the minds of its youth — are to be developed to the fullest," the author said.

Several teachers, counsellors and principals reported that schools are dealing increasingly with problems formerly handled in the home or by social agencies.

"Teachers are functioning more and more like social workers," he said.

While all respondents to the survey admitted the recession had a modest effect on them personally because they "still had jobs," many indicated the morale of teachers had deteriorated along with the economy.

Tight budgets meant there was little money to repair or replace facilities, classes had grown bigger and special programs for children with learning problems had been shaved.

To escape paying substitute teachers, students were often left to fend for themselves when teachers were absent.

BECAME LEANER

On the positive side, less money forced schools into a leaner operation, while some teachers and students were more devoted to their respective tasks.

Burke also noted that principals tended to see smaller effects of the recession than teachers and guidance counsellors.

The study showed that educators from communities with jobless rates higher than the national average reported a greater in-

B.C. Hydro granted increase

The B.C. Utilities Commission (BCUC) has granted B. Hydro a 6.5 per cent interim increase in its electric rates effective April 15, 1984. Gas rates remain unchanged at present.

In its March 20 application to the BCUC, for an interim increase to take effect April 1, Hydro said the proposed change was necessary, based upon estimated sales, to avoid operating at a loss in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1985.

The interim rate increase is subject to final approval by the BCUC following consideration of a detailed supporting application to be filed by Hydro no later than September 4, 1984. Any refund that may be ordered following a public rate hearing will include interest at the prime rate charged by Hydro's principal bank.

For a residential home consuming 1000 kilowatt-hours per month the interim increase in electric rates will add $3.14 per month to the homeowner's bill.

Hydro customers are asked to contact their nearest Hydro office.

B.C. Hydro's system plan expenditures for the next ten years have been cut by two-thirds from last year in response to changing provincial energy needs.

A new approach to electric load forecasting, introduced last August, incorporates an Energy Planning Range (EPR) concept to accommodate Hydro's long-range electric load growth forecast and provide maximum flexibility for the electric system plan which flows from the forecast.

This new development in forecasting and planning resulted directly from greater recognition of economic uncertainty in the future and the increased need for flexibility in plans for new sources of electric energy.

Anticipating a restrained recovery, Hydro has adopted a planning range for an annual electrical growth forecast of between 3.1 and 4.7 per cent over the next 10 years with the probable figure expected to be 3.9 per cent.

After completion of the Revelstoke project this year, no major new generation facilities are planned to come into service over the next decade.

This means that total expenditures on fixed assets have been cut from last year's planned figure of $12.8 billion for the period 1983 to 1985 to $4.0 billion for the period 1984 to 1994.

"The reduction in forecast expenditures is due to the overall reduced load forecast and a change in our generation planning criteria," said Hydro president Norman Olsen. "This change permits us to plan traditional, firm electrical generating resources for a demand level lower than the probable forecast and to make up the difference with less-firm, more flexible resources. Consequently, the funds for the last half of the 10-year period have been reduced significantly reflecting the deferral of the start of the Peace Site C and Stikine-Iskut project."

In-service dates for the Keenleyside-Murphy project have been deferred by two years, from 1992 to 1994 for the generation addition to the existing Keenleyside dam, and from 1993 to 1995 for the proposed Murphy Creek dam. The in-service date for the proposed Site C dam has been set back from 1991 to 1992.

"In the short term, that is over the next three years, our emphasis will be on restraint and completion of committed projects, but we must also be in a position to meet the needs of our customers if the economy and electrical demand move up from our forecast," Olsen explained.

"This means that we must continue to give consideration to a variety of future development options."

The Bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 spade	pass	2 spades	pass
3 spades	pass	4 spades	double!
pass	pass	pass

North's raise to four spades is unforgivable, but maybe he thought it was his lucky day (and it was - he had a competent partner).

Be careful when you "double" - you may help declarer more than you wish. East's double marks him with most of the outstanding strength and the missing spades. After west leads the queen of clubs, south can almost see east's hand.

Proper technique is important when you hold cards distributed as they are in the diamond suit. If east holds the ace of diamonds (and he probably does) prospects look bright.

Win the club queen with your king and ruff a club on the board - Now lead a low diamond toward your queen. If east wins, you get two diamond tricks. East, correctly, ducks and you win your diamond queen. Cash the ace of clubs and sluff the diamond king. Ruff a low diamond and take the spade finesse against east... Lead a low spade from the board and insert the nine, which wins. Ruff your last diamond on the board and assess your situation.

You have won the ace, king of clubs, the queen of diamonds, ruffed three times in dummy, and won a spade finesse. (seven tricks altogether). You still have AQ73 of spades and Q7 of hearts in your hand and you need three more tricks. Lead a low heart from the table and east is doomed. He can take his king and ace of hearts but if he then leads a spade, you get a free finesse. If he, instead, leads a third heart you can ruff it and lead a low spade. Again east has to win and give you the finesse and you ten tricks - doubled. South earns a top on the board which would have been very difficult without all that help from east.

YOUR INDIVIDUAL HOROSCOPE

FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1984

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take special notice of a loved one's feelings. Without intending to, you may be inconsiderate. Accent togetherness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You're in an escapist mood and may let things slide. Pay attention to diet. Why not begin a physical fitness program?

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're carefree today, but are inclined to overindulge. In particular, don't spend beyond your means. Romance is likely.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You may be taking someone for granted. Be sure to keep in touch with relatives. Moonlighters have employment opportunities.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You're prone to make grandiose statements or gestures now. Don't be carried away with your importance. Come back to earth.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) It seems what you intend to buy is an unnecessary extravagance. You may change your mind and find something more suitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Though everything is relaxed and easy, you may waste time now. Lift your sights and do more to realize your potential.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Your imagination could run way with you now. You may feel slighted where nothing was intended. Don't be hypersensitive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) The party life appeals to you, but accent moderation. You don't want to make a fool of yourself. Be more conventional.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) It's OK to pay attention to career, but don't mix business with pleasure, or both will suffer. Work in private.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Someone talks on and on now and you could put yourself in a boring situation out of politeness. Bow out gracefully.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) You'll hear big talk now about investments. Still, keep your ears open. A valuable clue lies hidden in excess verbiage.

YOU BORN TODAY are an adventurous soul who must guard against a tendency to be expedient. Do not merely accept what chance throws your way. Find a vocation in line with your natural talents, which are considerable. You may be especially talented in acting and brokerage. Though you have your eye out for the chance of the moment, you're also fully aware of the greater issues that affect mankind. Consequently, you're often in intellectual fields. Birth date of: Julie Christie, actress; John Gielgud, actor; and Loretta Lynn, singer.

FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 15, 1984

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A close tie is unpredictable. Pay more attention to personal needs. Money hunches are on the money. Follow through on leads.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make a resolution to exercise more. At the same time, begin slowly. Give a partner more room for self-expression.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Romance is problematic, but revised thinking about a job is on the money. Attend to unfinished business. Clear the decks for action.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Use your intuition in dealing with a child. Domestic affairs require attention. Romantic rapport is easily achieved.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You have big plans, but need to pay more attention to the details involved. You'll make some changes around home base today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Seize the moment. Don't let creative ideas slip away. Compromise is needed regarding financial interests. Love is accentuated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Togetherness is fine, but save some time for the development of your own individuality. Shop without being extravagant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You know it's time to tackle unfinished tasks, but you may not know where to begin. Do one thing at a time. Curb jealousy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Friends are unpredictable. You may opt for privacy by day's end. You'll extend a kindness to someone under the weather.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Career plans are subject to change. Friendship is highlighted. Make your views known at group or club functions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You may spend some leisure moments on a work project. It's a poor time to seek advice from others.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) Indecision besets you about investment matters. Keep abreast of the latest developments in film, art or other amusements.

YOU BORN TODAY need a home of your own to be happy, but you're also a citizen of the world. You're an innovator with strong humanitarian leanings. Though you can succeed in business, you're usually drawn to politics or some artistic field. You work well with groups, but are more inclined to do your own thing. Cultivate your originality and you will stand out from the crowd. Law, banking and medicine may also appeal to you. Birth date of: Henry James, novelist; Bessie Smith, singer; and Elizabeth Montgomery, actress.

FOR MONDAY, APRIL 16, 1984

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) It's time for serious thinking about your financial picture. Make plans now to further security and long-range interests.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Though there may be mutual responsibilities in a relationship, you'll also share some happy moments of togetherness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) New work opportunities come, but you may have quite a load on your shoulders. Improved concentration leads to success.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You'll learn more about both the good and bad points of a person you're attracted to romantically. Mutual growth is likely.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Responsibilities come at home, but you're quite prepared to deal with them. You'll accomplish what you set out to do.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You're enthusiastic about new ideas, but sit right down and keep working at them. Creative types are quite productive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Income improves now, but careful budgeting is required. Do not let money that comes in go out foolishly. Be practical!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You're in an optimistic frame of mind. Clear-cut thinking enables you to handle difficult tasks to your satisfaction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Play your cards close to your chest regarding financial interests. Luck is with you, but don't make waves. Proceed quietly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Friends extend you favors now. You too are anxious to help someone out. Today you'll both give and receive. Accent sharing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Career opportunity comes now, but you must capitalize on it immediately. If you're productive you'll end up on top by day's end.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) You'll receive good advice about educational matters. Some make plans to visit old friends afar. You'll be a welcome guest.

YOU BORN TODAY should let your ideals motivate you to accomplishment. You can succeed in business but belong in a field where you can use your intellectual or creative gifts. At times, you keep your feelings hidden: Learn to express them and you will do better in partnerships. Some of the fields in which you'll find fulfillment include science, philosophy, theater, music and literature. Medicine may also appeal to you. Birth date of: Charlie Chaplin, comedian; Peter Ustinov, actor; and Wilbur Wright, inventor.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I must share what I feel with someone who won't tell me I am a Jesus freak or some kind of a nut. I have a feeling you will be nonjudgmental, and that's what I need. The reason I'm writing is because what worked for me might work for others.

Only twice in my life have I turned to prayer for help. I didn't know how the Lord should be approached, so I just said what was in my heart: "Please, God, help me find a way out of this mess." Both times the solution came to me out of the blue.

I am not nor have I ever been a religious person. I am mystified over why and how my tangled life suddenly seemed to straighten out. Some people might say it was just a coincidence — or fate, or luck. But I don't think so. I honestly believe someone up there heard my prayers, moved things around, provided an exit and allowed me to walk out of a tangled maze into the bright sunlight of reason.

Thanks for listening, Ann. I had to tell somebody. — Believer In Vancouver

Dear Vancouver: People who can pray have a special relationship with God. While the cynics say there is no proof that He exists, no one has proved the contrary.

Prayer has worked for me. I believe in it and recommend it for those who have tried everything else. Maybe now is the time to try God.

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you will print this letter for "Unfulfilled In D.C." Along with being "Unfulfilled" she is also unsympathetic and uncaring.

There was no mention of how many "live batteries" D.C. had encountered in two years — only that she has run into three dead ones. Could it be that her charger is out of whack?

How cruel to say, "If these males know they are unable to perform, why do they put a woman through the embarrassment and frustration?" Maybe D.C. should carry a sign that reads, "I can't get it up, don't bother with me, Buster."

My advice to D.C. is this: If you want a "fulfilling relationship," be patient, caring and helpful. You may be surprised at how responsive a "dead battery" can be. I guess you put D.C. in her place. I hope she listens. The results could be rewarding. — A Live One

Dear One: Here's another letter on the same subject.

Coming on strong
Dear Ann Landers: Forgive me, but I laughed when I read the comments by "Unfulfilled In D.C."

So she encountered three dead batteries in two years and her poor cousin spent a weekend in Bermuda with one! I'll bet both those dames had plenty to say to the failures. They probably left them without a shred of dignity.

Since women's lib became the "in" thing I'm sure the Dead Battery Syndrome has been a lively topic of conversation at many a hen party. I will also bet that not one of them has the slightest clue regarding the part she played in her partner's inability to function.

From what I have observed, the females out there are coming on so strong they scare men to death. It is difficult, if not impossible, for a terrified male to rise to the occasion.

I am an unmarried woman in my 40s who has all the normal drives and desires. I am not out looking for sex, but if I find the man attractive and the subject comes up, you can bet your bottom dollar I'll be the one who does the asking and his battery is very much alive. — A Lady As Well As A Woman

Dear Woman: This is not the time to debate the pros and cons of women's liberation, but I can tell you the crusade opened many doors that were previously closed. Also, it made business and industry conscious of the fact that many women were grossly underpaid.

It is my opinion that the sexually-aggressive female has been with us a lot longer than women's liberation. Women who come on so strong that they alienate people build walls, instead of bridges, that damage themselves and the cause as well.

The following letter is more to the point:

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's battery went dead 12 years ago when he had surgery for a malignant prostate.

While we no longer have sexual intercourse, our love life is as good as ever. Maybe better.

There's a lot of cuddling and kissing and tenderness. I find it completely satisfying and don't miss the other one bit. — Content In Colorado

Dear Content: What a beautiful way to end the controversy! Bless you!

It is often said that children owe it to their parents to take care of them in their later years because the parents took care of the child. I have no argument with this, but I can tell you it is much easier to care for a child than for an elderly parent. I have done both.

Caring for the elderly is difficult even when that person is sweet-tempered and well-behaved. Many are not. In all fairness, I understand it is hard to be agreeable when physical problems develop and formerly active people can no longer be involved in community affairs. Nor is it easy to see one's health and energy declining, knowing full well things will never get better. In fact, the certainty is that things will get worse.

Often food requires special preparation.

Medication must be given several times a day. Bathing and dressing take time and energy. The offspring must give up his or her well-established lifestyle. The roles are reversed. Now it is the elderly parent who does not want the child to go out for an evening or even take a brief vacation. No substitute caretaker is acceptable.

My sister insinuated that I was caring for my parents because they have some money and in the end I will be well-rewarded for my trouble. This made me furious. I would not do this for anyone but my parents for 10 times the amount of money I may inherit.

Thanks for letting me share my feelings with you, Ann. I'm sure there are a large number of readers who are walking in my moccasins. They will know exactly how I feel, even though others may not. — Faithful Fan

Now that the elderly are living longer, caring for them is a problem more and more of us will face. Thank you for a letter that a great many readers will identify with.

Humorous solution

I have read several letters in your column over the years from people who were driven crazy by the neighbor's barking dogs. Too bad they didn't know my father.

As a youngster I can remember the German Shepherd next door. He barked every night, starting at about 8 p.m. and kept it up well past midnight. No one had the gumption to tell the owner that his dog was driving everyone bonkers, much less go to court over the matter.

One night my father went out in the yard with a tape recorder. The next night when the dog started to bark he telephoned the neighbor and played the tape. My father repeated the performance for five nights running. The sixth night the dog was quiet. We never did figure out what that neighbor did to put an end to the barking, but it surely worked. — Peaceful

Your father must have been quite a guy. Thanks for telling us about him. I'll bet he had a marvelous sense of humor. (So did mine!)

A definition

Best definition of the week: "Philosophical" is the cheerful, optimistic attitude assumed by those not directly involved in the trouble."

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP

AHABTKE KENUCN'C AHA CJBTANBEG
HS AUQQK JHAAGM NHA SHHM AEUQQ.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — IS PEPPY HENRY FORD'S DEFT SIGNATURE HIS "AUTO-GRAPH"?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals P.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

8 Obituaries

WILLIAM PRESTON passed away suddenly in Remo on April 3, 1984 at the age of 59 years.

Bill is survived by his immediate family: mother; Catherine, 1 son, William Randy; 2 daughters, Susan and Linda; 2 son-in-laws; Harry and Morris; 5 grandchildren; Clint, Rachel, Joshua, Ashley and Vincent and 1 niece; Sandra.

Bill was born in Cornfields, England and moved to Canada when he was 3 years old. He was raised a farmer and worked for Alcan in the late 1950's. Bill then moved to Terrace and spent his working years as an all around logger. Bill derived much pleasure from his years of bowling and farming pigs. As a strong member of the I.W.A. and an active member of the executive in past years, Bill will be deeply missed by all who knew him.

Funeral Services to take place Saturday, April 7, 1984 at 2:30 p.m. from the Knox United Church. Reverend Theo. Roberts will be officiating. Burial to follow in the District of Terrace Municipal Cemetery. Flowers will be accepted or donations could be made to the B.C. Heart Foundation, P.O. Box 22, Terrace or the B.C. Kidney Foundation, 353 West 7th Avenue, Vancouver, B.C. V5Y 1M2.

Mall to create Disneyland

EDMONTON (CP) — An indoor Canadian "Disneyland," with a roller coaster and water-skiing course, may be created when West Edmonton Mall doubles in size to become what its backers say will be the largest shopping centre in North America. Rubin Stahl, senior executive vice-president of Triple Five Corp., owners of the mall which is already the largest in Canada, announced Thursday that construction will begin this summer on the $185-million project. Stahl said the expansion will almost double the mall's size to 368,000 square metres when it is completed in September 1985 and will boost employment to 15,000 full-time workers from 8,000.

Statue gets facelift

NEW YORK (AP) — Bit by bit, day by day, the Statue of Liberty, the Statue of Liberty, is disappearing. A web-like cocoon of pipe scaffolding is growing up around the New York landmark and national symbol. When completed, the scaffolding will enable workers and artisans to finish the outside portions of a vast restoration project on the statue, which stands 46 metres tall from the massive base to the tip of the torch held high in her right hand. The job is scheduled for completion in time for the statue's centennial celebration in 1986. The work is expected to cost $25 million to $30 million to complete.
