

Fulton is wary of Prince Rupert port deal

Skeena MLA Jim Fulton says he has mixed feelings about the announced memorandum of agreement for construction of new grain facilities at Prince Rupert. "No site has been decided for the grain and oil seed elevator and the volume has not been determined," he said Monday.

The elevator will probably have a capacity for a minimum of eight bushels of grain, which works out to 150 million bushels of grain per year, said Fulton.

A cost estimate on the proposed construction will not be finished until Nov. 30 and it will not be until the end of 1979 that "we will know more," says Fulton.

Fulton said he does not like the idea of the federal government selling the existing grain elevator to the consortium of six companies from the Prairies for $1.

"The public purse has been tapped heavily," says Fulton. Transport Minister Don Mazankowski assured people in the northwest during the election that the elevator would not be sold off, he said. Fulton says that the two possible sites for the development are Ridley Island and Casey Point on Kaien Island where Prince Rupert is situated. Fulton congratulated Mazankowski and Dr. Bill Hicks of Prince Rupert, who is the chairman of the grain committee.

Energy board shares blame

EDMONTON (CP) — Gulf Canada Ltd., the city of Edmonton and construction crews shared the responsibility for a pipeline rupture last March 2 which forced the evacuation of 19,000 residents in south Edmonton, the Alberta energy resources conservation board said Wednesday.

In a 40-page report, the board criticized Gulf, operator and part owner of the pipeline, and the city for failing to adequately monitor construction activity in the Mill Woods subdivision.

The board said the rupture was caused by construction crews contracted by the city who damaged a high-pressure propane line. But the rupture could have been avoided had adequate precautions and inspections been carried out by Gulf, the city and the crews.

However, the board commended the city for competently handling the pipeline emergency. Only one person was injured — a truck driver whose truck exploded when he drove through a cloud of propane leaked from the pipeline. The propane also entered sewer systems, forcing the evacuation of almost the entire population of the subdivision.

Of particular concern, the board said, was that the pipeline apparently was damaged on four previous occasions without Gulf knowing about it.

The board also blamed construction crews for taking inadequate precautions to protect the pipeline and for simply rewrapping the line after hitting it. Board member Norm Strom said three construction crews were involved but it was not possible to determine which one caused the damage. But he said construction crews should have known that even minimal surface damage to a high-pressure line could cause serious internal structural problems.

The board promised to tighten pipeline controls and study relocating pipelines away from residential neighborhoods. It also recommended that the city set up a pipeline emergency centre to handle future pipeline emergencies.

More public hearings on pipeline safety will be held if necessary, the board said. Commenting on the report, Gulf pipeline manager Bob Walker said his company will "co-operate with the city in every possible way" to set up the pipeline emergency centre.

Walker said Gulf has also increased its pipeline surveillance and inspection activity and two additional inspectors have been hired. He said although operating procedures at the pipeline at the time of the accident "did meet the standards established by existing pipeline codes," Gulf plans to install "sophisticated shutdown devices" on the pipeline.

Gulf has since pressure-tested the pipeline and found it to be safe, Walker said. There was no immediate reaction from the city. The city said earlier it would support the establishment of a pipeline emergency centre.

Petro-Canada is still active

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn said Wednesday that Petro-Canada, the Crown petroleum agency that the Progressive Conservative government says it will drop, still is involved in oil negotiations with Mexico and may participate in forthcoming energy talks with Venezuela.

He said in an interview that a statement by one of his aides earlier Wednesday that the government no longer wants PetroCanada involved in state-to-state transactions was based on a misunderstanding of the question put to him by a reporter.

He said it is incorrect to say that Petro-Canada has been dropped from international oil transactions and reiterated previous government statements that it is business as usual for Petro-Canada while the government considers what to do with it.

The minister would not say definitely whether the agency will be represented in a delegation of government officials due to visit Venezuela for talks on a variety of energy matters.

But he was not precluding the possibility that the agency could be involved on the basis of its expertise in the oil business.

Neither Mexico nor Venezuela have shown a preference for Petro-Canada over any other agency of the federal government. They have said only that they wanted to deal on a government-to-government basis.

The minister's remarks came a day after the Liberal and New Democratic Party opposition expressed concern about the future of Petro-Canada.

The parties said they could attempt to upset the minority Conservative government in Parliament if it downgrades the agency.

The Conservatives pledged during the May 22 election campaign that they would put Petro-Canada into private hands. The party has long objected to the agency which was created by the previous Liberal government in 1974 to spur exploration and which has since grown into refining. During the latter part of the last Parliament the Conservatives opposed Liberal government moves to inject Petro-Canada into international transactions.

The Conservative government has yet to say how Petro-Canada will be turned over to private interests, except that a board of trustees will be created soon to consider the matter. It is hoped that the board can report to the government by the end of the year. In the meantime, Petro-Canada has been told to continue what it is doing without becoming involved in new ventures.

At present the government is continuing negotiations with Mexico on an agreement that will eventually provide for 100,000 barrels of oil a day. The government has asked that the agreement be changed to substitute an "agent of the Canadian government" for Petro-Canada.

The agreement was initiated by the Mexican and previous Liberal governments and only some fine print needs to be worked out.

The Conservatives hope the agreement can be signed in Ottawa this fall. Hnatyshyn said there has been no discussion yet in government on whether Petro-Canada will be involved on state-to-state oil transactions.

He also indicated that the government may not follow the Liberal lead in talks with Venezuela later this month. Alastair Gillespie, energy minister under the Liberal government, talked of Petro-Canada importing up to 100,000 barrels of oil a day in addition to that brought in by Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto.

He initiated talks with the South American country, main supplier of foreign crude to Canada, after Exxon Corp., the U.S. parent of Imperial, diverted oil destined for Imperial operations in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces to American customers. Hnatyshyn said he is interested in Venezuelan oil to carry Canada over until it achieves self-sufficiency. But he would not put a figure on how much more Canada would like. And he would not say that PetroCanada will not be involved in some way or another.

He added that the talks with Venezuela also will include such things as development of oil sands, heavy oils and nuclear energy.

The minister said he has talked with officials at the Venezuelan embassy here and has been told that country is not concerned whether Petro-Canada or another agency is involved in oil deals.

British petroleum interests requested

LONDON (AP) — Britain asked Nigeria on Wednesday to reconsider its decision to seize British Petroleum's interests in the African country.

Under the takeover of the partly nationalized company, "BP will lose 12 million metric tons a year — about an eighth of the company's total supplies," a BP spokesman said. This is about 9.6 million gallons of crude oil a day.

The Nigerian government announced the takeover Tuesday in retaliation for the alleged sale of crude oil to white-ruled South Africa by BP through a swap arrangement with other companies. It said BP sent North Sea oil to South Africa and replaced this with supplies from Nigeria.

BP shares on the stock market plunged Wednesday at the news. The shares regained some ground but still suffered a loss that wiped more than $146 million ($332 million) off the BP group's stock market value.

A British foreign office said it asked Nigeria to reconsider, and a spokesman said the acting British high commissioner has been instructed to take the matter up directly with the Lagos government. "I do not visualize any further action at present," the spokesman said.

The British government owns 51 per cent of the stock in BP, and the general belief here is that Nigeria had fired the first opening shot in a black African campaign to deter British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher from recognizing black Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's biracial government in Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

The foreign office said Nigeria's stated reasons for the takeover are "totally contrary to the facts." It added: "Taking into account the timing of this extraordinary move on the eve of the Commonwealth meeting, the British government can only suppose that the real reason for the Nigerian action is something entirely different."

In Lusaka, Zambia, the site of the Commonwealth conference, the Nigerian foreign minister said Wednesday his country had nationalized British Petroleum because the company had taken action "inimical to the interests of Nigeria."

Speaking to reporters, Maj.-Gen. Henry Adefoye accused BP of diverting Nigerian oil to South Africa and said BP had even brought a tanker destined for South Africa to Nigeria.

Asked whether other British interests in Nigeria would suffer, Adefoye said his country does not take arbitrary action against British firms and that BP is not representative of all British interests in Nigeria.

He denied that Nigeria's nationalization of BP at the time of the Commonwealth summit was an unfriendly act.

BP is a partner with Shell in the Shell-BP Petroleum Development Co. which produces about half of the total Nigerian oil output, now 100.8 million gallons a day. BP owned 20 per cent of the company's stock as well as a 40 per cent of the stock of BP Nigeria Ltd., the local marketing company.

Both BP interests were nationalized, but Shell was not touched by the takeover.

Nigeria is Britain's biggest export market in Africa.

Bell workers arrested

MONTREAL (CP) — Police were called to 13 Bell Canada installations in Quebec on Wednesday to escort employees through picket lines set up by striking technicians and tradesmen.

Company spokesman Pierre Marlon said police were called to assist employees through pickets in Trois-Rivieres, Riviere du Loup, Chicoutimi, Alma, Sherbrooke, Sorel, Victoriaville, St. Jerome, Valleyfield and Montreal.

Police in suburban Dorval intervened for the second day to escort workers into Bell's data centre. They also provided protection at three other locations in the Montreal area.

There were no arrests reported in any of the incidents.

Almost two-thirds of Bell's 15,000 technicians were on strike or locked out Wednesday.

As part of the union's program of rotating strikes, 4,000 workers were off the job in Quebec and Ontario, including 3,000 in Toronto. Bell retaliated by locking out 4,700, including 2,375 in Montreal.

In Toronto, there were punches thrown on one picket line, said Bell spokesman Ron Devaney. Police were called in but there were no arrests.

The biggest problem area was St. Jero.

Mail opening is against liberties

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative government is showing a total disregard for Canadians' civil liberties by proposing to allow police to open mail, the president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Wednesday.

Jean-Claude Parrot accused the Conservatives of "an abrupt turnabout" in abandoning the objections they had to mail opening when they were an opposition party.

He was reacting to Solicitor General Allan Lawrence's statement last week that legislation to allow police to open mail in drug investigations and cases of national security is a high government priority.

Parrot said Canadians are entitled to "minimal protection against arbitrary police searches and harassment, possibly on behalf of a single political party."

When in Opposition, Lawrence and other Conservatives argued that a judge should be able to review a solicitor-general's decision to issue a mail-opening warrant to protect against political abuse and infringement of civil liberties.

"But now that the Conservative party has control of the solicitor-general's portfolio, the government is conveniently forgetting all these excellent objections," Parrot said.

Minister's men to study hot springs

Frank Howard, NDP MLA for Skeena, said recently in Victoria that a senior official of the Ministry of Lands, Parks, and Housing will be in Skeena some time in August to discuss the future of the Lakelse Hot Springs.

"I feel quite pleased at this early move on the part of the Ministry and cannot help think that the presentation of my ideas to Jim Chabot (Minister of Lands, Parks and Housing) were at least partly responsible," Howard said in a news release.

A letter dated July 17 to Chabot from Howard outlined Howard's considerations for the Hot Springs.

"It seems to me fundamental to the concept of public ownership that local people be involved at the earliest possible stage."

Howard suggested ideas that the Hot Springs be developed as a recreational centre for local residents and tourists and as a potential natural energy source he considered as "logical commencement concepts to consider" in any discussions.

DISPUTE STARTS SUMMIT TALKS

LUSAKA (AP) — The 39-country Commonwealth summit conference opened in the shadow of a dispute between Britain and black Africa's most powerful state, Nigeria, over the seizure of British Petroleum's Nigerian assets.

Nigeria announced the seizure on the eve of the conference, saying it was in retaliation for British oil exports to white-ruled South Africa.

British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington told reporters: "Nothing could be more counter-productive and less likely to succeed than an action of this kind to move the government's policy on southern Africa. This will have a serious effect on Anglo-Nigerian relations."

The Nigerian move was widely regarded as a warning to Britain not to recognize the new black-led government of Zimbabwe Rhodesia, which black nationalist guerrillas and a number of African states regard as a sham to disguise continued white domination in that breakaway British colony.

The guerrillas, with backing from black African countries, are waging an escalating war against Zimbabwe Rhodesia's government. Zambia, on Zimbabwe Rhodesia's northern border, is one black-ruled country in which guerrillas are based.

Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda opened the week-long conference of Britain and its former colonies by denouncing Western "support" for South Africa as the root of war and discord in southern Africa.

Australia, assuming the role of peacemaker, made a plea for accord on the Zimbabwe Rhodesia issue, but there was no sign of conciliation.

Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark has appealed for moderation on the issue during the talks.

Zambia-based guerrilla chief Joshua Nkomo told reporters as he left the opening summit ceremony, which he attended as a guest, that he would meet British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher only if she accepted the Patriotic Front guerrilla movement as what he termed "the, not a, factor in Zimbabwe." British sources said such a condition is unlikely to be met.

The colorful opening ceremony Wednesday morning was followed by an angry exchange between Carrington and his Nigerian counterpart, Maj.-Gen. H.E.O. Adefoye, at a reception on the rolling lawns between Zambia's National Assembly and Mulungushi Hall, the conference centre.

Carrington, gesticulating as he confronted Adefoye, denied the Nigerian claims that Britain had supplied oil to South Africa. British officials said Carrington used strong language. An official added: "We regard this as an extraordinary move, particularly as it comes at the start of a conference which has been billed as a process of consultation.... It certainly won't help matters."

Adefoye, who heads the Nigerian military government's delegation here, appeared unmoved. "We did this for good reasons," he told reporters later. "We are not a socialist state. We don't just nationalize for the sake of it."

Adefoye would not confirm or deny the general interpretation — that the seizure was a warning to Britain not to lift sanctions against the embattled administration in Zimbabwe Rhodesia. Britain has assets worth $2.25 billion in Nigeria, its largest trading partner in Africa.

Adefoye said the move was "not necessarily linked with Zimbabwe." Later he added: "We must get Britain to look at Zimbabwe in a different light. No black African can consider himself free until southern Africa is free."

Public service members split

NEWS BRIEFS

QUEBEC (CP) — Defiant Quebec members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) started a movement Wednesday to separate from the national union.

The 180,000-member alliance "is racist and undemocratic," said Robert Martin, president of the Montreal area council.

Martin decided on the breakaway bid after the alliance rejected his request Monday for a Quebec component within the national union.

Guy Foucault, vice-president of the Montreal area council, said his group will ask the 35,000 federal public servants in Quebec to join the new Quebec Union of Federal Workers.

The raid will start Monday, he said.

Quebec members are locked into the PSAC by federal law and the Montreal area council has appealed to members of Parliament to amend the Public Service Staff Relations Act to they can legally break out.

Foucault said that because Quebec members have not been properly represented by the alliance, the Quebec Union of Federal Workers will ask the Quebec Federation of Labor to recognize it as the sole representative of the Quebec federal public servants.

Executives of the alliance, including Francophone officers, opposed the proposal for a separate Quebec component because they said it would destroy the union.

PSAC president Andy Stewart said he was concerned about the unhappiness of Quebec members, but doubted Martin's claim that he had the support of 80 per cent of the Quebec members.

Foucault, who asked Prime Minister Joe Clark to hear the Quebec workers' case, said he believes federal politicians will view the alliance as an undemocratic body dominated by a few.

He said most of the 437 delegates to the PSAC national convention were handpicked by union executives and the only way rank-and-file members could have any influence was through the area councils.

But the convention stripped power from the area councils Tuesday by removing their right to submit resolutions and refusing to give them their own budgets.

Convention delegates Wednesday defeated a proposal to give area council delegates the right to vote.

Foucault said he tried to convince area council representatives at a meeting Tuesday night to pull out of the alliance, but none of the others gave such a commitment.

The leaders of the Montreal area council risk suspension from the union for their separation move.

If a majority of Quebec members sign with the Quebec Union of Federal Workers, the new union will represent them on grievances and other matters, such as bilingualism bonuses.

The PSAC would still be the legal bargaining agent at the negotiating table until the federal law was changed.

Foucault said Quebec members pay between $4 million and $5 million in annual dues to the alliance and they will demand that back if the majority decision is to separate.

In the meantime, the breakaway union will ask for voluntary contributions.

Martin and Foucault said the bitterness has been growing for years.

"We cannot let the PSAC — a majority of Anglophones — talk on behalf of Quebec members on social or linguistic affairs," said Foucault, adding that Francophones had to fight their own union to force it to demand a continuation of VICTORIA (CP) — Environment Minister Rafe Mair says he isn't aware of a proposal by the Insurance Corp. of British Columbia for a twenty-fold increase in drivers' license fees — adding that an increase might not be such a bad idea.

Mair said Wednesday that he recommended a couple of years ago that fees for drivers' licenses be increased "to correspond somewhat to the increase in costs."

However, the minister refused comment on a published report that ICBC planned to ask the provincial government to increase license fees to $20 a year from the current $5 every five years to help pay for its nondiscrimination policy in setting auto insurance premiums.

Mair, a director of the Crown-owned auto insurer, noted that he obtained his driver's license in 1946 and "it cost me $1 a year, and I got one now in 1979 and it still costs me $1 a year."

"I think government revenues might be enhanced by that. But I know nothing about that via a vis ICBC."

The Vancouver Sun said it obtained a confidential ICBC summary of proposals for various ways it could make up the cost of its new policy to eliminate discrimination by age, sex, marital status and place of residence in the setting of premiums.

Scientists demonstrate satellite

OTTAWA (CP) — A delegation of Canadian scientists will visit Australia this month to demonstrate the capabilities of Hermes, a Canadian super-satellite with a versatility that freshens future satellite development.

Dr. John Chapman, assistant deputy minister for the communications department's space program, said Wednesday the delegation has been invited to the Australian capital of Canberra Aug. 22 to 24 to demonstrate Hermes' capabilities.

The delegation includes representatives from Telesat Canada, the Canadian Telecommunications Carriers

Association, the Ontario Educational Communications Authority, SED Systems Ltd., and Spar Aerospace Ltd.

"Basically we're making available to the Australians our experience in satellite technology," Chapman said.

"They're at the point where they are making the kind of decisions we made in 1969 (when the government decided to build its own satellite communications network)."

Mike Seale, a spokesman for the Australian High Commission here, said his country has no satellites of its own, but a government commission in July, 1978, called for the creation of a satellite system that could take six years to produce.

Although the delegation will not actively try to sell Canadian satellite technology to Australia, "we'll try to create a receptive environment for that," Chapman said.

With 1,200 watts of power soaked from the sun and transmission strength of 200 watts, Hermes is the most powerful communications satellite sent into space.

It was moved Tuesday by a small rocket engine from its position 22,300 miles above the equator to the new mid-Pacific location.

Leg operation fails

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — Surgeons at Lions Gate hospital failed Tuesday to reattach a man's leg after it was severed in a helicopter accident near Whistler Mountain, about 120 kilometres north of here.

Paul Wolanski, 18, and Kevin Morrissey had been dropped off by helicopter when the crash occurred.

Wolanski was hit in the leg by the rotor blade and Morrissey suffered lacerations, an RCMP officer said. The pilot was not injured.

By the time Wolanski got to the operating room, his leg was too far gone, said Dr. Jim Corbett, medical director.

Morrissey was treated and released.

The federal transport department is investigating the crash.

Mayor touts Riot Act

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP) — Like wild, noisy parties? When Mayor Dale Hammill reaches for his wallet, watch out.

The mayor says he is totting a copy of the Riot Act in his hip pocket and will be quick on the draw when RCMP need help in their campaign to subdue this Interior city's rowdy nightlife.

The Riot Act can be read when a crowd of 12 or more persons gets out of hand and does not disperse. It permits police to break up any such disturbance any way they can.

RCMP have said they will lay criminal charges following a recent spate of wild, noisy parties. Three police cruisers were damaged after attempts to break up a rowdy winging July 7. Seven celebrants were charged following that incident.

BCGEU at table

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials of the British Columbia Government Employees Union return to the bargaining table in Victoria next week, hopeful that earlier predictions of a strike in the public service will not come true.

The collective agreement covering 37,000 of the union's 43,000 members expired at midnight, Tuesday night, leaving the union free to take strike action.

However, the prospect of a peaceful settlement looks brighter than it did a month ago, John Fryer, union general secretary, said in an interview this week.

In June, Fryer had predicted there would be a summer strike in the public service before a new contract could be reached.

But Fryer said that two recent developments have encouraged him that a master agreement can be concluded without a strike.

"The major development has been the government backing off on some of their restraint policies and it looks like they'll back off even more because people won't stand for it," he said, pointing to hospital budgets as an area where public pressure has forced the government to loosen its purse strings.

Fallout ranges wide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radioactive fallout from a 1968 nuclear test in Nevada drifted as far as the northeastern United States and into Canada, a retired U.S. Air Force colonel told Congress on Wednesday.

"This effluent cloud was tracked continuously by air force planes until it reached the border of Canada where standing orders prevented tracking outside the United States," said Raymond Brim, who retired from military service in 1975.

He was testifying before a House of Representatives oversight and investigations subcommittee looking into effects of nuclear testing in Nevada in the 1960s and 1970s and trying to reach conclusions about possible payments to anyone whose health was harmed by fallout.

Representative Bob Eckhardt (Dem. Tex.), chairman of the subcommittee, asked Brim whether the cloud contained a dangerous amount of radioactivity by the time it drifted across the U.S.

Brim said he did not know, but said a newspaper account at about the time of the test reported an increase in radiation detected in Canada.

Judge makes a ruling

MONTREAL (CP) — Alan B. Gold, chief judge of Quebec Provincial Court, has concluded conciliation hearings in the contract dispute involving 20,000 railway shop-craft workers.

A union source said the hearings wound up last Thursday, with the railways holding firm to their position that the judge not recommend more than was in the master industry agreement approved by another 70,000 railway employees across Canada.

"You can rest assured that they didn't budge," the source said, adding that the judge's report should be made public by mid-August when most of the workers are returning from their annual vacation.

The shop-craft workers voted in April to reject the industry settlement, which calls for a 23.3-per-cent wage increase over three years, including 10 per cent this year.

Gold was named conciliation commissioner in early June and began formal hearings with the parties July 12.

The shop-craft workers, who service railway rolling stock at maintenance yards across the country, have been without a contract since Jan. 1.

The bureaucracy of the PSAC resembles that of its government employer. The union is divided into 77 components, organized along the lines of federal government departments. The components are divided into smaller locals.

The area councils group people by geography rather than by department.

All locals are allowed to select candidates to attend component conventions. Delegates to national policy conventions are elected by the components.

Stewart, seeking another term as president, has tried to make the alliance more open.

Alcan's Hospital Beach will be closed to the public from noon Thursday, Aug. 2 to Monday morning Aug. 6 while work crews prepare the picnic site for an estimated 5,000 guests.

The company is holding a picnic Aug. 4 and Aug. 5 for employees and their families to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Kitimat smelter.

Alcan Aluminium president David Culver will take part in the official opening of the beach which was given a $250,000 facelift for the anniversary.

Culver will also unveil a memorial plaque marking the site of Kitimat's first hospital.

Other events planned for the picnics include entertainment by the Barkerville Review, the Kitimaat Village Dancers, a rock group, Polish dancers and a folk guitarist.

Crawley-McCracken of Edmonton, the firm that fed construction workers 25 years ago will handle the meals.

The menu includes roast beef and pork with applesauce, cooked on special barbecue units designed by Alcan and built by Kitimat Iron and Metal Works.

Hot dogs, salads, beans and ice cream will also be served.

Adults will receive three free beers and gallons of milk, soft drinks, tea and coffee will be available.

And anyone able to move after the meal can take part in a variety of fitness competitions arranged by fitness co-ordinator Phil Uptgrove.

Saturday's events will end with a fire works display at 10 p.m. at the City Centre Mall.

If weather conditions are bad the picnics will be held indoors at the Kitimat arena.

Gadget hobby is now his job

VANCOUVER (CP)—Jeff Finger was still going to elementary school when he started buying parts from RAE Industrial Electronics Ltd. for his own electronic designs.

Today, he no longer buys parts from the company—he designs them.

Finger is a 23-year-old University of British Columbia student who is chief designer of the "raekit", a do-it-yourself electronic put out by RAE, one of Western Canada's largest distributors of electronic components.

The company hired him a year ago to design new kits and although he had worked for them before, it was his first opportunity to put his designing skills to work.

"I stuck my finger in a plug when I was two, and then I went back and did it again," says Finger describing his first encounter with electricity.

By Grade 6 he had completed a Grade 12 electronics course, a couple of years later he designed his own lie detector and by Grade 11 he had designed a darkroom timer which he sold to several camera shops in Vancouver.

Finger began working for RAE as soon as he got of high school, but also took university courses, in biochemistry and philosophy.

His career really mushroomed though when the federal government set up the Design Canada program to subsidize employment of designers and Finger was hired as a full-time trainee.

WEATHER

The Terrace weather office predicts today's weather will be mainly cloudy with scattered showers.

Highs are expected to reach 20 degrees Celsius, with lows expected to be about 13 degrees.

The weather office said they are predicting a slow improvement through the weekend and expect warmer temperatures during the weekend.

Committee wants public's support

The Terrace Advisory Recreation Commission, a non-political group appointed to make recommendations and suggestions to Terrace Council on recreation policy, are asking for public input and support.

"We need to know what people want," says recent news release. "What type of programs do they wish to have available, either hobby or sport? What facilities do people feel need to be upgraded to become more attractive and more utilized?"

The committee said they want the public to feel free to contact them on these or other topics and express any concerns they may have.

Members of the group are Jim Neale, at 635-2944; Don Dunster, at 635-9809; Flip Cervo, at 635-7445; Barbara Highe, at 635-7562; and David Gellately at 635-4307.

Other members of the committee include Karen Roberts-Knott, at 635-2026; Shirley Schuh, at 635-4707; and Lawrence Kaempffer, at 638-1949.

There are three other members of the Commission, Alderman Alan Soutar, representing Terrace Council; Joyce Krause, representing School District No. 88; and the Superintendent of Parks and Recreation.

The committee said any written presentations can be addressed to the committee and forwarded care of the Terrace arena at 3320 Kalum Street.

Lions support special athlete

A young Terrace athlete, Peter Wesley, 14, is on the way to the International Special Olympics in Brockport, New York after being selected as one of 12 B.C. athletes who will compete with the Canadian team.

The Special Olympics competition, which is being held Aug. 8 to Aug. 11, will be preceded by a training camp for the Canadian team in Hamilton, Ont. Aug. 5 to Aug. 7.

Wesley earned his place on the team as a result of his performance at the regional Special Olympics meet in Prince George in May. At the Olympics, he will be competing in the 25-meter front and 25-meter back freestyle swimming events.

Wesley's entry is being co-sponsored by the Terrace Association for the Mentally Retarded, the Terrace Downtown Lions Club, and the Canadian Special Olympics.

Wesley will be one of 35 athletes who are expected to attend the Special Olympics this year, with participants coming from more than 20 countries, including Canada, Puerto Rico, the United States, and Mexico.

Wesley, who will be leaving Terrace Saturday, has been a resident of Terrace for seven years.

MLA'S REPORT

by Frank Howard

Over the years there have been many accusations made against governments for engaging in patronage. Patronage is the act of appointing one's political friends to office. It has had the overtones, in the past, of scant consideration for competency. The person got appointed to the job because he belonged to the party which formed the government. In earlier years such appointments extended to such functions as road foremen in the Highways Department.

I am one of those who think that patronage is not all bad in certain specific situations. I am partial to the idea of making certain appointments from among those who are sympathetic to the philosophy of the government in office. Let me give you an example.

If I were a Cabinet Minister I would want to have people working with me in my office who were politically of the same philosophy. I certainly wouldn't want to have someone working in a close relationship who was politically antagonistic. To do so would be to court troubles and that would not be in the public interest. A Minister's office must comprise a team that is cohesive, competent, and compatible.

But Boards, Commissions, and Corporations of government fall into a different category. They are set up with specific legislative directions and should be generally speaking be left alone to pursue those objectives without political interference. One such is the B.C. Development Corporation. This Crown Corporation was set up when the NDP was the government and it has certain economic objectives set out for it.

The Secreds have taken the B.C. Development Corporation and are gradually turning it into a political tool. One Newell Morrison, former Secred MLA, is on the Board of Directors. One Harbanse Doman, strong Secred supporter, is also on the Board. Just recently the cabinet appointed a gentleman by the name of D.S. Smith to the Board of BCDC. Smith was the campaign manager for a Secred cabinet minister.

It is this sort of patronage that is insidious for the taxpayers of B.C. are putting up the money to finance BCDC's operations, but the Secreds are putting themselves in the apparent position of using that money to further the interests of their corporate friends.

BCDC, according to its own 1977 annual report is involved in "...the construction of a major deep sea lumber shipping facility...near Nanaimo..." As it happens, Doman Industries is expanding its sawmilling capacity in the Nanaimo area. The president of Doman Industries is none other than the same Harbanse Doman who is on the Board of Directors of BCDC. Who do you think is going to be one of the beneficiaries of the lumber shipping facility?

Just in closing let me say this. BCDC is involved in a 450-acre Industrial Park in Kamloops. Smith, the recent Secred appointee, is also from Kamloops. Interesting co-incidence isn't it?

LAW TALK

by Miguel Moya

A husband and wife file an application to immigrate to Canada. The husband and his sponsoring relative in Canada tell immigration officials that he has been offered a job here, although the job does not exist.

The husband and wife are allowed to enter Canada and are issued landed immigrant status. Three years later they have separated, however immigration officials discover that the claim to a job offer was not true.

Although the wife believed her husband had been offered a job, both are deported because they gained entry into the country by reason of false information.

Vancouver lawyer Kit Rigg uses this example to illustrate a common misconception about Canadian immigration law. "Many people don't understand why they can be kicked out of Canada for something they didn't know was against the law or something someone else did on their behalf that they didn't know about," he points out.

Furthermore, Rigg says, the immigration department does not have to prove beyond a reasonable doubt, as in criminal cases, that a person has violated a regulation. Rather the criterion used is "a balance of probabilities," as in civil law cases.

Under the old Immigration Act, a landed immigrant acquired "Canadian domicile" after living in Canada for more than five years and he or she could only be deported for serious matters. The new act does not contain this provision. Any landed immigrant can be deported, no matter how long he or she resided in Canada.

However, the government has also reduced the length of time required to become a citizen to three years from five.

There are many reasons for the removal of landed immigrants. The Immigration Act should be consulted for a detailed explanation.

A person who falls into any of the inadmissible classes, discussed in a previous column, is subject to removal. And landed immigrants can be removed if they violate any of the conditions attached when they were granted landed immigrant status. A person who deliberately fails to support himself or any dependent member of his family can also be removed.

A landed immigrant who has been convicted of a crime in Canada can be deported, depending on the sentence. Persons convicted of crimes for which they were sentenced to five years or more, can be deported.

"With the new act, the nature of the offence doesn't matter," explains Rigg. "It's the nature of the punishment that counts."

For example, he says, a person convicted of impaired driving for the second time and sentenced to more than six months jail, is subject to deportation. A convicted shop lifter may also be deported if the value of the stolen goods exceeds $200, because the maximum sentence for theft over $200 is 10 years in prison.

Deportation hearings, called inquiries in the Immigration Act, are held if officials want to deny a person entry or remove someone already in the country. Inquiries must be held in the presence of the person involved, if possible.

Although inquiries are not generally open to the public, other persons are allowed to attend if their presence is not likely to interfere with the hearing.

The person in charge of the inquiry is called an adjudicator. He makes the final decision. A case presenting officer represents Immigration Canada.

Anyone who stands to be removed from Canada as a result of the inquiry has a right counsel. Counsel can be either a lawyer or someone else who the person has chosen to present him.

Rigg says it is important for a person to know his or her rights before appearing at the inquiry. "Also be polite and maintain your cool even when all bounds of tolerance have been passed - you won't get anywhere by being angry."

At the start of the inquiry, the case presenting officer must give the reasons for the inquiry and for the arrest, if one has been made. Then he presents Immigration Canada's case.

Next the case presenting officer will usually call the person involved as a witness. The witness will be sworn to tell the truth and is required to answer all questions, even if the answers will incriminate him, unless the adjudicator rules otherwise.

If the case presenting officer calls other witnesses, the person involved or his counsel has the right to cross examination. While presenting his or her case, the person involved also has the right to call witnesses, which can be cross examined by the case presenting officer.

After each side has finished presenting evidence, the case presenting officer will make his argument and then the person involved or his counsel will present his argument. The adjudicator must render a decision as soon as possible after the inquiry.

If the adjudicator decides to order the person removed from Canada, he must inform the person of the reasons for the decision.

There are three types of orders he can make. The type he makes depends on the reasons for the inquiry and whether the person involved is inside Canada.

A deportation order prohibits someone from ever returning to Canada unless he is able to obtain the consent of the immigration minister.

An exclusion order prohibits the person from entering Canada for 12 months unless the immigration minister has given his consent. An exclusion order can only be issued when a person is applying at the border to enter Canada.

A departure notice requires the person to leave the country on or before a certain date. However, the person can apply to return to Canada after leaving.

TECHNOLOGY AVAILABLE
Energy research pays off

OTTAWA (CP) Scientists involved in energy research say much of the technology enabling energy self-sufficiency now is available, but it must soon be moved out of the laboratory for demonstration.

V.A. Haw, deputy director-general of the Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, said Wednesday energy self-sufficiency by the end of the next decade is possible.

"But a great deal will depend on the willingness and determination of governments."

The Progressive Conservative government has pledged to make the country self-sufficient in energy by 1990 and is expected to announce soon how it plans to reach that goal.

In Tokyo recently, Prime Minister Clark promised to keep Canada's growth in oil consumption to one per cent a year between 1980 and 1985.

George Lee, acting chief of energy research at the Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, said Clark's promise was a realistic one.

"We had six years to get ready for that statement."

The centre, first established in 1901, was relocated to a 129-acre site outside the city in 1968 where about 150 scientists and support staff carry out research in 13 laboratories.

"Before the 1973 oil crisis, mostly in the 1960s, we had to scramble to find a client interested in coal research."

And in recent years work has been focused on clean and efficient uses for coal as well as heavy oil and tar sands, says Lee. He said much of the heavy oil and tar sands development is conducted in Alberta, but research programs are arranged to avoid duplication.

"In burning coal, we have had to look at all pollution aspects because no new technology is viable if we can't address environmental problems."

Skip Hayden, a combustion research scientist, says at least one large firm representing each of the major industries such as pulp and paper, steel and cement, is interested in returning to coal after switching to oil or natural gas years ago.

"And part of our job is to help industry get back into coal which it got out of 10 to 15 years ago."

Among the problems associated with coal-burning is the emission of sulphur oxides which in turn is responsible for acid rain, the most serious environmental problem in Canada.

And a new coal combustion technology, for example, is being developed for smaller industries.

Known as fluidized bed combustion, this method will not only burn nearly all grades of coal efficiently, but it can substantially reduce sulphur oxides burned from high sulphur fuels.

Basically, a container partially filled with ground solids is injected with gas to produce a rapid heat exchange. If the solid mixture contains coal and limestone, the coal can be burned while the sulphur is removed at the same time.

The fluidized bed also can operate at atmospheric pressure providing steam in boilers or at higher pressures to provide hot gas for electrical generation.

Hayden says a boiler installation now is being designed for the Summerdale Armed Forces Base in Prince Edward Island.

Combustion research also has focused on car engine technology and diesel fuel may prove to be the only economical choice

Planned investments are up

OTTAWA (CP) — There was some good news for the economy Wednesday as Statistics Canada released figures showing planned investment this year is up $6.2 billion over 1978, a healthy 12-per-cent increase.

The federal agency's spring survey of business and government found that planned spending on new buildings, machinery and equipment now stands at $56.4 billion, three per cent more than had been planned at the time of a survey six months earlier.

In the short run, the new investment means more jobs for those who build the plants and equipment. Over the longer term, it means more production facilities to increase the country's total wealth.

Most of the strength is in the business sector where planned spending this year is about $36.48 billion, almost 17 per cent higher than actual spending in 1978.

A Statistics Canada official said that when inflation is discounted, the real increase in business spending is more than eight per cent, a sharp improvement over sluggish investment in the last four years.

Capital spending by governments and institutions, which includes schools and hospitals, will increase 9.2 per cent this year to $8.3 billion.

A major soft spot in planned spending is in the residential housing sector where the number of starts has been declining in the last two years. Planned spending on residential housing is up only 2.4 per cent to $11.6 billion.

This is offset somewhat by strong activity in the non-residential construction industry, a major beneficiary of business expansion plans, where estimated spending this year is $24.12 billion, up nearly 16 per cent from 1978.

Planned spending on new machinery and equipment this year by industry and government stands at $20.6 billion, nearly 15 per cent more than in 1978.

Statistics Canada said oil and gas industry spending on exploration and development drilling as well as on new extraction facilities will increase 35 per cent this year to $3.7 billion.

Planned investment by manufacturing industries is up more than 15 per cent to $7.2 billion. This includes a 73-per-cent investment increase by the transportation equipment industry to $718 million, a 28-per-cent increase in spending by the booming wood products industry to $373 million, and an increase of 28 per cent by food and beverage companies to $686 million.

Also within the manufacturing sector, the survey found planned spending in petroleum and coal products industries this year has declined to $240 million from $326 million in 1978. The drop is attributed to the completion of major refinery expansion over the last year.

There was also a decline in planned spending this year in the chemical industry, down to $1.16 billion from $1.4 billion in 1978, for similar reasons.

The survey showed that anticipated investment in the agriculture and fishing industries this year is up 15 per cent to $4.02 billion and planned spending in the forestry industry is up 22 per cent to $289 million.

The largest single block of spending in the business sector is for utilities, which includes air, rail and water transport facilities, urban transit, electric power, pipelines, broadcasting, telephones and grain elevators.

Total planned spending by utilities this year is $1.8 billion, up nearly 11 per cent over actual spending in 1978. The lion's share is accounted for by electric power utilities which plan to spend $8.6 billion this year, an increase of nearly 10 per cent over 1978.

Forecast spending in the telephone industry this year is $2.15 billion, up from $2.05 billion a year ago.

ON NICARAGUA

Carter walks a fine line

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Carter administration finds itself treading a fine diplomatic line as it attempts to shape its relationship with the new leaders of Nicaragua.

In the weeks since the revolution that ended 46 years of rule by the Somoza family, the U.S. has made known it is interested in doing what it can to help the Sandinista revolutionaries now leading Nicaragua rebuild the economic and political system of the Central American country.

However the challenge is to rebuild trust as well as the buildings and businesses that were damaged in the bloody revolution. And the stakes are such that a false move might have a major impact on the ebb and flow of Latin American politics.

So far, the U.S. has sent $3.5 million in food and medical supplies to Nicaragua and more is arriving at the rate of up to 120 tons a day. The state department also is looking at an informal request for military aid to prevent any attempt at a counter-revolution.

President Carter, speaking to reporters, promised U.S. efforts "in a proper fashion without interventionism to let the Nicaraguans let their voice be heard in shaping their own affairs."

In addition, reports from Mangua quote a U.S. diplomat as hinting that the U.S. might consider extraditing Somoza to stand trial on charges that he emptied the national treasury before leaving the country.

Clearly, administration officials are trying to strengthen the tenuous bond established with the Sandinistas during the long weeks of negotiations that led to Somoza's departure.

What puts Carter in an uncomfortable position, however, is the fact that many Nicaraguans feels the U.S. is responsible for creating and maintaining the Somoza dynasty.

Nicaraguans remember that U.S. Marines sent to the country earlier in the century set up the elite national guard and made Somoza's father its leader. Shortly after the Americans left, the elder Somoza seized power.

During the next decades, his family amassed a fortune — some estimates put it as high as $1 billion — by putting their fingers in every economic pie in the country.

Artistic director becomes a Canadian with talent

EDMONTON (CP) — Peter Coe, the Citadel Theatre's British-born artistic director, has been granted landed immigrant status but the controversy over his tenure continues.

"It is not the policy of this government to keep talented people out of the country,"

Immigration Minister Ron Atkey told Joe Shochor, the theatre's executive producer, in confirming approval of Coe's application for landed immigrant status.

"I'll be happy when I see the news in writing," said Coe from Banff, Alta., where he is conducting seminars at the Fine Arts Centre.

Controversy over Coe's appointment to succeed John Neville in 1977 at the Citadel peaked last March 18 when former immigration minister Bud Cullen overruled Edmonton immigration officers' approval of Coe's application for landed immigrant status.

Coe had been the subject of actors' protests to John Roberts, the former secretary of state, and a national petition involving Canadian Actors' Equity Association members on the hiring of non-Canadianians in Canadian theatres.

Cullen said the theatre had not fulfilled a promise to train a Canadian successor to Coe. Within a week of Cullen's announcement, Randy Maertz resigned as associate director, saying he had been used as a pawn by the theatre to try to convince the immigration department it was training a Canadian successor.

The theatre denied that Maertz had ever been hired specifically to be "groomed" as Coe's successor and produced documentary evidence to support his case.

Shochor said "It was a matter of principle involved here."

Symphonies, opera companies, other theatre groups across the country could be in the same position (of having their appointments questioned or refused).

"This government has come to a point of view that is going to reflect on arts organizations across Canada. Maybe now they will be somewhat protected from interference, from outside intervention in their business."

Coe had signed a new two-year contract when his application for landed immigrant status was rejected. He said he now can consider the second year of his contract, his third season with the theatre.

Shochor said appointment of another Canadian assistant to Coe "is not a matter of concern to the Citadel board at this time."

"However, if the right person comes along... obviously, we shall be looking at the guest directors used in the coming season on the main and Rice stages."

Bernard Chadwick, executive secretary of the actors' equity association, said in a telephone interview from Toronto he will ask that a search for a Canadian artistic director for the Citadel be made before Coe's application for landed immigrant status is approved.

Chadwick said he will discuss the issue with MacDonald.

"I'm an internationalist. I'm not about to want to close the borders. But if someone wants to come to the country to run a major theatre, then he or she must make a Canadian commitment and be seen to do so."

INDIAN HEALTH POLICY PLANNED

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister David Crombie will announce a major, comprehensive Indian health policy before Parliament opens in October, an aide said Wednesday.

The major policy statement will go further than a campaign promise by Progressive Conservative Prime Minister Clark to unilaterally restore uninsured health benefits to reserve Indians, an issue which flared under the former Liberal administration.

"IT WILL BE COMPREHENSIVE, NEW AND COMPLETE," THE AIDE SAID IN AN INTERVIEW. "It will be different from what we've ever known."

No details were disclosed but she said the policy, as far as it has been developed, has been well received by cabinet.

And Indian leaders are being consulted. Discussions are still going on, she added.

"We're working closely with Indian leaders." The policy will affect the country's 300,000 status Indians covered by the Indian Act. Under the act, Indians are entitled to live on the reserve and receive several federal government benefits.

It will not apply to an additional 100,000 Metis (of white and Indian blood) and nonstatus Indians, not covered by federal legislation. They receive benefits from provincial governments.

"It will be a lot different than going between guides and moratoriums," Crombie's aide said.

She was referring to guides on uninsured health benefits, such as eye glasses, dental care, ambulance service and some drugs, imposed on Indians last fall by Monique Begin, former Liberal health minister.

Under the guides, Indians were forced to pay for services previously provided free. Health department officials cited abuses and high costs as the reason for the guides.

After demonstrations by Indians across the country, which included a toll on an international bridge between Massena, N.Y., and Cornwall, Ont., Begin announced in January a six-month moratorium.

Crombie has extended that moratorium until his policy statement in September, the aide said.

Indian leaders, citing abnormally high death and infant mortality rates, have called for a review of health-care systems.

Federal health department figures show the average life expectancy for status Indians is 22 years less than the average Canadian man. For women, the gap is more than 29 years.

Despite a continuing infant mortality rate, Indian infant death levels are still more than twice the national average.

NDP slams refugee status

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Ron Atkey is hiding behind technicalities and spouting factual inaccuracies in trying to defend his refusal to grant a Chilean seaman refugee status in Canada, a New Democratic MP said Wednesday.

Svend Robinson, who represents the British Columbia riding of Burnaby, also accused Atkey of applying a double standard by welcoming 50,000 boat people fleeing Communist rule in southeast Asia while refusing to grant Galindo Madrid-Aviles refugee status from the military dictatorship in Chile.

Atkey said Tuesday there is nothing he can do to help Madrid-Aviles because the Immigration Act prohibits him from issuing a minister's permit for residence in Canada to anyone already deported.

Canada continues to harbor under a minister's permit Gen. Quang, a South Vietnamese general who ran a multi-million dollar criminal ring involved in narcotics trafficking during the civil war in that country.

Madrid-Aviles jumped ship in Squamish, B.C., in March, 1977, and was ordered deported in October of that year.

The Chilean lives in Vancouver and is employed as a dish washer.

Robinson told reporters that Atkey has refused to meet him despite several requests. The MP said he is trying to meet Atkey to show him that Madrid-Aviles's passport is marked with the letter L, a virtual death warrant should he return to Chile.

Robinson said that at the age of 17, Madrid-Aviles was arrested after the overthrow of the Allende government in Chile in 1973 and tortured. He later was drafted into the armed forces and sent to a concentration camp where he was forced to clean up the remains of victims of torture and execution squads, he said.

Atkey said he hopes Madrid-Aviles will be allowed to live in Spain. But unless he leaves Canada voluntarily, he will be deported.

Robinson said the Spanish government has only recently been asked if it will allow Madrid-Aviles into that country on a temporary basis so he can apply for landed-immigrant status in Canada from there.

The Spanish government says it will take at least two months to process that application and Robinson said he hopes Atkey won't try to force Madrid-Aviles out before then.

Robinson said that when the Conservatives were in Opposition they always complained that the Liberals were trampling the rights of MPs.

Now Atkey was abrogating his rights by refusing to keep him informed of developments in the Madrid-Aviles case, Robinson said.

Atkey and his department have not told the Chilean why he was refused refugee status.

Carter receives Senate support

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a victory for President Carter, the U.S. Senate energy committee voted Wednesday to give a new federal agency ultimate authority to expedite construction of high priority energy projects.

The 14-to-1 vote would permit a new national Energy Mobilization Board to urge local and state agencies to move quickly on granting permits for plants designed to reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil.

"The whole purpose of this is to get things moving," said Senator Henry Jackson (Dem., Wash.) the committee chairman.

The board could consider all types of energy sources, but is mainly intended to speed construction of oil shale plants and coal liquefaction facilities.

Construction of oil pipelines, refineries, solar heating and cooling units and wind-driven power plants could also be expedited under the proposal.

The committee earlier vote against a blanket waiver of state and local zoning or environmental laws.

Senator Bennett Johnston (Dem., La.) had urged that the board be permitted a free hand without regard to local laws to move ahead with construction of a small number of super priority energy projects.

Louise Dunlop, director of the Environmental Policy Centre, said after the vote she was pleased because local and state governments would retain the right to raise environmental objections.

A version of the Energy Mobilization Board before the House of Representatives commerce committee would provide broad authority to waive local and state statutes.

Carter proposed setting up an energy board in his speech July 14, but similar ideas had been moving through Congress before then.

Oakland A's complete games

Complete games have become the rule lately for Oakland A's pitchers. Rick Langford threw the fourth consecutive route-going effort for Oakland with an eight-hitter Wednesday as the A's beat Minnesota 7-1. Langford, 6-12, pitched his fifth complete game of the American League baseball season as the A's won their fifth game in the last seven contests. Langford has been the winner in five of the last nine victories for Oakland. Dennis Martinez, 14-8, scattered eight hits as Baltimore swept a three-game series in Milwaukee with a 5-2 victory over the Brewers, the Orioles' 13th in their last 15 games. All-star third baseman George Brett, Kansas City's designated hitter Wednesday because of a sore thumb, drove in two runs and scored one to pace the Royals over Toronto Blue Jays 4-3 for a sweep of their three-game series. Home runs by Reggie Jackson, Lou Piniella and Jerry Narron led New York Yankees to a 9-1 triumph over Chicago White Sox, who lost their seventh in a row. Jim Kern got his 18th save in helping Steve Comer to his 12th victory as Texas Rangers shaded Detroit Tigers 4-3. In the National League, Pete Rose and Garry Maddox each had four hits in a 16-hit attack that paced Philadelphia Phillies past New York Mets 9-6. Maddox and Mike Schmidt each drove in three runs with Schmidt taking over the league lead in runs batted in with 84.

Greg Luzinski had his 13th homer for the Phillies. Bob Horner's two-run single and Dale Murphy's three-run homer highlighted a five-run eighth inning as Atlanta Braves topped San Diego Padres 5-4. Solo homers by Dan Briggs and Gene Tenace had helped the Padres to a 4-0 lead. Tenace's homer sparked a brief bench-clearing incident. The San Diego catcher charged pitcher Eddie Solomon after crossing the plate. Solomon apparently had said something to Tenace as the catcher rounded third. No blows were struck and order was restored quickly. Triples by Manny Sanguillen, Omar Moreno and Mike Easler helped Pittsburgh rally from a 3-0 deficit and Dave Parker's bloop double drove in the winning run in the eighth as the Pirates beat St. Louis Cardinals 4-3. Denny Walling's two-run triple in a four-run Houston fourth helped the Astros past San Francisco Giants 5-4. Rodney Scott's two-run homer in the 12th inning lifted Montreal Expos to a 7-5 win over Chicago Cubs. In a rain-delayed game, Cincinnati Reds beat Los Angeles Dodgers 10-5, thanks to an eight-run first inning in which Dave Concepcion had a pair of singles to drive in three runs for the winners. Ray Knight also drove in three runs and has 14 RBI in his last four games. Boston Red defeated Cleveland Indians 7-4 in another game held up by rain, with Jim Rice hitting a pair of two-run homers.

Vancouver advanced to "B"

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Victoria Drive of Vancouver has advanced to the Balde final of the British Columbia Little League baseball championship, eliminating Triangle of Victoria 9-3 Wednesday. Winning pitcher Bill Ko and reliever Gurmit Sandhu scattered four hits and Sandhu struck out 10, after relieving Ko in the bottom of the third inning. The winners scored four times in the second, erasing a 1-0 Triangle lead after the first, then added five more in the fifth. Triangle scored its other two runs in the bottom of the fifth. Loser Scott Smith and reliever Murray Bailey gave up 10 hits and team-mates committed seven errors. Victoria Drive now meets Trail today in the B final and the winner advances to the championship game against

A side winner, Dunbar of Vancouver. The championship game is Friday, but if the B winner beats Dunbar another game will be played Saturday to decide the tournament champion. The B.C. champion advances to the Canadian championship starting Aug. 11 in Lethbridge, Alta.

Parkes is good goalie

VANCOUVER (CP) — The injury-riddled Vancouver Whitecaps got a first half goal from Bob Lenarduzzi and outstanding goaltending by Phil Parkes late in the game to defeat Minnesota Kicks in a North American Soccer League contest Wednesday night. Parkes, who usually has little to do behind the tough Vancouver defence, had to come up with several excellent saves on Minnesota strikers Ron Futcher and Alan Willey to preserve the victory and record his sixth shutout of the season. But defender John Craven had to make the game-saving play when he outraced Futcher to a ball at the Vancouver goal line. The ball deflected over Parkes' head and was headed for the open goal when Craven kicked it clear. The win gave Vancouver an 18-9 record and 187 points in the Western Division of the National Conference, 21 points ahead of Los Angeles Aztecs, 3-1 losers at home to New York Cosmos. Vancouver can clinch a division title with a win Saturday in Los Angeles. Minnesota, whose record fell to 19-9, already has clinched the title in the Central Division of the National Conference. Lenarduzzi's goal came at 23:30 on a set play from a corner kick. Alan Ball directed a short corner to Jon Samuels who put the ball on Lenarduzzi's head and he made no mistake, putting it in the top left-hand corner of the goal. The Whitecaps, playing without injured strikers Keven Hector and Trevor Whymark and suspended winger Willie Johnston, dominated play for most of the game but outstanding goaltending by Minnesota's Tino Lettieri and some inaccurate heading early in the second half kept the score close. Samuels was left wide open in front of the goal at the four-minute mark of the second half but his header off a cross from Carl Valentine went over a gaping net. Two minutes later, Craven directed a header wide after a free kick from Ball. Valentine, one of the fastest men in the league, gave the Minnesota defence fits as he consistently outraced defenders for loose balls and used his quickness to find openings. His best chance came with 15 minutes to go in the first half when he sprinted past defender Mike McLoughlin and got a hard drive away that Lettieri had to dive to his right to stop.

Doc Harrison points out black powder rifle

Shooters are at Games

by Don Baker

Six residents of the Terrace area will be heading to Richmond for the B.C. Summer Games to compete in a unique competition known as black powder gun shooting. Black powder gun shooting consists of various forms of target practice. This competition derives its uniqueness from the guns and knives which competitors use in testing their skills. All equipment used in the competition is patterned after the guns and hunting gear which a frontiersman may have used 140 years ago. "Most of our equipment is handmade" said Pierre Leross, one of the men who will be competing in the Games. "After shooting black powder for a while a guy wants to try his hand at building his own gear from scratch," Leross said. Both Harrison and Clare said that black powder competition "puts the sport back into hunting". The guns however are not inaccurate as one may suspect, to the contrary they are more accurate than many modern guns. "To begin with they are extremely heavy," said Harrison. "Also they are all hand crafted and the pride that goes into making them reflects in their precision as weapons," Harrison said. Besides Doc Harrison, Pierre Leross and Murray Clare three other residents of Terrace will be participating in the upcoming competition. They are Synthia Ridler, Wayne Harrison and Frank Ridler. These shooters will be testing their skills against 48 other competitors from around the province. Among the events included in the Games will be knife and tomahawk throwing, string cut, precision target shooting and clay pigeons. The men say that there is little doubt in their minds that the competition in Richmond will be very tough. "This is only one aspect of black powder shooting," Leross said, "There is a certain gratification a guy gets from designing and building his gear alone that is missing when you go strictly modern. Black powder gun shooting puts back the sport in hunting and I wouldn't have it any other way now that I'm hooked," says Leross.

Tennis champs

ANCASTER, Ont. (CP) — The British Columbia team of two males and two females under 14 have taken the Ontario junior open tennis championships by storm. The unseeded quartet has quietly savored the taste of no pressure and disposed of some of Ontario's top juniors. Three made their way to the finals while the fourth, Terry Dobson, has rallied from a first-round illness that forced her to retire to combat successfully in the consolations. In boys' under-14 action Wednesday, John Borchert of British Columbia beat Rob Cartwright of Ottawa 7-6, 6-3 to gain the honor of meeting fellow team-mate Steven Leier, who defeated Mike Bita of Oakville, Ont., 7-6, 6-2. Kelly Davies of B.C. beat Monica Kowalewski of Cambridge, Ont., seeded No. 2, 6-4, 6-2.

Alouettes cure woes

HAMILTON CP - Montreal Alouettes found a perfect cure for their offensive woes in the form of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and cruised to an easy 21-8 Canadian Football League victory Wednesday night. The Alouettes, who had scored just one touchdown in their opening three regular-season games, managed to find the end zone on two occasions against a listless and lethargic Hamilton squad. Alouettes quarterback Joe Barnes, who was replaced by Ron Calcagni with three minutes remaining in the third quarter, directed Montreal to its two majors, both in the second quarter.

Barnes fired a nine-yard touchdown pass to Chuck McMann and later, ran for a seven-yard touchdown, himself. Montreal's Don Sweet connected on field goals from 13 and 31 yards in the first quarter and added three points on two converts and a 21-yard single following a wide field-goal attempt. Lelf Pettersen scored Hamilton's lone touchdown on the final play of the game, following a Montreal penalty when he hauled in an 12-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Dave Marler. Zac Henderson collected both of Hamilton's points on punts of 40 and 37 yards.

The Ticats were inept in virtually every department. There were especially pathetic on offence, and mangled to cross into Montreal territory on just five occasions the entire game. Marler, who made his first start at quarterback for the Tiger-Cats this season, could generate little offence. He showed no imagination in his play selection and was consistently errant in his throwing. Montreal, on the other hand, appeared to have trouble staying awake, as did the 20,490 fans. When the inclination hit them, the Alouettes moved the ball effectively.

SWEET TASTE OF SUCCESS

The Sugar King had style

By Alice Tomlinson To the children, used to the smallish comforts at The Dun-davie in Vancouver, in what used to be "Blueblood Alley" until full concrete basement, the first Shaughnessy Heights preempted ever in Vancouver, 18 fireplaces, that title, stands Gabriola, the servants' quarters, and numerous fanciest private house ever built bedrooms and water closets to accommodate seven children, in B.C.

A little farther down the road, B.T.'s mother, and endless at Powell and Rogers, stands the guests. B.C. Sugar Refinery. There are new warehouses now, but the original brick structure is still there, the rows of arched windows, an attached gazebo, and a dows marching austere along porte cochere comparable to the one at Government House in Powell Street.

B. T. Rogers built them both, Victoria. The refinery in 1890 and the mansion 10 years later.

B.T. was a remarkable man. He signed and outfitted the whole refinery with the necessary machinery, centrifuges and whatever other machinery was used in the making of sugar, and then he trained every employee to use it.

OUT OF NEW YORK
The initial money was not his. He brought to the business five years of experience in a New York sugar refinery, and more than a dollop ofchutzpah.

When Vancouver was still a Canadian Pacific Railway scheme, this amazing man, then only 24, armed with borrowed money from New York associates and financial backing from the CPR Directors themselves, (one of whom was R. B. Angus), arrived with the first train.

He immediately chose the site, applied for tax, land and water concessions from Vancouver Council, and started what was to become a national conglomerate, with three sugar beet factories in Alberta, one in Manitoba, and interests in the Belkins Packaging business and Fairweather Gas Ltd.

Forrest Rogers, B.T.'s youngest son, is now chairman of the board, and three grandsons are also involved. Martin Rogers, Brian Rogers and Peter Cherniavsky, now president, true to the B.T. credo, have all worked their way up through the plant.

Somewhat, while remaining the driving force behind B.C. Sugar's prosperity, B.T. found time to court R. B. Angus' niece, Mary Isabelle, who lived in Victoria. When he married her, he was already listed in a Victoria gossip column as the "Sugar King".

After a honeymoon in Portland, the Sugar King and his bride took up residence on Georgia Street, in what they affectionately called "The Bungalow", but the groom was already laying plans for Gabriola when he purchased his West End property.

He hired Samuel MacLure, the noted Victoria architect, to design it, and by 1900, it was finished.

Yo-Yolympic® Star?
If gravity pull is a pushover, you may have the world on a string—and want to give the 1979 Yo-Yolympics® a spin.

Are you ready to Walk-the-Dog and Rock-the-Baby right into Yo-Yolympics® fame?

If you're a yo-yo aficionado no older than 15 who can tackle—or learn—lunar loops, astro loops and sleepers (to name a few), your training and competition in the Duncan Yo-Yolympics® begins at one of over 10,000 community centers in 680 cities.

Then winners at state and regional competitions will vie in the National Finals at Great American Amusement Center in Illinois next July. This marks the 50th year of the Duncan Yo-Yo. In conjunction with local recreation departments the Duncan Toys Company is hosting this national yo-yo competition.

In addition to state and regional level awards, the top three finalists at the nationals will win $1,000, $500 and $250 scholarship bonds for first, second and third places, respectively.

Certified instructors will be permanently stationed in nine regions of the country to offer clinics and demonstrations and help run and judge contests.

Don't be a second stringer: ask your local Department of Recreation how you can become a Yo-Yolympic® athlete.

Gabriola, the house that B.T. built.

CHISELLED ROCK
Outside there was a conservatory, an attached gazebo, and a dows marching austere along porte cochere comparable to the one at Government House in Powell Street.

All of these wonders were encased in beautifully chiselled B.C. Sugar Refinery. There are new warehouses now, but the original brick structure is still there, the rows of arched windows, an attached gazebo, and a dows marching austere along porte cochere comparable to the one at Government House in Powell Street.

The work on the new house in Shaughnessy Heights stopped. There were import and export difficulties, and union troubles. (B.T.'s own father, Samuel, had been killed by a flying brick during union problems at a New Orleans sugar refinery.)

Early one evening in 1918 at Gabriola, B.T. suffered a fatal cerebral hemorrhage. Mary sold the house as soon as the Shaughnessy Heights home was finished, and Gabriola was subsequently divided, into 57 self-contained apartments.

MUSEUM STARTED
The descendants of B.T. opened a museum on the grounds of the sugar refinery two years ago. A movie, filmed on the site, neatly documents the refining process. (By the way, you'll be happy to know that bullock's blood is no longer a necessary ingredient.)

When your tour is over, drive on to Nicola and Davie. Something nice has happened to Gabriola. It has been refurbished and newly opened as a steak house, and aptly dubbed "The Mynasman". B.T. would like that. This is a Tomlinson B.C. feature.

gance, the family taking over an entire private railway car, or hotel suite. Fiji, Mexico, England, Europe, the United States—the children were familiar with them all.

Bad times followed, which had a telling effect on B.T. The First World War began, and Blythe, the eldest, went off to battle, where an extended illness led to his death.

There were import and export difficulties, and union troubles. (B.T.'s own father, Samuel, had been killed by a flying brick during union problems at a New Orleans sugar refinery.)

Individuals and groups of no more than 30 persons, with a suggested minimum age of 15, are welcome. Tours are conducted by experienced guides, sometimes even by Martin Rogers himself, and may be arranged through the Vancouver office. Phone: 253-1131. There is no admission charge.

Dear Abby

Daddy Won't Buy Her Bottom Line

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: As the father of an intelligent, well-developed 17-year-old daughter, I would like your opinion on a matter that troubles me.

Lisa wear short shorts that are just about as short as shorts can get. To be even more specific, a good portion of her shapely rear end is exposed to public view. It wouldn't be quite so offensive at the beach, but when she walks around the shopping center in high heels with half her behind showing, I must object. My wife agrees with me.

I voiced my disapproval to Lisa, and she informed me that it's the accepted mode of dress these days for her generation, and furthermore, my prudishness amazed her.

What do you say, Abby? Sign me...

OUT OF WORDS

DEAR OUT: Inform Lisa that it may be the accepted mode of dress these days for her generation, but her Southern exposure is offensive to yours. And to please show a little more consideration—and a little less cheek.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to a letter from JOHN, who complained because his name is synonymous with a toilet, a hooker's customer, and a "Dear John" letter saying, "It's all over, so get lost!"

Well, my name is Mary. And my name, too, has been abused. For example, "Lazy Mary, won't you get up," "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," "Bloody Mary," and don't forget that suggestion that "we all make Mary."

Yes, I know there is a song stating that "Mary" is a grand old name, but that doesn't help.

"RATHER BE SUSIE" IN OREGON

DEAR ABBY: I'm 33, married to a wonderful man, and we have two fine children. So what's my problem?

I eloped at 16 and never had a wedding, which is the one big regret in my life.

My husband and I are going to Las Vegas for a vacation soon and I understand there are places where couples can get married in a church-like setting. I am told they have beautiful chapels, filled with flowers, and they even have someone to perform the ceremony. Furthermore, you can rent a lovely wedding gown and tux, and have regular wedding pictures taken.

I want to know if you think I'm crazy to want a really beautiful wedding, Abby. My dream is to have a picture of myself as a bride in a real wedding gown.

I am embarrassed and ashamed to ask my husband what he thinks of my secret wish, but if you reply I will show him your letter, unless you think the whole idea is completely nuts. Sign me...

SENTIMENTAL IN TEXAS

DEAR SENTIMENTAL: I don't think the idea is nuts. It's lovely. Since you are already married, why not have your marriage vows renewed in that lovely Vegas chapel. Five will get you 10 that your husband will agree to it. I hope so.

CONFIDENTIAL TO F.S. IN ARLINGTON, VA.: True, a new broom sweeps clean. But the old broom knows where the dirt is.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle.
