THE "CRUNCH" WITHIN A WEEK

Forest negotiations finally coming to a head

Negotiations to renew major agreements in the British Columbia pulp and paper industry continued Monday amid speculation that the crunch will come within a week. The Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Can-ada (PPWC) spent the holiday weekend exploring the possibility of settling on a two-year contract from June 30. The unions had previously insisted they could not go beyond one year in view of uncertainty over the duration of the federal antiinflation program.

The Pulp and Paper
Industrial Relations Bureau informed the unions its member companies were continuing the 12-cent hourly cost-of-living adjustment (COLA)

> Forest Industrial Relations, representing the wood producers, previously informed the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) they were continuing the same COLA beyond the June 15 expiry of their coast master agreemeņt.

Technically it could have been cut off when the contracts expired in both sectors at a total saving unofficially estimated at about $200,000 a week until the new contracts are finalized.

CPU spokesman Art Gruntman described the weekend talks in the pulp sector as slow, but he still felt they were "moving toward a settlement."

Both sectors have made an initial offer to the unions of 35 cents an hour in each year of a two-year contract, with some second-year

NEB favors Alaska Highway route

Small firm best giants

OTTAWA (CP) - A relatively small Calgary-based company has outflanked a consortium of the country's most powerful corporations in the battle to build a natural gas pipeline from the north.

A recommendation on its behalf Monday by the National Energy Board gives Foothills (Yukon) Ltd. what should be insurmountable lead, with rejection by either the Canadian or American governments the only possible obstruction.

A decision by the two governments is expected to be made in late August or early September.

Rival Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd., made up of 15 companies including Imperial Oil Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., was rejected by the board.

Under existing law, that application now is dead federal the government introduces special legislation to overturn the board ruling. Federal energy officials say such a measure is unlikely.

The northern gas pipeline record is a good example of noholds-barred petroleum industry scrapping for high

Once a member of the Arctic Gas group, Alberta Gas Trunk split off in the spring of 1974 and formed Foothills to seek to build a Canadian-only pipeline along the Mackenzie River

But the company later agreed not enough gas had been found in the delta to construct such a pipeline. REVISED BID

In the meantime, less than a year ago Foothills and a U.S. partner, Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Salt Lake City, Utah, applied for a pipeline along the Alaska Highway to move only the Alaskan gas to market.

They suggested a 42-inch pipeline through Alaska and Canadian north, connecting with existing facilities in Alberta and British Columbia owned by Alberta Gas Trunk and Westcoast.

Analysis

The gamble paid off for Foothills.

When the FPC made its recommendations to President Carter this spring, it said it favored an overland route for the Alaskan gas but split 2-2 over whether it should be Foothills or Arctic Gas.

The board decision is a bitter blow for Arctic Gas, up until a few months ago considered the run-away leader for the right to build the pipeline.

The recommendations from the board say that the gas found already in the Mackenzie delta will not be needed until the mid-1980s at least. It says Foothills should be required to file an application by July 1, 1979, to build a connecting link to the delta.

Natural gas line to U.S. markets

OTTAWA (CP) - The National Energy Board has recommended construction of a pipeline along the Alaska Highway to move natural gas to United States markets from Alaska.

"environmentally unacceptable" all three of the routes proposed by Arctic Gas to move Alaskan gas to connect with its proposed Mackenzie Valley

That judgment echoed the view delivered in May by the study conducted by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of the Mackenzie Valley route.

The Federal Power Commission, the U.S. equivalent of the energy board, recommended earlier this year an overland route through Canada to move Alaskan gas. But the commissioners were be Foothills or Arctic Gas.

ommended no pipeline in the

The board termed Mackenzie River valley for 10 years to allow settlement of native land claims.

The British Columbia Supreme Court justice also called for a ban on pipeline construction through the northern Yukon, the route chosen by Arctic Gas for its Alaska connection.

Similar studies of the impact of a pipeline on the Yukon w are under way, with a preliminary report to be delivered to the federal government by Aug. 1. The inquiry is headed by Kenneth Lysyk, dean of law at the University of B.C.

The board says that as a condition of getting approval for its pipeline. Footbills should be required to pay any social or eco-nomic costs the project entails, such as municipal facilities, up to a total of $200 million. It also feels Ottawa should set up a special monitoring agency to oversee construction of the pipeline. The board says more time is needed to resolve social and economic concerns in the delta insofar as a major

BIG REPORT

Its three-volume, 26,000word report says that the social and economic impact of the Foothills pipeline can be held "to tolerable levels" and that environmental damage can be "overcome by avoidance or mitigative measures."

The $8-billion pipeline follows the route of the Alyeska oil pipeline south through Alaska, jutting off at Fairbanks to cut through Pritich the southern Yukon, British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan to the U.S. border. The Alyeska line, just opened, carries crude to tankers at the Alaskan port of Valdez.

A decision on the pipeline is expected to be made by the Trudeau cabinet in late August, in time for the gsept. 1 deadline for U.S. President Jimmy Carter to make his choice.

of more than 15 seconds."

The three supervisors have an average of 25 children to provide activities for each day. Their day begins at 9 a.m., when they start planning activities and getting equipment together.

The youngsters arrive at 10 a.m. and stay until 12. They may go home for lunch, or some may have bag lunches which they eat at the school.

Playground activities resume at 1:00 p.m. in the afternoon, continuing until 4. The workers spend an hour cleaning up, putting things away, and making sure the kids get a start home.

"There are always a few stragglers who hang around to the last minute," says Ross. The last minute is 5:00, because that's when the playground staff go home. The three, Ross Weber, Cathy Devoic, and Gwen Waldie, worked together last year on the program, so they have plenty of experience to draw on. The two girls have just completed grade eleven at Caledonia, and Ross has finished his first year in recreation at U.B.C.

They will be outside "as much as possible" in the good weather.

Bankruptcy in Ottawa

The federal government's acquiescence in Quebec's French language charter completes the bankruptcy of federal language policy. Mr.
Trudeau came to office in 1968 promising to promote biculturalism and national unity. Both causes have almost totally failed. Now Mr. Trudeau has virtually endorsed the extermination, by Quebec, of bilingualism in the one place where it has had some currency for 200 years.

He has done so on the false and deceitful grounds that the French language is in danger of elimination in Quebec, when, in fact, it is stronger there and elsewhere in Canada than it has ever

While Ontario and New Brunswick have, albeit belatedly, enhanced the status of French within their borders, Quebec has imposed heavy fines for billboards, office memos, menus and contracts where French does not predominate regardless of the language of the people involved.

Mr. Trudeau, who masqueraded as the man who would "entrench" fundamental human rights in Canadian texts of law in 1968 and promised never to desert cultural minorities including the English Quebecers whose Member of Parliament he has been for the last 12 years acquiesced in this also attempting to establish a spurious connection between the English in Quebec and the French outside Quebec. (Mr. Trudeau is MP for the predominantly English speaking riding of Mont Royal and has never personally faced a French

The government of Quebec wrote off the external French Canadians long ago as having been assimilated. While the other provinces have been modestly promoting linguistic liberty and variety, Quebec has so infringed on written forms of free speech that it has ceased to be a democracy as most western countries would define it.

Mr. Trudeau has acquiesced in this, while serving up the old worm-eaten chestnut that Quebec has always treated its English minority well. In fact, non-French Quebec, with less than 20 percent of the province's population, has long contributed more than 30 percent of its tax revenue, so it is the English Quebecers who could move (and now are moving) elsewhere, who have subsidized the French Quebecers.

Since the federal Liberals returned to office in 1963 the overtly separatist vote in Quebec has gone from 2 percent to 9 percent in 1966 to 24 percent in 1970 to 30 percent in 1973 to 41 percent in 1977. At the same time the Quebec Liberal Party has been transformed from the reasonably federalist party of Jean Lesage, whom Mr. Trudeau and his colleagues dumped from the leadership in 1969 to the correct percentage of Robert the corrupt neo-separatist grotesquerie of Robert Bourassa. Mr. Trudeau has conspicuously failed to explain federalism in any important part of Canada.

Nine years ago Mr. Trudeau promised us a "Just Society". He has delivered hypocrisy, cynicism, and incompetence on such a scale that he is sustained in office only by the fact that the Opposition appears even more inept.

The collapse of the Canadian federal state is in full progress and unless there is a drastic turn of events the language fiasco culminating last week will mark an important stage in its fall.

Voice of the readers

CanCel remains committed to north

Dear Sir:

The writer of an editorial in your June 12th issue, headed "Bennett Sells Us Down the River", appears to have based his comments on the misconception that Canadian Cellulose is a Crown corporation whose policies and actions are directed by the Provincial Government. As this is not the case, I thought it might be useful to explain how the company does function.

Canadian Cellulose is a public company with more than 5,500 shareholders, including the Provincial Government as the majority shareholder. As a public company whose shares are traded on the major stock exchanges in Canada, we are subject to the regulatory controls and operation standards of any such public enterprise.

Since the re-organization of the company in 1973, Canadian Cellulose has operated on an independent basis regarding direction or influence of the majority shareholder. The relationship has been and continues to be one of "arms length".

A Board of Directors composed of responsible, experienced businessmen establishes company policy and a professional management team runs the operations of the company.

Your editorial suggests that at the time of the reorganization, the government "chose to purchase" the company.
This implies an exhange of funds. What did happen was that the government acquired 79 percent of the shares of Canadian Cellulose in exchange for guaranteeing the long-term bonds of the company. The Province paid no cash whatsoever for its shares and has not been called upon to make any paymen under its guarantee. The long-term debt has been reduced by the company from the initial $68 million to $43 million by early 1977.

The editorial makes a complete error in suggesting that company earnings have been diverted to support such government programs as "Mincome, Pharmacare and northern ambulance services".

The Province, as a shareholder, has, indeed, shared to an extent in the company's success primarily through dividend payments on the same basis as all shareholders. The cumulative amount of dividends received by the Province to the end of April, 1977, is $7,245,000.

Cellulose have mostly been re-invested in the company's operations. We currently have underway the largest single capital project in the province - the $100 million modification of the former sulphite pulp mill to the kraft pulp process, at Prince Rupert.

We also are spending a further $18 million to improve the existing kraft pulp mill at this location. The decision to modify the sulphite mill was taken by the Board of Directors of Canadian Cellulose on the recommendation of its professional management. and not by the Provincial Government as your editorial incorrectly implies.

This investment is based on sound business principles

The earnings of Canadian and is designed to sustain cellulose have mostly been our wood harvesting e-invested in the operations in the northwest far into the future.

> Canadian Cellulose is committed to the northwest. Our significant capital program will help stabilize the economy and provide security for employment for our own employees, as well as for the many suppliers and contractors we engage.

As I indicated earlier, the company has operated completely on an "arms length" basis from its majority shareholder. The independent Board of Directors alone is responsible for company's decisions and action.

These have been consistently taken in what the Directors firmly believe to be the best interests of all the shareholders, as well as our employees and the communities in which we operate.

Certainly, profits have been a major consideration and I make no apologies for that. Without profits, there can be no investment. Without investment, there can be no jobs... Without jobs, the economy local, regional or larger languishes or collapses.

Candian Cellulose is proud of its accomplishments. Misinformed comment unfortunately does a disservice to our employees, all of whom have contributed to the company's success and commitment to the future.

Thank you for the opportunity of setting the record straight.

Interpreting the news

Carter the controversial activist

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN WASHINGTON (CP) —

With less than six months in office, Jimmy Carter is fast making his mark as a U.S. president who is willing to take tough, controversial decisions and slash through complex political Apprehensive governments now are wondering whether he indends to apply that damnthe middle East by considering the possibility of setting up a major U.S. military base in Israel.

The dangers in any such move would be numerous: hostile reaction by Arab states; resurgent Sovide influence in the Middle influence in the Middle East; a divisive and intense domestic controversy in the United States; a crippling of Carter's ability to get other programs through Congress; and even greater arms race in the region.

Years of U.S. dipmomatic effort would do down the drain if the Arab states and supporters turned again tonthe oil weapon or decide to attack Israel before the U.S. presence could be established. REWARDS GREAT

But if the risks are great, so are the potential rewards. A formal U.S. commitment to Israel and the presence of U.S. forces might induce Israel to yield enough territorial and other territorial and other concessions for a peace settlement with its described the basic proble last Januayr: "It is criti-cally important that Israel faces the fact that there simply will be no peace without withdrawal (fromnoccupied territories) and that the United States faces the fact that no Israeli goverment is likely to have the steength to endorse withdrawal in the absence of a formal U.S. military com-

Carter has saad this is a key year to push for a Middle East settlement and to try to defuse the stillvolatile confrontation there.

As with previous U.S. administrations, the Carter White House has tried, the carrot-andstick approchato prod and lead Israel, into concessions.

Recently there has been unusually direct US. criticism of Begin for his refusal to negotiate over the occupied West Bank, but Carter has also approved in principle a $115 million sale of 700 armored personnel carriers and 200 wire-guided anti-tank missiles to Israel.

Before that, Carter blocked an Israeli purchase of the powerful CBU-72 concussion bomb and forbade Israel to sell its Kfir jets to Ecuador with U.S. engines. But he approved a Kfir sale to Austria and put Israel in a favored category for weapons sales.

POLICIES FAIL

But such mixed U.S. approaches have traditionally encountered the Israeli conviction that withdrawal from occupied territories would leave it extremely vulnerable to Arab invasion.

Such lessons and the com-plexities and dangers of the Middle East could well deter Carter from a full guarantee to Israel, but still leave him with the option of using U.S. with the option of using U.S. forces in a more limited way, such as posting them along Israel's borders as a buffer force that would deter both Arab and Israeli attacks under a multilateral

One question carter may pursue in his talks with Begin is whether Israel could accept such a force. While not as much of a guarantee as a formal U.S. military commitment direct to Israel, it should still be considered more reliable by Israel than the United Nations peacekeeping forces that earlier left Arab-Israeli borders at Arab insistence.

Best choice for ferry port

Dear Sirs:

On the 20th of this month On the 20th of this month your paper carried an article and editorial heavily condemning the Provincial Government for the decision to provide an additional ferry service from Tswassen to Prince Rupert. The thrust of these articles was that the facility should was that the facility should have been located at Kitimat.

In the latter part of 1976 the Federal Government removed from Northland Navigation an Operating Subsidy which immediately deprived several communities in Northwestern B.C. with any form of regular freight and passenger service. These communities have not got alternative methods of resupply, there are no roads, no major airports, and no.

ferry services. It is essential that these communities be looked after for the basic requirements of a transporation service as quickly and expeditiously as possible, and I think Mr. Davis and the Provincial Government, using the facilities of the B.C. Ferries, are showing some effort in alleviating the hardships which have been caused.

past has not had a ferry service so it doesn't miss it, but it does have an excellent road and it is served by an airport which is reasonably close by.

Without trying to even answer the obvious discrepancies in the statements contained in the articles mentioned, surely all of the communities on the mainland which are served by truck, rail and air services can defer in the short run their political ambitions so that the communities in immediate need can be served first and as these communities are geographically closer to Prince Rupert, it seems logical to serve them from

Let us try and put aside the inter-city name-calling and generate a little genuine assistance for the municipalities on the Queen Charlotte Islands and on the B.C. Coast which need service now.

Thanks

We have just received accopy of the article which appeared in the June 21 issue of your publication in support of this year's March of Dimes compaign We of Dimes campaign. We simply wanted to express a very special thank you for your assistance in helping to make known the March of Dimes campaign in your community.

We are well aware of the hard work involved in putting together such an event and are grateful to you for lending such support to Mr. William Sturby. He and other members of the Moose Lodge give so generously of their time to our cause and it is nice to see that this dedication is recognized and appreciated nara work involved in recognized and appreciated by people in the community.

We thank you again for your contribution - your concern and interest in Children's Hospital is most reassuring to all of us. Thank you for caring.

Good farmland lies fallow

By CYRIL SHELFORD MLA, Skeena

It is interesting to note that less than half the total agriculture land is now in use and much of that in production is not being used to production is not being used to maximum capacity. We are producing approximately 42 percent of our food requirements at the present time; our goal is 65 percent which would need nearly ¼ of our total unemployed to handle the extra production, processing and various other functions.

One thing for sure we need better ways to see the farmer gets his share of the selling price. Not many food items have kept up with increased wages over the last 10 years except salmon which is controlled by union agreements. If they had - milk would be $3.00 a quart and chicken $4.00 a pound. Not that we want to see this happen -we should be well aware of what is going on. going on.

Some people and groups think cheap imports from areas of low wages is the answer. Before accepting this we should look at coffee and oil prices. Cheap imports today are very expensive tomography and if we look are the company are the company and if we look are the company are the company and if we look are the company are the company are the company are the company and the company are the company are the company are the company and the company are the company are the company are the company and the company are the company a tomorrow, and if we loose our production units we will loose our nation - as we can be held up for Society is far too unreliable today for us to rely on the today for us to rely on the transportation systems - supplying basic food requirements from other countries, even if ours can others might not. European countries that have been cut off from outside supply, at various times in their history would never let themselves get into such a let themselves get into such a vulnerable position.

A Minister of Agriculture has no power to save local production and one cheap car load of apples, pears, potatoes or strawberries can set the price for our total crop-but as I said before, the consumer does not get the benefit.

Alcan fitness experiment showing positive results

By Brian Gregg Herald Staff Writer

Alcan is in the final stages of a 10 week pilot project involving 72 volunteers in a physical fitness program based on warm-up floor exercises and jogging.

According to David Dunsmuir, a communications specialist with the company, the future of the program will be decided by management and the program may be expanded to include the spouses of workers.

"A lot of people are having fun, are looking better, are breathing better and are generally feeling better," said Dunsmuir.

Dr. Mike Yuhasz, a physical fitness consultant who has begun similar successful programs in other industries, will return to Kitimat July 21 to check out the medical improvements that have resulted from

It began with Yuhasz testing workers to see if they were fit enought to get involved in the program. Some people with bad hearts and recent heart attacks were not allowed to get involved but it was suggested they walk a mile or two miles twice a week to improve their condition so that in September when the main program is expected to begin they will be ready.

One man with a recent heart attack was so enthusiastic about the pilot project he went to his personal doctor and returned with a note saying it was alright for him to participate. He is now involved in the program.

The workers meet at Mount Elizabeth Secondary School or Riverlodge three times a week according to their shifts. Sessions alternate at the two places at 7:30a.m., 12 noon, 5p.m., and 7:30p.m.

The program stresses development at one's own speed and participants work out to their own ease.

Dunsmuir said he was once skeptical about jogging but now he has come to respect it. He has gone from less than one-quarter of a mile the first day to two miles with little stress. He also has a bad leg that holds him back. "After 34 weeks people felt they had gotten somewhere," he said. He added that the program is the difference between climbing stairs and breathing heavily and climbing stairs with ease.

Yuhasz is not a fanatic about physical fitness but he is a realist, said Dunsmuir. He believes in jogging as an overall body exercise that takes about 10-15 minutes each time. The warm-up exercises last about 10-12 minutes.

Yuhasz says in his booklet on fitness, evidence fails to support the theory that there is a localized loss of body fat at, near, or above exercising muscles. Body fat is lost throughout the body regardless of the nature of the activity or the diet. The keys to a sensible and successful fat reducing program are to get active (take a 15 minute walk a day) and stop eating between Fantastic techniques for weight loss such as sauna, whirlpool, turkish or heavy plastic, rubber or nylon jacket will cause the the temporary dehydration of the body but does not get rid of any overabundance of fat. Vibrators or a masseur may make a person feel better but the fat remains.

Fat must be chemically extracted from the fat cell and burned up in the body by muscular contraction.

"Save your money," says Yuhasz, "direct your effort and energy to more active pursuits."

Conjecture was that the loss in the Swaps may have dropped his value as much as $4 million even though J.P. Tobin set a race record

The time for the 11/4 miles was 1:58 3-5, just two-fifths off the track record set by Quack in 1972 when he carried 115 pounds. Tobin carried 120 Sunday, six less than Seattle Slew.

Co-owner Karen Taylor said she hoped Slew would be re-turning to the Los area to Angeles demonstrate his true ability. However, the colt will be given a rest after appearing in a two-day celebration in his owners' home state of Washington this weekend.

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP)

- Tom Spink of Dartmouth says soccer has grown rapidly in Nova Scotia because it is a simple sport with high exercise value and few injuries.

Spink is president of the youth division of Soccer Nova Scotia, which handles all players 18 years and younger who are not involved in the school leagues.

"Registration has doubled since last year to 3,000 for this season," he said. "We have had fantastic response on the minor level because soccer is such a simple game to organize. All you need is a ball.

"People are also realizing how good the sport is in regards to conditioning for other sports. Another reason is the violent reaction to hockey by parents who see soccer as being relatively injury-free."

The emphasis this season will be on player development, he said, and Sport Nova Scotia has prepared a program that includes participation in a number of tournaments.

The rapid expansion has left soccer with two major problems: lack of facilities and lack of coaches.

Spink sald Soccer Nova Scotia is organizing programs to alleviate the latter problem by getting players interested in coach-

Opposition members of the British Columbia legislature criticized the Social Credit government Monday for failing to send a representative to last week's Destiny Canada conference in

However, Premier Bill Bennett was quick to the defence, explaining that a senior civil servant had been sent to represent B.C. at what was supposed to be a non-political conference to discuss thhe future of Canadian confederation.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson began the opposition attack on the government. saying the lack of a Social Credit representative was a good indication of the government's "generally misguided approach" to national unity. Gibson, along with Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace and Alex Macdonald, former New Democratic Party attorney-general, attended lhe conference. Bennett told Gibson that Mel Smith, the director of constitutional and administrative law for the attorney-general's ministry, had represented B.C. at the conference.

The premier said Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair had originally been invited to the conference, but was unable to attend. Mair's budgetary estimates were debated last week in the legislature.

Reach accord

VANCOUVER (CP) -Net fishermen belonging to the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union have voted 90 per cent in favor of a one-year contract with the British Columbia Fisheries

Association. The contract brings minimum salmon prices up .08 cents to .78 cents a pound for sockeye, up .05 cents to .56 cents for Coho, up .04 cents to .34 cents for pinks, up .04 cents to .40 cents for chum and up .10 cents to .98 cents for springs weighing more than 12 pounds. Contributions into the union's welfare fund will be increased by one-tenth of a cent a pound on all netcaught salmon to seventenths of a cent a pound, the union said Monday in a news release. The union said no contract will be signed until all three sections involved in negotiations with the fisheries association have reached agreement. Tendermen were conducting a vote for a stonwork meeting to be held July 15 and the shoreworkers negotiating committee was to meet Monday night to discuss a recommendation to be put before the membership. 6B. Legal

> MINISTRY OF FORESITS TIMBER SALE A09223

Sealed tenders will be received by the District Forester at Prince Rupert, British Columbia, not later than 11 a.m. on the 5th day of August, 1977 for the purchase of Licence A09223, to cut 21,752 cunits of Hemlock, Spruce, Lodgepole Pine, Cedar, Balsam and trees of other species located 17 miles North of Kitwanga, Casslar District. Three (3) years will be Opposition leader Dave position and f 1e was Barrett asked Bennett authorized to sp. ak for B.C. The premier an wered no to each question.

Family Says Fiance Beneath Her Station

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old widow contemplating marriage to a widower. He is affectionate, trustworthy, and thoughtful. He loves my children and they love him. He is a wonderful father to his own children. le cooks, cleans, washes, irons and never complains. We couldn't help but have smooth sailing, and I do love him, but my problem is the strong objections my family has to this man.

They don't like him because our backgrounds are so different. My parents are culture-conscious and somewhat snobbish. My friend is the eldest of 15 children of a struggling immigrant family. His English is not very good because he hasn't had the educational advantage. I've had.

If left alone, I'm sure we could overcone these differences, but I am very close to my family, and they could make life unbearable for me if I were to marry this man. I've told him yes, but wonder if perhaps I should reverse my decision. Do you consider my parents' wife on an allowance.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know what I am writing to you for. My problem is money, and you can't help me unless you get big-hearted and send me a check for $50,000. I own my own business and make good money, but my wife spends it faster than I can make it. To make matters worse, I have four daughters who are exactly like their mother. I am drowning in bills every month, and there doesn't seem to beany end to it. Will you please tell my wife and daughters to quit being extravagant? OWES PLENTY DEAR OWES: No, that's YOUR JOB. It's bad enough to have spoiled your wife, but you are guilty of perpetuating the crime by raising four more females in her image. Turn off those charge accounts, Dad, and put your

DEAR ABBY: A girl I work with is getting married soon, and she wants to borrow my wedding gown and veil. She's not even a close friend, but she's seen pictures of my wedding and says that's exactly the kind of gown and veil she's always wanted. Unfortunately, we're the same size,

Abby, I'm saving my wedding gown for my two younger sisters to wear-and someday I will have daug ters who will want to wear it. So many of my friends have told me they let someone wear their wedding gowns and they were returned in terrible condition that I hate to take the chance. What story can I tell this girl so I won't have to let her wear it? I hate to have her mad at me, as we work together every day. SIZE TEN DEAR TEN: Why make up a story? Tell her the truth.

CONFIDENTIAL TO R. IN ST. PAUL: You must be kidding! It is highly improper for Sue and her hoyfriend and her boyfriend's mother to sleep in the same bed. I don't care WHO sleeps in the middle!

But to those who love found a link in Wilson's wooden boats, the three-year-old magazine, relationship between the owner, his boat and the sea farmhouse just outside this can border on the spiritual. tiny village near Penobscot

Woodenboat magazine, says and designers, was started on a shoestring in 1974, when to press with 12,000 copies and only two subscribers. He displayed Woodenboat at boat shows and marinas, where it stirred interest.

Since that circulation has grown to around 20,000, much of it in the wooden-boat centres of New England and the maritime provinces on the East Coast, and Washington and British Columbia in the west. Wilson boasts subscribers in places ranging from the Soviet Union to Australia.

The publication has turned Wilson, a 31-year-old college dropout, into a guru of wood construction, which he sees as embodying the virtues of integrity and craftsmanship, plus the ideals of traditional beauty. He said the 1970s have seen a renewed interest in wooden boats, fueled in part by a return to simpler lifestyles and a disdain for mass-produced yachts or work boats.

"This resurgence is not just limited to a few diehards or isolated souls who are committed to the same passions. More and more people in the mass market are becoming dissatisfied with stamped-out boats."

Wilson predicted a healthy future for wooden boats as costs of petrochemicals continue to rise. He said recently developed construction techniques have improved the stability of wooden boats, allowing builders to turn out stronger and lighter

Despite his strong feelings, Wilson acknowledged that wooden boats are not for everyone. "The choice depends entirely on your temperament. Glass fibre is good for people who just want to be on the water."

But for those who want a total experience, Wilson will rhapsodize about the virtues of wood. The hours spent in maintenance, he said, contribute to the enjoyment and shouldn't be regarded as work.

"A good wooden boat responds to care and love. It's the experience of caring for something fine."

Brown rats on display

LONDON (AP) - Brown rats, the scourge of man for centuries, have gone on display in a European zoo with a mock-up sewer for a home.

Per Seaton, an official of Copenhagen Zoo, says in the International Zoo Yearbook, published by the Zoological Society of London, that despite its vast numbers, the brown rat is not a common sight, living as it does underground beneath the cities. So the zoo had the idea of displaying the animal in its surroundings."

Seaton and his colleagues toured Copenhagen's sewers for ideas and then designed an exhibit to enable visitors to look directly into the rats' home, to see them behaving as they might had they remained hidden from human eyes.

The exhibit had to be escapeproof, so the staff made a 22-foot imitation sewer tunnel from iron sheeting in the shape of a big C, with a breeding chamber at one end and a feeding chamber at the other-"an incentive for the rats to run up and down the tunnel with greater frequency," Seaton Water, circulated by an electric pump, covers the sewer floor and, as extra touches of realism, the interior surface is cementcoated and bits of broken pipe, rubble and old clothing are scattered on the floor. The exhibit is located in a gloomy storage cellar under dim lighting and the total impression that it generates is one of "calculated unpleasantness," Seaton
