Murdo Macdonald, Terrace returning officer, said 21 people turned out to the advance poll in Terrace on Monday.

Municipal voters in Terrace and Kitimat must be registered to vote. Persons registering must be Canadian citizens or British subjects, residents of Canada for 12 months, residents of B.C. for six months and residents of the municipality for three residents months. Anyone who is not registered can do so at the municipal hall before election day or at the polls, said Macdonald.

Rhodesia delays rule by majority

SALISBURY (AP) - Rhodesia's biracial transition government decided Thursday to put off a trandecided sfer of power to the country's black majority until April, a the four-month delay government SAVS necessary to complete work on a new constitution.

The 21 black and 21 white ministers decided against implementing the part of the March 3 internal agreement that calls for a universal suffrage election to choose a black government before Dec. 31.

A spokesman, announcing the delay after two weeks of bickering among members of the four-man Executve meeting Thursday, said the new election date is April 20. Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the principal black leader in the transition government who said earlier this week that any delay would "invite disaster," told reporters he is satisfied with the new

in three provincial cities Thursday but oil production increased, showing signs of bouncing back to normal after a crippling twoweek strike. The most serious anti-Shah demonstration in days was at Behbahan, in southern Iran on the edge of the Kuzestan oilfields. Troops there fired on protesters. Five persons were wounded, one critically, Behbahan police said. At Isfahan, the site of a large Iranian air force base, police arrested rioters after bak branch and a bookstore were set ablaze. In the holy city of Mashhad, mobs were Mashhad, dispersed for the second consecutive day by soldiers firing automatic weapons in the air and hurling tear-gas grenades. Tehran was quiet, with many troops and tanks returning to garrisons at the edge of the city.

A voter's guide

By Brian Gregg

This year's municipal elections have provided Terrace voters with a wide-range of condidates to choose from as nine people make their bids for three seats on council.

Bob Cooper

Bob Cooper, an incumbent, has lived in Terrace since 1927 and he has owned West Kalum Logging Ltd. since 1951. Cooper has had two years experience on council and the Regional District Board of Kitimat-Stikine.

As an alderman Cooper is on the industrial development committee, the public works committee and the tourism committee. As a director of the regional district he is chairman of the Ski Hill Committee and a member of the health committee.

Cooper is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 13 and he is a past president of the Northwest Loggers Association.

Lilly Nielson

Lilly Nielson is making her second bid to be elected to a seat on council. She moved to Terrace in 1959 when she was involved with little theatre. She was a member of the B.C. Registered Nurses Association and she is presently involved with a group called Women in Action for Political Rights. She is a mother of four children and has taken courses in Political Science and Canadian History at Northwest Community College (NCC).

Vic Joliffe

Vic Jolliffe, another incumbent, has lived in Terrace since 1956 and served on council as an alderman and mayor for eight years between 1962 and 1978. He is a plumber by trade. He was a member of the Mills Memorial Hospital Board for three years. He was chairman of the board and chairman of the construction committee during the hospital's expansion.

Jolliffe is involved with the planning committee and the public works committee on council and as a regional district director he is on the finance committee.

Marguarite Clarkson

Marguarite Clarkson, a labour council candidate, has lived in Terrace for 18 months. She served two years on the Fraser Lake municipal council. She is presently the program administrator for the job creation branch of the Canada Employment and Immigration Union and a trustee of the labour council.

last seven years. He is a board member of the B.C. Alliance Society for Crippled Children. He is the owner of Al's Shoes.

Juanita Hatton

Juanita Hatton has lived in Terrace since 1961 and she is the coordinator of the Golden Rule an employment agency which she organized in 1971. She is publicity chairman of the Catholic Women's League, secretary of the Justice Council, the newly elected treasurer of the Terrace Chamber of Commerce and she is chairman of the chamber's tourism committee. As coordinator of Golden Rule she finds odd jobs for people.

David Pease

David Pease, an incumbent who was elected by acclamation, has served on council for 18 months. He has resided in Terrace since 1968 and he is active with youth groups in the community. He is also a lay reader for St. Matthews Anglican Chursh.

As an alderman Pease is a member of recreation committee, council's representative on the Mills Memorial Hospital Board and the representative on the Terrace Community Services Board.

Lil Farkvam

Lil Farkvam has been a member of the recreation commission here for 21/2 years. She has held executive positions with minor baseball and minor hockey. She was president of the Uplands Home and School group and has been a weight watchers instructor. She is the mother of three children.

She coordinated and chaired the Family Violence Workshop at NCC last May, she has been active in the Status of Women's Organization and she will be the northwest delegate to National Conference For Learning Opportunities for Women in December. She teaches Life Skills in Kitimat for NCC.

Al Purschke

Al Purschke has been involved with the community since he arrived in Terrace in 1964. He was a member of the Arena for Terrace Committee before the arena was built. He is a past district governor of the Lions Club in B.C. and is a member of the Downtown Lions Club. He has been chairman for the Canadian Institute of the Blind for Terrace during the

Paul Johnston

Paul Johnston, also a labour candidate, is a university graduate with a B.A. in History and Political Science from York University. He is an organizer with three unions in the northwest and he is a member of the Rock and Tunnel Workers Union. He is a part-time instructor at NCC. He has lived in the Terrace area for four

AT PUBLIC MEETING

Candidates have their say

The chairman of Wednesday evening's all candidates meeting, George Clark of the Terrace Jaycees, suggested to one member of the audience, "to please keep personalities out of the question".

However, after the 75 or so people left the R.E.M. Lee heatre there seemed very little else on which to base a decision as to who should serve one council for the next two years.

Few substantial issues were argues. All candidates seemed in favor of everything that should be good for Terrace, with their emphasis placed on different priorities.

First to address the audience, was Marguerite Clarkson. The order of speaking was set out by the Jaycees as alphabetical for candidates opening speeches and reverse order for closing addresses.

told Clarkson. gathering that she would be in favor of hiring local contractors to do municipal work regardless of a slight cost difference. She ex-plained that the building trades are currently suffering a 40 per cent unemployment situation.

Clarkson also suggested that Terrace is currently supporting municipal transit in other towns and should have a system of its own.

"We pay hydro bills which go to support transit systems yet we have no buses,' Clarkson complained.

Clarkson also told the audience that day care services in Terrace need to be improved, a family violence emergency shelter needs to be set up, and other services were lacking within the district.

Alderman Bob Cooper during his opening address said the Terrace tax payer is getting a good return on the dollar. He emphasized that the forest products industry is still the main backbone of Terrace's economy and that any expansion must be planned around the forest industry. Cooper suggested that planning must be flexible and allow people as much freedom as possible while warning them that certain facilities may not be available to them should they choose to build in parts of the district which are not yet serviced. Cooper also said that Ferry Island should be promoted as a tourist area. He received large applause following his opening remarks.

Lil Farkvam spoke at concerning length recreational facilities within the district. She pointed out that there are no bathroom facilities at the ball park and that now, "they have even cut down the trees, which makes the situation even Farkvam also expressed the opinion that there has been some poor planning in when a woman Terrace. pushing a baby carriage has to jump to the other side of the street because the sidewalk has changed.

"Also you need a vehicle to go for a pienic to Lakelse Lake because there is no place available within Terrace" the candidate said.

Juanita Hatton placed great emphasis on public transit within Terrace. She pointed out that Prince Rupert's transit system is currently making money and does not need a subsidy from the city.

"If they can do it, we can," she added.

Hatton also suggested that Thornhill should incorporate on its own.

"Amalgamation would animosity,' only bring Hatton said.

Several industries which could be persuaded to locate in Terrace were mentioned by Hatton. She suggested that Terrace must attract secondary industry if it is to continue to grow. Paul Johnston. executive of the local NDP party, told the gathering that working people should be represented on council. He also brought up the recent report which he said indicates that Terrace has only seven to ten years left as a lumbering community. We must diversify our economy based on resources", JJohnston said. He noted that coal, lime, aluminium, and copper mines may be developed within the area.

Johnston said. Johnston complained that council had done nothing to oppose the pipeline, which would, according to Johnston he a disaster for Terrace. Vic Jolliffe, when his time to speak came, noted that he was first elected to Terrace council in 1962 and had served in one capacity or another since then. He said the industrial corridor between Terrace and Kitimat can and must work, for the benefit of the entire area.

Jollitfe speaking about the industrial report issued some time ago explained that a suggestion was made that a northern railway be built to bring lumber down to Terrace.

"I am not right or left in the political spectrum, but at times I feel not wanted," Jolliffe said. "however I quickly get over the feeling and come back for more, he added.

Jolliffe added that he enjoys municipal politics and is willing to spend his full time being an alderman.

David Pease, who later in the evening said that he is busy and believes that if you

"What's good for the busy man, said that he was region, is good for Terrace," an independent candidate not supported by any group or interests. Pease said that what was being offered by other candidates he is already involved in implementing. He said he was one of the key participants in a group to assess public transport for Terrace.

"In answer to a question about teenage problems within the district the alderman replied, "unlike some candidates I will not be doing last minute electioneering Friday evening but will be at a teen dance helping out."

Al Purschke began his speech by congratulation to all the candidates for their interest in municipal affairs and by pointing out that as long as interest is so high Terrace will remain healthy.

Purschke told the audience that he had come to Terrace after investigating many towns throughout B.C. and that he has tried to make a contribution to the community.

One new scheme Purschke suggested was that all residents be allowed to improve their property to the value of $10,000 without want a job done give it to a having to pay additional real estate tax for the first five years. This would encourage residents to up-grade their homes and thus improve the overall image of the city, Purschke said.

The candidate also made a issue out of the hot springs development situated between Terrace and Kitimat. He said council should convince the provincial government to purchase this facility and convert it into a "real tourist attraction, for every time a tourist spends money within the area it rubs off on everyone," Purschke said.

During the question period which followed the opening remarks by candidates several people asked why Lilly Nielson was not present on stage. Nielson had refused to pay the $15 fee charged by the Jaycees to participate in the meeting. The fee is charged to help offset expenses incurred but Nielson felt as a candidate she should not be required to pay for the right to speak to the residents of Terrace.

For a few minutes it seemed as if the question period would come to a halt before it began as no one was willing to ask questions, the evening but as progressed many persons approached the microphones to ask various questions.

At one point the chairman of the meeting, George Clark had to ask those in the audience and those phoning in to try to ask more questions of candidates running for council instead of directing all their queries at sitting members of council. Several questions and complaints were raised concerning a pedestrian overpass on Kalum Street. All candidates agreed that it would be a good idea to have such an overpass but again financial arrangements were the main difference.

A spectator at the meeting, Alderman Alan Soutar asked all candidates if they considered it proper that Terrace pay $1,000 a day for a recreational deficit.

Farkvam pointed out that the cemetery and library were also included in this budget and not recreation facilities.

Jolliffe said that in his opinion no further recreational facilities should be built until some permanent arrangement regarding cost sharing is worked out with surrounding areas such as Thornhill.

Jolliffe, in answering a question put by John Mc-Cormick, said that the mayor (Dave Mahoney) speaks for council, "under a gentleman's agreement".

"But I object to this situation because the mayor can't be everywhere at once. Under the present committee system each alder-man should be able to speak to the media, Jolliffe said."

Perhaps the most important question of the evening was asked by Mickey Johnson, directed at David Pease.

"How important is it that members of council get along with other, "Johnson asked.

"That depends on what you mean by getting along," Pease answered. "Each member of council has his own view point but each must respect the other,' Pease answered.

Your decision

You, the residents of this town, pay the costs of running this city through your tax dollars. The three people you choose to be part of running this city will have a say in spending a good portion of the money you work hard for.

Those three individuals will determine, at least in part, the future and direction this city will take. As they are moved, so the community moves. And how tts community is run affects us

We call our system of government responsible only in that the elected officials have to account for themselves at the end of their term of office. It is time for you to evaluate how each of the incumbents has managed hmself and thus the affairs of the city. It is time to decide whether or not they deserve to be returned. It is also time to look at the newcomers and decide if any of them could do a better job than any of the incumbents. Your choice gives the ones you elect a mandate to run your affairs for two years.

You could, of course, just flip a coin, but remember it is your nickel.

'Killer of 10,000 Jews''. The newspaper, acting on remarks made in Austria by a famous Nazi hunter, proclaimed that the man, a janitor of German extraction, had finally been located in Vancouver.

It made great news but there was one problem-the accusation was completely false. The janitor had, in fact, merely cleaned stables in a Nazi concentration Lawyer Penny Bain writes in a Vancouver L'eople's Law School booklet on Libel and Slander law, "The concern of the law is not so much with insult or injury to personal feelings as with injury to respect and esteem. For example, if Harry calls Fred a dirty crook in a closed room, it may hurt Harry's feelings but it will not injure his reputation.'

Bain writes, "Mere vulgar abuse or insult name-calling is usually not a defamation. Name-calling is aimed at pride rather than reputation. However, if Harry calls Fred a crook, it may hurt his businekss.

If Harry calls Fred a crook in front of a third person or at a meeting, Bain says, then it is a spoken defamation and Harry could bring a slander suit against Fred — rightthinking people would think less of Fred as a dirty crook. If, instead of saying Fred is a dirty crook, Harry sement of lottery funds, this project only became public have not yet learned what project only became public because Mr. Kerrster was bragging to his constituents about how he had pried the money out of Grace Mc-Carthy and he indicated that she would make the choice as to who would design the bridge. So the possibilities for political patronage are unending!

Since the revelation by Mr. Kerster, my colleague Eileen Dailly has become concerned about the possibility of further mis-use of lottery funds, and has called for an accounting of the fund, with a list of projects, along with the names of groups or concerns receiving the funds. The Auditor-General has replied that although she could do a technical audit, she would not be able to make available the lists of projects. This information, she said, would have to come from Mrs. McCarthy. So the fund remains under the control of Mrs. McCarthy, with no requirement that details of pay-outs ever be made public.

And every few days another example of a that well over $1 million had questionable use of lottery been spent on funds turns up. A partial list includes such goodies as this money was spent on, because of the lack of accountability, but certainly it represents an expenditure that should have come out of the general revenue. It seems that any ministry expecting a financial overrun can now use lottery funds to help them balance the budget. Other projects which we have learned are being funded with lottery profits include $13,000 for a parking lot and $5,000 for a feasibility study for a marina in the Socred riding of Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis; $150,000 for purchase of a sailing-training ship, the "Freelance", $200,000 for the purchase of smoke detectors for private nursing homes, $1,260,000 'miscellaneous''. This miscellaneous item was listed in a letter to the B.C. Recreation Association from Mrs. McCarthy in response to their request for information on lottery disbursements. In her letter she made no mention of what the money was spent on, or who received it, just noted

"miscellaneous"! Again, it should be emphasized that some of these projects, such as the smoke detectors, are necessary items. But why are they being paid for out of the lottery fund? This has caused such an outcry in the Lower Mainland that some have people threatening to boycott the lottery until a proper accounting is made.

The B.C. Economic Review, a provincial government publication, shows that the balance in the lottery fund as of March 31, 1978 was $16 million. Grants are listed for "cultural, recreational and sport purposes", and are not broken down further. When McCarthy questioned by reporters about the lottery fund, she immediately added some more purposes for the fund. She said any project would be eligible if they were "national, patriotic, religious, philanthropic, charitable, scientific, artistic, environmental or onservational in nature Which means that she can give lottery money to just about anyone for just about anything. The only apparent stipulation seems to be that there is some benefit for the Social Credit party in it.

OTTAWA OFFBEAT

BY RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA - What do you know -- the World Council of Churches has bracketted Canada with Rhodesia and South Africa and other supposed "racist" states which discriminate against native populations.

It must have come as an awful shock to former External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp who used to justify the use of Canadian tax funds for guerrillas, revolutionaries and terrorists in Southern Africa as "Christian" aid for what he called "freedom called fighters".
It didn't matter that the black guerrillas waging a terrorist war against Rhodesia and an un derground revolutionary operation against South Africa were slaughtering defenceless innocents in those states, including a couple of Canadian girls on holiday tour from Guelph, Ontario.

Sharp didn't make much of a protest either politically or diplomatically, seeming to brush it off as an unfortunate accident in what he regarded as a legitimate military operation by black "freedom fighters" against their white oppressors.

The best he could do, and that reluctantly under pressure from the Opposition in the House of Commons, was to persuade Zambia, from where the guerrillas had fired their fatal shots, "hunting" the two girls like animals among the rocks at the foot of Victoria Falls, to pay some cash compensation to one of the bereaved lamilies.

The aid from the Canadian government to the African terrorists has never stopped, and just the other day, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson was up in the Third World pulpit at the United Nations preaching the justice of the guerrilla war.

It was all in the aid of ending racial oppression, he said, and in fine, ringing holier-than-thou tashion, sternly lectured the Rhodesians and South Africans to mend their wicked ways.

And then - of all the beautiful timing - up spoke the World Council of Churches, always a supporter of Canada's program of assistance to the African 'freedom fighters", in the cause of Canadian native Indians and Eskimos. The busy-body Council further ponied up some cash - some hundred or so thousand dollars "protect" these northern natives of Canada from supposed hardship inflicted on them by "multinational corporations" developing oil, gas, uranium and other resources in the sub-Arctic.

The native "life style was being damaged," said the Council, and the aid was in compensation. Canadians, in other words, were not playing fair; were even, in a sense, discriminating against the natives in the exploitation of the Indian and Eskimo lands. Since Canadians are developing the north as Rhodesians and South Africans developed Southern Africa, it raised the ever contentious question of whose lands these are those of the people there for generations back or those who are making something productive of them.

To Mitchell Sharp and Don Jamieson and the World Council of Churches, there seems only one answer.

To the natives belong the land -- at least in Southern Africa -- and the developers are interlopers.

And now the World Council of Churches sees Northern Canada in the same focus. Canadians are inflicting "damage and hardship" on the natives.

Forget that the natives have been making their own land claims - and collecting handsomely in some cases the Council of Churches thinks it isn't compensation enough. Forget, too, that corporations developing oil, gas, uranium and other resources are bringing in skilled Americans and Canadians to direct operations and provide jobs and trades' training for the natives. Still you can't suppress a chuckle that in the all-seeing eyes of the Council, Canada is in the same category of callous disregard of native rights as the South Africans and Rhodesians. Maybe not to the same extent, but enough to warrant cash"ascistance from the Council. Some folks must be squirming.

The main form of federal assistance -- one which will be called into play as a result of the flooding - is a pre-determined formula for financial assistance to share the costs when the burden of restoring public and private property damaged in a disaster goes beyond what a province can reasonably be expected to hear on its own.

Again, constitutional agreements require that the province formally ask for this assistance from Ottawa. This has been done, and assistance has been granted. through an exchange of telegrams last week between Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier Bennett. Under the agreement, the

UGANDA-TANZANIA

It's a strange little war and Tanzania is a strange and tragic little war, begun almost capriciously and likely to end with no territorial gains for either

Ugandan President Idi Amin's announcement that he is withdrawing his troops from Tanzania is expected to signal an end to the fighting between the two East African neighbors, Washington observers say.

The question now is how far Tanzania will press its desire for retaliation against Amin and his troops.

Observers say, however, that because wi the remoteness of the scene of battle, a 700-square-mile section west of Like Victoria, and the fact that Tanzania's army is fairly small and ill equipped, prospects for achieving President Julius Nyerere's long standing desire to topple Amin are remote.

In analysing the whys and wherefores of the conflict, it appears that the first Ugandan troops to cross into Tanzania may have been chased there by other Ugandan umts.

A Washington official said

WASHINGTON (CP) - On intelligence reports indicate all counts, the two-week-old there was sporadic fighting border conflict between in October between pro-and invading Ugandan troops anti-Amin army units stationed near the Tanzanian with both Tanzania and Uganda are at a low point. Political, ideological and economic differences between the three countries resulted in the dissolution almost two years ago of the East African economic community, a regional organization that once was touted as a great hope for development of the continent.

Since then, the differences have deepened and relations have become even more bitter as each country accuses the others of unfairly dividing the remnants of the economic community, such as control of ral lines.

BAKER'S BATTER

BY NIXON BAKER

It certainly is not my in-tention to presume to tell you, the residents of Terrace for whom you should vote this Saturday. Nor, as far as I am aware, does the Herald have any "picked" candidates, however I would be less than honest to those who read this column not to make some comment.

First, I must preface my remarks by saying I am sick and tired of people telling me I can't possibly understand the situation in Terrace bbecause I have only been here four months.

These are the same people who advocate that in order to have a job well done you must import "experts" from Vancouver. Reporting news and covering politics is my business, or at least, was my business for many years.

I have been to more council, school board, regional and district meetings than anyone else in this town; and I say that without fear of contradiction, and will prove it to anyone willing to wager on the matter. Mind you, these meetings were not the same council in the same town, but range from the far north of Ontario to the nation's capital, Ottawa.

And if, one more person asks me why I am in Terrace, considering the great future I have behind me, I think I will be sick to my stomache. What is it about this town that people automatically feel there must be something wrong with you otherwise you wouldn't be here?

Terrace is currently going through growing pains. similar to many other communities throughout the county; too beg to be small and too small to be big.

This situation is not perculiar to Terrace, many, many cities have gone through the same transformation.

Anyway, back to the up-coming election. All candidates strike me, and remember this is strictly a personal opinion, as honest people who are genuinely interested in the welfare of the community. The fact that nine persons are seeking three seats speaks well for the district. These people are really performing an ex-tremely worthwhile service for the district regardless of whom is elected.

They should be thanked and appreciated for this

People like Lilly Neilson, who continues to seek a seat on council despite past defeats, are to be treasured, not necessarily elected, but treasured. That's what it's not elected the very fact that you ran has an effect on those who are elected. Too bad we can't say the same for the school board, whose budget probably is greater than council's. If you are still reading this column, you want to know how far I intend to stick my neck out, don't you?

Well, this far and no farther; at the candidates meeting Wednesday the "outs" promised and the "ins" pointed out how expensive some of the suggested programs would be, thus raising taxes.

It would seem that a couple of years on council certainly does temper en-thusiasm for expensive projects.

O.K.! Here goes, as the only person who has attended every council meeting during the last four months, other than aldermen and municipal employees, I would say there are only four creditible candidates. The three incumbents; Cooper, Jolliffe and Pease, and Al Purschke. How to win friends and influence people, I just made five enemies.

I am sure my recom-mendation will be worth at least three votes, mine, my wife's and my son's.

I would have given credence to both Ms. Clarkson and Paul Johnston, if they were not so tied to labor. Now don't start! I have nothing against labor, I have been a member of unions and enjoyed the benefits of them. However, I don't think municipal politics is the place for "parties". I want my alderman or alderperson or alderwomen, to speak for themselves not for a committee, no matter how wise or representative that committee may be.

Juanita is a charming lady and serves a useful purpose within the community. She should continue to do so.

Lil Farkvam is understandably frustrated by the apparent lack of action regarding recreation within the district. Her candidacity will help to move the wheels a little faster.

All the candidates are good people who deserve credit for their courage and interest: but as I said earlier there are really only four, Cooper, Jolliffe, Pease and Purschke. I listed them in alphabetical order not in preference. I realize this type of column is not usual because it puts a journalist in a real bind, if - as may well be the case others are elected; but then my reporting of news has nothing whatsover to do with this column. This is, and all about if you don't like I repeat, only a personal what's going on, seek office opinion based on my oband change it, and if you are servations at council.

Mayor Jack Volrich easily tracted much of the elec-won re-election for a second torate. two-year term Wednesday, as the conservative Non-Partisan Association (NPA) assumed dominance of civic politics with majorities oncouncil, school board and

Volrich, 50, who ran as an independent with NPA backing, collected 45,762 votes, handily turning back the challenge of Alderman May Brown, The Electors Action Movement (TEAM) candidate, who polled 29,449

Volrich's 50-per-cent support was up from the 45 per cent he received when first elected in 1976 as the TEAM candidate.

Voter turnout was 38 per cent, down considerably from past years. The low turnout was blamed partly on the shutdown due to a labor dispute of Vancouver's two daily newspapers.

The NPA, taking advantage of a noticeable swing by voters, elected five alderma—incumbents Warnett Kennedy, George Puil and Bernice Gerard, former alderman Helen

The NPA also elected seven of nine school trustees and five of seven park commissioners.

Despite the obvious support for NPA candidates and policies, voters narrowly approved a plebiscite favoring a ward system for the city—something Volrich and other NPA candidates campaigned against.

Volrich said the 51-percent vote in favor of a ward system was not a definite indication, but he agreed to set up a commission to consider the whole matter of local government.

Any decision to change the present system must be approved by the provincial government. Also elected as aldermen were Harry Rankin of the Committee of Progressive Electors, independent in-cumbents Michael Harcourt and Darlene Marzari and Marguerite Ford of TEAM.

Elected as school trustees were: Nathan Divinsky, Jonathan Baker, Peter Westlake, William Brown, Bryan Hannay, Peter Hebb and Karl Erdman, all of NPA, and Betty-Anne Fenwick and Norman Robinson of TEAM.

George Wainborn, Russ Fraser, Andy Livingstone, Phillip Owen and Doug Mowat, all of NPA, were elected to the parks board, along with lan Bain and Mary Ann Fowler of TEAM.

Betty?

Howdy all, at the last meeting of the local C.B. ers, it was brought to my attention that we would do well to inform the people of our well run organization, so in this week's report we shall introduce you to the many members of the group more commonly known as M.O.P. (Many Odd People).

Heading our group as president is a SUPER THIEF, while the secretary is a giant SUPER COOKIE (and no, it cannot be eaten!) making this seem like a run family organization. A huge machine, what is often referred to as a ROCKhuge CRUSHER, ground his way through and made himself known as the vice president while all the time a BUM-BLE BEE buzzed around getting new memberships. Unlike other clubs, we pay our dues in the form of a MAI TAI and that's about as treasurey as you can get. The directors consist of someone's LITTLE MAMA watching a RAIN-DROP on a piece of CEDAR WOOD, while the sky stays bright as the LITTLE DIPPER tries to find the Ways and Means to get there. For publicity the club does its best to rely on their mascot, a DINO, who tries to stay out of the way of all the little PEB-

Our place of meeting is on a LITTLE SHRUB where we all hold on to a BRAIDED ROPE so as not to fall off and get a STINGER as they tend to SNAP-ON pretty fast. Our own means of built in RADAR tells us that a WOLVERINE is stalking nearby even though a GRASSHOPPER is jumping about. To be sure there's never a GREY CLOUD in the sky at our meetings so we can always watch the BIG DIPPER do its thing and twinkle away until the SANDMAN decides it's time that we all get a bit' SLEEPY, only then do we go 10-7 and BEEP BEEP our way out of there and make MOOSE TRACKS until next time. See you there?

To make amends now, let it be known that I goofed off, as usual, and that the names given are in their respective order as heading the locally run BBC GRS, and who support the local charities through the various functions they have throughout the year. This club is made up of hard working people who do their best to help others whenever they can and they should be thanked accordingly. A lot of people are misinformed as to what C.B.'ers are, thinking they are just a lot of grown up kids with nothing better to do than talk on the radio. But first of all, to be a good C.B.'er is to be able and want to help others in all walks of life, and these people do just that. Sure, we all goof off now and then, and I think I head that list, but our hearts are in the right places so when you hear or read of a dance or other do that is put

Paper shortage hurting

COQUITLAM, B.R& (RL - Publisher R. D. Taylor Thursday Columbian has turned down advertising and commercial printing contracts because of a shortage of newsprint.

MacMillan Bloedel, a major supplier of newsprint British Columbia newspapers, has put its customers on a quota system. A company spokesman said the move was caused by a world-wide shortage of newsprint, not local issues. Taylor said B.C. Forest and Products Zellerbach have increased their newsprint shipments to The Columbian but the amount is not enough to cover the effects of Mac-Millan Bloedel's rationing. He said the shortfall is restricting the size and circulation of the suburban evening newspaper, both of which increased since the Vancouver Sun and Province were closed Nov. I by a labor

"The American management of MacMillan Bloedel is exemplifying the intent of any corporate giantmaximization of profits," Taylor said.

"MacMillan Bloedel feels it is more important to bring in U.S. dollars than incease local industry."

Directors elected

The Terrace and District Community Services Society recently held their annual general meeting at which time the incumbent directors were re-elected.

Elected for a two year best to attend and help us to term were Roy Greening, On the less serious side Dave Gellately, Jane Booth, now, we would like to Mumford, Phil Doug Stewart, Judy Vandergucht, and Frances Long. Mary congratulate our BRAIDED ROPE for her recent win of Boucher was elected a director for the first time. Terrace's goony bird and also for her win at some winnings. Guess the steaks are on you next time, eh This leaves four vacancies to be filled. David Pease will remain the appointed director for Terrace district Everyone wish LITTLE MAMA a happy birthday the council.

Roy Greening was reelected chairman by acclamation, Dave Gellately became first vice-chairman, Phil Stewart was elected 2nd vice-chairman and Judy Vandergucht remained as secretary.

Concern was expressed by Greening at the lack of people interested in becoming directors of the society. The society, he said, is very active with a budget close to half a million dollars. The society sponsors projects in every facet of the community and it is essential that more community members take an active interest in the society.

Interviews have been taking place for project managers for the Women's Growth Centre and the Family Violence Research Project. With the resignation of the Volunteer Bureau project manager; this position will be advertised through Canada Manpower.

A visitor to the meeting was Jana Sieben who was looking for support for the society for Birthrite, an organization branch is in the process of being formed in Terrace. Birthrite actively supports the pregnant women with counselling and literature to make the right choice about her child. The branch will be seeking funding to establish an office and at that time the society will sponsor the project.

The next meeting of the society will be held Dec. 11 in the Skeenaview Lounge. If you are interested in working in the society call either 635-5339 evenings or 635-3178, which is the society

A company is people.

There's more to MB than logging operations, pulp and paper mills, building materials plants and packaging operations. That's the "hardware". But the heart of our company is our people. Out of their combined talents and efforts come many benefits. The economic ones are obvious. Healthy communities. Purchasing power. Taxes. But there are other benefits as well.

We're not all business.

We don't just work in the communities where MB operates. We live in them, too. And that means our company and our people care about a lot of things that can't be measured in money. Things like education. The arts. Sports. Health services. Charitable organizations. It's a long list.

To name only a few:

MB commits funds each year for a continuing program of bursaries and scholarships. And we donate to a wide variety of community organizations and events. The Vancouver Symphony. The Playhouse and the Arts Club Theatres. The Vancouver Ballet Society. Loggers' sports in Campbell River, Port Alberni and Ladysmith. The Powell River Tennis Club. Franklin River Hockey Team. Malaspina Skating Club. Junior Achievement of B.C. North Shore Light Opera. B.C. Wildlife Foundation. Multiple Sclerosis Society. And many others.

Timbermen logged, and the Kings toppled with their best performance of the season by far Wednesday night, and defeated the up to then mighty Prince Rupert Kings 7-3 at the Terrace Arena.

For almost the first time this season, the Timbermen played as a cohesive unit, and the solid effort by everyone concerned paid off with Terrace's entry in the PNWHL defeating Prince Rupert for the first time in almost two seasons.

The Kings began with a rush, and for the first ten minutes, the play was almost entirely in Terrace's end of the ice. They could have had three or four goals in that time, but solid goaltending from Tim Gloeden kept them

After that initial outburst, the Terrace team began to come on somewhat, and play was fairly even during the

An inspired Terrace last half of the opening Timbermen team came up period, though neither side could manage a goal.

A rash of foolish penalties early in the second period definitely hurt the Kings, as they were a man short when Keith Colwill's long shot from the point beat Kings goaltender Mario Morretto high to the glove side to give the Timbermen a 1-0 lead, at 6:41 of the middle frame. The Kings were also a man short when Doug Matheson connected with a hard wrist shot from the slot to increase the lead to 2-0. Just 23 seconds later Matheson converted a Rae Rowe pass from the corner into a goal to give Terrace a three goal advantage.

The Kings finally got on the board at 13:55 of the second period when Rich Wright blasted a hard shot by Tim Gloeden right from the faceoff, and it was 3-1. Troy Farkvam got that one back for the Timbermen less than a minute later when he scored from a goalmouth

With the score 4-1, and 2½ minutes remaining in the second period, Prince Rupert's Garry Coons' hard shot from the slot just managed to find the correct managed to find the corner of the Terrace net, making it 4-2. Heit scored again at 8:34 of the frame, when on a 2 on 1 break he elected to shoot, and it proved to be the right decision, as his hard shot found its way past Morretto to give Terrace a 6-3 advantage. he plays as well as he did Wednesday, he will be a tremendous aquisition for the Terrace team.

The victory tremendous morale booster for the Timbermen. Goaltender Tim Gloeden who played an excellent game along with the rest of the team summed things up for the entire squad when he "I'm just really pleased we played well. We've been working on new plays in practice, and they seem to be working." He added, "The guys are playing like a team, and I think now we're on the right track. Our guys want to win, and we'll be working hard from here on in."

The Timbermen received some good news when they found out they no longer have to practice Friday at midnight. The midnight practice has been moved to Thursday nights at 7:00 P.M. This, combined with the win over the Kings should boost their morale tremendously, and Terrace should have an excellent hockey team for the remainder of the season.

The Terrace Timbermen's next game is against the

New questions have to be asked

MONTREAL (CP) -The recent revelation that a sixth man, a so-called Mr. X, might have taken part in the kidnapping of British trade commissioner James Cross has stirred up questions about the 1970 October Crisis.

The official line was that five members of a Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ) cell were involved.

But Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard now has revealed that a sixth man was not prosecuted even though police had information on his links to the cell. Police say they were unable to gather enough evidence to press charges.

Bedard's statement reversed a government stance that had stood since Dec. 3, 1970, when five members of the FLQ's Liberation Cell--Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, Marc Carbo neau.

Jacques Lanctol and Yves Langlois-were given safe passage to Cuba in exchange for Cross.

The existence of the sixth man came to light in an interview by Montreal journalist Marc Laurendeau with the Cossette-Trudels, now in Paris.

Bedard and Laurendeau refuse to identify

Mr. X.
Bedard recently
a Union rebuked a Union Nationale member for mentioning the name of Nigel Barry Hamer, a junior college teacher with a history of radical activities in Montreal in the 1960s.

The fact that Mr. X remained in the shadows has revived doubts about the official version of the Pierre Vallieres and others have claimed the Cross and Pierre Laporte kidnappings were engineered to discredit separatists.

A key element in the conspiracy theory is the idea that an informer infiltrated the FLQ. Police, so the story goes, were on the trail of a kidnapping plot by the summer of 1970 and they stood aside and let it happen to isolate the Vallieres claims Liberal governments in Ottawa amd Quebec City took advantage of the crisis by invoking the War Measures Act and rounding up hundreds of radicals.

Mr. X could fit into the scenario as either an informer or an FLQ member who was unconsciously giving police clues about terrorist activities.

The Cossette-Trudels told Laurendeau they suspect police had infiltrated the FLQ by the fall of 1970 and that the organization's plans were known ahead of time.

But they described Mr. X as trustworthy and never suspected him of being an informer.

Former RCMP Staff
Sgt. Donald McCleery, who led the team that arrested the Cossette-Trudels and then tracked Cross to a north end FLQ hideout, denies the Mounties had a police informer.

But McCleery has said he showed Cossettesomeone he believed to be Mr. X and bluffed the terrorist into thinking the man was an informer.

Some questions might be answered if Bedard decided to prosecute Mr. X or if he called a public nquiry into the October Crisis.

But a trial would be unlikely unless the five former terrorists were also prosecuted. Mr. X would, after all, be only one of six co-accused and, perhaps, the one against whom the evidence was weakest.

The Cossette-Trudels have indicated they are ready to return to Quebec and face trial on charges of kidnapping. But they have warned they will not cooperate in any plan to denounce their FLQ colleagues.

Waste to food

Billion of tons of agricultural waste products which pollute the environment could be used to increase world food production substantially.

Bio-gas generation, using agricultural and animal residue, is one of several technologies developed and out to use in India, China, the Philippines and other countries.

But the surface has been barely scratched considering the huge annual amount of agricultural and agro-industrial residues left simply as waste material.

The harvesting and processing of food and other products on farmland often leaves residues more massive than the food itself. The United Nations Environment Program (UNEP) estimates that 1.7 billion tonnes of cereal straw are left as residue annually throughout the world from wheat, corn, rice, sorghum, millet and several other grains. Much is left as waste. Agro-industries also produce vast quantities of resideues. For example, the sugar cane industry creates each year 50 million tonnes of sugar cane tops and 67 million tonnnes of bagasse.

Often Bagasse is burned as a low-grade fuel in the sugar mills themselves generally residues are greatly underutilized.

Pineapple is typical of the waste in fruit farming. Where pineapples are canned, less than 20 per cent of the whole fruit is used. The remainder, often in the form of a highy-polluting lwuid, cap cause considerable dispusal problems.

In its 1978 report on the UNFP's environment, section on food waste says that residues can poison the soil, kill fish, cause artificial enrichment of takes, pollute rivers and streams and cause air pollution harmful to health. The cereal straw stem left after removal of the grain must be lifted from the ground in order to control pests and diseases and to prevent fouling of the soil for the next crop.

the straw is burned in the field, causing smoke and fire hazards and other ecological problems.

The same considerations apply to agro-industrial residues. In liquid form, these residues often are extremely polluting. Waste waters created when starch is extracted from tapioca are 20 times more polluting than municipal sewage. Waste from palm oil production is 200 times more polluting than sewage.

Labor says it's right to see a swing to left campaign for last month's MONTREAL (CP) - Canada's so-called political swing to the right is a myth because leftists still are getting elected in all parts of the country, says the president of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC).

Dennis McDermott

brought his campaign for greater labor involvement in politics to the Canadian Philipperwarkers Union constitutional convention Thursday, and called on unions to resist being used by government and industry as a scapegoat for the country's economic ills.

In contrast to his appearance at the Ontario Federation of Labor convention in Toronto Tuesday where he was booed by postal workers and their supporters, McDermott received a standing ovation om the paperworkers before and after he spoke. His message was upbeat: The NDP is gaining, not losing ground. Progressives won mayoralty races in Toronto and Ottawa this week. The NDP was reelected in Saskatchewan and the party has its first MP in Newfoundland because of a byelection win last month. "I don't see the swing to the right that everybody talks about," he said. "If you are an intelligent leftist, people will follow, if you can demonstrate good leader-ship, people will follow."

Saskatchewan Liberals thought there was a swing to the right and tailored their provincial election accordingly, he said. "They believed in the myth and they ran galloping down that path and were completely annihilated." In Nova Scotia, the Liberals went the same route and were defeated by the Conservatives, with the NDP increasing its vote, the CLC president said. Turning to his crystal ball, he predicted B.C. and Manitoba will be back in the New Democratic fold soon, and with careful planning and hard work, Ontario could go NDP, too.

Speaking a few hours before Finance Minister Jean Chretien's budget speech, McDermott said labor is fed up with being blamed for the country's economic ills.

Instead, the public should consider the "capricious, infantile, irresponsible, UFAWU call dangerous activities" of the last several federal finance ministers. One day they want restraint, the next they want people "to spend, spend

JEAN CHRETIEN

How tough is he

year in what is likely Canada's toughest political job, Jean Chretien is still trying to maintain the toughguy image that he has carefully cultivated in his first 15 years in politics.

"When you are minister of finance, you don't expect to be nice to people," Chretien said recently. "Zou do what is right."

In spite of the rhetoric, Chretien is expected to have a little sugar and spice in today's budget for the common folk, with personal income tax cuts ranking high among the list of possibilities.

Less than six months ago, the finance minister, under heavy fire for rising prices, widespread unemployment and record spending deficits, was telling Canadians they would have to learn to "take it on the chin" until the economy improved.

And last summer, Chretien— who has also held

Indian affairs, treasury board and industry and trade during his political career— announced the most drastic federal government' spending retrenchment of the Trudeau decade.

Since then, the 44-year-old Shawinigan, Que., native has been under strong pressure from a variety of sectors to bring in tax cuts and incentives in his second full budget to renew the vigor of a slow-growth economy. Chretien took over the onerous finance portfolio in September, 1977. The economy was in trouble then and there is debate now whether it has improved much since.

Latest figures show little change in the inflation and jobless rates in 14 months; interest rates are much higher, putting a dampening effect on Zthe economy; and the dollar has dropped eight cents relative to its U.S.

Political critics have come down hard on Chretien's handling of the economy. They say statements he has made, especially about the plight of the dollar, show he is incompetent in his job and that he lacks fundamental knowledge about economics.

During his tenure, Chretien has had to scale down his earlier forecasts of the country's economic growth, which he initially tabbed at five per cent, and of the merchandise trade surplus.

He has also had to revise upward his estimates of inflation, at first six per cent and now about seven per cent, and the government's cash deficit.

Chretien's lengthy dispute with Quebec over federallyproposed retail sales tax cuts in the budget last April occupied much of his time.

Ultimately, after quarrelling with Quebec's finance minister, Jacques Parizeau, for three months over the province's formula for the tax cuts, Chretien decided to pay taxpayers in the province direct federal rebates of up to $85. Today's effort will be the fourth major economic statement since Chretien took office.

On Oct. 20, 1977, Chretienin what he later referred to as a mini-budget-revealed the future of wage-and-price controls and unveiled an income tax cut of $100 concentrated in the first two months of 1978.

That move seemed to have Kuldo little impact on the economy, so he adopted the sales tax cut proposal.

The third major statement came in two stages. On Aug. 24, he announced family allowance and pensions changes as well as a delay in a scheduled increase in oil prires. The second stage was the breakdown of the $2.5 billion in spending cuts revealed Sept. 8.

downtown businessman on the prairies, winter often brings grim reminders of the popularity of his suburban competitors, warmly ensconced in large enclosed shopping centres.

Even hardy prairie folk, it-oust be admitted, do not lightly undertake shopping expeditions along frigid, wind-whipped streets.

Calgary, however, does not lightly tolerate problems that can be solved with a dash of innovation and its abundant money.

The city, in effect, is removing the problem by turning its downtown core into one huge, complex mall.

In the coldest weather, shoppers and lunching clerks can already wander over much of downtown in their shirtsleeves, using glass-sided skywalks 15 feet above the icy streets.

In the six-by 12-block downtown core, 15 such connect skywalks now

The walkways are more than just bridges between office buildings—they are part of a coordinatedsystem of small shops, services and even a large indoor park.

Instead of taking the stroller past antiseptic second-floor offices, the walkways are lined with boutiques, restaurants, and other shops.

And, at intervals along the route, there are two-or threestorey open courtyards that form mini-mails and invite the stroller to descend to the first level.

The system is decidedly not growing by accident.

Elderly characters are not often thought of as the mainstavs literature.

But Prof. Abrahms said there is a wealth of novels, poems and films which responsibly treat aging, such as Shakespeare's King Lear, Thomas Mann's Death in Venice, and some of the poems of Dylan Thomas and William Butler Yeats.

Literature can dispell some of the stereotypes about the elderly, Prof. Abrahms said. She hopes her literature course reaches not only students but also adults.

The works confront "the loss of partners and friends through death or illness, the and society, and the im-prisonment within a de-teriorating body," that can accompany aging, she said.

"It isn't all gloomy, because there are so many triumphs," she added. The old fisherman, for instance, reaches home with only the skeleton of the mighty fish in tow, but the villagers respect this evidence of his great accomplishment.

"It has so much to do with the problem of self-esteem,' said Prof. Abrahms, herself a published author.

"All the protagonists in these works are old people, and you see all facets of aging and society's attitudes."

She said characters surrounding the protagonists of the works helped readers understand the problem.

'roiano's career

You've got to be brief to try to cram the changes that have occurred in the career of guitarist Domenic Trojano into one paragraph.

At 17 he replaced Robbie Robertson in the Ronnie Hawkins group. He moved on to play in The Mandala, formed Bush, recorded a couple of solo albums in 1970-71 and then got a couple of breaks that considerably enhanced his reputation.

He replaced Joe Walsh in The James Gang and staved for a couple of albums before filling the guitar chair in the then-failing Guess Who.

The man practically wears the evolution of the pop and rock music scene in this country on his sleeve and yet he claims not to think much about it.

"That's all past tense to me," he says. "I did it and it was fun and I enjoyed it ... but its history.

Englishman's sunshine is sacred, or so court rules

MANCHESTER, England (CP) - Three Appeal Court judges have ruled that if an Englishman's garden fence casts a shadow on his neighbor's greenhouse the neighbor can sue him for cutting off the sunlight.

'This means that your neighbor's unripe tomatoes are legally entitled to their place in the sun," a court spokesman says.

In a test case under England's ancient lights laws, the judges ruled that a householder is entitled not only to sufficient daylight in his house for domestic purposes, but to sunlight in his greenhouse as well. They decreed that Hubert Allen and his wife Marjorie of Rochdale, Manchester, could stop their neighbors, Tyrrell and Lilian Greenwood, obstructing light by means of a high fence.

The appeal judges overruled a lower court ruling that the Allens could not claim for loss of sunlight. The lower court judge found that although the Greenwoods had been "exceedingly un-neighborly," they could neighborly," not be sued.

Ruling that Greenwoods could be sued, Lord Justice Goff observed:

"It seems an absurd conclusion to hold that a person is entitled to enough light to read a book in a greenhouse, but is stopped from bringing an action for nuisance if he goes to pot up plants that won't grow and pick fruit that won't ripen." Lord Justice Goff said the Allens moved into their detached house in Rochdale in 1954. The greenhouse had been there ever since The Greenwoods moved in next door in 1966 and in 1974 they put up a high, closeboarded fence. The result was that half the greenhouse got no sunlight at all.

He found that, in law, greenhouse was clearly a building to which access of light applied under the 1832 Prescription Act. The Allens therefore were entitled to stop the Greenwoods from obstructing light.

The appeal was allowed with costs and the Allens were awarded & 100 ($200) damages. The Greenwoods gave undertakings to remove or reduce the Lord Justice Buckley refused the Greenwoods leave to appeal to the House of Lords in London. "If this case goes to the Lords, the greenhouse is going to be a very ex-pensive hobby for Mr. and

Mrs. Allen.' Outside the court. Allen said: "I brought the action as a matter of principle. It is a great legal victory for gar-deners."

dock. The weight of his boat against the Marymont was too much. I guess," Kimball says. "We hit the dock pretty hard. I think that's what weakened th mast."

It broke off at a hinge and he says it can't be repaired.

"I'm not going to give up," he says. "It'll take a while but I'm gonna try 'er again."
Kimball says the trimaran's sails, in a high wind, should work like a weathercock.

"According to an aeronautical engineer talked to, they are supposed to be 1.7 to 1.9 per cent more efficient.

The big advantage, he says, is that one man should be able to handle the trimaran, which is 41 feet long and 24 reet wide.

Kimball and his wife Mary, bought the hulls in an unfinished state, and have spent five years building the boat. He spent about a year on the sails, plywood-andglass-fibre affairs

There is a need for programming for pre and junior-teen watchers children's programs is not serious education, but

Miss Robb, who developed the consumer program Marketplace early in the 1970s and was its executive producer until 1977, doesn't expect to jump into making major changes in the area of children's programs.

She spoke of having a fallow year that may be forced upon her by CBC budget cuts. While she said relaxing shows emphasizing no decision has been taken, other CBC sources indicate it is likely the program day will be cut back starting early in 1979, possibly with the network not going on the air daily until noon.

Miss Robb writes books and plays for children as a pastime, and said she expects to continue to write in her executive position. She will be searching, mean-while, for new writers for children's programs as part of her new job.

If all goes well with the CBC budget, Miss Robb said she would like to see an hour or more a day, in the late afternoons, devoted to programs for the six-to-12

Such programs could include Rainbow Country and The Beachcombers, already on CBCTV, and new programs which might also be sold internationally to other networks. The Beachcombers has become one of CBC's biggest foreign sellers. Miss Robb said it is a misconception to think that writing for children is easy. In live theatre, it is more difficult to hold the attention of a junior audience than adults.

The same principle, she says, applies to television programs. Young people are far more imaginative, quick to grasp ideas, and quicker to show their discontent than aduits

Prince in the action

Prince George, once a remote frontier town, is now a rapidly life growing city smack in the middle of all the action.

The long arms of the Yellowhead Highway, Hart Highway, and old Highway 97, stretch out from her, like spokes, towards adventure.

Variously called Spruce Capital of the World, Hub City, or City of Destiny, Prince George is almost in the geographic centre of British Columbia. Discover British Columbia There's still gold

WHITEHORSE (CP) Eighty years have passed since the first frenzied cries of "gold!" echoed along the wilderness creeks of the

The creek bottoms have been panned, mucked and dredged so often that it is hard to imagine the tiniest molecule of gold having gone unnoticed.

Gustav Schmid knows better. His company expects to take 40,000 to 80,000 ounces of gold next year from one of the Klondike's former goldfever hot spots.

He says the gold will be taken simply by applying modern techniques that follow the laws of physics.

Schmid is an international financier who operates out of Liechtenstein and West Germany. He and some Swiss financiers put money into a placer mining operation in 1975 and formed B. E. L. Yukon Establishment.

> The Klondike gold seekers the method has not changed much. Large operations now dredge up gold creeks, push huge amounts of gravel into large sluice boxes and pick out the gold.

> Schmid's company began using the conventional sluice method on the Sixtymile River. He visited the operation and decided it was not producing enough gold.

> He says he ordered the crew to put a front-end loader bucket at the end of the sluice. Washed out gravel caught in the bucket was panned and Schmid's suspicions were confirmed there was more gold in the gravel tailings than in the sluice box.

"From that day on I Was concereed about improving the technique of recovery.

His discovery made sense. The modern sluice box operations were handling large pieces of gravel and the water pressure needed to them also was carrying away the smallest pieces of gold.

Schmid says he put the problem to a number of German industries and after various studies, he came up with a design for an improved placer mine plant.

The new plant basically is a series of hoppers, conveyors and screening systems. Gravel is scraped into the system by heavy screened and washed so that in the final process all that is left is a concentrate of various heavy metals, gold among them.

concentrate shipped to a mint for melting nd separation. It is the key to the entire operation.

"We are not looking only for gold," says Schmid. "We are looking for heavy metals. The moment you look just for gold, you lose all the other heavy minerals."

The first Klondike gold seekers wanted only chunks of gold, and later the dust. The dredging operations that followed also were after gold Schmid says the income from the other heavy minerals should at least cover the expenses of operating the plant. The gold then becomes pure profit. He estimates that the new plant produces four times more gold than a conventional sluice operation.

"With this plant we have been able to revolutionize the technique of placer mining,' he adds.

B. E. L. Yukon expects to build about 10 new placer plants in the Yukon during the next two or three years, says Schmid. It was considering joint ventures with miners who have placer claims but who do not have. the money to build a plant.

Wheelchairs held up

Production of a Canadian-developed, fourwheel-drive wheelchair is being held up by strict United States liability laws. A project of the federal transport department and designed by Berezowsky Associates, the chair promises to alleviate the problems of many handicapped persons.

But Doug Ball, president of the Montreal firm, says fear potential lawsuits is holding up production.

"The risk of liability is so significant in the U.S. it has an adverse effect on the development of new products," Ball says. "It's scul-wrenching-there are people out there who need the chair," he added in a telephone interview.

The principal U.S. manufactuer of conventional U.S. electric wheelchairs faces a lawsuit on an average of one a week, Ball says. Possibility of similar problems is delaying Canadian manufacture.

the wheelchair must reach U.S. markets.

To be economically viable Panic

TORONTO (CL) -Pill panic is the name given by control manufacturers and family planning experts to the growing wave of those turning away from its use. Birth control pill sales to hospitals and drugstores are down 13 per cent this year, according to Ortho Pharmaceuticals, one of the big contenders in Canada's $20 million annual pill market. As women go off the pill, there's a shift toward other contraceptive methods, say birth control counsellors. In older age groups, ster-ilization now is the first choice for women who give up the pill. Other women are turning to intrauterine devices (IUDs), despite a two-percent failure rate and complications reported as high as 30 per cent.

Still others are going back to methods their mothers used: 34 ,000 diaphragms sold in Canada last year—an increase of 100 per cent since Condom sales-26 million in Canada last year-are up nine per cent since 1974.

"We need the biggest market base possible," Ball says. Canadian demand for the product is not large enough to cover production costs.

Developed under a $55,000 contract from the federal government, the wheelchair can climb curbs, ride escalators and raise the rider to eye level.

To surmount a step the machine tilts back allowing the front wheels to clear the step. The two rear wheels then swivel backwards and propel the chair up and over the obstacle. The prototype is equipped with speed control and, because each wheel is independently powered, it is easily steered. The chair can raise the rider to the height of a standing person, allowing him to reach pay phones and elevator con-

In tests the machine has run through foot-high grass, up 30-degree inclines and over ice and snow.

Conventional motorized wheelchairs sell for $,600 to $1,800 and Ball hopes that once the new chair is in production it will cost no more than $2,000.

The device will not be available to consumers for at least one or two years. Ball would like to see it manufactured in Canada but to date there are no firm committments for produc-

Tension and ulcers are there the links

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — A professor from the University of Sydney's department of medicine believes he has proved that ulcers are not caused by stress and neuroses. Prof. D. W. Piper's study of 1,000 people suffering from ulcers showed that they did not suffer stress more frequently and were not more neurotic than persons without ulcers.

It also found more sufferers from the lower economic classes than the executive classes. But this data led to a paradox, in that many of the working class people lived in higher socioeconomic areas than their jobs would indicate.

'This may produce tensions and conflicts in the patient that may initiate a trail of events that lead to ulcers," the professor said. The survey found that 70 per cent of gastric ulcer sufferers were not getting effective treatment.

MUCH WAS JUNKED

Quebec antiques become rare

QUEBEC (CP) - The massive pine china cabinet, its wood purpled original an blueberry stain, is becoming an increasingly rare artifact of early

Similarly the rickety chairs, hand-planed tables and other itemsfrom Quebec's pioneer past, some of them colored with beet or carrot juice or with soot and animal fat, no longer can be picked up by the truckload for a pittance in rural Quebec.

For this society, which as recently as five or 10 years ago was literally throwing out historic furniture or chopping it up for firewood, has embarked on a binge of preservation and "antique" collection. Althoughantique dealers are grumbling at the way prices have risen, the provincial gov-ernment is increasingly its cultural affairs department budget to buy and restore historic properties in a bid to make Quebecers aware and proud of their past.

The $16-million budget for preservation of historic sites, including almost $6million for purchases, is up 25 per cent this year from 1977.

The payoff may be in the changing attitudes and tastes of Quebecers, suggests University of Laval psychologist Bernard Pocreau.

The stereotype of the middleclass Quebec buyer of chrome and plastic decor who rejected Canadiana is giving way to a new interest in traditional wooden furniture.

"People perceived

... and their environment and situation as without Pocreau explained in an interview.

It was only normal, then, in a society whose leaders had encouraged French-Canadians to stay on the farm, whose strong religious beliefs had encouraged them to accept their earthly state, for Quebecers to covet the trappings of the richer

"There was an identification with the dominating class and the chrome furniture and plastic which represented (for poorer Quebecers) success," Pocreau said.

"Now there is a feeling of strength which people are aware of. The feeling of weakness is disapand being pearing and being replaced by a feeling of sureness in belonging to a

The upshot of this search for Quebec's roots, however, has caused major price increases for the few pieces of antique or Canadiana furniture remaining in Quebec, dealers say.

Antique expert Jean Palardy, in his 1965 book The Early Furniture of French Canada, wrote:

"Vandalism and fires were responsible for the loss of fourfifths of the furniture and objets d'art of early Quebec ...

'French Canada had barely emerged from the pioneer era before the colonists began to get rid of things which reminded them of their humble

Lorraine Lemieux, an antique dealer in the Quebec City suburb of Ste. Foy, recalls that "15 years ago people just gave the things away."

Living in Ottawa as recently as 1967, she saw truckloads of Canadiana being hauled out of the province for Ontario buyers. American dealers were also active, par-ticularly in the Beauce region south of Quebec City and close to the U.S.

Pickings now in rural areas are relatively slim, she says; and the sturdy pine tables, chairs and the massive freestanding cupboards or wardrobes command high prices.

Farmers, whose children are bused into city schools where they see such old furniture refurbished in expensively decorated houses, no longer clear their barns of such items at bargain prices.

Max Bouzigon, a cabinet maker specializing in restoring antiques for a Quebec City dealer, says items which could have been purchased for $60 only a lew years ago now bring

"You can still find things, but most of the good items are gone and you have to accept a lot more restoration," he

One indication of the growing interest by Quebecers in their heritage furniture is the distribution of provincial cultural affairs department literature.

An illustrated catalogue of the more than 300 buildings or sites officially classified historic by the govern-ment sold out its 2,-300 copies in four months this spring, notes Paul Aubin, director of documentation for the cultural affairs department.

"People are no longer satisfied with arriving in front of a house and saying, 'Oh, it must be old.' Now they're asking for information."

The oldest Protestant chapel built in Canada, located at Berthlerville about 60 kilometres northeast of Montreal, is being restored by a local historical society.

Not only does it demonstrate the interest in preserving Quebec's history, it also indicates an evolution in mentalities, says Aubin. "Twenty-five - years ago, it would have been unthinkable in Catholic Quebec to do something like that with a Protestant chapel," he says. Quebecers' changing tastes in furniture and cultural . preservation have created problems, however. Andre Ladouceur, who operates a furniturestripping refinishing business in Quebec City, says some of his clients are showing up with supposed antiques which, when stripped of their coats of paint, turn out to be plywood.

Aside from antiques or Canadiana, he notes, many Quebecers are simply deciding they like the touch of natural wood and even fairly modern pieces of furniture are being stripped and refinished.

"People keep their old things now since the quality of the wood is better," he says.

However, he balks at the purist approach to antiques which requires they be finished with bee's wax and not be repaired with modern materials.

"Let's face it, not everything forefathers did was perfect, since they didn't have the same materials available as we do to-day," says Ladouceur. Chemical and liquid plastica can provide a more durable finished product, he maintains.

Ladouceur began his company restoring an-tique and other furniture for the Chateau Frontenac Hotel here four years ago but decided two years ago to offer his services to the public.

The result has been 3,000 clients. About 10 per cent bring antiques, the rest simply old furniture they wish restored to a natural finish.

Another spinoff of the cultural shift here has been the development of a market for reproductions of traditional Quebec fur-

Claude Fortin of Hull, Que., president of Les Meubles d'Antan (Furniture of Yesteryear), says business has doubled every year since he began making and marketing the reproductions four years ago.

"It's a growing market but limited by the cost which is still relatively high," he says. "We could present them as antiques, we could pass them off as that, but we prefer to put them out as new pieces." Traditional pine and oak are used exclusively following the dimensions and working styles of oldtime craftsmen, Fortin says.

COMING FROM CHINA

Hong Kong sees tourists

Hong Kong, capitalist gateway to China, is poised to reap rewards from its giant Communist neighbor's new tourist boom everything from hotels to hovercraft.

Already the first historic link has been made: China agreed to organize special charter flights from the British colony for Western businessmen visiting the nearby Canton trade fair recently, the first such passenger service between Hong Kong and the mainland since the 1949 Communist takeover.

During November, a Hong Kong company is to start a maritime service to Canton about 130 kilometres away, with a fleet of British-made hovercraft.

A group of companies in the colony also is negotiating with Peking over the possible construction of a string of hotels across China. Of those who witnessed the to some estimates. More than tourists—mostly Hong Kong Chinese—visited China in the first half of the year and Peking's official People's Daily agreed that tourism was important.

GOURMET GADGETS MAKE CULINARY CHORES A CINCH

If you're "into" gourmet cooking, you should give yourself the benefit of the right tools in your kitchen. A number of ingenious gadgets are now available as alternatives to the more complicated, energy-guzzling devices of the past.

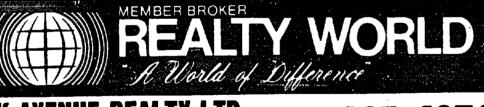

No well-appointed kitchen should be without a serrated-edge, all-purpose slicer. Designed to fit smoothly in the palm of your hand, the device adjusts three ways, forming a cutting tool for super-thin or thick slices of raw or cooked foods. For tenderizing meat and mincing food favorites. this tool is a must.

It's fun to make souffles and elaborate casseroles with the new four-piece "cook and serve" groupings available at most department stores. These sets include hollow post, trivet, three-quart and one-quart dishes. When used with the post, the larger dish easily doubles as a tube pan, using its smaller counterpart as a cover. The trivet is also convertible, becoming a steam cooker for special culinary treats.

Are you a microwave cook? Treat yourself to microwave accessories. If your budget allows, you'll want to buy several of these practical cooking and baking implements, made of durable, dishwasher-safe plastic so as not to interfere with the oven's operation.

DEAR ABBY: I am 29, college educated, single by choice and considered a very attractive woman. My problem? I am a victim of discrimination.

Until I became a blonde a year ago, I never realized how much blondes were discriminated against. Especially good-looking blondes. If a woman happens to be blonde and good-looking, she is immediately labeled as dumb. And if she's blonde, good-looking and has a great figure, she is automatically written off as

Abby, I am the same person I was when I had brown

Abby, I am the same person I was when I had brown hair, but people (women as well as men) react totally differently to me since I became a blonde.

I am tired of fighting the "dumb blonde" image, and have considered going back to my natural color, but I like my hair this color. Please print this with some suggestions on how to cope with unfair stereotypes.

NO DUMB BLONDE

DEAR BLONDE: Intelligent people do not use labels or stereotypes. Neither do they discriminate against people because of the color of their hair, eyes or skin. Consider yourself lucky to be able to eliminate the bigots and boobs in a hurry.

ABBY: About 15 years ago you ran a most inspirational poem titled "Slow Me Down, Lord". I read

t often as a constant reminder to slow down to more fully enjoy life's simple pleasures. Today, when people seem to be rushing around more frantically than ever, that poem is even more timely. Will you please run it

ANNA IN MONTANA

DEAR ANNA: With pleasure. I agree, it deserves a re-run:

Ease the pounding of my heart By the quieting of my mind. Steady my harried pace With a vision of the eternal reach of time. Give me.

Admist the confusion of my day, The culmness of the everlasting hills. Break the tensions of my nerves With the soothing music of the singing streams That live in my memory. Help me to know

The magical restoring power of sleep. Teach me the art Of taking minute vacations of slowing down to look at a flower; or chat with an old friend or make a new one;

or pat a stray dog; to watch a spider build a web; or smile at a child; or to read a few lines from a good book. Remind me each day

That the race is not always to the swift: That there is more to life than increasing its speed. Let me look upward

Into the branches of the towering oak And know that it grew great and strong Because it grew slowly and well. Slow me down, Lord And inspire me to send my roots deep Into the soil of life's enduring values

That I may grow towards the stars Of my greater destiny."
