

Mrs. J. Proctor Passed Away This Morning

The death occurred at three o'clock this (Friday) morning of Mrs. Alice Jane Proctor, wife of James Proctor, of Hazelton, in her 66th year. The late Mrs. Proctor had been ailing for some time and for several weeks had been a patient at the Hazelton Hospital, where she passed away. Death was not unexpected, and this knowledge has somewhat softened the blow to the sorrowing relatives, with whom goes the general sympathy of the whole community. She leaves to mourn her loss, beside her husband, one son, Rev. T. D. Proctor, of Hazelton, and a brother in Devonshire, England.

The deceased had not long been a resident of Hazelton, having accompanied Mr. Proctor there from Manchester, England, in May of this year, but had made herself greatly liked by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance.

The funeral will take place on Sunday from St. Peter's Church, and interment will be made in Hazelton cemetery. The service will be conducted by Rev. R. E. W. Biddell, rector of St. James' Smithers.

The New Developments in China

GENERAL FENG

By Rev. A. N. C. Pound

Feng Yu Hsiang, the Christian general, is now in charge of Peking and the surrounding district. Yesterday Wu Peh Fu was the most powerful general in China, but now his days seem to be numbered. Though his forces were successful in capturing Shanghai, yet he has been repeatedly defeated by his great northern rival, Chang (or Djang) Tsao Lin, who is advancing southward, with his hardy northern troops. Still worse for him is the fact that two of his generals have turned against him, Feng Yu Hsiang and Sun Yo.

The writer met General Feng Yu Hsiang eight years ago and heard him preach to a large gathering of men in the Chengtu Y.M.C.A. in West China. He is six feet tall and weighs nearly 200 pounds. He impresses one as being as strong intellectually and morally as he is physically.

When a private in the army 24 years ago he witnessed the Boxers killing some missionaries and was deeply impressed by the remarkable courage and self sacrifice of a young girl, Miss Morrell, of the American Board, who pleaded for her fellow missionaries before a mob of Boxers. When unsuccessful she finally said, "Let me die for the others: slay me, but spare them." They were then allowed to escape, but were later slain. On another occasion Feng had a bad ulcer, which the native doctors only made worse and charged him $60. The missionary doctor cured it and charged nothing, only reminding him that he was sent to heal by the God in Heaven, who loves the Chinese people.

Years after this Feng was converted at the great meetings held by Dr. J. R. Mott in Peking. Since that time he has been promoted in the army, and his manly courage and kind dealings have made him famous with both friend and foe, in West and Central China.

When in Central China 9,000 of his 11,000 troops were baptised Christians. Twice a week his officers meet for Bible study. They conduct open-air meetings. There is no money spent on smoking, drinking, or gambling among these Christian soldiers. Three hundred women of ill-repute were driven out on their arrival at Sin Yang, in that part of China. When one considers that most other soldiers in China are robbers and transgressors of the vilest type, these men are a striking contrast. One of his

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT JASPER

H. R. H. THE PRINCE OF WALES spent a delightful day in the Canadian Rockies when he visited Jasper National Park, where he was a guest at Jasper Park Lodge. Here he is shown being greeted by Col. S. Maynard Rogers, Park Superintendent, on the arrival of his special train at Jasper Station on the Canadian National Railways.

Honor Memory of Late Bishop at St. Peter's

A memorial service for the late Archbishop DuVernet was held in St. Peter's Church, Hazelton, on Sunday morning, October 26. There was a large congregation present of both whites and natives to pay their respects to the departed prelate. Rev. T. D. Proctor, who conducted the service, spoke under strain, choosing his text from St. John, XVII, 24: "Father, I will that they also, whom Thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold My glory which Thou hast given Me, for thou loved it me before the foundation of the world." He pointed out how the archbishop had tried to do his Master's will in accepting a call to the Christian ministry, and especially in answering a call to the then comparatively wild West from an Eastern city. In striving to fulfill his Master's desire he has had to submit to His last wish, that those whom He loved might be with Him. This meant several months of sickness, but he had learned to say "not my will but Thine be done."

The loss of Archbishop DuVernet, said Rev. Proctor, is a great loss to the church and to Canada as a whole, for although very humble, his was a great mind, as a scholar and teacher, as a scientist and psychologist, as a Bishop, true pastor, leader and guide, a sympathetic and kind friend to all.

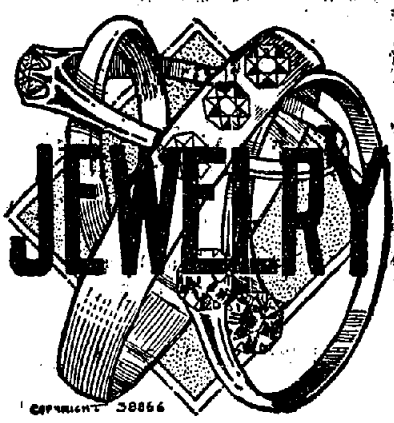

The text, which was our Lord's Prayer, is the prayer of all.

The minister then referred to the Bishop's last sermon in Hazelton, in January, when he spoke of the "tuning in" of people's hearts to the voice of God as they "tune in" on the radio.

Sunday's Sermon

On Sunday morning last Rev. M. W. Lees, of Smithers, occupied the pulpit in the New Hazelton church. The congregation was small. He had as his subject "Missions", and stated that he would devote himself to the home mission work of the church. Before getting to his sermon he prayed for divine sympathy for the people of New Hazelton. During his sermon he criticised the impression held by the masses in regard the church, and he criticised secret organizations. He closed with an appeal for help for the missions, although he did not expect to get much from this community. He hoped, however, that what the people here lacked in material wealth they would make up in spiritual wealth.

Large Orchards Will Pay

An opportunity is opening up for the Skeena river valley fruit growers, particularly those growing apples and other large fruits. The Peace River country will be one of the greatest wheat producing and mixed farming countries in the world. The products from there will reach the coast and the world markets through Prince Rupert and will go through the Skeena Valley. One of the chief factors in determining the route of the first railway from that country will be the prospect of return loads for the grain cars and the Skeena Valley is capable of producing apples and other fruit and fruit products to fill up many of those cars.

Apples are always in demand in a northern climate, much more so than in the south. Apples are a great health regulator and are good for all members of the family. Apples enjoy a long season and are easily kept and stand transportation better than any other fruit. Skeena river apples will compete successfully with the southern apples on any market. The Skeena Valley is all adapted to apple growing. Those who get their orchards planted now will be ready to take advantage of that new and profitable market. If the apples are not grown here the Okanagan will pick off the business.

But there is no use planting a dozen or so trees. That day has gone. Those first few small orchards have served their purpose. Thousands of trees are needed, and those orchards will return a bigger and a surer dividend than does the average mine.

A Tax That Retards

When one reads of the many millions of dollars paid in income taxes by Rockefeller, Ford and other Americans, it is natural to think of the personal property tax in British Columbia which is so unreasonable that no one can afford to carry personal property unless it is a revenue producer. Thus Magoffin, Guggheims, Foley Welch & Stewart and other operators and contractors move all plant and equipment that can be moved out of the province and then let the government take for taxes what is not worth moving. That system is not proving to be the best from a development point of view.

One freight train a week is the service being given on the Rupert branch of the C. N. Railways. Settlers and business houses must order a month in advance of requirements. Some service to give ourselves.

Opinions Apparently Differ

Rev. Mortimer W. Lees, of Smithers, undertook last Sunday to tell the people of New Hazelton where they were wrong and how they should change themselves to conform to his ideas of what the Christian Church represents. He first expressed sympathy with the people here, presumably on account of their having to live in the most picturesque spot on the American continent with a climate and natural resources exceeded by none, and while he did not think he would get much money to help on his mission work, he did hope that the spiritual wealth of the people would compensate in some measure to offset the lack of material wealth.

Rev. Mr. Lees did not make the impression he set out to make. In the first place, New Hazelton people are not asking him for sympathy nor for his prayers for sympathy from other sources. The people here stand on their own feet and do their own praying. In the second instance, the material wealth of the local people will compare very favorably with that kind of wealth in his own or other towns in the north. Thirdly, the contributions to missions from the local church will compare favorably with the contributions, per capita, of his own congregation, while the spiritual wealth of New Hazelton has not yet been aired in the police or other courts.

The Laws of B.C.

The revised statutes of British Columbia will come into effect on Monday, Nov. 3. There are three volumes. They can be purchased from the government for $24 per set. If you break one of those statutes you must suffer the consequences. Ignorance is no excuse. All you need do is to send $24 to the attorney-general's department for the three volumes, then sit in the house and read and study them. By the time you have learned what you may or may not do the statutes will have been revised again. Unless you follow the above formula you must take a thousand or more chances of going to jail or paying a fine.

When prohibition is the law in a province for any length of time the government of that province gets into the control of the bootlegger and home-brewer, and henceforth the men and women have nothing more to say about what they do or do not want. Look at Ontario, where the farmers, villagers and small-townners all make their own cider, wine and rye whiskey, and make a good profit supplying their neighbors and passing guests.

A Vancouver paper admitted a week or two ago that the sun had been seen there for several hours one day, and took some inches of space on the back page to tell about it. If Vancouver ever saw a sunrise such as we see here, the papers would use the whole front page to tell about it.

PAT O'HOOLEY

FLAPPERS

"TIS hard-sleddin' a man has these days if he wants t' git shaved in a barber shop," said Pat O'Hooley, leaning against a pile of ties and addressing Donovan and his crew of section men. "Ut used t' be bad enough t' listen t' th' barber's chatter. Ivery wan had a ling of his own; but ut was he-man talk an' ye got hardened t' ut in toime. Now ut's all different. Ivery toime ye go in t' git yer whiskers amputated there's a bunch of flappers loined up in th' chairs an' their prattle would drive ye nutty.

"Mame," sez Nora, 'shall I git me hair plain-bobbed, shingle-bobbed, Fuzzy, King Tut, or Kalamazoo? Don't ye think I'd look th' cutest iver in a Kalamazoo?"

"Naw," sez Mame, 'wid yer lip half-covered wid whiskers, why don't ye be original fer wance an, invint a style av yer own? Let th' hair run down alongsoide yer ears, shade ut up gradually, clip th' soides of yer bean, an' give the top a roach—ye moight break int' th' movies as a maniac or a bad-actor of some koind."

"Whust!" sez Nora; 'Moind yer long tongue! Can't ye see there's min all about us watchin' and listenin'?"

"I can," says Mame; 'an' if they had wan spark of th' gintleman about 'em—if they had the least bit of common dacency—they wouldn't be sittin' here gaffin' at us while we're making our toilets. I'm thinkin' ut shows their bringin' up!' says she.

"Huh!" says I to meself. 'Twas not so long ago whin a barber shop was for min—an' the lid was off; but now ut's a ladies' bowdure! I'm thinkin' this is no place for Pat; an' out I goes. While I'm standin' by the dure watchin' me chance t' duck back in at the roight toime, along comes Mother Cahill—an' she's wise at wan glance.

"Hello, Pat," sez she, wid a grin, 'Fwhat's stein' ye? Yer lookin' pale, an' yer knees are knockin'. Was the flappers too much for ye?"

"Not exactly, mam," sez I, 'Ut's cooler out here."

"I'll say the air is fresher, anyhow," sez she, wid a sniff. 'What wid their powder puffs, lip-sticks and parfumery, ye can smell 'em a block. Look at the little whiffets! Ivery day, lower an' higher! Bare chists, bare backs, bare knees, rolled-down stockin's, an' dresses ye can rade a noospaper through! I'm thinkin' th' gals of today are going to th' divil intoirely. If me old dad had caught me wid wan of thim rigs on whin I was at home (an' there was no fear of ut, fer I'd fallen dead wid shame t' aven think of puttin' on such things) he'd harse-whipped th' skin off me back an' rubbed salt on ut.

Ivery wan of thim whiffets should be put in jail fer indacent exposure!' sez she.

"Don't spake so croole of th' gals, mam," sez I. 'They moight be a lot worse. They're purty high-g geared. I'll admit. They're steppin' on th' gas, an' they're goin' some; but they're rollin' on balloon-toires an' they're hittin' on all six. If I was thirty years younger—or aven twinty—th' very divil in th' little scamps ud set me heart thumpin',' sez I.

"Well, I didn't think ut of ye, Mr. O'Hooley!" sez Mrs. Cahill, wid her nose in the air. 'But ye're a man, an' they're all like putty whin there's a woman in th' case."

"Maybe so," sez I; 'but there's always two ways of lookin' at anythin'. At least, th' gals are no sham. Whin a lad puts his arm around a flapper, he hasn't a doubt as t' th' size of her. She's all gal. There isn't an ounce of cotton, excelsior, or old rags t' mislade anywan—an' many an Old Boy was badly soaked in the Long Ago. What wid hoops an' corsets an' bustles an' hip-pads an' balloon slaves an' false hair, a man gettin' married was offerin' himself fer a sacrifice wid his eyes shut. He had no more idjee fwhat he was twinv' up wid than buyin' a pig in a poke,' sez I.

"Pat O'Hooley, ye are an old idjit!" sez Mrs. Cahill, contimptuously. 'You an' all th' rist of ver koind may rave an' excuse th' brazen things all ye loike—that's yer business an' ye'll have t' answer fer ut—but, thank hivin! I was born at a toime whin Modesty was th' crownin' virtue; an' young gals was all as innocent as whoite doves,' sez she.

"Yes, mam, they was. I wouldn't contradict a word ye are sayin' fer th' world, Mrs. Cahill," sez I. 'That's not me style. But jist th' same—maneing no offence, mam—I'm thinkin' that th' gals of today, as th' Pote savs, are purty much sisters under their pajamas to th' gals of yisterday. As fer the little whoite doves ye spake of, I used t' know a whole lot of 'em. Some of 'em was near an' dear t' me, mam; but they're angels now an' have bin fer these forty years,' sez I."

"What did the old hen say to that?" asked Donovan, cupping his hand over a match and lighting his pipe.

"Nothin' that I could translate int' words," said Pat, with a broad grin. "But she whirled on her heel, an' she goes up th' strate makin' signals loike a tom cat whin ye rock on ut's tail."

Memorial Service

Rev. T. J. Marsh held a memorial service in the Anglican Church, Terrace, last Sunday evening for the late Archbishop DuVernet. A large congregation gathered to honor his memory. Rev. Marsh took as his text "He Being Dead Yet Speaketh", and spoke with much feeling of the friendship which existed between the Bishop and himself during their fifty years of acquaintance, and paid an eloquent tribute to Archbishop DuVernet's wonderful work for his church and his people.

Death Called Well Known Terrace Lady

On Sunday, October 26, death claimed one of Terrace's most esteemed residents in the person of Mrs. W. G. Jones, who passed away after a prolonged illness.

The funeral was held from the Anglican Church on Tuesday at 2 p.m. from the Anglican Church at which the Women's Auxiliary, of which the late Mrs. Jones was a valuable member, attended in a body. The Rev. T. J. Marsh conducted the service and took his text from I. Thess. IV. 13, "I would not have ye be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope." He spoke very feelingly of her as a friend, a neighbor, a wife, and a sister, and of the sunshine she cast despite continuous suffering. The pall-bearers were W. H. McDonald, H. A. Swain, Geo. Powers, F. C. Bishop, Arthur Carr, Godfrey Hamlin. The casket was covered with flowers, among those sending floral expressions being: The Women's Auxiliary, cross; Mrs. Geo. Hipp, wreath; Mrs. Cole, cross; Family, cross; Mrs. Bishop, wreath; Mrs. Geo. Little, wreath; Mrs. Marsh, sheath; Mrs. Gilbert, sheath; Joyce Cole, spray. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family.

The funeral arrangements were in the hands of Mr. Morris, of the B. C. Undertakers, Prince Rupert.

The late Mrs. Jones, whose maiden name was Emma Blanche Tyler, was born at Gibraltar in 1875, and moved to England while still young. She was one of a large family, but all had predeceased her, except one sister, Mrs. J. I. Jones, who has been nurse and constant companion during her trying illness. The two sisters came to Canada in 1916, and were married to two brothers, settling in Wainwright, Alta, where they spent the first four years. They moved to Terrace in 1920, and bought land and established their permanent home. Two years later the deceased, being in poor health, consulted a specialist in Seattle, where she underwent an operation and for a time looked as if it had been successful. However, she gradually weakened and was in bed during the past year, during which time her patient suffering and unselfish disposition endeared her to many friends. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, W. G. Jones, an adopted son, Arthur, 12 years of age and Mrs. J. I. Jones.

history's pages. "Have you looped the loop around the Mediterranean?" is a phrase much in vogue, and each year thousands of wanderlust folk are able to say "Yes!" and wish that they were going to loop the same old loop again.

The "Empress of Scotland," if a big steamship of 25,000 tons gross register and 37,500 tons displacement, could be interviewed, would say that she was departing on her fourth annual cruise of the Mediterranean from New York on Feb. 9, 1925, and that although she could find her way around in the dark she would much prefer daylight so that she would not miss any of the wonderful scenery of the Mediterranean. Passengers on the "Empress" will see Madeira, then drop in to pay a call upon Lisbon, Portugal, as well as another call upon Cadiz, Spain, with Seville as a side trip. Gibraltar, the famous "Rock", next gets the once over, and then Algiers, capital of the French colony of Algeria is visited. Athens, Greece, Constantinople, and the Bosphorus are next, and when the ship visits Beyrout and Haifa all the famous places of the Holy Land are within a short distance of the vessel. "The storied Nile" awaits the "Empress" and 12 days are spent in seeing the cities of Alexandria and Cairo, the Pyramids, the Sphinx, etc.; then Naples, Pompeii, Rome, Monaco, Cherbourg, Southampton and other places. One can see a lot in 62 days in and about this cradle of civilization, and that's the job of the big oil-burning "Empress of Scotland." The biggest vessel in the world. Can you see the cities

The Mediterranean was once the whole world from a mariner's standpoint; to-day it is but a small part of the marine world, but when the traveller of this century passes through the strait of Gibraltar and makes a tour of the gateway ports covering Algeria, Greece, Turkey, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, Italy and Monaco he has visited the very birthplace of the world and seen most of the things he has longed to see from early youth. Wanderlust is in every breast, young and old, and to-day the world is on the march, seeing strange peoples and visiting places looming large on

Mrs. Pound entertained a few friends to tea last Monday afternoon at the parsonage.

At the close of one of his own addresses to his men, General Feng said: "Our country is in so hopeless a condition from bad men in high places that were it not for my faith in the Lord Jesus Christ I would give up all, and spend my remaining years in a hermit's cell." One man described General Feng's camp to a Canadian missionary thus: "It seems to me that Heaven is going to be like General Feng's camp, where everyone treats you like a brother, and all are full of the works and praises of the Lord
