DC 9sgiven height limit

MONTREAL (CP) - Air Canada has ordered pilots of its DC-9 class 32 aircraft to fly no higher than 25,000 feet although the jets normally fly at 35,000 feet.

"Flying at 25,000 feet means less pressurization and eases the stress on the aircraft," airline spokesman Ray Guerin said Wednesday. "But it is more expensive in fuel.'

A Transport Canada spokesman in Ottawa said the move was taken to reduce the risk of explosive decompression while rear pressure bulkheads on the DC-9 fleet are being strengthened.

The order came as the airline intensified inspections on its 43 DC-9 class 32 aircraft after a neardisaster Monday when a jet dropped a three-metre piece of its tail cone into the Atlantic Ocean.

In the investigation, airline engineers reviewed xrays taken last May of the plane's rear pressure bulkheads.

They showed a small crack which may have expanded, causing the accident.

Munson, Canada's director of aircraft maintenance, said his department's first priority will be to find out how and why the flaw shown on the x-ray was overlooked.

"Frankly at this point we don't know. I can only say that even in the x-ray plate, the fault is difficult to detect. The main reason we were able to find it on this second examination is that this time we knew precisely where to look and what we were looking for."

A second series of inspections of Air Canada's DC-9s this week turned up faults in a plane in Ottawa and another in Toronto. They had tiny cracks in what the airline described as a lowstress area around some metal clips at the rear of the aircraft.

Both planes were immediately flown to Air Canada's maintenance base in Montreal for repairs and were expected to be back in service within a few hours.

During the first inspection of the DC-9s, cracks were found in the rear pressure bulkheads of two other aircraft, one in Regina and another in Halifax. Air Canada has ordered daily visual inspections of the bulkheads and halved the time between x-rays of the affected part on all its class 32 DC-9s. When the planes come in for normal maintenance, the airline plans to strengthen their bulkheads.

Baby whale fighting for life in new home sperm whale named Florence was swimming, spouting and fighting for its life in pool at the Seattle Aquarium on Wednesday after beaching herself on the Oregon coast.

Marine biologists said there was little chance the four-metre whale would live. They didn't expect her to survive the 500-kilometre, 11hour trip to Seattle.

"We didn't expect it to survive to Portland, much less Seattle," said Michael Bailey of the Greenpeace Foundation in Portland. "It's just a baby, two or three days old. Chances aren't good but it's swim-ming, and that's against all odds, too."

The whale stranded itself at high tide on the beach near Rockaway, on the Oregon coast west of Portland Tuesday afternoon, he

Bailey said when he arrived at the beach people at the scene had already tried to roll the whale back into the surf but it beached

Dr. Tag Gornall, a mammal veterinarian with the Marine Animal Resource Center in Seattle decided to take the animal to the aquarium on the Seatte waterfront, Bailey said.

As the trailer carrying the whale was lowered into a salmon holding pond at the aquarium and she started moving her tail, one of the Greenpeace group said they wanted to call her Tenacity.

"Florence," responded Gornall.

Gornall said he was surprised his patient was alive. He said her chances for survival were "probably

ON FOG

Pilots take the gamble

PORT McNEILL, B.C. before being flown to Van-(CP) — Pilots flying into northern Vancouver Island airports often gamble that morning fog will burn off by time planes arrive at their destinations.

It usually does, but it didn't Tuesday. As a result, four men died and five were injured when a twin-engine plane crashed into a steep hillside in heavy fog about 20 kilometres south of here.

The victims were identified as pilot Ray Crandall, 53, of Nanaimo, B.C., Grant William Horsman, 22, of Port Alberni, B.C., Daniel Mallette, 50, and Peter Grant, both of Victoria.

The survivors were flown Vancouver General Hospital.

A hospital spokesman said
Wednesday that James Common of Nanaimo and George Popplestone of Ladysmith, B.C., were in poor condition with serious burns. Three others - Dan Preshyon, 22, and Anthony Vasha, 28, both of Cor-nerbrook, Nfld., and Ernest Deer of Victoria - were in satisfactory condition with minor burns. The Pacific Coastal Airlines plane had started its flight in Nanaimo and stopped in Comox before lifting off for the 270-kilo-metre flight to Port Hardy.

Preshyon and Vasha. who said they survived because they were sitting near the rear of the 10-seat Britten Norman Islander, said ssengers were told before takeoff that fog in the Port Hardy area was expected to burn off before noon. However, the plane entered thick fog en route.

They said in an interview in Vancouver that the pilot swerved about for 10 minutes in an attempt to find clear

"He kept going," said Preshyon. "He panicked. This is strictly my opinion anyway.
"He just headed straight into the fog and kept going."

"The pilot said 'Oh my God' when he saw the trees,' said Vasha.

Don McGillivary, president of the Nanaimobased airline, said there was fog in the weather report before the pilot took off, but it was expected to clear before the noon arrival. It didn't clear until about 2

"Ninety per cent of the time it clears by noon. Pretty well everyone counts on that and flies accordingly.

McGillivary said the plane was equipped with instruments, but was flying on visual flight rules, the usual procedure for planes on such routes. He said pilots aren't supposed to fly in fog, but "When she crashed, she ignited about a second after she hit," said Preshyon.

"That's all we could do was "My shirt was on fire when we got out. We were in a lot of pain, but we were glad we survived."

Preshyon made his way down to a beach, about 450 to 600 metres below the crash site, where he was picked up by a fishing boat. There is no road access to the crash site so rescue workers were taken by boat to a nearby beach and slashed through bush using chainsaws, said search and rescue spokesman Dick Pepper.

It took the 15-man team about three hours to travel between three and five kilometres to reach the injured. The survivors were taken to hospitals in Port Hardy and Port McNeill

Natives protest planned pipeline

VANCOUVER (CP) - embodied Yukon Indian leaders have served notice on the National Energy Board that they will intervene in its hearings on rival applications by Trans Mountain Pipeline Co. Ltd. of Vancouver and Foothills Oil Pipeline Ltd. of Calgary to transport oil from Alaska.

They will ask that no certificate of public convenience and necessity be granted to the Foothills company, says a notice prepared by Vancouver lawyers for the Council of

The Indians have also given notice that they will ask when the proceedings open Oct. 2 in Ottawa for immediate adjournment and a rescheduling of the hearings in Whitehorse and Vancouver.

The application will give support to a request made by 10 B.C. environmental groups that the hearings be reconvened in Vancouver. An affidavit sworn by Dennis McCrea of the Vancouver law firm of Rosenbloom, McCrea and Leggatt, declares that the people most directly affected by the pipeline applications all live in the Yukon, B.C. and Alberta. The notice of intervention prepared by Donald Rosenbloom, lawyer for the Yukon Indians, points out that the council is presently engaged in negotiations with the federal government towards a comprehensive settlement of their land claims issue.

"These negotiations have not yet been consummated in a settlement, nor is one anticipated in the immediate future," the notice says. 'The lands which are proposed Foothills corridor (generally along the route of the Alaska Highway and the proposed natural gas pipeline as well) are lands claimed by the Council for Yukon Indians on behalf of the Yukon people.

"It is indisputable that the construction of a pipeline through these lands will have a large influence on the course of future negotiations, and on the resolution of the natives' claim to aboriginal title." However, the notice says the Indians' interest is not limited simply to the issue of land claims.

"The interest of the Council of the Yukon Indians in the pipeline issue is, therefore, clear, direct and dramatic," Rosenbloom

Speed limits may go up

VICTORIA (CP) — Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday it is time to look at highway speed limits with a view to raising them. Fraser said British Columbian motorists generally are driving faster than the speed limit and the fault may be with the speed limit itself and not the drivers.

"I've tested it myself and at 80 km-h, you're the last one on the road because everyone is going by. They make me feel like I'm standing still."

Drivers get radar warning

Police radar in Kitimat has succeeded in cutting down the number of injuries resulting from traffic accidents and traffic patrol officer Phil Eafton says the RCMP detachment intend to continue its use of

"We decided at our last staff meeting to let the public know about our intentions this week to concentrate on school zones by means of the radar,"he said. Eafton was appointed as a full time traffic officer on April first.

"It was damn time we had a traffic section here in Kitimat because some of the driving is atrocious," he commented. Since Eafton has started his job, statistics indicate a rapid decline in the number of accidents resulting in injuries , though the total number of traffic charges is sharply up over a year

"Most of these are radar charges, and basically the enforcement level has increased dramatically in Kitimat." Statistics reveal 135 charges were made in August of this year, as compared to only 44 in August 1978. The figures further reveal that 35 per cent of the accidents in 1978 resulted in injuries, that figure dropping to 9 per cent this year.

Eafton is not concerned with the high level of charges, "I think the trend will be for a high level of enforcement, and it will gradually ease off as people learn to comply with the rules," he said.

"The whole idea of radar is trying to get voluntary compliance with the traffic laws, and so far it seems to be working," Eafton said.

Secrets Act to get revamped

OTTAWA (CP) — The antiquated Official Secreta Act is to be overhauled in the spring for the first time in 40 years, an advisor to Privy Council President Walter Baker says. Revision of the act, which has come under attack from civil libertarians, politicians and newspapers during the last year, will be the second stage of Prime Minister Clark's plans create more open government, said Tim Raife, adviser to Baker on freedom of information.

A bill giving Canadians access to government in-formation collected at taxpayers' expense is Clark's first priority when

The Offinial Secrets Act. based on a 1911 British statute, was attacked this year by an Ontario judge who called it vague, am-biguous and unwieldy and urged it be rewritten.

Although aimed at espionage, the act is drafted so broadly that it could be held to prohibit public servants from telling the public authors. anything, a study done for the Law Reform Commis-sion of Canada said last

The act makes it a crime to make public any document with a confidential or secret stamp on it. The governstamping everything secret was carried to the extreme a few years ago when the RCMP transmitted a newspaper article from Vancouver to Ottawa in code.

Ontario Judge Carl Wals-berg, in throwing out charges under the Official Secrets Act against the Toronto Sun last April, ruled that simply stamping a document top secret did not

He rejected the govern-ment's contention that a document published by The Sun was top secret. Sixty-seven copies had been cir-had been used in a national television broadcast and had been discussed in the House of Commons on three days before The Sun article was published.

The government's classification system will be superseded by the freedom-of-information bill to be introduced in the Commons next month, Raife said in an interview.

Under that bill, a judge would be able to decide whether documents the government wishes to keep secret should be made public. "The judge won't care how it is classified, he culated to government will care what it says," Ralfe departments, the document said.

When it revises the Official Secrets Act, the government is expected to remove a provision permitting secret trials.

The public was excluded from the trial last year of Montreal engineer Peter Treu, who was charged with having copies of documents he himself had written in what is believed to be the first trial in Canada ever conducted entirely in secret.

Treu's conviction was later overturned, but Clark vowed it would be the last trial of that sort. "There will be no more secret trials in this country," Clark said in April,

The freedom-ofinformation bill and a new secrets act would eliminate the phrase 'national security," a term which is used in dozens of federal laws, although it has never been defined. Many civil libertarians say the term has emasculated the section of the Canadian Human Rights Act designed to let individuals look at federal government files on themselves.

Under that law, 23 data banks, including those of the RCMP, are exempt from public scrutiny on grounds of national security.

NEWS BRIEFS

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jake Epp acknowledged Wednesday that living conditions on Indian reserves desperately need improvement. But more study of problems and possible solutions was necessary.

Natives give cautious ok

MONTREAL (CP) — National Indian leader Noel Starblanket expressed cautious enthusiasm over a federal government decision Wednesday that could give Indians a greater voice in policy-making decisions on health matters. Starblanket said there are still "loopholes that require further explanation" but said these will be dealt with by an Indian specialist slated to join federal Health Minister David Cromble's staff shortly. He said more information is needed on the removal of tough guidelines that forced Indians to pay for uninsured services that were previously free and the government's failure to ac-knowledge health care as a right of all Indians.

SAYS JANEY BOOTH

The college has a cure for you

Janey Booth

by ED YUDIN HeraldStaff Writer

Looking for a cure for your backache or better yet the common cold? Or maybe you want to learn more about the harmful effects of stress on the human condition, or your own wretched condition for that matter.

The Northwest Community College is once again inviting the public to attend its health eduction workshops and courses. eduction

The courses are organized by the Health Advisory Committee. Janey Booth, a committee member says the programs range from professional seminars on back care to workshops on stress aimed at the layman.

"Our courses are usually well attended, ranging from 20 to 50 people. We're trying to coordinate these types of programs, so that we bring people together rather than have fragmented programs," Booth explained.

The programs have suffered from a lack of publicity in the past, a problem the committee is now attempting to circumvent. In order to find out what people's concerns on health are, a study on health education priorities has just been

"The results show that people's priorities have changed over the last two years. For example the survey showed a new interest on anxiety and stress. Two years ago the interest in that area was very low," she added.
"Another example is emergency care, which didn't even register in the earlier study. It is now a concern in Houston and the Queen Charlottes where some people were lost and feared to be suffering from exposure during the winter," she noted. "Our findings show there is a perceived need for a long term care aid program - which is a shift in home delivered care from community based care such as the hospitals.

The survey results will be used to design new workshops to serve the needs and interests of the public. The committee studied the results of that survey at its meeting Friday

The committee also had input on the Anik B long distance education program at the college. In fact the only course which has received a good enrollment so far, the nursing seminar program, was "100 per cent our project" according to Booth.

The committee sponsors the 12 to 15 courses and seminars at different sites in the Northwest, including Kitimat, Terrace, and Prince Rupert. Currently an anatomy of physiology review is being put on for nurses in Kitimat, while the long distance program for nurses at the Terrace campus will soon begin. The general orientation is changing somewhat.

We're trying to develop regional courses with a local input. In the past we've brought in some top people from outside the area to lecture, but with everyone's budgets being cut, it costs more money to bring these people up here. We're trying to make better use of the resources availabe," she concluded.

well known for its fantastic recreational potential," said

Gillespie is also concerned over the lack of public information on Kemano II. I feel that both Alcan and the provincial government have been less than open with the public," he added. 'No decision to go ahead on the project has been made,"said Brian Hemmingway, public relations manager at Alcan.

An environmental impact study on a four seasonal basis is currently underway, said Hemmingway. Results of the study will not be available until next year, he added.

Residents of the area are concerned with the negative "If we did go ahead we effects of the project on the would not be insensitive to Nanika-Morice river system the environmental needs.' Hemmingway said. Bulkley, whose flow would be reduced by 25-45 per cent at Quick, said Karen Careless spokesperson for

No hard data is available at this time on the project and Alcan hopes to meet with the residents of the area when further developments occur, he said.

The STB group is working in conjunction with other organizations in Houston and Burns Lake in an effort to increase public awareness of the area's natural beauty and how it would be affected by Kemano II.

Mushrooms are money for the picking

By DONSCHAFFER Herald Staff Writer

Terrace residents have been blessed by the elements with a chance to make a few dollars, according to Elaine Inouye. The area from here to Smithers is a prime. mushroom, for which there is a tremendous market in

"If people are interested now, they can go out picking and make a hundred dollars or so a day if they want," Inouye said. And if they are careful, the area can have a perpetual yield of 10 to 20 tons per year of these muchrooms, and that means a lot of money."

The pine mushroom is very common in the Terrace area, and is easily distinguishable from poisonous varities found in the area. However, as with any mushroom picking great care must be taken by the picker to ensure that he is getting what he is looking

The pine mushroom has an overall white appearance, with the cap sometimes becoming cinnamon-tan. The cap is rounded, and up to centime tres (10inces) across. The flesh is white and firm, and has a spicy odor. The gills (underside of the cap) are crowded and broadly notched where they attach to the stock, and stock has a ring left by the breaking of the inner veil. The pungent, aromatic smell of the pine mushroom is easily distinguishable. The pine mushroom is commonly found near pine, hemlock, fir and spruce trees, and is especially fond of the sandy soil in this area. This year's crop of the mushroom is three to four veeks late, due to the dry-August, Inouve said but started to appear last weekend. Several determined pickers made close to $100 last weekend and more money is to be made by those who wish to put on their hiking boots and look. "We gave lessons to about 150 people a month ago, expecting the mushrooms to be out by then,"Inouye said. "Those people who didn t be out a month ago." Inouye wants to emphasize that respect for the crop must be maintained, as the mushrooms are very delicate and their root system could easily be ruined.

The mushrooms grow in mossy areas beneath the pine and hemlock trees. If the moss is disturbed, the root system could easily be destroyed, resulting in the disappearance of the mushroom crop.

When picking mushroom, pull and twist the cap and stem away from the ground. Do not cut the root off, as some mushrooms are sold fresh, and will consequently bring a higher price. After the mushroom is picked, fill in the hole Take great care not to disturb the moss. The mushrooms grow in a sevenyear cycle, so that if they are harmed now, that will finish the crop for a long

If you are picking large amounts of mushrooms, hold them in low, flat containers so that the container, not the mushrooms, are supporting the weight of those on top. Do not place the mushrooms in plastic bags, as the combination of weight, heat buildup and trapped moisture can quickly spoil your harvest. Only pick the firm ,white mushrooms. Feel the stalk before picking. If the stalk is mushy this means worms have gotten into it and it is worthless. Do not pick overmature mushrooms. These will spoil before they can be shipped. They should be left in the ground to aid reproduction of the species. Over-mature mushrooms are brown, infirm and mushy.

The Japanese buyers of the crop have stressed that they will not bring in any outside pickers. They want the mushroom harvest to remain a local industry, and do not wish to interfere with it as such. Inouye feels that this is very important, as it should, with proper crop management, bring a lot of money into the Terrace area in the future.

The Inouyes met with Shigouri Tamiya from Japan, and came up with a good price, along with information about the types of mushrooms in demand in Japan. The most desirable mushrooms abve caps 10 centimetres(4 inches) or less across. Biggers mushrooms are acceptable, but are not sold as fresh and are therefore less valuable. The stalks must be firm.

Samples are required immediately for buyers from Japan to bid on. The price now being paid in Terrace is $10 per pound for firm, white muchrooms, until 100 pounds en østhere Terrace area. After that. when the buyers have set their prices more firmly, and when the mushrooms become more plentiful, the price will drop to $4.50 per pound.

"It's very important that people realize that these muchrooms are delicate," "We have Inouye said. reports from pickers that mushrooms, have been kicked over or stepped on, that the moss they grow in has been dugup, and that all sorts of other mushrooms that don't even look like the white ones have been damaged. There really isn't any need for that, and if this kind of thing is going to happen, then the crop here will be destroyed quickly and no more money will come into the area.''

Inouye feels that the Terrace area has great potential as a high yield area for these mushrooms. She cited totals that came from different areas of the province last year, and said that it is possible that Terrace will match or ex-

The RCMP here will tell you that complaints about dogs in the Thornhill area are almost a nightly occurance.

The complaints are frequently parents with young children who have been chased or harassed by the animals.

The police will tell you that it is very difficult to convince the father and mother of a small child who is hysterical with fear that shooting all the dogs in the vicinity isn't the answer. Privately, however, some policemen sympathize with those who would shoot loose dogs.

It is also just as difficult for the police to convince the owner of what is to him a friendly family pet that the animal has just been involved in an incident viewed as an attack.

Whether the animals which can be seen running free belong to neigh-borhood residents or are in fact strays, the community had best look at ways to deal with dog control before there is a shooting in which someone gets hurt or killed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear sir:

Re: Comment, Sept. 17,

Keep up the good work. This was beautiful.

Mr. Thomas Atrill does not impress me as a man who thinks, now knows the background of news items. He also seems to enjoy his ico crance.

Mrs. W.R. Hatch 1476 Albatross Ave.

Reading 'Editor's Journal' c' the eleventh, I couldn't help being struck by the hypocrisy of the NDP, the anadian Labor Council and local 'heavy', Paul Johnson, in their boycott of Chilean anods. It is common knowledge that these so-called labor types welcome imports from any repressive regime so long as it is not anti-communist. At the same time, they rant and rail against Chile, South Africa, Rhodesia and any country that dares to try to curb the spread of Communism. It is also common knowledge that they were very much in favour of Allende's regime in Chile, repressive and destructive as it was, simply because it was known to be Marxist

As a long time union member, I resent this intrusion into international trade and commerce by union bosses, and I further resent the implication that the labour movement is so involved. In fact the NDP does not command the support of the majority of union members, nor does it speak for unionism in general.

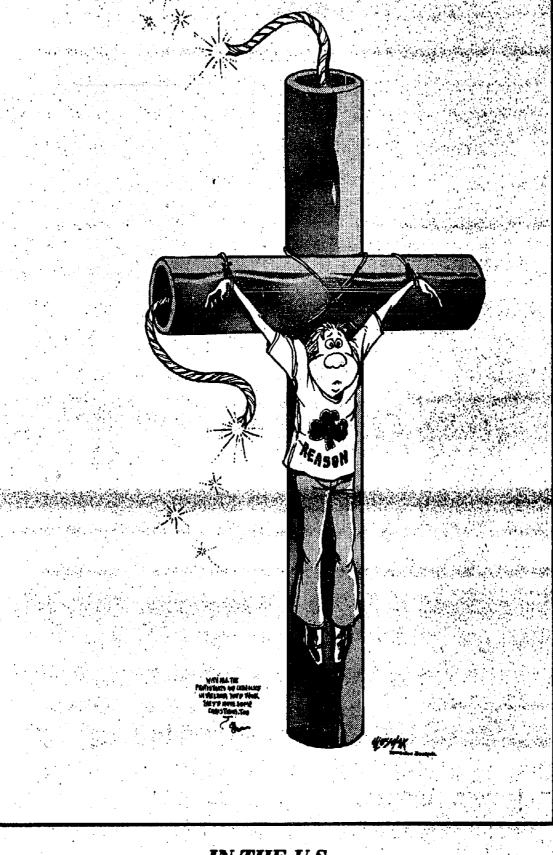

Most union members are too, intelligent for that.

Your truly,

Atrill Thomas

Military spending is up

WASHINGTON (CP) The U.S. senate put a tough face on its anxieties about the world balance of power when it voted this week in favor of significent increases in military spending. In a dramatic though symbolic demonstration of concern about the strength of Soviet forces, the Senate approved a non-binding resolution calling for annual increases, after inflation. of five per cent in the 1981 and 1982 Pentagon budgets.

The senators, whose attention has been focussed on the relative strengths and weaknesses of U.S. and Soviet forces as a result of the debate over the strategic arms limitation agreement hetween the two superpowers, also approved in a separate vote a three-percent real increase for the 1980 defence budget.

If the Senate's ideas are enacted in the coming years, the U.S. defence budget could rise to $163.3 billion in 1982. This compares with the

By MARCUS R.DAVIS

The 1979 NDP convention took place in Vancouver over the Labour weekend, marked by a few highlights, and noticably lacking in confrontation and ex-citement. Perhaps the most noted event of the sekend was the one that never took place-the an-dicipated leadership race.

Spawned by party leader David Barrett's comments at the closing of the last session of the legislature, at the closing of the last session of the legislature. lingering expectations of a power struggle hung over members of the press and party delegates.

These expectations were dashed by the second day of the convention, however, when Barrett announced his intention 'the steam or and dight as londer of the his intention "to stay on and fight as leader of the party."

Appearing haggard and weary, the NDP's provincial leader continued his long-standing attack on the Social Credit government's affiliations with business interests throughout his 25 minute address. The former premier's desire to stay on as leader was enough to deter other hopefuls from vying for the position. With that crucial point aside, the convention was allowed to take on all the excitement of a bowl of plain yogurt.

Barrett's speech met with only a polite ovation, with the strongest applause saved for a later speech by federal leader Ed Broadbent.

Broadbent was refreshed and confident as he delivered a scathing attack on the Conservative government of Joe Clark. Citing a list of Tory campaign commitments, he expressed his opinion that There has never before been a government in this country that has broken so many promises to the Camadian people.

The 1,000 delegates and visitors gave their most enthusiastic ovation when their federal leader reiterated his position on the insue of Petro-Canada. This crown corporation should be given exclusive spiritual over all off imports and should become the dominant firm in the oil industry,"Broadbent stated. "In this field, above all else, we Canadians must become masters in our own house.

The NDP leader told the convention that the sitting of the House of Commons in October would see his party's caucus talking about the same issues to which they addressed their campaign. "We will press on economics, energy, and the need for a major war on unemployment," he promised, "New Democrats will be working in Ottawa to create an exciting and decent Same of grading

NDP delegates to the convention did not appear comfortable in the pompous surroundings of the Hotel Vancouver, being more accustomed to the university symnasiums which have hosted their past meetings. The party's decision to hold this year's affair in the hotel was a bone of contention with a number of delegates, and was seen as an attempt to present a "middle of the road image."

The lack of any major theme to this convention denied the party's aplinter groups the opportunity to organize. As a result, the convention hall was dubbed the "rubber stamp room" by a number of elegates.

While it is difficult for a part to maintain its enthusiasm following two disappointing elections, the NDP will certainly have to come up with a reasonable facsimile if it is expecting to launch an effective attack on the provincial government.
What was observed on the Labour Day weekend was the hesitancy of a party in search of a new direction to turn, not the image necessary for a party waiting to govern:

June is past, so is July, August is ended—likewise I. The pattering feet of summer and sun Are over, complete, exhausted, done! I've fed the young as well as the old, I've cooled the warm, I've warmed the cold, The wounded and weeping I have consoled, The tender and touchy I have cajoled. I have steeled the scared, I have scared the bold. I have bit my tongue till it was controlled. DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man who has never cared much for the company of men, but he sure likes the ladies! Whenever we are with a group of friends or relatives and the men congregate in one room and the women in another, you can always find Herman With the women.

He also has a cute way of turning the conversation to the subject of sex, or something risque. He's 55 and not going through any kind of change. He's always been this way.

My women friends are always telling me how "lucky" I am to have such an entertaining husband. Believe me, he's not all that entertaining when he's alone with me. (All talk, no action, if you get my drift.)

If you've ever heard of behavior like this before, I wish you'd explain it.

We have always been very close, but now our relationship seems to be headed in another direction. We have done a lot of wrestling, touching and fondling, but so far nothing more.

We have talked about this and have come to the conclusion that because we are technically sister and brother, we should not have any physical feelings for each other. Yet we can't help how we feel.

What is morally right in this case? We are not blood relatives, so maybe if we let our feelings go, we could maribitate and Speaking your mind may be each other some day.

What do you think? each other some day.
What do you think?

BROTHERLY LOVE

DEAR BROTHERLY: Although you aren't blood relatives, you are LEGALLY brother and sister. That could create a problem should you want to marry later on.

Cool the wrestling, touching and fondling. Physical contact could lead to a physical relationship which would be morally wrong at your ages. You both need to talk to a trusted adult about your feelings: I would hope you could discuss this with your parents. If not, then a clergyman, physician or counselor. You ask some intelligent questions and deserve some konest answers.

THURSDAY

Pirates stay ahead Boston attack with a pair of Pittsburgh Pirates remained two games ahead of Montreal Expos in the National League East pennant race as both teams won the openers of twinight doubleheaders Wednesday

Pittsburgh railied for three runs in the eighth inning and five in the ninth to post a 9-6 victory over Philadelphia Phillies.

Manny Sanguillen's two-run triple broke a 6-6 tie in the ninth after Dave Parker had opened the inning with a double, Willie Stargell singled him in and was replaced by pinch-runner

Matt Alexander.
Alexander stole second, moved to third on a groundout and scored on Bill Madlock's single. Ed Ott walked, Phil Garner flied out and Sanguillen hit for winner Kent Tekulve, 10-7, driving his triple. He later scored on a throwing error by Mike Schmidt.

Meanwhile in New York, Tony Perez drove in a pair of runs and scored another and Ross Grimsley picked up his first victory since June 26 as the Expos defeated New York Mets 3-1 in the first game of their NL doubleheader.

Perez drove in a run in the first with a double to right and another in the fifth with a bouncing single that Mets third baseman Alex Trevino could not handle. He singled and later scored in the seventh on Ellis Valentine's double-play grounder.

Schmidt's seventh-inning grand slam had given the a a 6-0 setback behind the fourhit pitching of Ross Baumgarten. Meanwhile in American League, Texas Rangers stopped Oakland A's 9-4 with a six-run third inning in which 12 Rangers came to bat. Bob Stanley tossed a three-
