

Home construction a roll

TERRACE — Last year's boom in city residential construction is continuing, says city permits director Bob Lafleur.

He's estimating that as many as 90 and possibly 100 single family homes will be built here this year.

"In all of 1992, we had 82 single family units. This gives you an idea of the demand," Lafleur added.

The pace of single residential units is running ahead of last year.

Single residential permit approvals at the end of May stood at 55 with a value of $7,332 million.

That's an increase over the 45 permits, valued at $5,775 million, approved to the end of May 1992.

Overall, 92 building permits have been issued to the end of April for a value of $9,95 million. There were 91 permits worth $12,059 million issued to the end of May last year.

"We are down in total value. But you have to remember that we had Safeway last year and that represented a big figure and the Esso bulk plant," said Lafleur.

There have also been three duplexes and one-ten plex permits issued.

These, combined with other multiresidential units planned, could mean a total housing unit figure of 130 or 140 by the end of the year, Lafleur said.

"There are a couple of new subdivisions underway now with lots sold. If house construction starts, we could very well reach that total," he added.

Meanwhile in the Thornhill area, there have been 10 single family and five modular (including mobile home) approvals issued up to the middle of May.

Total listed value is $1.3 million.

Regional district official Ted Pellegrino said there is a continuing demand for R2 lots big enough to contain duplexes for the rental market.

The area depends upon septic systems and that means lots of sufficient size for duplexes must be at least 1,400 square metres, said Pellegrino.

*****

A lot of the residential demand is being driven by continuing low mortgage interest rates, a reduction in down payment requirements and increases in value of homes owned by people who already live here, Lafleur said.

"Appreciation value is high — 15 per cent in a year here," he said.

There is also a continuing demand for spec homes, those that are built by contractors without first having a buyer.

Lafleur said those homes form an important part of the housing market, particularly for people moving into the city who want a wide variety of choice.

Fulton bids farewell to his political career

TERRACE — Retiring Skeena NDP MP Jim Fulton isn't sure where he'll be living but he knows what he'll be doing once his political career ends.

Fulton is starting a native and environmental issues consulting company called Westcoast Strategic Consulting Group Inc.

"I haven't been able to locate a suitable house or business location in Vancouver or Victoria," he said last week.

Fulton has picked either one of those two cities to reduce business travel time and costs but is keeping his residence on the Queen Charlotte Islands.

First elected in 1979, Fulton spent what very well have been his last day in the House of Commons June 16.

That was the last day of scheduled business for his current Parliament.

Yet incoming Prime Minister Kim Campbell could bring Parliament back briefly in the fall for some business before calling an election.

"Parliament could sit in September, October or November but the election must be held no later than February," said Fulton.

But he predicts that would only happen in an extreme emergency and that Campbell will opt for a fall election.

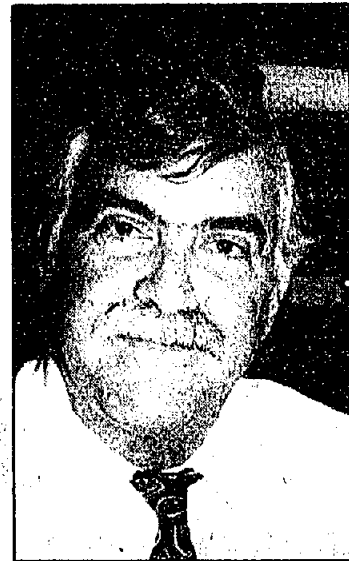

Fulton said his consulting company is a chance to use what he has learned over the years about environmental and native issues.

"I think a lot of this can be helpful, particularly in the economic sense. There are obvious opportunities. I've worked in the legislative and budget sense but now can do that in an economic sense," he said.

But in the meantime Fulton is working on closing up some of his constituency casework and ensuring that his successor has as few carry over files as possible.

He's sent a lot of material to the Parliamentary archives or to the Parliamentary library.

That doesn't leave him much to remove from his office when he does leave after more than 14 years.

Jim Fulton

"About everything I have is working material. As for personal stuff, I've got two drawers that I've chucked stuff in," said Fulton.

Native pull out "disappointing"

TERRACE — A construction company official says he's disappointed to hear that the Tsimshian don't want to have anything to do with the Orenda project.

Bob Marsh of Commonwealth Construction, the company Orenda has hired to be the general contractor, says it has been talking to unions to ensure natives are given employment opportunities.

The Tsimshian Tribal Council and its villages were to have been one of two native groups involved in studies looking at the impact of and economic benefits from the planned $500 million pulp and paper mill project.

But the council has pulled out, with one official saying there aren't guarantees of jobs.

Gerald Wesley said the tribal council was told the project would likely be restricted to unionized workers.

"In discussions with the carpenters union, for example, I know they had been discussing jobs with natives. Some of the natives are already union members," said Marsh.

"I know that they had been talking about opportunities to get journeyman qualifications or to be apprenticed if they qualify. To hear the contrary now is disappointing," he said.

"One of the few letters of intent that have been issued about the project is with a company controlled by natives," Marsh continued.

He was referring to a site clearing letter of intent signed last year with B-Mac Enterprises, a company owned by Mel Bevan, a former chief at Kitselas, and Wilfred McKenzie, a former economic development officer at Kitselas.

A letter of intent is not a contract. There have been three such letters signed to do with the project.

Marsh said Commonwealth has also talked with the labourers union about hiring natives.

"What we're looking for is to provide meaningful opportunities. We're looking for sufficient (contract) language with sufficient meaning to have participation," he said.

The underlying provision is that natives working on the contract become union members.

And, said Marsh, discussions have also centered around local residents being given a preference over people living elsewhere.

He said Commonwealth plans to have a full time labour relations official on site.

"This person happens to be a native Indian. He's worked in construction for some time and with Commonwealth on some projects," said Marsh.

The involvement of the Tsimshian and the Halsla of Kitamaal Village in the Orenda studies was a requirement of the provincial government when it gave the project approval in principle last year.

The forces park for free

TERRACE — In this city the armed forces reigns supreme — at least when it comes to parking on public streets.

That's because the Department of National Defence Act says so.

The act has authority over any municipal by-law regulating parking.

"It applies only to official business on public property," armed forces public affairs officer Gerry Pash said from Esquimalt last week.

The question arose after a station wagon used by armed forces recruiters visiting Terrace last week was parked on Lazelle Ave.

Recruiters use the Canada Employment Centre on Lazelle when they visit and place a Department of National Defence parking placard on the dashboard.

"It's the same situation as with an RCMP car or a consular vehicle. If on public business, the vehicle is exempt from parking by-laws," said Pash.

He described the situation also as courtesy between various levels of government.

Pash said there are two sections in the Department of National Defence Act giving the necessary authority.

But the same situation does not apply to parking on private property or lots, Pash added.

The news comes as the city tightens up its parking enforcement by increasing patrols and writing out tickets.

Hey. What a week

TERRACE — Yikes. What a week for politics.

Reform party leader Preston Manning pays a visit as does Gordon Gibson who wants to be the next leader of the provincial Liberal party.

Manning spoke to a noon hour crowd of supporters while Gibson addressed the chamber of commerce. You'll find those stories on Page A8.

There are two new entrants to the race to see who will carry the NDP banner in the next federal election.

Those stories on Joe Barrett, son of former Premier Dave Barrett, and Bill Goodacre are on Page A2.

Two people announced they are in the running for the federal Liberal nomination. They are Prince Rupert alderman Rhoda Witherly and Terrace resident Juanita Hatton.

Barrett's son in the race

Joe Barrett

TERRACE — Joe Barrett, 36, son of one-time B.C. premier Dave, is taking a run at the New Democrat federal nomination for Skeena.

Barrett's entry now means there are five people who want to fill retiring MP Jim Fulton's shoes.

He also intends to take up the outgoing MP's torch on issues such as the A-B line off-shore border dispute.

Describing the matter as "fundamental to Canada", Barrett said harassment of Canadian boats by the US Coast Guard and fishermen had to be stopped.

"I will continue the fight that Fulton began," he pledged.

Other major issues for Barrett are the effects of federal cutbacks on Canada Post and VIA rail services.

Pointing out there were communities in the Skeena constituency with unemployment levels of 20-25 per cent, he said, "It digs at the spirit of who we are."

"If you're defined as unemployed, you're defined as useless," he maintained, adding no one should be treated in that way.

On Kemano Completion, Barrett noted he had sent a letter to prime minister in waiting, Kim Campbell, asking that release all documents used by the federal government in its deliberations on the issue.

"Let's find out what happened," he said, "What are they afraid of?"

A temporary resident of Vancouver and eight months in Alberta prior to that, Barrett rejects the idea he's a "parachute candidate".

Whatever the outcome of the NDP nomination race, "I'm here to stay", he emphasized, explaining he would live in Prince Rupert and resume teaching.

Barrett has spent the past two years working as a membership organizer first for the B.C. NDP and then as a federal organizer in Alberta.

Since announcing his candidacy 10 days ago, he has visited the Queen Charlottes, Prince Rupert, Terrace, Kitimat and Smithers.

Tonight he'll be at an all-candidates meeting here.

Also declaring last week was Bill Goodacre, a Smithers alderman and member of the family which owns several Super Valu stores in the northwest.

And late last week, just in time for the nomination deadline, Christo Holmes declared. He's a Prince Rupert carpenter.

In the race for some time have been Terrace ironworker Norm Lavallee and Prince Rupert alderman and labour organizer John Kuz.

The nominating meeting takes place here July 3.

Smithers alderman enters bid to replace MP Fulton

TERRACE — A Smithers alderman wants to be the next NDP MP for Skeena.

Bill Goodacre, Smithers councillor and Super Valu clerk, says he decided he had to run when Joe Barrett, son of former premier Dave Barrett, declared his candidacy.

Barrett currently lives in Vancouver, but says he is looking for a place to live and work in the riding.

"He's a parachute candidate from outside the area," Goodacre said. "I didn't feel comfortable with the prospect of someone running who doesn't even live in the area."

This is Goodacre's second attempt at entering federal politics.

In 1977 he and retiring MP Jim Fulton were the only two candidates for the NDP nomination in Skeena.

Goodacre, a New Democrat party member since 1974, has worked on virtually every Skeena election campaign since he joined the party. In 1980 he was student society president at Simon Fraser University.

He served as president of the federal riding association in the '70s, and has had various executive positions since then, including secretary, treasurer, and vice president.

Goodacre has been on the New Democrat's provincial social services committee since 1984.

He Smithers council's chair of its environmental service and air quality committee, the solid waste committee, and the recreation, parks and culture commission.

Three Liberals want party nod

TERRACE — A former provincial Liberal candidate says she wants the party's Skeena riding nomination for the next federal election.

Juanita Hatton, who ran here provincially in 1991, made the announcement last week.

Currently the president of the provincial Liberal riding association for Skeena, Hatton has been a longtime fixture in Liberal affairs.

Hatton ran third during the 1991 provincial election behind the NDP and Socreds.

She collected 1,151 votes to NDPer Helmut Giesbrecht's 5,472 and Socred Dave Parker's 4,503 votes on election night.

The provincial Skeena riding takes in Kitimat, Terrace and Kitwanga while the federal riding stretches from the Queen Charlotte Islands to Telkwa and up to the Yukon border.

The nomination date is July 24 with balloting first in Prince Rupert and then here in Terrace where the count will take place.

Hatton said she'll wear the same dress that day she wore 20 years ago when nominating Iona Campagnolo. Campagnolo was the federal Liberal member for Skeena from 1974 to 1979.

"It still fits," said Hatton of the dress.

Juanita Hatton

Hatton is the third person to declare for the nomination.

Kispix Valley resident Mary McKenna Wilson announced earlier this year.

From Quebec, McKenna Wilson is fluent in French and moved to B.C. with her husband in 1977.

They first settled in North Vancouver and came to the Kispix Valley in 1983.

Also running is Prince Rupert alderman Rhoda Witherly, a long time Liberal.

She once worked for CBC Radio in Prince Rupert and now works at a land title search office there.

Witherly also served as a director of the federal-owned Prince Rupert Port Corporation when the Liberals were in power.

WHILE DEBATE raged on the fate of green belt just to the east, heavy equipment was busy last week felling trees in clearing a parcel to the north of Howe Creek which will one day become home to a new Centennial Christian school building.

Green space is defended

TERRACE — Houses or herons, fill or foxes?

That's the debate surrounding a local property owner's plan to build a new subdivision adjacent to Howe Creek.

Fred Kennedy of Howe Creek Investments wants to see his 10 acre parcel extending from Eby St. east to the foot of Skeenaview Drive developed for single family housing.

Kennedy's request for the required rezoning has been supported by the city's planning technician and its planning committee.

However, 25 Terrace residents turned up at last week's public hearing on the application to voice their objections to the proposal.

Wanda Fairless has lived in the neighbourhood for the past 15 years and says both residents and wildlife will be the losers if the area is built on.

"I'd like to see it remain rural," she said, pointing out the area was essentially marshland that supported "a great deal of wildlife".

That included a blue heron which had overwintered there for the past eight years and a family of foxes.

Many people, particularly children, also frequented and enjoyed the area, she added.

"Many years ago Vancouver had the foresight to set aside land," she pointed out, referring to Stanley Park.

Fairless suggested the time had come for Terrace to show the same foresight.

Christy Park soccer fields and treed area adjacent to Parkside school as examples.

However, Fairless said the green space provided by Christy Park is not the same thing she and fellow opponents of the development are talking about.

"It's designated for a select group, for soccer," rather than being an area anyone can enjoy,

The first involves the rezoning to allow the residential development sought by Kennedy. But before anything can be built there, the sub-division plan has to be approved by the city.

"We hope to negotiate with him (Kennedy) fairly strenuously at that stage", he pointed out. While he would not be drawn on whether that meant a specified buffer area, Talstra said, "There's going to have to be something.

And the developer doesn't disagree, Derrick Kennedy told the public hearing, explaining the plan was to dedicate some park along the creek.

Meanwhile, council has received another rezoning application for land adjacent to the creek.

Dick Coxford wants a multi-family residential designation given to property at the west end of McConnell Ave. he proposes to purchase. Coxford wants to build townhouses on the land.

With half its members absent at the last meeting, council has postponed a decision on Kennedy's application until its Monday, June 28 meeting.

"The city should basically buy this land and let people use it for what it is.".....Lori Merrill

Noting the owner had offered to sell the land to the city on more than one occasion, she maintained buying it would have been "money well spent".

While agreeing the purchase offer had been made, mayor Jack Talstra said such offers were not infrequent.

The question for council, however, was where the money to buy the land was to come from.

Talstra also said there was "a fair amount of parkland" in the area already, indicating the she explained.

Lori Merrill agrees the area should be left as is. "The city should basically buy this land and let people use it for what it is," she said.

Merrill is one of those circulating petitions seeking more support for that position. As of Friday, she said 125 people living in the surrounding Horseshoe area had signed up.

However, Talstra emphasized the sub-division process is a two-stage operation.

News in brief

Dave Parker elected

FORMER SKEENA Social Credit Member of the Legislative Assembly Dave Parker has been elected president of the Social Credit constituency association for Skeena. His election, and that of other executive members, took place June 13.

Joining Parker on the executive are past president John Le Sage of Kitimat, who is now vice president, Alex Inselberg, Chris Shaffer (who served as Parker's constituency representative when he was in office) and Fred Hislop.

Parker was elected in 1986. He was forests minister and minister responsible for northern development. Parker was defeated in 1991 by NDPer Helmut Giesbrecht. He now has a real estate licence, does forestry consulting work, operates a mining expediting firm with Shaffer and is studying for his appraisal licence.

New surgeon coming

TERRACE WILL soon be home to a new surgeon. Dr. Warrick Evans of South Africa has cleared his final federal immigration and visa requirements. He has also been accepted by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Dr. Evans will replace Dr. Donald Strangway, who is retiring after years of surgical practice here.

"We're looking forward to a seamless transition," said Terrace Regional Health Care Society chief executive officer Michael Leisinger.

Dr. Evans was recruited and interviewed by local physician Dr. Gillian Hodge during a visit to South Africa earlier this year.

"It worked out very well," said Leisinger of Dr. Hodge's chance to speak with Dr. Evans. "We think we have somebody who is well qualified."

Workers' Adviser visits

INJURED WORKERS or dependents who have WCB claims questions June 24 when a Workers' Adviser visits.

The adviser works for the labour ministry and is independent of the Workers Compensation Board.

Appointments can be made by calling 638-3200 and interviews will be held at the provincial access centre. Advice can also be had by calling toll-free to 1-800-663-4261. That phone number connects a caller to a worker adviser in southern B.C.

Hi tech education connection

A TELECOMMUNICATIONS group has been formed to bring together telephone, electronic mail, computer and video links for post secondary institutions in northern B.C.

The plan is to give students better access to information through technology and assist instructors and administrators in keeping in touch with events in other locations.

The first step is to establish telephone and computer links between Northwest Community College, College of New Caledonia, the Open Learning Institute and Northern Lights College.

Connections to the international "Internet" network will provide northern college access to electronic mail and databases throughout the world.

The University of Northern British Columbia will have the opportunity to link up once its campus facilities in Prince George are completed.

Those involved in the group say there will be reduced costs and a foundation laid for compatibility as new systems come on line.

Touchy issue

Of course it is far too early to start speculating about this November's municipal election but there is now the glimmering of an issue. And it's one existing council members or those wishing to run for office will probably want to do without.

The issue is development — the kind that backers want to go in on what have been the unorganized and unplanned green spaces in this city. These are the kind of green spaces that mark the difference between smaller cities and large urban centres, making them interesting and humane places in which to live.

The spaces become part of the fabric of the city and slumber along for years until an increasing population brings about the need for new subdivisions. It is a natural part of the growth of any city. But problems arise without any plan or vision of how a city should grow yet retain the liveable aspect of what makes smaller places so enjoyable.

Council is now considering two developments bordering Howe Creek. One is east of Eby, in the area behind Parkside school and Christy Park soccer fields. The other is at the end of Munroe, at the foot of the bench.

There is already a lot of comment about what is proposed. In addition to the green space issue, the prospect of encroachment onto Howe Creek has raised a few eyebrows. These areas are the last substantial pieces within the horseshoe. They act as unofficial parks for the area.

All of this means great trouble for the existing members of council that want to run again. This council may not label itself strictly pro-development but it has been content (and in some cases rightfully so) to let market forces dictate what should happen. It is, after all, the job of a government to provide the broad structure in which growth and progress can take place for the benefit of all.

Yet there are times when governments must intervene given the need to provide for all members of a society. The questions of what development where, how and why will be one that will continue to surface in this city as it grows. It's something that should not be easily tossed aside.

It's a big case

Nearly nine years ago a group of Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en walked into the Smithers provincial court registry and filed a suit. It has so far consumed millions of dollars in court costs and legal fees and will ultimately have an effect on the lives of every northwestern resident.

The plaintiffs laid claim to 57,000 square miles of centering on the Hazelton and asked the B.C. Supreme Court to declare that had ownership and jurisdiction over the land. The provincial government conducted a vigorous defence and was joined by the federal government.

Former B.C. Supreme Court Justice Allan McEachern released his verdict in 1991, denying the Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en claim. In essence the ruling held that aboriginal rights and title have been extinguished.

The Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en filed an appeal and it will be released this Friday. The appeal decision is of course important for what it will say. Yet it is just as important to realize that this won't be the last word. Expect the case to ultimately end up in the Supreme Court of Canada.

But the appeal decision will give us a clue as to how the judiciary is thinking nowadays. This is important because we regard judges highly in their ability to provide reasoned and rational opinions.

This decision is particularly important for the McEachern ruling essentially reversed what had been a trend to recognizing more and more native rights. Court cases may seem boring to the great majority of us, but this one should be treated differently.

Liberal Gordon No. 3 looks like the winner

VICTORIA — You've probably heard more than you bargained for about Gordon Number One in the Liberal leadership race. He's Gordon Wilson, the man who is leader of the provincial Liberal Party now and wants to keep the job.

And in a recent column, I introduced you to Gordon Number Two. He's Gordon Gibson, the man who headed the party before, sat as its lone representative in the legislature for a few years, quit politics, and now wants the job again.

Today, I want you to meet the third Gordon. He's Gordon Campbell, mayor of Vancouver, commander of a formidable political machine and a guy who looks like he jumped from the pages of a fashion magazine. He, too, wants to become the next leader of the Liberal Party.

The first thing I tell Campbell when we sit down for a chat in the legislative dining room was that I hope his sense of timing in politics is better than in setting up interviews.

I had to drag myself away from the tube where the Leafs were fighting the L.A. Kings for their Stanley Cup survival. Ah, the sacrifices one makes in the interest of journalism.

Campbell is 45 years old. He says he can't believe he's 45. Neither can I. He looks like he would be asked for ID at the liquor store. Hey, I'm joking, but he does look more like 35 and very, very smooth.

I ask him if he thinks his polished big-city image might be an impediment in the province's hinterland, where men are men and bureaucrats are scared. No, he says, he doesn't think so.

He's been up-country, in the Peace River area, in Castlegar, Prince George and Vernon, and has been well received. He says he can identify with people's problems.

He was 13 when his father died and his mother raised him and three other kids alone.

From the Capital

by Hubert Beyer

She must have done a good job. Campbell went to the University of British Columbia, to Dartmouth College and graduated in New Hampshire. He married in 1970 and left with his wife for Nigeria where they both taught for CUSO for two years.

When they came back, Campbell worked as executive assistant for Art Phillips, then mayor of Vancouver. In 1981, he became involved in the development of a couple of hotels.

Campbell was first elected as alderman to Vancouver city council in 1984, ran for mayor in 1986 and won. He is currently in his third term as mayor.

I ask him about the recent incident created by his brother Michael, publisher of Equity, the magazine that portrayed Premier Harcourt and finance minister Glen Clark as Nazi storm troopers.

Campbell is somewhat defensive, saying Harcourt over-reacted and should have better things to do than complain about the Equity cover. He also stresses that his brother doesn't interfere in his life and he doesn't interfere in his brother's.

That may be so, but I still maintain that Harcourt was rather restrained in his reaction. Whether or not the brothers Campbell interfere in each other's lives and work, I believe I would have been both their worst nightmares if I had found myself in a Nazi uniform on the cover of a magazine one of them runs. But I stray.

Campbell is in favour of the universal ballot. Asked whether that doesn't give him an edge by enabling his to swamp the vote with new members recruited by his Lower Mainland political machine, Campbell is very adamant.

"Are they saying we don't want a whole lot of people involved in this? It's either one person one vote or not. People want to have that opportunity," he says.

He adds that the party executive decided on that process before any candidate declared himself, and that a phone-in vote will overcome the problem of delegates in the province's remote areas who would have to spend "a huge pile of money" to attend a convention.

Campbell is still the candidate to beat. The other two Gordons have a lot of problems, albeit different ones.

Wilson is fighting an uphill battle to overcome the horrible publicity that accompanied his relationship with Liberal MLA Judi Tyabji and the breakup of their respective marriages.

Gibson is often referred to as "yesterday's man," a label he refuses to wear, but gets stuck with again and again.

The problem both Wilson and Gibson have in common is lack of money, something Campbell doesn't have to worry about.

Still anything can happen, and Campbell isn't counting his chickens before they hatch.

A PhD in babysitting

Surveys tell us girls have a hard time relating to math and science. Therefore they avoid studying both subjects. Consequently, they pass up fascinating, high paying technical jobs.

Speed, volume, and area are taught with problems involving freight trains rushing head on between Vancouver and Fort William, earthmovers excavating holes the size of dinosaur dens, and carpet layers covering the floors of Sky Dome stadiums. What fairy tales!

It's hard to find one freight train let alone two on the same track. Dirt banks don't add sparkle to a girl's eyes. And the mere prospect of vacuuming a floor bigger than a card table triggers back spasms.

However, most teenagers do time babysitting, some regularly as a means of vital income, other sporadically as a favor. In either case, math and science come into play in a major fashion.

I discovered this while babysitting my two grandchildren.

For instance, there's the babysitter's theory of relativity: If a ten-month-old requires 20 seconds to toddle from the sofa to her toybox, how long will it take her to make the return trip if her goal is a cup of coffee left unattended on the coffee table?

Babysitters know toddlers' velocity is inversely proportional to the temperature of the coffee and the fullness of the cup.

Similarly with area. Who but a sports promoter with an impending title match cares how long it takes to carpet the Sky Dome? Far more important to the average teenager is how many square feet of carpet can be soaked by only three inches of bath water.

You would be amazed. For the correct answer, multiply the depth of the bath water, three inches, by the number of hands doing the splashing, four, then square the result. The extra footage comes from seepage under the bathroom door and down the hall.

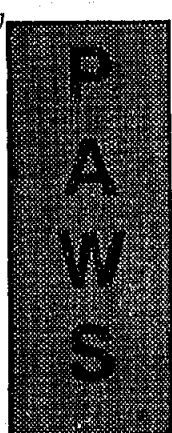

Or, if one quart of paint will cover 400 square feet of wall, how much wall can be finger-painted with one serving of chocolate pudding? It depends on how long the babysitter keeps her back turned. Usually there's plenty of pudding to decorate the refrigerator, the hall, and the encyclopedia bindings.

Maybe science can explain why grape juice has the holding power of styling mousse.

Or which everyday foods can be used as glue. Babysitting through a snacktime proves mashed banana - though messier - works well to replace glue stick.

Physics might be able to explain how a two-year-old with wrists the size of wedding bands can exert a bear hug to rival The Crusher; twist the plastic barrel of Labello chapstick into two pieces; or melt a stern adult with a smile.

When math and science classes use such everyday situations as teaching mechanisms, more teenage girls will relate.

Save this parcel

Dear Sir:
I am writing this letter in response to the rezoning application for a 10-acre parcel of land north of Parkside School, off Eby St. Another development in the horseshoe area, more houses, more tax base.

Any sidewalks? No. Any concern for Howe Creek? No. (It gets put in a culvert.)

What about that creek bed that winds through the area north of the soccer field. Any landscape planning there? No. (It will be re-directed in a ditch).

What about the 5 per cent allocation for parkland? No. (The developer intends to buy out that option.) What about natural springs, ducks, etc.? Sorry, they have to go.

But do these details really matter? After all this proposed development is just a hop skip away from schools and acres of soccer fields, and that's all greenspace isn't it?

Except I shouldn't walk the dogs on a soccer field, and you're not supposed to ride a bike on them, and it's not a good idea to let your kids play on them if they've been sprayed or fertilized...

Okay, enough already. There's no doubt the Horseshoe area is a desirable place to live, and our population grows, so will our need for walking areas, trails and multi-use greenspace.

The city councillors may consider sidewalks too costly in our overall town development, but a network of walking trails and the purchase/preservation of the 10-acre parcel on Eby St. at the base of the bench (in the Horseshoe area) is an option that satisfies a number of concerns.

These concerns are the allocation of green space to offset our growing residential development, the completion of trails and walking/bike riding areas that presently exist, the potential development of bicycle trails close to our dense residential population, and the preservation of some natural landscape for school use within reasonable walking distance of schools.

When mayor Jack Talstra said to the media "if people want trails they can walk Terrace Mountain trail", he summed up what appears to be Terrace council's present attitude toward residential development. Greenspace is only as good as its potential for new houses.

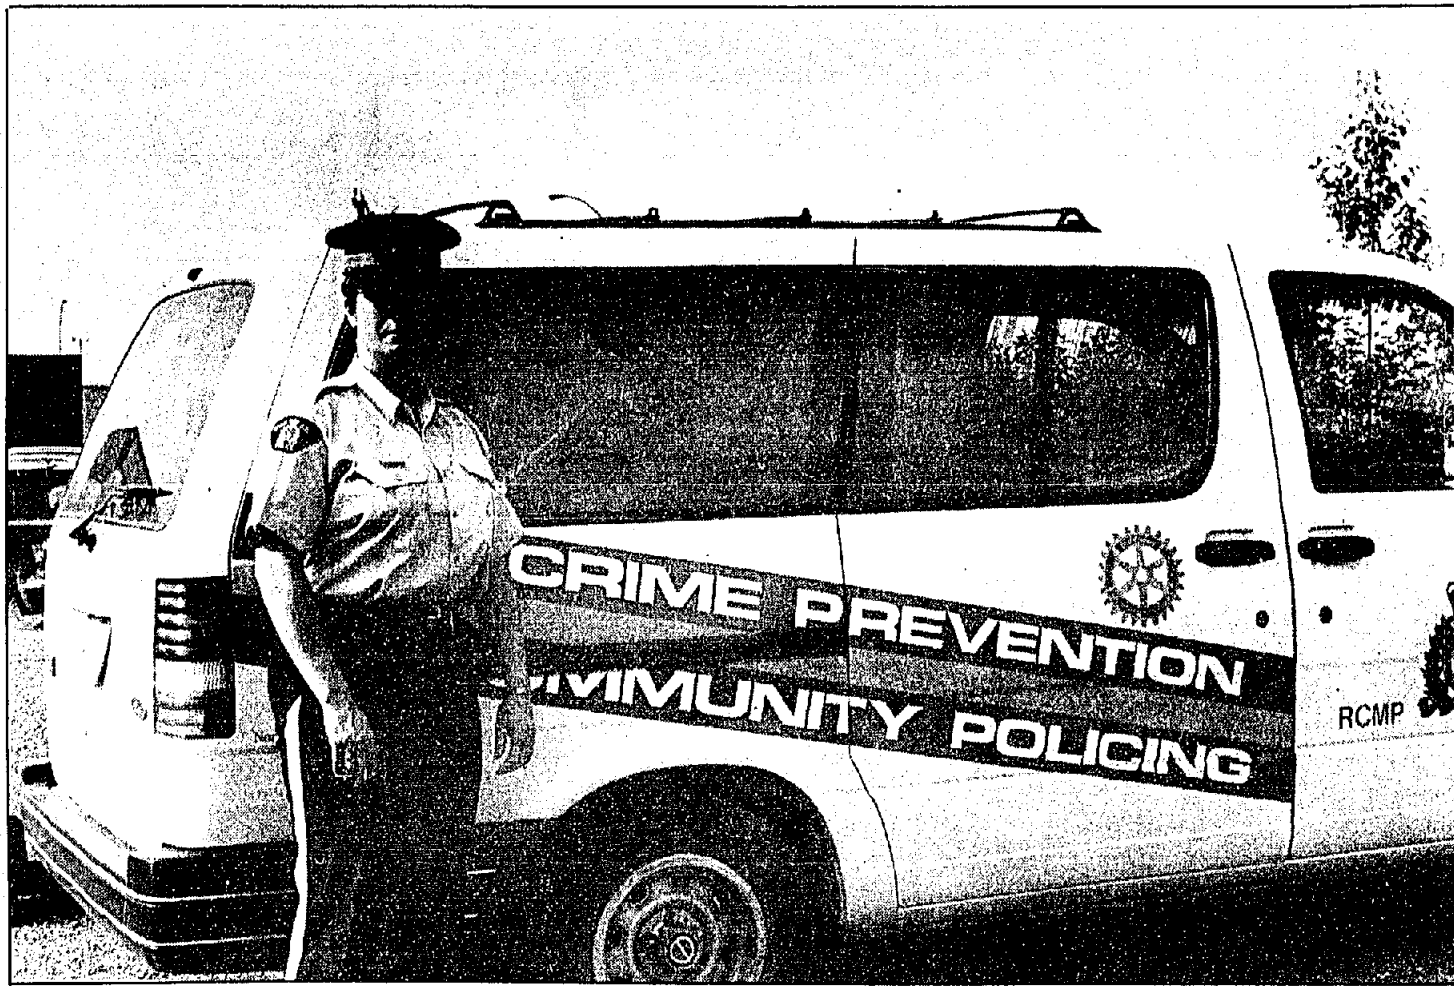

Now if the housing starts are an indication of our future expansion as a city then we need some direction within our council that develops a sense of community and all its varied requirements.

The 10-acre parcel of land off Eby Street, has much more potential in its natural state than it will ever will as housing.

Let's not pave paradise and put up yet another parking lot.

Yours truly,
Ian Gordon,
Terrace, B.C.

ON CALL - Constable Kim Hall of the Terrace RCMP detachment stands beside one of the many police vehicles used to fight crime.

Calls for police service have increased as the city's population has grown. Despite finishing in the 19th position on the provincial crime rate charts, police are constantly kept busy.

As RCMP Inspector Larry Yeske says, "Our calls for service have definitely increased."

The Terrace RCMP has a total staff of 60, including 39 officers. There are also 12 auxiliary officers.

POLICING THE TOWN

It just doesn't get any easier, say Mounties

THE GOOD NEWS is Terrace has tumbled to #19 on the provincial crime rate charts.

(We had the dubious distinction of being second in 1988.)

The bad news is that there are more of us and as many crimes happening as ever.

"We are falling behind in our ability to respond to calls," Terrace RCMP Inspector Larry Yeske says. "The public expects us to respond, but there comes a point at which we just don't have the horses to be able to do that."

Yeske says that although the crime rate has fallen, the population has gone up and Terrace police face increased demands on their time.

"Our calls for service have definitely increased," he says.

Yeske spells out the consequences in a recent report to city council.

"Our members do not have the time for preventative patrols. This usually leads to an erosion in public confidence because many incidents happen that appear to go unchecked. We must address this situation to prevent public confidence from falling."

RCMP statistics record drops in downtown break-ins, vandalism, impaired driving and hit-and-runs.

But the number of sexual assault cases investigated has nearly doubled in two years to 97 cases in 1992.

Many adults who were victims of childhood sexual abuse continue to come forward.

"You get the locals and the out-of-towners. They get together, sip a few back and the fun starts. And we have to get in between them."

"There are a lot of older cases coming out," Yeske says. "Cases where the abuse happened 10, 20 or 30 years ago."

"It's disheartening to see that there was so much."

Police also record sharp increases in residential break-ins, liquor violations, and drug offences.

Increasingly, Yeske says, police are turning to the community itself to shoulder the burden.

Inspector Larry Yeske

He says the Vandal Watch and Neighbourhood Watch programs are playing a key role in preventing crime.

"We're finding in the areas where there is the Neighbourhood Watch, there's next to nothing for break-ins."

Terrace RCMP are also training more auxiliary officers this year.

"They're strictly volunteers," Yeske says. "These are community people who come out to help."

Terrace RCMP has a total staff of 60, which includes 39 officers. It also makes use of an additional 12 auxiliary officers.

Yeske hopes the Neighbourhood Watch program will help reduce the number of break-ins.

Increased patrols of the downtown core — including the introduction of foot patrols — have driven thieves out to the residential areas, he says.

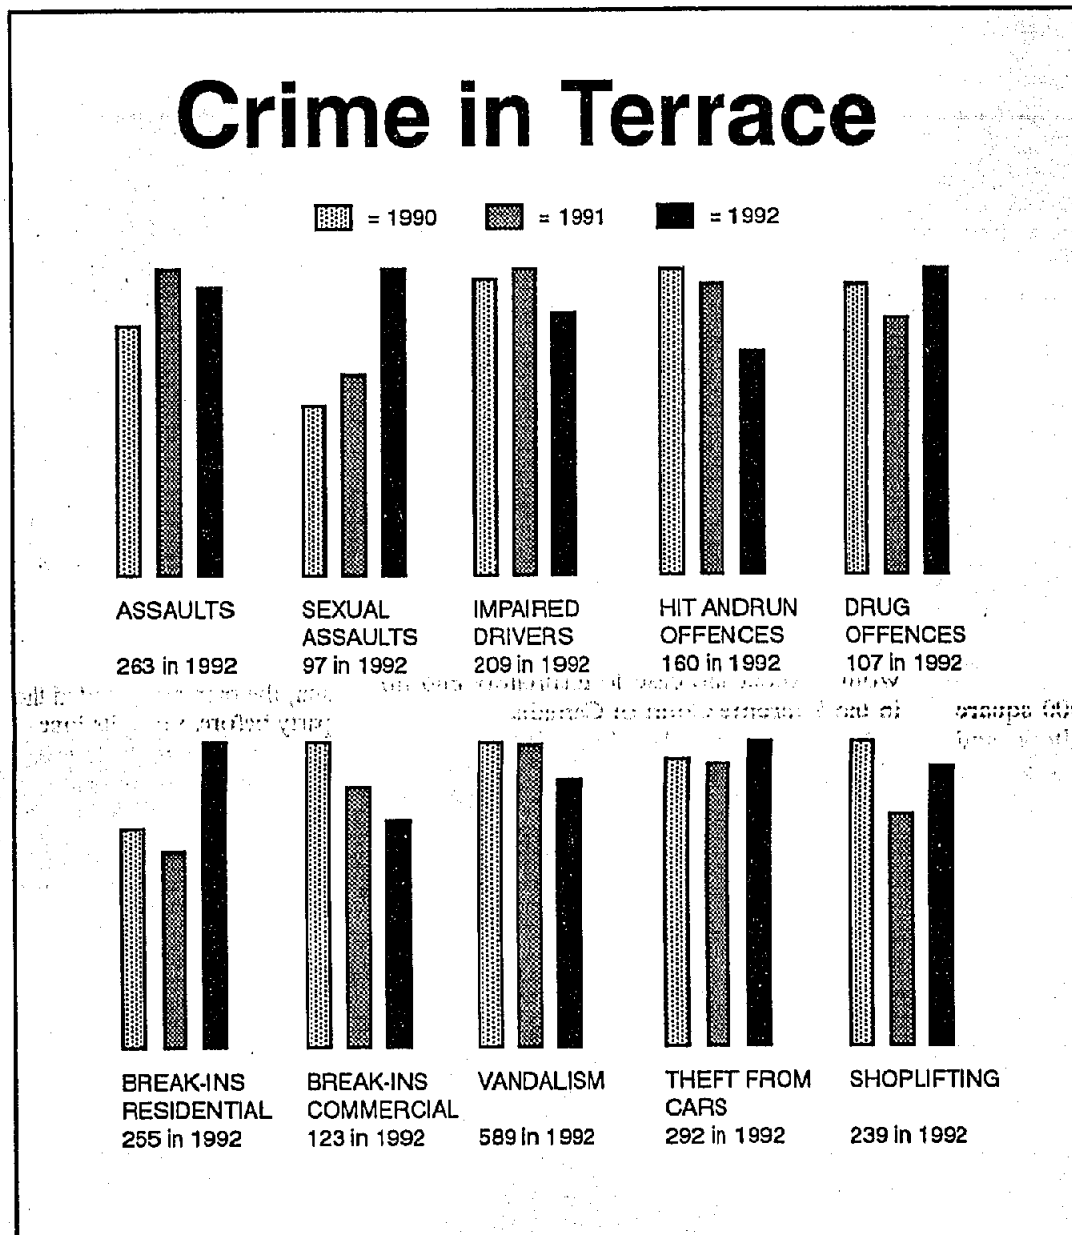

"I think there has been a tremendous increase in substance abuse," Yeske adds.

Cocaine is presently the drug of choice in Terrace, he says.

But booze is still cited as a major factor in most violent crimes — from bar fights to spousal assaults to rapes and impaired driving.

"We're in a frontier area where you work hard and you play hard," Yeske says, pointing out Terrace is a "core" city where many people come for entertainment.

"You get the locals and the out-of-towners. They get together, sip a few back and the fun starts. And we have to get in between them."

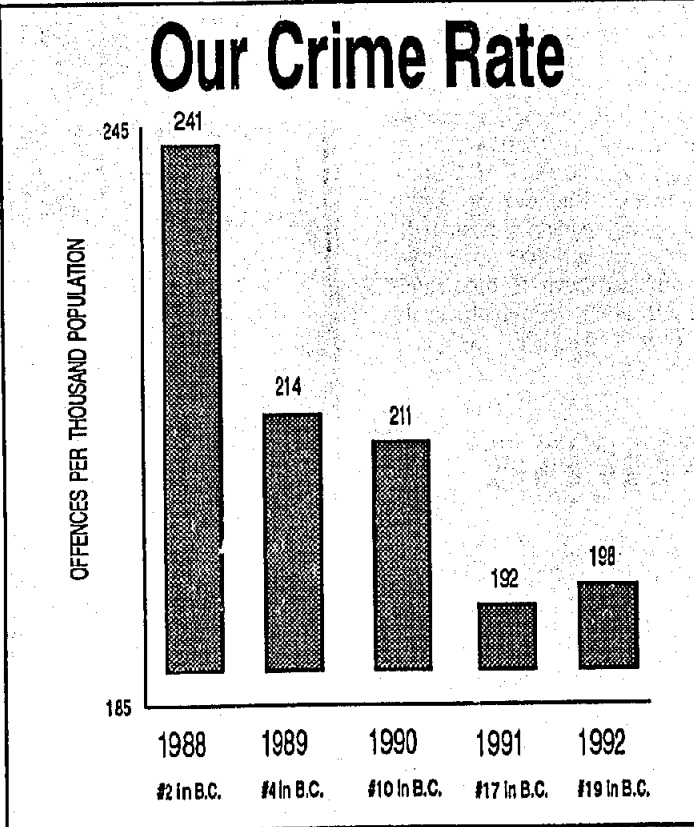

Some other highlights from the RCMP's 1992 crime analysis:

- The three areas with the most break-ins were Thornhill, the Horseshoe area, and the Woodland and Kalum Gardens Apartments.

- Vandalism dropped 12.7 per cent. Five Vandal Watch rewards were given out.

- Nearly 22 per cent more shoplifters were apprehended. The report credits increased store security, more high-tech store security systems, and better training of staff in spotting and apprehending shoplifters.

- Bike thefts are down 11.5 per cent. The Terrace Fire Department is continuing its bike marking program. Several expensive bikes were recovered last year, the report notes, but were never claimed because owners don't believe their bikes will ever be found and often don't bother to report the theft.

The lady in the photo is Kathy Floritto. She is getting an autograph for her daughter, Claire.

Manning says the Reform party will do well in the next election.

More homes

There are a lot of homes being built this year. Up to the end of May, 55 home permits were given out.

Bob Lafleur is in charge of permits at the city. He thinks as many as 100 homes could be built this year.

Last year, 82 homes were built.

Duplexes and other kinds of housing are also being built. Lafleur thinks 130 housing units could be built in total.

The city gave out permits worth $9.5 million in construction to the end of May.

Things are also busy in Thornhill.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Big guys could get less

Little mills need wood

TERRACE — A shortage of lumber is the main problem facing B.C. value-added wood product operations, an all-party committee has concluded.

And it proposes the number be solved by reducing the problem of trees major forest companies can cut and diverting that timber to the smaller operations.

The provincial select standing committee's conclusions come at the end of a year-long tour of B.C. during which it held 32 public meetings and visited sawmills and value added/remanufacturing plants.

Attributing the lumber supply problems to the value-added sectors' inability to deal with the major companies on an equal footing, the committee concluded "further change in the control of timber" was inevitable.

Specifically, it wants all the harvesting cuts the province claws back whenever a cutting licence changes hands to be directed to the value-added industry.

That claw back amounts to five per cent of the annual allowable cut (AAC) of the licence in question.

The value added manufacturers would be able to obtain that wood under what's called the 16.1 program, part of the Small Business Forest Enterprise program (SBFEP).

The main criteria in awarding timber cutting rights under 16.1 is the amount of value the bidder intends to add to the wood.

The committee also proposes that for each of the next five years, a further one per cent of the province's entire AAC be diverted to the 16.1 program.

And it wants some of the wood already allocated to the SBFEP to be earmarked for 16.1 bids.

Have van, will travel

TOUR GUIDE Gerry Dodd stands in front of the forestry tour van. The tours, which begin in mid-June, consist of a guided van trip through surrounding logging areas. Call the visitor centre at 835-4689 to make reservations.

At present just 13 per cent of the province's 72.5 million cu.m. annual allowable cut goes to SBFEP.

And only slightly more than a third of that is put up for bids under the 16.1 program.

As evidence this is not enough, the committee noted the number of applicants for timber was about four times the number of sales.

Other committee recommendations include:

- * expand the small woodlot program to more than five times its present size by the year 2000;
- * prohibit whole log chipping

unless the wood has first been offered to sawmills or like operations;

* attempt, as far as GATT and free trade regulations allow, to restrict the export of cants, flitches and other large dimension lumber pieces (wood which has been only partially processed and where the value will be added by further processing abroad).

* provide government assistance to the value added sector in expansion/modernization and marketing.

The committee also suggested the government set a target of quadrupling the number of jobs in the value added sector.

More jobs seen if timber goes to value added mills

TERRACE — There could be more jobs here if the recommendations of a recently released all-party report are implemented, says Skeena MLA Helmut Giesbrecht.

The report, on lumber remanufacturing in B.C., recommends a greater, guaranteed supply of wood be made available to remanufacturers.

That would essentially involve diverting timber from major licenses into so-called value-added operations.

Giesbrecht conceded that might mean less cutting in sawmills because they would be cutting fewer pieces.

Where a sawmill would normally cut 2x4s, he explained, they might instead have to cut fewer, larger pieces of lumber to meet the particular requirements of the remanufacturers.

He anticipated any loss of hours in sawmills would be more than offset by increased jobs in remanufacturing operations.

Similarly, the suggestion more timber be earmarked for woodlots would not necessarily mean a net loss of jobs in the forest industry.

Giesbrecht said many of the smaller areas of timber involved would not be of interest to major companies in any case.

And expansion of woodlot operations might give forestry workers who had lost their jobs in recent years alternative employment.

Giesbrecht pointed out the recommendations were just that and it was up to forests minister Dan Miller to decide what happened from here.

Given all three political parties back the report, "that should encourage the minister to implement them. "I believe the public is ready for the ideas," he added.

Giesbrecht said the cost of putting any particular recommendation into effect would obviously be a factor in Miller's decisions.

LOCAL ALARM COMPANY RECEIVES INTERNATIONAL ACCLAIM

If you happen to be a subscriber to the trade magazine Canadian Security then you will have read June's front page and feature issue detailing the installation at the Prince Rupert Fisherman's Co-operative Association. The fish plant invited proposals from three different alarm companies and Lockport Security Ltd. was the successful bidder. "We are using a narrow band RF wireless technology that has been used for years" says Joe Sullivan owner of Lockport. The manufacturer, Interactive Technologies Inc. chose Lockport Security Ltd., in 1991 as the authorized dealer for several reasons - one being the quality of work the company had shown in the past and the caliber of its technical staff. All work is done by a class "A" electrician. "We do the job once and do it right."

A large number of Lockport Security's installations have been "wireless" and Terrace and area customers have virtually experienced 0% false alarm from the technology.

Lockport Security's ITI installations come with a written false alarm free guarantee. The customer has the option to monitor the alarm with ULC "AA" central station for reports on fire, theft, medical, temperature, etc.

Hire them

Dear Sir:

As an unemployed university student residing in the Terrace area, I urge every company in this region to employ a student this summer.

In fact, I feel that many companies and individuals are missing out on the great benefits of employing students.

I want to familiarize them with following points.

I would suggest to you that by hiring a returning student, the employer will be encouraging a young person to continue their education, thereby producing an educated employee of the future.

Further, the company will be employing a keen and enthusiastic person who may be able to contribute a great new idea by virtue of their different perspective.

Finally, the employer will be reducing the drain on society by the many unemployed young people who have no choice but to draw unemployment insurance and welfare benefits.

On top of these advantages to the employer, there are obviously great benefits for the student, too.

A summer job has lasting effects. It helps pay for the cost of education, and in this way reduces the loan debt once a student has completed his or her education.

It also produces an opportunity for the student to assess future job prospects and solidify employment preferences or perhaps even decide upon a path of studies.

But one of the most important aspects of summer employment for a student is an opportunity to gain valuable experience in the job market that may be put to good use for future employers.

So there are very definite advantages to employing a young person who is returning to an institution in the fall to further their education.

Therefore I challenge every company in the Terrace area to hire a student this summer.

The best way to employ students, is through the Canada Employment Centre for Students. Student placement officer Gurmit Grewal has a wide selection of employable students on file with every imaginable talent.

Also, information may be available regarding wage subsidies that can assist employers in creating specific jobs for students. Invest in the future, hire a student today.

Take peak at jail

TERRACE — Local residents get their chance to look at the newest correctional centre in the province at an open house this Saturday from noon to 4 p.m..

The $1.87 million facility is located off of Keith Ave., behind the Petrocan bulk plant, and replaces a converted motel on Hwy16 West.

"This is a low key affair — coffee and cookies. The official opening takes place later," said corrections district director Rob Watts during a tour of the new facility last week.

He described the facility as a functional building designed to provide an adequate space for inmates.

That means people with longer sentences can serve them here instead of being sent elsewhere.

And Watts said the new centre is designed to operate with maximum security using a minimum amount of staff.

This is most evident when standing in the working space to be occupied by a corrections officer.

It's located in the middle of the building's 'T' design.

"From here an officer has maximum viewing of all areas simply by looking down the hallways," said Watts.

The centre comes with a large kitchen, dining area, recreation room, TV room, physical exercise room and reading room.

CENTRAL OFFICE in middle of the new Terrace Regional Correctional Centre gives officers a clear look at all corridors. That's corrections district director Rob Watts looking down a hallway. There's an open house at the new jail this Saturday.

It's also the first correctional centre in the province to be completely non-smoking inside.

But people can step outside of the TV room under a covered space if they want to smoke.

The effort to cut costs resulted in getting some kitchen equipment, tables and chairs from the New Westminster courthouse.

And while inmates in the current centre could get passes to visit the Copperside store next door, the new centre will have its own canteen.

It'll be run under contract by Creative Options using special needs employees.

There'll be 15 rooms for inmates — 10 in one section and five in another.

Each is designed to hold two people, making for a maximum capacity of 30.

But the most comfortable population will be 24, says Watts.

One of the five rooms away from the main section is bigger than the rest and has its own washroom.

Reform would let voters have say in land claims

TERRACE — A Reform party government wouldn't put individual land claims settlements out to referendum, its leader said during a visit here last week.

But it would put the broad concept of how it wants to settle claims out to a vote, said Preston Manning.

"I don't think you can settle land claims until the relationship between Indian people and the government of Canada is determined," said Manning.

He favours doing away with the federal Department of Indian Affairs and establishing municipal style governments for natives.

Yet Manning doubts if the concept of native title and jurisdiction over land will work.

"You must be able to sell any settlements to large numbers of non-aboriginal people," Manning added.

He did indicate that native governments could receive a land base under any Reform party negotiations.

Manning said the Reform party opposes the creation of a third level of government for natives.

That would bring about special status for some groups based on race, language or culture, a factor the Reform party said was wrong with the proposed constitutional changes of last fall.

Manning's comments came during a visit here to open the Reform party's Skeena riding office in preparation for the coming federal election.

More than 80 people turned out over the June 16 lunch hour to see Manning cut the ribbon opening the office and to hear a short speech.

With Manning was Skeena riding Reform party candidate Mike Scott.

Notable among those present were Terrace aldermen Bob Cooper and Mo Takhar, former

MORE THAN 80 people turned out June 16 to see Reform party leader Preston Manning officially open the party's election campaign office on Lazelle Ave. Manning also gave a short speech, signed autographs and answered questions. Shown here with the Reform party leader is former Social Credit Skeena MLA Dave Parker. Has he joined? "At the moment, no. But I'm considering," says Parker. Party membership in Skeena now stands at close to 700.

Social Credit Skeena MLA Dave Parker and Prince Rupert fisherman Paddy Greene.

Greene is a leader of the B.C. Survival Coalition which opposes the creation of fisheries policies based on race.

"We're preparing to provide a voice for the taxpayer in Canadian Parliament," Manning told the crowd.

"It is possible to make politicians more accountable," he added.

Manning said recall, the right for voters to oust sitting politicians from office between elections, and referenda so voters have a say in policies are important parts of the Reform party platform.

And he said the party has a plan to reduce the federal deficit to zero within three years.

Manning cautioned that taxes will remain high until the deficit is brought under control.

He said the Reform party is gaining in popularity because its policies match what is needed for Canada.

"We tend to go into a trough until an issue arises that makes our message relative," said Manning.

"We noticed that during the constitutional debate last fall and now that the fiscal situation has been raised."

"We go up in the polls a little higher each time and not drop quite as deep after that," Manning said.

Liberal hopeful doubtful there'll be claims progress

TERRACE — Don't expect any native land claims settlements in B.C. until a crucial case is decided in the Supreme Court of Canada, says a candidate for the provincial Liberal party leadership.

Speaking here on a visit last week, Gordon Gibson said former provincial Chief Justice Allan McEachern was right in turning down the Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en claim over land and resources.

The decision was put before the B.C. Court of Appeal and its decision will be released Friday. Most observers feel the case will eventually land up before the supreme court.

"We won't know until then. I'm absolutely certain the (land claims) discussion set up is designed not to make any progress. We don't even know what land and what money we are talking about," said Gibson.

"The biggest change in negotiations in the past decade is that we've moved them from the Holiday Inn to the Four Seasons," he said.

Gibson opposes the concept of native sovereignty over land and resources and the creation of a third level of government for natives.

And he says such moves would be a disaster because they are based on race.

"In my opinion the measure of advancement of civilization is the insistence that political rights have nothing to do with race, religion, age or gender," said Gibson.

Gordon Gibson

"Political rights should be based on where you live. From Day One, if you set up people to be different, you are making a terrible mistake. I'd go further and call it a racist concept," he said.

Gibson added that the creation of the Indian Act more than 130 years ago separated natives from the rest of Canada.

"That made possible the theft of land, the denial of status for native women, the denial of the vote and the taking of children and putting them in residential schools."

"All that was made possible by singling out a race. And the solution is again based on race?"

Gibson does not rule out beefing up native governments or transferring to them land and resources.

But all that must be done within the current governing system and must ensure that other people who live within those areas also have rights.

"This has to be based on territory, not race. There can be a transfer of cash and resources in a reasonable and limited way to deal with problems that we are going to have to deal with anyway as Canadians," said Gibson.

Gibson was in town promoting his campaign for the provincial Liberal party leadership.

He was leader from 1974 to 1979, leaving to run unsuccessfully in the federal elections of 1979 and 1980.

Gibson then retired to private business but decided to run this year when current leader Gordon Wilson agreed to a leadership convention.

He described himself as a political junkie who lived in denial during those years in private life.

"The first job of a new leader will be to bring forth an efficient opposition to the NDP."

"The NDP knows it can't win and will spend the next three and half years to make their ideology irreversible," said Gibson.

He said proposed new environmental approval legislation for development projects will drive away investment.

"There are no timelines. There are no regulations. The idea of having companies pay the costs of those who oppose them is simply asking them to write a blank cheque," said Gibson.

Labour official moves on

TERRACE — The northwest has lost of its two labour ministry officers to Nanaimo.

There wasn't enough business compared to other parts of the province and manpower levels to justify two industrial relations officers (IRO) based in Terrace, a labour ministry spokesman said last week.

"This is budget related and population related. The ministry has to look at doing more with less," Hugh Legg said.

"There are areas that are growing — the Island, lower mainland and the Okanagan — so the decision was made to relocate an IRO to Nanaimo," he said.

"IROs are responsible for the Employment Standards Act, labour relations and some human rights assignments. That growth is evident in Nanaimo in terms of complaints but it is not evident in Terrace," Legg continued.

He did say there is a commitment to review the move should labour ministry business in the northwest increase.

Legg said the distances that need to be covered in the north to get from one location to another were not considered in making the decision.

Last year only one office — staffed by one person in Dawson Creek — had a smaller caseload than did Terrace while four other one-person offices had a higher caseload, said Legg.

Skeena NDP MLA Helmut Giesbrecht said he is waiting for new statistics on caseloads to arrive so he can pursue the matter further.

"There is a distance factor and I will make the case again," said Giesbrecht.

"I don't mind saying I have a lot of concern. This is a big area and groups and companies need the services of IROs," the MLA said.

Learning about natives and nature

Lava park has two themes

TERRACE — Protection and promotion are the two main themes of the draft master plan for the Nisga'a memorial lava bed park.

The plan was introduced at an open house held June 13 at the Terrace Inn.

It outlines the management plans for the park's natural features, and emphasizes native culture and history of the area.

The aim is to attract tourists to learn about Nisga'a culture in the midst of the park's natural beauty.

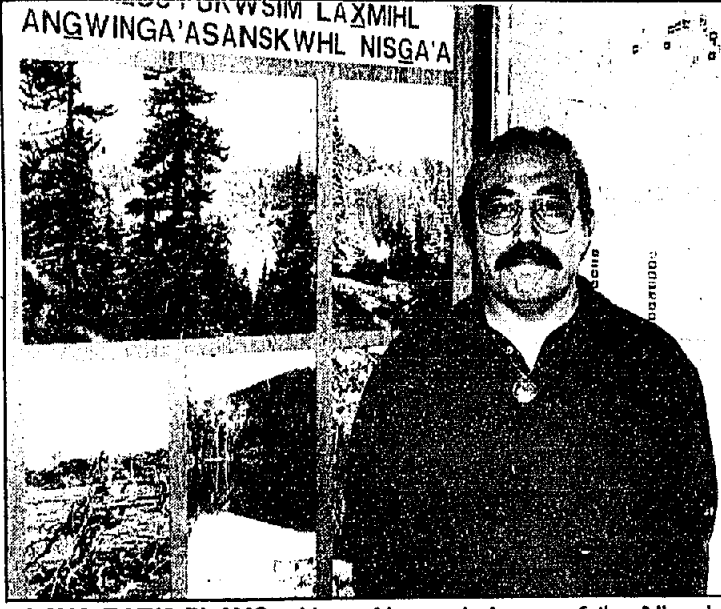

According to an information brief, the park is planned "as a catalyst to tourism and economic development in the Nass Valley."

The park has been separated into four zones - a wilderness recreation zone, a cone special feature zone, a natural environment zone and an intensive recreation zone.

Most of the park is divided between the first three zones to ensure its conservation.

The last zone is intended for numerous recreation activities, including camping and picnicking.

The plan also stresses the Nisga'a culture. The construction of an interpretive centre within the park is planned, which will provide "historical, natural and cultural interpretation" for visitors.

The centre will include a theatre for performances by Nisga'a dancers.

Right now, the committee is working on establishing an "interpretive plan" that will guide them on issues such as the location of the centre, park signs, details about flora and fauna, and Nisga'a culture.

B.C. Parks supervisor Gordon MacDonald said about $25,000 from the B.C. Parks budget was allocated for the plan.

A temporary campground with toilets is also being set up at the government, hopefully in 1994.

Veter sort area:

Primary features of the park to be protected are the volcanic crater and cone area and the lava flow that extends down Crater Creek.

Other features include Lava Lake, scenic lakes along Tseax River, and the Nass River.

The draft plan's highest priorities are a trail to the volcanic cone, an outline for locations and methods to promote the culture of the area, and a feasibility study for the visitor centre.

Next would be the construction of the centre, the development of more trails and the creation of a campground.

The lava bed park is the first provincial park to be jointly managed by a native organization and B.C. Parks. It is also the first park in B.C. to promote both natural features and native culture.

Open houses will be held at the end of June in Prince Rupert, Greenville, New Aiyansh and Gitwinksihlkw (Canyon City). Comments are wanted by July 31 and will be reviewed by the committee and necessary changes will be made. The resulting master plan will be signed by the Nisga'a Tribal Council and the B.C.

Repap president confident company has turned tough financial corner

TERRACE — Repap has weathered the storm and is now heading for profitability, says chairman George Petty.

Speaking from Montreal, Petty said the company (which operates as Skeena Cellulose in the northwest) made $7 million in May, after payment of interest on debt.

It's the first time the company made money in two years. Continued losses had led to speculation about the future of Repap and Petty who owns a majority of the company's shares.

Repap's interest charges, on a more than $1.5 billion in debt, amount to $40 million a quarter and resulted in an $18.8 million operating cash loss for the first quarter of this year.

But, based on the last two months figures, Petty predicted Repap would be in the black for the quarter ending June 30.

"You've got to feel pretty damn good about it," said Petty.

He also suggested it was possible Repap would show an overall profit for 1993.

While lumber operations such as the Skeena Cellulose sawmill here have been and continue to make money, Petty said pulp operations were still losing in "one brutal, tough market."

However, productivity improvements and operating cost reductions at its various operations meant Repap was in a good position to take advantage of the increased demand he expected from Europe and Japan markets.

"The whole key is economic growth," Petty pointed out, adding the pulp business was cyclical and went through these downturns every 5-10 years.

"We've weathered this rough patch," Petty said.

Given the market picked up and prices increased accordingly, he forecast Repap would be able to halve its debt load within the next 2-3 years.

As for the reaction of lenders to the company's performance, Petty emphasized "We've had the full support of our bankers."

Repap had gone through a major capital investment program and the payoff on that investment took time.

"We are now beginning to see that payoff," he said.

Asked for assurances the company's Prince Rupert pulp mill shutdown planned for the month of July would not be extended beyond that, Petty replied the "current plan" called for only four weeks downtime.

"There's nothing sure in life...but that's our plan," he added, pointing out the mill had been running at full capacity all year to date.

They've kept on rolling

RAILROAD MEMORIES: Dick Wells looks out at the old Skeena bridge at the east end of town. Wells was one of the engineers responsible for building the bridge back in the 1950s as part of the Terrace/Kitimat railway line. He visited here at the beginning of the month and managed to ride the rails.

A trip back into railroad history

WHEN DICK WELLS stands at the foot of the old Skeena railway bridge at the east end of town, it's like he's just travelled through time.

After 40 years, Wells, who now lives in Sooke, has returned to one of the many sites that he helped build as part of a railway line that ran from Terrace to Kitimat.

"I'll never forget how bloody cold it was down there," he says, referring to the bone-chilling temperatures he endured while surveying in Little Canyon.

The railway, built by CN, dates back over four decades.

In the early '50s, Alcan was building its smelter and hydro project in Kitimat. The construction led to an industrialization of the northwest. The railway, seen as a necessary addition to the Terrace/Kitimat area, was part of the process.

Construction on the line began in September 1951. Wells, in his early twenties, had just graduated in engineering from UBC. As he says, "it was his first real big job out of school."

And what a job it was. For the next four years, Wells, along with other engineers and crews, assembled a railway line through the bush, including 20 bridges, all the way to Kitimat. Wells was the only engineer who was involved with the construction from the beginning to the end.

As he outlines the procedure, it becomes obvious that it was a daunting task.

First, a preliminary survey had to be drawn up in Terrace. This meant that the approximate route of the line had to be plotted on a narrow corridor map.

Then, engineers had to make a projected location for the line. They drew up a line that appeared to be the best route.

And then came the hard part - the CN crew would have to go into the bush and "put that line on the ground."

Obviously, this was easier said than done. Construction went on despite rain or shine, snow or sleet. Camps were set up along the line. Sometimes the ground location had to be revised according to the lay of the land.

When Wells and his fellow workers came across ravines, they would send details to the bridge design offices in Winnipeg, which would draw up the building plans.

After the plans were set and the land was prepared, contractors came in to lay the ties and rail and to build the bridges.

And finally, after four years, the last spike was driven at Kitimat. The first steam train crossed the Skeena bridge in 1954.

Wells says bridge-building was the most interesting part of the construction. Two bridges in particular - the old Skeena bridge and another one at Alwyn creek - proved to be the most challenging.

The Alwyn creek bridge, the longest bridge on the line, was even beset by a land slide that sucked all the equipment, including bulldozers, into the mud.

Today, the line is still used. Wells figures that one or two supply trains travel the line each day.

At the beginning of the month, he travelled down to Kitimat on the line with local track supervisor Dave Viveiros. The trip changed - 40 years ago, crews worked in the bush. Now, much of the land has been logged and there are roads in the area.

Wells, now done with the engineering life, donated slides of the railway project to the Heritage Museum.

Those interested in seeing the slides can call the museum at 635-4546 or 635-2508.

Crossroader's Diary Watermelon and work in Zimbabwe

Kirsten Murphy is a 24-year-old Northwest Community College student working in Zimbabwe with Canadian Crossroads International. She will attend U.B.C. in the fall.

February 8

My placement at Tshelanyemba finished the end of January and I've been living and working in the city of Bulawayo (population 700,000) since then.

Bulawayo is a lovely city with wide, spacious streets and fearless drivers. The city's imbalance of wealth is expressed by a mixture of bread baskets and briefcases.

Today was my first day of work at the Natural History Museum. Ivan Murambiwa (the archaeologist) is still away but his assistant of sorts has been very helpful in seeing that I settle in. I am the only volunteer and one of the only whites at the museum. Despite having to crack a protective shell imposed by most employees, I feel comfortable with my co-workers.

10:30 a.m. tea-time in the morning is the highlight of my day and an excellent opportunity to practise my rapidly expanding Ndebele. I have applied to work at the Legal Projects Society as a way of learning how Zimbabwe's welfare system operates. When I told this to the woman interviewing me, she just laughed and said there is no system (contrary to government propaganda). In any case, they've agreed to take me on and I start next week.

hollering "dollah dollah dollah" (dollar dollar dollar) and 10 young women with oversized watermelons sprinted toward the truck. Minutes later we were back on the road, sinking our teeth into massive wedges of juicy watermelon and laughing as the seeds flew into our faces and hair.

After we finished our watermelon, the Gogo turned to me and shouted into the wind the usual battery of questions: Where was I from, how long had I been in Zimbabwe, where was I going? When I told her I didn't know where I'd be staying that night, she announced I would stay with her. I was slightly taken aback by her assertiveness but grateful for a place to stay. My gut instinct was to trust her.

TRAVELLING STUDENT Kirsten Murphy takes some time to pose with a couple of Zimbabwean friends at Tshelanyemba. She is working with Canadian Crossroads.

March 11

Three days under a blazing African sun without sunscreen and my nose feels like someone dragged a potato peeler over it. My pre-arranged ride to the Great Zimbabwe ruins (400km NE of Bulawayo) didn't work out so I hitched on my own. It took me five rides in a variety of vehicles to reach Masvingo (the town just outside the ruins).

The last ride was in the back of a small, white pick-up with four Zimbabweans and one other traveller. One of the Zimbabweans was a plump but youthful looking Gogo (grandmother). This Gogo had the truck come to a grinding halt when she saw a handful of women standing on the side of the road. She started That evening, I was treated to a delicious meal of sadza, chicken, maize and roasted ground nuts. Monica's daughter, who was my age, was in charge of providing me with a bed to sleep in. At 11:00 p.m. we travelled 20 minutes deeper into another high density suburb to the daughter's home. Within minutes of hitting the crisp cotton sheets, I fell into a deep slumber.

In the morning I was served a grand slam breakfast that would have put Denny's to shame. Before boarding the bus to the ruins, the daughter and I returned to Monica's home to say farewell. I was hailed as their Canadian friend and then escorted to the bus by an unidentified gentleman. With the exception of Tshelanyemba, I have never experienced such overwhelming

I saw my passport money and identification disappear down the street and into the sunset. To have insisted on carrying my pack would have been a great insult.

The Gogo (who insisted I call her Monica) and I crammed into a shabby old mini-taxi with at least 10 other people. The driver gave me a look of confusion and I pointed to Monica explaining "I'm with her." Once out of the mini-taxi, we weaved our way down dirt roads lined with tiny one-room homes. It seemed like we stopped every 10 steps so I could be introduced to clusters of Monica's extended family. When we reached her modest two-room home, I was instructed to sit in the living room where I was served piping hot tea while Monica went about with her duties.

8 Glasses A Day Water Facts

MINERALS AND THE BODY

We know that water is the "universal solvent" and is recognized by many experts as being the most important component for maintaining good health. It is usually assumed that the more minerals in drinking water, the better, but this is not necessarily so.

Water containing minerals in acceptable amounts certainly won't hurt us, however they are not necessarily needed. Because the average water supply contributes such a small percentage of the Recommended Dietary Allowance (R.D.A.) of the minerals our bodies require, drinking water should not be depended upon for any minerals.

Most people will find that in tasting the various types of water that demineralized water, especially that purified by Reverse Osmosis, will produce a far more pleasant and palatable drinking water.

Lucky 29 for crib champ

Want to hear of another great crib hand?

For Don Rigler, drawing a 29 hand seems to be an easy thing to do. In the last couple of months, Don has twice come up with a 29 hand.

Occasionally, Don will go and try his luck at the cribbage tournament held every Sunday evening at Thornhill pub.

Don, a quiet and kind man who enjoys to laugh and have a good challenge - hand of cards, has recently been lucky with his second 29 hand. He was presented with a trophy and t-shirt from Thornhill pub.

The pub staff says everyone is welcome to come down on Sunday evenings and enjoy a challenging hand of cards with some good friends.

Ella McLelland and family will be having a family reunion July 2-4 at the Seventh Day Adventist church grounds. The event will start with a pancake breakfast. On July 3, the family will attend a church service, along with a pot-luck supper held downstairs in the church. A ball game will be held Sunday to end the three-day gathering.

Ella McLelland and her family would like to invite friends to drop by and say hello. Friends of the family can drop by on any of the activities during the three days.

Ella is looking forward to having all her 12 children home together.

For more information, call Ella at 635-3097.

I would like to send out a very special farewell greeting to Lieut. Mike and Lieut. Lee Anne Hoeft of the Salvation Army who are leaving Terrace for their new posting in Prince Albert, Sask. I have had the great honour to become friends with both and feel sad to see them leave. They are very kind, loving and caring people, and I'm sure they will be greatly missed by their many friends.

To Mike and Lee Anne - may God bless you both. Keep up the great work you do to help others. We will all miss you both.

I know you're going to say "Oh no, not again!" But I have been asked to give little reminders.

The Terrace Oldtimers reunion banquet is being held again this year, July 31. It has become an established annual event, and is always held on the last Saturday of July. This year's reunion banquet promises to be an evening of good food, song, dance and reminiscences all in the spirit of the good old days. Last year's reunion was a tremendous success and organizers are hoping for the same results this year. For more information, call 635-2723.

And speaking of the good old days, if you have any stories of the early years you would like to share, or maybe some old pictures of interest, give me a call or mail your contributions to the Terrace Standard, 4647 Lazelle Ave., "Attention Yvonne." I would love to hear from you.

Challenge champs!

We are the champions!

Terraces handily defeated residents from Gander, Newfoundland in the 11th annual Participation Challenge held June 2.

The two communities squared off against each other to see how many people would participate in any activity that would make their hearts beat faster for 15 continuous minutes.

After the final figures were tallied, Terrace finished with a whopping 73.9 per cent participation rate, compared to 55.1 per cent for the Newfies.

As a result, Gander will have to fly the fair flag of Terrace over its City Hall.

Terrace also received a gold medal for its high participation rate.

A giant line dance was held at George Little Memorial Park to show support for healthy active living. 102 people took part and danced up a storm.

Music directory now available

It's out!

The first "Session Musicians Directory of B.C." created by musician Michelle Carlisle and composer/songwriter David Malecot, is now available.

The duo teamed up in Vancouver in early 1993 with the goal of developing an easy-to-use guide of session musicians. They recognized the need to create exposure for the many talented musicians within the province, and so researched and documented B.C.'s best discovered and undiscovered studio talent.

All musicians were listed at no charge. They have proven they are completely qualified to enter a studio and provide exactly what the producer requires, whether it be feature film material, commercial video, jingles, etc.

The directory was delivered to over 350 of the province's hiring producers and has supported the main goal behind the project - to employ musicians.

The directory is an invaluable guide to musicians as well as producers, providing a link within the industry complete with addresses and phone numbers.

The directory is published annually. It is available at Sight and Sound, as well as through the publishers at 10917-78 Ave., North Delta, B.C., V4C 1N4.

TRADITIONAL STYLING
CREATES UNIQUE LOOK FOR RANCHER

By M. TYNAN

A gable roof design combined with an arched entrance, palladian style feature windows, and brick facing work together to create a distinctive exterior look reminiscent of colonial times.

Instead of a living and family room, this design features a spacious great room, open to the breakfast area and boasting a cozy fireplace and windows all along the rear. The breakfast area, open to the great room, provides ample room for a kitchen suite. An elegant dining room with a vaulted ceiling and feature window sets the tone for more elegant dining. The cook in the family will enjoy a kitchen featuring a pantry, a handy work island, and plenty of cupboard and counter space.

Both secondary bedrooms are a good size. The master boasts a walk-in closet and a four piece ensuite with a raised swirl tub.

A private stairwell between the utility room and garage leads to a bonus room which could be an ideal home office, media room, or games room.

Plans for NB-544 may be obtained for $365.00 for a package of five complete sets of working prints and $29.00 for each additional set of the same plan. Allow $15.00 extra to cover the cost of postage and handling (B.C. residents add applicable sales tax to plan total) (All Canadian resident add 7% GST to plan total plus postage and handling).

This is one of our new designs. Many innovative plans are now available in our NEW Rancher plan catalogue for $9.58 including postage and handling and 7% GST.

Thank you all!

Dear Sir:

Mills Memorial Hospital would like to thank all those who so generously made donations to the "Muffin Run."

On April 21, the auxiliary delivered 22 dozen home-baked muffins to nine different businesses and offices. On May 13, 19 dozen muffins were distributed to 10 different workplaces.

The total raised from these efforts was $361.51. Equally as important was the increased public awareness of the auxiliary's work in the community.

For more information about Mills Memorial Hospital auxiliary, please call Sandy Bullock at 635-9202 or Audrey Greem at 635-3928.

Dear Sir:

Students and staff of Centennial Christian School would like to thank the various businesses in Terrace that sponsored the recent B.E.A.R. program - "Be Enthusiastic about Reading." The companies donated many prizes for the program, which ran from Jan. 18 to May 28.

126 students were involved with the program. Kindergarten and grade 1 students had to read 1500 minutes to earn a stuffed bear, while grades 2-4 students had to read 3000 minutes. 88 bears were handed out to 74 students. Altogether, the students read a grand total of 251,710 minutes - nearly half a year of non-stop reading!

We also thank several parents who donated cash and the moms who sewed bears.

Dear Sir:

The Canadian Council for the Blind would like to thank all those who helped sell tickets for the CCB Terrace and district White Cane Club Raffle: Carla Wellington, Alterra Tait, Elizabeth Hong, Sylvie Perreault and Martha Hyzims.

Canadian Council for the Blind

Dear Sir:

Caledonia Senior Secondary School, with co-operation from local businesses and industry, has again successfully operated a career preparation program for business, forestry, mechanics and carpentry students.

This program permits Grade 12 students to enter the work force for two one-week sessions each spring. Students were given "a taste of the world," some for the first time. Most of their placements confirmed their career choices. A few, however, found that the vocation they chose was not to their liking.

This year, three students received job offers and one was given an apprenticeship opportunity.

Employers must be commended for their co-operation.

Skeena Angler

Rob
Brown

REELS, RODS and rubber pants are the three Rs of fishing -- the fishing basics. But a hat is fundamental too.

No practical, self-respecting fisherman or fisherwoman goes out without a skypiece.

Rain is a pain; a hat takes care of that.

And if you think a soaked head is a liability, exposing your noggin to the searing rays of the sun is even worse.

With one person in a hundred likely get melanoma by the year 2000, it makes sense to pack your own shade.

Anticipating an increasing demand for sun blocking headgear, a US company has designed a model with mesh atop reflective foil, an extra long bill with heat absorbing material underneath, a terry cloth sweat band and removable cape which can be attached to the shielding neck and shoulders.

The drawback to this sun-safe fedora is makes the wearer look like a bekeeper from a distant galaxy.

Style is important to fishermen -- even spincasters.

Medical folks tell us eye damage is another unsavoury byproduct of UV exposure. Fishermen are always squinting into reflected light. A good pair of sunglasses is a hedge against eye damage, so is a good hat.

With both you can ensure you will be looking into cataracts without contracting cataracts.

Fishermen wear and swear by all kinds of hats. The baseball hat is very much in vogue in the U.S. and, though I don't care for them, I have to admit they do cut down on glare.

But, what do you do about sun or rain on the neck? Well, you buy a hat called an updowner with an extra long bill like the kind Papa Hemingway used to sport and a baby bill on the back, put it on your pate and risk the amorous attentions of hornbeaked scissor bills and other species of beakish marshbirds who will mistake you for one of their own kind.

Cowboy hats are another American favourite, but they are hats intended for the wide open spaces. The only wide open spaces we have in these here parts are clear cuts, I reckon, and them places ain't noted fer their fine fishin'.

Bushwhackin' is something we have to do aplenty and them cowboy hats just keep gettin' bushwhacked by low hangin' branches.

The Englishman's cap and the tweed brainbuckets they like to wear are tasty looking hats, but are too hot in summer and have frustratingly short bills.

Over the years I've tried all manner of fishing hat. Finally, I bought the hat I'm wearing in the picture atop this column.

It is a Tilley. It's made in Canada, and it is simply the best fishing hat made. The brim Tilley is broad enough to cover my big, red nose and prevent it from getting any redder.

When it gets wet my Tilley gets stiffer and sheds rain more efficiently.

The Tilley is skookum; it comes with a life time guarantee; the manufacturers suggest you leave it in your will.

After more than three years of heavy duty wear, mine has no rips, tears or loose threads. Like all top notch products Tilleys don't wear out they just age gracefully.

Except for the coldest January days when I am forced to don a woollen block heater, I wear my Tilley exclusively.

Because it has those wide grommets and drawstring I can fasten my hat over my face and breathe comfortably during a streamside siesta.

When riding in a river boat or fishing in a stiff breeze, the drawstring comes down and around my chin for Tilleys are always worn one size larger than your usual hat size; they rest comfortably on your head.

White hats and bright hats make poor fishing hats. If you're stalking trout you should blend in with your surroundings.

At first Tilleys were only made in an off-white colour but are now made in tanned brown like mine. Perfect.

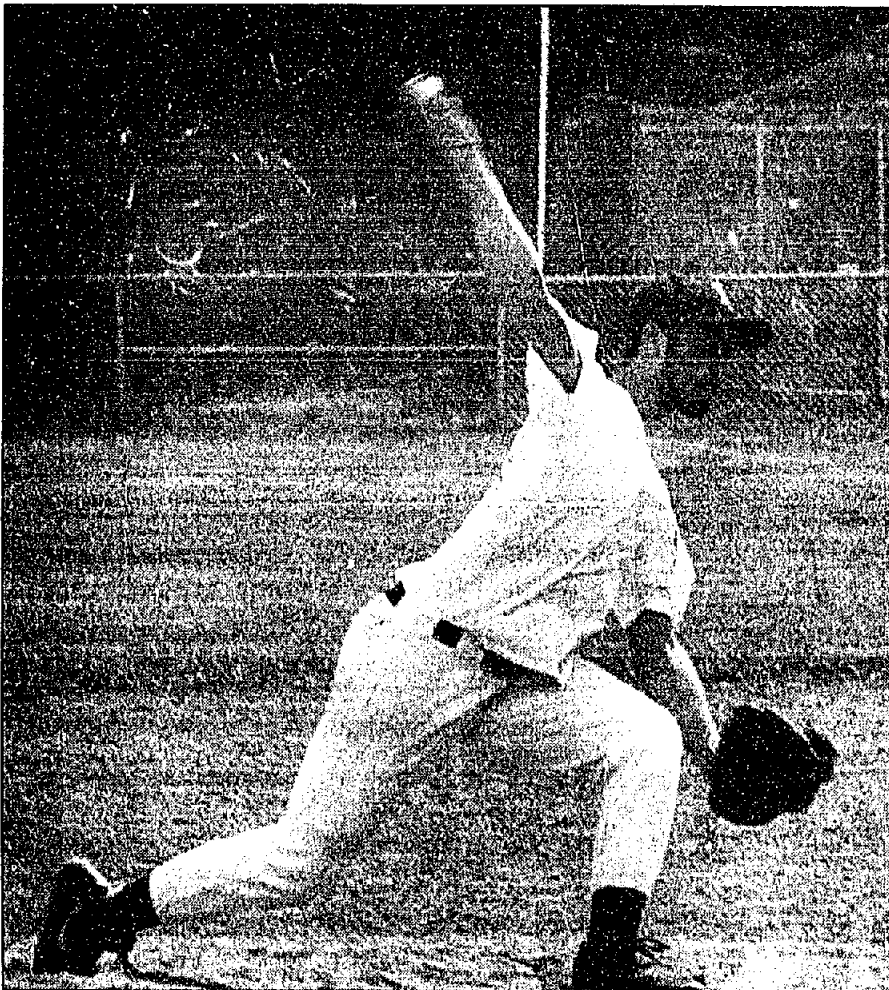

Tilley's have foam for floatation -- in case you forget to use the drawstring -- and a small pocket inside ideal for holding a license or couple of leaders.

Fifty bucks and the standard oh-so-irritating taxes will get you a Tilley. For the fisherman it's money well spent.

DOWN AND DIRTY. Credit Union runner bites the dust (at top) on steal of third in Senior Babe Ruth tournament action final but the throw ends up in the dirt, eluding the basemen's outstretched glove. Garth Mutschke (above) having given the Coast Inn of the West a solid start with steady hurling in the early innings, Inn bats went to work in the fourth to salt the title away.

Inn bats overpower Vid-kids

A five run, fourth inning explosion and shut-out pitching over the last two frames gave Coast Inn of the West the title in the Senior Babe Ruth tournament, June 11-13.

The Inn led all the way in handing Video Stop a 13-8 loss in the final.

That said, however, Video Stop's performance was an impressive one given they were up against a men's team.

The Inn jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first off a single and an error while Video Stop left runners stranded on second and third in their half.

A scoreless second was followed by an exchange of deuces, Video Stop pitcher Bryan Fick striking out three but not before Jeff Peden had hammered a two-run single to centre.

In line with coach Jim Fick's "everybody plays" policy, Bryan Fick headed for the bench having fanned five and given up four runs on two hits and two walks.

The Inn wasted no time getting to reliever Mark Dalmi, Rick Shaw singling off the first pitch, stealing second and then narrowly escaping a hot-box to take third.

Bruce Neid's base hit brought Shaw home and the Inn added two more when Stone laced a two-run double down the third base line.

Gary Peden picked up the RBI on his single, advancing to second on Scott

Peden's blooper to shallow centre. Gary then took third on a wild pitch, converting that into the fifth run of the inning on an attempted pick off at second.

Another exchange of deuces brought Video Stop to the plate in the bottom of the fifth trailing 11-4, but erratic pitching got them back in the hunt.

Five walks produced the first run, with two out, the second coming when Ryan Watson cashed in on an error behind the plate.

Eldon Munson made it three when a wild pitch eluded the catcher, the four-run rally being completed by Jim Edgar's heads up, on-the-pitch steal which just beat the tag.

That was as close as the Vid-kids would get though, the Inn adding two more in their half of the sixth then keeping the opposition off the board for their last two bats, Neid picking up four strike outs in the process.

Although unbeaten in the tournament, the Inn was given a bad scare by Credit Union, needing a three run rally in the bottom of the seventh to squeak a 6-5 decision and berth in the final.

Sent to the 'B' side, Credit Union ran into a red hot Bryan Fick who gave up only one hit and fanned nine in a 10-0 Video Stop shutout.

Credit Union took the third place game with a convincing 15-3 win over the Junior All Stars.

Local tennis gets Unlimited boost

It's a first for Terrace!

Tennis Unlimited, a grass roots program sanctioned by Tennis B.C., will run two tennis camps here in July and August.

And that's the first time in its 10-year history the program has ventured outside the Lower Mainland.

Dave Goulding, Tennis Unlimited director, said the main purpose of the camps is to get as many kids involved in the sport as possible.

Open to 8-16 year-olds, the program teaches basics from serve and volley to body mechanics and grip.

Participants get 12 hours instruction over four days and are grouped according to their age and skill level.

"The camps wouldn't be worthwhile if the kids didn't have a lot of fun too."

They also receive a Tennis B.C. junior membership, a T-shirt and a shot at prizes in a mini-tournament.

While learning the skills of the game is important, however, Goulding emphasized the idea is the youngsters enjoy the experience.

"The camps wouldn't be worthwhile if the kids didn't have a lot of fun too."

Grant Holkestad, a teacher and local Tennis B.C. zone co-ordinator, said bringing the program here is an important addition to the sport here.

Tennis had already been introduced to some elementary schools and the Junior Volleys program served those up 18 years old.

Tennis Unlimited sessions provided young players with the opportunity to develop their skills further and represented a step up the learning ladder, he explained.

Noting one in four British Columbians played tennis at least once a year, Holkestad said it was the fastest growing sport in the province.

And it's the same story in Terrace where the number of youngsters enrolled in the various programs available had soared this year.

More kids given more coaching would ultimately translate into more staying in the sport, he pointed out.

"And who knows, one day a really fine player may come out of here," he added.

However, he added, that would be a bonus. The main intent was to promote tennis as a "great sport to play" and one which could be enjoyed over a lifetime.

The tennis camps are scheduled for July 12-15 at the Kalam St. courts and August 9-12 at the Skeenaview Park courts off Halliwell Ave.

Instructors will include Richard Kriegl, ranked number one in men's tennis in the northwest and perennial winner of the men's singles in the Terrace Open.

The cost is $95, including GST, and registration forms are available at all local school, the recreation office at the arena and Safeway.

Although players can sign on simply by showing up on the first day of the camp, they run the risk of there being no places available.

With the popularity of the sport here, pre-registration is recommended.

RICHARD KRIEGL, the northwest's top male player, will be one of the Tennis Unlimited camp instructors.

Karate trio on top form

The competition was Junior Yellow belt, but the results were gold and bronze for the Hill brothers.

Tyrel Hill returned home from the National Karate Association's Spring Tournament in Vancouver with a pair of golds, earned in Kata and Kihon Ippon Kumite.

Sibling rival Tanner also doubled, picking up a bronze in those same competitions.

Another strong performance was turned in by Terrace's third representative at the competition, Paul Fleming just missing a medal in the Youth Green belt Kumite (sparring) and finishing sixth in Kata.

Local club coach Norm Goodlad pointed out the tournament was one of the biggest of the year and was open to all styles. Terrace is a Chito Ryu club.

The size of the entry, he added, meant the local trio were up against 18 other competitors in their respective divisions.

Goodlad explained an unexpected shift in the dates of the tournament was the reason the Terrace contingent was not as large as usual.

The Chito-Ryu club has now shut down for the summer but will be back in the public eye in September when they start recruiting members for the '93-'94 season, he said.

SOCCER Trio tackle Interiors

Terrace Youth Soccer will field three teams at this weekend's Interior Provincial 'B' playoffs.

The under-14 boys, under-19 girls and under-19 boys will all be boarding the bus tomorrow for the 18-hour trip to the Kelowna playdowns.

There they will face other zone champs from northern B.C. to the US border.

The winners in each age division will earn the right to represent the Interior against the coast champs the following weekend.

"The competition will be pretty stiff," TYS president Bev Butjas said of the task facing the Terrace teams.

However, she maintained, the teams had as good a chance as any at the tournament.

Suggesting the toughest part of the tournament would be the long drive to get there, Butjas conceded, "that's a fact of life up here in the north."

The under-14 boys and under-19 girls will also be going in without the benefit of a zone playoff game warm up.

That's because Kitimat and Prince Rupert both passed on challenging Terrace at the June 12 eliminator.

The under-19 boys, however, did get a chance to test their mettle against Prince Rupert.

With both teams evenly matched, that game turned into a thriller with end-to-end play throughout and enough goals to provide the crowd with lots of exciting moments.

Terrace had the extra needed, though, edging their rainbow city rivals 4-3 to book the trip to Kelowna.

Butjas noted rule changes this year mean those born after August 1, 1974 can compete. Previously any player born in 1974 was too old to qualify.

She said that rule change had made a big difference to the Terrace team because the players would have that much more experience heading into the Interiors.

The Terrace teams will also go into the tournament with something of a reputation...but a good one thanks to last year's under-18 boys team.

Butjas recalled they were selected the playdowns' most sportsmanlike team.

Noting there was only one such award given out, she explained that meant they were judged the sportsmanlike of all the teams taking part in all the various divisions.

Northmen clinch first

Terrace Northmen got an early scare in their latest rugby battle with Prince Rupert.

And it had nothing to do with the Rainmen's play.

"There was dust on the field," Northmen's David Hull explained.

Given the game was being played in the City of Rain-bows, Hull said the sight caused initial confusion in the Terrace ranks.

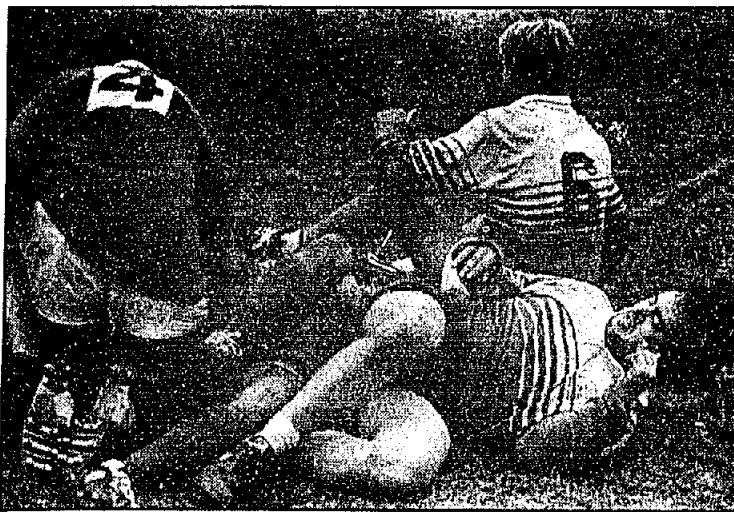

However, the Northmen recovered from the shock quickly and ran out 10-0 winners in a tight, defensive battle June 12.

Describing the match as "a spirited affair", Hull said it was the first time this season Terrace's first line scrum players had all been in action.

And, it was also the first time the Northmen forwards had "pushed Rupert around".

As a result, Terrace had taken possession on every one of their put-ins and a good number of "Rupert's".

That and good handling by the backs gave the Northmen a decisive edge, despite the solid defensive play of the host team.

Darryn Eves struck for the only try of the game, his second of the season. Doug Wilson put away the convert and added a penalty to consolidate his place atop the Northmen scoring stats.

Hull noted the Rainmen had made gallant efforts late in the game to get on the board only to have their breakaways smothered by the Northmen.

The Northmen head to Smithers this weekend for a season-ending double header.

Regardless of the outcome, Terrace has first place sewn up but the meetings give Smithers Camels a long shot chance at catching Prince Rupert in the runner-up battle.

The 'hills' will soon be alive with hikers

The snow may be long gone in the valleys, but the Terrace Hiking club still expect to run across some on a few of the outings they have planned for the rest of the summer.

Sunday, July 11 is a case in point. That's when they head for Robinson Ridge, near Kitimat.

A steep, but very scenic trail, past experience tells them they could run into snow patches along the approximately 4km walk in.

Hikers can either meet at the Terrace library at 8 a.m. for the car pool or drive to Kitimat, meeting there at 9 a.m. at the chamber of commerce sign at Forest Ave. and Hwy 37 South, on the left just past the Hirsch Creek bridge.

For more information, contact hike leader Jim Thorne at 632-6055.

The following weekend, July 17-18, the club will be holding one of two overnights planned.

Meeting at the library at 9 a.m., the group will drive to Smithers for a nearly 10km walk in to the beautiful Silvern Lakes and great views.

The camp over will be at the municipal campgrounds, so there's no back-packing involved.

Sunday will be a drive to the ski hill to hike in heather, flowers and mountains with a stop at Twin Falls on the way back. It's a moderate hike with only one ridge to be crossed.

Incidentally, the overnights is optional, so those who just want to join in the Saturday excursion and then drove home are welcome to do so.

Mountains, lakes and scenery are on the agenda again Sunday, July 25 when the destination is Maroon Mt., 32km north of Terrace.

The trail is fairly steep for the first couple of kilometres but the terrain then becomes rolling for the remaining 3km to the old miners cabin at the end.

Meet at the library at 9 a.m. and, as with each all-day hike, bring lunch.

The August long weekend sees a return to the Smithers area, this time the Silver King Basin.

Setting out from the library at 9 a.m. Saturday, July 31, the club will take the moderate 10km walk in. This is another overnighter but this time there is a large, well-kept building at trail's end.

There's a heater in the cabin -- good for cooking up eggs and soup -- and a creek runs past the door.

The trip includes climbing Hyland Pass (fairly easy) to enjoy the flowers, scenery and a chance to see some old mine buildings.

Sunday, August 8 the destination is closer to home, Mount Elizabeth in Kitimat.

Those taking the fairly steep, three-hour climb will be rewarded with great views.

Car poolers meet at the library at 8 a.m., drivers at the chamber of commerce sign on Forest Ave. in Kitimat.

Sunday, August 15 sees the club head up the Comeau Trail near Seeley Lake, 112km east of Terrace.

The road in, a rough 4x4 one, is a little more than 5km followed by a 3km hike through mostly open mountain and over a ridge to the old railway.

Alternatively, hikers can choose to hike to the top of the mountain if they prefer.

Meet at the library at 9 a.m. but note the hike will be cancelled if it's raining because the road in gets greasy at the lower levels when wet.

Finally, the club will be checking out the old Kleanza mines Sunday, August 22.

Near Kleanza Park, the moderate 4km walk in leads to the old tunnels. They'll also be hoping to find the trail beyond this time!

Meet at the library at 9 a.m. and bring a flashlight.

Unless specified otherwise, the contact for information on all the above is Vicki at 635-2935.

All hikes are weather-permitting, of course, and people are reminded to please leave their dogs at home.

SOFTBALL

Golden girls take to diamonds

Teams from across the north-west will be here this weekend for the Gold Cup girls invitational softball tournament.

In Bantam division action, West End Chevron, Alm-Wood Contracting, Lazelle Mini-Storage and the Kermode Friendship Centre will be taking on Pharmasave and Petrocan, both from Smithers.

The teams will play a modified elimination series beginning 9 a.m. Saturday morning with the finals taking place Sunday at 3 p.m.

With eight teams vying for the PeeWee trophy, the entry will be split into two divisions, each of which will play a round robin series.

The top team from each division will then meet in the Sunday, 3 p.m. final.

Dairy Queen, Gemma Bath Boutique, Centennial Lions and Totem Furniture will carry Terrace's colours against visitors Aiyansh, Kitwanga and Calderwood and Al's Custom Auto of Smithers.

All games are being played at Elks Park and there will be awards for most valuable player, top batter, top pitcher and the Gold Cup player of the game.

Also being planned is an exhibition game for early Saturday evening.

That will see the Midget girls warm up for their provincial championship bid by taking on a Senior Ladies team.

Tournament co-director Pete Pauls said everyone was welcome to come down and take in the games and cheer on the players in what is their final tournament of the year.

WATER FIGHT? No, just a pitcher-batter duel in Squirt tournament action over the weekend. At right, Kinsmen pitcher Stacey Clark watches her delivery wing its way plateward. At left, Cedar-land Tire batter Jocelyn Lindenbach wins the battle with a blooper down the first base line for a single. The duo were taking part in the annual Minor Softball Girls Silver Cup held at Elks Park.

Eight take chequered flag for first time this season

For eight drivers taking part, the third Terrace Speedway meet of the season marked their first victory of '93.

Ron Harris in #69 got the wheels rolling by taking the chequered flag in Saturday's Sportsman's trophy Dash.

Having obviously decided he liked the taste of victory, Harris repeated the feat the following day.

It was much the same story with Charlie Ellis who took the 'A' Street trophy Dash Saturday, went on to win the Main that same day and then wrapped up a strong weekend with a Dash repeat Sunday.

Other Saturday first-time winners were Dennis Bailey ('B' Street Dash and Heat), Sharon Fagan ('C' Hobby Dash) and Leslie Quast ('C' Hobby Main).

Sunday was the breakthrough day for Guy Lynch in the 'B' Hobby Heat while Ralph Weber finished clear of the field in the Sportsman Jamboree.

And Jules LaFrance, frequent winner last season, broke his '93 drought with a victory in the 'A' Hobby Dash.

That was the only 'A' Hobby race of the weekend Brent McCarron did not win, his five victories in car 81 taking his tally to 13, highest among all racers.

Major Craig added a couple to lift his 'A' Street total to 10 wins, a figure matched by 'C' Street ace Jennifer Darby who doubled in the Dash and Main over the weekend.

Ernie Perkins in #5 leads the Sportsman win table with seven while Dan Thickett's Sunday sweep was enough to edge him past Gord Klassen in 'B' Hobby triumphs.

Joe Botz's seven wins is tops among 'B' Street drivers but he's having to contend with a charging Fraser Sutherland.

Seven is also the number of flags taken so far by Elizabeth Cloakey and tops in 'C' Hobby.

Wanna play some 3-on-3?

Take in a basketball game while you shop?

You can do just that Saturday, July 24 when the first annual Central Mountain Air 3-on-3 basketball toumey tips off.

Organizer Michael Hogg said the day-long event will be held in the parking area at TNJ Sounds, on Lakelse Ave.

The entry fee is $60 per trio but, with the winners each receiving a return ticket to Vancouver on CMA, that's good value.

Hogg said athletic wear including three pairs of Nike Jordan basketball shoes are also on the prize list.

The entry deadline is Friday, July 16 and forms can be picked up at TNJ Sounds.

Noting 3-on-3 had caught on in a big way down south, Hogg said that and the enthusiasm for basketball up here had been the reasons for staging what he hoped would be the first annual such tournament.

Every player will get a T-shirt commemorating their participation and all are guaranteed a minimum of three games.

The format the toumey will follow will depend on the number of entries, but Hogg said reaction had been good to date.

For more information, phone TNJ at 638-1200 or Hogg, evenings, at 635-1367.

Rudon awakening

"Two years ago they were knocking on the door.

"Last year they were pounding on it and this year I think they could kick it in!"

While admitting the words aren't original, Men's Slo-Pitch statistician Bob Dempster says they fairly describe Rudon Enterprises.

A middle of the road team in the past and used to eating SKB Molson Wreckers' and Westpoint Rentals' diamond dust, Rudon are emerging as a real threat this year.

"They picked up some new players and they really look like a contender now," Dempster said.

For evidence, he pointed to Rudon's last three outings: three wins without giving up a single run, one being a 4-0 shot-out of Westpoint.

The hattrick sent Rudon back to the top of the league table, tied with the Wreckers with a 6-3 record.

The two teams are due to go head-to-head next Monday night, 7:45 p.m. at Riverside Park.

Westpoint, who've slipped a game back into third, face the Wreckers on Friday, same time, same place.

Your Road Maintenance Contractor
Serving Terrace, Kitimat, The Nass Valley

It is hard to believe but when you are reading this update the sun will be heading south again and the length of the daylight hours will have begun to shorten!

Our summer maintenance program is in full swing. The dust control and stabilization program has been completed. The majority of the regravelling scheduled for this year has been completed and the annual ritual of grass cutting is well underway. The next major activity to be undertaken by the Company is the machine patching program. Terrace Paving will be carrying out this work for the Company. Weather permitting the works will be carried out as follows:

July 5th to July 9th	: Highway 16 East and Krumm Road
July 12th to July 21st	: Kalum Lake Road
July 22nd to July 27th	: Highway 16 West

While this work is underway there will be single lane traffic and delays of up to 20 minutes.

This is the time of year when our Highways are at their busiest, school is out which signals the start of tourist season. It also means an increase in the pedestrian traffic and that combined with the work being carried out on the Highways demands that we all drive with care and attention.

To report any maintenance problems that you encounter please call:

Terrace Area	: Bob Bowle	638-8383
Kitimat Area	: Clarence Baker	632-5876

Lakelse Lake and Rural Terrace
HOUSE NUMBERING

The Regional District of Kitimat-Stikine is undertaking a project this summer to provide house numbering and street addresses for Lakelse Lake and Greater Terrace.

By providing this service, it will be easier for emergency response services such as ambulance, police, or fire department, delivery services, utility companies, and out-of-town friends to locate your residence.

Employees of the Regional District will be going door to door to assign house numbers. They will leave an envelope containing the address and legal description of your property, the minimum size requirements for the numbers, and general direction on where to locate the numbers so that they will be visible from the roadway. The home owner will be required to obtain and install the numbers.

We ask for your assistance and cooperation. If you have any questions, please contact:
