Construction crews have begun to dismantle the Peters Building in order to make way for a new parking lot for staff and faculty. Students will still have to park in the lots by Fairway Mall.

New parking lot for Laurier

by V. P. Scarlett

Today Dr. Tayler's office made public plans to demolish the F.C. Peters Building in order to provide better parking facilities for the university Physical Plant and Planning staff, better known as the "janitors".

When asked why the new building, home to thousands of nesting Business students, was no longer seen as a necessary part of the Laurier campus, Dr. Tayler replied, "Heck those guys have gotta put their mopeds somewhere. The Peters Building looked OK for a while but we're a progressive university—gotta keep ahead of the game and it looks like parking lots are where it's at. We already got it in the Laurier film anyway."

The parking lot is going to be called the N.H. Tayler Parking Lot named after a notable figure on campus. "It will be a deep indigo, almost black in colour, with straight canary or schoolbus yellow lines designating the areas where the mopeds are to be parked. We're positive on the layout and now we just have to make up our minds about the colours. John and I are torn over the canary yellow and Pete wants to branch out into either baby blue or fuchsia pink", said Dr.

Tenders have been submitted to destroy the building. Dr. Tayler tells us that a group of Arts students has been chosen from the tenderers to take the building apart brick by brick.

Chandeliers and crystal

by Jean-Guy Brideau

In a recent meeting of the School of Business and Economics, plans were finalized for a new Private Dining Lounge for executive members of the faculty. Commenting on the new facility, Dean of Business Dr. M. Stewart stated that in addition to eight Boda chandeliers and the Tasmanian rugs, the new Restaurant/Club/Commuter Lounge will feature taped recordings of French 101 lectures. Explaining the reasons for the tapes, Dr. Stewart further stated that there was a need to instruct profs in French. Apparently, since English did not seem a sufficiently understood language within the faculty, a substitute language was deemed necessary.

Dr. Trevor Crick, having just recently received his doctorate and thereby gained eligibility to use the new facility, said he felt that a dining room like this could "greatly aid in developing my and other profs' prestige on campus". He merrily mentioned that he would be pushing hard to see that shelves and shelves of textbooks would be available in the room, "We like books you know, lots and lots of 'em".

When Prof. Glen Carroll was asked whether or not he felt that the new area would be at all in competition with Wilf's, he cautiously replied "there are no silly French tapes in Will's".

Many of the other faculty members declined comment on the new lounge, as the final membership list for the room had not, as of yet, been completed.

Millie Reiner, in Food Services, also was reluctant to talk about the proposed menu and prices for the new "club". She did, however, say that "after several trips to Ottawa" she has many new ideas in mind.

A female biz prof??

by Frizz

WLU's Business School is marking International Women's Year a little late.

A decision made by the Senate Thursday night means WLU will have a female lecturer in Business in the person of Dr. Pat Jamieson.

"We're glad to have those screaming feminists off our backs" was the comment of one high administration official. "Now that we've hired a woman, they can't say they're being discriminated against".

One Senator, who preferred not to be identified, said he believed that many Senators had not been aware that Dr. Jamieson was in fact a woman. "A lot of those old geezers haven't seen a woman in so many years they've forgotten what one looks like". The source continued by explaining that many Senators are only allowed off the geriatric wards of Sunnydale Nursing Home every ten years to go to Senate meetings.

One Business prof, whose name could not be confirmed but started with Mc-, scoffed at the idea of Senators being unaware they had just hired a woman. "Those old boys knew what they were doing all right. They just weren't sure of Miss Jamieson's qualifications offsetting the fact that she is a woman."

Dr. Jamieson has three doctorates, one of which is an honourary degree from WLU. She has been chief lecturer in Marketing at the London School of Economics and guest lecturer in Industrial Relations at Harvard Business School. For the past ten years, she was Marketing Promoter at McDonald's.

"I don't know about the rest of the faculty, but I'd be willing to let her in on the probation," Mc said.

"It's going to be a problem" was Director of Physical Plant and Planning's Wes Robinson's comment.
"We'll have to put a woman's washroom in the Peters Building". Robinson said that facilities would be set up in the Atrium for the convenience of Dr. Jamieson. "We're exploring offers from Porte-San and Johnny-on-the-Spot".

Pat is the Cord Mascot. It is a requirement of the Cord's incorporation to have her picture published in the Cord at least once a year. "That's slot of buil."

Some Spring Whimperings

This warning is written for the benefit of all innocent, unsuspecting and unattached guys. BEWARE! Spring is upon us. With the season comes extreme dangers to both your lifestyle and independence.

Unless you are doubly on guard and in control of yourself, you will undoubtedly fall prey to that weaselly-winged cretin with his bows and arrows. You know who I mean.

A mere moment's lapse of concentration and you could end up twinkly eyed and gushing all over the place. So watch it!

Before delving into the effects which the coup de foudre could have upon you, carefully contemplate the carefree splendour of your present situation.

Would you want to give it all up? Not a chance. Tom Waits put it best when he sang of benefits of bachelorhood.

"I'm gonna sleep in till the crack of noon,

Midnights howlin' at the moon.

Spend my evenings drinkin, coming home when I please, No need to ask permission if I wanna go out fishin',

Never have to ask for the keys."

Indeed. Does a fish need a bicycle? Is the pope Polish? — oops, never mind that one.

Gentlemen, the obligations and headaches which a relationship would cause you far outweigh any fleeting moments of happiness which you might possibly experience.

Don't find out the hard way.

Wahdda ya mean you don't believe me? If you get lost enough to become involved with someone, you can kiss the whole summer goodbye. You'll be swept right into a whirlwind, and there will be snow on the ground before you know it. What's worse, you won't even care about all the time you waste.

The stupidity which that state of mind puts you through is incredible. The brain turns into a marshmallow. Logic leaves on the next flight out.

Still not convinced? Well, if you're dumb enough to want to play Romeo, kiss your wallet goodbye. You and your florist will be on a first name basis, because you'll be seeing a lot of each other.

However, you'll offset that cost by the savings of wear on your shoes, seeing as your feet will scarcely ever touch the ground.

Conscious of your appearance? You'll be so meticulously neat, clean shaven and proper that even your friends won't recognize you. Tucked in shirt, combed hair — don't forget to wash behind your ears.

Is that any way to spend the best part of the year?

In addition to being completely dazed and unaffected by earthly events and day to day happenings, your entire countenance will change.

Whistling every inane tune or jingle which comes on the radio, and perpetually marked by an ear to ear grin, you may find yourself a candidate for the happy house.

Stranger still, the most potentially annoying or irritating bad news or setbacks are unlikely to disturb you. You won't feel even a quarter as rotten or bitchy as the average person. That should be illegal (everyone should be required by law to feel miserable a certain amount of the time. It's part of being Canadian).

Spring can be an excellent season. The sunshine, and the rebirth of nature in all its splendour should be joyously savoured.

The best way of insuring that you appreciate it to its fullest is to avoid . . . sigh . . . forget everything that I just said.

FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE

The final crunch: common

by Larry Deverett

As the school year nears an end and exams approach all too quickly we find ourselves in a mildly depressive state. Our visits to Will's and the Turret will be but numbers on one hand as final preparation for exams leaves us with more work than we ever realized. Our social and athletic activities will dwindle and diminish as the pressure builds.

It seems so often that the last stretch-the final exam Crunch-is the biggest pain of the year. All term we work like accountants at tax time trying to cope with all of our little assignments and quizzes so that by the end of the year our time could be burden free. How pleasant it would be to end the year in enjoyment. But no, it never happens that way (except on The Brady Bunch. The Crunch comes like it always has in the past and the year ends in anxiety as usual. Well, maybe one day all of that will change but for now we must learn to take theings in stride and cope with the situation.

At WLU there are three predominant types of students who each have their own style of handling the final crunch.

The walt till later student is common to us all. You see him in the library with books open, pen in hand, concentrating and studying; gazing intently. His eyes are focused on the girl three rows up. He doesn't have to study "now" anyways; there'll be plenty of time "later". An hour before the exam he realizes that he better not put it off any longer. He's the one who always comes to the exam carrying an open notebook.

The do I know It student is the real worrier type. He wants that "A" badly and will study for hours on end in preparing for the exam. After he knows his facts cold, he still reviews again and again. He is prepared perfectly but he still

A big F flashes through his thoughts. He's usually the one who comes out of the examtelling you how poorly he didthat is, until he finds out that he got an 'A'.

The One more Beer student is actually quite like the "wait till later". He too is a procrastinator. Usually he can be found in Will's or at the "Loo".

He means to study but he also thinks he ought to have just one more beer to relax him before hitting the books. Half a dozen Exports later he can't even see straight and puts off the studying till tomorrow. After the exam he is in Wilf's again, this time he wants to forget the

Yes, the final crunch brings out the best in us all: anxiety, boredom, pressure, frustration. We all have our own way of going about preparing but in the end we all find ourselves in the same position-pen in hand, tingle in the stomach, and hearing the proctor say "Begin writing, you have until two O'Clock'

Exams really are the best part of the year, though. When else do we have a good excuse for eating every chip, cheezie and cookie in sight and cleaning out the refrigerator without even the slightest feeling of guilt? When else do we ever get a chance to challenge our minds into forcing three dozen stats equations into the memory? When else can we wear torn, dilapitated sweatpants to the library and feel right at home?

Only at exam time. Exams-without them school would be like prison with no bars. But as long as they're here you have to get through them before you're free.

So to all students (and faculty), may the brains of a thousand Albert Einsteins and the persistance of a hundred Winston Churchills guide you through this final last stretch. And for some, may the tactics of a couple of Richard Nixons help you pull through.

But to all-Good Luck in the final crunch.

NIGOL INTERVIEWS KING BILL

by Rick Nigol

Premier Bill Davis and his Ontario Conservatives romped to an impressive victory - winning 70 seats and a comfortable majority - in last Thursday's election. Because of the Cord's fair, evenhanded, and totally unbiased coverage of the campaign, the Premier graciously granted us an exclusive interview. Safely in office again, Davis is now able to loose up and be his usual provocative self.

Cord: Mr. Davis, to what do you attribute the failure of the other parties being unable to make any gains in last week's election?

Davis: That's simple - they just didn't address the issues.

Cord: What were the issues?

Davis: Me, the Queen, God, motherhood and the country.

Cord: In that order?

Davis: Yes.

Cord: Immediately before the campaign began, you introduced the I.D.E.A. agency and the B.I.L.D. program. Are there any similar programs presently in the works? Davis: Yes there are. Three schemes which come to mind are entitled P.O.W.E.R., D.Y.N.A.S.T.Y., and C.Y.N.I.C. The first program addresses the problem of costly and unneccesary elections. Let's face it, they only interrupt the governing process and accomplish very little. They are a waste of your time and mine. In the long run we hope to "Phase Out Wasteful Election Reruns". The second program is aimed at correcting the slanted image that many still have of the Conservative Party (even after almost 40 yeas of rule). A massive ad campaign entitled "Dump Your Nasty Assumptions about Stogy Tory Yahoos" should do the trick. A third problem which must be addressed is that of very low levels of voter awareness. This is why we propose an education campaign to be called, "Can You Notice Innovative Con-jobs?"

Cord: There have been accusations that you have bought Ontario voters with their own money. What is your response to these claims? Davis: You're just angry because you didn't get any of it.

Cord: Well, now that you mention it, students did get the short end of the stick. If you want our vote, sir, you're going to have to pay for it.

Davis: You mean ... you didn't vote for me?

Cord: Not exactly . . . but please sit down . . . that's no reason to leave.

Cord: Polls indicated very early that you had the election wrapped up yet you campaigned rigorously, sometimes making three or four stops a day. Were there concerns that the majority you sought was not as close at hand as it seemed? Davis: I wasn't overly concerned. Actually, I campaigned with so much fervor because I enjoy parading into little backwood towns. I can't think of anything more enjoyable than kissing snottynosed little brats and having my hand crushed by over-zealous farmers.

Cord: The Conservative Party has made its committment to nuclear energy well known. Considering the ridiculously high costs of plants such as the Burlington station and the innumerable dangers, are you going to stick to this asinine policy?

Davis: You're not one of those commie-pinko environmentalistsare you?

Cord: No, actually I just have this aversion to radiation poisoning.

Cord: Recently, pressure has been applied to increase public funding of separate schools. What is your position on this issue?

Davis: Let me make one thing perfectly clear. We have never bent over backwards to accommodate frogs, nicks, whaps, spics or wetbacks before, and are not going to begin to now.

Cord: Has your attitude towards French language rights in Ontario changed?

Davis: I doubt it. Those damn pea soupers are a genuine pain in the ass. They really are going too far. You can't even read the side of a cereal box without having to get a dictionary.

Cord: Are you going to instruct Attorney General Roy McMurtry to you didn't get any of it. conduct an inquiry into the police Cord: Well, now that you mention raids on gay bath houses in it, students did get the short end of Toronto?

Davis: Listen, as long as I'm Premier of this province, a bunch of mealy-mouthed fagots are not going to take over a whole city.

Cord: During the campaign there was a rally at which a disgruntled hospital worker pleaded her case. Did we noticed a twinge of compassion on your face? Davis: No actually it was indigestion. When you're on the campaign trail, you're forced to eat on the run. Sometimes it catches up with you.

Cord: Your son is a Laurier student. Does he attend this university because of its superior reputation and quality teaching staff?

Davis: To tell you the truth, I couldn't afford to send him to U of T or Queen's. Have you checked out tuition fees lately - not to mention accommodation and books. It's really getting out of hand.

Cord: Did you enjoy your visit to Laurier last month?

Davis: Yes, it's always a great thrill to come and visit my good friend and former WLUSU President, Mike Brown. He's a fine example of what the Anthropology Department is turning out.

Cord: All three parties have stated that they favour the decriminalization of marijuana. Have you ever smoked pot, Mr. Davis?

Davis: No, but I have done acid. In fact, during the Federal-Provincial conference last September when I suported Trudeau's constitutional position-I was in the midst of a real mindblower. I didn't realize that I agreed with him until I watched the Cord: You have made a lot of promises in this past campaign, Mr. Davis. Too many, in fact, to list. Considering the many unfulfilled promises left over from the 1977 campaign, why should we take you seriously now?

Davis: It really burns me up when people constantly dwell on the negative. That's not what our party is all about. We concentrate on the positive, we look to the future and it looks good. Yes, LIFE IS GOOD ONTARIO!

Cord: As the party is so forward looking, are we to assume you are going to take your new mandate and get down to business? Davis: Yes, we are looking ahead. Right now we are drawing up a strategy that will get us elected in 1986.

UW library: it's all a commie plot

by Kinky-San

Students using UW library are the unsuspecting pawns in what is undoubtedly a leftist infiltration scheme.

Students leaving the building are overtly searched by agents posing as library officials. Although the "officials" do, on occasion feign an interest in the due dates of library materials, students must be aware that an institution as advanced as UW doubtless has an electric system to perform that function. Such a system could easily be incorporated in the famed "bar code"system which is effectively used on a few, if not several library materials, some, (bordering on most) of the time.

The agent/officials have been observed unabashedly sporting RED blazers with startling frequency. Also noted has been the conspirational conversations held between pairs of the men throughout the day and questions have arisen as to why more than one person is posted at the doors.

UW administration has made no move to check the operation, evidence that infiltration may have already reached that level.

The exact nature of the operation link to the gay liberation organization, promoting contact between these men and the male student body, are believed false.

is uncertain, although rumours of a

Connections have also been made to a series of incidents in nearby Waterloo park in which students have been subjected to remarkably similar forms of harassment and invasion of personal property.

Students who must use UW library are advised to avoid eye contact with the agents and to report any suspicious electronic devices, propaganda, or the colour red appearing on anything which has been frisked by the organization. It is also suggested that small handbags be carried, as these are apparently not functional for the organization.

Meanwhile UW students are being permitted to use facilities at WLU although some Waterloo students have expressed strange fears of being attacked by the swinging gate here at Laurier.

New party service

by Grimmer's Daughter

Need a quick way to make money? Well, "Big Bob's Bouncers" are looking for hefty fellows to rent themselves out for parties.

How did this service start? Big Bob the Bouncer said that it was due to the increasing "borrowing" taking place at local parties. "Of course these visitors are allowed to help themselves to food, booze, appliances and cosmetics, but we just want to make sure it is distributed fairly among the guests" he explained. When asked if maybe all this "borrowing" should not take place, Bob replied "well, it's the owner's generosity. When they have a party, of course they expect everyone to take their food, clothes, etc. I mean, it's only fair!

What are the most unique items stolen at parties? According to Bob, almost everything is taken: toasters, shampoo, telephones, chairs.

So if you are having an open party, give Bob and his buddies a call to make sure your belongings are given out fairly!

I don't know too much about all the constitutional stuff you've been mentioning but if Joe Clark opposes it, it sounds okay by me.

If the Senate proves to be interesting and you think I should stay on past the end of August, I'd be quite willing to take a year off school.

NEXT WEEK: SPECIAL EDITION OF THE CORD

MORE STEREOTYPES

by Carl Friesen

Once more we examine the fascinating fact of life called SOCIALIZATION. Most high school graduates who come to this place fit the norm of being elitist, from fairly wealthy families, uninspired, and wondering why they're here. It is only after they start to find their place in life, especially in the associates they have chosen usually by chance, that they start to aquire their eventual characteristics.

It might be of interest to discover how the general characteristics of the slimy business student, alcoholic philosophy student, and drug crazed political science student first evolved, but it is a fact that the junior members of any faculty or group assimilate the outlook of their seniors. Thus the tradition is maintained.

As any sociologist knows, it is not necessarily the truth of the situation that matters most, but rather what everybody thinks is the truth.

For example, the typical perception of a football major is of a large, dullwitted, bovine creature, cramped into a too-small desk, thick fingers wrapped painfully around a pencil. Sweat oozes from every pore and the brow furrows with concentration as the unaccustomed and lightly used mind attempts to memorize a Shakespearian couplet.

Such may not in fact be universally characteristic (some football players are trusted with pens) but the important thing is that everyone, wanting to appear normal and be accepted by her or his peers. starts to act like those of one's own group.

WLUSU hacks are perhaps one of the least known but most representative examples of such socialization. Almost by definition they are highly resume-conscious. WLUSUites are divided into several subspecies: elected officials, hirelings, games room people (strictly peripheral), Turret people, and Will's elitists.

All have developed a curious amorality and elitism that allows them to drink in Wilf's between 2:00 and 4:00 on selectd Thursdays when the place is closed to the plebes. They tend to think they run the school only everybody else knows it's really the students who do.

All WLUSU hacks are required to sign up on the schedule posted outside John Karr's office giving times when they will be available to sit and watch John work. Rumors are that some have had to do double shifts because one newly elected official refuses to participate.

All WLUSU hacks are either Business or Political Science students (except for the annually acclaimed Music director, if any). They study each other because they're going to have to do it all their lives and might as well start now.

The Games Room Addlet is the type who keeps the WLUSU hack in beer and pretzels. By default, all Games Room Addicts are male. Women are not allowed in the games room anyway (that's why the women's washroom is in there) so all women who want to play pool or pinball have to do it vicariously. Games room people are divided Games room people are divided into those who prefer the crude reality of pool and those who enjoy the (McLuhanists take note!) electronic illusion of a video game. Video addicts evolve intense personal relationships with the images on the screen and endow them with the attributes of living things. This is now made easier because the machines have a way of talking back.

Armbands and Eroticism

The controversy surrounding the perils of females walking through Waterloo Park unaccompanied has been drastically altered. The women of WLU and UW, having grown tired of being abused simply because they are female have quite unexpectedly become the predators instead of the prey.

According to Sonya Ralph, an avid writer for the Cord, it all started with the appearance of the volunteer patrols. These patrollers, having previously been lifeguards at the Waterloo Park pool (and we all know what lifeguards look like), are identifiable by the bright orange arm bands they wear.

According to Ralph, when worn by these patrollers this armband produces erotic feelings in the female genre. Ralph and various other females of the Cord staff, upon seeing these patrollers lost all control and the patroller was seized and raped unmercifully.

When the news ws spread around, curious females ventured to the park to witness the eiresistable patrollers for themeeles. They, too, were overcome with 1st.

However, there is one consolation in that the number of patrollers has increased from a mere dozen to almost fifty.

Pig Slop, Our Slop, Study Says

by Grimmer's Daughter

After finding that the Dining Hall gives its scraps to a local hog farmer the Cord has discovered that the situation might be, in fact, a two way street. Students at Laurier may be receiving sty scraps.

Although nothing has been proven as yet, one student remarked that the spareribs she had the other night looked very much like the bones she threw away the week before, except they were covered in a red "sauce".

Several dons, who have lived in residence for more than a year, speculated on what might be under the gravy which the Dining Hall staff insists on glopping on so thickly. Questions have also arisen over the exact origin of the gravy itself.

Deep-frying, also a popular sport in the Dining Hall, would easily cover up the appearance of pig scraps, the Cord has learn.

When questioned, Health authorities stated that the scraps had already been sterilized for the pigs so there was little need to do so for the students.

Following on the pig scrap discovery, the Cord has also found that fairly large industrial donations have been made to the dining hall. Kaufmann Shoes was reported to have delivered liver to Laurier and B.F. Goodrich has, to keep up with local competition, donated the roast beef. When told of the discovery, students were heard to comment, "No wonder it tastes like shoe leather and rubber."

Southern Comfort. Enjoy it straight up, on the rocks or blended with your favourite mixer.

Who are the Blushing Brides?

by Andy Rizzo

Was it the Rolling Stones? Possibly Jagger and the Boys flew up from the deep south to catch the audience by surprise. I didn't know why the Stones would play at the Turret but were they great! And I think the capacity crowd at the pub would agree. They began the performance with the Emotional Disco and it was much different from the original, and at that point there were people on the dance floor moving about to the point that people were guarding what they had left of their toes.

The singer still anonymous, was a stunning look-alike to Mick Jagger and sang with the vigour and aggressiveness of Jagger as well. There were similar mannerisms in the way in which the singer projected himself in the 'vain' of Jagger, with the movements of placing his hands on his hips, his facial expressions, etc.

The medley finished with the ending of "Fingerprint File" that brought back memories of the days of the Watergate scandal. One of the highlights of the evening was "Midnight Rambler" at which point the vocalist was singing on top of the gigantic speakers. Although this action was characteristic of Jagger, they introduced themselves twothirds of the way through the performance as the Blushing Brides, and specifically the singer himself as Maurice Raymond.

The biggest highlight of the evening however was the song "Jumping Jack Flash" which made the encore a "gas, gas, gas".

Cat scratch fever in the audience. That band made my blood boil. Those other Aussie bands got their wires crossed but the audience was really wired after listening to this kick ass, blow out, warm up band that preceded that other washboard shiffle group called (augh) AC/DC.

Lead singer (screamer) Firmin was as vile (if not more so) than a Mexican sewer rat. His stage presence puts Mojo to talent show shame. What he did with that mike made Morrison look like a nun. His strutting and rye induced massaging of his tight leathers makes Carol Pope look like a lily white virgin.

Can he sing? That's not the issue. The band carried his rasping, raging vocals with a pulverizing mesmerizing rhythm driven along by Skinned Knee's awesome triplets and Scab Labour's soaring three chord progression. Said lead guitarist Cad Avers, "Man we was hot. We blew them boppers clear into the exit of the 401",

On their debut release on Dirt Records, they are able to faithfully recapture all the devastation of their live performances. All their biggest hits are included. Kil Basa, the newly recruited bass player (hired to replace Luke Emia who died giving blood in a back alley) was heard to mutter: 'All our personal faves are here. We spent a few skins and a couple of hours of studio time reworking our smash biggies, like Albanian Girls, it just like, blew our minds. And if you listen closely to Animals (the Japanese hit of 1940-45), at half speed backwards, you can even hear Luke Emia saying "I'm not dead, dig me up, dig me up".

I'm not saying it's good, but, like, we really like it. Luke did too. Added Scab Labour: "He really is dead you know. At least we think so. It'd be kind of embarrassing if he wasn't". Skinned Knee agrees, "Yeah", he is quoted as saying.

The album includes many songs not yet thought about. In fact, as far as this reviewer is concerned, their follow-up release on Too Far North Records, called (tentatively) Eskimo Reggae, and featuring Inuit Girls, should be more satisfying to Firmin's fans.

Firmin's Virmins appear nightly at Firmin's Hideaway. Tickets available from Chaps.

Ted Nugent is sporting a new hairdo these days. Recently one of his ardent fans had caught his waist length hair in a whirling lathe. The poor fellow's mass of hair quickly and tightly bound itself around the spinning spindles. Only an observant employee with a handy pair of big scissors saved the young lad from a bloody horrendous death. Ted Nugent, noticeably affected by the incident, immediately went to his hardresser and had his hair, no, not cut, but put in a bun.

At a press announcement, the new Ted exclaimed precisely why he did it. "I don't tell my adoring and paying fans to grow their hair the way I do but if they did do it anyway and then proceeded to get their hair caught and their heads severed in nasty brutish machines, then I wouldn't have an audience left to play to". Outside the press announcements many irate fans expressed distaste and disgust with the Nuge's new haircut. "How can I go around looking like that. I mean it would be worse than the time I got my head shaved, for good money of course". Another fan said, "Gee, how can I go around headbanging to Ted's music now? What would my friends think? What would my grandmother think?

Wendy O and the Plasmics were recently awarded the "Dada" award for their unique "art" at a star-studded glittering banquet at the Las Vegas Hilton. This distinguished award given in memorium of the nihilitic, anarchistic, disturbing art form of the 1920's was received by a Miss Wendy O, bedecked in shaving cream and various strategically placed cherries. After she received the award, a formless glob of black putty, a member of her band, the one with the Mohawk haircut, cut the thing into two pieces with a buzzing chainsaw.

Well, that was their intention anyway, but what really happened was that the award was splintered into a million tiny pieces. At this, the presenter and glittering crowd applauded wildly. Not realizing how little force was required to cut the "Dada" in two, he accidentally cut off his right leg from the downward thrust of the chainsaw.

Holding the severed limb in his 'safe" arms and hobbling on this other good leg, he exclaimed: "Well this leg, former leg was always getting me in trouble anyway. At least I've got one less place to stick my needles in now." The Dada's foundation accompanying statement to the presentation of the award claimed that Wendy and the Plasmics' "art" is in the true tradition of worthless, ugly, repulsive, violent, socially malignant, disturbing and hence redeemable and reflective "art".

Non-Cordies stay out

by Zackobbie

Remember that empty office across from the Student Pubs office on that mysterious floor between those which house the Turret and Wilf's? Only the Cordies know it best and soon it will be theirs. Due to the fact that the Cordies spend most of their precious time writing and printing the Cord, they find that as exam time draws near, they must once again play student which they have little opportunity to do during the year. For this reason the office which housed Dean Nichols and his trusty secretary will provide for their two greatest and most essential

The inner office (which no one can see from the outside nor will they know about) will be converted into a combination body rub parlor and lounge equipped with plush furniture, bar and sleeping quarters. Each Cordie who uses these facilities will be recognized by distinctly marked black bags under eyes and pale, white complexions. They will have special passes tatooed on their foreheads...a typewriter or pen and paper, depending on their position on the staff.

The outer office will be constructed in a similar fashion to the Waterloo County morgue, fully equipped with long drawers that can be rented for a nominal fee according to one's height. They'll be perfectly soundproof, each about 3 feet high so the Cordie can have the convenience of being scated or stretching in a sleeping position. There are super study lamps in each one as well as a set of headphones for the Cordies listening convenience and pleasure.

There are only a couple of small problems which have yet to be dealt with. Every study compartment should have a window in the front to prevent claustrophobic reactions although this would not keep the exhausted Cordies from making faces in the windows when they pass by other compartments on their way out. The other or minor problem that we have recognized, is that the special crank-and-pull-shut-fromthe-inside-closures can only be unlocked from the outside. It is true that this keeps any unauthorized people from kidnapping our studying Cordies but somehow that was the main intention of the manufacturer and not the wishes of the WLUSU and Student Publications Presidents.

Beachball Mania Hits Laurier

In recent weeks a new musical phenomenon has emerged at Laurier and appears ready to break onto the national pop scene. The "Beach-Balls" out of came obscurity on Wednesday of last week to play a whirlwind tour of Clara Conrad.

The group's performances in the packed lounges of Conrad were accompanied by near-riots as uncontrollably excited residents went beserk and tore at the clothes of band members. For some it was too much. WLU Security kept a low

The "Beach-Balls" meteoric rise to super-stardom seems due to a dynamic combination of versatile musical ability, and animalistic charisma. Such songs as "Lazy River", "Greased lightning", and "Yo-Yo", appear destined to set a powerful trend for the music industry of the Eighties.

Steve "The Snatch" Saxmo "is our driving influence", stated other band members to a recent press conference; "Don't forget the chicks", added one. In the interview Saxmo explained, "Music is my middle name - it's what I live for." Saxmo does lead vocals and plays guitar and sax. When questioned, he refused to comment on his nickname.

Much of the band's success can be attributed to the blatantly sexual appeal of guitarist Wally G.L. Gravel, lead vocalist in "Twelfth of Never". "Sure I'm a great guy," stated Wally, "but the fans don't see that behind the phallic magnetism, I'm a sensitive human-being." Wally is a former member of "Gerry and the Facerakers", and would like to do a Save-the-Whales benefit.

Bass player and background vocalist Mike "Slowhand" Ware-ham is the "Beach-Balls" Mr. Mellow. "I like to sleep, or just lie in bed and listen to Q107," states Slowhand; "Quit while you're a head, I always say. This sudden success is hard to explain; all of a sudden me and my bed are going

Drummer Ralph "Madman" Hyatt is a perfect completion of the four. Madman was unavailable for comment as he was getting a 60,000 mile check-up on his lobotomy. "He's got a special deal with Radio-Shack," explained Slowhand, "and they throw in free beach-balls."

The band's unique sound is packaged by Sam "The Mixer" Samaddar, who built the amps and speakers himself, from three old washing machines and a training bra. Sam also is reputed to indulge in periodic crowd-control.

Frantic bids by the promoters to back this talented group have as yet gone unconfirmed. "Ed Sullivan is dead, so for now, we're just after the chicks", reported band leader Saxmo. The band was scheduled to play the Turret earlier this month, but cancelled at the last minute. Watch your paper for announcements of future gigs.

NEW REVOLUTIONS

Dear sirs.

Glad to see that this year you have been jammed to death by several articles. It's too bad about the socalled resurgence of heavy metal, the only good headbanger is a deaf headbanger. With two spectacular (?) concerts this year by Ted Nugent ("The Nuge") the only man that has ever put me to sleep at the concert and Streetheart ("Under My Dump") he can swear but hardly sing, I'm not sure and can't see how anyone of you punters out there can like music that takes such little skill and prowess.

The New-Rock scene in England is alive and well, with bands like "Echo and the Bunnymen" and "Adam and the Ant". At least they get an "A" for effort in choosing their names and while they don't challenge "The Jam" for any of the top spots in the NME polls, they still seem to draw well. Remember, "Echo and the Bunnymen" will be at the Edge (formerly Edgartons) on April 7th, so all psychadelic newwavers should take special note.

Again this year, The Rolling Stones have proved just how bad a band they really are, their new "Sucking in the Seventies" is a very appropriate title, since that is all they have done for the past ten years. The only good music they ever produced was in the late 60's and early 70's. Well, how about Pat Benetar, I have to admit best looking female singer around and she also "buys Canadaian" when shopping for songs and copy but just like Linda Ronstadt, has failed at copying songs for a living so will Benetar.

Billy Joel and Bob Seger proved once and for all how low they can sink when producing an album along with the Stones and Styx, they would have to be the most likely winners of worst bands of 70's. How about the Who, well after 70,000 punter (sardines) packed themselves into the CNE, I'm sure more than one was disappointed. If they can only rely on their old music, their not a classic R&R band.

Best concert in Toronto last year "Siouxsie and the Banshees" at the music hall, classic music following in the footsteps of Sid and Johnny all the way. Best radio station of 1980 next to CILR (RADIO LAURIER) is CFNE 102.1 FM, the only alternative to the headbangers (no brains) life at Q107 Toronto's WORST rock and CHUMP 104, whose competitions and concerts weren't worth the time of day.

The obvious conclusion is that headbangers rule supreme in Southern Ontario (unfortunately) since most of these people are not Uninversity Students (Fortunately), but those who are and like that type of mindless rock should be shot. And something else; Don Hunt kindly reminded me that in 1980, the torque room coffee left something to be desired. Thanks Don!

It seems to me that the opininions in New Revolutions were somewhat biased, but relatively accurate in talking about the new music scene in England. How about the resurgence of AC/DC, remember them last summer? How could we forget. Now what about the New-Wavers of heavy metal, IRON MAIDEN, and lest we forget MOTORHEAD (head as in headbangers?)

The movie American Pop should have been renamed American Slop. The two highlights were Grace Slick with Jefferson Starship and Jimi Hendrix. I think they even threw in the one and only SEX PISTOLS who will live forever in our minds and hearts. Especially Sid's Spectacular rendition of "My Way".

Thanks to Brent (Big B), Sherry (Big S), Mary-Anne (Big M), Nancy (Big W), Al (Big Al), and everyone else for their constant inspirations during my short writing career and also the only people who listened to "The Import Show" on CKWR 98.7 FW and 97.7 FM Cable.

The people in Soc. 202 who took notes for me on Fridays while I was playing Hockey with the Geography group deserve a round of applause. Just like Ponderosa! Applause, with "The Boss" was the height of there with the Who's, 'The Kids are Alright". The Turret should have chance, that would have solved their problems for good, both parties that

Applause. The No-Nukes movie the movie circuit, and is right up got the Buzzcocks when they had the Next year someone else will be stepping into the hot seat of record reviewer, I'll hopefully be contributing the odd article or two but not as diverse as this past year. Thanks again. Faithfully Submitted Paul Weller, Bruce Foxtan and Rick Buckler ("Pube")

SPOTS WLUWINS NATION'L FOOTBALL TITLE

A day at the races

In a few weeks the annual Wilfrid Laurier University Fish Relays will be in full swim. Needless to say, this annual flotilla-gala will be tempting bait to those geometry students calling themselves anglers. Of course, the relays will be overseen by the mercenary Greenfish school to ensure foul play.

Knowledgeable sources close to the swim of things suggest that, sinkor swim, these relays are likely to be far Superior to previous events which, admittedly, laked gill.

Earlier this week, we questioned the participating schools in a number of areas. Each school, after pooling their resources, rather immodestly drowned each other out by proclaiming that they could not be held at bay during the competition. The sporting world was sharked when Delta-Fiord-Tributary predicted a whale of a victory. There was only one minnowous error in their story; they smelt, and no smelly team has ever won a fish relay at this level before. It was with this in mind that race marshalls requested each team to take complete baths before entering the pool. Consequently the Marinas were called in to oversee these newly formed regulations. Unfortunately, due to a boating accident on the Pennsylvania Turn-Pike, they arrived somewhat later than anticipated.

In the few remaining weeks before the championships get underway, there abound a number of "fishstories" too numerous to embargo upon here. Many of these stories though appear fishy.

One of the teams competing was perched sturgeonally in first place throughout the regular loop. They have re-trouted to Whitefish Ontario to do a little fishing before the tension of the relays unfolds.

One little guppy bass-fully commented that although he was hard-of-herring, he would cheer until he flipped.

As you can see, all the participants are eagerly awaiting the relays.

Notably, some of the players were in their team's fish house. One thing is evident though come race day all competitors will be tuned into the same stream-winning.

Each participant is unique and in this regard they are vastly disparate; some are big, some small, some muskie, some thin, but they all have the same goal-to win. These fish take their trade seriously; so seriously in fact that they often need to be pacificified following a race.

The W.L.U. Fish Relays are upon us again and we look with great anticipation at what all indications point to be, the downing of the age of aquarium.

The opening ceremonies get underway next Friday in the Clearwater Building: One H. Salt St.

Flat Head State

News Flash: Flathead State has won the Intramural Basketball title. This caps an undefeated season by the team.

One of the main purposes of intramurals is not only to provide athletes with an opportunity to participate but also to have some fun while doing so. And that is exactly what intramural basketball entry Flathead State has done.

One method by which a team achieves unity and makes playing the game enjoyable is by winning. Flathead has compiled a perfect 5-0 record in league play and has yet to find themselves on the short end of a score in a playoff encounter.

Heading into this week's contest, spokesman "Weavin" Steve Julian outlined some of the reason's for his team's success. "We've been able to have a solid balanced attack first of all." Gord Coldwell provides the team with the necessary outside shooting and big men John Sneyd, Bob Boos, and Mike Stankovits haul in a sizable portion of rebounds.

The team also relies on a mightyat times Iron-clad defence - on which Julian claims, "Our defence is comparable to any in the league. It has only allowed an average of 27 points per game."

This is a meagre total when one compares the statistic to Flathead's average of 75 points scored per

All intramural teams are faced with a massive job of building from scratch. Julian cites this area as one in which the stage crew has managed to gain an edge over its league counterparts. "Coach Stankovits has done a super job in recruiting this fine collection of ball players. We rely heavily on our farm system which we feel is one of the best in the entire league."

Surprisingly, Flathead has not seen the record crowds which usually accompany successful clubs. "Although we do have our loyal fans, the team would like to see more people out to our games and an overall increase in fan support is definitely one of our goals", the spokesman concluded.

One method by which the squad hopes to attract more of the basketball audience to their games is by increasing the exposure of their name through a T-shirt distribution program.

Any interested clients may obtain further information regarding the purchase of the shirts by contacting Steve Julian or Flathead State team members.

If Flathead's enthusiasm towards participation is any indication of the overall enthusiasm of the Intramural teams then the WLU is alive and well.

Hang-Gliding in Invemere

Mountains and lakes; twilight and wine; a gentle breeze and good friends. We were terrified. When John asked us to hang glide in Jasper we said "No!" Suicidal tendencies are common in small towns in Alberta and in BC they run rampant. How one, extraordinarily handsome young bellman from Montreal convinced his best friend and two chambermaids to risk their necks in the hills of Kootenay National Park I'll never understand. He told us that Invemere was an intermediate hang gliding area; and the wind surfing is superb there.

John arranged it all. He filled our wine skins with Doniniat the alcohol store and chased us down Banff Ave. to the traffic circle. He assured us that the sensation of taking to the air is a sensation surpassed by only one other human experience. We opted, or rather wanted, to go for the latter.

After one last swig from the old deer skin we took a run for it. It was definitely the most exquisitely dynamic sensation I have ever experienced in BC or anywhere else. As John's bright wings disappeared beneath the treeline we sat down, had a sip, and breathed a sigh of relief that he was gone.

CHIP'S CHICKEN

What was the most dangerous contact sport in North America? What sport had the most injuries? Was it football, hockey, soccer? Those sports might as well be for wimps and puffs compared to the damage inflicted in the sport in question.

Have you guessed yet? Well, the most dangerous sport was an event for true men and women of courage, only those made of that special stuff with that certain walk could survive in that tough world.

THE TOUGHEST OF ALL IS DISCO DANCING!!!!

A swinging hand and pointed thumb could remove an eye and the offender would barely notice. Injuries inflicted by a well placed kick, made more deadly by heeled disco shoes, could leave another dancer writhing in agony for hours. The fiend who struck the blow would pretend not to notice the damage he caused, or would hover above what could be a corpse and utter, "huh, sorry", and head back to his table followed by his disco princess with her brown polish fingerspikes, matched by lips puffed like the maggot bloated stomach of a squirrel's carcuss above an electronic dress that hovered over obesely mammoth breasts ablase with the word Dance, rolls of fat around her middle.

I myself on one or two occasions would wander into a Disco establishment to do some investigative reporting. One such outing nearly cost me my life. I had sat by the dance floor watching it flash in a manner I'm sure only people like Timothy Leary could truly appreciate. An hour or so was spent sipping drink in order to prepapre myself for the darting and dodging needed to survive an evening of hoofing. It was a dirty game. When the hour was up I glanced across the aisle only to see a woman of favourable proportions looking as uneasy as I was about taking the dance floor. Off we went to try our feet. Everything went smoothly. I am short and managed therefore to duck many of the blows hurled my way by fellow dancers. I then made my crucial error. Not paying attention to the two large individuals at the corner of each eye I looked up into the pools of blue my partner offered, mesmorized we danced towards one another. Things had gone too far, I had committed myself and could not escape. From either side two hammer-like elbows crashed into my jaw, sending me to the floor begging for unconsciousness to rid me of those bloody

HELP FOR THE DISABLED?

by Jerry Zeigenberg

In this "Year of the Disabled", the government of Ontario has shown a startling lack of interest in the handicapped. In particular, the province's blind students, who in the past have had their text-books recorded for them on tapes, face extreme difficulties because our provincial government refuses to provide the funds necessary to continue the 'book-recording' service.

Some seventy visually handicapped students in Ontario, at highschool and university levels, use the Audio Library at Trent University.

At Trent, a group of people (many of whom are volunteers) make cassette recordings of the books needed by the Audio Library's clients. For the blind student without bookrecordings, as can be imagined, the task of getting one's reading done becomes inordinately difficult. Yet, this year the Trent Audio Library is to be dissolved.

Trent University, which has footed the bill for the Audio Library in the past, is no longer willing to do so, due to the Library's mounting deficit. Ontario's "Progressive" Conservative government, although aware of the situation, has turned its back on the problem. As a result, book-recording services will no longer be available after May 1, 1981, to most of the students who made us of it before. In the future, any student who isn't funded by VRS (Vocation Rehabilitation Service, a government department that arbitrarily funds some handicapped students, and not others — which is another problem somebody ought to look into) will simply have to pay for the service himself. And then, once again, education unfortunately becomes a thing for the rich.

Furthermore, because the staff at Trent's Audio Library feels it is unfair to charge some students and not others, they have threatened to resign, making recordings completely unavailable.

Although the CNIB, in Toronto, also has a transcription service, it is already working to capacity and isn't able to handle the increased load.

One of the Audio Library's clients, Kathleen Naeyaert, is a Laurier student in 2nd year sociology. She has pointed out that it makes no sense to receive tape recording services for only part of her university program, then have to quit, because the problems of reading become too great. If the Audio Library is shut-down, she will be left with one-half of a degree.

Dr. Bette Stephenson, the Minister of Education, Colleges and Universities, only last year declared the government's commitment to equal educational opportunities for all. (The declaration was made in an address to the Legislature, on May 23, 1980). This year, by refusing to aid blind students, the government's commitment to educational inequality becomes apparent; visually handicapped persons who want to go to school won't be able to, unless they can themselves afford the costs of having their books transferred onto tapes. Not too many can.

Not only is it unfair to deny an education to blind students, it is impractical, as well. While it costs the taxpayer money, now, to help educate the visually handicapped, they do gain valuable skills with which they can finds job, later. They then become commercially valuable members of society, rather than tax burdens. Aiding the handicapped now, is, in fact, an investment for the future.

In effect, the present government has erred on both ethical and practical grounds. It is not living up to the commitment it made to equal educational opportunities for all; also, by refusing to aid the handicapped now, it might have to, later. Finally, all who care about the handicapped, or the state of "progressive politics" in Ontario, should write to their MPP's and urge them to do something about this problem.

WLUSU: Elstree West

by Carl Friesen

Flipping coins and charges of Student Union incest were highlights of the WLUSU Board meeting on Sunday.

One of the first items of business was John McRae's suggestion that positions available in the Student Union should be made more available to the student body at large and that the present domination of available jobs by WLUSU board members amounts to "incest" within the Student Union.

To rectify this, he proposed a 6page handbook listing the various positions be distributed in the Concourse. The Board passed a motion to authorize $60 to make 300 copies to be distributed.

A coin was flipped to decide the vote on who would head the search committee to look for a replacement for the University Board of Governors student representative for the one-year term. A mixup in balloting resulted and a coin was tossed to decide between the two contenders, WLUSU Chairperson Scott Guest winning the toss.

In his President's Report, Joe Veit said that at his meeting with the President's Council the representatives from Administration were now aware that residence students were expecting a refund for services not rendered during the janitorial strike. "That really floored them" stated Veit, explaining that the residence councils had not approached the Administration before with the idea of a refund. Several dollar figures for the refund had been suggested, rangeing from $5 to $20, but Veit expecting a refund for services not rendered during the janitorial strike, ranging from $5 to $20, but Veit said the administration expects that the amount will be "probably under $5 per student". The question was referred to the Commissioner of University Affairs who will take it up with the residence councils.

Veit introduced filmmaker and student Dan Daniels and his request for $200 in funding in exchange for a copy of the parody film The Laurier Mistake Daniels is producing. The movie is intended as a good-natured stab at the WLU-produced recruiting film The Laurier Decision. The sum was allocated and the film will be shown on regular WLUSU movie nights.

The question of Student Union fees for part-time students was discussed but no firm decision was reached.

In his Director of Student Activities report, Jason Price announced several appointments:

Business Manager: Marg Politi Entertainment Coordinator: Christina Dixon

Movies Coordinator: Bruce Moore Orientation Coordinators: Joanne Rimmer, Brenda Davy, and Kim Ahrens

Campus Clubs: John McRae Special Events: Steve Cheeseman SAM Board: Craig Treleavan Oktoberfest Coordinator: Tim Doherty.

Three positions: Coordinators for Winter Carnival, Boar's Head Dinner and Homecoming, have yet to be decided.

Spring is coming and it's getting close to time to hit the road.

NESTLES INFACT NESTLES INFACT

This (Nestle's and other baby formula companies' marketing behaviour) is an outrageous search for profits at the expense of babies' lives.

Dr. Benjamin Spock

I wish to testify at all times that we were only able to save many babies thanks to Nestle's Nan and Lactogen products.

> Sister Silvia Probst (RN) Mbarara, Uganda December 2, 1975

It's unfortunate that this article must appear in the joke issue of the Cord since it is by no means a laughing matter. The story is that of the Nestle controversy. The issue centres around claims by the critics of Nestle, the most out-spoken being INFACT (The International Formula Actions Coalition), which suggest that Nestle is guilty of marketing practises which unethically convince Third World mothers to switch from breastfeeding to bottle feeding. This accusation bluntly contradicts Nestle's position which states that its representatives in the field were always encouraged to tell mothers that breast feeding is best.

These forceful marketing practices, according to INFACT, involve advertising through the media. However according to one Nestle representative, Nestle has ceased all advertisement of baby formula via posters, billboards, newspapers, radio and television as of July 1, 1978 while in some countries the baby formula products were never advertised.

IBFAN (International Baby Foods Action Network) which is Lactogen labels have no explicit message about the superiority of breast milk." But IBAN however counters "Labels carry the statement 'La lactancia materna es la mas adecuada para el bebe (breast feeding is best for your baby)".

who can afford the product." Governments in some countries however buy the formula from the company and subsidizes the cost of the formula or give free distribution to mothers who can't afford to sufficiently feed their infants

Free gifts of formula to hospitals and to mothers have been said to have aided in mothers turning away from breast feeding. INFACT suggest Nestle's motive is to prevent mothers from breast feeding for a weekafter which time the breast milk will have dried up and the mother is thereby forced to continue using the formula. In a Wall Street Journal, "The Nestle Boycott Kills Babies", it is pointed out that in many of these developing countries, urbanization is responsible for taking the woman out of the house and into the workforce and therefore often bottle-feeding is more convenient for the woman.

To hear more views on the subject from both sides of the controversy, attend what promises to be an interesting presentation by INFACT and Nestle in the Paul Martin Centre on March 31 at 7:30 affiliated with INFACT has evidence to the contrary. In a report entitled "Infant Formula Promotion 1980", IBFAN presents numerous examples of advertising taking place by a variety of companies including Nestle.

In October 1979 the World Health Organization and UNICEF put together a list of recommendations concerning marketing practices of infant-formula companies. Nestle says it agreed to abide by the recommendations. IBFAN's paper listed 202 alleged violations to the recommendations of WHO/ UNICEF by baby formula industries. The paper was examined by the International Council of Infant Food Industries. Of the 117 cases affecting ICIFI companies, only 15 appeared to be justified. In these cases, corrective action was put in hand at once.

INFACT's paper states "Nan and Why has Nestle been singled out as the subject of an international boycott? First of all Nestle is the world's largest seller of baby formula to developed nations. International health authorities say that 10 million babies per year are suffering from the harmful effects of bottle-feeding ('baby bottle syndrome'-brain damage, starvation and diarrhea), and of these I million die.

The problems with bottle feeding arise in countries and regions where clean water and money are not available to buy sufficient quantities of formula powder, literacy to read formula instructions is not spread enough and fuel to sterilize bottles and refrigerate the formula is rare and expensive. Nestle claims "the overwhelming majority of infant formula sales are made to middleincome or upper-income mothers naturally. INFACT's arguement focuses on the use of unsterile water in formula production. Nestle points out that traditional weaning foods in these areas are also prepared with the same unsterile water.

Secondly, Nestle has in the past employed field workers who have been accused by INFACT of promoting the company's product. pm. Admission is free.

Is it debateable?

by Carl Friesen

"I feel it's not a debateable issue" said Sociology student Sandy Rousakis in an interview Tuesday, explaining why she and a number of students are supporting a boycott of the debate on the question "Do women have a place in the business world?" scheduled for that evening. "If they were willing to debate whether men have a place in the business world it would be more acceptable" she continued. "The issue is that they are assuming that women do not have a place in the business world. They are reinforcing that idea"

Jason Price, WLUSU Director of Student Activities, said that the purpose of having the debate was to create interest in having a debating society on the WLU campus similar to the ones that exist at other universities,

"Nobody's saying that ladies don't have a place in the business world" he said. He added that the Student Union had deliberately chosen a controversial topic to create interest in debating.

On Tuesday night before the debate was about to start about 15 protestors led by Dr. Juanne Clarke picketed the debate's lecture hall encouraging students to boycott the lecture since attendance at the debate would, according to the protestors, in effect condone the question.

Upon learning of the controversy centering on the question involved in the debate, the University of Toronto debators agreed to change the question to a more neutral topic. The question finally debated focused not on the question of whether women have a place in business but on the question of whether debates should take place on topic like woman's place in the business world.

"Against the World"

Our journey's end is near at hand The light shines bright at the tunnels end And your shadow looks so free and real.

The wind blows strong in this land of ours And so like a tight rope walker I walk slowly, ever cautious For the fear of falling lives long, dies slow.

Yet our love lives everburning, never flickering And loving you I feel no pain For asleep I dream of whispers in the wind Which speak of tomorrow with hope, compassion As we lie embraced against the wind.

This stemware glass

This stemware glass Is filled with blood I hold it to the flame And through that tangerine light shines A teardrop, cried in pain.

It floats amid The battle flood The image comes to me The liquid transforms in a haze And soon - a fresh blue sea.

I hold it high Unto the night And through the darkness gleams Purity - an empty vessel This glass - a ship of dreams?

It forces back Against my heart Held tight in trembling hand And as it shatters I peer down The glass has turned to sand.

Greeting to the Leupold men We appreciate all You're each a ten!

You protected us through thin and thick Even when we played our pranks and tricks.

You're as good as can be And thanks for the use Of your T.V.

When you decided to lock us in our bedrooms We found it necessary to whipcream your bathrooms.

You've been so good to us Kept us company Made such a fuss!

John, thanks for the Italian wining and dining For keeping us fit with our daily jogging.

Frequently you told us jokes And rarely complained When we smoked your smokes.

Pat, thanks for putting up with our cake and water fights and livening up our parties with your twisting all night.

You have put us in our glory Our thanks to Jeff For a bed time story.

Aye, Luije, what's da matta for you? Don't you know what to do? When three girls invite you to bed You gotta take off your clothes Before you can get a-head!

We really do appreciate The things you've done You're all just great!

And last but not least, we still think you're sexy, Gord Even though you tried and tried But never really scored.

Rubber Boots

You know I love you dearly, This one thing I must confess There's a part of your accoutrement Which frankly, I detest

Your deportment is above questioning You always know just how to charm (Though some say that one who refers to a 'tomato' as a toh-mah-toh Belongs out on the farm)

You're great to be around at parties Lively, laughing, "one of the boys" You can drink most of us well under the table A capacity that makes wine-makers rejoice

You look ever so cute in your army pants, So what am I babbling about? My dear, your choice of footwear Brings intelligence level subject to doubt

Not much importance is placed upon feet, Most people don't care, not two hoots But I cringe and must admit to feeling somewhat ill When you put on your black rubber boots

You sport them proudly, ever so useful, Just $1.39 at Canadian Tire. I swear those boots were made by the devil himself, And summoned up deep from Hell's Fires.

It's true that for everything there's a space, Boots for gardening, fishing, floor mopping, But must you parade them from place to place? In restaurants, visiting friends, and while shopping?

You say you want to become a school teacher Spending your life shaping and molding young minds Leaving children with the idea that they should dress Like extras from "Green Acres" Is neither instructive nor kind.

I can't say when we'll get together again, I may surprise you, surprises come in twos In the meantime, I'll be starting a collection, To buy you a pair of real shoes.

Editorial Good-bye

The year is almost over and the publication of the Cord Weekly has come to an end for another year. A year ago at this time I was looking forward, although hesitantly, to the year ahead working on the Cord Weekly.

Those who will be staffing the Cord next year must be experiencing those same feelings.

That feeling of hesitancy is well-deserved since the Cord is, and has been, for better or for worse, the main source of information on campus for the past twenty-one years. The paper, which is considered bird cage liner by some, is still read by many.

The Cord then has a big responsibility to the students of Laurier, a responsibility which is carried out by full-time students doing the full-time job of producing a newspaper . . . And producing a newspaper is a full-time job. For the Editor it is 30 hours a week, for the Section Editors it's 20-25, for the Production Manager it's 20-25 and the list goes on. Writers, photographers, proof-readers, ad men, business managers; the numbers of hours put in each week to bring the Cord together is enormous. Most other university newspapers, including UW, employ full-time employees to produce the paper. At Laurier it's full-time students.

This allows for both a unique opportunity as well as for alot of hard work. The Cord is basically a learning experience. It not only informs students but it trains writers, photographers, production people and yes, even editors quickly and on the job. This training means some mistakes, a lot of work and a lot of learning.

Next year, new people will be learning new things. Rodger Tschanz, this year's Photo Manager, is next year's editor - the new "Big Chief". Sonya Ralph, trustworthy writer for the Cord for the past few years takes over Carl's job of News Editor. Diane Pitts moves into Cindy's job of Entertainment Editor and Joanne Rimmer becomes the "Chip McBain of 1981-82" as Sports Editor. Good Luck to you all.

This past year has been a challenging, sometimes frustrating, but always busy year. To those on the Cord staff - thanks for your help. To Carl, the editorial right of myself, good luck in your future journalistic endeavours. Laos and Africa await. To Cindy, I know whether you're working in Student Publications or outside next year you'll be a success. Chip, what can I say but thanks.

And there are others little recognized but always important. Rob Pegg, our Production Manager for this past term, has put long hours in, learning and mastering the intricacies of paste-up and lay-out. Rodger Tschanz and Tim Singbeil, pictorially extraordinaire. Lynda Kirk graphically superb. Joe Veit, Student Publications President, now Student Union President, was always present when needed. To everyone thanks,

Park patrols

by Diane Pitts

Since the inception of student patrollers to stop sexual assaults occurring in Waterloo Park, no unnerving incidents have been reported. According to Federation of Students President Wim Simonis, there are thirty volunteer patrollers from UW and one from WLU, who are responsible for escorting people through the park and if any problems arise they can contact help through their CB radios.

Simonis is satisfied in the fact that the public's awareness of the existing problem has been increased and his suggestion of installing lights in the park was favourably received by Waterloo City Council.

The question of whether the patrolling will continue throughout the summer is still unanswered.

Tripartism: labour solution

by Jim Pang

Canada is internationally wellknown as one of the countries with most strike days in each work year. The Canadian managements and unions have been fighting each other for more than a century and this conflict has become part of the Canadian daily life.

As we enter the eighties, we must realize that we are gong into a decade of more competition, inflation, and sophistication. Our economy no longer could absorb this kind of conflict and still provide us with a high standard of living.

In fact, as Mr. Joe Clark stated: "the Canadian standard of living has fallen from second place in the early seventies to the present seventh place in the world". Thus, economic civil war is no longer a luxury that we can play with.

Many people argue that the present "free collective bargaining" system, based on the concept of unions and managements are enemies, is the backbone of democracy and thus should remain the only way.

Naturally, "collective bargaining" is definitely preferable to the repressive system that most communist countries are having. However, there is another alternative. It is cooperation between management and labour or "tripartism": labour-management-government cooperation. Of course, we cannot expect Canada to have a tripartism that is equivalent to what the Japanese have, which is every much due to their culture and nationalism. In brief, the Japanese government and management are walking hand-in-hand to set up their objectives, and the labour seldom becomes an obstacle during the process of achieving these objectives. Likewise, in each individual firm management and labour feel themselves as a family unit. Life or death is depending on each other's efforts.

In Canada, although there has been actual formation of labour-management "sectorial" committees under the supervision of the federal department of industry, trade and commerce, these committees are just a few interludes in the ongoing conflicts. The governments, federal and provincial, should further promote harmony between these two opposition parties for the sake of increasing Canadian productivities.

Perhaps the governments themselves should at first cooperate with each other for setting up a model to be followed. The ongoing hostilities between the Western provinces and Ottawa have, though not paralizing productivity completely, certainly are obstacles for Canada's goal of higher productivity.

The best example of this is the suspension of the program for further expanding Syncrude Canada in Alberta due to the unsettlement of oil prices between the Alberta government and Ottawa.

Instead of politicing, the government should compromise and be prepared to work out realistic long term industrial strategies to further develop Canadian industries in order to meet the inflationary and competitive eighties.

The present Minister of Energy, Mr. Marc Lalonde, once said, he fails to understand why Canada is still such a minor industrial power in the world in spite of its vast natural resources.

So do we all. What is missing in Canada is the will of cooperation between labour, management, and governments.

As a final word on this year I would like to thank my writers: Tony Goerzen, Dave Menary, Rick Pajor, Gerry de Jonge, Fred McCauley. Murry MaCaulay, Tim Baines, Joe Malec, Mark Kuderian and Chris Lomore for their regular contributions this year. I would like to thank Carl, Cindy, Rodger, Robb, Kevin, Tim, Lynn, Michelle, Brenda, Jim, Dave, Joe, Kim, and Deb for putting up with my excesses and sense of humour. Most of all I would like to thank Mark Wigmore, our editor for being the most patient human I have ever met. (Thank You for this oscar.) It's been a challenging year with its up and down, congratulations and criticisms, I regret none of it. Best of luck to all this summer and thank you for reading.

FINEST QUALITY TOBACCO

PLEASE YOURSELF

Individual tastes demand individual satisfaction. For some people the appreciation of fine imported cigarette tobacco is a personal pleasure. A subtle combination of 17 prime tobaccos makes Drum a connoisseur's tobacco. It's specially created for people who roll their own—people who take their pleasure seriously. Of course it's not to everyone's taste. But then maybe you're not everyone.
