WLU closing: open 1:30 to 6:30 am

By Sven Pisattheskyski
(resident communist)

WLU President Dr. John Wired announced today that, effective April 1, the school would be open between the hours of 1:30am and 6:30am. Students were jubilant until they learned that the university would be accessible only during these hours.

In explaining the new policy Associate Vice-President: Personal Affairs with Students, Jim Piljar, said, "I'm not a Vice-President; I'm only an Associate Vice-President." Piljar's press secretary later explained that the administrator had "had a rough day" and would be "unavailable for further comment."

As usual, therefore, Dr. Never Works (Vice-President: Money and Stuff Like That) was called upon to outline the administration's rationale. According to him, the buildings will be locked nineteen hours a day for cleaning and security purposes and "just because we get sick of seeing students hanging around our university every day."

In justifying this seemingly drastic measure, Works cited "horrific" incidents in which students have accosted a professor in "a vicious attempt to seek his advice in completing an assignment, and another of students "hording" around the only working photocopier on campus.

The policy was lauded by newly appointed Associate Vice-President: Insecurity John Bowl who said that it would make the university a safer place. Munching on a fresh apple fritter which he picked up while "making his rounds" of Waterloo's donut shops, he commented that the closing would free Insecurity of ninety per cent of its current duties and allow his officers more time for

"other things." As he spoke, he demanded that the reporter show his ID card.

Another fan of the proposed change is newly appointed Vice-President: TV Shows, Biff Zilya. "Now that students will be unable to get into the Central Teaching Building during their classes, they will all be permitted to take a degree by television! I'm so excited." When asked if he foresaw any reduction in the quality of education under this plan, Zilya replied that he thought "beneficial" for the faculty to be able to lecture without having to deal with "all those annoying questions from smart-assed know-it-alls."

Although the plan means that his job of Vice-President: Epidemic will be threatened, Dr. Muscle Bunsmasters spoke in favour of the school closing. "Obviously, the situation had become intolerable," he said. "There were people on this campus who actually thought they were here for an education. We (the Administration) just cannot allow this sort of attitude to develop."

Student Union President Crave Bustier expressed shock at the announcement. "We were not consulted at all and condemn this action." When reminded that the policy did not affect the operating hours of the Bustier Campus Centre, the cherubic young executive made a quick change of policy. "As long as they can still get into Wilf's, I don't think most students will mind having to forego an education."

Turret backdoor security have decided to hire Rose petal shown here backing up security while an irate patron attempts to force his way in at gunpoint past our vigilant boys in uniform.

New office complex

By Paul Yvinikloride

The university has decided to build Dr. Jake Wired a new office complex to emphasize underfunding. The bored governors reasoned that having excess capital in the bank does not demonstrate the lack of funding so they have decided to spend the excess capital in order to place WLU into debt again.

The Wired office renovations were chosen for their complete lack of improvements to educational facilities. "If we want to show that we're underfunded, we have to look underfunded which is why we steered clear of any educational improvements" said Wired. He added that he doesn't want a new office but, in such trying times, we must all make sacrifices.

The new facility will include a considerably more complex maze like structure (complete with Minotaur) leading to a large reception area which will lead to an office containing Dr. Wired's administrative assistant's secretary's secretary.

From there, one will enter a series of offices, halls, chambers, suites, parlors, and reception rooms all ultimately leading to the Wired Sanctum. This area will consist of Dr. Wired's suite and its amenities which include indoor tennis courts, a jogging track, movie theater, and an indoor swimming pool.

The reaction to the announcement has been mixed. WLUSUR Resident, Crave Bustier commented, "I'm glad that the administration is trying to do something about underfunding... on the other hand this seems self serving... on the other hand we have to understand their point of view... on the other hand..."

Mr. Robert Shorthair, the Cord editor, was also quick to add, "What can we expect when our president, Jake A. Wired suffers from the Not-In-My-Back-Yard (NIMBY) syndrome. I'm sure he wouldn't be willing to have this complex built in his back yard."

The completion date for this project is May 1988. Construction was given priority over the completion of the Aird Arts and Parking Garage to demonstrate the importance of underfunding at WLU. An army of 600 tradespeople will be hired in an attempt to meet this deadline and spend the excess capital as quickly as possible.

GEEKs have seized the fifth floor broom closet and barricaded themselves in. Supercop is reportedly unconcerned. "Who gives a *o!% about GEEKs" he said.

Highrise parking

By Paul Yvinikloride

History was once again made at Laurier when the Committee to Re-adjust Alternative Parking (CRAP) was formed last Wednesday. In an exclusive interview with the Kord, John Boll, the new Chief of CRAP, said he was thrilled with his new job title.

CRAP's first job will be the renovation of the John B. Aird Centre into a multilevel parking facility. In keeping with Laurier's usual construction policy, the John B. Aird Parking Facility will be completed in May of the turn of the century.

The small change in plans for the Aird centre was initiated by CRAP because it was determined that the building was unfit for human use due to the lack of windows. The building will be ideal for parking because automobiles requires so little light to survive.

CRAP has already determined who will use the parking facility. The first and third floors will be gold lots except on Tuesday afternoons when alternately numbered spaces will become white permit spaces. The other floors will be white lots except for the 5th, 12th, and 27th days of the month when the floors will not be available for parking since security will be using them to practice high speed indoor pursuit tactics. The white zone will be for loading and unloading only; there will be no parking in the red zone. Any left over space will be first come, first served unless the lots are more than half full or less than one third full. In such a case, parking will be restricted to football players and their dates but they will have to enter through the rear lot entrance. Music students will be allowed to practise there.

The building will be renamed the Aird Arts and Parking Garage. "The name change is keeping in spirit with the original plan" said Boll.

J. Wired's trip

By Steve Noshame

Our beloved president, Dr. Wired, has just returned from a back breaking trip abroad. The purpose was to promote and educate the world about Wilfred Laurier University.

"We want to raise the profile of this university in the eyes of the world which is why I volunteered my time and took on this gargantuan task. It took a tremendous effort but I think Laurier's profile has been raised within the world community" said Dr. Wired.

His fast-paced trip barely gave him time to rest as he jumped from place to place, promoting WLU. He started in Whistler, B.C., where he preached the qualities of Laurier to numerous ski bunnies. His next stop was two weeks in Hawaii where he attempted to convince some natives to apply to WLU as exchange students. Finally, Dr. Wired spent the last four weeks of his trip touring the Orient in an attempt to get Asian leaders to contribute to the development fund.

Credit card recognition

By Sum Goof

At a press conference called yesterday, Broken Street Graduate Student Simpletons (BSGSS) President Pete Pastrami announced that the graduate student society has finally been recognized by the WLU administration.

"I'm ecstatic with the administration's decision" said Pastrami. "If only I had known how simple the whole process could be".

Pastrami told the eager crowd of hundreds assembled in the Concourse that the key to recognition was the BSGSS' application for an American Express Card.

"Originally, we intended to use the card to cover general operating expenses when a cheque wouldn't do. But when the administration found out that we had received an American Express card, they were eager to establish formal relations between us and the University."

Dr. Jake Wired, WLU President, model for men's clothes and travel agent, expressed his satisfaction with the new agreement with the grads.

"We (the administration) didn't think the grads were a stable organized body worthy of the WLU name. But when we were selling the student lists to American Express for their mailout program, we discovered that the grads had successfully applied for a card. Boy, when we found that out, we knew that we had to grant them use of the WLU name."

WLUSER President Crave Bustiere's only comment was a stupid smile on his face that has been there since puberty.

New & unimproved

By J. Jonah Jameson

Over 8,956 journals and periodicals are being cut from the Library. It is estimated that this paring to the bone of the Library budget will save between $1.2 and $1.3 million. The projected savings will be used to finance a two-floor addition to the existing library. According to VP: Money and Stuff Like That, Never Workzi, the new space will be used to house an "executive leisure area" which will serve to ease the stress levels of senior staff.

Through the creative use of the provincial Excellence Fund, the Administration has successfully used monies targeted for acquisitions to pay for the new addition. "It took some doing to shake those provincial auditors who tried to mess up our plans, but we convinced them that our executive spa was nothing more than new storage space with climate control equipment in it," said President Jake A. Wired.

University Librarian Adolf H. Schultz said, "Everyone's doing it. While it will mean that some of the existing library services will be cut, I'm looking forward to working on my squash game and relaxing in the sauna." Dr. Schultz went on to say that Waterloo and Guelph are planning to follow Laurier's lead in this area, "I think it is about time that we were on the cutting edge of something; even if it is the cutting edge of executive leisure."

It is the second time in recent years that the Library will be expanded while at the same time losing shelf space.

Senior administrative staff are also considering holding a book sale if more funds are needed. "It's just a heck of a money making plan," said Workzi. "But really Comptroller Larry Limpert came up with it while watching Joe Cossman on television the other night."

Planning for the addition is already under way. Department heads were asked to prioritize their favorite exercise machines and videos. "The quality of teaching at WLU should increase despite the loss of books," claims Dr. Hairy Mall, Chesterfield of the Geography Department. "The attitude of excellence which will result from this project will more than offset the reduction of available resource material."

WLUSER Resident Crave Bustiere has been involved in the discussions on behalf of students. "Initially, I had some reservations about the decision, but when I was a BBA student I never used the Library anyhow," he said. "My concern now is securing access to the new facility for future WLUSER executives."

VP: University Affairs Bad Manners could not be reached for comment on this or any other issue. Bustiere thought Mannors "had VD or something".

In a related issue, the WLU Bored of Governing has transferred $76,986.65 from the Library Budget to the Jake A. Wired Cottage Fund. This move was taken in to an attempt to ensure that Dr. Wired will spend alot more time at his cottage. Concerns were raised, however, that this allocation will result in a shortage of Nautilus equipment in the Library addition. Senior Administrative Staff have maintained that this will not be the case. "We can build the cottage and equip the spa quite easily with the cash from the Excellence Fund," said VP: Cash and Stuff Workzi.

Don't leave home without it! BSGSS President Peter Pastrami proudly displays the card that got the ball rolling. Where it stops, nobody knows...

Bugger All

By Paul Yvinilkloride

Our illustrious administration has announced that a entirely new degree will be introduced next fall. It will be known as the Bachelor of Bugger All. To earn accreditation in this field, students will have to register with the school of Bugger All (in the Aird Parking Facility) and pay a fee of $5,000.

The students will not be required to take any courses but will be able to park anywhere on campus without a permit. The students will also receive a genuine WLU diploma printed on expensive feeling paper with the letters BBA in bold relief.

Successful graduates will also get their choice of a personal portrait or class composite on black velvet. Admission will be based on personal bank balance, recent credit history, personal income, and the size of their donation to the Tunnell to the Swiss Band Account Development Fund.

The registrar's office will begin promoting the new service on the Home Shopping Network as well as full page ads in the National Enquirer.

Biz nobs enjoy obnoxious speaker

By Erich Seller

The man who started the Squiggly Squid soup company "from scratch" was at Laurier's Peters Building to talk about his "myriad of successes." Throngs of frickin' biz nobs came out in droves to "spoon it in."

"Of course a little bit of back stabbin' and brown-nosin' never did anyone any harm (in regards to business practices)," said Berferd X. Upanal, 34, the prominent Canadian businessman from Conception Bay, Newfoundland.

In 1976, Upanal was a disconsolate Laurier Business School dropout. He said that at the time he dropped out he was homesick, and disillusioned—because he thought Laurier's Business School was too ethically conservative.

"I was raised to look out for Number One...If any Fucker got in my way I was going to squash him. However, Laurier's Business School tried to mitigate my ambitions." Afterwards he added candidly, "Actually, they liked my attitude but they just thought I should be a little more discreet." Upanal failed to make it through his first semester at university.

After Upanal dropped out in '76 he returned to Conception Bay. What follows is one of the more positive business comeback stories to grace Canada.

Three months after returning home he was charged with harvesting stolen lobster. Charges were dropped, however, after Judge Smith's daughter Sally was inexplicably kidnapped and, following Upanal's release, returned. "In hindsight, heck, I was innocent anyway," stated Upanal.

Following the dismissal Upanal "got on" at the Starkist tuna company. His rise was meteoric, mainly due to his "brilliant" new revolutionary tuna preservation techniques. A week before the tainted tuna scandal "broke open" Upanal quietly left Starkist, for, as he said, "greener tuna, or—sorry-pastures."

The Squiggly Squid soup company started almost immediately after Upanal left Starkist in 1985. Four weeks after the soup company's start Upanal was charged with using subliminal advertising techniques to sell his canned squid soup. Upanal faced a $1,000,000 fine.

However, charges were dropped after major crown witnesses, the judge, and various members of the jury, disappeared eight days before trial date. Upanal chuckled in hindsight over what he called his "incredible luck."

Shrugging, Upanal said that eventually all twelve missing bodies were found in Conception Bay—in a giant lobster trap guarded by a "gargantuan squid."

Smartly attired in a grey bullet-proof vest overtop a blue suit with matching angora socks, Upanal appearance can be best described as a combination of Dabney Coleman and Lee Iaccoca.

Presently, Squiggly Squid possesses 99.999999 percent of the squid soup company market share. Upanal commented on his dislike for monopolies: "I abhor monopolies. The day I got 100 percent of the market is the day I'll disgracefully step down—my heart's with the little guy."

In the question period, noted women's rights activist and professor Dr. Oily Grinchberg asked Upanal if women executives are well represented in Squiggly Squid. Berferd answered with the wink of his eye, "Heck, Little Lady, I like having nice lady secretaries around me, and I do pay them more than the Newfoundland minimum wage of 50 cents a day, so, yeah, I guess that they're well represented."

Biz nobs sucked in their breath as they waited for Grinchberg to reply—and...let out a collective sigh of relief as Grinchberg smiled sweetly and said, "Berferd you're a credit to male chauvinists everywhere." Upanal promptly gave her the finger.

However, all is not perfect in Upanal's world: problems are lately dogging him. Conservationists have reported that pollution from the main Squiggly plant on Conception

Bay has affected the algae. Molluscs consume the algae and have therefore become tainted. Some researchers say the molluscs, a consumer food, are a carcinogen.

Upanal said that his researchers had looked into the problem and "ended up giving an assured go-ahead." The canned Miracle Mucous Molluscs is scheduled to hit the market next week.

At the end of his talk the future business execs gave Upanal a standing ovation. "I like his spunk," said admiring first-year Business student Drip Flurvie. "That's something they can't teach you in Business School."

Please

The Laurier community was shocked today to learn that WLUSUR's VP: Finance Donald Blame has absconded with the 1.2 million dollar operating budget of the Student Union. Apparently all expenditures made this year ended up being deposited to his own personal bank account.

"O.K., so I lied" were Blame's first comments when contacted in a telephone interview later today. "So we really didn't spend any money on anything this year.... how am I expected to have good financial control unless I have all of the money?!"

Crave Bustier, WLUSU President, was too busy playing Decathlon to comment on the whole affair. He did, however, smile sweetly for the Kord photographer.

Try to

By Sargent Gran Marnier

The proposal to reduce the credit requirements for WLU's BBA (Bachelor of Baloney) from 44 to 24 and a year as a trade union member has run into some very sharp criticism from some Baloney students.

"It's unfair. They're trying to reduce my freedom. It'll be too easy to get the degree now. If they can't handle it, tough. It's an administration power grab. They're in it for the money. I'm boiling mad," commented opinionated Third Year-Baloney student Bark Dwending. "Besides, can you see all these union bashers in the Baloney department taking strike orders from the CAW (Canadian Automatic Walkout) union? All I've got to say is that I think it's all stupid."

For his part, SBE (School of Baloney and Escargot) chair Hendrix Foley defended the move. "Students now will have more time to get involved in other things, like the Gavel Club and the Flat Earth Society. I just wish they made it like that for me. Now I'll have to go out and sell condiments for a living." On a completely irrelevant note, he asked "are you exxxxxperienced?"

In the face of this controversy, an island of calm and reason was Escargot department chairman Harold Billerd. "Hell, if I had my way, I'd toss them out of the (Pierre) Building altogether."

Last Friday night, Cord editor

Scot Shorthair, was struck down by lightning. Apparently he and several other Cordies had been trying to bring out the anti-christ in a bizarre satanic ritual.

Kampus Klips

A.D. Don, the writer of the column on the anti-christ, said they had been doing this for several weeks now in order to get accurate interview data on the anti-christ. "Normally we don't have any problems with the ritual but this time Student Pubs President, Dave Wilmernuts, was present and I guess the two evil forces just clashed violently" said Don.

Another witness, Debbie Horse, said "I'm a satanic priestess myself but I've never seen such destruction." She added that the balance might have been broken by Erika Suckonastick, who was absent and usually maintains the balance of evil at these rituals.

When asked to comment, president-elect Khris Turkey, said "While I cannot condone the actions of Mr. Wilmernuts and the rest of is (sic) evil circle, I don't think the actions of last year's staff is any of my concern; besides, Mr. Shorthair had been asking for it for months now." Shorthair will be cremated (at least what is left of him) on Sunday at midnight. Virgins will be sacrificed and blood will be served to all after the ceremony. It is hoped the anti-christ will attend. In lieu of flowers, expressions of sympathy can be made directly to Jimmy Swaggart.

Two more Kord employees died of exhaustion yesterday. Kori Fergsak and Andrea Roll were found at approximately 9 AM on Wednesday morning.

The pair had apparently been working on the KORD for the last 48 hours without sleep. Authorities won't say whether they died naturally. Suicide has not been ruled out but most Kord staff seem to think it was exhaustion.

The WLUSP bored of directors could not attain quorum to comment on the issue. Director/Colonel Tony Scrag, however, said "We don't want anything to do with this, we don't want anything to do with anything!"

Production assistant, Susan Wall, said she wasn't surprised. "Deadlines were constantly being broken and Scot Shorthair was so preoccupied with spying on Dr. Jake Wired and other administration officials that he wouldn't do anything about it" said Wall.

As the bodies were taken away, one couldn't help but notice the twisted expressions of fear and frustration on their faces. They were the tenth and eleventh victims of broken deadlines this year. A memorial will be held tomorrow in the TV lounge; all are invited.

the KORD

As the hours counted down here at the Kord in our final paper of the year, we decided to present a thumbnail report card for the year's activities on campus. Sit back, relax and enjoy.

Thumbs down to the WLUSER Board of Directors for fixing the Turret roof in the summer. What do you people think? Students can't afford to fix the roof. So what if the problem had been there for years and that the Turret would have to be closed for weeks and cost thousands of dollars in lost revenue if a serious problem developed? Principle matters more than money even though the OPA clearly states that WLUSER is responsible for maintenance to the Student Union Building.

And that reminds us of another thing, when did the price of beer become so expensive on campus? So what if the cost at the beer store has gone through the roof over the past 3 years. And who cares that beer prices in the bars are the lowest in all of Kitchener/Waterloo? That's no excuse. You should lower prices and give beer away. That would be the only fair thing to do. So what if you would have to raise our student fees to cover the lost $$

Oooh, that kind of logic really gets the Kord mad. You WLUSERites hide behind such flimsy devices as common sense, acting in the best interest of the students. Don't you know that the only way to improve society is through groups that promote bettering society by blowing it up?

As a member of Canadian Irresponsibility Press, one of the Kord's roles is to educate students about hierarchies and how we can all better the world by rigidly sticking to our leftist beliefs. How dare WLUSER not follow these mandates?

Just look at the Kord's track record this year. Our Michael Jackson story about the baddest "fairy", our Miami Herald style of reporting on the senior administration, our progressive comments by rehashing the same arguments with the administration every week? You can never belabour a point long enough.

WLUSER has failed miserably as agents to help the students. Don't give us any of that services stuff and how many you add on campus each year. Don't come talking to us at the Kord about how its unfair that we criticize you about some of your directors being acclaimed. We at the Kord are hired by a self-perpetuating clique that doesn't let our minds get clouded with things like the facts.

Cry us a river.. that's no excuse for incompetence such as yours. Our secondhand rumours told us that you've thought about doing something that we might think is bad if we really knew what is was all about.

We've blown the whistle on you and there's no rock too slimy for you to hide under.

We should know because its our job to be negative without knowing the facts or offering solutions.

So there.

Editorial opinions are approved by the Kord editorial board on behalf of noone in particular and are independent of the University, the Students' Union, the Students Publications Board, you and anyone you know.

Formal has Presidential flavour

Just back from the land down under, WLU president Dr. Jake A. Wired made a surprise appearance at the Arts and Science formal last Saturday night. In fact, so abrupt was the transition, that he still had kangaroo dung on his shoes.

Wired was not invited but he showed up anyway. In between, and sometimes during mouthfuls of food Wired stated: "Dammitt I'm the president of this blasted institution and I should have been invited." Point taken Mr. Wired. The organizer of the event Hamchops "I'm a terrible date" Jackson should have his marks withheld for such an oversight. In his defense Jackson said, "It was an oversight. I thought he would still be in Australia doing whatever he was doing for the enhancement of the Laurier educational experience. If I had known he was going to cut back his safari expedition by a month, I would have passed on an invitation."

The point is, however, that Dr. Wired showed up without an invite. Said Wired, "I would of (sic) blasted down the doors of that place with my elephant gun. Nothing was going to keep me from showing up." Now, now, Mr. Wired what kind of attitude is that to be setting for us student-types? I mean if our president can show up at a formal without an invite, what's stopping him from going up the back stairs to get into the Turret? Or better yet, what's stopping him from entering the university after closing time to harrass the cleaning staff and make security's life more difficult? Nothing.

Guest Comment by One of Us But We're Not Telling

Besides the odor of kangaroo dung that emanated from the general area of his person, Dr. Wired did look nice when he addressed the gathering. In his speech he said many nice things about our newspaper. "I love The Kord. Hell, I just wish I was an objective type of guy, then I would contribute to it. And as long as they never run another story on our library, I promise never again to send my goons in to threaten to shut it down."

Overall, Wired's speech was very moving. As soon as he started speaking everyone started moving towards the washroom.

But back to the invite problem. Well Mr. Wired, with words like you spoke you definitely should have been invited. But if by this time next year you still haven't received an invite, and as long as the university hasn't taken a nosedive on the Dow Jones, and barring another Kent State massacre due to the smoking policy and early closing policy, come anyway. Us Arts and Science students love you as much as you love the Kord.

Let's agree to disagree

Dear Editor:

About that letter last week that was written in response to my response to his response to my response to his response to my response to his original letter (September 14, 1987), I disagree.

Sincerely

Bob Camerbertson

Thinking is a chore

Dear Editor:

I just can't believe how angry I am at campus security. They keep ticketing my moped. I barely can afford gasoline. Gas prices have risen so much during my seven years at Laurier that I have resorted to siphoning petro out of cars in the parking lot. I do, however, live by the rule of Robin Hood and only take gas from cars with gold stickers. I think they can afford it. My philosophy prof says I will probably go to hell but I think I am already here or there. Here and there are the same place, I think. Thinking has always been a chore. Especially when you have only eaten dining hall food for the past eight, seven years. And speaking of the dining hall, have you ever been to the other side. The other side is over there. Here and there are the same place, I think. My moped has a flat tire. I think security did it. They hate me. I can't really blame them though because no one really likes me. My philosophy prof says I am cool. Or was that cold? My roommates pick on me and steal all of my blankets. That's okay though because my philosophy prof, or was that my counsellor, no it was my criminally insane brother, said that its good to be cold. So if they steal my blankets then that is good, I think. My moped has a flat tire and a ticket stuck in the basket on the back. Or was that the front? Anyway, I only need 14 credits to graduate. My counsellor says it is okay to take 12 years to graduate. Why does no listen to me anymore.

Sincerely, I think,
Bob, or am I Rob, no its Nob.

Reds respond

Dear Editor

While I would not normally respond to anything so insipid as Red Knecks letter to the editor last week, there are a few points of which need clarification. The forerunner of the New Democratic party, The People with Legs that look like Chickens Party was founded on principles more in common with ten-centra-double-gumism than with Marxism. The People huge genitals and supra intelligence, a staunch ally of Moscow has consistently condemned this social - cluck - democratic movement. One of the most important policies of the social democratic is to have a really cute bum...I mean the acceptance of elections - cluck cluck cluck.

Finally I'd just like to add that I think all Regressive Liberals are a bunch of whiney, wimpish, stupid, clothed eared bints. Crybabies really. And if they write one more letter that insinuates that I've had sexual relations with a roll of tape and my pet hamster, I really will froth at the mouth.

Limp Rist
The Red Peril Party

Cut the crap

Dear Editor:

The Kord should be ashamed of itself. With last weeks editorial demanding accessibility for the physically challenged, you solidified your image of being just another sleazy student publication. In fact, with last weeks editorial you finally succeeded in stooping itself to the level of certain slimy tabloids. Where do you get your editorial ideas—Moscow? ....

Insincerely yours,
Tom Idiotsky
editors note: Mr. Idiotsky's letter was cut short because it was nonsensical and stupid.

Reader cries out against Erich

Dear Editor:

I do not usually comment on the articles in the Kord but Erich Seller's comment seemed to be a personal insult to me.

I am a manager of Kollege Amateur Painters and his statements about student run organizations were too balanced. One of the main purposes of these franchises is to teach students the benefits of capitalism and more specifically how to exploit workers. How much money an employee makes is directly proportional to how naive he is. Hey, in this world you better learn mighty quick that there are thousands of unscrupulous sharks like myself out there. Sellers and others like him should consider themselves lucky that guys like me have taught them this lesson early in life and have only exploited them for a relatively small amount of hard earned money.

Yours in business

Bill Hcrybaby

I can only hope that the Kord can act as an inspiration to such rags as The Globe and Mail and The K-W Record. I can only hope that when I have children of my own that they can grow up to be just like your editor, Scoot Hairshort, a man among men. Really most of you should get snapped up by the commercial press and CBC, or better yet, you could engage the expertise of a group of us fourth year business students who could be a great help to you in launching a takeover bid of these organizations.

Sincerely,

Joe Average

Hog talk

Dear Editor:

In reference to your article on Razorback Pig Farming and how it can be both fun and profitable, I have but a few comments.

Firstly, being a member of the Razorback Pig Farming Association, I take offense to the implied message in your article that it is a job which requires little formal training. I, for one, apprenticed from the age of 14 to 28 until my father left me alone with a razorback. It takes great skill and knowledge to make those little gaffers squeal. We ain't talking about no ordinary pigs here. Razorbacks are a breed of their own.

Secondly, I don't know where your reporter got his information but let me tell you Mr. Kusak, Dwight Yoakam is not a member of the RPPFA. And I have never heard of Razorbacks singing, let alone putting out an album.

And lastly, Razorbacks are beautiful loving creatures who have the art of shitting on the ground down to a science. They are not smelly messy mud wrestling critters that the Kord article insinuated. Razorbacks are smarter than, well, my own children and Flipper too.

Sincerely,

Donnie "Hog" Cartwright
Three time winner of the Silver Sow Award

Thank you

Dear Self:

This is just a letter to say how much I have enjoyed the Kord during my four years at Laurier. Although there were times when I questioned the editorial comment of one or two issues, over the years this paper has been one of the finest student newspapers in North America—honest.

I hope the tradition continues even though I won't be here to enjoy it. I hope, however, to have a permanent address (though there is still a chance I will be one of the countless homeless in Toronto) where I can get the paper mailed to me. I understand yearly subscriptions are only $20. I don't know where else I can get that much enjoyment for that little money. Boy oh boy, the staff up there at Student Publications sure must be wonderful. And gee whiz I can't wait to pick up my new Keystone Yearbook. I understand its not too late to get one if you have not yet invested in this treasure of memories.

Thanks again for all of your hard work and dedication to the student body. There is an old saying which I think the Kord lived by this year. "You can forgive a newspaper for inaccuracies but you can never forgive a newspaper for a lack of courage. Keep up the good work kids."

Sincerely,

Scoot Shorthair

Garbage is good food

Dear Editor

Garbage is good food. Why just last night I threw out a whole lot perfectly edible left overs from my fridge. I don't know why the hell I have to pay for all these poor people's welfare when they can just go and eat my garbage. Hell, I don't mind.

Nancy Reagan

A+ for Cord

Dear Editor:

What a swell paper you are producing. I know most of you up there are full time students but you couldn't tell by reading the Kord every week. Your impeccable journalistic talents never fail to impress, and your photographs are consistently vivid and clear week in and week out.

It's hard to believe that with the small staff you employ that you can produce such an incredibly wonderful product. You really seem to have your finger on the pulse of the concerns of the Laurier student body, as I have never come across a fellow student that didn't believe that their best interests were not being met by your publication.

You have especially proven that you know where it's at with the extensive coverage you have given to the world of big money business deals, BMW automobiles and designer label fashions.

Jake A. Wired (Genius)

Is Jake A. Wired the Anti-christ?

Recently on Hogan's Heroes, Sergeant Shultz asked, "Is Jake A. Wired the Anti-christ?"

Many WLU students were puzzled by this theoretical question. If Jake A. is actually the Anti-christ, many unanswerable administration policy questions will finally be solved.

Three possible answers

1. JAKE A. IS JUST POSSESSED

Is there strong enough evidence to prove that Jake A. is the Anti-christ, or is he merely possessed?

A. Jake A. gets reappointed for a second term, although staff, faculty and students dislike him.

B. Jake A. continues to make arbitrary policy decisions despite the disastrous results. If he were human he would know better by now.

C. Jake A. models bad suits for a local clothing shop.

The evidence clearly indicates that Jake A. is well beyond possession.

2. JAKE A. IS GOD

If Jake A. can be the Anti-christ, can he not also be God? Of course not. Don't be silly. With that hair cut? How ludicrous.

3. JAKE A. IS THE ANTI-CHRIST

Jake A. can eat a dynamite sandwich and walk away from it. Week in and week out, the Kord crucifies the poor man, yet he still doesn't learn. Jake A. has been criticized by faculty, ridiculed by other university presidents, snickered at by his own family, maligned by everyone etc., yet he's never said "Fô*%!"

You can't teach Lucifer anything and hence, you can't teach Jake A. The statistical information presented above proves beyond a reasonable doubt, that Jake A. Wired is the actual Anti-christ.

Next week: How does Jake A. bypass government legislation to use the Excellence Fund for home improvements to his summer cottage?

U2 deem selves God

By Dave Tone

Late last Friday night the Irish rock band U2 called a press conference in New York City. The waiting press huddled around a downtown Manhattan 7-Eleven in the cold November rain while the members of U2, clad in the latest vagabond styles, swung off of a giant helicopter and landed on the roof top of the 7-Eleven. The helicopter's roar was drowned out by the thunderous swoon let out by mainstream America who were gathered behind the police barricades constructed around the 7-Eleven. Manhattan has been buried with the litter of mainstream America for the past two weeks as a fleet of Greyhound buses has emptied out the entire state of Ohio for the U2 press conference.

The volume increased as the helicopter flew off with the 24 karat gold cables, used by the band to swing on to the roof top, dangled like the hair of an angel ascending towards the heavens. The crowd went into a frenzy when the band broke into a surprise mini-concert, playing four songs of their latest album. The first, Red Sunday From Hell, seems to combine all the chords of their earlier days with the mind boggling, slightly different chords of their last two albums. Red Sunday From Hell deals with the badness of life's pain and suffering and all the nasties of being a really rich Irishman and is sure to once again appease the masses.

Song two, Maggie's A Hag, will likely be as large a hit as Red Sunday From Hell will be because it is basically the same tune using different lyrics that put down English Government to make an old idea

U2-new. Songs three and four Irish Scream and Irish Like Me, deal with the badness of life's pain and suffering and all the nasties of being a really rich Irishman. Irish Scream and Irish Like Me have similar open guitar riffs and similar endings but their difference lies in their middle eight bars.

These two songs are enough like Red Sunday From Hell and Maggie's A Hag to become minor hits in their own rights. As the last notes of Irish Like Me lost themselves in the sea of the U2 bandwagoners, Bono raised his arms to hush the crowd and started to speak. "Thank you, thank you all for coming out tonight." Bono then went on to explain why he had called the press conference and then the band made its most unoriginal move yet. Bono stepped up to the microphone and said "We're more popular than Jesus Christ".

The crowd was shocked and dead silence hung in the air like a giant zeppelin made of gravity resisting lead. A lone six year old Irish girl covered in soot, shoeless, with a tray of matches around her neck began to clap her hands together. The crowd followed her lead and where the Beatles had failed U2 succeeded and have now been excepted as deities. Whether U2ism will continue to expand throughout mainstream America remains to be seen but I have a feeling that my future grandson, Bono Tone, will be asking me what life was like before U2 and I will likely reply "Bloody awful son...bloody awful".

Spam Poison & Fishbreath

By Paul Monster

Celebrated rock musician Spam Poison presents a program titled "Gas Turbine Garden Implements In Classical Music." The first work, Dog Farts, by Snide Reynolds, a virtuoso of the weedeater family of implements, is an overture in strict sonata form that shows the influence of Dick and the Drill Bits in the daring use of farm animals. The brief etude composed by Dirk Adams, Liquid Grandparents, has few visible bowel movements although spectacular use of Spam's regurgitation abilities is exploited. Dr. Cabena says "This is the real thing pal. The classical etude more commonly associated with Black and Decker hedge clippers." The program concludes with Fat Towers Cockroach Holiday—a composer of several important work for blenders in E flat.

Mongolian pianist Lyn Fishbreath has performed at many of the major orchestras north of the 401 along with a recent guest shot at Barny's Bean Palace and Reptile farm.

She received her early music education at L'ecole de Musique L'Indy 500 with a major in Formula 1 engines and the piano. Following the completion of her studies at Cap'n Cosmo's University of Good Tunes, she spent several years sexually abusing small rodents and exposing herself to young raccoons.

Fishbreath recently made her recital debut at the National Arts Centre, performing Flatuation in A sharp. She has been heard this season on CBC's Mostly Junk and That Fucking Awful Noise That Kids Are Bloody Always Listening To. This spring she will make her acting debut in "Dickbreath" at Roy Thompson Hall.

Sam Stute - Smith's Sweaty Student

By Red Ryan

He's the unsung hero, the boy-wonder who ensures that the athletic abilities and procurements of a select group of stellar star-type people in their own minds remain unimpaired during the implementation of their appointed duties as upper echelon athletes, otherwise known as the volleyball and basketball teams.

But Sam A. Stute is not your ordinary run-of-the-mill dribbler. In fact, he is the man who cleans up all those little puddles that basketball players leave on the court during a game. Sam is the dude who wipes sweat off the floor at sporting events.

And Sam is quite astute at his job, which is good because the world needs more stutes. Sam can honestly state, without fear of contradiction, or at least very little fear of contradiction, or perhaps with a good deal of trepidation at being contradicted, that no one has ever died from a heart attack or hypoglycemia after slipping in a sweat puddle at a mens or womens basketball game at this university. Of course, he fails to mention the fractured tibialular bone in the clavicular region which he suffered during a period of giddiness at seeing two pools of sweat building up near centre court during a playoff game two years ago.

Very few people realize this, but Sam actually acquired his training for this extremely demanding occupation from one of the members of our very own Golden Hawk athletic staff, Don Smith. In fact, Smith was one of the founders of the Don Smith School of Sweat Swabbing, an institution dedicated to insuring that sweat-related sporting accidents become a thing of the past.

Sam had nothing but praise for the lessons he learned at Smith's school, praising Smith for "showing his students how to be a big man on campus in athletics without being especially talented at anything in particular."

Ironically, before Sam attended the Smith school, he was a nothing. The only thing he had been known for prior to obtaining his job at the A.C. was being the person in his nursery school graduating class most likely to buy stocks in an acne remedy company, and lose his investment because he bought too much of the stock. But now he is simply known as "the man that Smith built."

To branch off on a tangent for just a moment, Don Smith is an old sweat jockey from many years back. Although he tends not to admit it without a good deal of prodding from enquiring minds who want to know, Smith was actually a champion sweat swabber, holding the Crooksville amateur title from 1958-1960 before turning pro in 1961. He also won the coveted Silver Sweat Chamois in 1957, for most sweat wiped up in one basketball game. Sam admits it will be very hard to follow the path his idol has taken, and accumulate all of those awards, but he is certainly endeavoring to do so.

When asked what makes a good sweat swabber, Sam said that Don Smith is the prototype of a superior swabber. A low centre of gravity is important, and if you are able to not show any emotion, especially smiling, while doing the job, you can be a success in this line of work.

But why does Sam do it? Is it for the money, the prestige of running out onto the floor during the middle of a game with a sparkling white towel so that he can do his job in front of the multitudinous throngs? No!!! He does it for the sweat. You see, Sam has a fetish about sweat, and, in fact, has the world's largest collection of celebrity sweat samples, having accumulated 324 exhibits of sweat.

His collection ranges from stinky sports socks, to sneakers that have exploded in the midst of a court-long basketball break-out, to sweat bands worn by some of the world's best tennis players, and Carling Bassett. But the entry in his collection that he prizes most is the sweat-laden waist band worn by the 1985 World Sumo Wrestling champion during his victory match. In fact, that band measures 117 inches in circumference, and when wet, weighs 223 pounds.

The collection does not rival that accumulated by Smith over his long and illustrious career, although Sam is definitely trying to increase profusely of sweat.

No, this isn't Sam, but since Steve Davis went to all the trouble to steal this for us, we knew we could sneak it in somewhere. Let's just say that she's sweating and that makes the picture relevant. (Note: "Raven de la Croix" is obviously a knockout, but reportedly has nothing to do with Don's black eye!")

Smith comes out of closet

By Scerge Loft

The rumour mill has pulled through. At a hastily called press conference at the Athletic Complex with a satellite hookup to Maple Leaf Gardens, beloved WLU Assistant Athletic Director Don Smith confirmed that he really is John Brophy, coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

At the press conference, Toronto Star writer Joke Robertson, in a half-hour question, asked him why he kept his identity secret. "Do you think," Smith responded, "that the Leafs' management would want to admit that their coach is a guy from Crooksville, Ohio? It may be acceptable to Laurier, but not to your piece of trash."

The next question came from CBLT broadcaster Spruce Browbeaten. After quoting from Milton and Emily Dickinson, he asked him why the Leafs have paddled in mediocrity for the last twenty years. Smith's answer: "They like their easy chairs too much. No fan pressure, no performance."

Next came the Globally duo of Jimmer Tatatati and Mark Hebzeesillee. "Smitty, if the World Champion Minnesota Twins can establish a dynasty in a short amount of time, and the Buds are similar in talent to the World Champion Minnesota Twins, why are they not better than the World Champion Minnesota Twins?" After predicting that the Leafs could at least tie the Twins in a hockey game, Smith's reply was that he just has not had much luck transferring his concept of picks and blocks to set up plays to the hockey rink.

At this point, Leafs owner Harold Ballard emerged. Questions stopped as he threatened to offer the journalists employment as his public relations director. The assembled media personalities fled for their lives.

Co-sexes spike for Smith

By Scerge Loft

In the words of the Exalted Definer of Significance, a speck of water leads to the tallest oak trees.

The WLU Co-Ed Volleyball squad won the OUWIAA West Division championship last week by a 3-2 score in the finals against the Waterloo Athenians in an unbelievable fifth game finish. Neither team had been able to take more than a one point lead as they held each other's hands until the score was 20-19 Laurier. It was up to trusty Roxanne Brown to try and knit the last loop in this season's tapestry, as it was her turn to set.

Brown serves the ball high and deep. It is dug by Waterloo's Gus Chong in the middle of the backcourt. It sets up Fanne Schleider for a middle hit. In a miraculous dive, Kensington Harrington-Livingstone saves the ball with his now crushed right pinky finger. The ball then bounced straight into Scott Flea's nose and soared to the deepest part of the WLU backcourt.

It seemed the ball would collide with the Golden Wall but, with millimetres to spare, middle hitter Allah McGoo reached up, slipped her hand between the ball and the wall and spiked it at 250 m.p.h. for a kill. Chong tried valiantly to dig the ball but its acceleration resulted in a dislocation of both his shoulders.

Co-Coaches Brophy Smith and Cookie Screech were ecstatic about the outcome but keeping their composure. "I showed them with X's and O's how to defend against that. They just worked it great," blurted Smith. "I swallowed my gum when it happened," added Screech.

As for the players, their feelings could be measured only with an altimeter. "This is going to be front page news back home. Yippee," exclaimed veteran Medway product Petty Smith. "Champagne and caviar is better for my diet than rats and Gatorade," added River

"Cobra" Shoreline.

Statistically, McGoo and Harrington Livingstone were the leading hitters with 46 and 39 kills respectively. Flea was the leading blocker with 16.
