Foreword

There is nothing new in this yearbook. The portraits are just as they have been in the first forty-five volumes of the Shield. The groups may be posed in a more informal setting, the candid photos may be somewhat different, but essentially the Shield is the same book that it has always been: a record of the people and events of the year.

If there are differences in this book, they will reflect only the differences in the University.

The book began with other ideas in mind, ideas that would eventually be discarded before the book would be complete.

Originally, the book could have been a running commentary on what is wrong with the university, but this idea was replaced by attempts to objectively record what took place here.

The layout of the book is direct and simple, allowing the pictures to do the work of recording the year.

The sections of the book are divided by division stories rather than the more traditional division pages.

Attempts have been made to give continuity to the volume, with an opening section culminating in the closing.

There will be those who think that there is nothing worth preserving at this University, nothing worth filling these pages. Yet there must be something important about all this spectacle, because we all seem so intent on understanding it.

We have not found the solutions in this volume of pictures and words, because that is not its purpose now, but in time there will at least be this record to refresh our memories when we have the wisdom to understand what we are.

Prelude

*It was a dreary morning when the wheels
Rolled over a wide plain o'erhung with clouds,
And nothing cheered our way till first we saw
The long-roofed chapel of King's College lift
Turrets and pinnacles in answering files,
Extended high above a dusky grove.*

*Advancing, we espied upon the road
A student clothed in gown and tasselled cap,
Striding along as if o'ertasked by Time,
Or covetous of exercise and air;
He passed—nor was I master of my eyes
Till he was left an arrow's flight behind.*

*I was the Dreamer, they the Dream; I roamed Delighted through the motley spectacle;
Gowns grave, or gaudy, doctors, students, streets,
Courts, cloisters, flocks of churches, gateways,
towers:
Migration strange for a stripling of the hills,
A northern villager.*

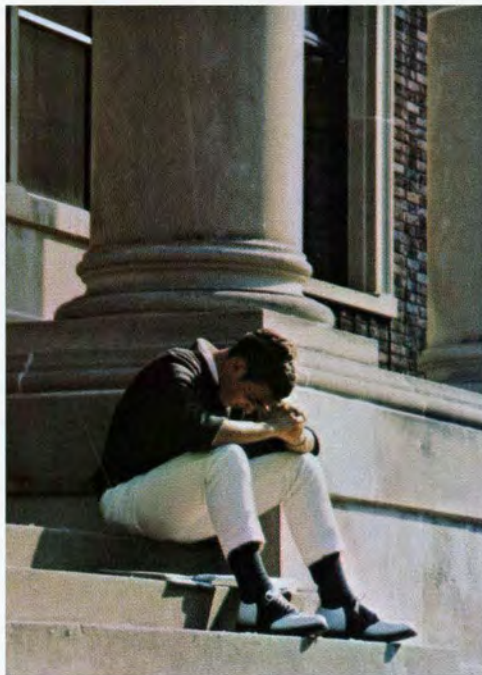

*'tis enough to note
That here in dwarf proportions were expressed
The limbs of the great world; Its eager strifes
Collaterally pourtrayed, as in mock fight,
A tournament of blows, some hardly dealt Though short of mortal combat; and whate'er
Might in this pageant be supposed to hit
An artless rustic's notice, this way less,
More that way, was not wasted upon me—
And yet the spectacle may well demand
A more substantial name, no mimic show,
Itself a living part of a live whole,
A creek in the vast sea.*

*Of College labours, of the Lecturer's room
All studded round, as thick as chairs could stand,
With loyal students faithful to their books,
Half-and-half idlers, hardy recusants,
And honest dunces—of important days,
Examinations, when the man was weighed
As in a balance! of excessive hopes,
Tremblings withal and commendable fears,
Small jealousies, and triumphs good or bad,
Let others that know more speak as they know.
Such glory was but little sought by me,
And little won.*

*Yet from the first crude days
Of settling time in this untried abode,
I was disturbed at times by prudent thoughts,
Wishing to hope without a hope, some fears
About my future worldly maintenance,
And, more than all, a strangeness in the mind,
A feeling that I was not for that hour,
Nor for that place.*

*And here, O Friend! have I retraced my life
Up to an eminence, and told a tale
Of matters which not falsely may be called
The glory of my youth. Of genius, power, Creation and divinity itself
I have been speaking, for my theme has been What passed within me . . .
. . . And, therefore, now that we must quit this theme,
I am not heartless, for there's not a man
That lives who hath not known his god-like hours,
And feels not what an empire we inherit
As natural beings in the strength of Nature.*

—from William Wordsworth's Prelude,
"Residence at Cambridge"

There is a desperate search for order in the first days of the University, an awareness that the year starts here, and if it doesn't start right, the whole thing will be wrong. For this reason, hanging posters on walls, adjusting bottles and books on shelves, filling drawers with clothes, and having a right place for everything take on an importance they will never have again.

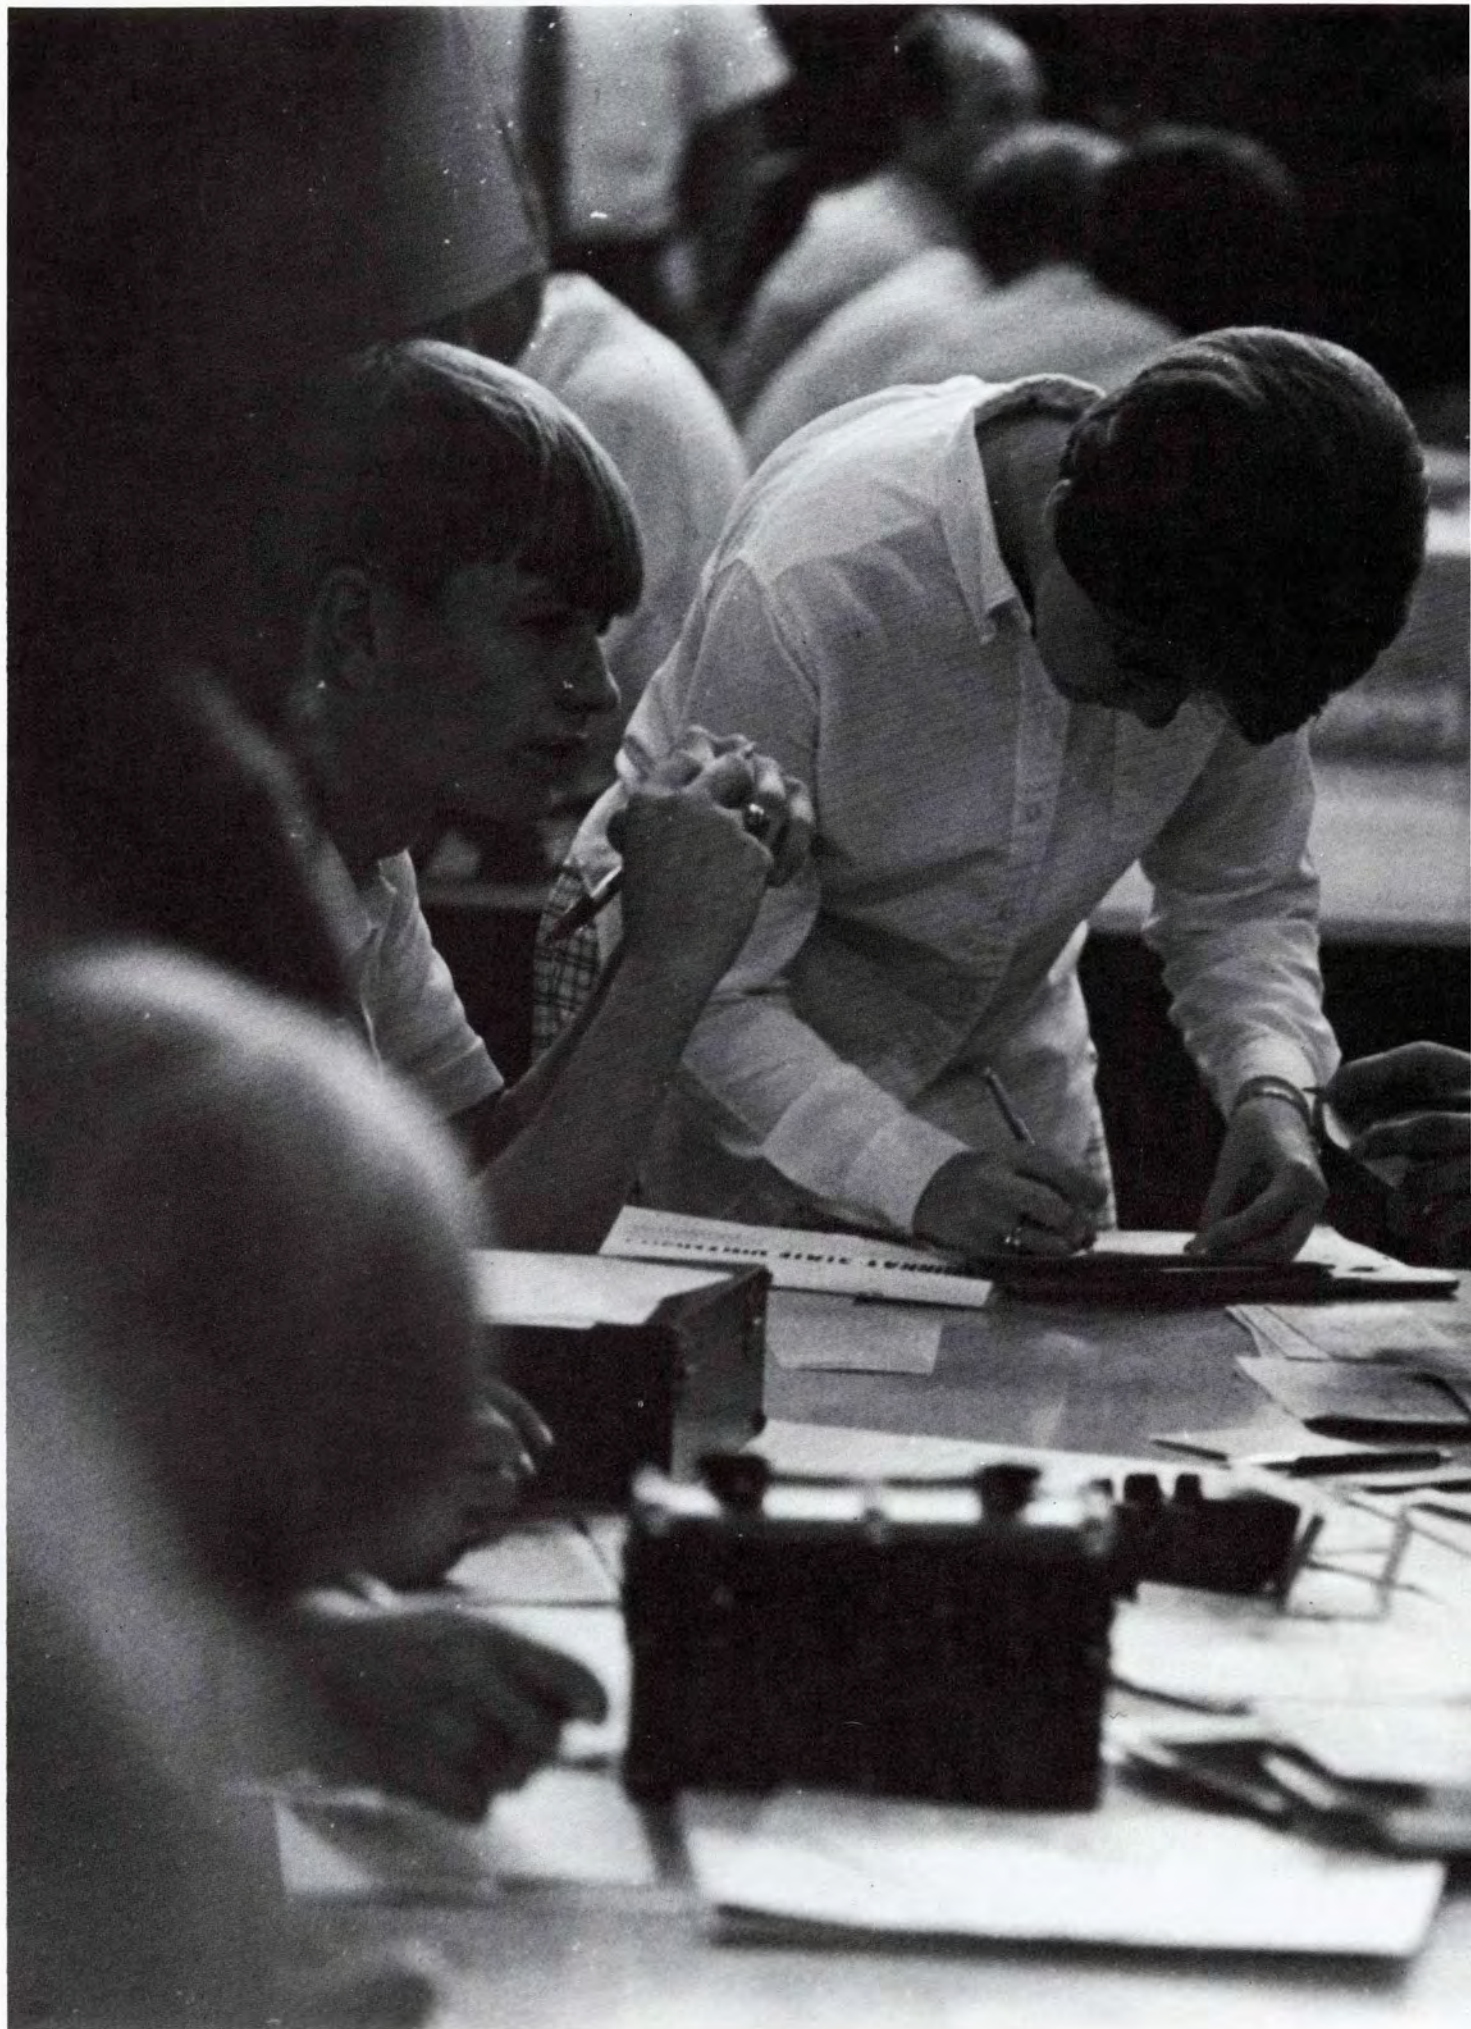

What emerges from this dogmatic attempt at order is an unreality unmatched by later hours at the University. The errors that are the past reappear and each hour is a frantic attempt to take the whole thing in and make it right.

A mother and daughter unload in front of Ordway Hall. (right) Another family makes its first trip of the year to Woods.

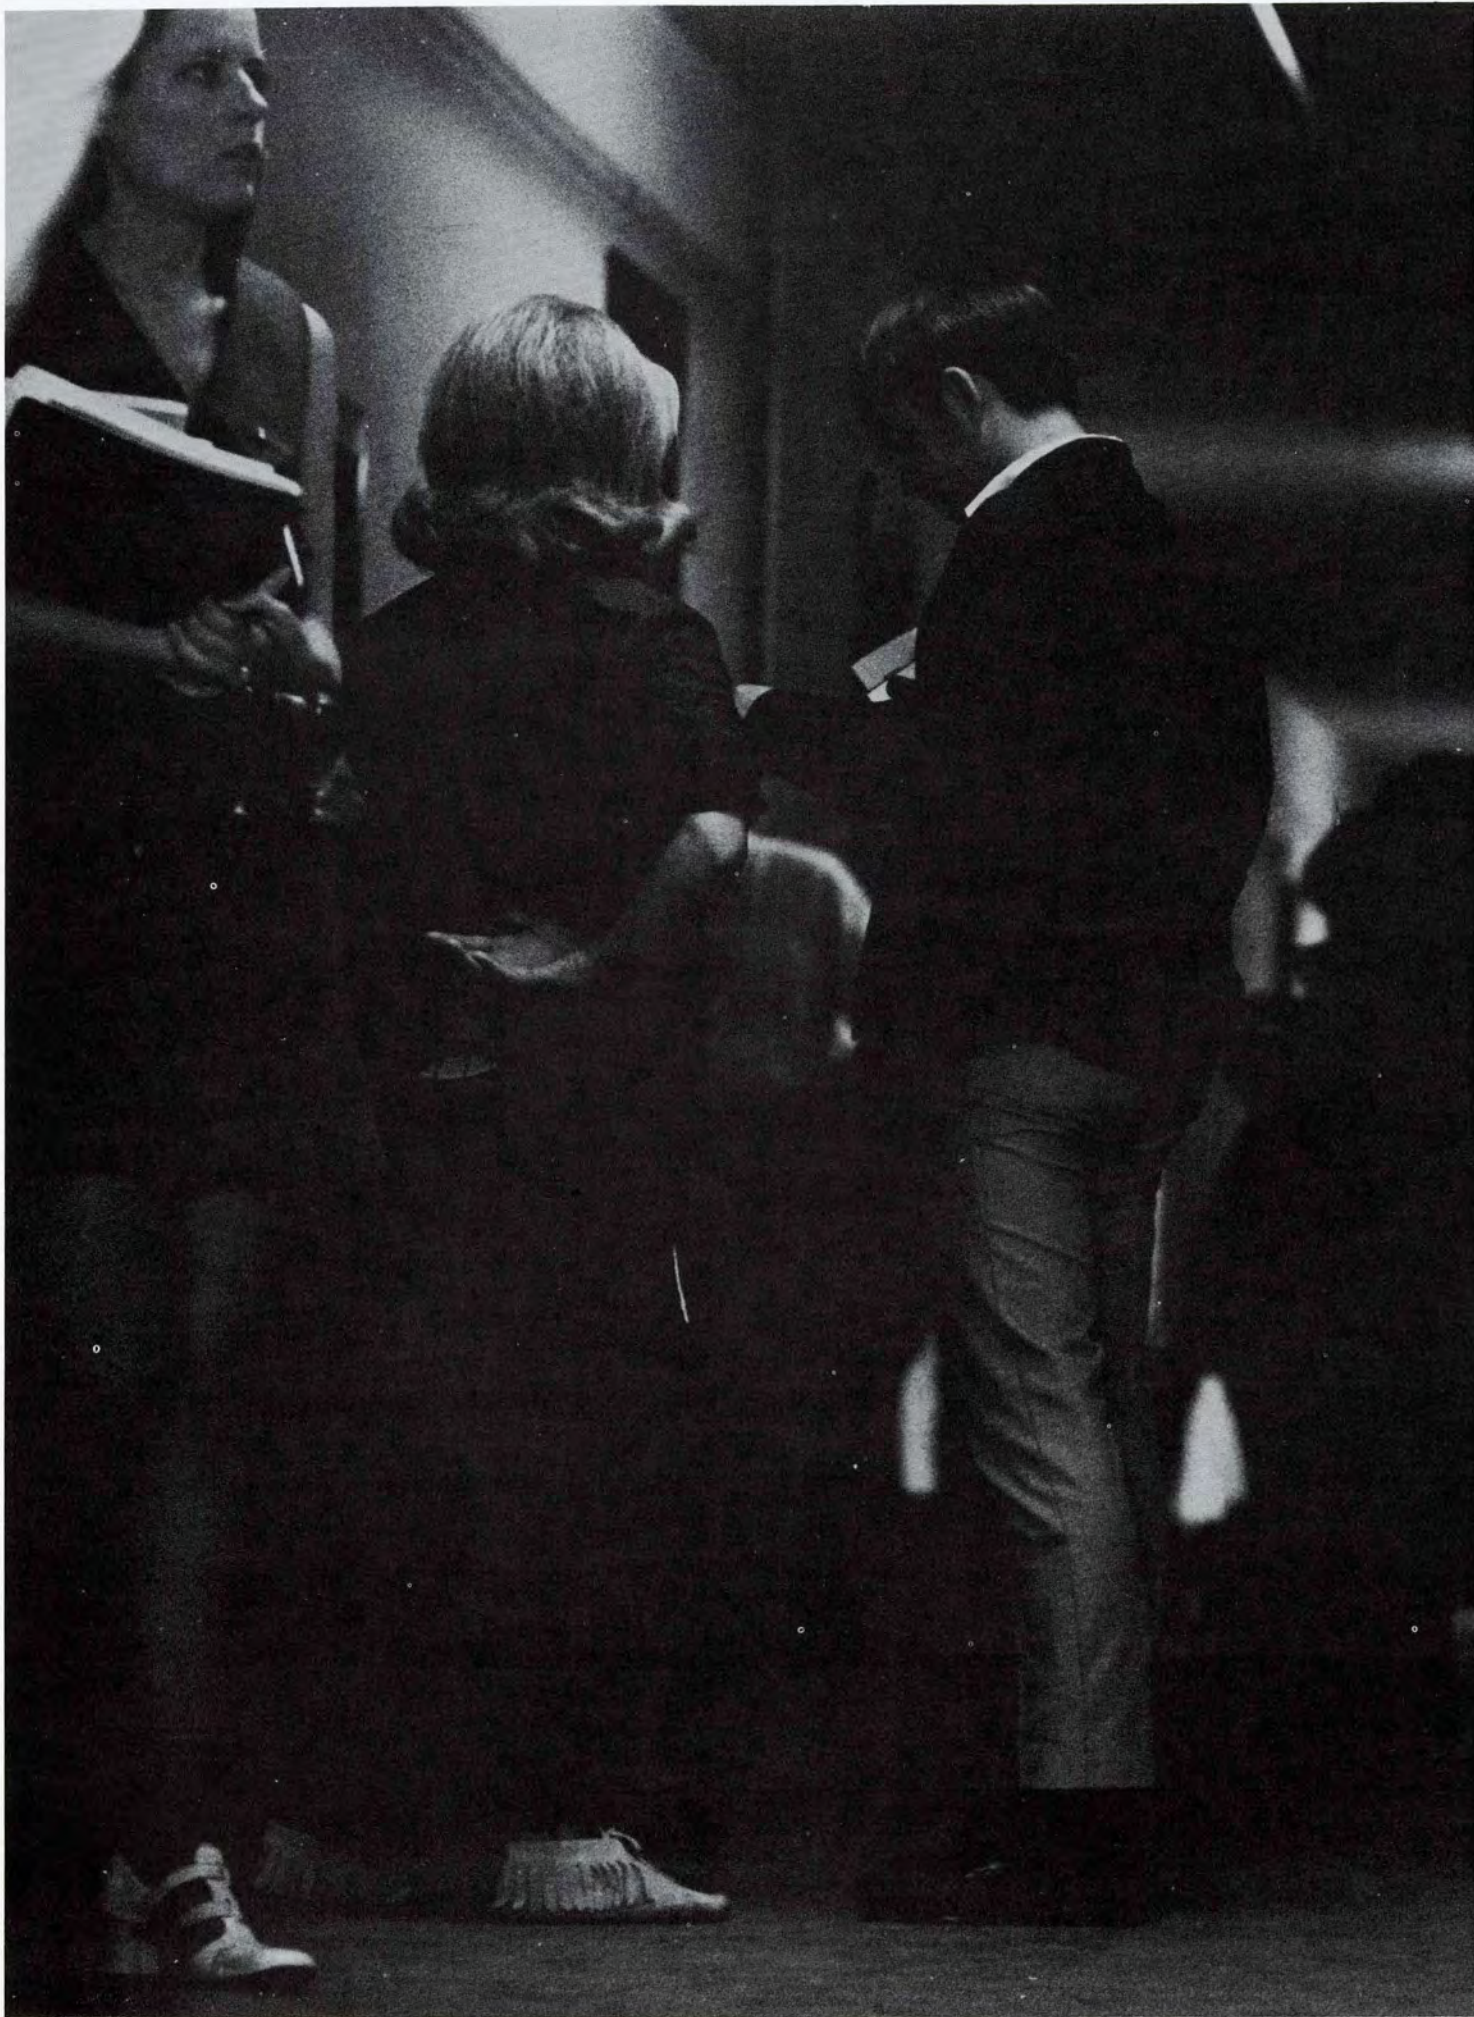

Normally, registration could be a simple exercise in alphabetical movement, with Na following Mu, but everything absorbs an air of abnormality; Eng 302-4 10:30 MWF becomes as important a series of numbers as August 6, 1945. Yet in spite of all this juxtaposition, the right number of people usually walk away with the right number of cards, back into the right kind of dormitory, with the right kind of stub on the checkbook. It will take weeks for the patterns to emerge, and even longer for the discovery of how far they are from original intention.

Freshmen make final adjustments on semester schedules (left). Earlier in the week a family moves their daughter into Elizabeth (above).

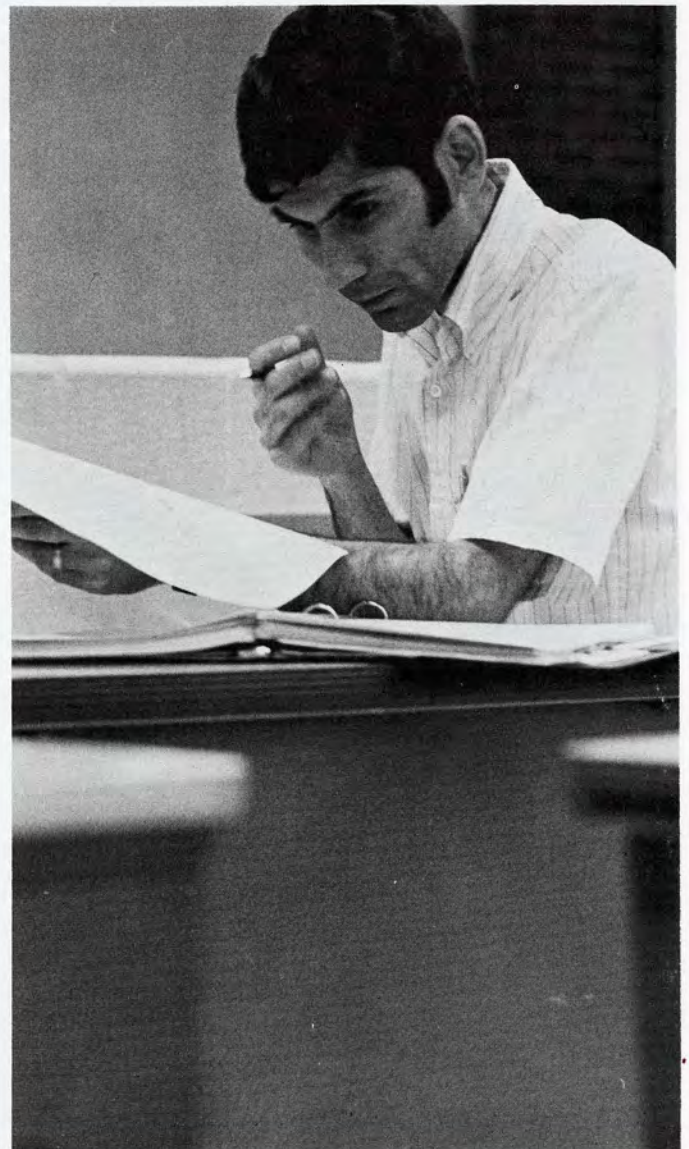

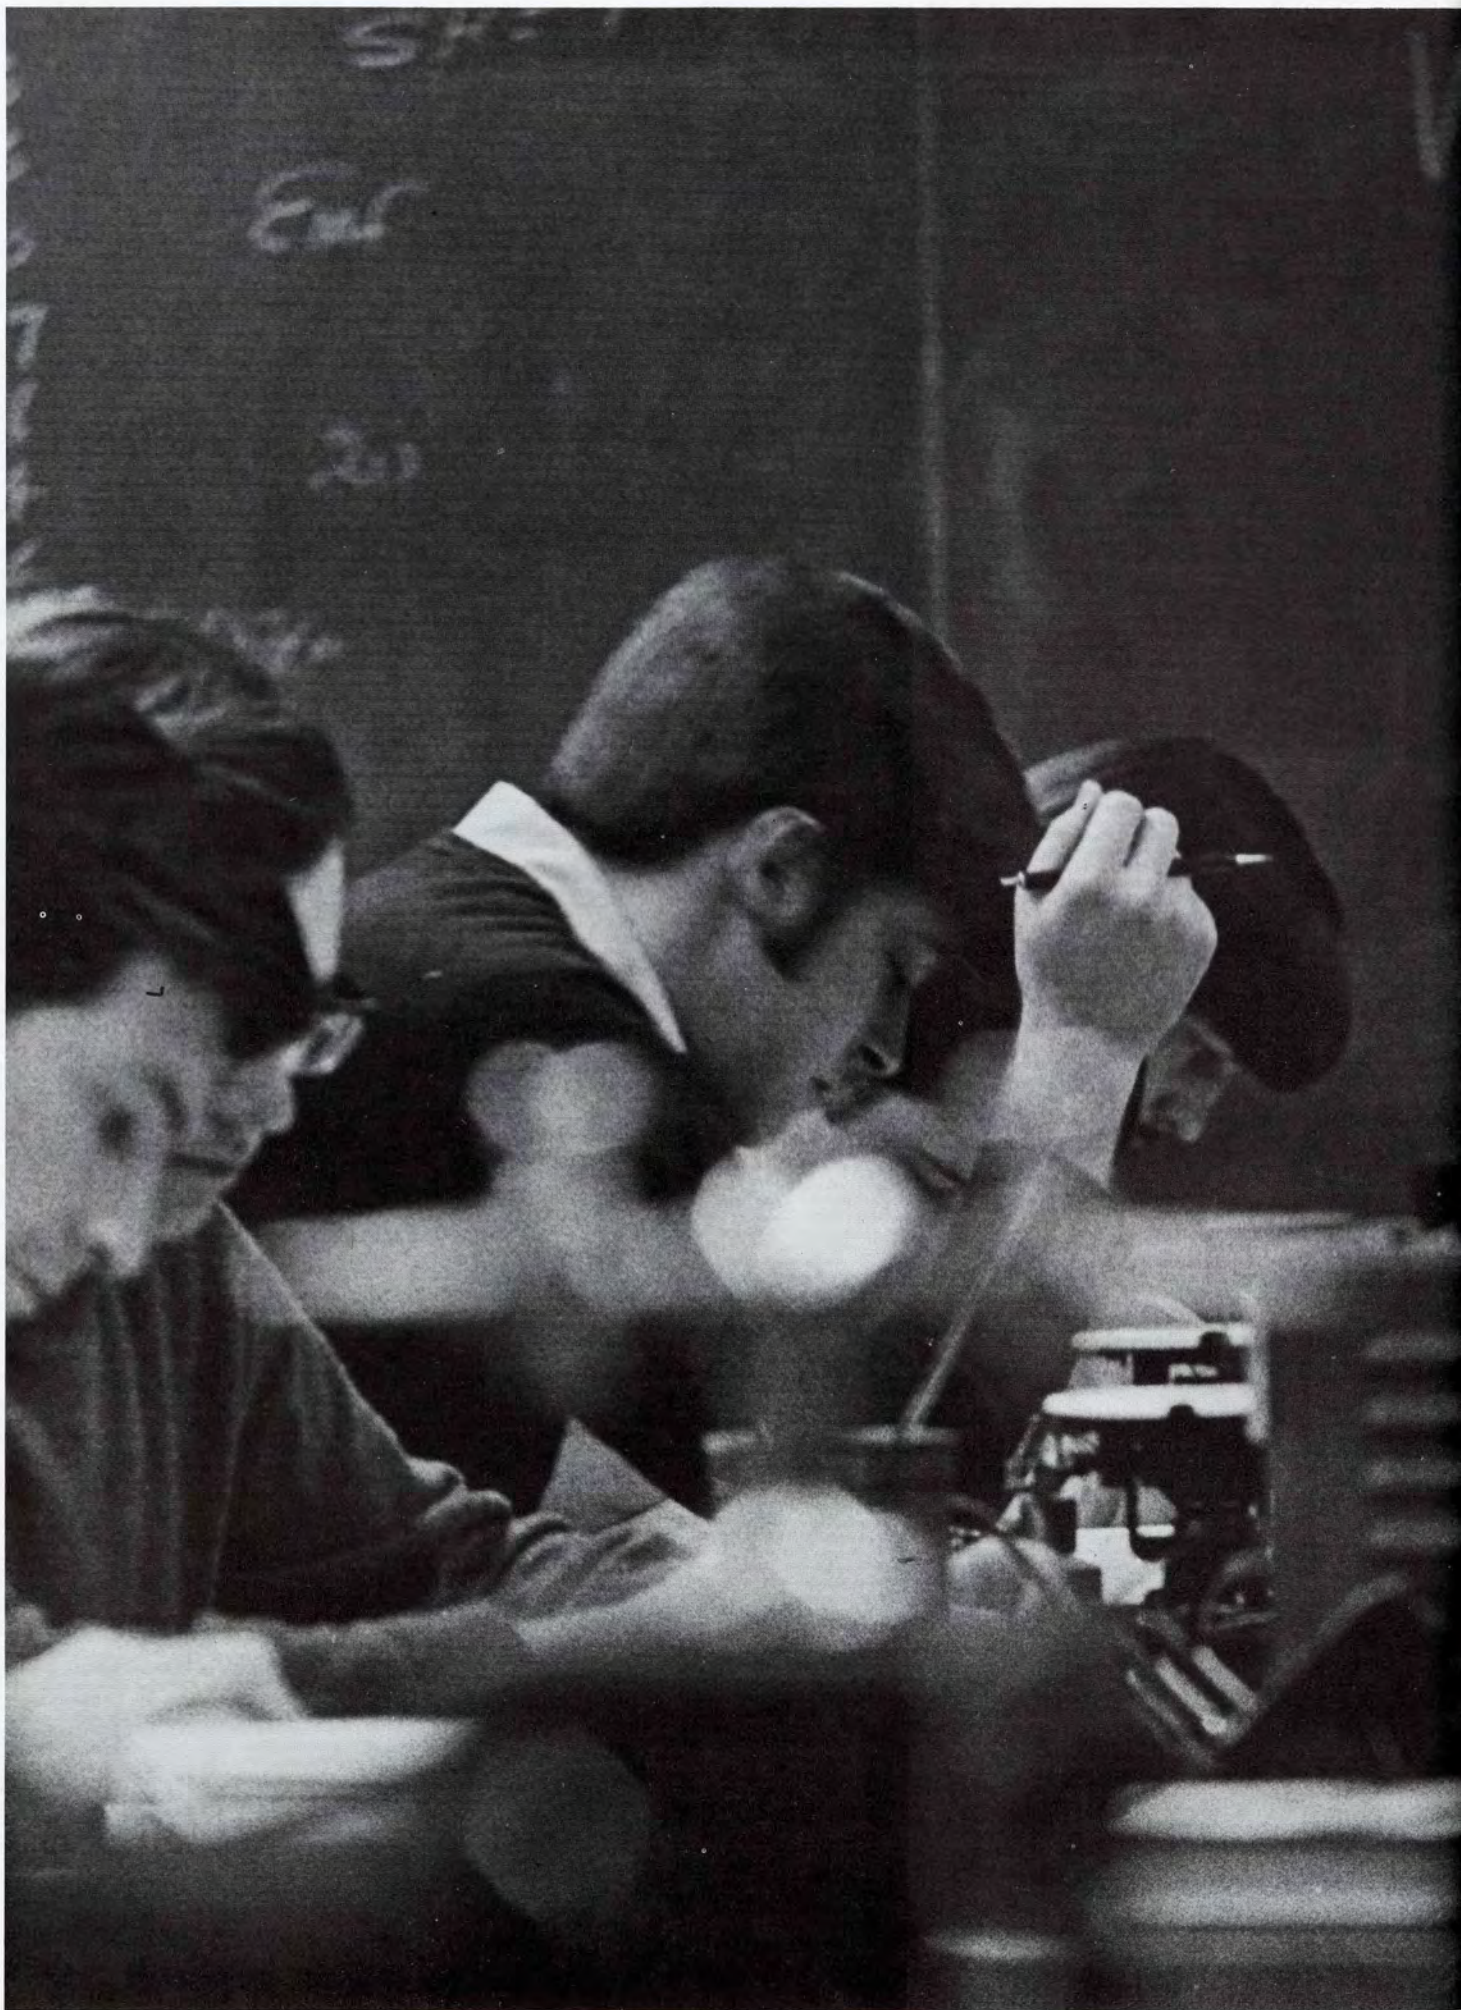

There is more to a class than the fifty-minute period that the university requires. It is comprised of a sheaf of notes scattered in four or five different notebooks; a workbook lost somewhere in the middle of the semester and then rebought and half-completed.

The tragedies that befall the student somehow become humorous later, and will after three or four years seem laughable.

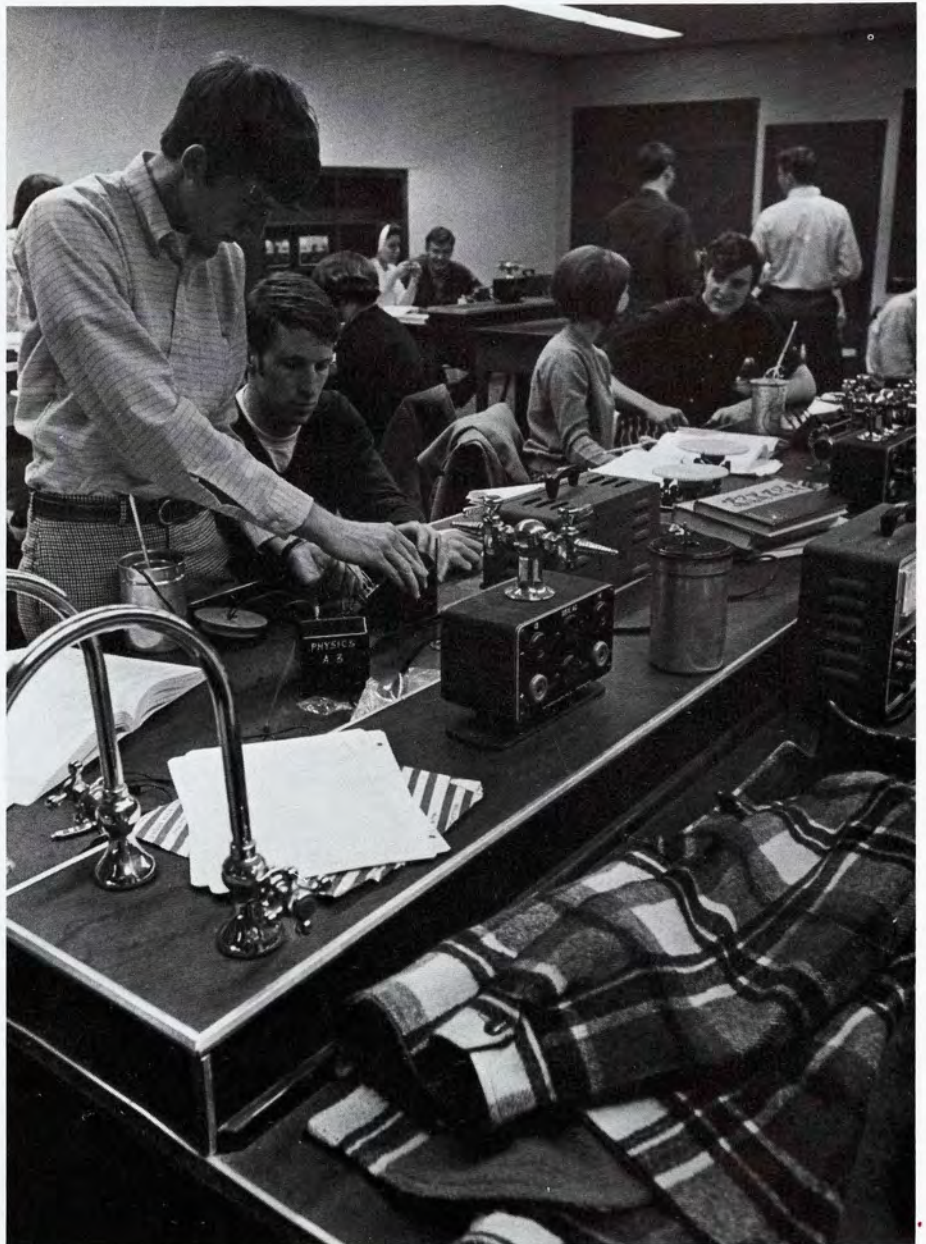

Yet before this sense of humor is achieved, there is a dead seriousness about the whole thing, that somehow fails to let in light, and keeps the whole affair swathed in disbelief.

Laboratories provide practical experience and the opportunity to observe the principles accumulated in the classroom. Through them, students learn by active participation with the subject matter. The labs themselves are as varied as their subjects. The general conception of laboratory is surrounded by images of test tubes and dead frogs, but departments such as journalism and business offer practical experience with their fields just as the sciences do.

Little of the time spent in the university will be spent in class, and the remainder is directed, in the optimum condition, toward preparation for those hours. For the largest part, little time will be spent in preparation, until it becomes necessary. For a smaller minority, there is a dedication about the whole thing which assumes the fragile air of unreality upon which the university will eventually depend.

The center of academic life in the University is the library. With all of its apparent coldness and apparent mechanical filing and shelving, nothing is as essential to the accumulation of information and the development of ideas as the Library.

has varying significance for all students. To all, it is the beginning of a two day rest from classes. But to some it is the time to pack and leave for a weekend at home; to others, it is time to be spent with activities, parties, and enjoyment on campus.

There was an increase in the affluence of the student. He had more money, larger social appetites, and perhaps more time than his predecessors. Although Murray, being somewhat provincial, did not keep pace with the social developments of larger cities, for the majority of its students, it was the best they had ever known.

There are some styles that seem to have something of a timeless appeal. The movie, South, dances, the opposite sex, the pinball machine, and sports. Perhaps what it all meant was that in 1970 students continued to find pleasant ways to use the time not spent in class.

hen Stan Watts kicked off to Eastern, Homecoming was virtually over. The parade that preceded the game and the preparations for the parade, the alumni coffees and luncheons, and the pre-game ceremonies all pointed toward the afternoon contest. But as the sky got greyer, and Murray's hopes for a second straight homecoming victory got dimmer, homecoming began to lose its momentum. All that was left were the parties. By the third quarter, more than half the students had gone home. What had once been a ten-thousand plus crowd that saw Carol Anderson crowned Homecoming Queen slowly dwindled as Eastern piled on to a 34-13 victory.

The Marching Thoroughbreds lead the homecoming parade through downtown Murray; Carol Anderson and the Homecoming Court await the crowning ceremonies (above). Dave Ford (73) and Jim Wilson (75) rush Eastern's quarterback in the afternoon contest.

Despite the anticlimactic afternoon, alumni seemed to have the same kind of time they always have. Meeting former graduates and faculty was the principal pastime as the floats went by, bringing other homecomings to mind and making this one very similar to all the rest.

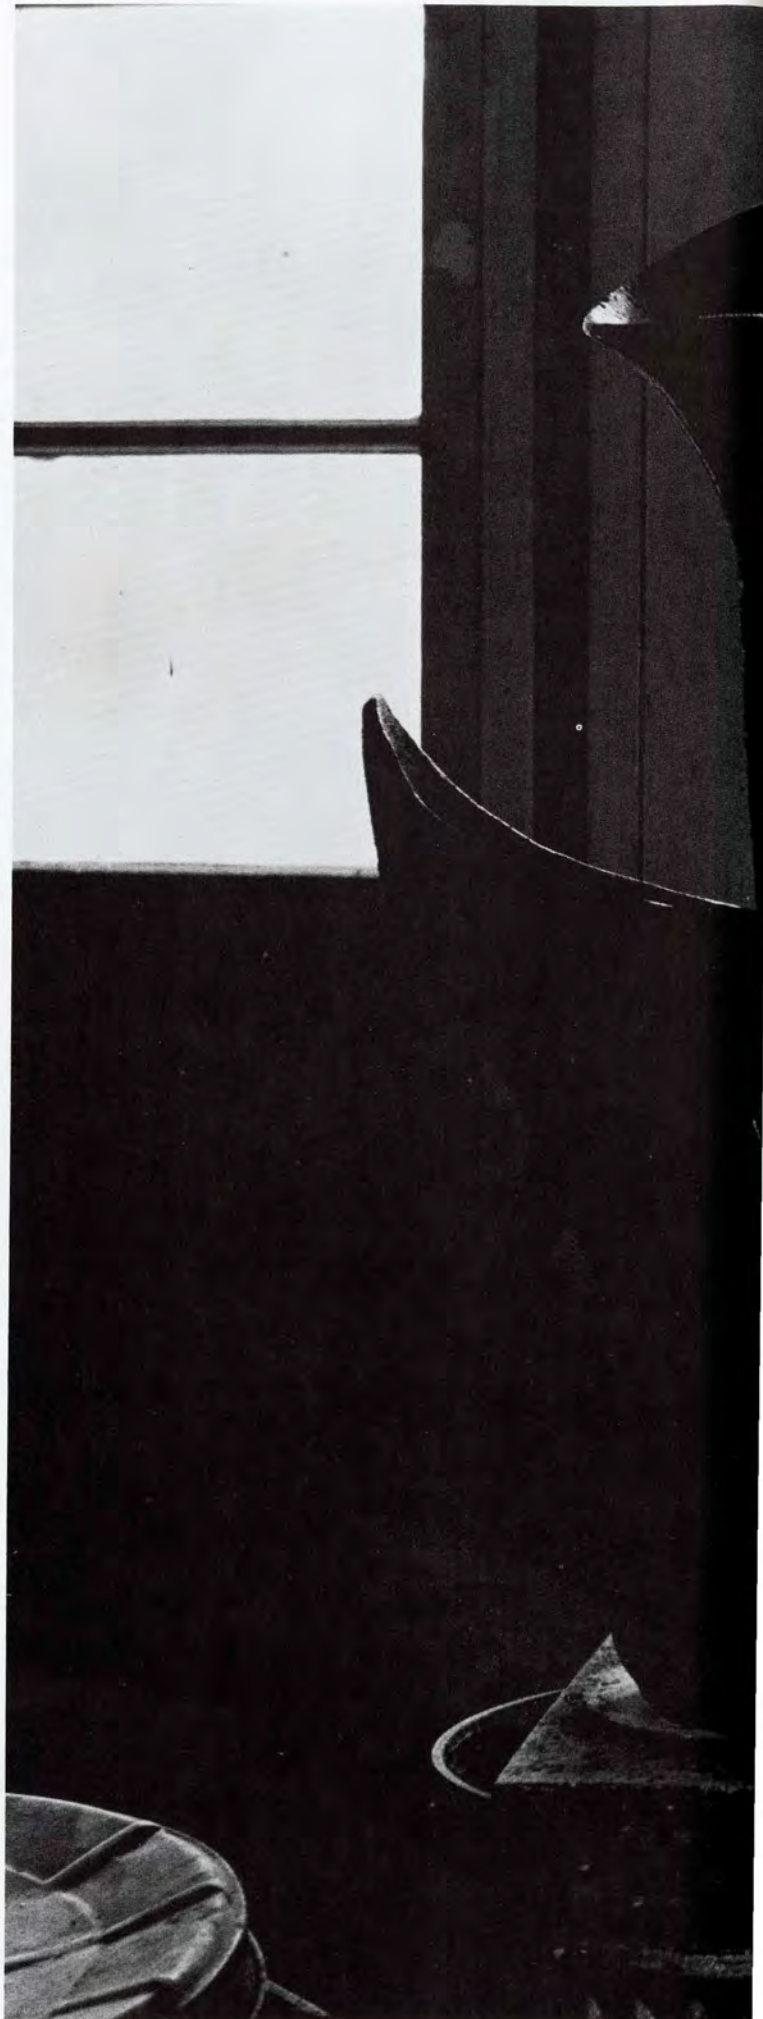

Alumni gathered at the alumni luncheon in the Waterfield Student Union Ballroom. M. O. Wrathner and Dr. C. S. Lowry (above) were among the alumni attending.

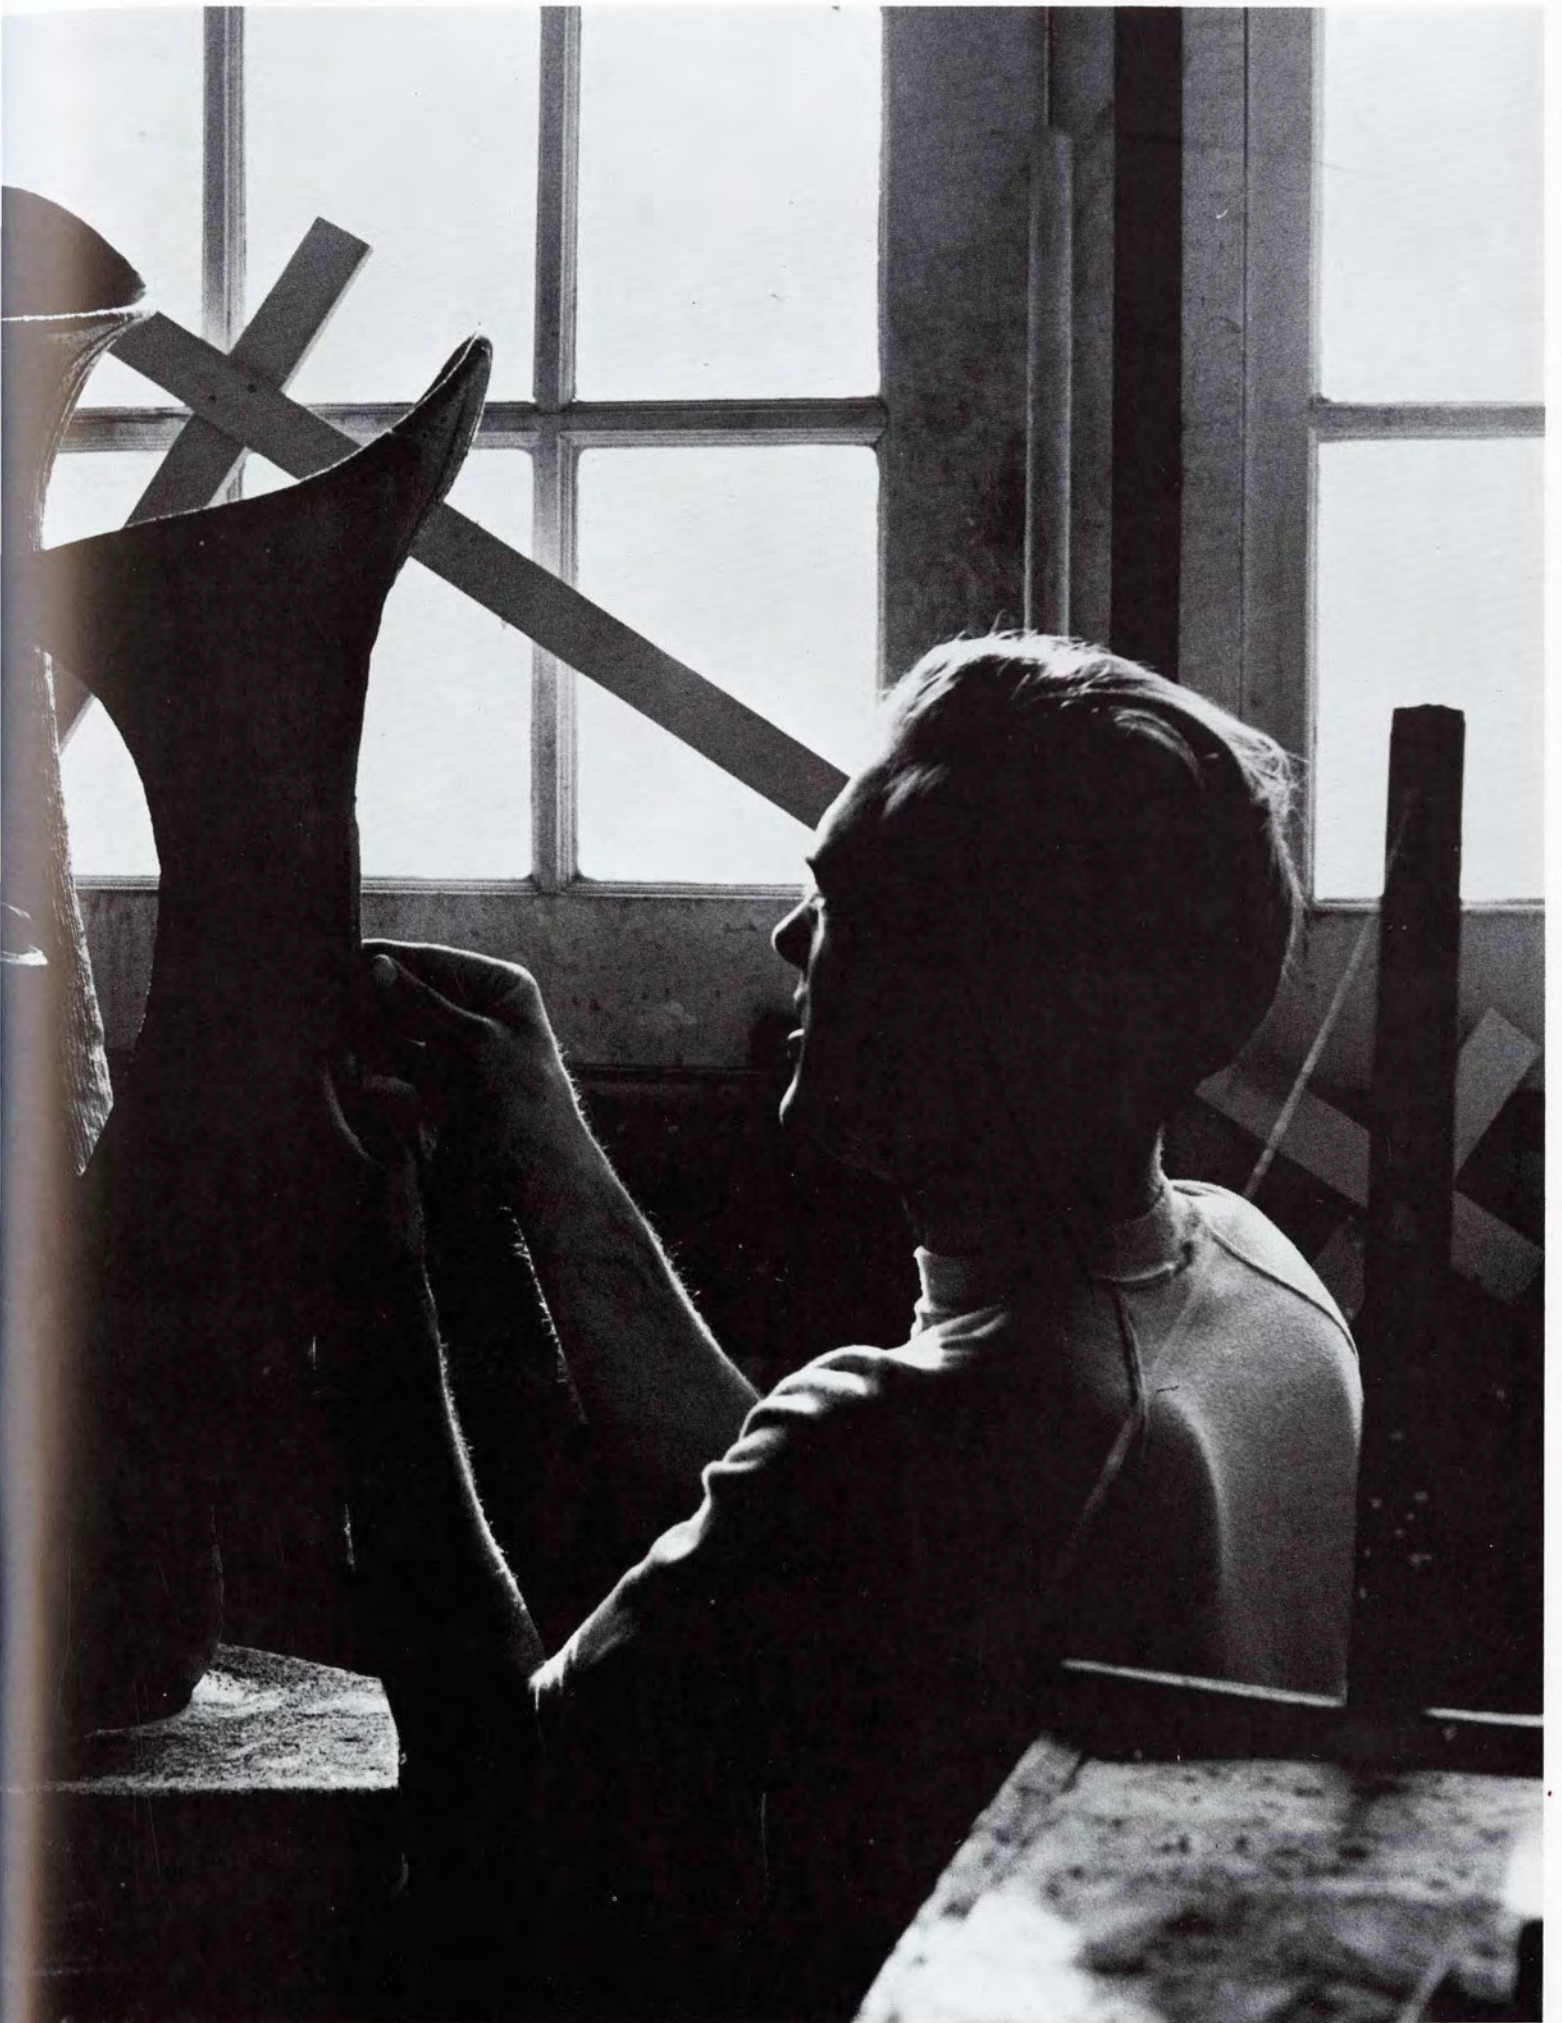

The art department has been in a state of rebellion for the past four years. What is happening is a turn-about in the philosophy of where the department chooses to place its emphasis.

Before the rebellion started, the department's emphasis was on art education, and for years the department had been grinding out an exceptional quality of art teacher. But after the thinking of the department changed, the emphasis turned on studio art, a change which has moved Murray State's art department into national prominence. No other school in the state places the importance on studio art that Murray State does, and because of this, no other school in the state, and few in this region, can attract the attention with student work that the department is attracting.

ith expanded class enrollment, the drama department moved to open-type settings rather than the more conventional box-settings in its fall and spring productions

Performances of "Dark of the Moon" and Summertree" provided students the opportunity to develop and demonstrate individual techniques and talents.

The music department of Murray State University has a tradition that stretches back into the years when its head was Price Doyle. Because of its location, combined with the quality of instruction, Murray State attracted outstanding musicians from a four-state area, musicians who brought the department national recognition.

Attracting the finest vocalists in this area and the better brass players in the state, the department is highly rated for its musical performances.

Under Richard Farrell, and the outstanding faculty he has attracted since he took over the department, the high standard of excellence has been pushed higher.

There could be something absurd about someone getting a degree by learning to operate a lathe, but there could be the same absurdity in getting a degree by learning to throw a pot.

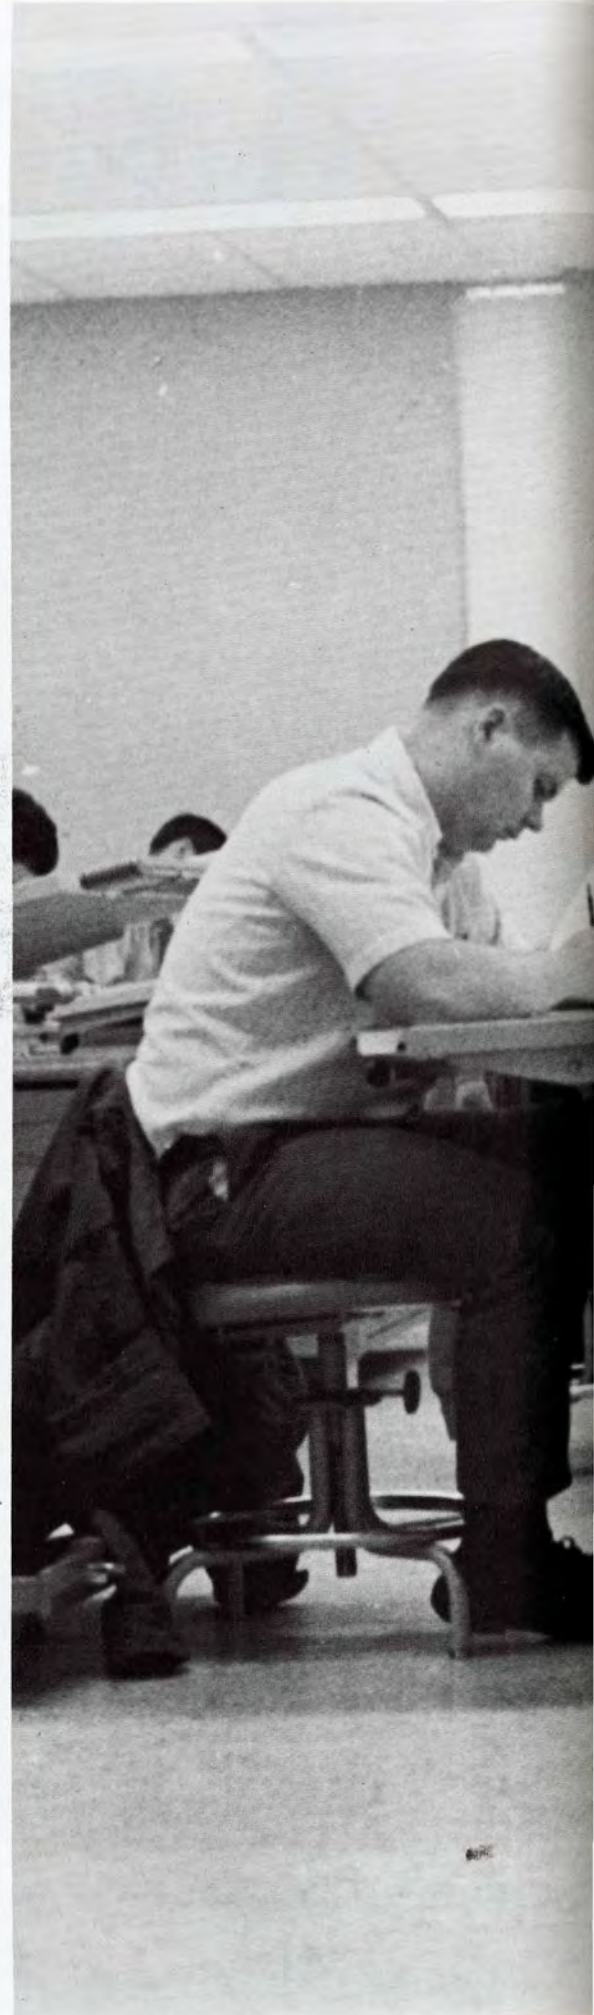

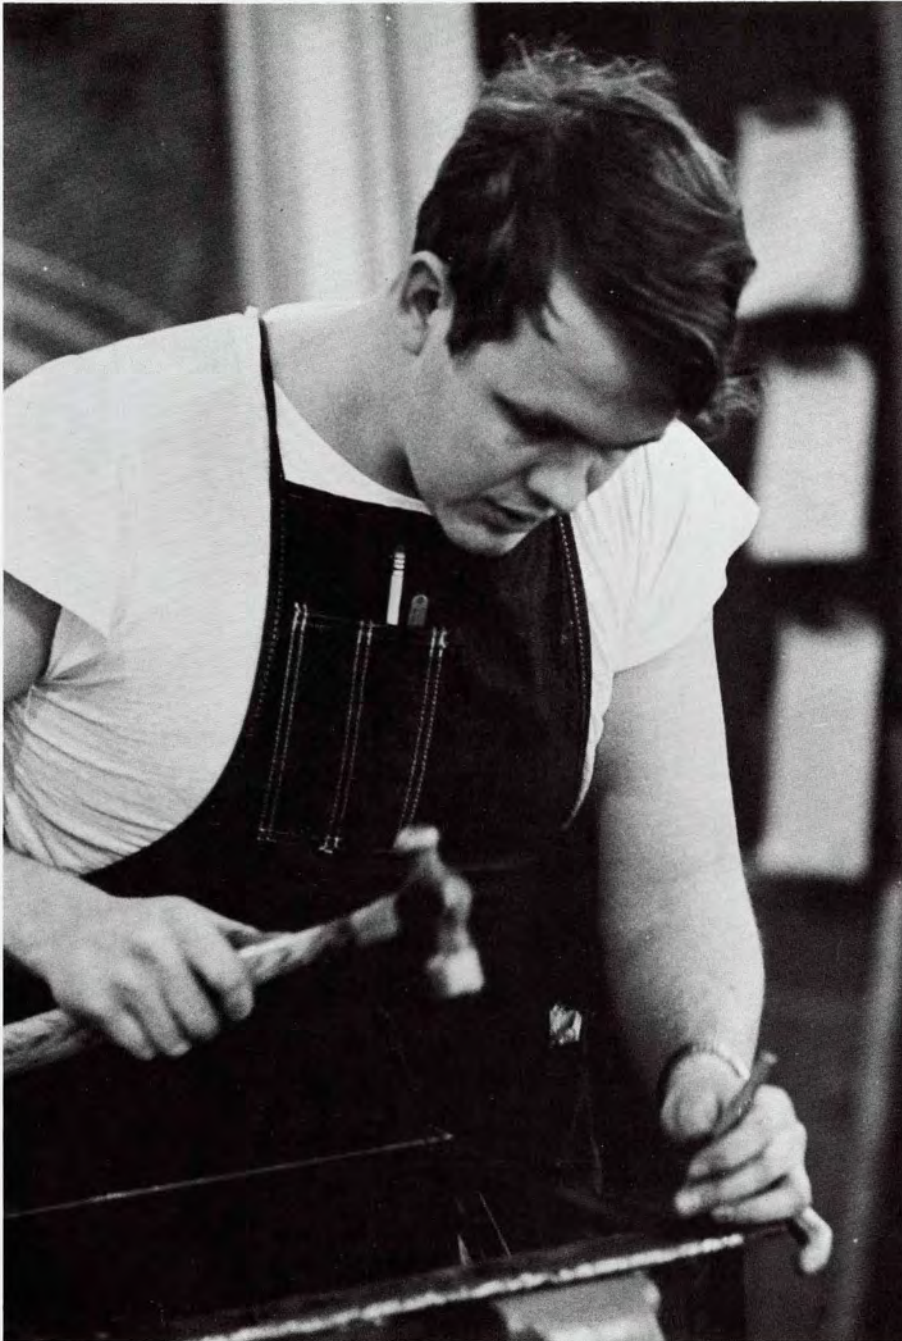

Absurdities aside, the department of industrial education offers opportunities for students whose interests lie in the less academic veins to obtain a degree and move into a useful place in society.

here is a need in high schools and vocational schools for instructors in industrial education, and the university has moved to fill this need. A new industrial education building houses the finest equipment and facilities available for the instruction of industrial education.

In spite of the cynicism applied to industrial education majors, there will always be a need for that breed of man who goes out into this nation of ours and teaches people to build and construct.

The Department of Military Science underwent another year of transition and adjustment in 1970 during the second year of leadership under its PMS, Col. Eff W. Birdsong.

Drill was shortened in length, classes for freshmen only met once a week instead of the previous two. The NCO Academy continued to provide the corps of cadets with more junior leaders.

What was taking place was an effort to continue to produce the quality and quantity of commissioned officers that the department traditionally demands, but with this effort being concentrated on those who actually desire it.

Major Raymond Wright (above left) checks PR roll books; Cadets (above right) file into auditorium instruction; Cadets await inspection (above) and later are inspected by their platoon leader (left).

The Department of Military Science has one major objective: to provide officers for the Army.

There are critics of the program who say it is not relative to the modern university. Yet when faced with the realities of military service, the program offers an alternative to the individual who is faced with the probability of life as an enlisted soldier.

There may be a time when the ideals of a society become reality, but until then, the Reserve Officers Training Corps will continue to be the most sensible fulfillment of a military obligation offered.

Cadets prepare for inspection (above) and wait in ranks during the selection of outstanding cadets.

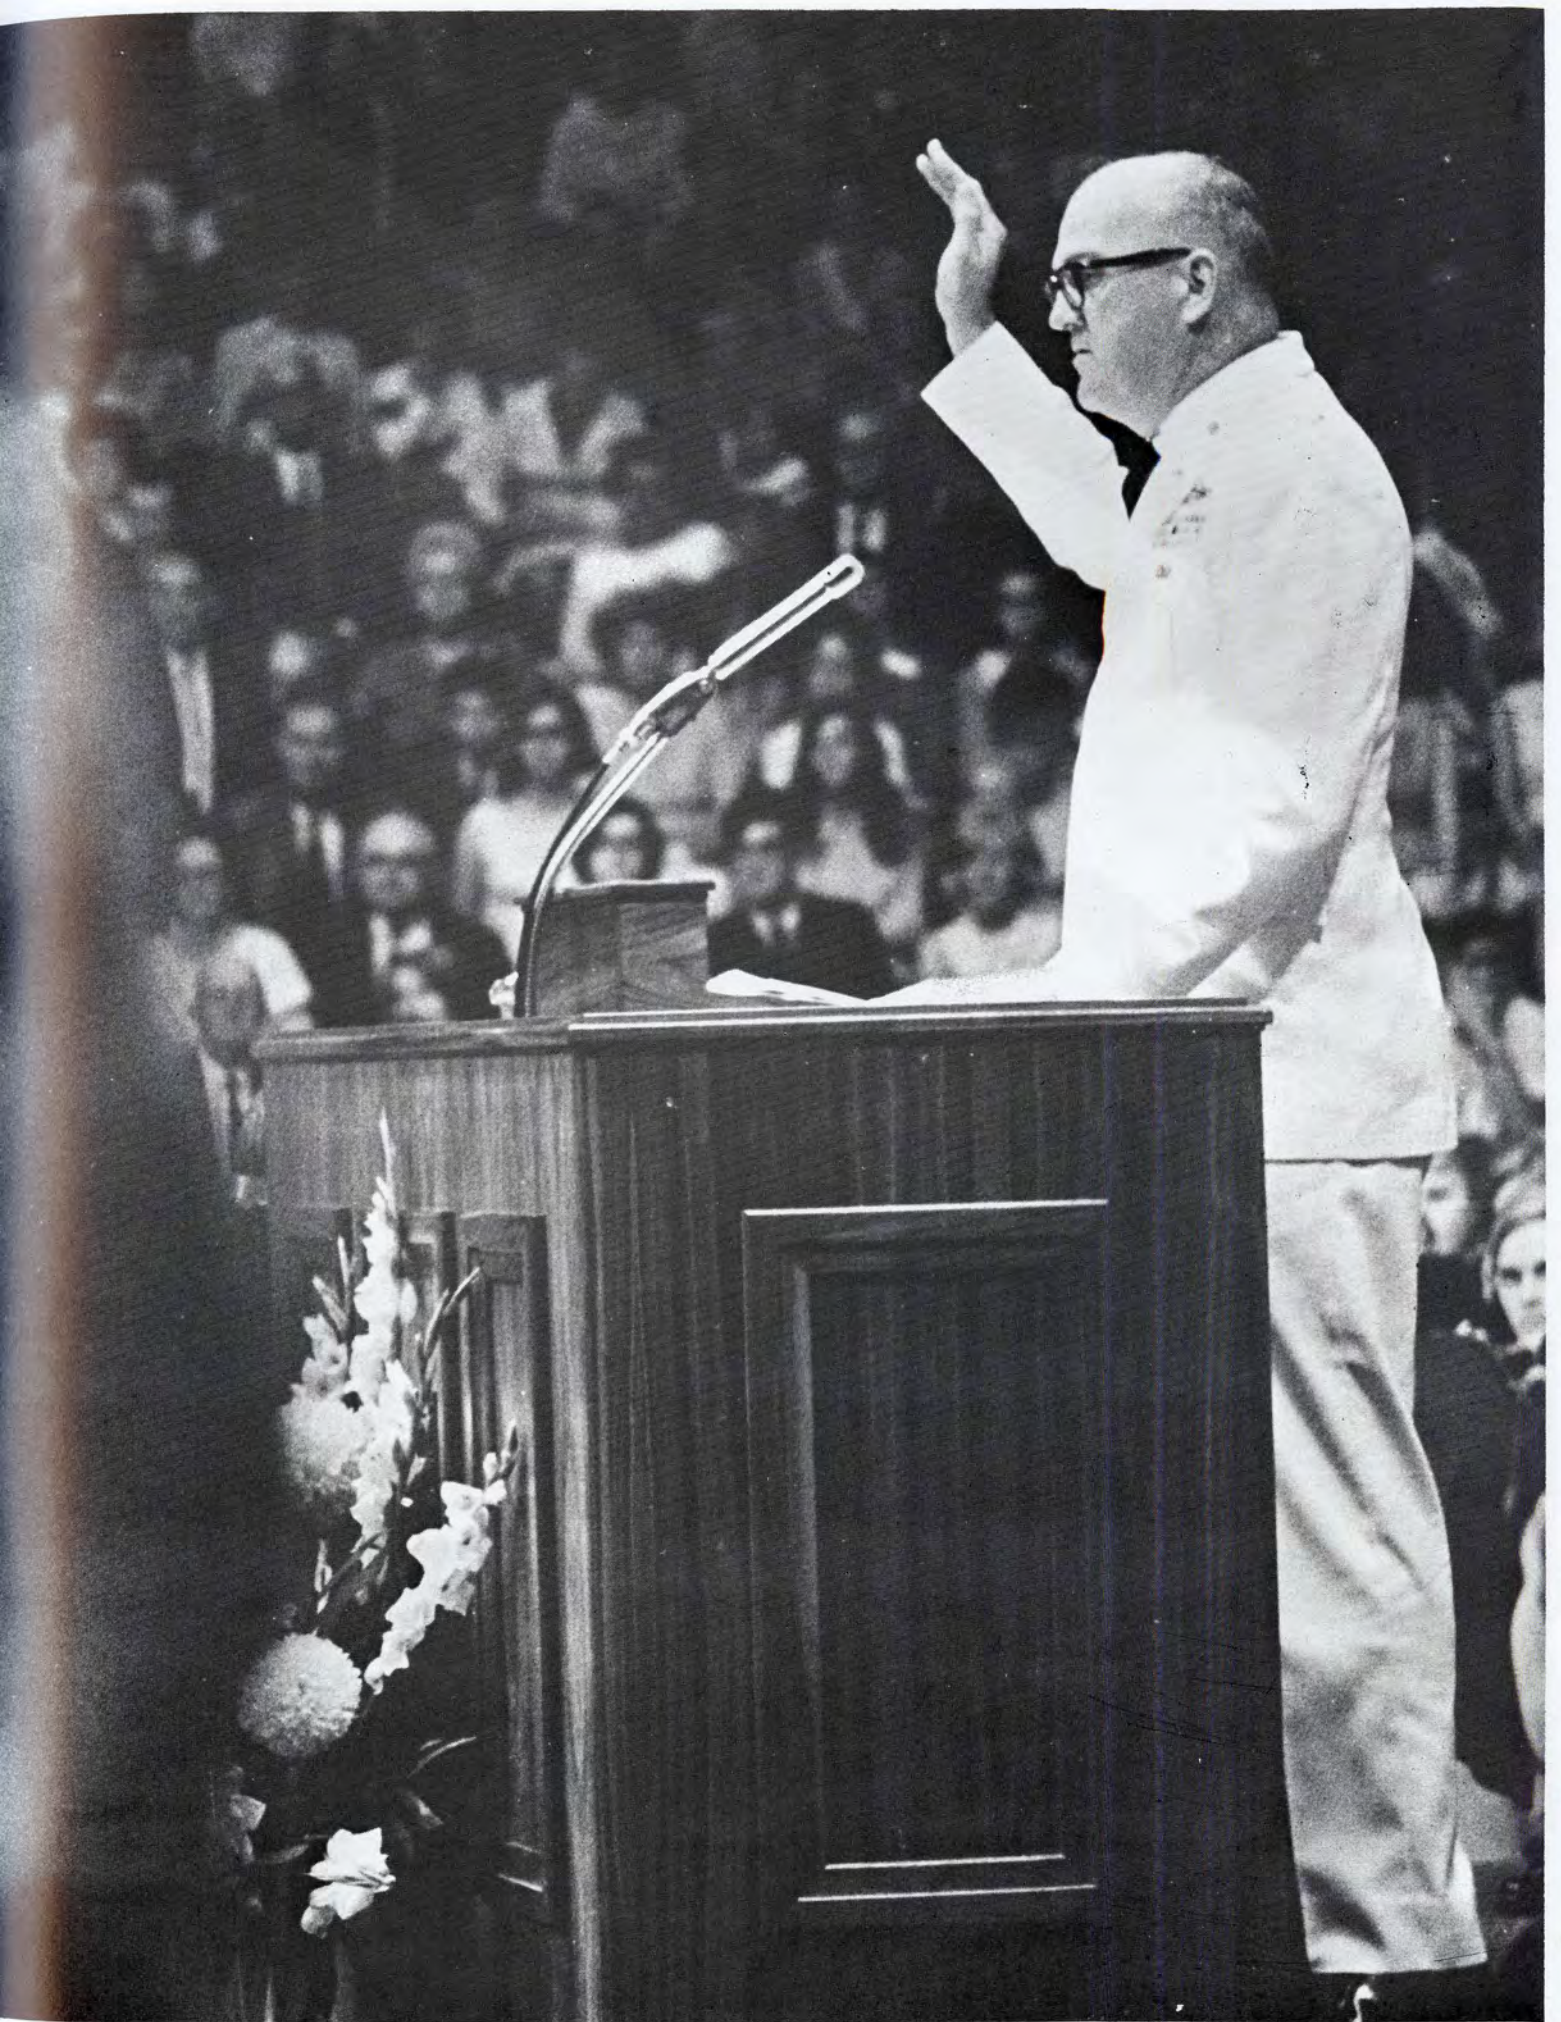

The ROTC Department itself continued to enjoy success elsewhere, and recruited its largest advanced corps in the fall of 1969, scored high at summer camp, produced another nationally ranked rifle team, and continued to build an impressive national standing in the ROTC program.

A new approach to student unrest and concern came forward in the spring of 1969, an approach which would set both administration and student patterns on the questions surrounding student activism on into the next year.

After a dispute between black and white co-eds, President Sparks called a campus-wide meeting for the following morning. During the meeting, students voiced their ideas about the black student and his relationship to the University.

Though the Administration took punitive action on some of the co-eds involved, the effective manner in which the convocation was handled passified what student unrest existed and all but destroyed student activism on the campus.

Dan Miller (left) addresses the convocation. That afternoon, Steve Henderson spoke to the University assemblage as Bernard Dishman listened (above).

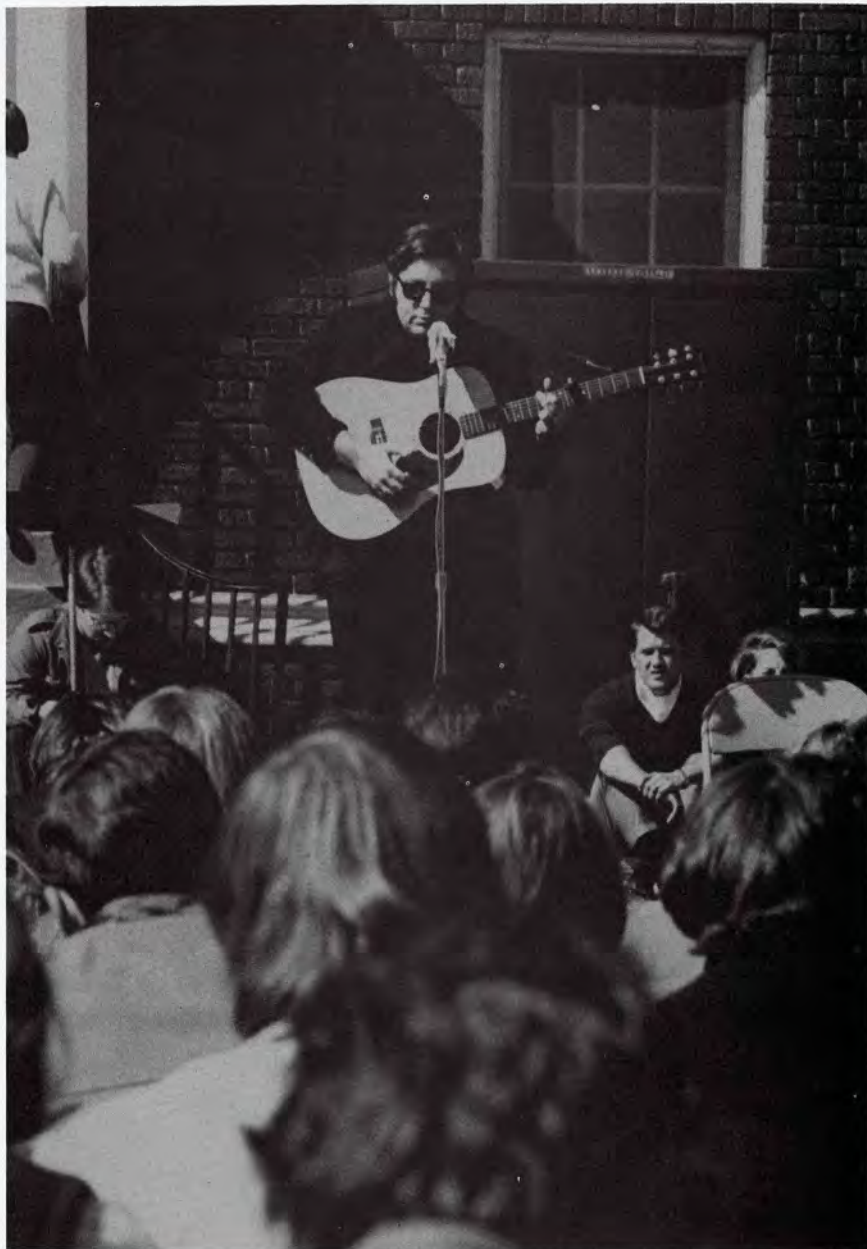

For college students across America, October 15 was planned to be a day of mass protest against the war in Vietnam. Observances were scheduled to demonstrate the solidarity of university youth in opposition to America's involvement in Southeast Asia.

Though small in number when compared to the entire University body, those Murray State students who met to express their concern over what was taking place in their world expressed a deep and intense involvement in this nation's affairs.

Critics of the Moratorium called it "shabby" and "hollow", but for those who participated in the boycott of classes, it was at least a pleasant day to lie in the quadrangle and think for a change.

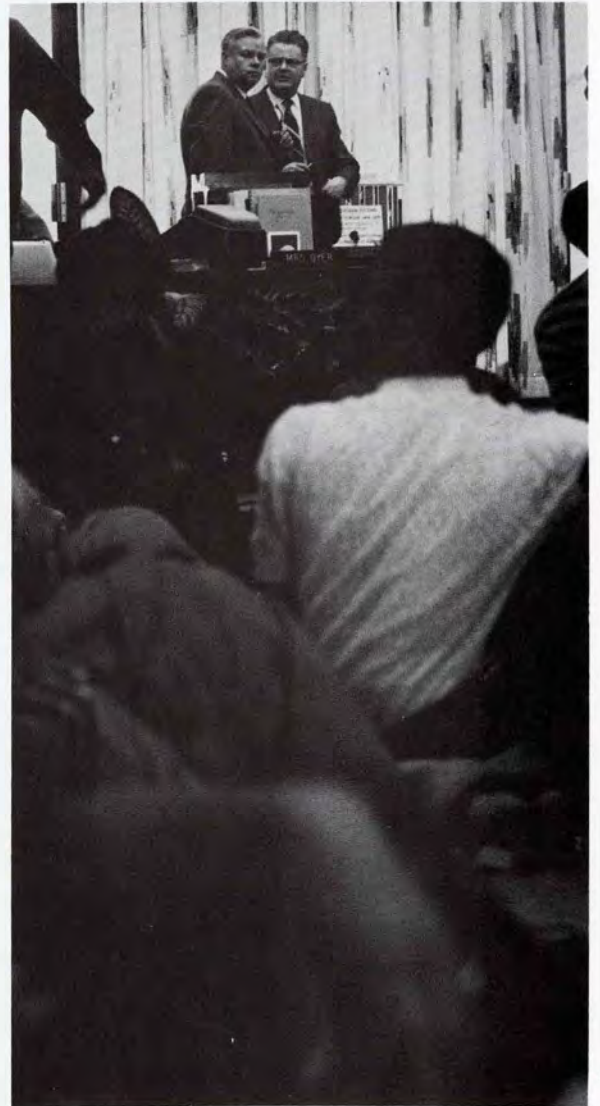

Students and faculty members (above and left) met on October 15 to boycott classes and protest America's involvement in the war in Vietnam.

In December of 1969 the dismissal of the black co-eds rose to the surface again when Bernard Dishman, president of STEAM, accompanied by 100 other students appeared before the Board of Regents asking for reconsideration of their decision and for increased awareness by the administration toward the needs of black students.

Many of the points outlined at the meeting had been under study by the board, or were near completion. The Board later commended Dishman for his efforts to bring student concern to their attention, and the tension that had been building since the previous spring began to relax as the year moved into the second semester.

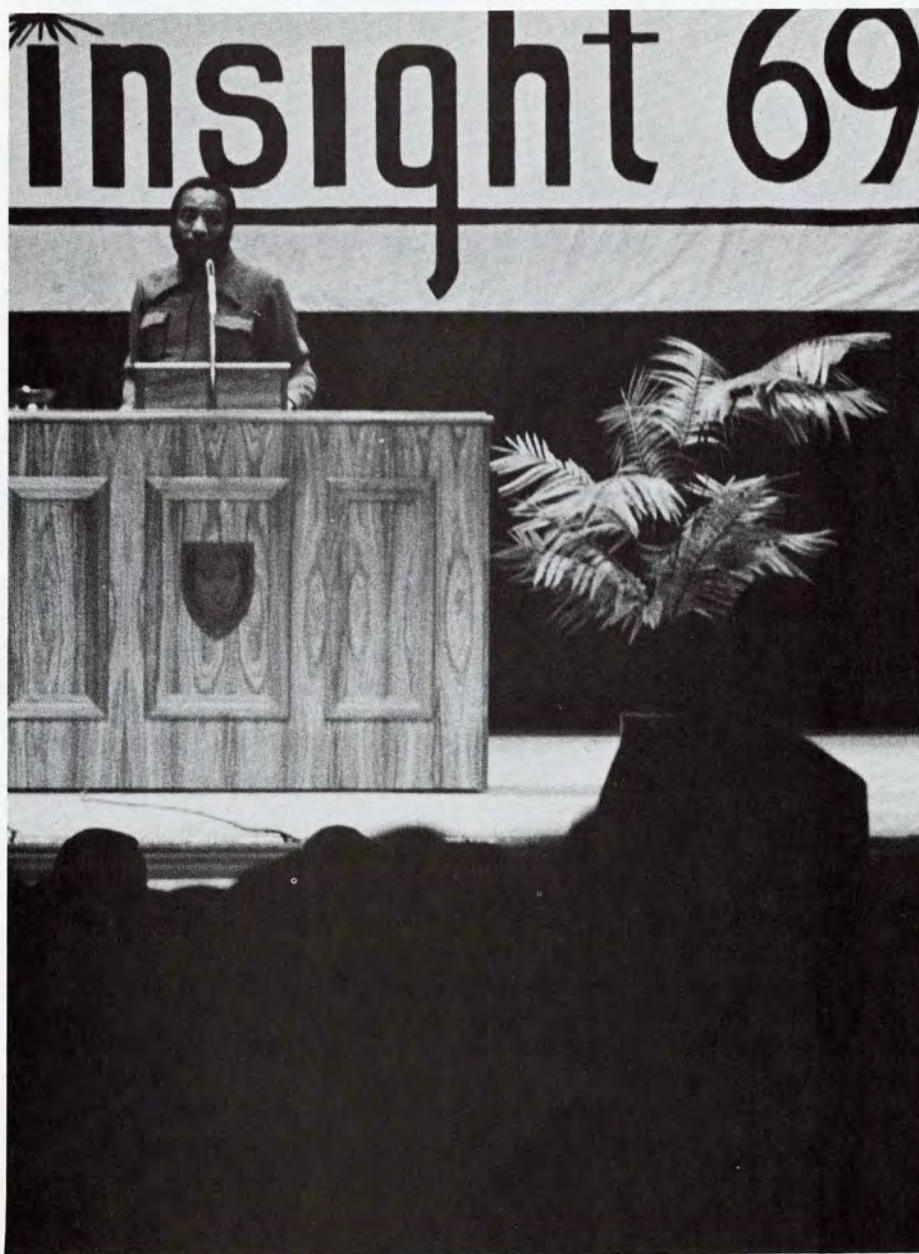

Joe Whittle, member of the Board, fields a question from one of the students who came to the Board meeting (left). Bill Powell and M. O. Wrather (above) confer before the meeting.

There were no big names at Insight 1970 that could actually compare, personality for Personality with the previous edition of Insight. There could have been. There was not the packed auditorium at Insight 1970 as there was the year before. There should have been.

Insight 1970, under the direction of Steve Jackson, had undergone careful planning to insure continuity in the lecture series. From an intellectually stimulating approach, Insight 1970 had no match from either Insight 1969, or any other program on the campus.

Yet it failed to attract an audience, and brought to focus the question, do you give them what they want or do you give them what they need?

A year ago, Dick Gregory (above) fielded questions from the audience on the first night of Insight 69; Herb Kaplow (right) opens the first session of Insight 1970.

insight 1970

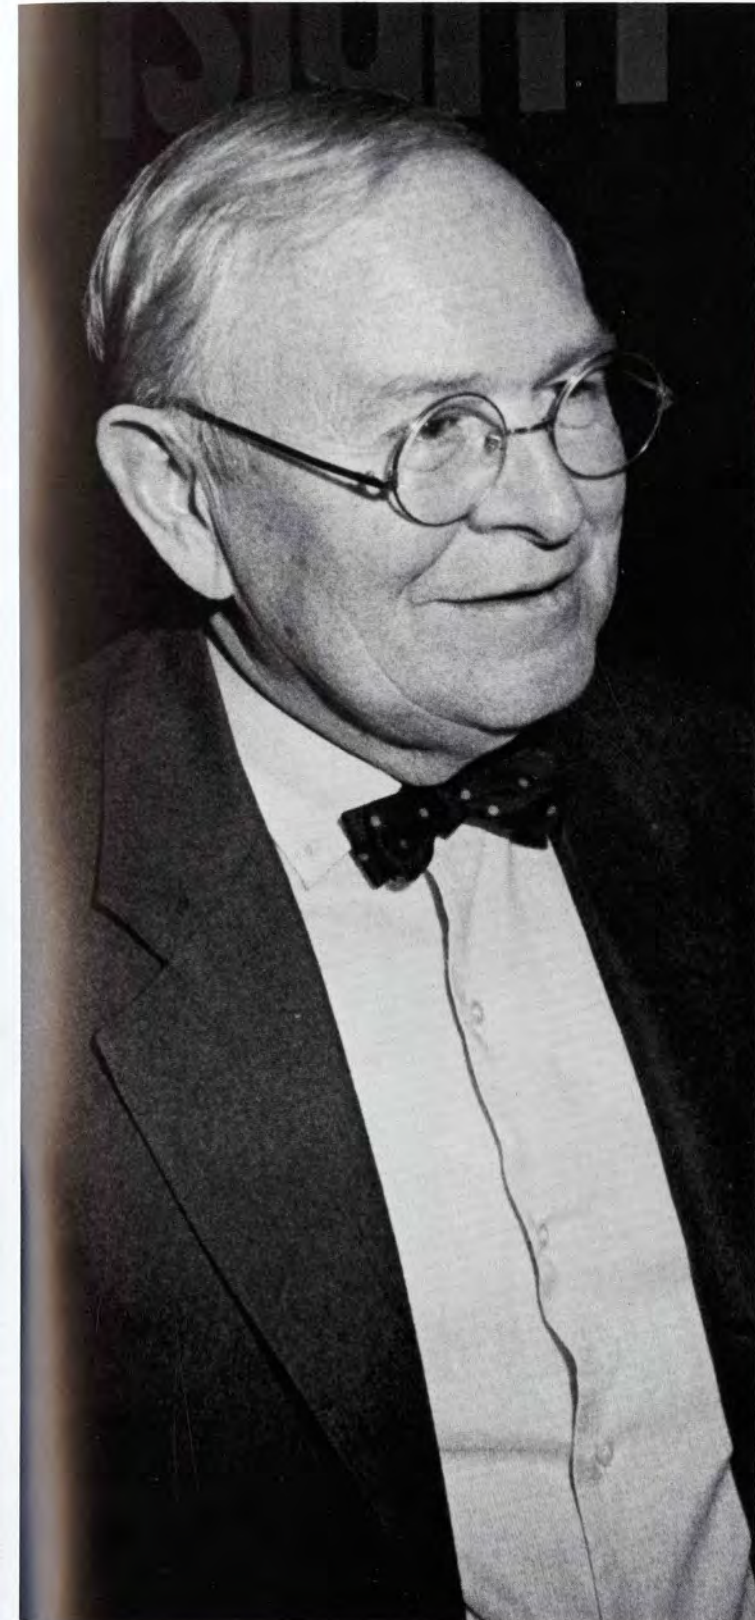

Herb Kaplow: "Nixon's first priority is Vietnam, . . . the Middle East is a very frustrating challenge to Richard Nixon."

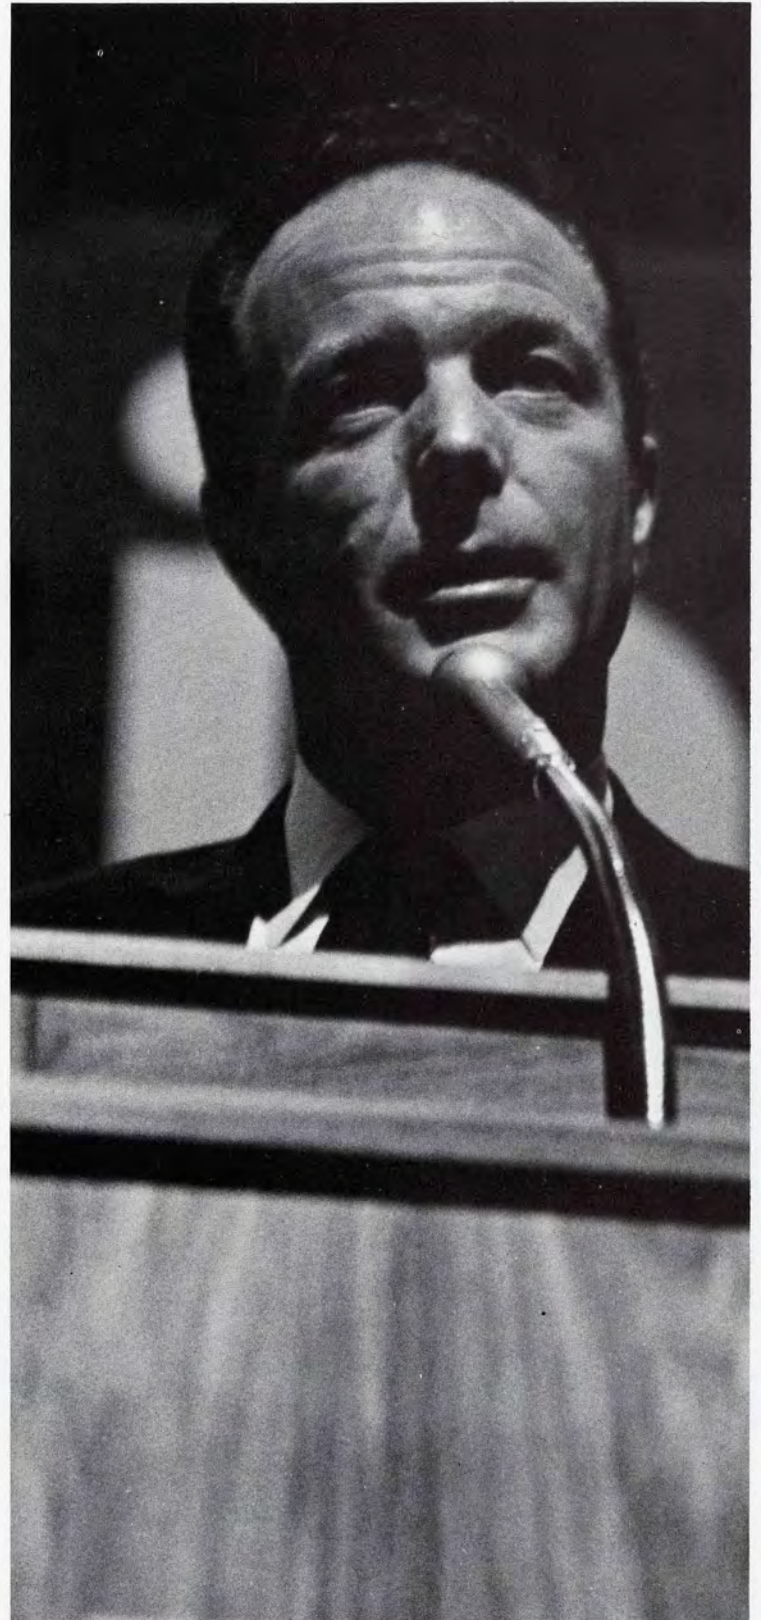

Dr. Ashley Montagu: "If we continue to be part of the problem, the human species is going to be cooked within the next thirty years."

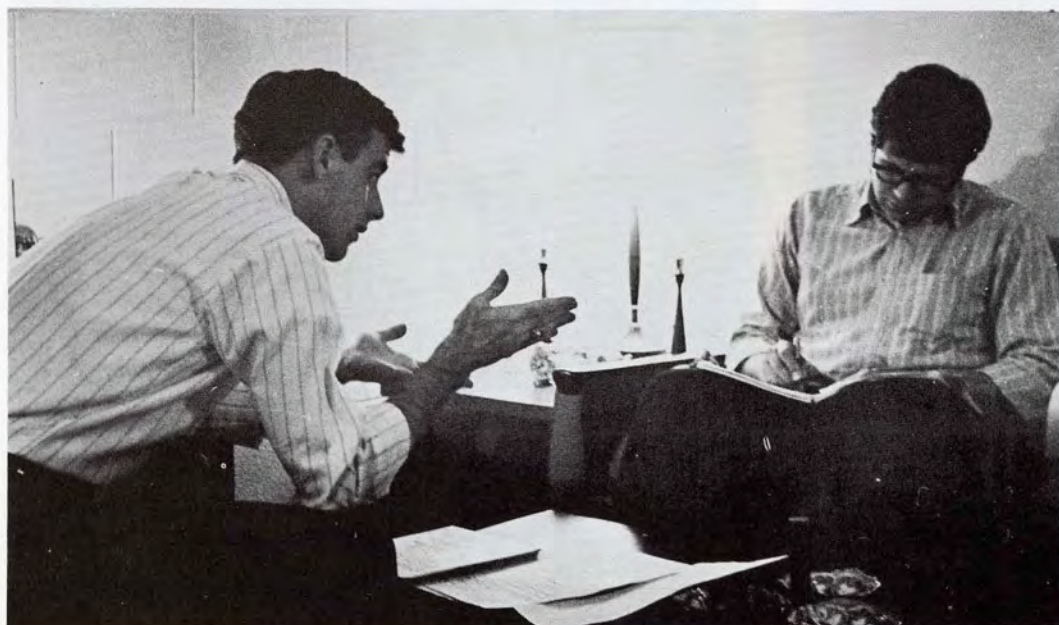

Joseph Fletcher: "Absolute truths come from the mouths of absolute fools."

Scott Carpenter: "The people who man the undersea studies are the most unsung people in the world."

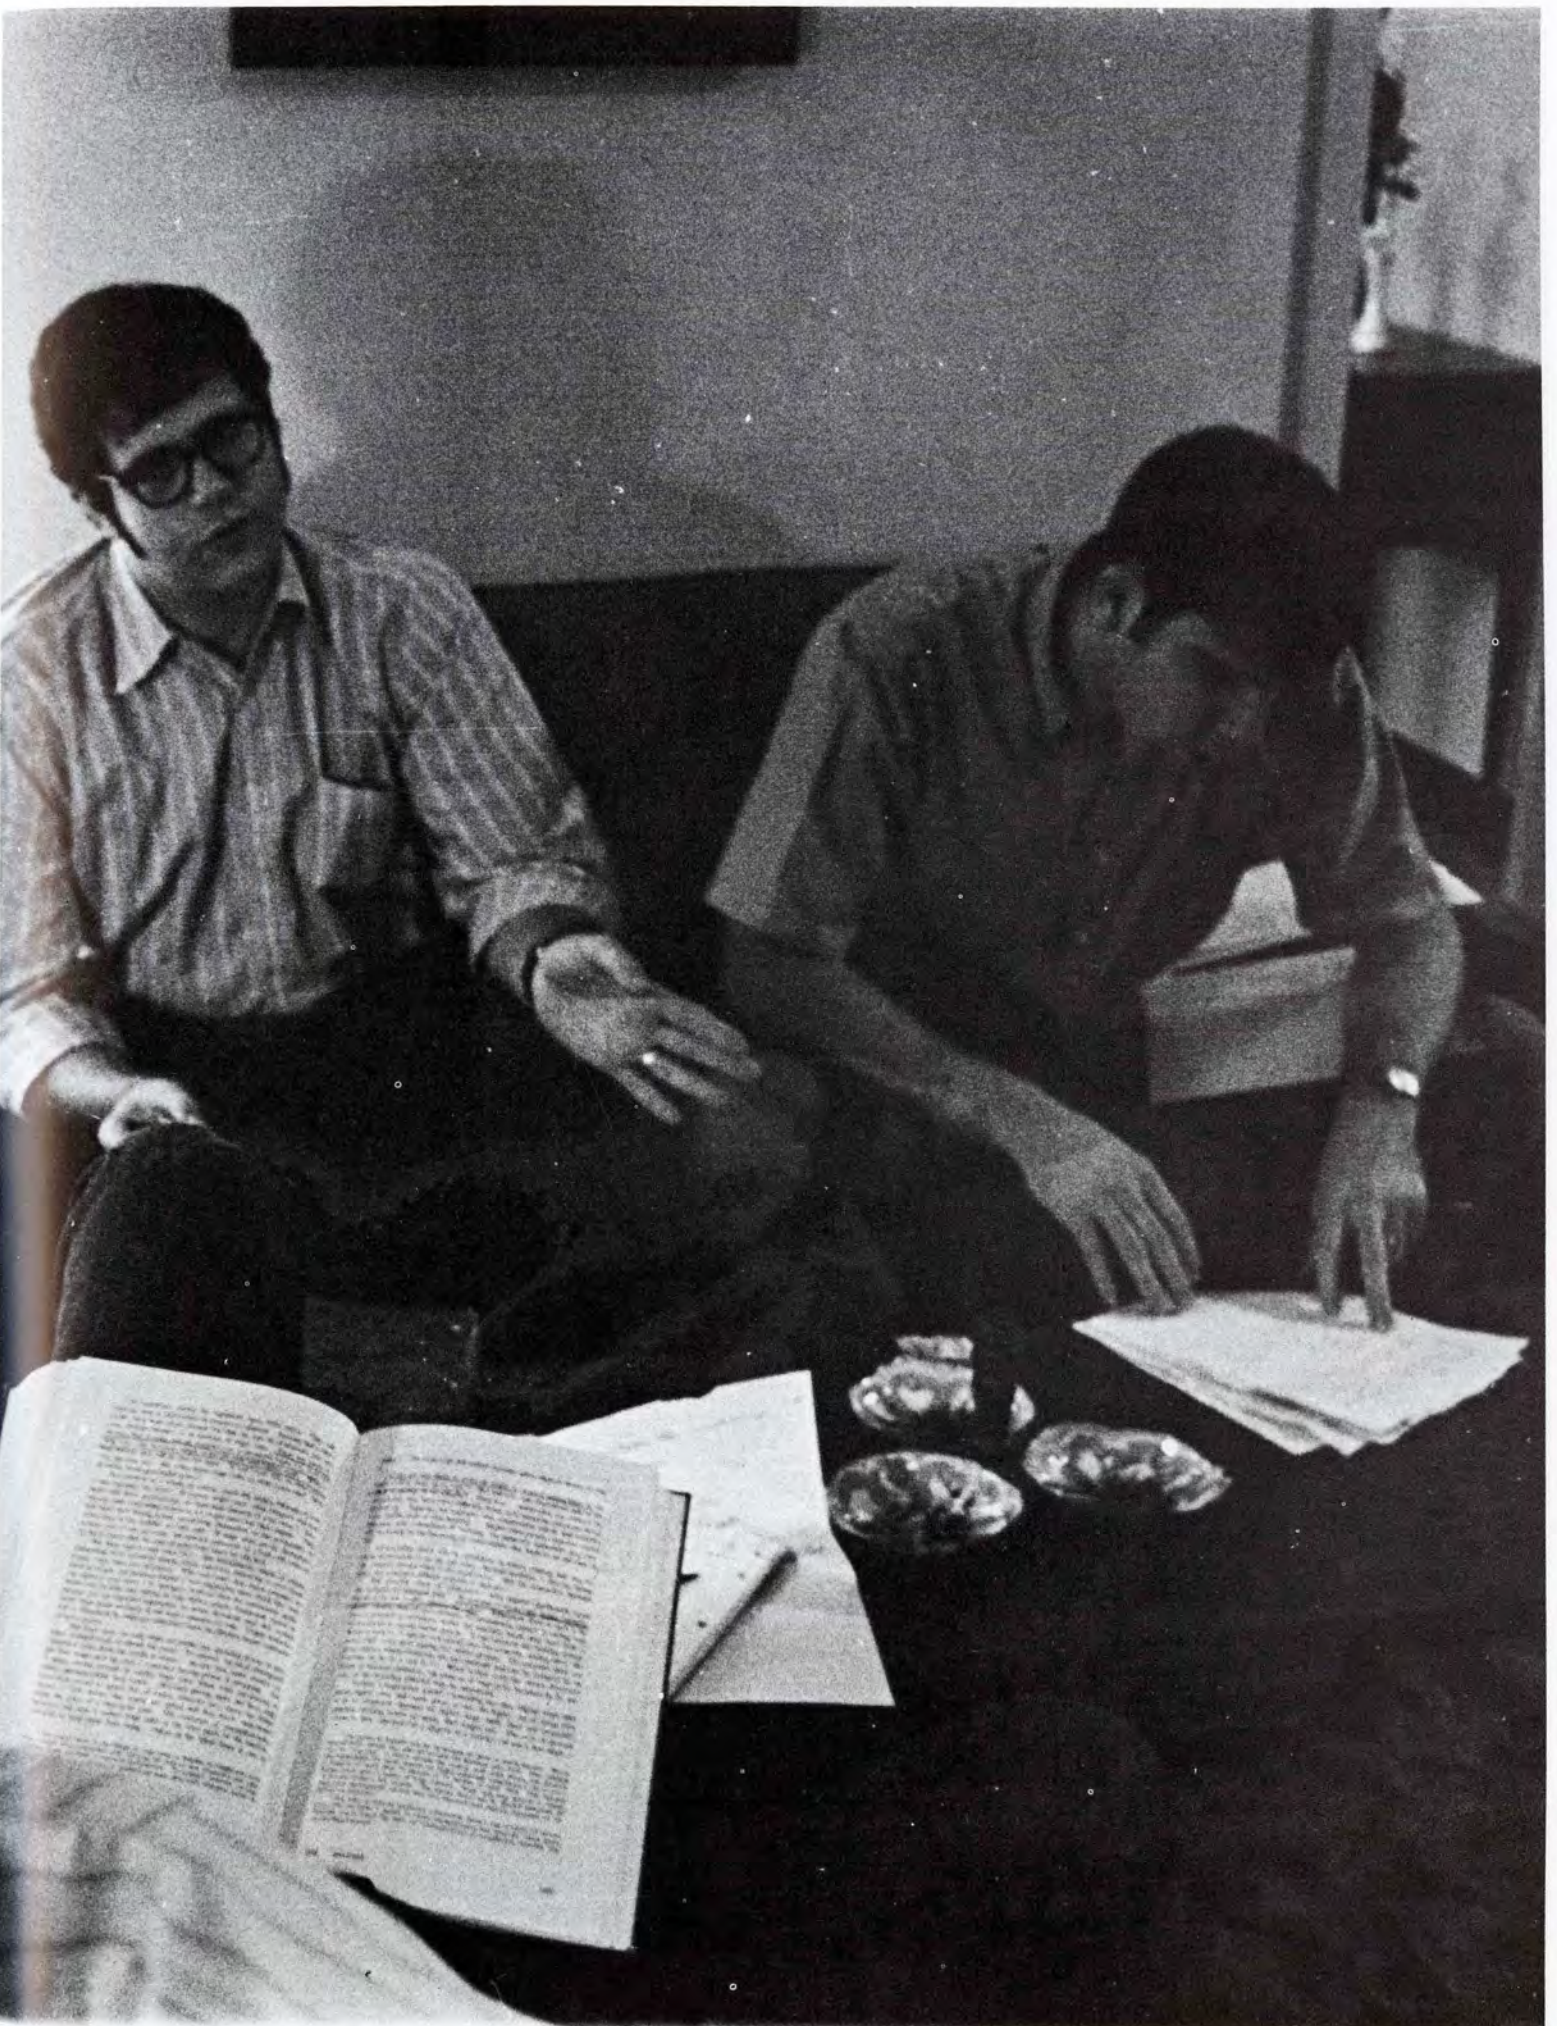

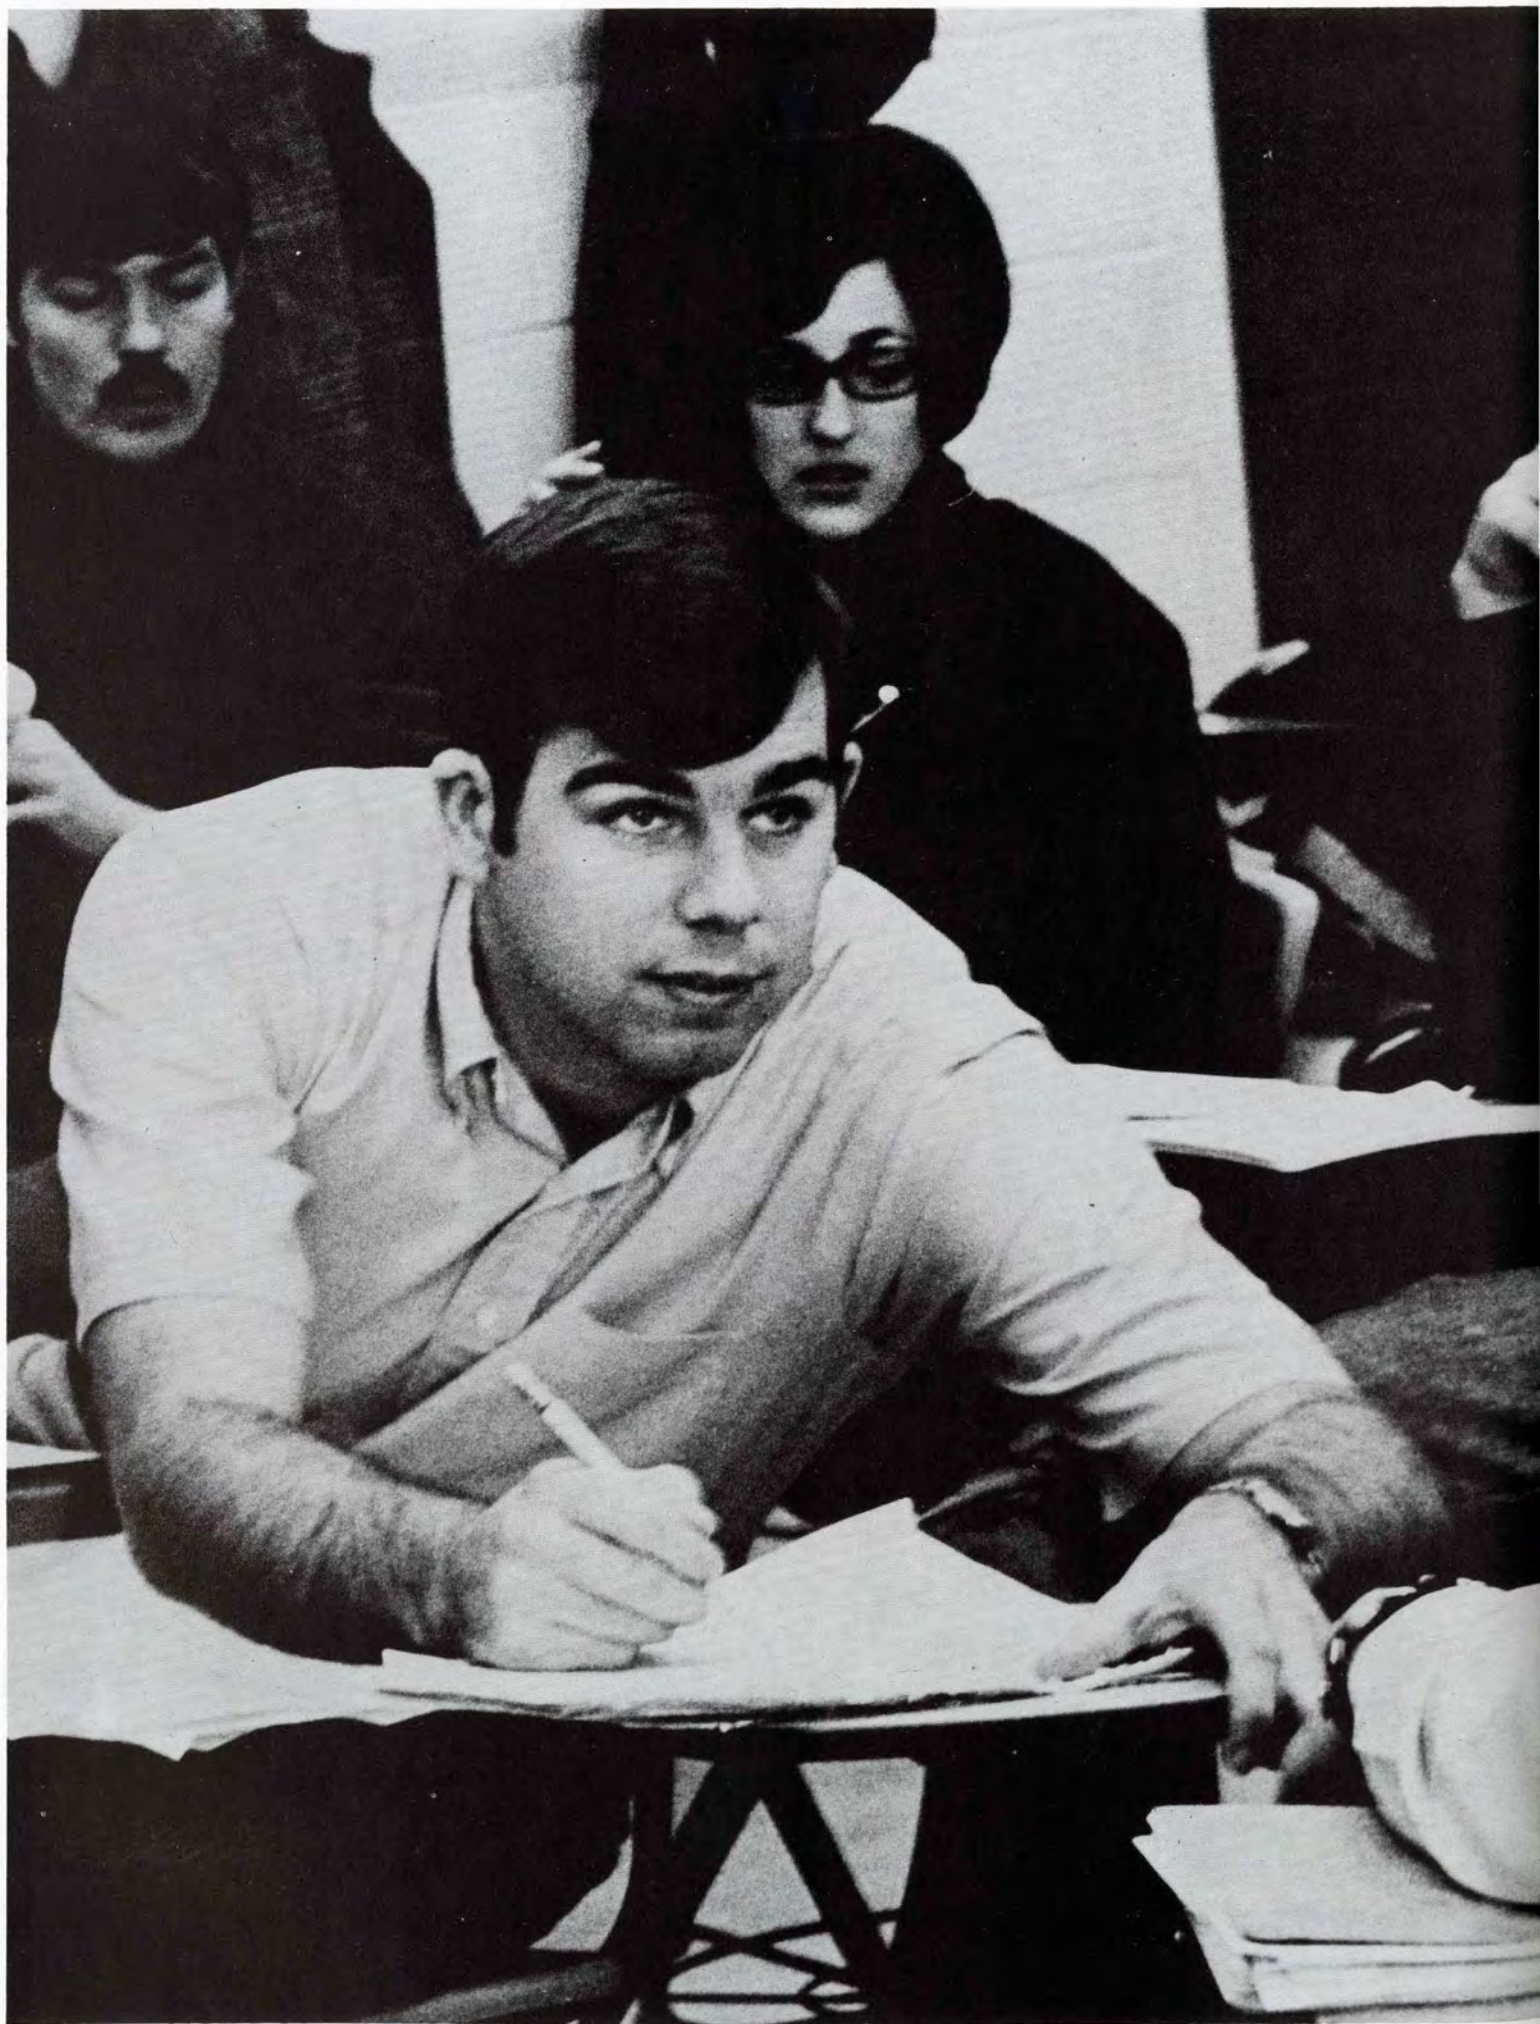

Something happens to the University during final examinations. The patterns that have developed over a semester dissolve, and converge again for one last stab at accomplishment. The atmosphere that surrounds finals usually forces the student in one of two directions: an intense dedication or a grim lifeless humor that wades across stale cigarettes and tepid coffee.

The night before their final, Austin Byers, Tom Marksbury, and Seymour Landau go over notes accumulated over the semester.

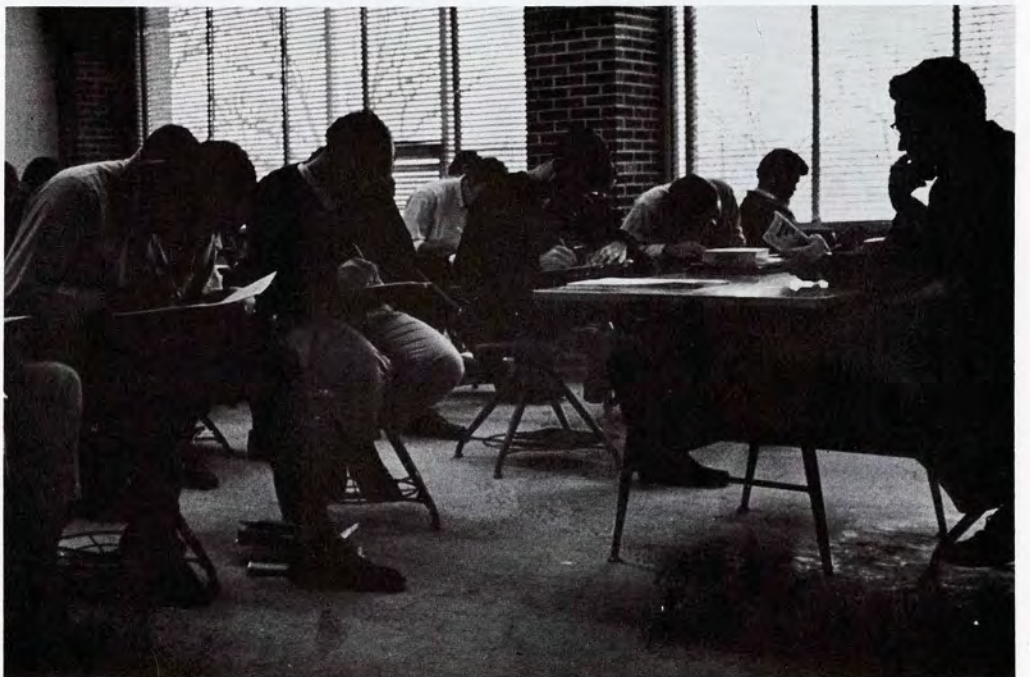

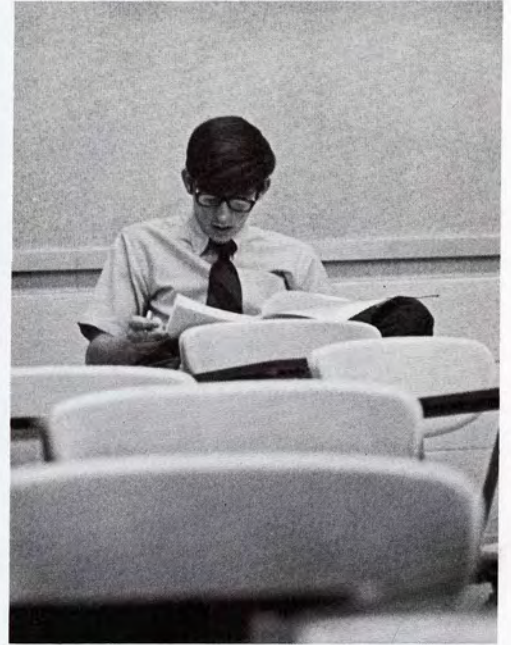

The essential device of the University, good or bad, is the test. During an entire semester, student and teacher have been getting used to the game that surrounds the examination.

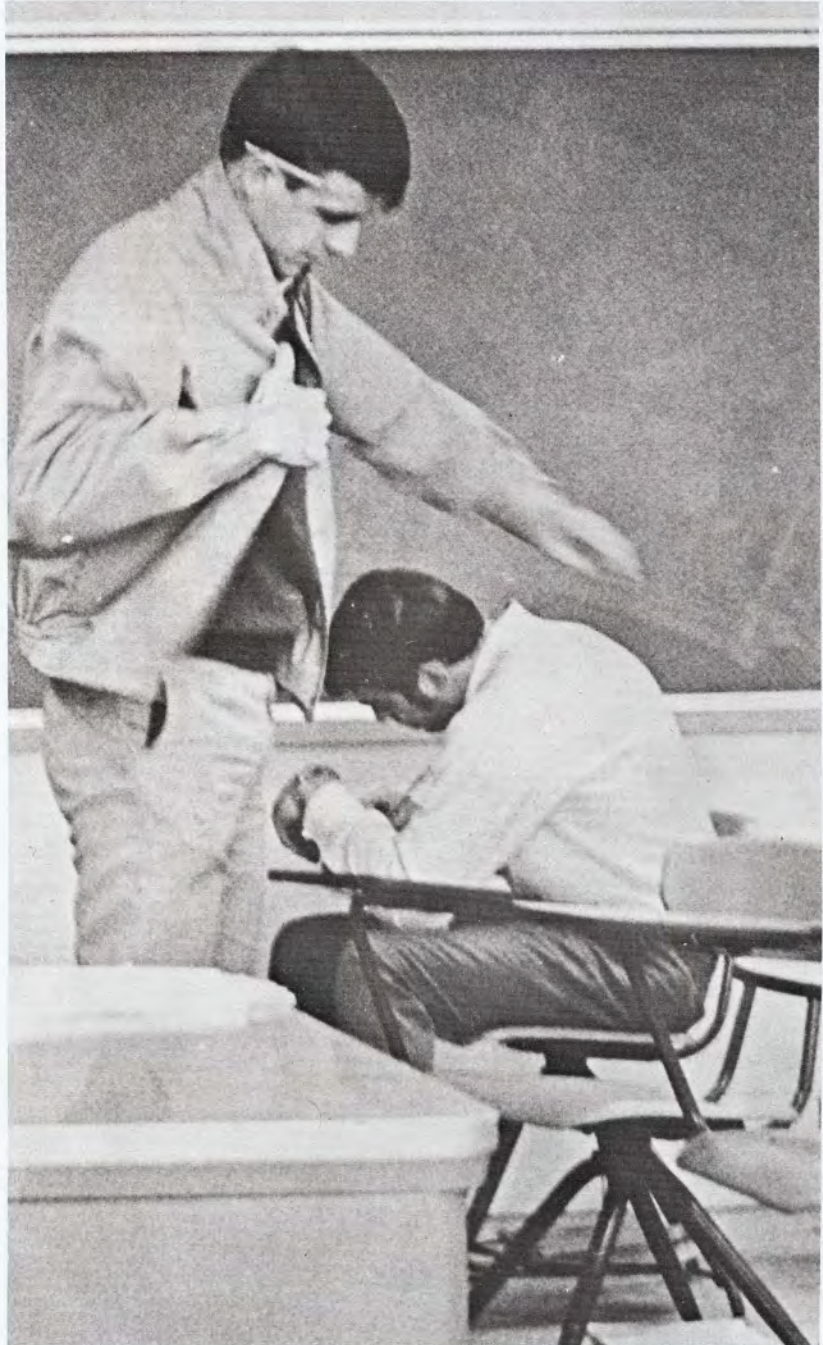

Tom Marksbury (above upper left) gets his first look at the exams. After most of the class has left, Steve Vaughn (above upper right) continues work. Earlier, (above) Professor Gardone proctors his own test. Before the test began, (left) Marksbury checks final facts.

The business of the University is education. The success or failure of that business ultimately is the grade. It has been speculated that at least half of a student's grade is earned in the last three weeks of the semester. It might be easy to suppose then, that something is amiss within the system, but if it is, what can be done about it?

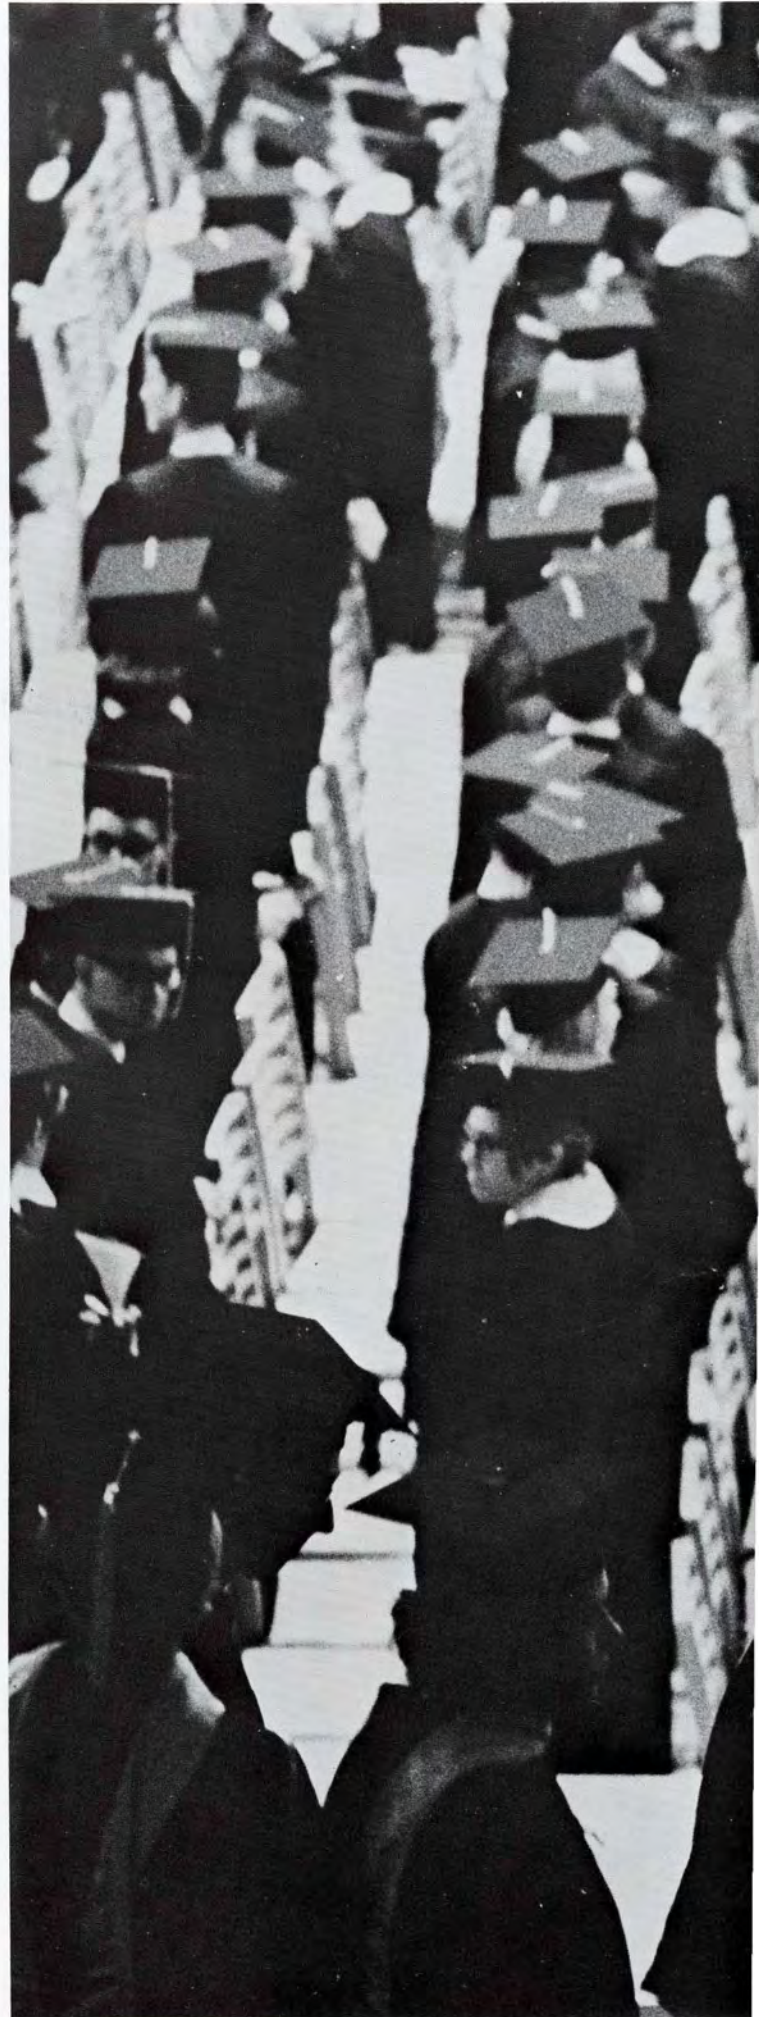

After finishing (above) Austin Byers leaves Econ for the last time. Professor Gardone (left) gathers the semester's finals before the gaze of the last student of his semester.

And so we tie it all together, the classes, the registration, the dances, the cafeterias, the professors and the dorms, and put it into two hours, arranged alphabetically, by school and by degree. They call it commencement—a beginning—while it seems to be the end of the things.

et it is more than this ceremony. It is a four year spectacle, the gathering in of some wild understanding of what it is all about. Some other time we will tame that understanding and call it wisdom. This is not the end of things. We have tied it all together, and called it by its name.

Miss Murray State for 1970 was selected after competition which made the Miss Murray State Pageant a preliminary to the Miss America Pageant. From over thirty original contestants, ten finalists were chosen to perform and compete for the Miss Murray State crown. After the three-hour pageant, the ten finalists (left) Helen Williams, Anna Holmes, Carol Aycock, Jamia Mortenson, Janet French, Carol McClellan, Sharon Reid, Lanette Underwood, Debbie Kaster, Margo Mantle, Treva Everly, Pam Morgan, Linda Hay, and Jodie Graff wait for the eliminations from which Miss Murray State would finally emerge. Linda Hay (below) walks the ramp during the contest.

The pageant, the first of its kind at Murray State, is captured during some of its phases. Opposite page, upper left, Louisa Flook, the reigning Miss Kentucky, asks finalist Carol Aycock a question after the five finalists have been named. Bottom, Miss Flook entertains the audience as the judges confer. Center, Linda Brownfield walks the ramp during swimsuit competition. Top right, the ten finalists appear before the judges in swimsuits for the traditional "quarter-turn". Bottom right, Helen Williams performs in talent competition.

Linda Brownfield, Miss Murray State, 1970, is a senior English and History major from Murray. She was selected from a field of 15 semifinalists and gained the chance to try for the Miss Kentucky title, a steppingstone to the Miss America Pageant.

Margo Mantle, the 1970 Shield Queen depicts the ideal of University beauty. Margo was selected by three judges from 10 finalists on the basis of beauty, charm and photogenity. She is a junior from Bardwell.

Homecoming Court

Homecoming queen, Carol Anderson, and the court, Mimi Lester, Vicki Russell, Patricia Walker, and Valera Wyatt, reigned over the festivities November 1, 1969. Elected by the football squad, the queen and her court led the traditional parade through downtown Murray and were later honored during pre-game ceremonies.

Carol Anderson

Kay Pinkley

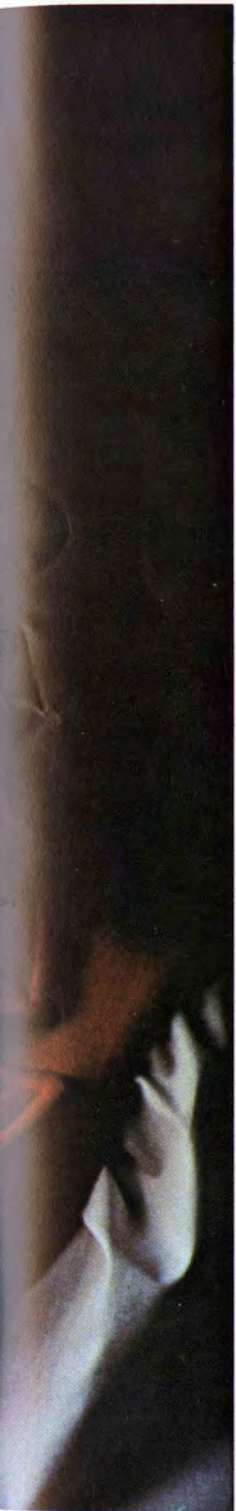

Mountain Laurel Queen for 1969 was Kay Pinkley, a former Miss Kentucky. Each May, a girl is chosen from every college campus across the state to represent that school in the contest at Pineville. For the second year in a row, Murray State University's representative was crowned queen.

The ideal freshman girl for 1969-70 is Janet French. Miss French, a music education major, from Paris, Tenn., was selected on the basis of high scholarship and campus activities. She was presented at the annual dorm Christmas parties.

Mrs. Murray State, named at the first basketball game, is Mrs. Jane Rogers. Four other finalists named were: Kathy Harrison, Phyllis Nanney, Caroline Lynch, and Rhonda Evans. The contest is sponsored each year by the Dames Club; winners are selected on the basis of personal interviews by judges.

Jane Rogers

Brigade Sweetheart for 1969-70 is Carol Anderson. This is the second year that Miss Anderson has served the ROTC department in this capacity. She was selected by the ROTC units in the fall and holds the rank of Honorary Cadet Colonel.

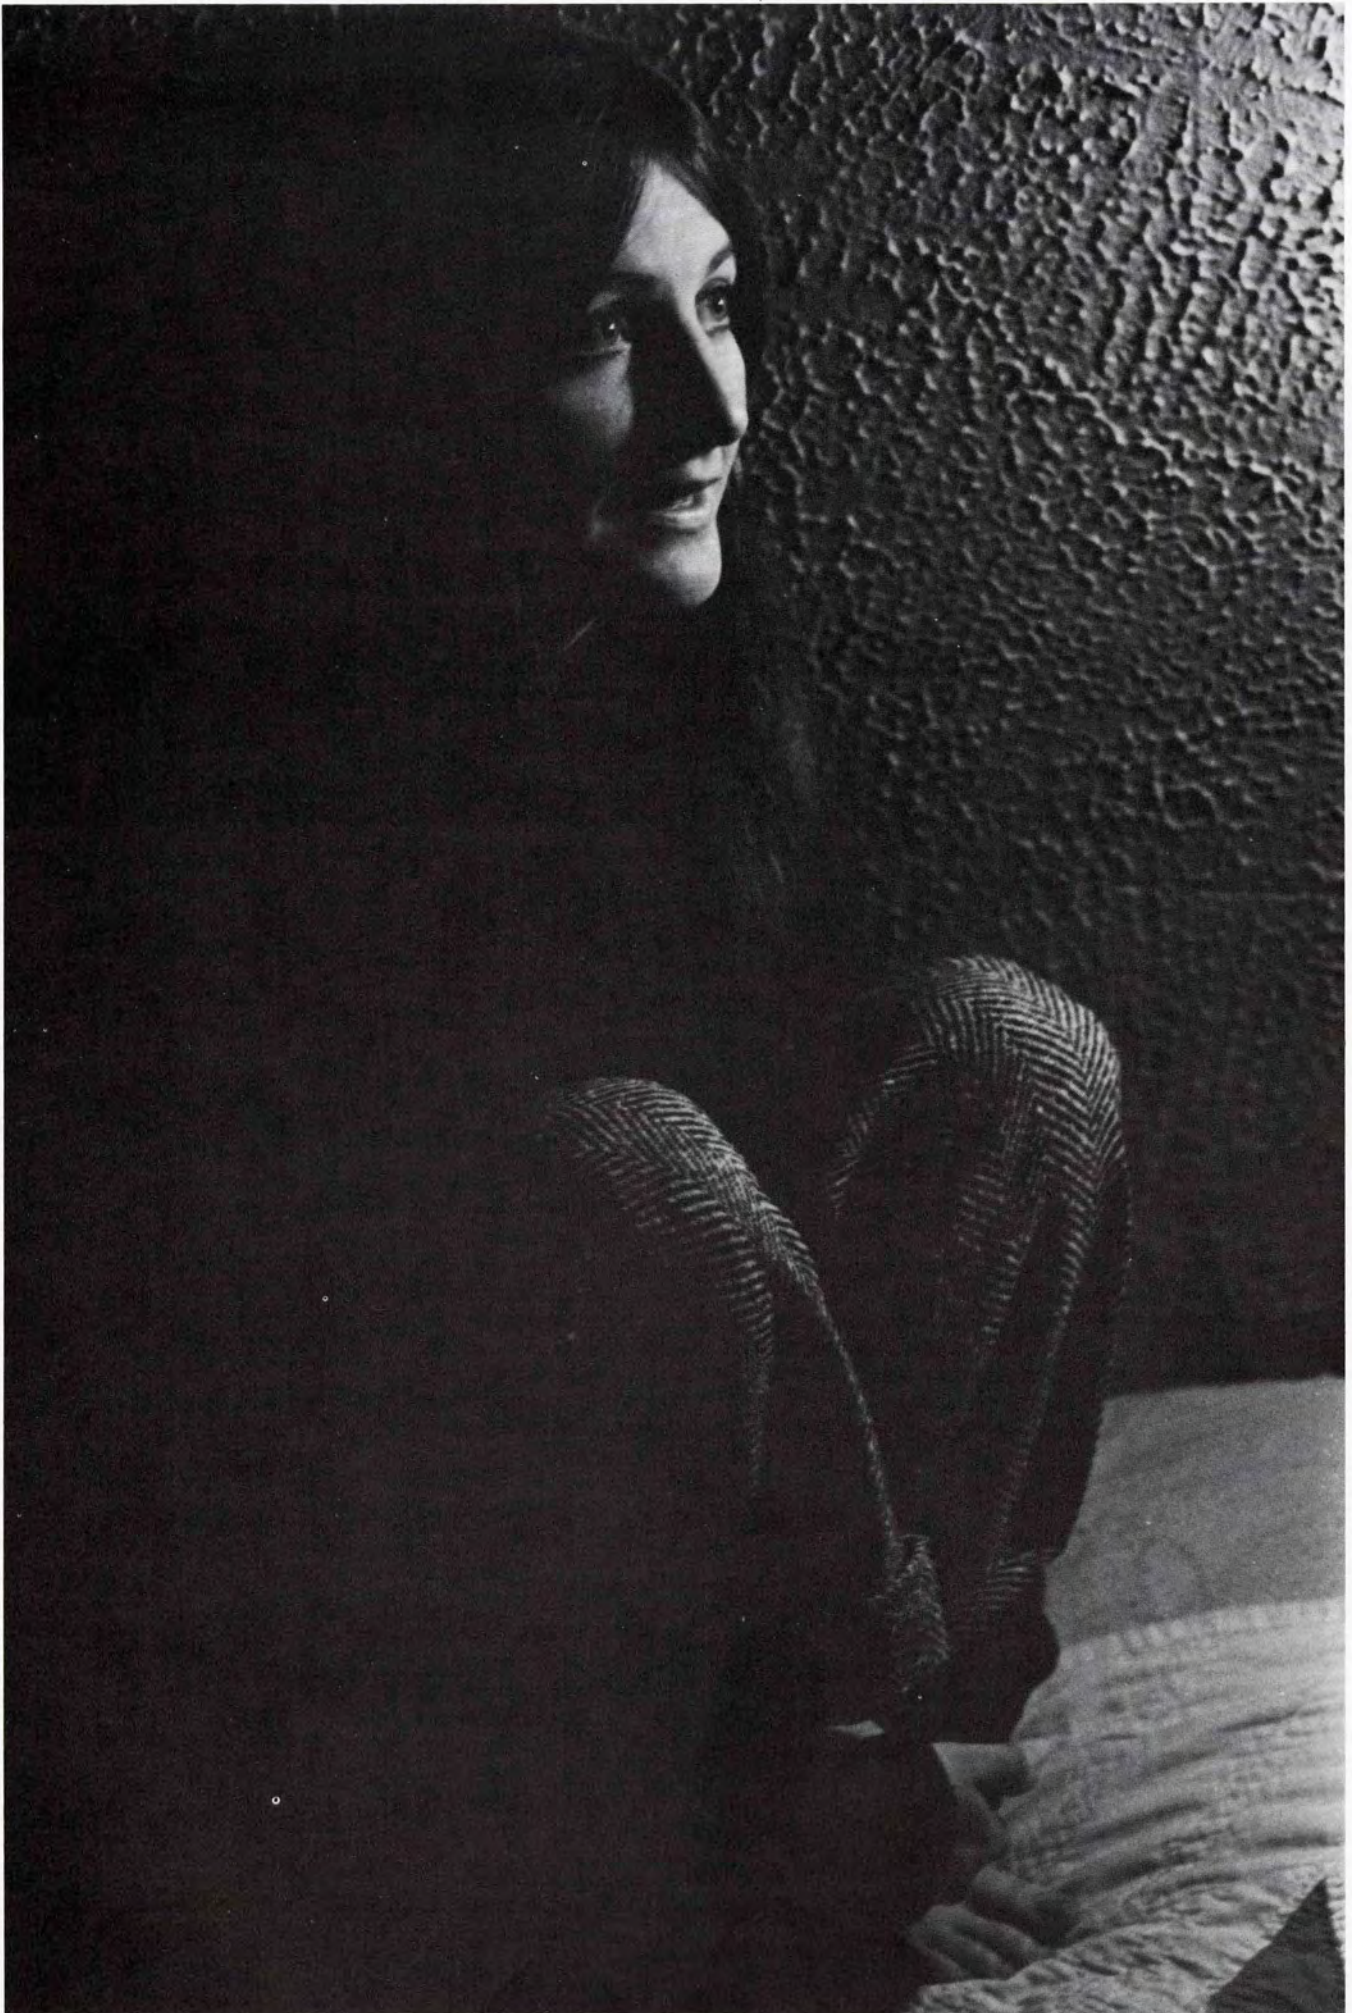

Carol Anderson

Battalion Sweethearts for 1969-70 are Teddi Ferguson and Dana Puckett. They were selected by the ROTC units in the fall. Miss Ferguson, a sophomore, is the First Battalion Sweetheart, while Miss Puckett, also a sophomore, serves the Second Battalion.

Teddi Ferguson and Dana Puckett merit (mer'it) n. 1. Value, excellence, or superior quality. 2. An aspect of a person's character or behavior deserving approval.

a senior from Louisville, acquired a national reputation in the field of art before she obtained a degree from Murray State. Accepted in the Young American Show, which toured the nation during the summer of 1969, Gerry's work has already been seen and recognized as among the best being done by young artists in this country. This spring she was invited to share an exhibition of her own work with a prominent American artist. Her field of concentration, fabric furniture, was displayed in a New York City gallery along with other works she has created.

a pre-law major from Murray, Kentucky, filled the chairmanship of the student Judicial Board in perhaps its most active and important year in its history. Faced with the almost impossible task of overcoming student apathy and lack of faith in the Judicial Board, Douglass, for the first time, was able to bring an active and competent student role in the Judicial system of the University.

Dr. Wayne Sheley (right)

came to the University four years ago. Since that time he has dedicated himself to demanding the same excellence from his students that he demands from himself. As an undergraduate at Hartwick College, he was a scholarship member of that school's basketball team. After two years, his decision to prepare himself for a career in music led him to transfer to Yale where he received both his B.M. and M.M. After completion of his doctorate at the Eastman School of Music, where he performed with the Eastman Wind Ensemble, he began his career as a professional teacher and came to Murray State.

has been involved in more phases of university life with less recognition than any other student in the University. An outstanding and highly dedicated effort in psychology has occupied the greatest part of Drake's college career but he has found time to head the department's highest honor society, Psi Chi. As chairman of 1969 Homecoming celebration, Drake organized and directed the largest and most complex event of the school year. Perhaps the most dedicated staff member on the University yearbook, Drake has contributed to that publication for two years. His ideas and genuine interest in the people with whom he works and lives make him more than worthy for the merit which he has avoided for four years.

Linda Snyder

(left), a psychology and math major from Mayfield, Kentucky, was instrumental in bringing an effective and necessary change to Greek sorority life. As one of the key leaders who brought early formal rush to the sorority system, Linda, along with others, helped guarantee the success of the Greek system. A member of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary society, and Psi Chi, psychology honorary society, Linda has quietly and effectively contributed to the areas which she feels are important at Murray State.

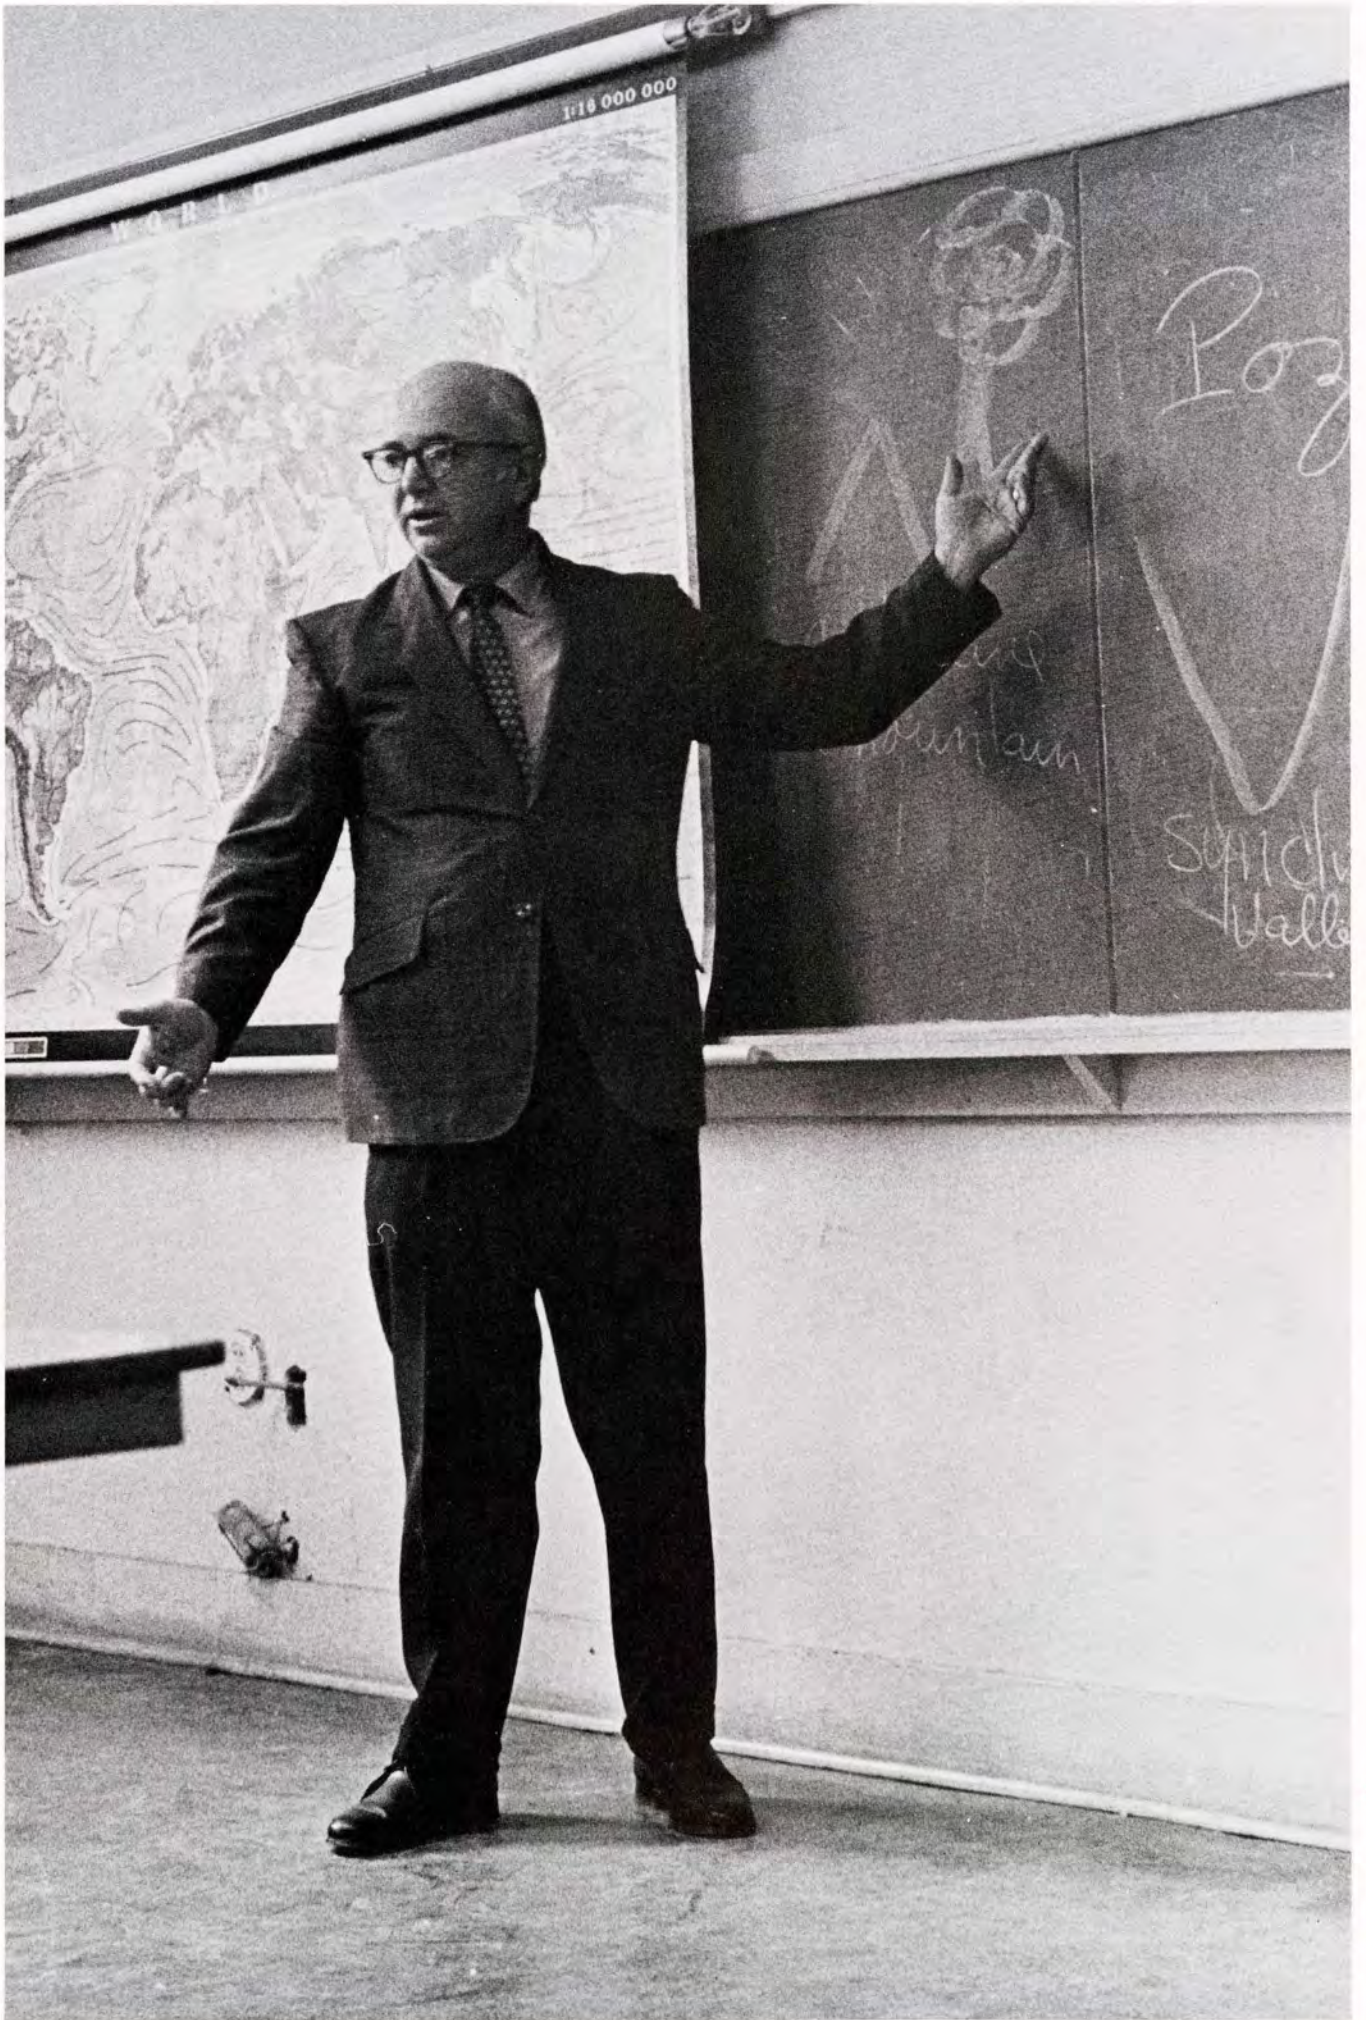

Dr. Karl Hussung

(above) is a leader in campus-wide affairs as well as an outstanding professor. A member of the Institutional Studies and Research Committee since its beginning, he was among the first faculty members at Murray State to receive financial assistance from outside the university for scientific research. Dr. Hussung, a Murray State alumnus, was a basketball player and now heads the University Athletic Commission in addition to serving the university on the library committee. A chemistry professor, he is also an accomplished vocalist and pianist. Presently Dr. Hussung is president-elect of the Kentucky Academy of Sciences, which is the parent body of all science studies in the state.

Louis Hicks (right) began at Murray State 37 years ago, when it was still a teacher's college, but left and later began a 25-year Army career. Recently returning to the University to complete his education, he was well-prepared because of his wide travel experience to excel in his field of study, geography. Offered a graduate assistantship, he taught two classes in 1970 and his personable manner and eagerness to help enabled him to be a friend to students as well as a competent educator.

Johanna Comisak (above) moved to fill a void of quality journalistic writing in 1970. As writer for the Murray State News, she was consistent in producing work of an extraordinary professional standard. In addition to her duties on the News, Johanna contributed greatly to the Department of Public Relations, where she worked. Named to the Dean's List every semester, Johanna reflected the same sense of excellence in scholarship which she demanded of herself in journalism. Johanna was president of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's honor society, and is a sophomore Speech and Journalism major from Paducah.

Carole Turley

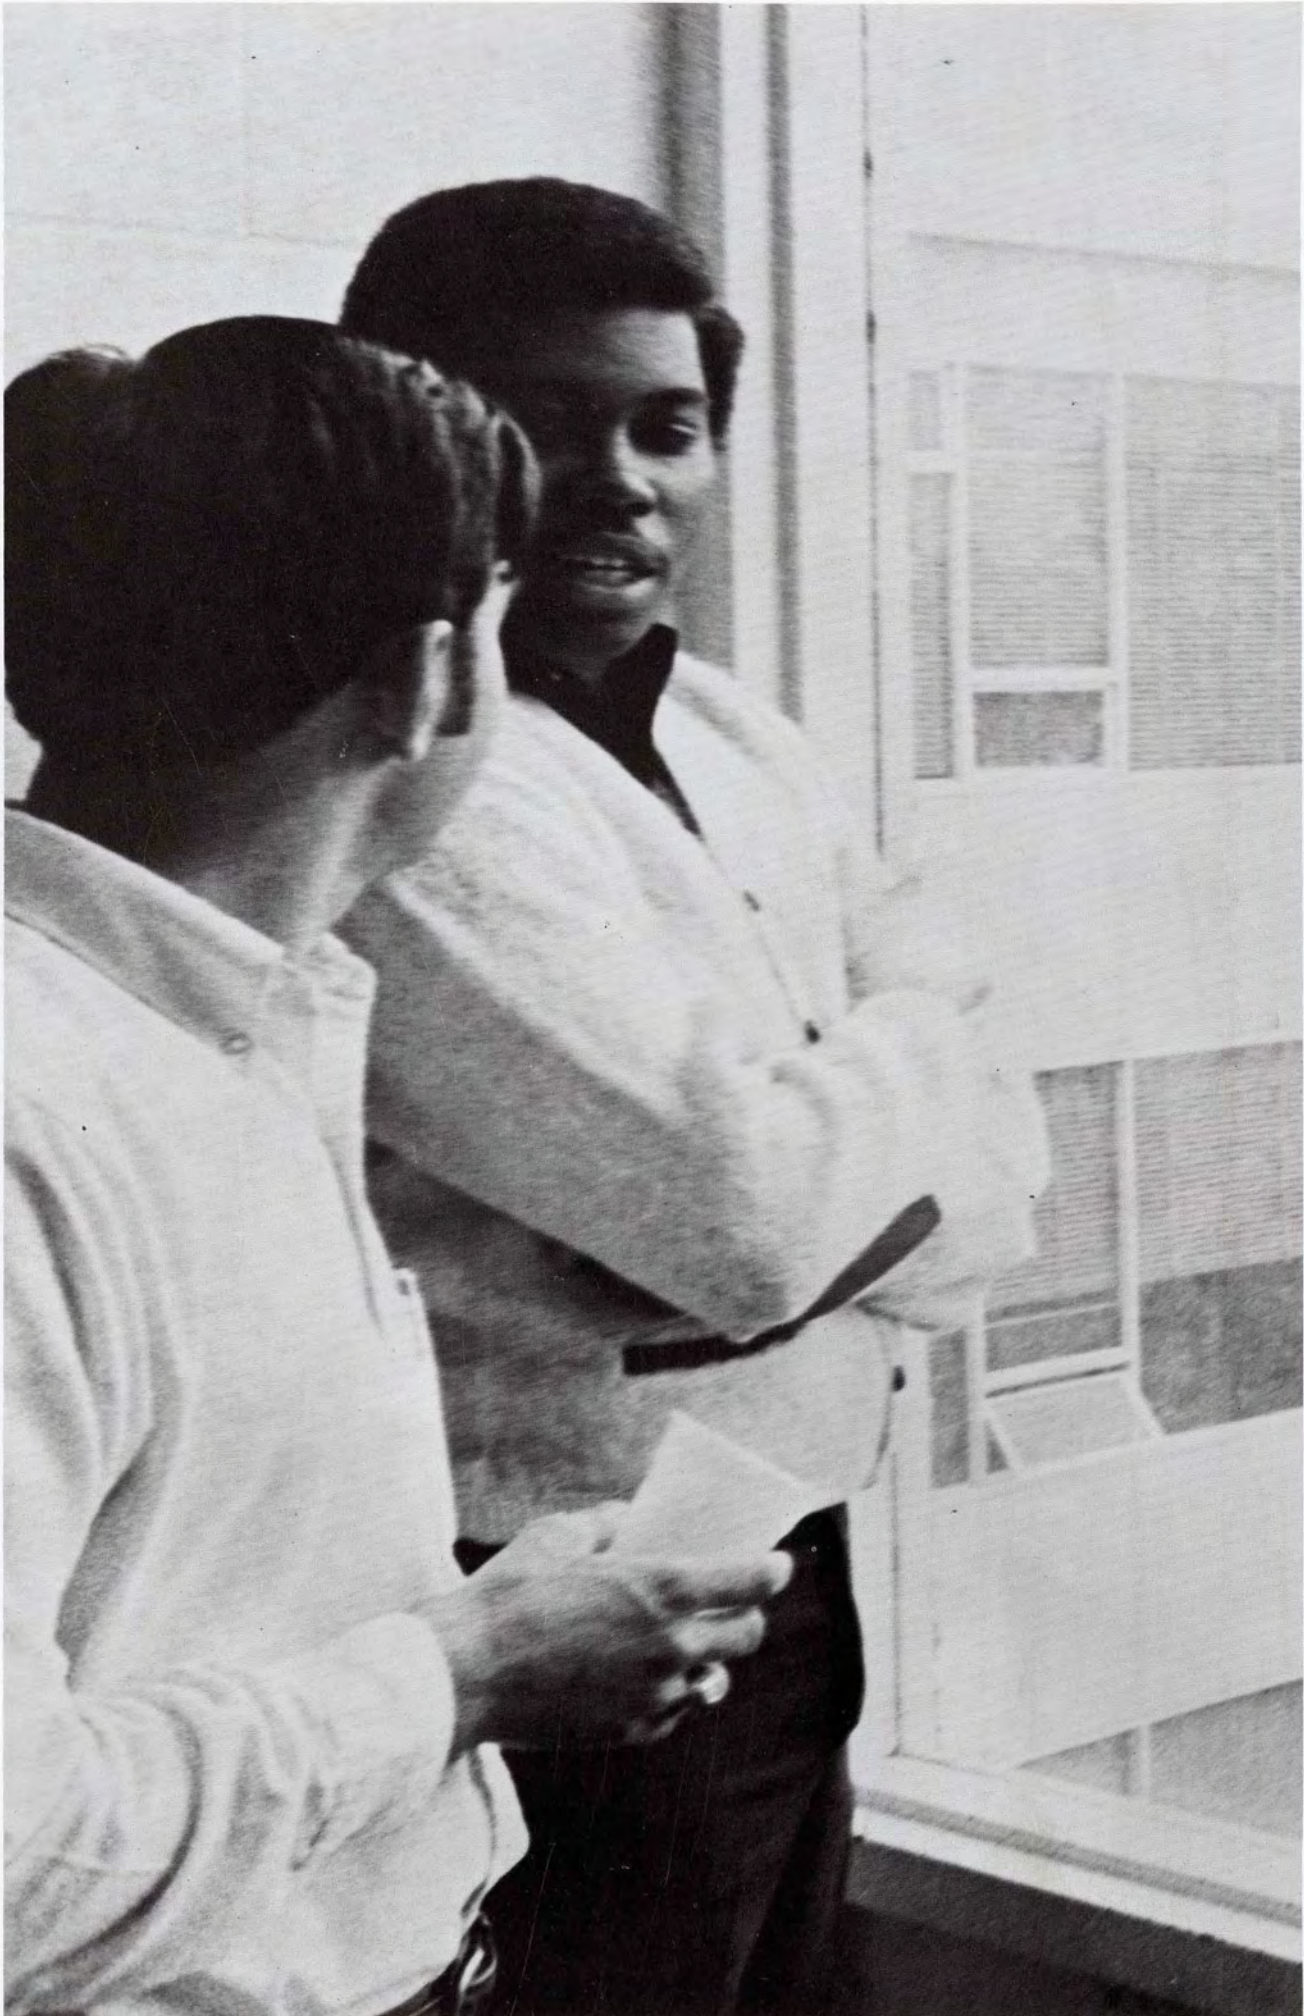

(right) excels in the nursing program at Murray State. A senior from Mount Sterling, Kentucky, Carole has held offices in The Student Nurses Association of Kentucky and has given much time and energy to a demanding, but rewarding field. Still, she has managed to combine study with many extra-curricular activities. Destined for a career in nursing, Carole spent three days a week in field work at the Henry County Hospital in Paris, Tennessee, during the past year.

Paul Lynn

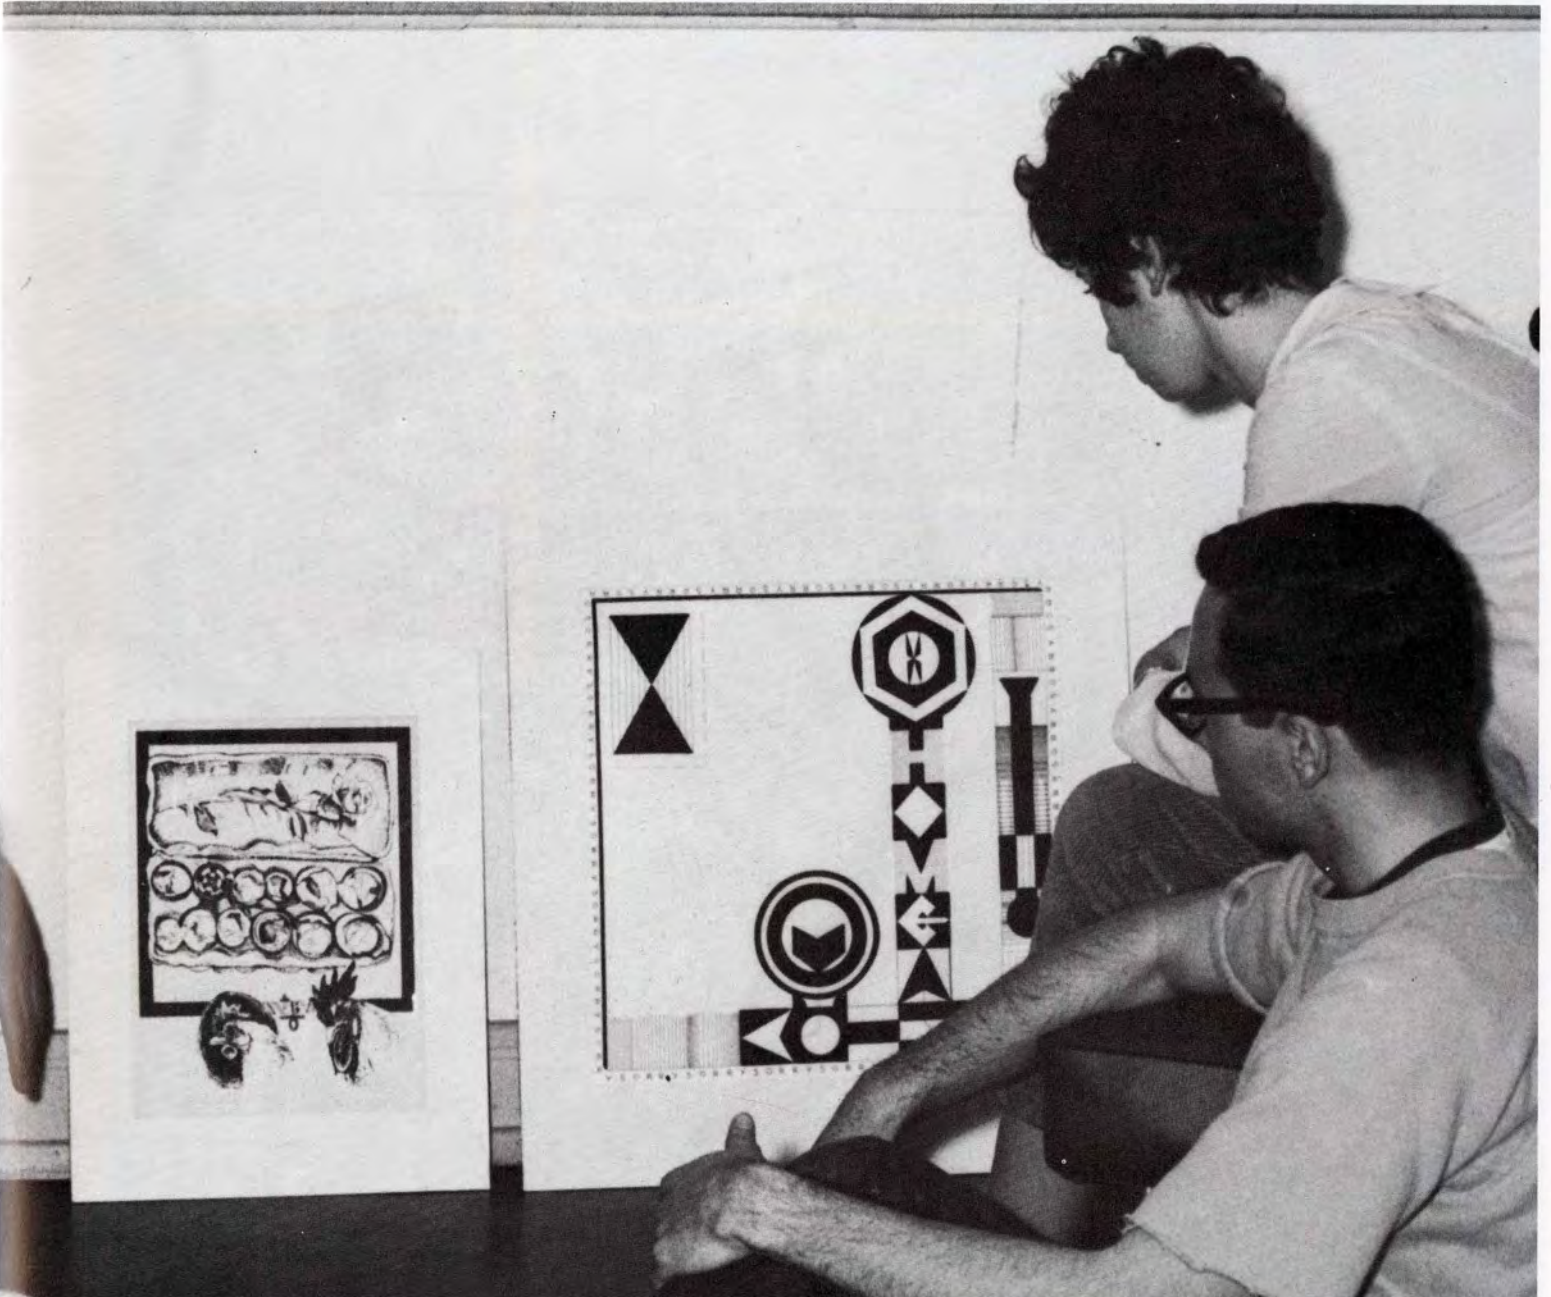

(above) joined the Industrial Education Department at Murray State in 1956. Since that time he has taught in Murray University School as well as in the University. His interests are centered in crafts and decorative designing, in which he works primarily with leather, metal, and plastic. An Associate Professor, Lynn is a likeable person, a dedicated and cooperative teacher.

Melvin Ferguson

(left) has quietly gained admiration from both students and faculty. As an undergraduate, he was president of Alpha Phi Alpha, social fraternity, and earned his commission in Advanced ROTC. During the past year, as a graduate assistant, he taught several courses in psychology, where his interest in the students and his dedication to the task made him a respected and popular instructor. Ferguson is from Providence, Kentucky.

Bob Head

(above), who earned his tenure at Murray State this year, has an interest in many phases of university life. He spent the past semester as an instructor on the World Campus Afloat, in which students earn college credit while on educational visits to several countries. Head also showed interest in athletics by serving as athletic trainer. In addition, he spent much time working for the control of environmental problems. However, Head showed his main commitment in his work in the Art Department, where, as Assistant Professor, he was a dynamic teacher.

The Shield 1970/Sports

Optimism was the word surrounding sports at Murray State before the seasons began. Virtually the same teams that had placed the Racers in second place in OVC football and in the NCAA basketball tourney were returning with hopes for an even better 1970.

On the gridiron, there were doubts that Matt Haug could replace All-OVC Larry Tillman as commander of the Thoroughbreds, and with the loss of co-captain Al Rice in the spring, the doubts were intensified.

With an opening win over Eastern Michigan, the doubts disappeared, but after losing to Tennessee Tech on the Racers' own field the road ahead was steep. From there on, the Racers rose and fell, but the handwriting appeared on the wall when Murray dropped a homecoming bout with Eastern 34-13 before 12,000 fans who were waiting for revenge for last year's conference title loss.

In basketball, with the starting five returning for a third straight OVC crown, optimism was almost faith. With a loss to East Tennessee at East Tennessee, the Racers stood with their backs to the wall, and then crumbled out of the conference race after consecutive losses on the ill-fated road trip to Eastern and Morehead.

Jimmy Harrel (45) and Frank Head (50) set Murray's defense (above). Opposite page, Matt Haug (upper left) talks strategy with Coach Oakley between plays; (below left) Austin Peay gets to Haug; (center left) Haug calls signals. Jimmy Brown (22) breaks away (upper right); Billy Hess (24) grabs a Haug pass (Center right). Stan Watts kicks OVC record field goal. (bottom)

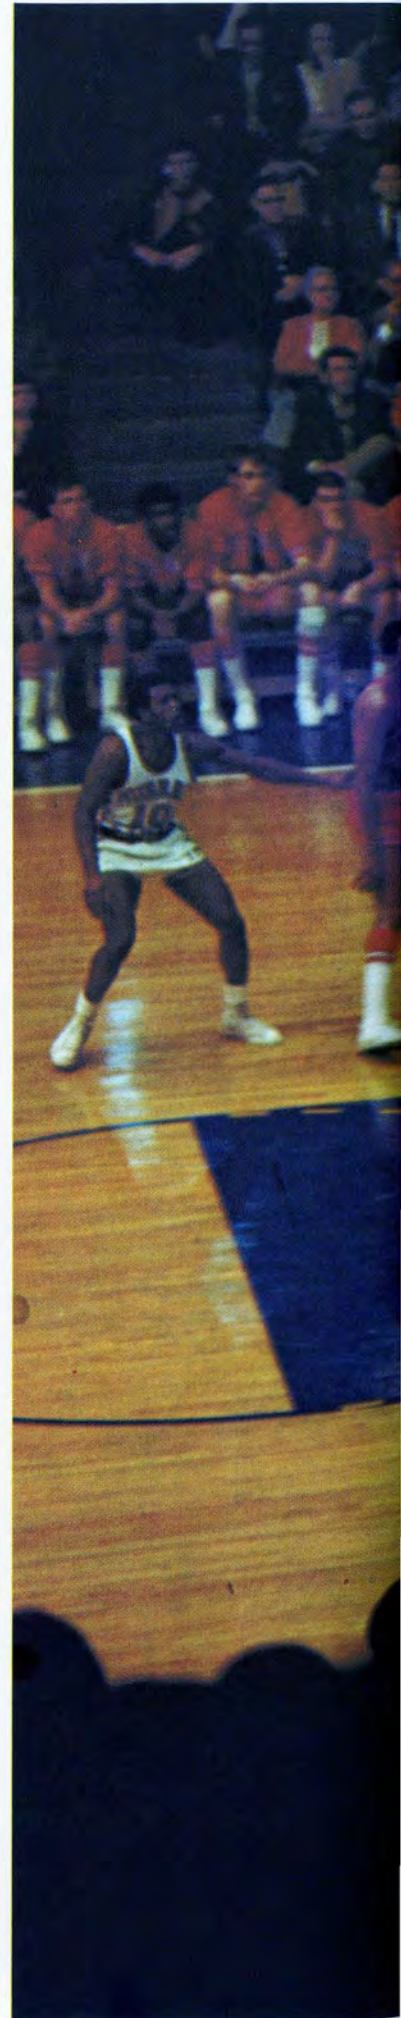

Donnie Williams (68) leads Rick Fisher (31) around end; Matt Haug (14) watches from background.

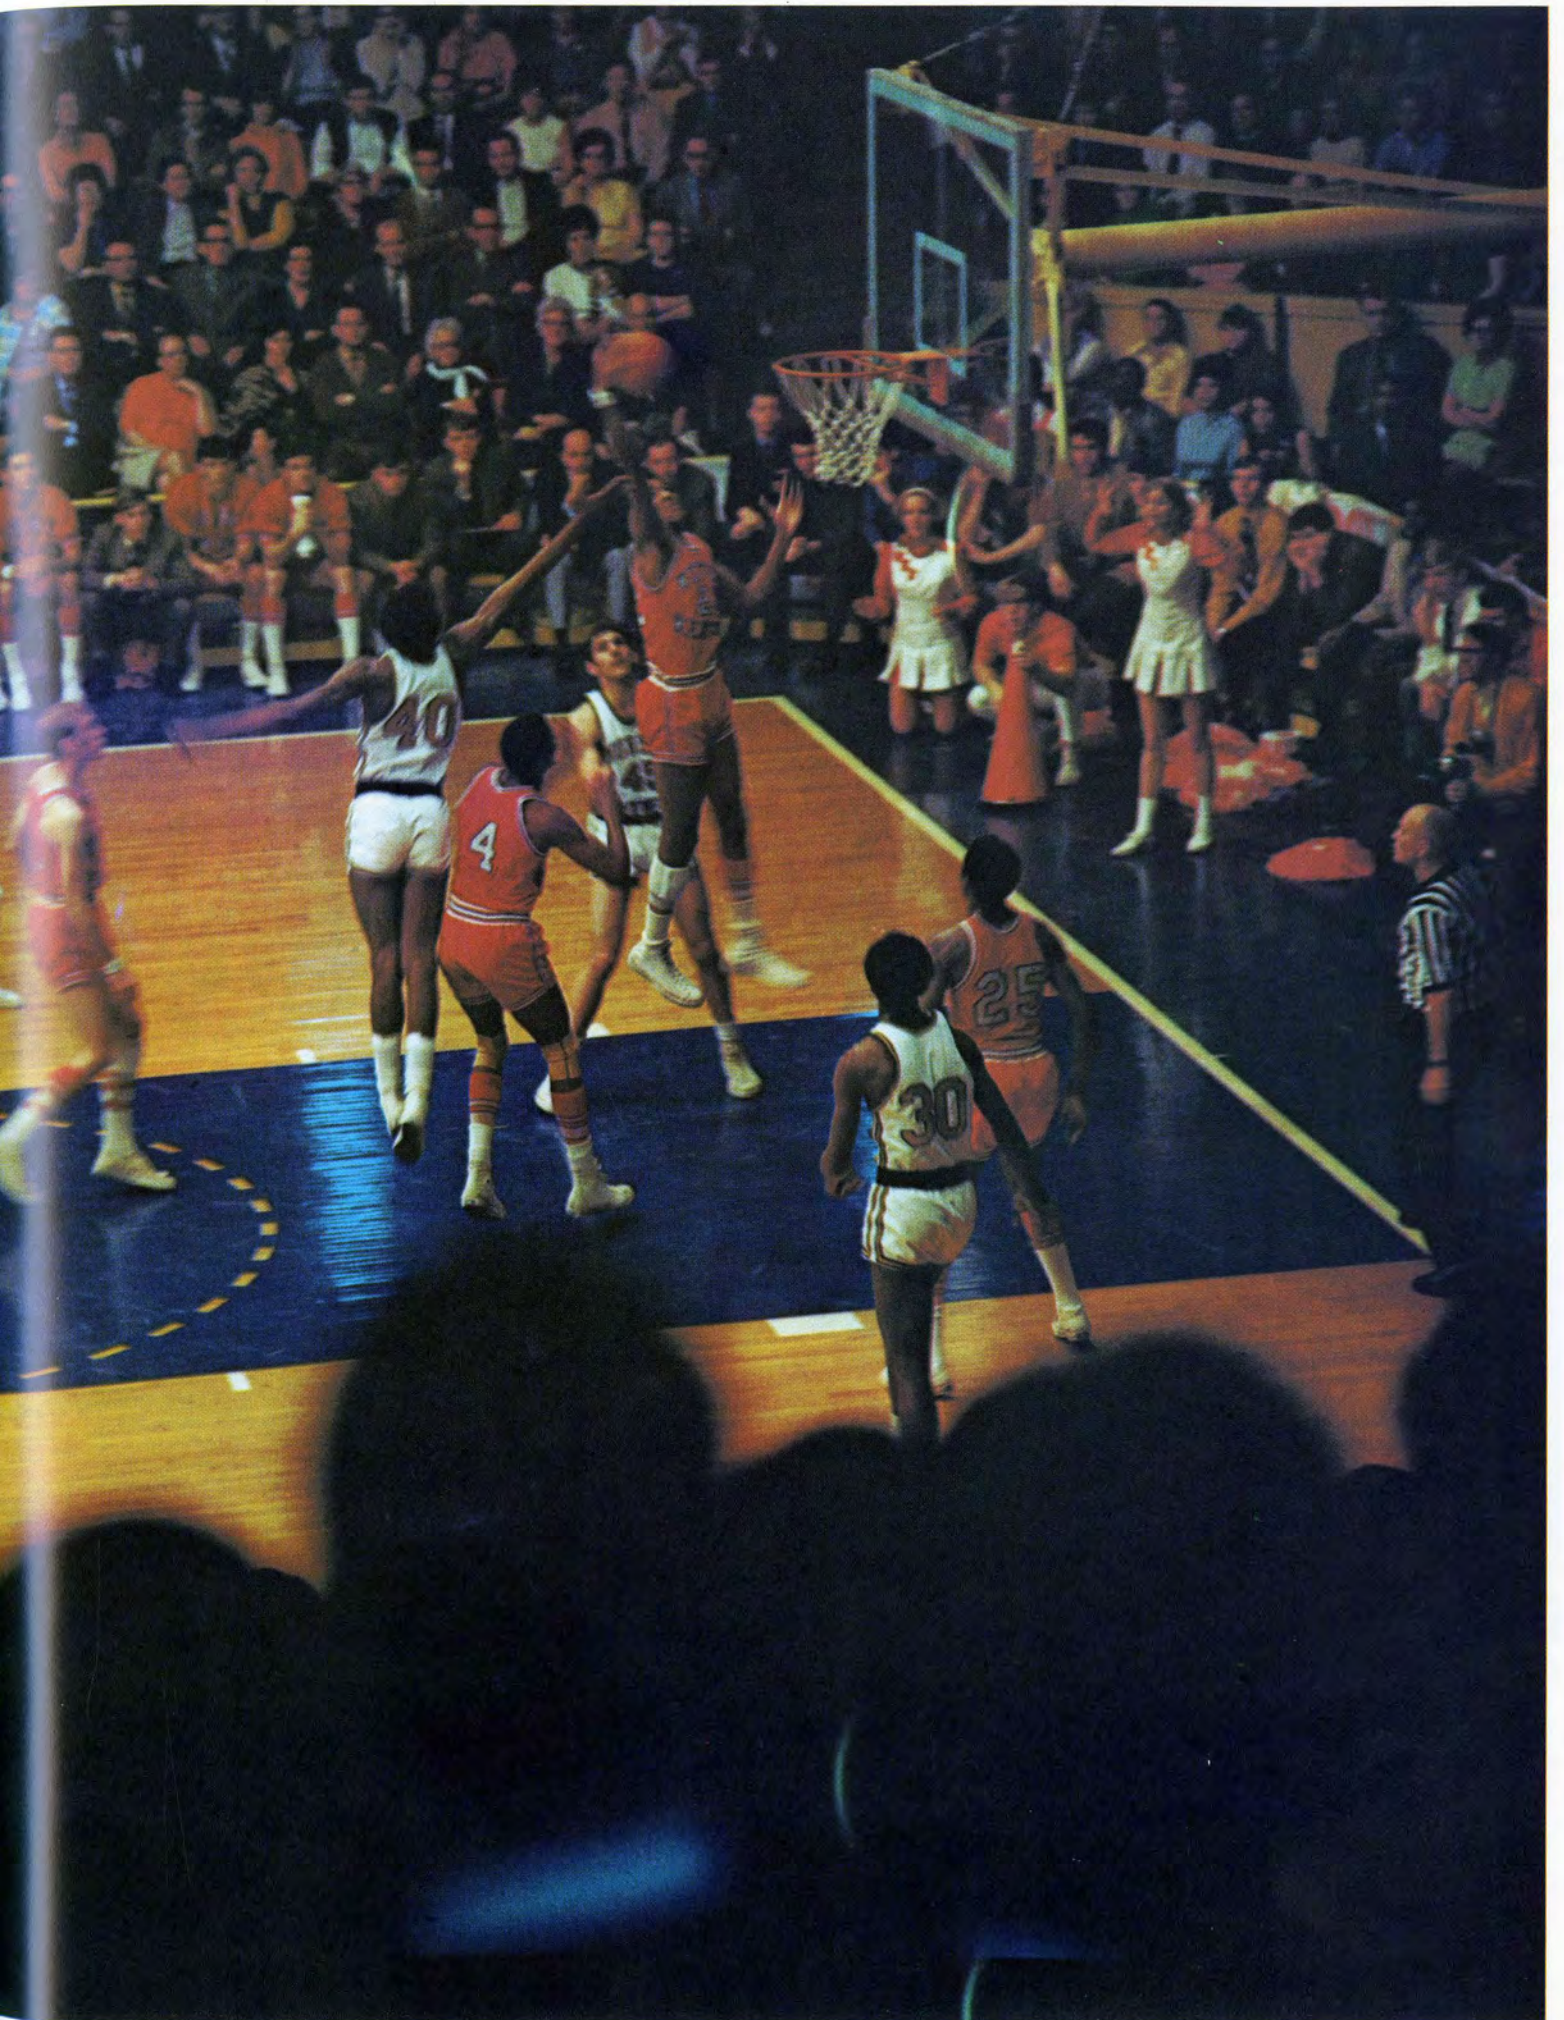

The Western game is a season within itself. It separates itself from the rest of the season in both basketball and football, and if there were an OVC Chess Title, checkmating Western would be a good substitute for losing all the rest of the games. In the 1969-70 Western season, the Racers came out winless, losing badly to Western in football and dropping two contests, one away and one at Murray, in basketball. But there is always next year.

Bill Mancini (above) lays in a crucial two points; Ron Johnson (right) battles Western's Walter Banks for a rebound.

Coach Bill Furgerson and the Racers began the season with a "sweet victory" over the seventh nationally-ranked college division team, Eastern Michigan, 28-20. Tennessee Tech was not intimidated coming to Murray the next weekend and clouded Murray's title hopes by defeating the Racers 28-21.

Murray bounced back the next weekend with a staunch defense that limited Morehead's highly-powered offense to only 57 yards rushing and defeated the Eagles 13-7. Murray was led by quarterback Matt Haug who threw for one touchdown and ran for another. Undefeated Southeast Missouri challenged Murray the following Saturday. Quarterback Matt Haug passed for three touchdowns and Russ Hake ran for two more as the Thoroughbreds crushed the Indians 34-14.

Murray travelled to Middle Tennessee and was upset 31-24. Even though the Racers picked-up 445 yards total offense, a new conference record, the defense was unable to contain the Blue Raiders. Murray carried a conference record of one win and two losses to conference leader, East Tennessee. Statistically, Murray dominated the game, but crucial penalties cost the Racers a victory and the best they could bring home was a tie. The Racers broke a five year losing streak to Austin-Peay by crushing the Governors 53-41. Stan Watts kicked two field goals, one going for 52 yards, a Murray record.

The Racers took a 4-3-1 record to meet non-conference foe, Evansville. Freshman Rick Fisher sparked Murray over Evansville 42-16. Fisher picked-up 129 yards in 21 carries and set a Racer single-game scoring record with four touch-downs.

Arch-rival Western welcomed Murray to Bowling Green, Kentucky, and sent them away with an embarrassing 56-14 drubbing. The team and Coach Bill Furgerson were revenge minded after the loss, as avowed by Furgerson: "Western was throwing and trying to score until the very end. . . and I won't forget it!"

re-season polls of the Ohio Valley Conference basketball coaches picked Murray to finish the season as they had the year before, the Conference Champions. It was to be a season similar to that of football. Title hopes dissolved and took on a new inspiration in the form of revenge. The Racers were 3-1 after opening week with impressive wins over Tennessee Wesleyan, University of California at Riverside, and Seton Hall.

One of the highlights of the pre-conference games came when the Racers snapped a six year jinx by beating Bradley at Peoria, Illinois, 72-60. The team was led by the spectacular play of senior Claude Virden who pumped in 25 points and grabbed 18 rebounds.

The battle for the O.V.C. crown began with Murray stringing together consecutive victories over Austin-Peay, Morehead, and Eastern, all played on the Racers' home court.

Young hits from the corner.

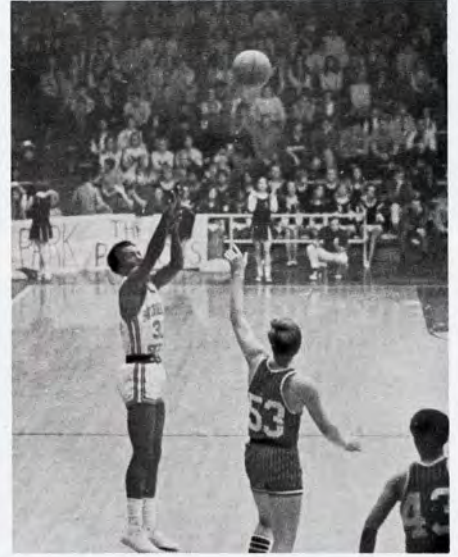

Murray's title hopes were stunned by a loss at East Tennessee. Coupled with the loss to the Western Hilltoppers the following week, Murray took a back seat to Western in the title race. With the conference championship out of reach, Murray concentrated on the conference "spoiler" role.

The Racers avenged a road loss to East Tennessee by defeating the Buccaneers at Murray, 99-86. Bill Mancini, taking over for suspended Hector Blondet, sparked Murray with a game-high total of 27 points.

Murray closed the season by taking OVC champion and NCAA bound Western to the wire before bowing out in the final seconds 77-75.

Claude Virden (left) fires a jumper in the Racer victory over Eastern; Blondet (above left) lays one in against Parsons College; Virden (above right) led the team in scoring with a 20.4 per game average; Jimmy Young (above) shoots over a Parsons defender.

Murray State's baseball finished the 1969 season with 20-8 record, marking the 12th straight winning season for Coach John Reagan. They finished second in the Western Division with a 7 win and 4 lost record, making it the ninth consecutive season that the Racers have finished second or above in division play.

Reagan's 20-8 record gives him a 211-91 career mark. In conference play, his teams have won 98 and lost 35, while capturing six OVC championship titles.

Murray State's baseball team (top) compiled an impressive 20-8 record on their way to a second place division finish.

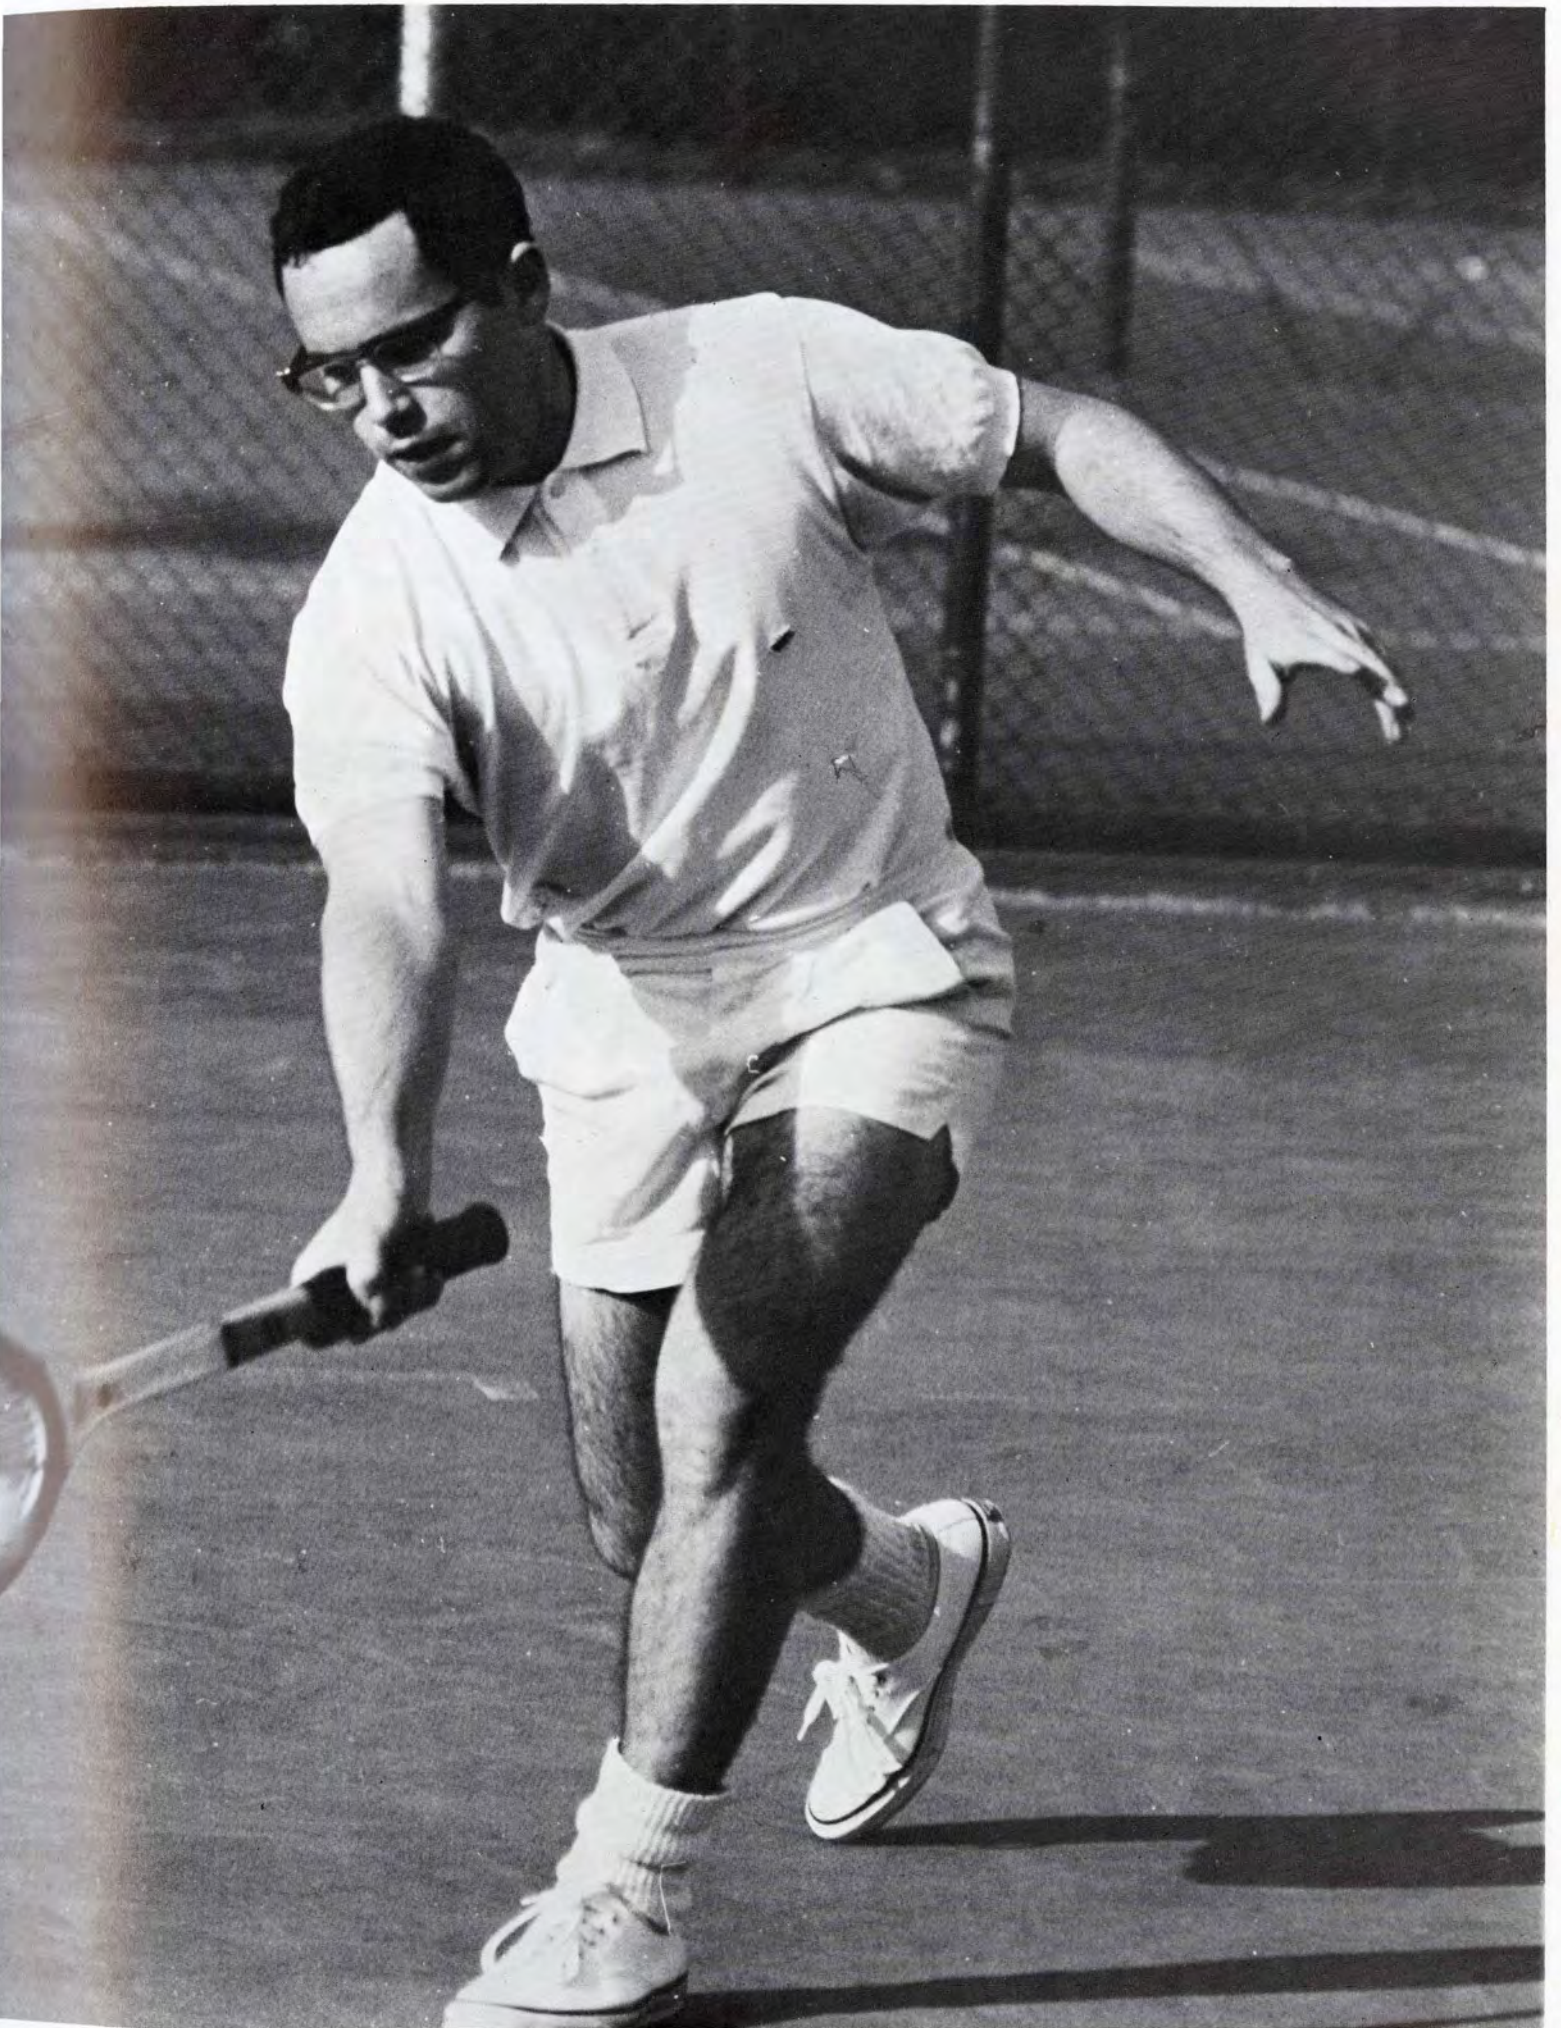

Murray State's netters finished their 1969 season with an 8-10 record and with a 5-2 OVC mark. It was Murray's 13th winning season with only one losing and one tied season since 1955.

In Coach Jesse Spencer's three seasons with Murray, he compiled a 18-11 dual meet record and won one OVC Championship.

ith only 14 half-scholarships given to field 48 men in 16 events, Murray's track team set five school records in 1969.

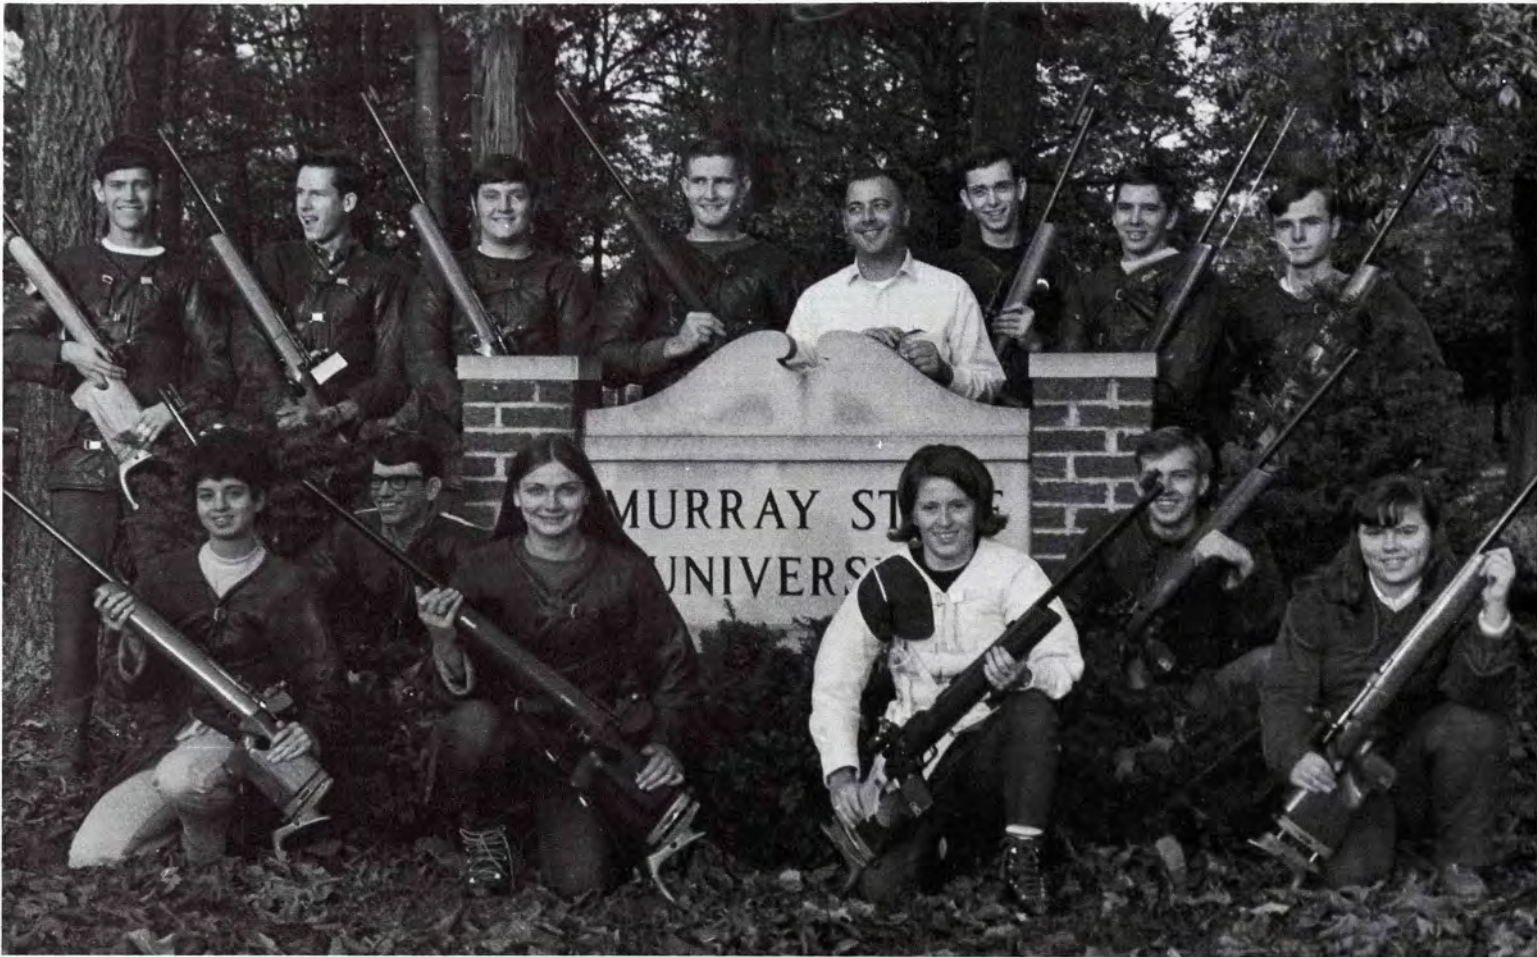

Tommie Turner set a new school record in the 440 yard dash, running it in 45.5 seconds. Ranked as the third best 440 man in the world, he was a member of the U.S. Olympic Team.

Darrell Remole set new school records in both the 1 and 3 mile runs, with clockings of 4:09.0 and 14:35.4 respectively.

Doug Morris added another school record with a vault of 15'6" in the pole vault and John Bover set a new Racer mark in the javelin throw with a toss of 221'2".

Dorm life is as much of college days as are classes and cramming for tests. The dorm offers opportunities to meet or even live with persons of different backgrounds and viewpoints. Arguments do arise, such as one who can not sleep with the window open and a roommate who insists that fresh air is the cure for everything. Privacy and silence is a thing of the past after moving into the dorm. The walls seem to get thinner with each year and the rooms smaller. Yet, this so called new life takes only a few weeks to adjust to. For nine months this is your home and these memories will linger long after graduation.

Living in the dorm is what you make of it yourself. It can be among the most carefree days of your life or it can be the most depressing. At times the dorm may become a health resort with exercises held nightly in the halls after hours. Dorms also offer the largest possible selection of clothes. Someone down the hall is bound to have a vest to match your roommate's blouse or have something else to offer.

Then there's the time you had a flat tire ten miles outside city limits at 1:55 a.m. and the police escort back to the dorm. In most cases this leads to another aspect of living in the dorm—that of being campused. One night of staying in and studying for four hours usually makes one think twice about further infractions of rules.

There is always someone willing to talk in a dorm-talk when you are grabbing a few hours of sleep or trying to actually concentrate on Great Expectations. The hours spent discussing current topics are things that go unwritten in books, but are vital in the growth of an individual. A person is brought out of his small world and forced to at least listen to a different side. This too is a part of dorm life.

or those living in the new dorms, the walk up campus is a great part of Murray State. During spring the baseball games attract a large crowd of those on the way from class and there are numerous frizbies flying around the dorm complex. The winter months bring a different mood to the campus. Students are seen running from class to begin the long walk back to the dorms.

A few words or even a few pages can not give a full picture of dormitory life but maybe these pictures will bring back memories and thoughts of your own.

Dale Miller (upper left) waits at the desk. Maryann Williams, (upper right) finishes her make-up and another girl (above) puts clothes in the dryer while Dettie Ann Seay, Laurie Bellew, and Debbie Kaster (right) await the elevator.

The Shield 1970/Greeks

No other group of people is as firmly attached to the activities of the campus as the Greek. Their system is involved in every phase of the University, from academic life to student government.

Because of this attachment, the Greeks are the lifeblood of practically everything on campus outside of the classroom, and even there they exercise some authority.

In spite of this monopoly on student life, there is a vast majority of students who, for one reason or another, choose to remain independent. In some instances, the choice is self-made; yet for some, the choice is painful, inflicted by the greek system itself.

Even though this selectivity is, in part, injurious in some instances, it is the basis of the system. The ability to choose the chosen, and in some instances, direct them, gives the Greeks an inner bond which other groups cannot create.

The Shield 1970/Faculty and Administration

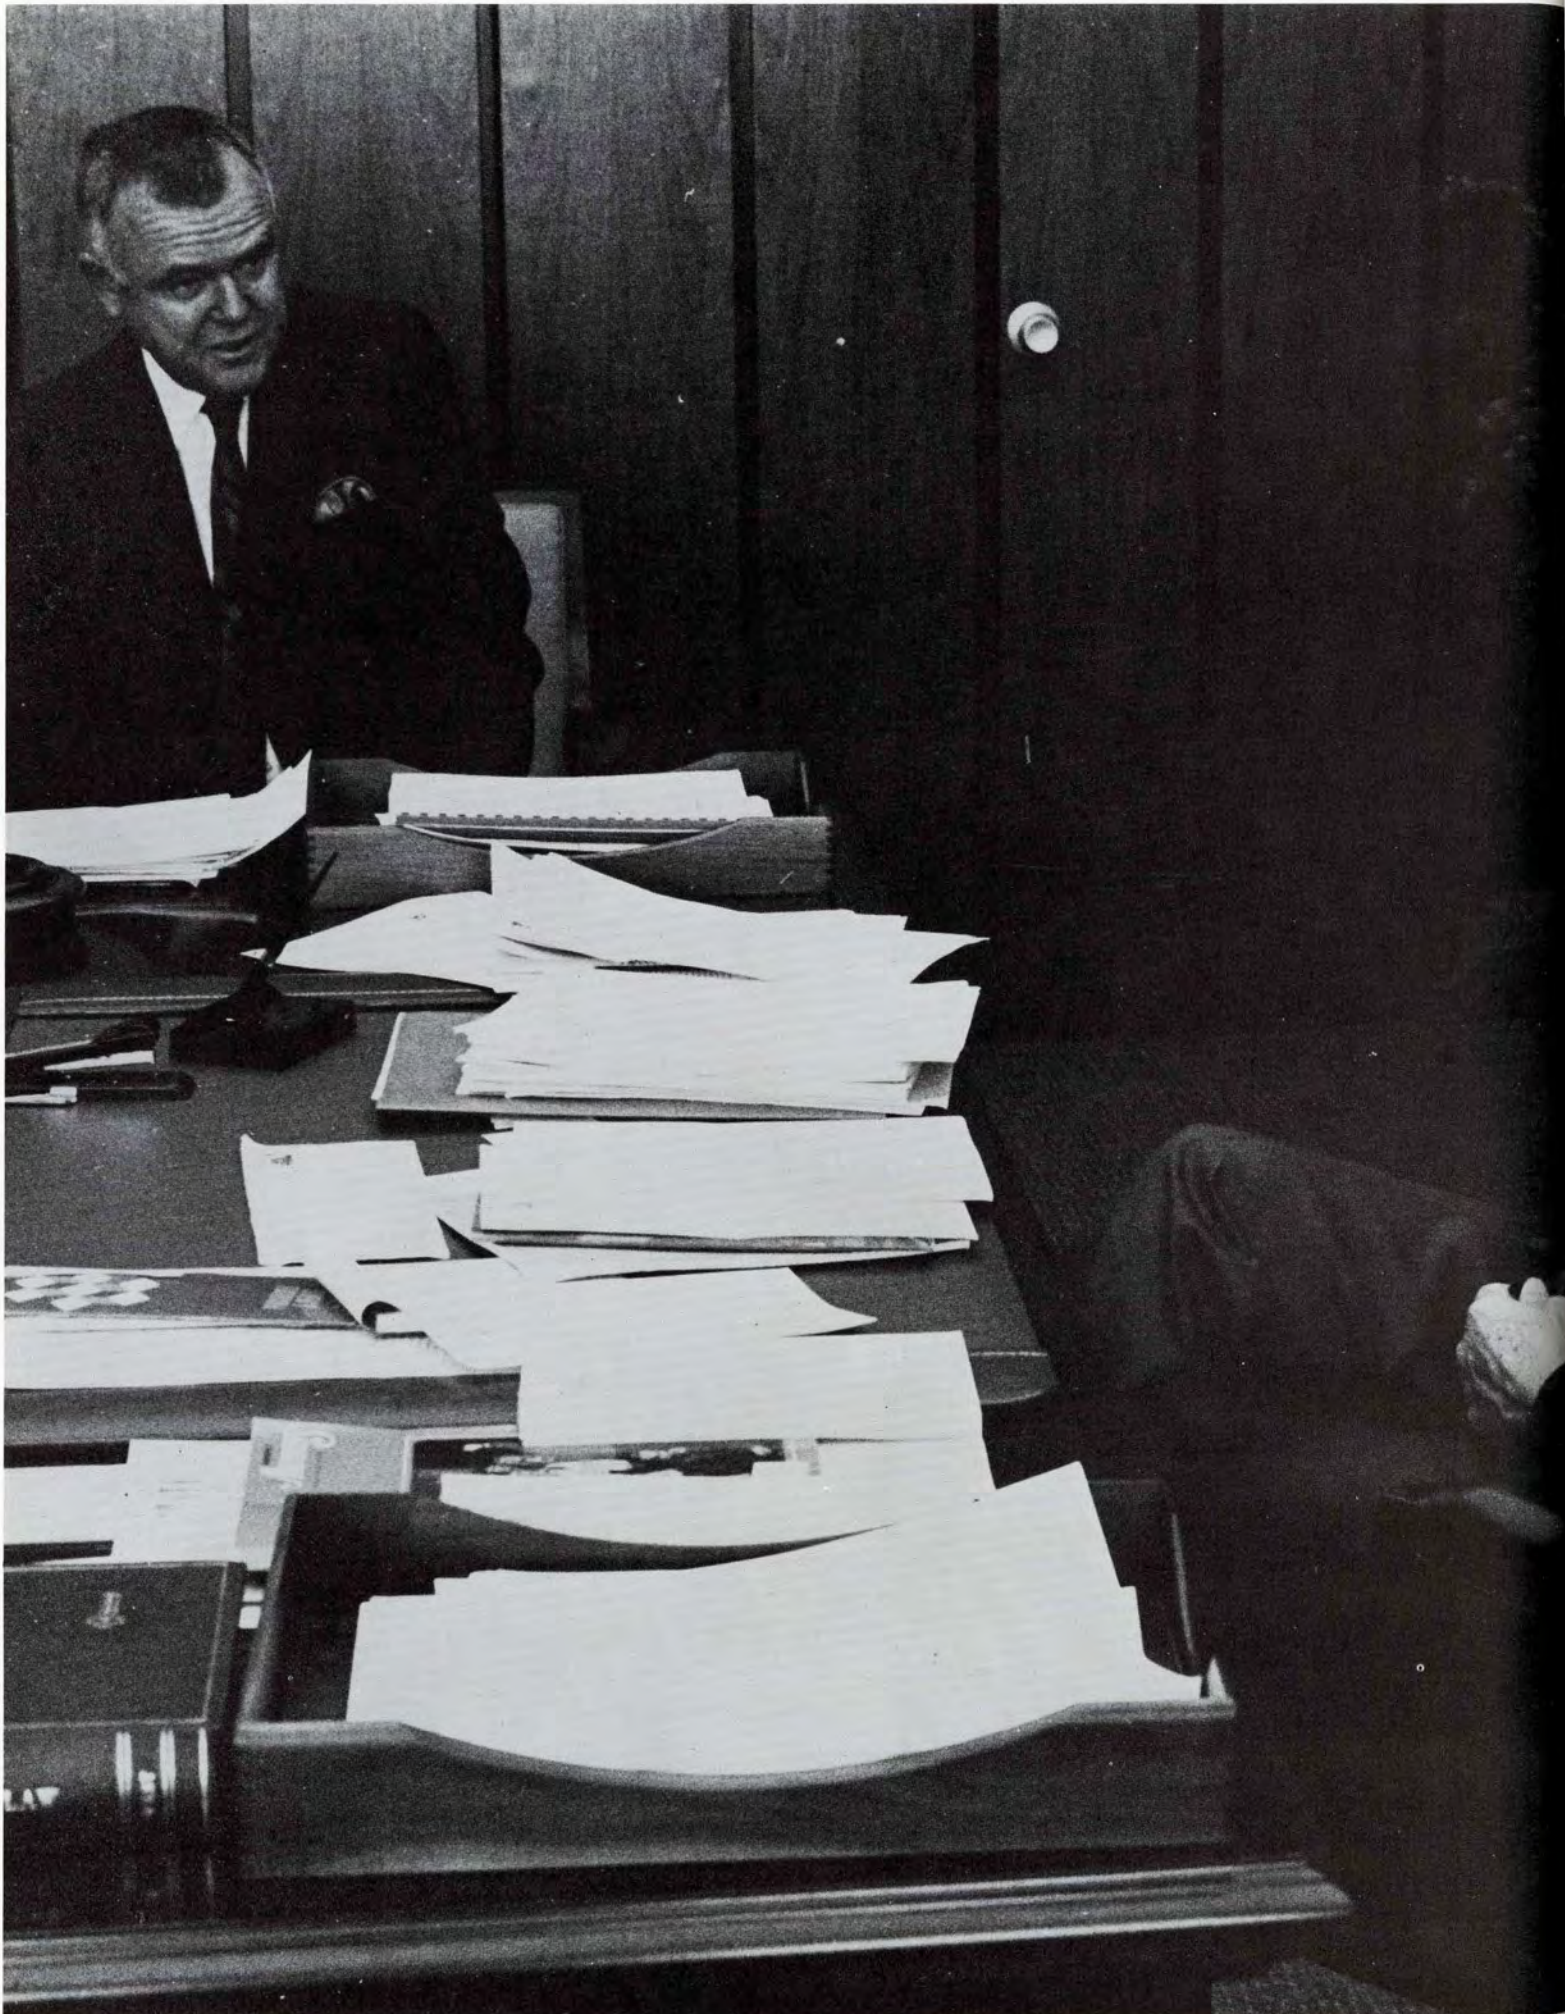

The administration of the American university stands in the most complicated position of any policy-directing group in this country. It must answer the demands of politicians and those who hold influence over the University. It must insure the education of its students, and provide them with a social environment free enough to give foundation to individual development, yet at the same time one that will structure and prepare them for existence within a society they will eventually inherit.

President Harry M. Sparks (right) discusses an issue with dean Philip Tibbs and Vice-President Thomas B. Hogan-camp. Before the conference begins (above) Dr. Sparks greets Tibbs and examines information he brought.

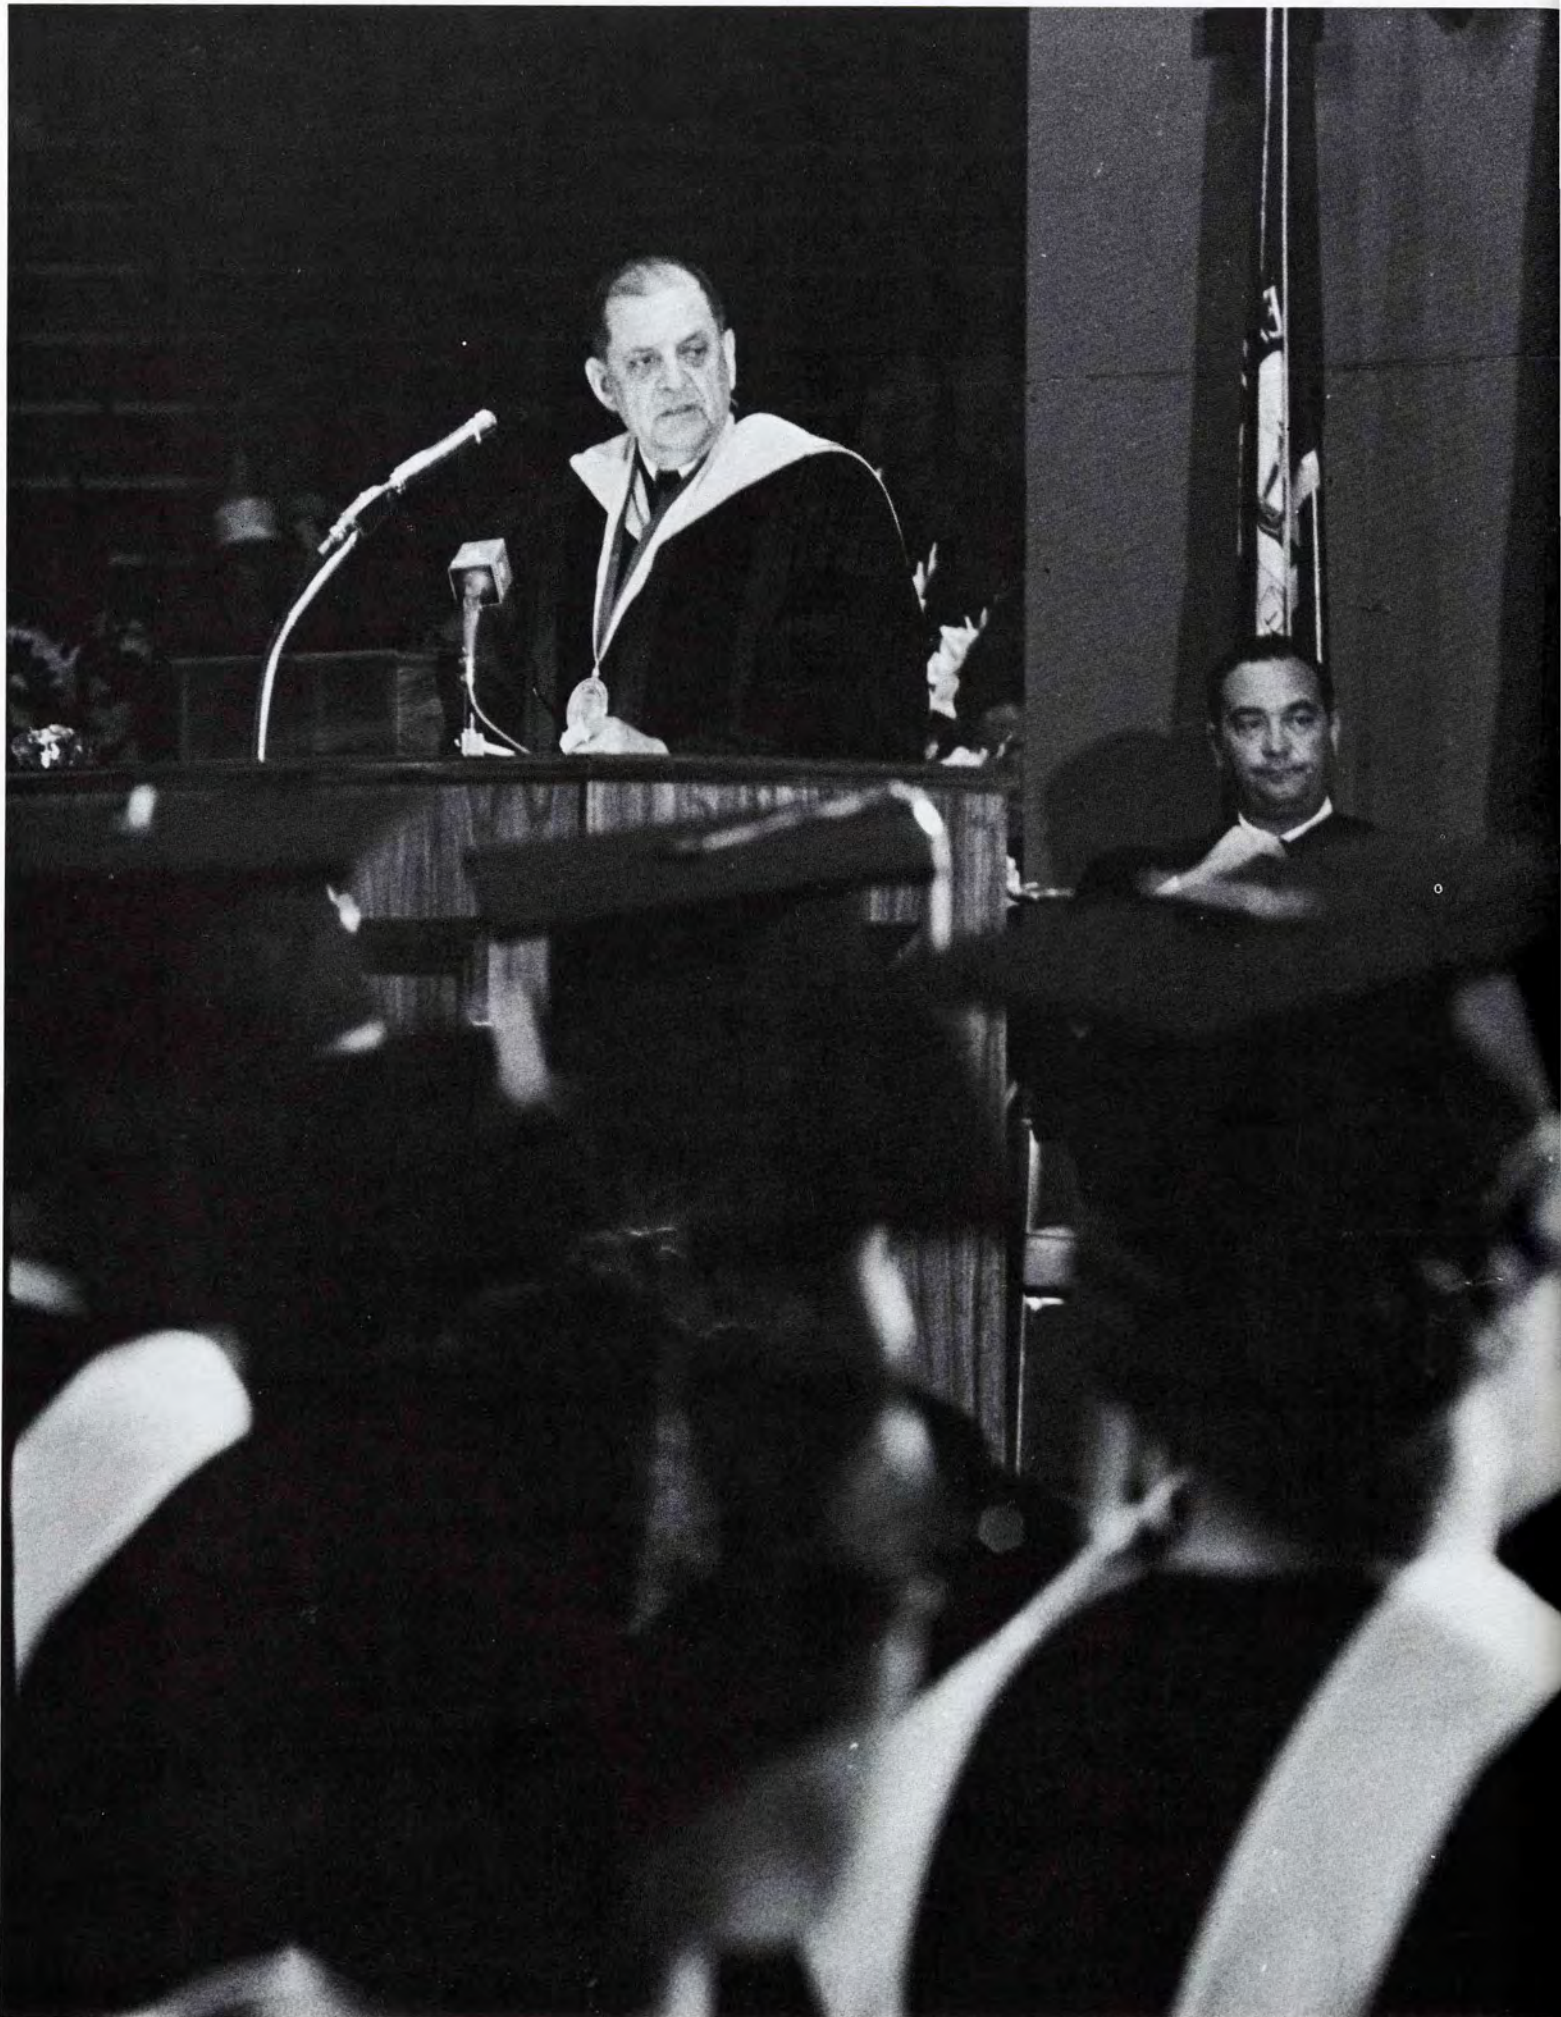

Caught between the needs of two groups that seem at odds—the students, and the governing councils standing above the university—the administration must walk a thin line which rarely passifies either extreme.

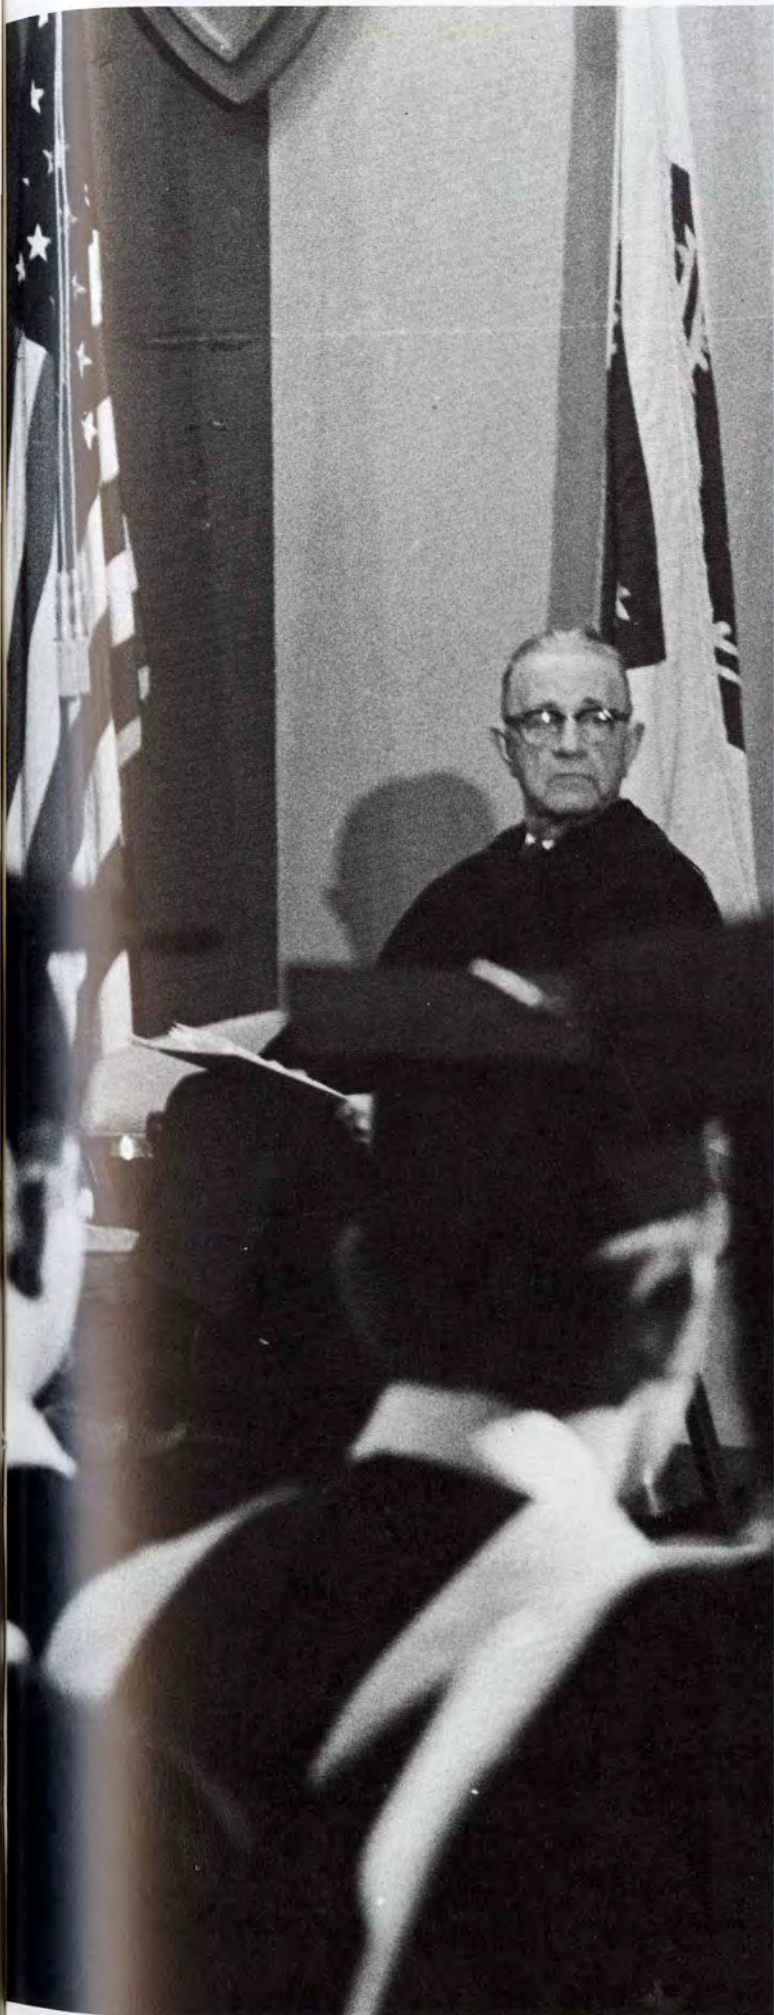

If the actions of the administration seem sinister and inviting anarchy to these state councils, then the students have made the greater impression on the administration.

If the actions seem heartless and unconcerned, then it is the councils who have brought their point to bear upon the administration.

Later that morning, Dr. Sparks (left) talks over the new radio station with Dr. Ray Mofield. Keeping in touch with student opinion (above) Dr. Sparks checks over the Murray State News.

Perhaps there is no solution to this bifercation which exists within the university, for there seems to be no end to the division which has separated a country from its young.

If there is an end, however, it must lie in the understanding of the pressures which brace the administration in its upright position, the pressures which push in different directions and almost render what lies between immobile.

Leadership and responsibility are the demands of a college president. Dr. Harry M. Sparks, since assuming his position in 1968 has dedicated himself to this task. He cites effective staffing and budget increases as his major accomplishments. Under his administration, faculty improvements in the form of faculty tenure and promotion are coupled with student-life improvements, such as the change from two-year compulsory to one year and the appointment of student representatives to University committees.

Dr. Harry M. Sparks (above and right) at the President's home, Oakhurst.

Drama students prepare for "Summertree", Spring 1970.

The Graduate School at Murray State is still relatively young, yet its growth since its founding in 1963 has reflected the need for more and better education.

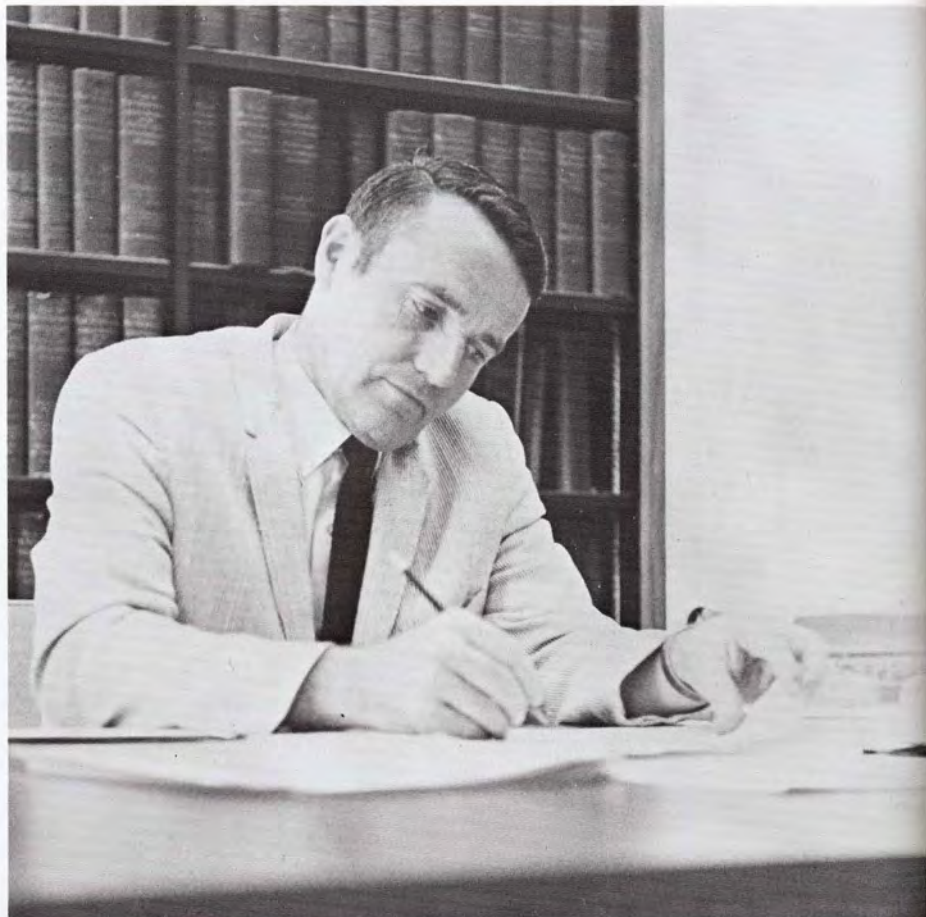

In 1970, 773 graduate students were enrolled in the University, a 32% increase over the previous year. Of these, 117 have been granted assistantships. Last year, the University conferred 250 graduate degrees.

In assessing the obstacles for continuing the exceptional development of the graduate School, Dr. Ralph Tesseneer, its dean, said, "Ideas are our biggest problem. We have to attract people who have ideas and new approaches. To attract them, it takes money, so you might say that, like the rest of the University, we need money."

Discussion in a Monday night class (above left) in seminar form; (above right) students pause between night classes. Dr. James Merino directs graduate work in History 543 (above and left).

Scientific method lies at the heart of graduate research. In universities across the nation, individual research is finding an importance it has never known before. In each field, countless areas undergo evaluation to determine a need for more information in that field. After the need has been determined, the long, painful process of accumulating data begins, accompanied by its evaluation and final presentation.

Jerry Hendon, Chemistry Department, searches for information concerning his research project. Art Walters, Physics Department, (Right) adjusts a Bell vacuum jar which he uses in his experimental work.

ince there is no precedent for individual research, complete accuracy is the goal of the researcher. The attention to detail, the endless accumulation of statistics and observations must be recorded with dead accuracy. The variables of experimentation continually present an obstacle to the researcher, and his success or failure will be determined by his own ability to discipline and direct his own work toward a standard of excellence which reflects the standards of the entire world of scientific research.

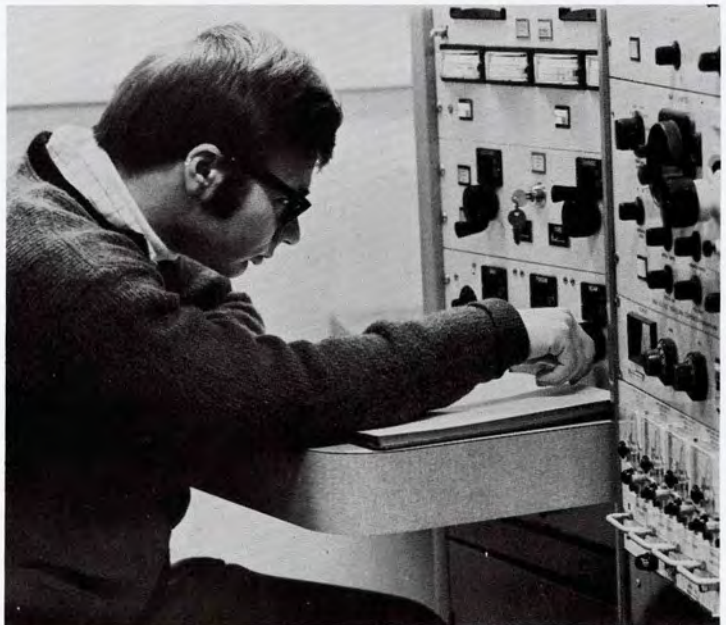

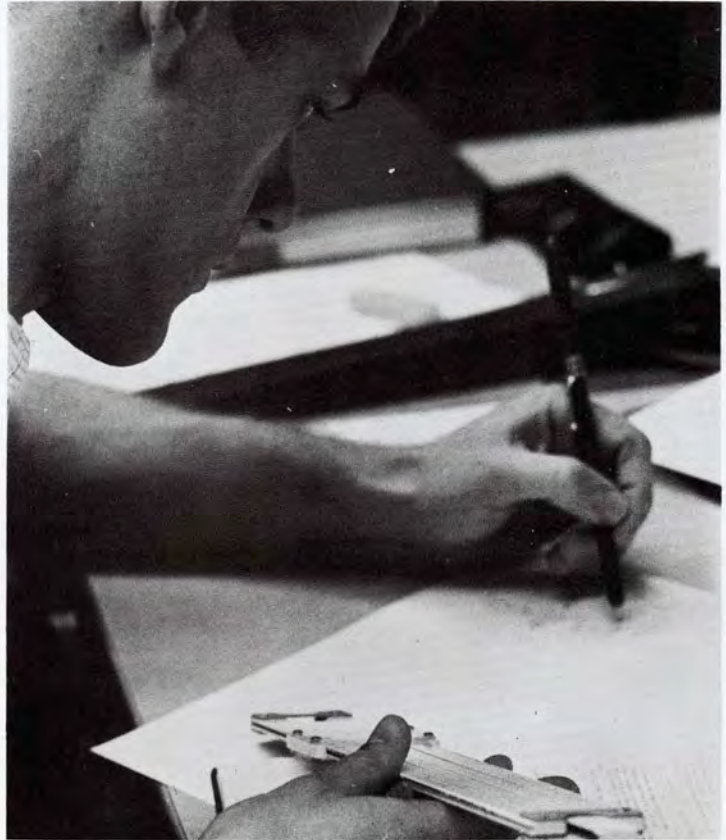

Sister Lois Ann Pfiester, Biology Department (Left) analyzes pond water to determine the Nitrogen, Oxygen and Carbon Dioxide content. Jerry Hendon (Top Left) works on the enolization of acid derivatives. Al Benedict Biology Department (Top Right) performs experiments using electrophoresis. Sister Lois Ann Pfiester (Bottom) examines algae from a local pond.

hen the data begins to form patterns which validate or void the original hypothesis, the researcher will begin to analyze the data, reinforcing it with more data which narrows the field or his particular research toward a definite conclusion which will finally be presented in the research thesis.

Jerry Hendon (Left Top) analyzes graphs for his thesis data. Art Walters (Top) computes the stopping powers of various elements. John Gompers Physics Department (Bottom) operates the main control panel for the Van de Graaf accelerator.

The thesis and the research itself may be the finished product of the graduate level of education in the university, but much more is usually involved to obtain the graduate degree. The assistantship is the most common route in the graduate program, and with that assistantship come labs to be supervised, tests to be graded and examinations to be proctored. In spite of this diversity, the principal business of the graduate researcher is starting with the problem, and moving toward an understanding of the elements which surround it.

DESIDERATA

Go placidly amid the noise and haste and remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible without surrender be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even the dull and ignorant; they too have their story. Avoid loud and aggressive persons, they are vexations to the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain and bitter; for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself. Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans. Keep interested in your own career, however humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time. Exercise caution in your business affairs; for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals; and everywhere life is full of heroism. Be yourself. Especially, do not feign affection. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment it is perennial as the grass. Take kindly the counsel of the years, gracefully surrendering the things of youth. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue and loneliness. Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself. You are a child of the universe, no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here. And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. Therefore be at peace with God, whatever you conceive Him to be, and whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life keep peace with your soul. With all its sham, drudgery and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be careful. Strive to be happy.

ORTON HAMBY

THE SHIELD wishes to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Orton Hamby, a student of Murray State College, who in the opinion of the staff, has produced photographs of the highest artistic merits. From his candid "snaps" to his ultra-modern angle shots, one sees and feels the sincerity with which his work has been executed. We see through the eyes of an artist not just buildings or people, but souls. His work lives, and in its "living" enables us to re-live our college life. So to you Orton, we express our appreciation for your time and effort in making this year's SHIELD a success.

Fugue/1970

(dedicated to Orton Hamby, photographer, 1937 Shield)

So, Orton,
even after that one-page tribute to your “snaps” nobody remembers.
Nobody cares
that you bent down at a sixtieth at f/5.6
and saw “not just people but souls.”

When I think how long you must have worked to make old John Wesley look “just super”
it makes me want to cry.

Maybe
if you hadn't tried so hard nobody would have remembered then and forgotten
by now.

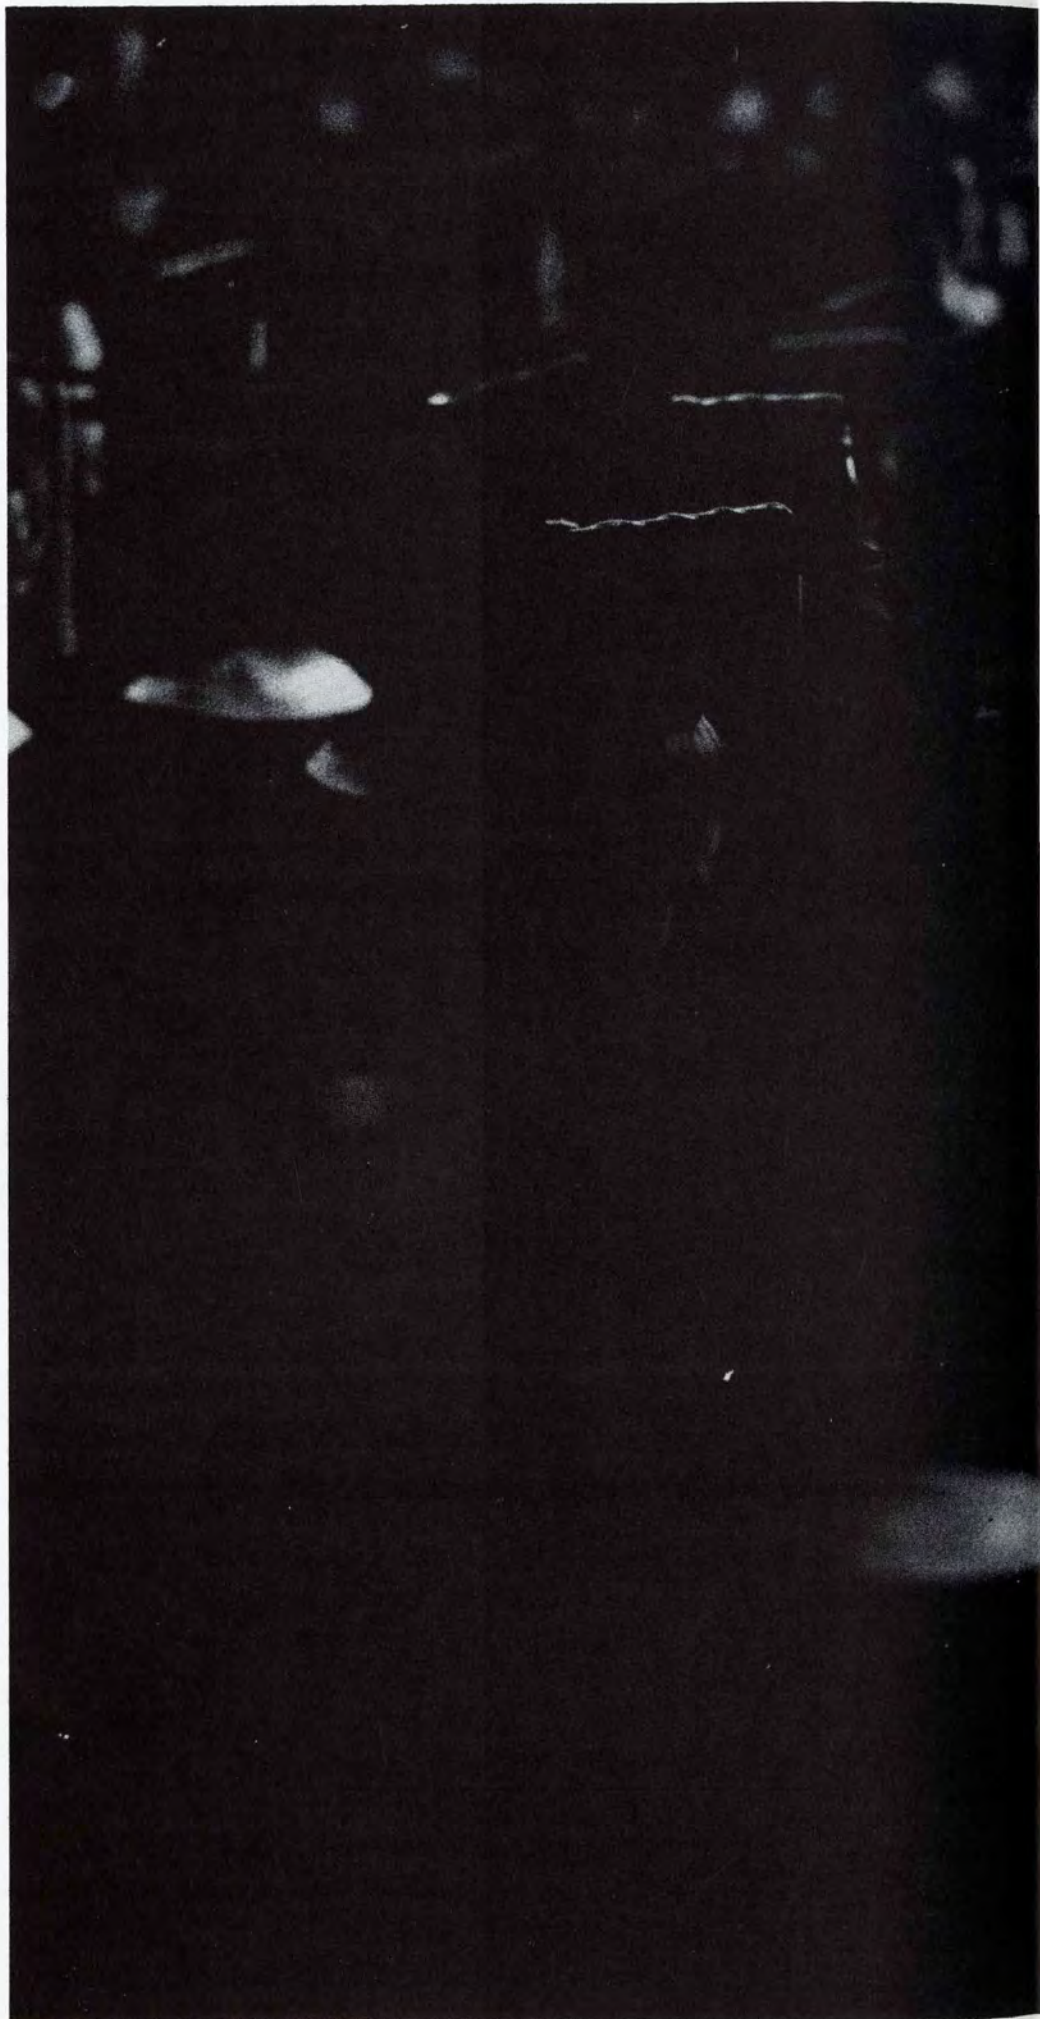

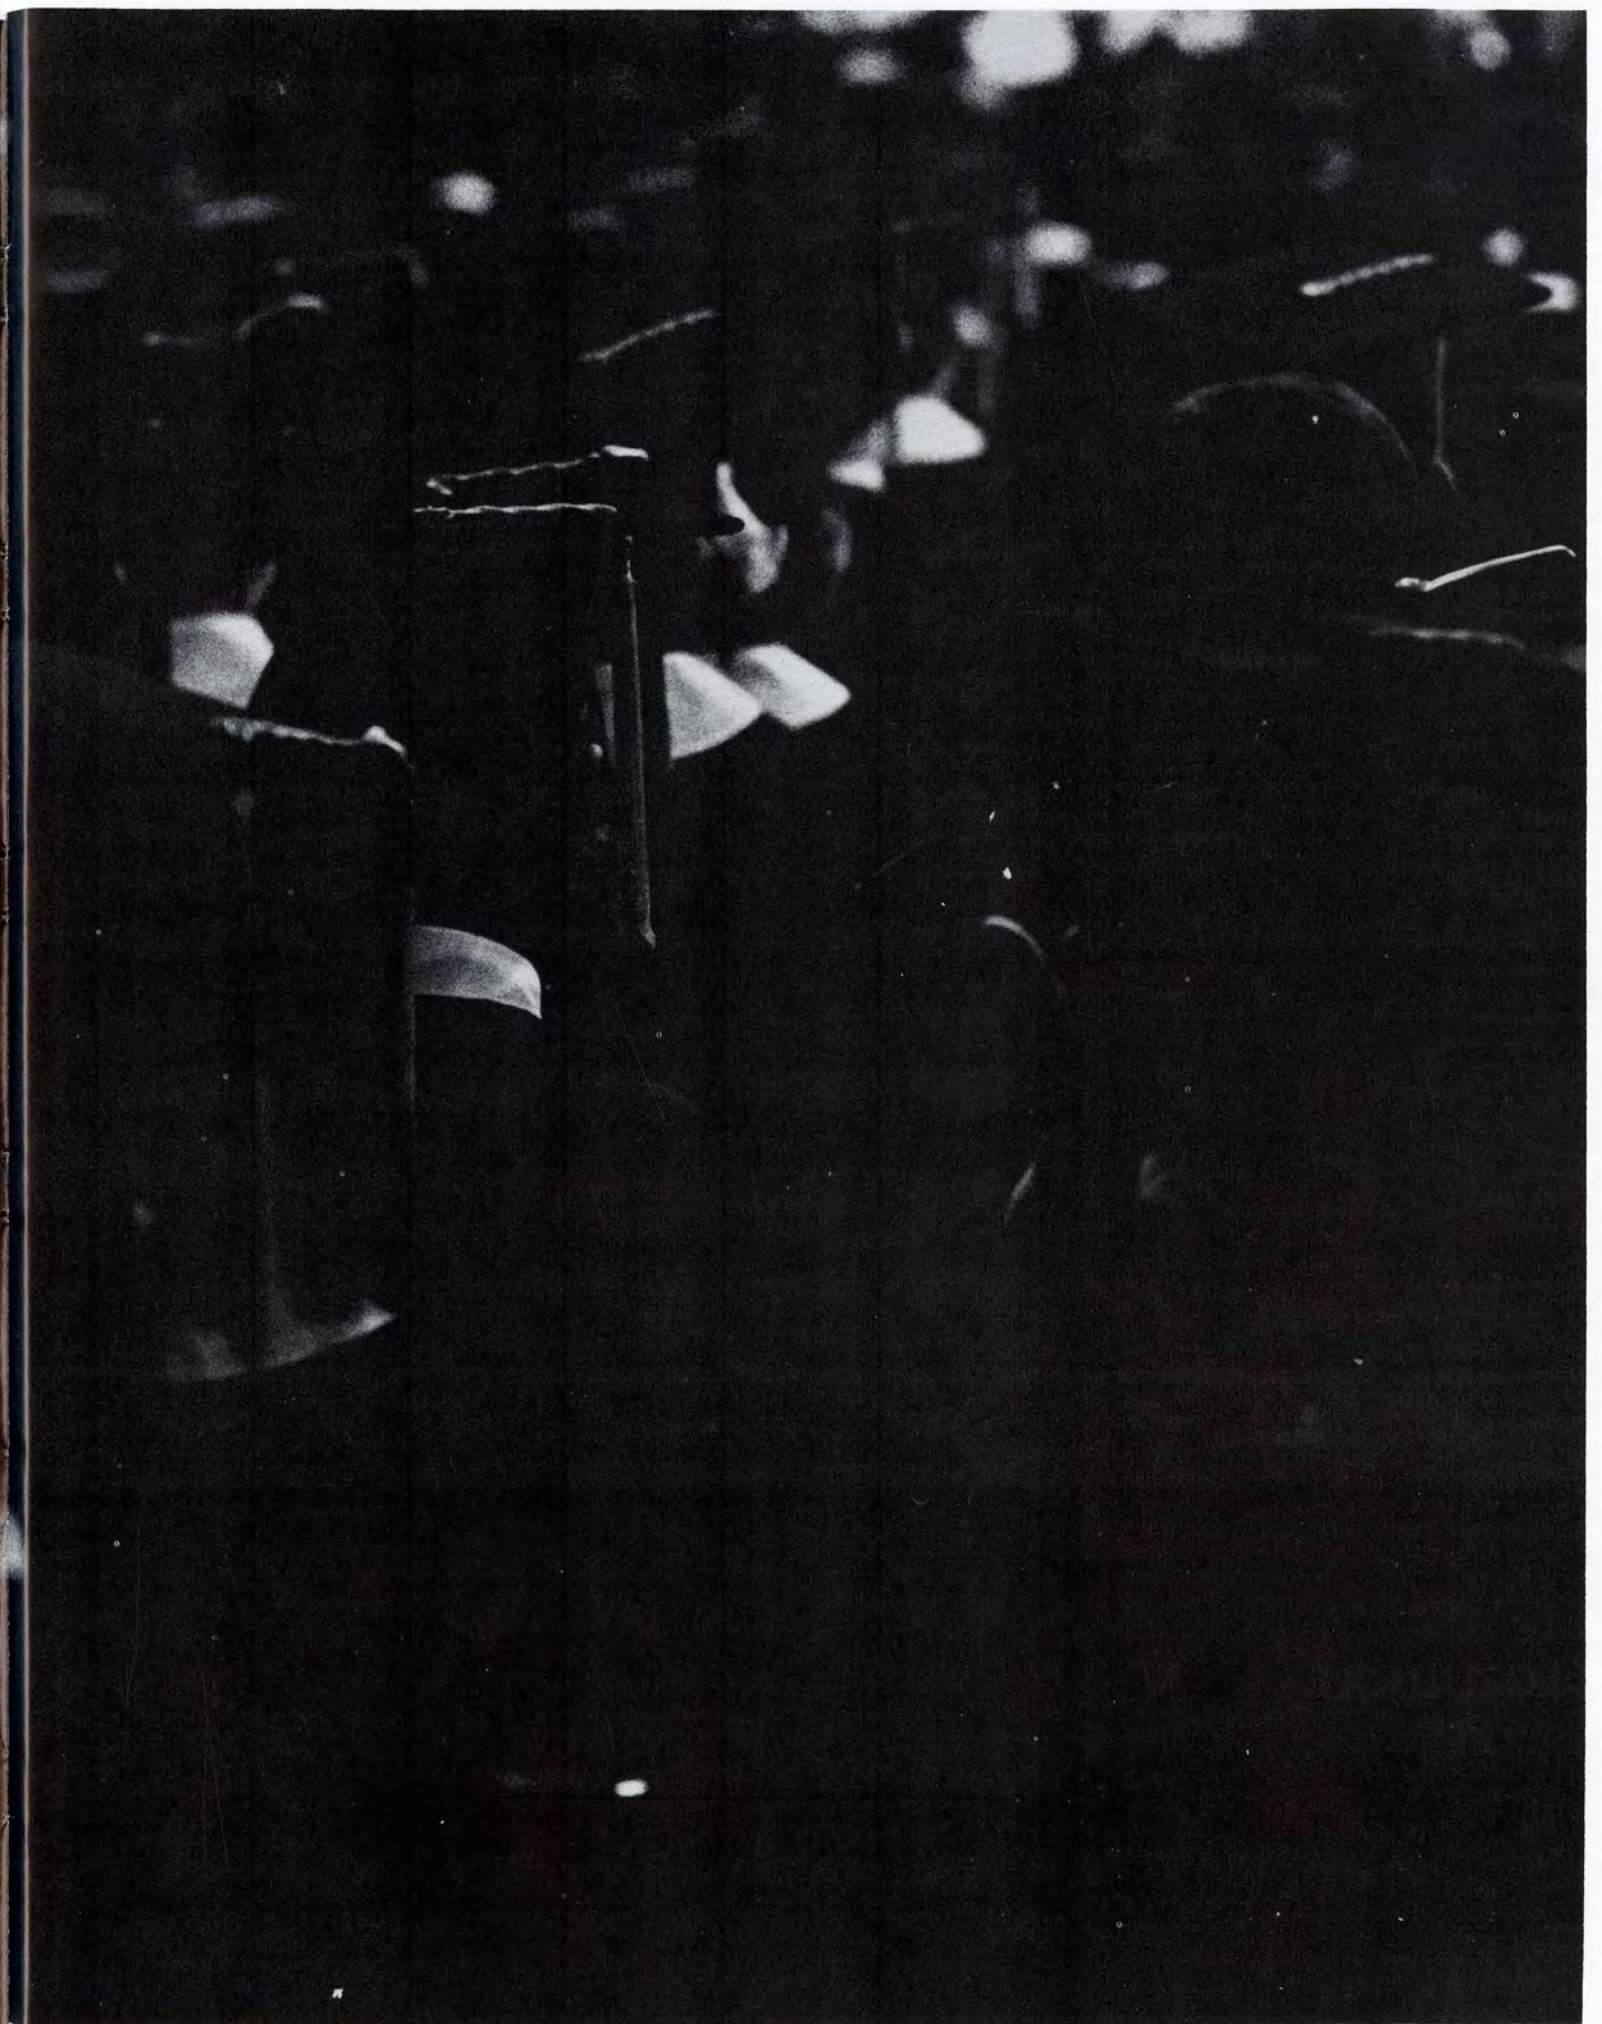

Four years,
that could have been a longer time;
four years.
It seems so short, Orton,
short indeed,
after the computers
have spat my GPA
and said,
"nice going, chum."
After all the parties, the lunches from the vending machines,
it seems a damned shame
to leave the fraternity.
But there will always be the Elks.
When will it all end,
Orton,
when will I begin to forget myself?

 This place might have been important had I turned instead of bent.

 You know,
Orton, we did you a favor digging you up again after all these years.

 We've made
it square with you again.
But what about the rest of them?
What about
Crystal Fondaw and Fred Sorg?

Can it be that after we have filled up all our slick pages;
after we have tossed in everything we see,
after we have run
to rush the whole thing
through our teeth;
can it be that after
we have put down all this spectacle
someone will forget?
(God, Orton, say it isn't so!)

I wonder how it was to stand outside of chapel in a blue serge suit for the first time and look down at a handkerchief
in your coat pocket;
or walk down
one long and isolated stretch of sidewalk without the sound
of hammers or machines.
I wonder
how it was to see the sky
so clear of buildings or of trees
when this place was so new so long ago.

I think it might be nice if both of us got together, one day in that great yearbook in the sky and talked about our times.

I know so much about you already (you and your ultra-modern angles).

What shall we talk about as we stare into our beer?

You might start by saying how things have really changed, you know,
the color separations,
double page spreads,
and dig that crazy cover
(Oh, you kid!),
Yes, and those 35mm jobs are really something else aren't they, Orton.
And these films are so much faster
now, . . .
and on
and on.
You'd try to relate with me;
find some common ground.

All of this has been so tame, standing here out back of Wilson Hall
with you, Orton.
It's all so nice,
to have you bending over me being like a father and all;
so nice to have you pat me on the head and say you understand what we are going through.

But now,
let's get one thing straight
you and I, Orton Hamby, let's nail just one thing
down tonight:
Both of us can see
and feel and taste
the time inside
your 1937 Shield, but you can't see
what's going on here.
You see, Orton, old boy,
the things that padded
your mind
when you were young were mustard gas and women's vote stretched through the words of Mencken and his Mercury.
In this decay
you learned to deal with what would stand before your camera's eye.
But I have learned inside the storm that falls around Acapulco Gold
and My Lai.
These are the words
that brace my mind
as I lean against a wall
and thumb through Time.

And so I've got these things to live with
I can look back and watch you, Orton Hamby, see your world, look inside your coloring book;
I can see you, and know who you are.
I can know by seeing what you did
and said.

But you can't see me, Orton,
the look goes just one way and that's toward you, Orton Hamby.

Too bad, isn't it Orton,
you thought you had it all tied down, just like I will when I step out of my two-car garage, walk into my $40,000 home and smell the tuna casserole.

Good-night, Orton Hamby, wherever you are.

"It's great at State."
