

Linfield College
DigitalCommons@Linfield

---

2011-12 Postcards

Postcards from Abroad

---

Spring 2011

A Moment in Ecuador

Rosa Gimson
Linfield College

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.linfield.edu/intl\_postcards\_1112

---

Recommended Citation

Gimson, Rosa, "A Moment in Ecuador" (2011). 2011-12 Postcards. Article. Submission 20.
https://digitalcommons.linfield.edu/intl\_postcards\_1112/20

This Article is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It is brought to you for free via open access, courtesy of DigitalCommons@Linfield, with permission from the rights-holder(s). Your use of this Article must comply with the Terms of Use for material posted in DigitalCommons@Linfield, or with other stated terms (such as a Creative Commons license) indicated in the record and/or on the work itself. For more information, or if you have questions about permitted uses, please contact digitalcommons@linfield.edu.

Postcard from Quito, Ecuador

Spring Semester 2011 This Moment in Ecuador

The ache that I feel knowing that this moment is passing. The surreality of my life here, laying in this bed, studying the painting that my host-mother has painted. I look around my room, the picture of my host-sister and her boyfriend smiling at me, my closet emptier than I'm used to, the mounds of books I thought I would be reading. And I look at myself, my body sprawled and exhausted from my Modern Dance class, my hair fried from days in the Ecuadorian sun. My phone buzzes and I look to find a text from my amigovio (friend+boyfriend in Spanish)...how do I respond to this message? He wants to go out tonight, a Monday, at 9 pm, and I have a test tomorrow. Plus, I don't quite know the protocol that my family wants in terms of going-out notice. As I think about what I want, I sniffle and my head pounds. Too many nights of going out with friends, exploring the city and surrounding areas, and learning how to salsa. I need rest.

My life here is unexplainable. A whirlwind of buses, long Spanish conversations, alone time, too much time with people, decisions about what to do, spur of the moment activities, traveling, breath taking beauty. I need it all to slow down. I continue to tell myself to take it one moment at a time, to soak it all up, but I feel that I as a sponge am leaving some liquid behind. How can I take in all of the adventure. From Mindo's cloud forests, to Banos' bridge jumping, to the indigenous market in Otavalo, to the time I was stranded at the Ecuador-Peru border. To the incredible warmth and security that my family has shown me. I am sure that I will not be able to take it all in. I am overwhelmed--knowing that I love every moment of this experience, knowing that I am blessed to be a part of this rich culture. I want every moment to continue forever so that I can walk along the cobble stones of Guapulo and examine every aspect of the graffiti on the ancient walls. I want time to pause when my bus stops just long enough for me watch a man walk on a tight-rope from two light poles in downtown Quito. So that I can understand what I'm seeing. So that I can laugh a little. So that I can truly appreciate the situation. I wish that the smell of bread from the bakery down my street, Mañosca, would always be just a few blocks away.

And then I think about a moment in which time did freeze. As my friends and I were driving away from Papallacta, a hot-springs resort outside of Quito, we stopped to look at the stars. In Quito it is utterly impossible to see a star because of the smog, but here they clutter my vision and throb as one giant, glittery amoeba. Surrounded by the Ecuadorian paramo I took a deep breath and looked skyward. At that moment I felt incredibly small, and accepted my life as certainly insignificant. I closed my eyes and thanked a higher power for this moment, and every moment after. And laying here in my bed, knowing that this moment is passing, it's okay because life will pass but I am here. Right now. In Ecuador. Living a reality that I could not have imagined. And so with this acceptance I pick up my phone and respond to my amigovio, "see you in 10 minutes!".

Rosa Gimson
Anthropology Major with Studio Art Minor
Universidad San Francisco de Quito, Ecuador