STUDENTS ESTABLISH INNOVATIVE PUBLIC SERVICE PROGRAMS

An innovative program run by and for Fordham students highlights a growing reemergence at the Law School of interest in, and a renewed sense of, the importance of public interest law.

Under the Fordham Student Sponsored Fellowships, Inc. (FSSF), second year students will be eligible for funds to augment their living expenses when they choose summer employment in public service.

"One of our primary objectives was to make sure that public interest jobs for second year students are economically feasible," reported Jay Sullivan, a third-year student who has spent the past year organizing the FSSF and is one of the program's three directors. "This is a student-sponsored, student-organized effort in a very important area. Also, we wanted to get every second-year student to think about public service and the need for some kind of commitment in this area, whether financial or otherwise."

The motivation for establishing FSSF, according to Mr. Sullivan, is the belief that there are responsibilities attached to membership in the legal profession. "As attorneys we have the potential to effect change in our community and the responsibility to do so," he said. "The purpose here, as in almost all public interest law, is to help represent the legal rights of those people who cannot for whatever reason represent themselves."

The fellowship program enables interested students to do exactly that, in jobs which, for many law students in the New York City area, are economically impossible. And it does so with funds donated by other students, usually those in summer associate positions at private firms, and with matching funds from many of the firms employing Fordham students. Shearman & Sterling, where Thomas Suozzi, a co-director, was employed last summer, has agreed to provide pro bono legal counsel for the program.

Lauren Sklar Peterson '89 (left) discusses the Fordham Student Sponsored Fellowship Program with co-director Jay Sullivan '89 as well as Martha Applebaum '89 and Felicia Rosenfeld '89, coordinators of the Fordham Pro Bono Program.

"We asked not just for a contribution," Mr. Sullivan said, in reference to himself and his co-directors, Lauren Sklar Peterson and Mr. Suozzi, "but for one day's wages. The idea is that they are spending a day of their summer working for public interest law." Mr. Sullivan said he expected pledges from students alone to have raised $10,000 by the end of September; these funds have come from approximately onethird of the second-year day class, or about 100 students. Students are exploring the possibility of obtaining school matching funds, possibly in the form of tuition reduction for participating students. A Proposal for a Loan Assistance Program, where the school would defer or defray the repayment of a student's loan in return for public service, will be examined by the faculty.

The response from the administration and faculty has been one of support and encouragement. In March of this year, Dean John Feerick appointed a faculty committee to consider the feasibility of the program and to offer suggestions and guidance to the students.

"We got a brochure together and sent one to all the faculty along with a copy of an article we had written for the school newspaper, asking them to talk it up in class," Mr. Sullivan recalled. "Professor Katsoris was helpful early on, offering much encouragement and asking a number of good questions." Professor Georgene Vairo is currently acting as the program's faculty advisor.

In choosing job sites for the program, which will send out its first participants this coming May, all governmental spots, including the district attorney's office and judicial clerkships, were eliminated. Also avoided were any specific religious or national organizations. The National Asso-

Letters

Dear Fellow Graduate:

It is a pleasure to welcome you to the first issue of our alumni newsletter, Fordham Lawyer, which will feature news of the Law School three times a year; news of our alumni, our faculty, and our students. This publication is made possible by dues paid by members of the Fordham Law Alumni Association, to which the School is greatly indebted.

The Fordham Lawyer is an excellent example of the fine leadership of Maureen Provost, our assistant dean for alumni affairs, and a dedicated group of alumni volunteers, whose names appear on the masthead. To them the School expresses its deep appreciation. They, I understand, were inspired in the creation of the newsletter by the ideals expressed by Ned Doyle '31, a pioneer in the field of communications. For that reason, we dedicated this issue to Ned Doyle and re-express to him our gratitude for his extraordinary support of our School.

We hope you enjoy Fordham Lawyer.

Sincerely,

JOHN D. FEERICK '61

Dear Alumni:

It is my privilege to introduce and welcome the arrival of the Fordham Lawyer. It is a service of the Fordham Law Alumni Association for its members and the Law School community. This newsletter will permit us to share the good news of our alumni and friends and keep us informed of developments at the Law School. We initially will publish three times a year: Fall, Winter and Spring.

Our alumni are staunch allies of the Law School. For example, our alumni and friends supported the School through their contributions to the Annual Fund to the tune of over a million dollars, an all-time record. This year nearly 3,200 alumni joined the Association and enjoy library privileges, the services of the Career Planning Center, and the rewards accompanying the participation in many school events.

Our forthcoming 1988 Alumni Directory, an update from the 1982 edition, will assist us in locating 10,330 colleagues across the country and will be received free of charge by all dues-paying members.

By the time you receive this, our Dean's Day will have taken place, and we will be looking forward to the Fordham Law Alumni Association Christmas Party on December 1 and the NYS Bar Luncheon on January 20. The popular Annual Luncheon will be on March 4 at the Waldorf-Astoria. Receptions are planned for groups and chapters across the country which will feature the Dean and faculty members.

The Association has established a task force to assist experienced attorneys in locating new employment. If you are interested in participating in this or any of our other programs, please return the response card in this newsletter.

I encourage you to be active in the Alumni Association. As you have heard me say, "It is good to be a Fordham Lawyer." We are on a winning team. Your participation is vital to the continuing efforts of the organization to promote the future growth of the Law School and maintain the preeminence of its graduates in the legal community.

Finally, let me publicly express the appreciation of our Association to Maureen Provost, our Assistant Dean for Alumni and External Affairs, who makes easy the lives of your Officers and Directors.

Sincerely,

JAMES E. TOLAN '62 President

STUDENT PUBLIC SERVICE PROGRAMS

ciation for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) was approved because of its service to people of so many races and nationalities. Approximately 25 agencies are listed with the fellowship and approval will be considered for "other similar organizations," Mr. Sullivan pointed out. Deadline for applications is the final day of the fall semester.

"This may sound corny but we are giving these students more than just money," Mr. Sullivan said. "There is, first of all, a sense of gratitude from your peers; they're the ones supporting your work. It's a way of saying "Yes, you're in public service and we appreciate it." The program is designed for students with a strong interest in public service. "We're looking only for those people who are interested in this kind of work from the start and we're going to give them enough money to live on so they can do it." As an attempt to ensure commitment, part of the application is an essay asking the student to explain how the public interest job is in keeping with their career plans.

GIFTS TO LAW ANNUAL FUND TOP MILLION DOLLAR MARK

With the success of its 1987-88 Annual Fund, the Fordham University School of Law joins a select group of institutions, those law schools which are able to raise more than $1 million in alumni and corporate gifts during a given year.

A total of $1,028,743.45 for the year ending June 30, makes Fordham one of only a dozen schools in the nation capable of mustering such alumni generosity and commitment. Similar numbers are expected for this year's drive as the campaign is off to a quick start, 15 percent to 20 percent ahead of last year's figures, according to Director of Law School Development James A. Campbell.

Guiding the Annual Fund over the past two years, and largely responsible for the success of the '87-'88 campaign, is James F. Gill '56, a partner in the firm of Robinson Silverman Pearce Aronshon & Berman. As National Chairman of the Fund. Mr. Gill has seen the overall size of alumni donations rise from $650,000 in 1985-86 to past the one million dollar mark this year, and the number of contributors move above 2,600, an increase of 900 from his first year. He believes the school can do even better.

"I feel deeply about my law school," Mr. Gill explained. "I believe the school is engaged in the very important business of producing bright young people who are interested in making the community a better place to live, in contributing to the general welfare, not just in making a living for themselves. The mission of the law school, as far as I'm concerned, is very important."

In reviewing statistics from the last campaign, Mr. Gill was impressed with the commitment of the school's most recent graduating classes, which recorded the highest percentage of participation in the Fund. "Again, it is a tribute to the kind of leadership and administration the school provides. Fordham happens to have one of the finest deans in the country in John Feerick—a high-minded, professional and inspirational man," Mr. Gill

"Our alumni know that every dollar will be well spent. It would be hard to find a more conscientious or concerned dean than John Feerick or a University President who is more supportive and understanding of this Law School and its importance than Father O'Hare. And the alumni know this," he said.

In looking to maintain the rising interest of alumni in the welfare of the law school, Mr. Campbell describes the goal for the current drive not in terms of dollars but in terms of people.

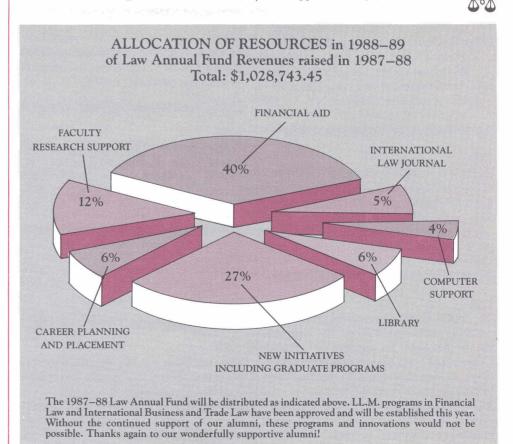

"Now that we have achieved, and are confident we can sustain, the million dollar level of giving," he said, "the goal for this year is participation, to get the rate of involvement by our alumni up to where it is for other schools, particularly the Ivys." Fordham's current participation rate is in the mid 20 percent range where most of the Ivy League and similar schools are in the high 30s and low 40s.

"For example, last year was the first year that the University of Pennsylvania's Law School raised $1 million, and that was with an alumni participation rate of more than 30 percent. We did the same thing with less than 28 percent. Now, if you took the number of alumni who contribute time and effort and added that to the number contributing to the Annual Fund. you would have a participation rate of 35-40 percent," he explained.

Mr. Campbell added, "I want people to get on board with their class, to get in the spirit, to get involved."

In a development program to be instituted this year, each firm or organization having a significant number of graduates will be asked to select an agent to coordinate and monitor giving to the Fund. This augments the work of the Annual Fund Committee, who are responsible for contacting classmates in regard to major contributions to the Fund.

According to the Law School Development Office, the goal of $1 million was based on the school's track record in this area over the past five years. "In that time we have gone from an Annual Fund of $288,000, with impressive gradations each year," the director reported. "If you look at the number of alumni we have and then at the percentage of those who contribute, the average gift from our donors is quite healthy." The average gift last year was approximately $395.

Faculty News

There are many new faces on the faculty. Visiting professors include: James Brook, who joins us from New York Law School. He is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School. He will be teaching Commercial Transactions and Law and Statistics. Mark Davies will be teaching New York Practice. He has been on the faculty of St. John's Law School and most recently was special consul to the New York State Commission on Government Integrity. He is a graduate of Columbia College and Law School. Steven Thel comes to us from the University of Mississippi Law School. He is a graduate of North Texas State University and Harvard Law School. He clerked for Hon. Albert J. Henderson of the US Court of Appeals. He will teach Contracts and Corporate Finance.

Other new faces this fall include 14 adjunct professors, 10 of whom will be teaching legal writing. Beverly Gross will teach a course in Public Employee Relations; Mindy Kirschman will lead a class in Real Estate Financing; and, Gordon Miller will explain the intricacies of Litigation.

- Professor Douglas Abrams recent article on RICO which appeared in the Fordham Urban Law Journal was cited extensively in a recent decision by the US Supreme Court. Professor Abrams is currently writing a treatise on Civil RICO for Little, Brown and Company.
- Professor Daniel Capra wrote sections on the Hearsay Rule for the second edition of "Evidence in America." He made three presentations at the two-day Best Evidence Seminar, sponsored by the American Bar Association's Section on Litigation
- Professor Mary Daly was interviewed on radio this summer concerning Supreme

- Court decisions on discrimination and first amendment rights. She also delivered a speech as part of the Stein Institute on Law and Ethics' celebration of the bicentennial of the Constitution. Her topic was "Remember the Ladies: A Feminist Critique of the Constitution."
- Earlier this year, Professor Carolyn Gentile delivered a paper titled "A Selective Review of the Supreme Court's Labor and Employment Law Cases Both Decided and Pending" at the 111th Annual Meeting of the New York State Bar Association, Labor and Employment Law Section. Professor Gentile is chairperson of the New York State Law Revision Commission.
- Professor Roger Goebel spoke at the New York University's Comparative Law Institute Conference on "Insider Trading Rules: The US Experience and EEC Proposals." At the American Society of International Law Annual Meeting, he delivered a speech on "Recent Developments in EEC Securities Law Harmonization."
- "A Prosecutor's Communications with Defendants: What Are the Limits?" is the title of an article by Professor Bruce Green published in the July—August issue of the Criminal Law Bulletin. Professor Green has also been working part-time as Associate Consul in the Office of Independent Counsel Lawrence Walsh, preparing and editing memoranda of law in connection with the pretrial motions in the Oliver North and other cases.
- Professor Barry Hawk, who has returned from a visiting professorship at the University of Michigan, was the editor of the 1987 Fordham Corporate Law Institute, North American and Common Market Antitrust and Trade Laws, and published "The American (Antitrust) Revolution: Lessons for the EEC?" in the European Competition Law Review. In 1988 Professor Hawk delivered lectures in London, Toronto, Florence, and Salonika.

- Professor Robert Kaczorowski has been asked by the Yale Law Journal to write a comment on the current US Supreme Court case, Patterson v. McLean Credit Union; it is to be published in November but was sent to the court prior to October oral argument. The title of his article is "The Enforcement Provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1866: A Legislative History in Light of Runyon v. McCrary." The Patterson case may reverse Runyon, which says that the Civil Rights Act of 1866 affords protection from private discrimination on the grounds of race.
- Professor Constantine Katsoris testified before the US House Subcommittee on Telecommunications & Finance on the issue of Securities Arbitration. His article "Securities Arbitration After McMahon" appears in the most recent issue of the Fordham Urban Law Journal.
- Professor Michael Malloy was the chairperson and a panelist for "Internationalization of the Securities Markets," at the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law, Washington, DC. Also, he published a two volume work, The Corporate Law of Banks: Regulation of Corporate and Securities Activities of Depository Institutions (Little, Brown and Company).
- "Evidence, Conflicts, and Civil Procedure" was the topic of a speech delivered by Professor Michael Martin to the American Law Institute-American Bar Association, Aspen, CO. He also spoke on evidence to the New York State Office of Court Administration's judges training seminars, Rochester, NY.
- Professor Georgene Vairo was appointed trustee for the Dalkon Shield Indemnification Trust. She was also appointed to the Federal Courts Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. Professor Vairo co-authored the New York State Bar Association's Report on the Abstention Doctrine.

ALUMNI INVOLVEMENT IN THE LAW SCHOOL

Alumni often ask us: "How can I be more involved and helpful to the Law School? I give to the Annual Fund and attend a few events each year, but I'd really like to do more."

The answer is that there are many ways in which alumni talents are needed: from one-on-one interaction with students, to panel discussions. The various options are described below and a card has been provided in your newsletter on which you may indicate your interest areas. Please return it to the Alumni Office at your earliest convenience. We look forward to working with you.

JOIN THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
Dues notices for the calendar year 1989
will be sent in November to all alumni.
There are many benefits to membership,
including use of the Law School Library and the Career Planning Center, and a complimentary copy of the 1988 Fordham Law Alumni Directory. This year we had extremely strong participation in the Alumni Association. It's a great way to show your support. The Alumni Association funds a scholarship, publishes this newsletter, and during the year undertakes service projects to assist the Law School.

CHAPTER ORGANIZATIONS Nearly 25% of 12,000 alumni live outside the New York metropolitan area. Groups of alumni in major cities have organized chapters and hold events. Help us organize an event in your area.

CLASS AGENTS Agents act as liaisons between the Law School and their classmates, encouraging attendance at events, organizing reunions, collecting information on the career developments of classmates for publication in the Amicus Briefs section of Fordham Lawyer.

DEVELOPMENT COMMITTEE Class agents which work with the Development Office to encourage giving to the Law School by classmates. Firm or organization agents work with graduates practicing in the same organization to increase participation in the Law Annual Fund.

CAREER ADVISORS The Career Planning Center maintains lists of alumni willing to be contacted by students seeking advice on a practice area, organization or geographic area. First year students are seeking to establish relationships among the alumni.

ALUMNI ADVISORS FOR MINOR-ITY STUDENTS Three minority student associations (AALSA, BLSA, and LALSA) are seeking minority graduates to act as career mentors for students.

SENIOR ALUMNI TASK FORCE In May, the Alumni Association established a Task Force to examine potential solutions to the difficulties faced by experienced attorneys seeking new positions after 20 years in practice. If you would be willing to assist us in this endeavor, by reviewing credentials, offering advice and leads, please let us know.

ALUMNI ADVISORY COMMITTEE TO THE CAREER PLANNING CENTER Advisors meet with the CPC staff, critique student performance in mock interviews and participate in many other activities.

LIST JOBS FOR STUDENTS, RECENT GRADUATES OR EXPERIENCED ATTORNEYS The Career Planning Center maintains two effective mechanisms for listing jobs: the Job Books for all student jobs and the Alumni Newsletter for experienced attorneys. Call (212) 841-5196 to be listed.

SUBSCRIBE TO THE ALUMNI JOBS NEWSLETTER More than 1400 listings were published in 1987–88 for alumni with experience. The cost is $30 per year for this valuable monthly publication.

CROWLEY GUILD The Crowley Labor and Employment Law Guild was established to promote the ideals of the late Dean Joseph R. Crowley and to study current and emerging issues in the field of labor and employment law through seminars and small group meetings. The Guild plans to publish a newsletter this year. Guild members are anxious to establish contacts with alumni practicing in this area.

CLINICAL PROGRAM SUPPORT The Class of 1988 was the first to have experienced the Law School's first inhouse live client clinical program. They have now organized an alumni affiliate group to support the development of the clinic and the students in the program. Litigators are invited to become involved in this worthy effort.

SUBSCRIBE TO THE STUDENT JOURNALS Our students publish a very strong set of scholarly yet practical journals each year. We've made it easier to subscribe: check the journal(s) in which you are interested and enclose check(s) made out to the specific publication for the proper amount as indicated below:

International Law
Journal $16/year; four issues
Law Review $30/year; six issues
Urban Law Journal $15/year; four issues

JUDGING MOOT COURT COMPETITIONS The student Moot Court Board runs a variety of intra- and interschool competitions each year which require a large volunteer force of judges. The Board will contact you regarding specific arrangements; the commitment of time is minimal (reading the bench brief and hearing arguments one afternoon or evening).

If you have any questions about these programs, please call us at (212) 841-5187.
