

Valparaiso University ValpoScholar

Symposium on Undergraduate Research and Creative Expression (SOURCE)

Office of Sponsored and Undergraduate Research

Spring 4-24-2013

Talking Business on Twitter

Murphy Maes

Valparaiso University, murphy.maes@valpo.edu

Alizabeth Taubert

Valparaiso University

Shea Hennessy

Valparaiso University

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholar.valpo.edu/cus>

Part of the Communication Commons

Recommended Citation

Maes, Murphy; Taubert, Alizabeth; and Hennessy, Shea, "Talking Business on Twitter" (2013). Symposium on Undergraduate Research and Creative Expression (SOURCE). 200.

<https://scholar.valpo.edu/cus/200>

This Oral Presentation is brought to you for free and open access by the Office of Sponsored and Undergraduate Research at ValpoScholar. It has been accepted for inclusion in Symposium on Undergraduate Research and Creative Expression (SOURCE) by an authorized administrator of ValpoScholar. For more information, please contact a ValpoScholar staff member at scholar@valpo.edu.

Talking Business on Twitter

Murphy Maes, Alizabeth Taubert, Shea Hennessy

Departmental Affiliation: Communication
College of Arts and Sciences

In 2013, creating healthy relationships with your publics is imperative for growth and maintaining already loyal constituents. Twitter has become a concise, yet direct way to communicate with your followers. There are five key findings on how Twitter affects organizations. Personal dialogue is key; it makes the followers feel more personable and more likely to engage in conversation. The digital media age is a world in which most information we receive is through internet and social media vehicles. With Twitter, communicating with the public while gaining visible exposure is quite simple. “In reality, few organizations reach a high level of interactivity. Few websites go beyond providing content for constituents and providing a mechanism for feedback.” In order to find data, the website instituteforpr.org is used. This site shares case studies on how people use Twitter for their organizations. Through the four-week study and observing other opinions regarding the power of the internet, using Twitter can boost your public reputation as well as bring in growth. In conclusion, we hope to share information on how organizations can make their organization better by “Talking Business on Twitter.”

Information about the Authors:

All three of the authors are second semester juniors in the Department of Communication. Murphy Maes and Alizabeth Taubert both have an academic focus in the PR field while Shea Hennessy is studying general communication and photography. Each of them is driven to be a part of the modern media and communication industry by shaping their experience through positive outlets of knowledge. Throughout their academic career, they have witnessed digital age shifts while adapting to them in real time.

Faculty Sponsor: Dr. Bonita Neff

Student Contact: murphy.maes@valpo.edu