About Kurt Weill

Berlin to Broadway with Kurt Weill, this evening's musical voyage, is also the personal voyage of Kurt Weill, as expressed in his songs and musical works.

Considered by major critics and vast numbers of the world's music lovers as the greatest theatre composer of this century, Kurt Weill has written melodies and music with the finest array of lyricists and poets ever to write for the theatre of the Western World, including Bertolt Brecht, Maxwell Anderson, Paul Green, Langston Hughes, Ira Gershwin, Ogden Nash, Alan Jay Lerner and others. Through his art and theirs, the journey, encompassing 36 songs, gives us a panorama of twenty extraordinary years—from von Hindenburg and Hitler in the Germany where Weill was born, to Roosevelt and Truman in the America to which Weill emigrated. A musical spectacle blending calvacade and cabaret, commentary and tin-pan-alley, Berlin to Broadway with Kurt Weill inevitably becomes a tribute to theatre itself, an entertainment in salute to show business.

Kurt Weill—son of a cantor—was born March 2, 1900, in Dessau, Germany, of German-Jewish heritage traceable to the thirteenth century. His talents as composer were recognized throughout Germany by the time he was twenty-five. Both because his art was in open collision with Nazi ideology and because of his Jewish origins, he was forced to flee overnight from Berlin in March, 1933. His scores were publicly burned in front of the State Opera house, his music forever banned by the Third Reich. Together with his wife, Lotte Lenya, the pre-eminent interpreter of his songs, Weill escaped to France, where he and Miss Lenya remained for two years. In 1935, at the invitation of Director Max Reinhardt, who had come to America to escape the Nazi grip, Weill and Miss Lenya came to live in the United States. The composer never again set foot in his native Germany. He spent the remaining fifteen years of his life in his newly-adopted country, making a musical contribution to the American theatre few have rivaled. He died in New York at the age of fifty on April 3, 1950.

MSU Series for the Performing Arts

PLANNING AN EXCITING SEASON FOR YOU IN 1984-85

Moorhead State University's loyal patrons helped us break season attendance records again last year, and we hope to bring you another series of world-class performances this fall.

THE NEW DANCE ENSEMBLE

Our regional artist showcase this year features the Twin Cities' most dynamic and versatile modern dance repertory company. The critic for the NY Times called the Ensemble "A fresh breeze from Minneapolis..."

CANADA'S ROYAL WINNIPEG BALLET, with Orchestra

January 19

Returning for a third consecutive season by popular demand, the RWB is Canada's oldest ballet company, one of the longest established in North America. The company has an international reputation, having played to audiences in more than 25 countries.

CELEBRATE THE BIRTHDAYS OF BACH AND HANDEL WITH ARS MUSICA, THE BAROQUE ORCHESTRA

February 5

This orchestra of thirteen musicians brings new life to the orchestral works of Bach and Handel. Performing with rare period instruments, these musicians are changing the way we listen to classical music.

THE OLD VIC, FROM LONDON TO YOU

March 12 & 13

Particularly renowned for its productions of plays by William Shakespeare, the Old Vic lists almost all England's greatest actors including John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson, and Alec Guinness. Performances will include King Lear and Thomas Middleton's Women Beware Women.

EUGENIA ZUCKERMAN

May 5

"The amazing renaissance woman of the music world," Eugenia Zuckerman, flutist, is in great demand throughout North America and Europe. She appears regularly as soloist with major orchestras and is a prominent figure in chamber music ensembles. (This event is presented in cooperation with the Town Hall Lecture Series, featuring a lecture from Ms. Zuckerman.)

Become a season subscriber to the Series this year — you'll enjoy the best seating at the best possible price. If you are on the Straw Hat mailing list, you will receive our color brochure later this summer.
