

Clinton follows historic route to White House

by Alane Tempchin
senior writer

CHARLOTTESVILLE, CULPEPER — President-elect William Jefferson Clinton made a symbolic bus tour of historical Charlottesville and Culpeper yesterday on his way to the White House.

In a short speech at Monticello, Thomas Jefferson's mountaintop home, Clinton said Jefferson embodied many of the ideals of the presidency.

"I think the most important thing that Jefferson embodied was the idea that people could solve problems and do better," Clinton said.

"Jefferson's great contribution in my mind was his absolute unshakeable conviction that if you could secure political freedom, that is if you could not be oppressed from the outside, then on the inside you could pursue your own personal freedom of thought, any problem could be solved — that progress could be made — that life could be interesting and fun and rich and full."

After Bill and Hillary Clinton and Vice President-elect Al Gore and his wife Tipper toured Monticello, Clinton remarked that it was Jefferson's "power of ideas that made this country great."

Edward Wong, a junior at the University of Virginia, saw a connection between the two men. "Thomas Jefferson, in my opinion is the democratic founder of our country . . . Clinton's intention is to bring back Jefferson's democratic vision."

After the tour of the grounds Clinton and Gore answered questions from students who had won The Washington Post essay contest, in which they wrote letters to the president voicing their concerns.

Questions and answers covered such topics as community service, crime, education, families, public service and the lack of employment opportunities in the United States.

Tickets to this event were limited. According to The Richmond-Times Dispatch, only about 2,300 people and 750 school children were allowed into Monticello.

A crowd also gathered at the Omni Hotel to greet Clinton as he left for Culpeper.

Veronica Gunn, a UVa student, began her wait for Clinton outside the Omni at 5:30 a.m.

"I stood outside half-frozen, but I saw what I came to see," Grimm said. "It was worth the wait."

The Clintons and Gores then moved on for a Baptist church service in Culpeper, meeting crowds of supporters and protesters.

U.S., Iraq continue to skirmish; Clinton faces tough choices

by Christy Mumford
senior writer

The United States hit an apparent nuclear research plant 13 miles south of Baghdad yesterday with a series of Tomahawk Cruise missiles, escalating tensions in the last days of the Bush administration.

This latest scuffle leaves President-elect Bill Clinton facing a simple dilemma, according to JMU history Professor Caroline Marshall — "Either get Saddam or get out of Iraq."

Since Wednesday, when the United States made the first strike against Iraq since the Persian Gulf War, the United States and Iraq have been engaged in a game of "cat and mouse," said Dr. Anthony Eksterowicz, assistant professor of political science.

Iraq has repeatedly violated the U.N.'s designated "no-fly zones" over northern and southern Iraq, positioning anti-aircraft missiles in those areas and using radar to lock onto U.S. aircraft.

Bush has responded with several air strikes and missile attacks, including one early Sunday morning when a U.S. Air Force plane shot down an Iraqi jet in the northern no-fly zone.

U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said in a televised news conference Sunday that Hussein has engaged in "a pattern of behavior in the last few hours . . . that indicates he is determined to cause a confrontation in the last few days of the Bush administration."

Bush essentially will be leaving Clinton with some of the most difficult decisions he might make as president, Eksterowicz said.

"Last week [Clinton] tried to hold out an olive

"We wanted one last bus trip before we took office because our bus was our way of saying to the people of America, we want you to be in control," Clinton said. "We don't want to be out of touch with you . . . We want you to believe that this is your government just as much as it is your country."

In a symbolic gesture, Clinton loosely traced Thomas Jefferson's 1801 journey by traveling U.S. Route 29 to Interstate 66.

"I like the effort that they are making to unite people," Kathleen Ervin, an administrator at the Charlottesville Legal Aid Society, said. Along U.S. Route 29 small crowds gathered intermittently to wave and show support for Clinton as his "buscapade" passed.

P.J. Ryan, an emergency services supervisor, invited about 40 friends to her home near the church for a party to celebrate Clinton's arrival. "It's a fun thing to celebrate. How many times does the president come to visit? Not many."

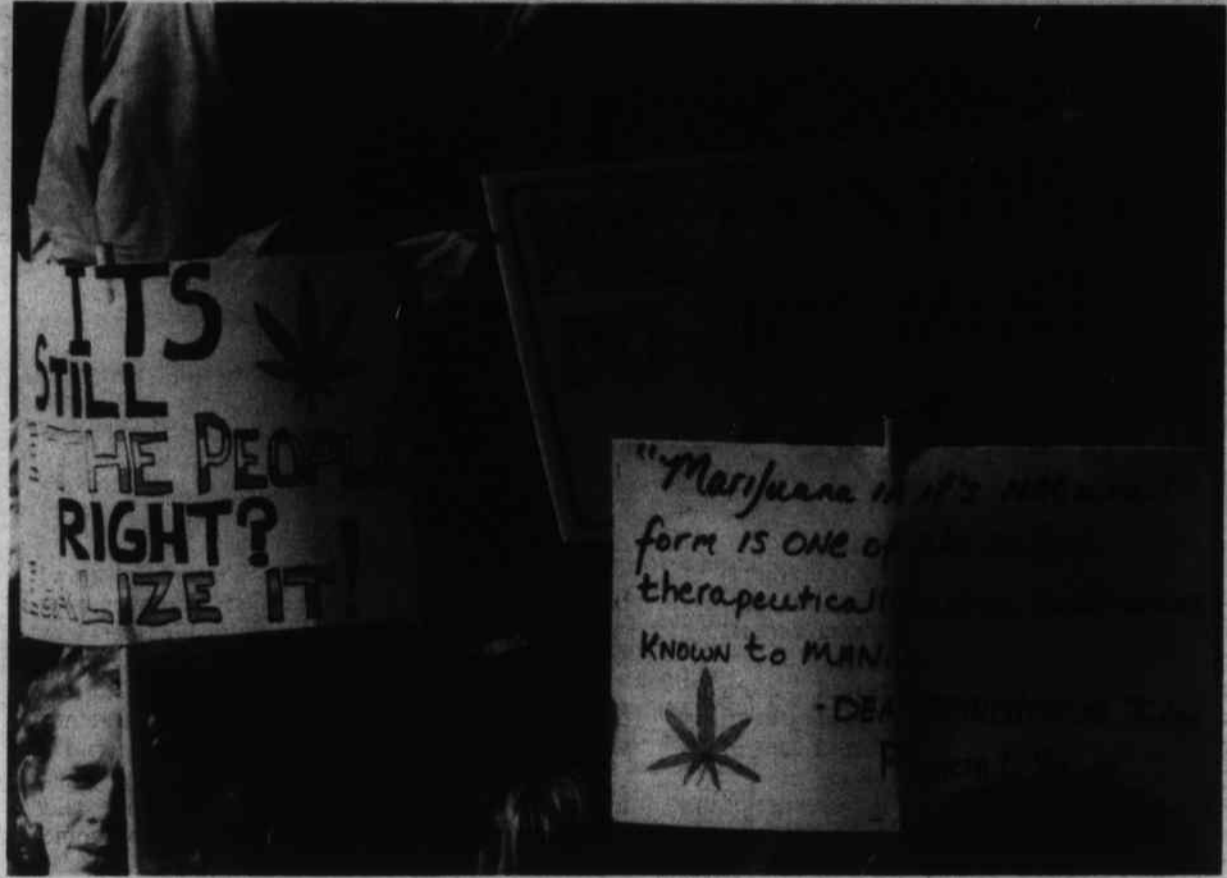

Various groups also used the day to draw attention to their causes by waving posters in the crowds.

Demonstrators, atypical for the town of about 10,000 people, also lined the streets. Andrew Dickens, a UVa student, held a sign that read "Mr. Clinton, Do not mock God."

He said, "I feel he hasn't shown a commitment to Christ. We see him going to church, but his actions show it hasn't any effect on his heart."

After the Clintons and the Gores left the church they went through the streets shaking hands.

Then the president-elect and the entourage boarded buses to Washington for more ceremonies leading up to Wednesday's inauguration.

branch, saying if Hussein changed his behavior that maybe they could talk, but the press called him on it and he backed off.

"He can't risk being called a wimp by those who support Bush's position.

"But I don't see how this policy can continue," he said.

Eksterowicz said that Clinton has few options. "He can do what he said before and offer to talk, but at this point he'll probably just continue what Bush has done with these conservative air attacks."

He also said that Clinton might be planning to concentrate on the underground forces opposed to Hussein, offering economic aid to help them topple the current government.

Marshall and Eksterowicz agreed that Clinton, as Bush did, might hope to make life so intolerable for the Iraqi people through these attacks and economic sanctions that they overthrow Hussein and his guard.

"It's unbelievable the amount of punishment these people have taken," Eksterowicz said. "The capability for an uprising is just not there" now.

He said that he doesn't know what Hussein hopes that his actions are calculated and predictable.

"In this case he seems to be trying to improve his situation in the Kurdish zone in the north and the Shia zone in the south that the U.N. has called off-limits to him.

"He believes that during this transition period he will have more leeway."

Eksterowicz agreed that Bush seems cautious about escalating the strikes in the last days of his presidency. He said that he doubts Bush would want to become involved in a full-scale war at this point.

Both professors said that Iraqi and U.N. forces are likely to continue these small skirmishes until Clinton makes a major change in policy.

Hussein is "hoping to grab what he can get," Marshall said. "Ultimately, he won't be successful but he considers himself winning as long as he stays in power."

The situation will continue until the American, British and French forces decide that "the situation is so unacceptable and they decide to do something quite serious — which is to once and for all end his regime," she said.

to gain by these actions, other than to make the United States the enemy in Iraq to divert his people's negative feelings toward the government.

But Marshall said that while some experts are confused by Hussein's recent aggression, she thinks

"To the press alone, chequered as it is with abuses, the world is indebted for all the triumphs which have been gained by reason and humanity over error and oppression."

Keg laws force student party changes

by Sara Hammel
staff writer

A new ABC law has made students balk at buying kegs.

The law, enacted Jan. 13, requires anyone who buys a keg to sign a statement that no one under 21 will drink from the keg — that means the keg buyer can be prosecuted for providing alcohol to minors if anyone underage drinks from that keg.

Stores must also obtain the name and address of the purchaser, the type and number of the purchaser's identification and information stating where and when the keg will be consumed.

Junior Erik Larsen, president of Sigma Pi fraternity, said that because of the liability involved with the new law his fraternity served cans at its party Friday night.

"We went out and got cans, mostly because of the risk," Larsen said.

But he said he wasn't sure how fraternities would react to the new law in the long run.

"I don't think all the fraternities are quite sure [how they're going to handle it] . . . but I don't see kegs being here that much longer," Larsen said.

"We [Sigma Pi] are going to meet on Monday and discuss it some more."

But according to senior Chi Phi member Matt Solomon, fraternities are liable whether people are drinking from kegs or from cans.

"We've always been really careful," Solomon said. "As it is, we don't even let people into the party room if they look like they've been drinking too much . . . so we're going to try it out for awhile and see how it goes."

Solomon said Chi Phi had kegs at a party Friday night, and he said there were "no problems."

From the Interfraternity Council's point of view, both Chi Phi and Sigma Pi's methods of serving beer are acceptable for now, according to IFC president Mike Waite.

"We got permission from the university to use cans this weekend, for those fraternities that were not willing to sign for kegs due to liability," Waite said.

But he said the IFC is currently "exploring" ways to deal with the new law in the future. Waite said things will probably change ". . . whenever we come up with a policy we find fit . . . and that the University's willing to accept."

The issue of risk will also be a big factor for off-campus students, according to Senior Jayne Forrar.

"We're just going to have to be careful . . . and make sure everyone at our parties are people we know and trust," Forrar said.

Senior David Whitten said that's easier said than done.

Because of the new law, "You make whoever's throwing the party the mother of all the people at the party," Whitten said. "You can't monitor everyone at your party after they leave — it makes everyone who has a party responsible for the entire world."

The law also has affected local retailers like Mike's Food Mart on South Main Street.

Mike Mehta, co-owner, said students provide a lot of business, and he's already noticing a difference in keg purchases because of the new law.

Mehta said a student came into the store Friday and filled out the registration form to buy a keg. But when it came down to actually signing for liability, Mehta said, "He wouldn't sign . . . he didn't even buy the keg," Mehta said. "It is affecting the students big time."

Steve Daniel, store manager of Superfresh on Main Street, also sees a change in students' buying habits.

"We're not selling as many kegs now, but people are buying canned and bottled beer."

Daniel said the total beer sales aren't slowing down. He said students have been coming in to ask about the law, but when they're told they have to sign for liability, they opt to buy cans instead.

Many seniors sign petitions to oppose commencement plans

by Brian Zarahn
staff writer

Although the JMU administration insists that the new plans for May commencement are a done deal, four dissatisfied seniors have been circulating petitions to bring back the traditional ceremony.

After hearing about the change senior Tiffany Gobbi and senior Marie Buntua gathered 216 signatures on a petition stating their objections and sent it to JMU President Ronald Carrier.

"We want the traditional format," Buntua said. "We want to graduate with our friends. We've been here four years and we'd like to graduate together."

May commencement plans call for an opening ceremony for all graduates and parents, where the conferring of degrees will take place, followed by satellite ceremonies across campus where individual recognition is to take place.

Besides disagreeing with the satellite ceremonies, Gobbi and Buntua said other problems could come up for parents and students.

Some parents may have two children graduating, elderly and disabled people may have difficulty getting to the various satellite sites, the length of the ceremony may be increased and some students are dissatisfied about the location of their satellite graduation.

But Dr. Bethany Oberst, vice president for academic affairs, said the administration has listened to students and taken all of these potential problems into consideration.

"We took four months to hear students' opinions," Oberst said.

She said the ceremony will be improved through increasing individual recognition by giving out degrees in smaller groups and presenting departmental awards without increasing the time.

The issue of elderly and handicapped people getting to the different sites is being worked out, she said.

"We're looking at avenues for transportation and where we can put wheelchairs."

Oberst also said that the committee formed to work on commencement is looking into televising the main ceremony at the satellite locations, so that the elderly and handicapped don't have to move around.

"We're thinking that people are just going to one ceremony — either the satellite or the main ceremony," she said.

Senior Tammy Rinehart and senior Jodi Yingling also started a petition stating basically the same complaints. They collected 161 signatures.

"I think I've earned a graduation I can be proud of," Rinehart said. "I am not happy about this one."

Although Rinehart stated her grievances to the Student Government Association at the Dec. 8 meeting, she said she doesn't believe the SGA will act.

SGA acknowledges apparent illegal session in meeting

by Nicole Motley
SGA reporter

The Student Government Association discussed the apparently illegal executive session held Dec. 8 and announced the legal requirements necessary for such a session.

Administrative Vice President Scott Surovell said that according to the Virginia Freedom of Information Act, the senate can enter a closed session to discuss personnel issues, legal issues or protection of privacy.

Also according to the FOIA, an illegal executive meeting must be re-held in an open session.

President Danny Cruce would not comment on whether or not the SGA will re-hold the meeting.

Surovell said the senate must take a public vote to go into executive session, and the motion and reason for the session must be entered into the minutes.

But no motions can be made or bills introduced during the closed session, he said.

Resolutions discussed in executive session can only be binding once voted on in an open session, Surovell said.

"This is for your information so [an illegal session] won't ever happen again," he added.

The illegal executive session held last semester failed to follow these procedures because no one gave a reason for going into the session, more than one issue was introduced and no vote was taken on resolutions discussed in the session.

Also at the meeting:

- Secretary Laura McClintock discussed the United States Student Association's position on President-elect Bill Clinton's National Service Trust Fund.

Events honor Martin Luther King Jr.

Today's sixth annual university-wide celebration includes march, speaker

by Susan Edwards
staff writer

Weeks of planning will come to fruition today as university-wide activities commemorate the life and accomplishments of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

"We want people to talk about what Martin Luther King Jr. means to them or the initial feeling that comes to them when they think about Dr.

"Everyone's got some strong feelings about the civil rights issues and Dr. King's teachings."

King," said Michael Booker, a member of the Martin Luther King Jr. Celebration Committee.

The activities for the sixth annual celebration will begin with a unity march at 11:45 a.m. Students, faculty and staff are invited to participate.

The march will begin in front of the Music Building and will end at the Warren Campus Center. Immediately after the march, a speak-out will be held in Grafton-Stovall Theatre.

"Everyone's got some strong feelings about the civil rights issues and Dr. King's teachings," Booker said. "It's good to be able to say what you think about how Dr. King changed things and made things better for everyone."

During the speak-out, the youth outreach subcommittee will name the winners of a contest that challenged elementary and middle school students to express their views about King through essays and artistic pieces, said senior Melvin Brown, co-chair of the group.

"We feel it's very important that [the youth outreach subcommittee] functions as it should because youth don't really get a grasp of what Dr. King was fighting for," Brown said.

"The things that our parents fought for are the things that we're enjoying now. It's important for the youth to realize this."

The celebration will conclude with a formal program and reception. The service, which will be held at 7 p.m. in Wilson Hall, includes musical interludes, a candle lighting ceremony, the presentation of community service awards and a keynote speech by professional orator Patricia Russell-McCloud.

Freshman Kelly Cherry first heard Russell-McCloud speak at the Black Student Leadership Development Conference sponsored by the College of William and Mary on January 7-9.

"[Russell-McCloud] had energy and conveyed a very positive message that kept my attention," Cherry said. "I look forward to hearing her again and I think everyone should come out and hear her."

Senior Thomas Rivers, another conference participant and the co-chair of the King Celebration Committee, was also impressed by Russell-McCloud's abilities.

"Her type of speech makes you want to stand up on your seat and listen," he said. "If I could use one word to describe her . . . she's dynamic."

Rivers added that he hopes students will attend the program so that they can acquire a greater appreciation for King, especially because he worked for the benefit of all races.

"King represents a freeing of our people from the shackles of society," Brown said. "The celebration gives [blacks] a sense of self. It gives [whites] some knowledge about where we come from and who we are."

According to Byron Bullock, the assistant to the associate vice president for student affairs, JMU used to have a smaller-scale King celebration that preceded the annual event that now takes place.

"The first university-wide celebration was six years ago," he said. "Prior to that it had been an activity that was sponsored by Alpha Phi Alpha."

"When we began the [annual] program . . . we got tremendous support from Dr. Carrier and the administration."

"We continue to get university-wide support and there has been a real increase in the numbers of people from the greater Harrisonburg community that participate in the program."

POLICE LOG

by Jonathan Rhudy
police reporter

Campus police reported the following:

Vehicle Accident

• Two non-students were taken to Rockingham Memorial Hospital with injuries after their vehicle reportedly crashed into a retaining wall on Interstate 81 near the west portal of the JMU tunnel at 6:27 a.m. Jan. 13.

The one-vehicle accident occurred when a south-bound Cadillac became airborne about 1,000 feet north of the tunnel.

The Cadillac then reportedly crashed through an interstate fence and hit the retaining wall. A JMU light post was torn down. State and JMU police investigated the accident.

No other information about the two injured persons was available.

Breach of Peace

• Students Aron W. Rooze, 20, of Alexandria and Timothy D. Heath, 21, of Gloucester Point, were served warrants on Dec. 14 on charges of breaching the peace on Dec. 12 at the Sigma Pi and Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity houses.

The warrants stemmed from an alleged fight that reportedly started as an argument over broken glass in the Sigma Pi corridor at 1:49 a.m.

The fight, apparently involving about 50 intoxicated individuals, was broken up by three JMU and three Harrisonburg police units.

Many injuries occurred as a result of the fight, according to campus police, but only one student was taken to Rockingham Memorial Hospital for treatment of a cut foot.

Dangerous Practices

• Four students were charged judicially with throwing snowballs at pedestrians from the deck of the Warren Campus Center at 12:50 p.m. Dec. 10.

Alcohol Poisoning

• An individual was taken from Chandler Hall to Rockingham Memorial Hospital at 12:40 a.m. Dec. 13 to be treated for apparent alcohol poisoning.

• An individual was taken from Chandler Hall to Rockingham Memorial Hospital at 8:15 p.m. Dec. 13 to be treated for apparent alcohol poisoning and an allergic reaction.

The person reportedly became violent and later was hospitalized.

Suspicious Person

• A suspicious person was reported sleeping on the third floor of Maury Hall at 6:42 a.m. Dec. 16.

Housekeepers described the subject as a tall white male with light brown hair and a mustache.

The subject, described as wearing a white striped shirt and blue jeans and carrying a motorcycle helmet, left before police arrived.

• A student was judicially referred after housekeepers discovered him sleeping in the basement of Johnston Hall at 6:40 a.m. Jan. 12.

Officers located the student after he left the building. He reportedly told police he had been at a fraternity party and that he was on the way to his apartment. The student said he took shelter in Johnston and fell asleep.

Trespassing

• Eleven students were judicially charged in the Kappa Sigma fraternity house at 9:09 a.m. Dec. 19.

The 11 students and their four non-student guests remained in the fraternity house past the deadline for leaving for winter vacation.

The students reportedly ignored requests to leave the building and argued with police. The 15 people finally left at 10 a.m.

Police also sighted numerous fire code violations such as obstructions in corridors and miscellaneous debris.

• Non-student Jason R. Pifer, 18, of Timberville, was arrested and charged with trespassing in X-lot on Duke Drive at 11:40 p.m. Dec. 23.

Pifer reportedly was on the JMU trespassing list. Police arrested him after reportedly seeing him ride a bicycle on campus.

Police suspected Pifer was riding a stolen bicycle. The bicycle was later discovered to belong to a student and was bought from a local retailer.

Additional information was withheld until an ongoing investigation is complete.

Fireworks

• Police searched a student's room in Ikenberry Hall for fireworks at 6:15 p.m. Jan. 12.

The hall staff called campus police. The student consented to a search of the room, which proved negative.

Destruction of Public Property

• An unknown person reportedly destroyed a window on the north side of Anthony-Seeger Hall with a snowball at 10:21 a.m. Dec. 13. The 14-inch by 30-inch window is valued at $25.

• An unknown person reportedly vandalized a vending machine in Shorts Hall between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. Dec. 13. Items totaling about $60 were reported stolen from the machine.

• An unknown person broke the glass panel light in the main entrance of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity house at 10:19 a.m. Dec. 29.

The officer then checked inside the house for damage or entry and found a resident's room door kicked in. Police are still investigating.

• A vending machine was found face down on the floor in the basement of Ashby Hall at 5:22 a.m. Jan. 2. Police reportedly discovered the machine while investigating an automatic fire alarm. It could not be determined whether money or products were taken from the machine.

• The Alpha Sigma Tau sorority and Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity photo composites were stolen and later recovered by police at 3:22 a.m. Jan. 11.

An officer observed two subjects carrying large objects in front of the sorority house. He called to them, but the two dropped the composites and fled into the house.

The officer followed the subjects, but lost them. Police returned the composites.

• Unknown persons reportedly ripped the sink out of a bathroom in Hanson Hall between 11 p.m. Jan. 12 and 1:57 p.m. Jan. 13.

Police are investigating the incident.

Destruction of Private Property

• An unknown person reportedly carved the letter "U" on the trunk lid of a car in Z-lot between 5 p.m. Dec. 9 and 3:30 p.m. Dec. 14.

• An unknown person reportedly broke the back window of a pickup truck in X-lot between 3 p.m. Dec. 11 and 8 a.m. Dec. 17.

The tailgate was put down on the truck. Nothing was missing from the truck.

• Door handles on two vehicles in M-lot were reportedly broken off between 2:30 a.m. and 5 a.m. Jan. 6.

No entry was gained to either vehicle.

• A wiper blade was reportedly bent on a vehicle in F-lot between 11 p.m. Jan. 10 and 9:30 a.m. Jan. 11.

Tampering with a Motor Vehicle

• Unknown persons reportedly tried to move a Cushman delivery vehicle from Media Resources in Carrier Library between 5 p.m. Dec. 17 and 8 a.m. Dec. 18.

The vehicle reportedly was pushed halfway up the service ramp and abandoned.

Grand Larceny

• A gray nylon suitcase was reported stolen from the hallway outside a student's room in the Sigma Kappa sorority house at 4:35 p.m. Dec. 9.

The suitcase, which reportedly contained all summer clothing, is valued at $300-$400.

• A men's Schwinn Paramount 27-inch bicycle was reported stolen from the Burruss Hall parking lot at 9:10 p.m. Dec. 9.

"I haven't had any luck with that at all," she said. "The problem I've been running into is that [the members of the SGA] feel strong pressure from the administration not to be involved because it was very much an administrative decision."

Legislative Vice-President Nelly Nguyen said the SGA will address Rinehart's complaint at tomorrow's meeting.

All four seniors also said the administration is ignoring student opinion on the subject.

"They want this change, they know it's going to be protested," Gobbi said, "but they're going to do it if we want it or not."

Buntua said, "It doesn't seem like our opinion makes a difference," adding that the majority of the students who voted in a survey, which was distributed to seniors in September, wanted to keep the traditional ceremony.

But Julia Tock, the senior class president, said that only 18 percent of the surveys were returned and of those, only 54 percent were against the change in commencement and that "the rest were strongly for it."

Gobbi objected to the nature of the student survey. "I feel it was kind of sneaky," she said. "What they sent us wasn't like a vote. It was like a poll. It's pretty sad they sent it to seniors only, because it will affect everybody."

Tock said that the administration had nothing to do with the survey. "It was the senior class officers who decided on the survey to help [Oberst] out," she said, adding that the other class officers could have done the same.

Rinehart suggested that the content of the ceremony not be changed, but that seniors' names not be called individually to save time

The NSTF will allow students to receive college loans and then pay them off through community service work, she said.

USSA is trying to shape Clinton's plan into what they want and make it as pro-student as possible, McClintock said.

- The finance committee announced a proposal giving Phi Beta Sigma $710 from the contingency fund for Founders' Week.

The money will be used for a DJ and a speaker.

- Surovell explained his proposal for a new method of student selection onto University Commissions.

This new method would allow the SGA to select all students instead of the current method in which the Office of the President selects about half.

- Legislative Vice President Nelly Nguyen discussed cooperation among the SGA members and a new format for debates.

Senators were asked to give opinions on how to make debating more effective during meetings.

- A bill was introduced for a constitutional amendment that would give executive council line-item veto.

- A bill was introduced for an amendment to the by-laws stating that the finance committee should follow SGA criteria for approving and dispersing student fees.

In the past, the finance committee had their own set of criteria.

- A bill was introduced stating that the SGA mandate a trip to Richmond sponsored by the Legislative Action Committee to lobby for JMU students' concerns.

Letterman moves to CBS; Leno remains on 'Tonight'

The late-night television riddle was formally resolved on Thursday, as David Letterman confirmed that he's taking his Stupid Pet Tricks and Top 10 lists to CBS in August, and NBC announced that it remains firmly committed to beleaguered "Tonight Show" host Jay Leno.

In back-to-back press conferences on the east and west coasts that were longer on humor than hard information, NBC said "Saturday Night Live" producer Lorne Michaels will develop a show to air in Letterman's 12:30 a.m. slot. The show's premise is still being developed.

Letterman, appearing in New York with CBS Chairman Laurence A. Tisch and CBS Broadcast Group President Howard Stringer, said band leader Paul Shaffer will follow him to CBS, but could not say whether the show will remain in New York or move to Los Angeles. Asked if he planned to change his brand of acerbic humor, Letterman said: "The show is the show, at 12:30 or 11:30."

CBS executives declined to discuss the terms of Letterman's deal, but he is expected to earn about $14 million a year. That compares to Leno's annual salary of $3 million.

Haitian refugees fate uncertain

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — President-elect Bill Clinton will take office Wednesday unsure whether his last-minute decision to temporarily continue the Bush administration's policy of forcibly repatriating Haitian boat people will avert a threatened flood of refugees.

But even if his policy succeeds in blunting the exodus in the short term, his new administration must firmly address the long-term issues of restoring democracy and fostering economic stability and growth in Haiti if it hopes to undercut the factors that have driven tens of thousands of people to attempt the treacherous sea journey to the United States.

The political roots of the refugee problem lie in the bloody military coup that ousted Haiti's first democratically elected president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, 18 months ago. The coup and subsequent repression deepened the among one of the in Haiti and subjected the new regime to an economic embargo led by the Organization of American States.

If negotiations to return Aristide to power fail, and the embargo and international isolation imposed on Haiti's military-backed leaders continue, Haiti will remain a festering trouble spot.

While the negotiations, with unprecedented cooperation among the United Nations, the OAS and the Clinton and Bush transition teams, have moved both sides closer than ever, there is little hope for a settlement unless all parties press for a broad solution — not just an end to Washington's concerns about the boat people. But those seeking to restore democracy here fear that, if pleas by Aristide and Clinton succeed in slowing the refugee flow, an overall solution will fade as a Clinton priority and the stalemate will continue.

The growing consensus here is that there is a window of opportunity that is quickly closing, and that if it closes, the long-term consequences will not only devastate Haiti, but pose more complex and costly challenges to the international community.

Foreign policy decisions face Clinton

They seem, in some ways, like the kind of problems that need not distract a newly elected president: a muddled war in a remote corner of Europe; a provocative but crippled Middle Eastern dictator; a nearly bloodless humanitarian operation by U.S. troops in East Africa; a tottering Russian government that cannot pay its debts.

Bill Clinton will take office Wednesday as a president pledged to concentrate on America's domestic problems, and the range of crises and choices that await him in foreign affairs will not necessarily prevent him from carrying out that mandate, even though events in Somalia, Iraq, Bosnia, Russia and elsewhere abroad have dominated the Bush administration's last weeks.

Still, Clinton's first foreign-policy decisions may prove as important as any he makes in his first months in office. He may wish to avoid major foreign-policy initiatives, yet narrow decisions can have far-reaching consequences.

As the United States turns to a new generation of leadership, the world wobbles over one of history's fault lines, when a new balance of power and rivalry among nations can be forged by accidents and small tests as well as by grand designs. In Iraq, Somalia and elsewhere, the Bush administration identified the geopolitical shape of the post-Cold War world but left largely undefined the ground rules by which the United States will operate in it. It will be a world in which the threats to U.S. interests are regional rather than global; where policies toward the Third World are driven more by concerns over human welfare and weapons proliferation than by ideological conflict; and where world power will be uneasily shared and negotiated among the United States, its allies in Europe and Asia, and its former rivals in Moscow and Beijing.

In that context, Clinton's decisions early in office may define the pattern and limits of U.S. action abroad for a coming generation of leadership. In Iraq, Somalia, Bosnia and Haiti, the new administration will be obliged to formulate a set of precedents for how the United States will define its aims in regional conflicts and Third World crises, and how it will extract itself from them.

In world trade talks and in bargaining with Russia, meanwhile, Clinton will set the boundaries for America's relationships with the European and Asian powers that are destined to be both its partners and its rivals in the new era.

Remembering King's legacy

Without holidays, many of us might forget to take time out and reflect on some of the important issues in our lives. Certain days of the year are set aside so that we can show our appreciation for the things we value most.

Today is one of those days. In Virginia, today has been designated Martin Luther King Jr. day to honor a leader in the civil rights movement and one of our country's most important political figures.

But two other states — New Hampshire and Montana — do not recognize the holiday. A third, Arizona, only recently added it to their calendar in November, after extended controversy.

In 1990, the commissioner of the NFL cancelled plans to hold a future Super Bowl in Arizona because the holiday had not been approved by a majority of Arizona voters. But today, on what would have been Martin Luther King Jr.'s 64th birthday, Arizona's first observance of King's birthday as an official holiday is being celebrated with a concert by rapper Ice-T and his Body Count Band. According to Thursday's USA Today, rap groups such as Public Enemy and other civil rights activists had a big influence on gaining voter support for the holiday.

Such individuals have gone to these lengths because they felt that a national holiday is a fitting way to honor and preserve King's memory.

People of all colors and backgrounds have benefited from King's many efforts toward racial equality. Not only was King a leader, but he was also an educator. Although most of JMU's current students didn't have the opportunity to hear him speak or be a part of the movement he led, we have all benefited from his efforts. And by celebrating his life today, we keep his dreams alive.

Although the United States has made important strides in civil rights issues in recent decades, we haven't yet fulfilled King's vision of total equality, of a place where the color of a person's skin has no bearing on the way that person is treated by others. While our progress has included integrating school systems and passing legislation to promote fairness in hiring practices, we still face the problems of discrimination, bigotry and rioting. We have come a long way, but not so far that we are immune to such horrors as the Rodney King beating and the resulting aftershocks that were felt in Los Angeles and all over the country.

These problems should remind us that for all of King's work the country still faces severe racial division and misunderstanding.

We no longer have Martin Luther King Jr. to address these problems and present solutions, but we have a holiday to remind us of his messages. It is our responsibility to carry the fight for equality into the future.

JMU will hold a unity march followed by a speak-out as part of today's events. This is our opportunity to both pay tribute to King's life and accomplishments and to express our concerns on the civil rights issues facing our country.

Whether you are black or white, no matter what your background is, don't forget the importance of Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

Letters to the Editor

Leave the past behind and 'work together' on graduation

To the editor:

Change always brings loss. And that loss sometimes makes change seem so unwarranted, so unfair, so capricious — particularly when what is lost seems deeply important. Recent letters in this space have so clearly illustrated the loss some students feel from the change in May graduation exercises. But fear of experiencing a loss should not prevent change.

If change always brings loss, then why don't we just avoid change? Deliberate change brings opportunities and the chance to solve problems which surpass what has been lost. The new May graduation exercises give us all the chance to work together to solve problems associated with previous graduation exercises and to find, create and exploit new opportunities to enrich our largest annual graduation exercises.

The perspective with which we all face the challenge of creating our new graduation exercises will likely influence our success as much as what we actually decide to do. If we try to find our future while reaching for what new times have irrevocably pushed behind us, then we cannot design new graduation ceremonies which will be the foundation of worthy tradition for JMU. Only through striving together can we create graduation exercises which will become an illustrious example of JMU's success and a distinguished tribute to the wonderful community of students, administrators and faculty which exists here.

To all who have lamented about the change in graduation exercises, please put your disappointments and apprehensions behind you. Doing otherwise will only detract us in our challenging endeavors to create a valuable new tradition for May commencement. We all can faithfully and successfully work together in designing new graduation ceremonies if we all share a devotion to our common welfare and to the welfare of so many future graduating students.

Hold Clinton accountable for his 'lofty campaign promises'

To the editor:

As Inauguration Day creeps up on America, the record should be set straight about the presidential election. The liberal-dominated media have succeeded in diminishing the fact that America rose as the dominant economic and military superpower after the depressing Carter years. With this assistance and extremely lofty campaign promises, Clinton and Gore pulled off the election.

The media's treatment of Clinton has basically reversed in the last year. A perfect example of this has been demonstrated by Time magazine which once published an issue with the headline "Why America Doesn't Trust Bill Clinton" on the cover, and just recently made Clinton "Man of the Year." Once the media realized that he was going to win the Democratic nomination, they accepted him as one of their own. As Richard Nixon once said, "the media always has the last word."

Now he hopes he can fool Americans by taking back his campaign promises — such as cutting the deficit in half, decreasing military spending by $50 billion, and cutting both the Congressional and White House staff by 25 percent. He will continue to break his promises while obliging to special interest groups. Americans are already questioning their vote for him in light of the strong economic recovery. Hopefully, Americans will hold Clinton accountable for his campaign promises in 1996 and realize that "change" is not always a good thing!

Black history should not be relegated to February

To the editor:

The shortest and coldest month of the year is right around the corner — it must be Black History Month. The month designated by white people for the celebration of the culture and history of the black man and woman. This year, however, the celebration will be unlike any prior observance. A coalition of 60 black churches in the Washington, D.C. area will be taking down the pictures of Michelangelo's cousin (a.k.a. — the common portrait of Jesus). This celebration will culminate Easter Sunday with the burial of the white Jesus. From this day forward the truth shall be told from the mountain high to the Shenandoah Valley low.

With this in mind, it is indeed an honor to recognize the black Madonna giving birth to her precious sweet son the Messiah, black baby Jesus.

Helping others after the holiday season

JMU had its own version of Salvation Army volunteers before the holidays. Instead of holding a bell, these soldiers grabbed a microphone. Milling around near the helipad on the commons, they verbally assaulted students who strolled by:

"Hey, you! Yeah, the girl with the BAD ACNE . . . don't you want to give money to stop multiple sclerosis? And what about you buddy! Yeah, the IMPOTENT guy in the leather jacket . . . it's not like you're going to need that change in your pocket to support any children!"

These boisterous fundraisers were in full force during the holiday charity rush. You could sense it. People who traipsed up the commons went out of their way to avoid making eye contact with the fundraisers. You would have thought the second coming of Christ was occurring just above Wilson Hall. (Note: That's Christ, not Carrier.)

These days it is safer to venture through the commons. Other charitable projects, such as Operation Santa Claus, have also come and gone with the holiday season. While these projects were charitable, they were also timely — for the givers.

Operation Santa Claus made sure that underprivileged children in the area had at least one present beneath their tree Christmas morning. Certainly this was a worthwhile project.

But I didn't receive any gifts this season. Several people asked me last week, "What did you

EYES OF THE KAIS

— Rob Kaiser

get for Christmas?"

"I got Jewed," I said and explained that my family is Jewish, but not practicing. Meaning in greedy terms that I don't get Hanukkah or Christmas gifts.

I don't expect holiday gifts. I receive presents year round — like having the privilege of attending a university and the opportunities which go with it.

The children from Operation Santa Claus are still just as shut off from such opportunities as they were before. JMU's charity was generous, but short term.

An episode of the television show *M*A*S*H* provided another example of short term charity. One of the doctors, Charles, was trying to uphold a family tradition. Every year on Christmas Eve his family gave expensive, fancy candy to needy people.

Since he was in Korea that Christmas, Charles had the candy mailed to him and he in turn left it at an orphanage. Later, he learned that the candy had never reached the children who lived there. He confronted the man who ran the orphanage.

"The candy would have brought great joy to the children, for a few moments," the man said. "But on the black market, it was worth enough rice and cabbage to feed them for a month."

The man apologized for not fulfilling the spirit of the generous family tradition.

"On the contrary," Charles responded, "it is I who should be sorry. It is sadly inappropriate to give dessert to a child who's had no meal."

During break I served meals to homeless people in Washington, D.C. as my charitable act of the season. I worked with a group of students for four days in soup kitchens and homeless shelters.

In one soup kitchen, my job was to hand out meal tickets. I was instructed to make sure each person was only handed one ticket. But when people who had already eaten one serving, came back to me asking for another ticket, I obliged.

The evening I returned from Washington, I went to a Chinese restaurant with my parents. When we were finished eating, there was still half of one dish left over and a quarter of another dish.

I looked at the food which would be trashed and thought of the people in Washington who had asked me for another ticket. The irony left me feeling empty. I could have used an earful from the boisterous fundraisers on the commons.

Twenty-three-year-old Jill woke up one night to find a strange man hovering over her. In her living room she was raped and beaten, then left lying in a pool of her own blood.

Charlottesville Sheriff J.W. Rittenhouse told this story to his women's self defense class at Rockingham Memorial Hospital on Thursday night.

It is one of many true stories that have influenced him in his work with sexual assault victims.

Learning to survive

"As a society we have not taken the act of rape and this kind of homicide as seriously as we should," said Rittenhouse, who has been teaching rape prevention and self defense through "Victims for Life" since the 1970s.

Rittenhouse said one of his goals is to get different organizations at JMU to sponsor "Victims for Life."

Rittenhouse said that because assailants understand "students are very busy and mobile people . . . and they have a lack of security," they become prime targets.

"In our program we say that [criminals] are out there, and although we would love to change their behavior it is not happening," he said. "You need to take the responsibility into your own hands."

The program contains graphic descriptions of assault, information on crime prevention and escape, and actual hands-on practice in self defense.

Rittenhouse acts out the brutal actions and speech of some rapists, which often has a sobering effect on the seminar participants.

Dr. Jacqueline Driver, a former JMU faculty member, attended the seminar.

"I think JMU should have [this seminar] for every one of their women," Driver said.

Sophomore Kristin O'Connor, who also attended, said, "I think that the program should definitely be available on campus."

"You don't realize how much you can do in [a sexual assault] situation," she said. "Since half the class is physical, you can see hands-on that his methods really work."

personal safety course in the kinesiology department.

JMU Commuter Student Council President Hutton expects the escort service to run from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Sunday through Friday, if adopted.

Hutton said that Director of Public Safety Michael MacNutt has offered the use of the campus police dispatchers for this project.

"The biggest thing we need to find out right now is where the money is coming from," Hutton said.

"This is obviously a worthy cause, but it is hard to coordinate a volunteer program," Hutton said. Ideally, the CSC would like to have a van and a car to make the program more efficient.

"For a volunteer program the escort service would have a budget of less than $1,000 and would begin in the next month and a half.

"Awareness is reaching the classroom as well. Michael Goldberger, head of the kinesiology department, said they are searching for a faculty member with experience in teaching personal safety.

"We are very excited about that idea," Hutton said.

Goldberger said. The earliest a course fulfilling liberal studies requirements would be available is next fall.

"Everybody is concerned about personal safety," he said. Goldberger said the focus of the class would not be purely physical, but oriented toward prevention and awareness of assaults.

Last semester JMU offered three sessions of the Rape Aggression and Defense program. Campus police said that although they will be offering the program again this semester, no specific dates have been set.

The RAD program includes a $12 preregistration fee that covers a student information manual, and focuses on dispelling myths about sexual roles and building the self-esteem necessary for self defense.

Rittenhouse said his and similar programs only scratch the surface of the issues surrounding sexual assault.

"It never ceases to amaze me in listening to these victims how many people in society believe that 'she asked for it.' There is still so much work to be done."

Rockingham Memorial Hospital will offer another Rittenhouse seminar April 20 at 6:30 p.m. The cost is $10.

Laugh!

Comedy duo provides laughs for all ages with sight humor

by Brandi Hudson
staff writer

As the lights dimmed at Eastern Mennonite College Saturday night, two graduates took the stage to fight in "the grudge match of the century."

A booming voice announced The Exterminator, weighing in at over 400 pounds "without his ego," and Captain Galaxy, "a man that skinny dips with piranhas."

Even with no dialogue, Ted Swartz and Lee Eshleman had the audience rolling with laughter at their comedy-wrestling antics. In between an occasional slow-motion choreographed crunch or kick, the macho wrestlers would sashay back and forth across the stage to the accompaniment of ballet music.

"It's a chance to write, to act, to sing, to design, and to wear a wrestling outfit publicly," Eshleman said.

This particular skit, titled "He-Men Masters," was the first of 18 short comedy routines that make up "Ted & Lee Live, The Armadillo Tour."

Eshleman, a 1986 art graduate, currently lives in Rockville, Md. Along with writing and acting he designs the set for the show, which consists of an eight foot cartoon-character-looking granny wearing boots and spurs and slinging two colt 45's.

Swartz, the other member of this comedy team, graduated from Eastern Mennonite Seminary after doing his undergraduate work at EMC. He describes the show with Eshleman as "a therapeutic outlet."

Swartz and Eshleman began working together by accident. After Swartz's partner backed out of a show four days before the performance, he was introduced to Eshleman. They began rehearsing the first segment on the way to the performance. Soon, they were writing material for their own show, and five years later they are still performing.

With the help of guest director Bob Small, they write all of their material. They described it as their own brand of surrealism. "The idea has to be given birth out of your own experience. We're not going to believe in it or care about it as much if it's not ours," Eshleman said.

Each skit consists of many sight gags, such as Swartz picking a piece of banana off the floor and plopping it in his mouth to both of them spewing water at the audience.

One noticeable aspect of the show was their lack of profanity and sexual innuendoes. "It's harder to be funny without it," Swartz said. According to Eshleman, they want the audience to use their intellect and imagination.

"We want to confuse all people equally. We don't discriminate," he said.

They will be performing three more shows Jan. 21 through 23 at Suter Science Center. Tickets are $7 for adults and $5 for students with an I.D.

Music professor leaves to continue education

by Cindy Ballentine
contributing writer

Some students and faculty will notice that the music department office looks a little emptier. The music department started this semester without an assistant department head.

Rick Crawley left to pursue a doctorate degree in music education in Tallahassee, Fla.

Dr. Mellasenah Morris, music department head, said Crawley has been a great help to her, giving her insights into the workings of the department, but "this is a very important time for him and it's crucial that he move on."

In December, the music fraternities Phi Mu Alpha and Sigma Alpha Iota presented Crawley with the Orpheus Award for outstanding achievements in the field of music. The award is the highest honor given by Phi Mu Alpha.

"I think he really had not just an interest in being an administrator, but in really listening to students," senior Michael Conley, president of Phi Mu Alpha said.

Morris said Crawley plans to return to JMU after completing his degree. In the meantime, his duties have been distributed among other faculty members.

Also a current music faculty member is preparing to act as temporary assistant to the department head beginning in the fall of 1993, Morris said. That faculty member's teaching load will be taken over by part-time staff.

VIRGINIA GOVERNOR'S FELLOWS PROGRAM SUMMER 1993

Purpose

The Governor's Fellows Program offers a select group of talented and highly motivated young people valuable first-hand experience in the process of state government. The summer of 1993 will mark the twelfth year of this program, created in 1982.

Eligibility

Applicants must be graduating seniors or enrolled as degree candidates in a graduate or professional school. Applicants must either be enrolled in a Virginia college or university (public or private) or, if enrolled in an out-of-state institution, be a Virginia resident.

Selection of Fellows will be based on merit, without regard to race, sex, national origin, religion, age, disability, or political affiliation.

Duration of Fellowship

Fellows must commit to work full-time in the Governor's Office for at least two months; the normal period will be June 1 through July 30, 1993.

Assignments

Fellows are assigned to work with members of the Governor's Cabinet or personal staff. Assignments attempt to match the official's needs with the Fellow's background and experience.

Compensation

No state funds are available to compensate participants in the Fellows Program. In prior years, colleges and universities have proved willing to offer summer grants to Fellows selected from those institutions; but with recent budget reductions, funds may not be available. # New group raps songs with Christian message

by Amy Fletcher
contributing writer

They have a message for today, played out to a '90s beat. The Christian group COLORBLiND believes that the youth of today listen to religious themes when set to rap music.

"If we can get people's attention, then that opens up a door to get the message across," says Nathan Barlowe, lead singer for the group.

By choosing the rap format, the group feels it is "winning young people to Christ," Barlowe says. "We feel we're called to do this." The group's three singers and bass player performed at JMU Saturday night for the Baptist Student Union's Midwinter Bible Conference.

Barlowe, a sophomore at Liberty University in Lynchburg, says they are "more than just a singing group." Members take time between songs to talk to the audience about their Christian beliefs. Rapper Rod Shuler, a sophomore, says that they hope to reflect their belief that "Christ is awesome!"

All members of COLORBLiND attend Liberty, where they met in November of 1991. With an interest in rap music in common, they began working on lyrics and ideas.

The name COLORBLiND came up because of the multi-racial group's concern about racism. Shuler says the name also reflects their priorities. "First is Christ, and second is humanity."

Their lyrics, such as "you've got to be colorblind, if Christ is your desire," also conveys their message of anti-racism.

All the music performed by COLORBLiND is original. They draw their lyrics from life experiences and the "troubles we had growing up," member Chris Blaney, a junior, says.

In their song "Role Model," written by Shuler, each of the members name their parents as their role models, stressing the importance of their positive influence. The song questions the role models of today and calls upon youth to set better examples for future generations. The lyrics include, "Where did our role models go? They change our lives more than they know."

Blaney says, "God has chosen that song and it reaches a lot of people."

Audience involvement and participation is also a big part of COLORBLiND's concerts. The members project a down-to-earth image and draw upon the crowd's energy.

The group has one album out, which they describe as a compilation of their early work.

Produced about two months after the group had formed, one member says it was made before they "really got a chance to be close friends." They are preparing for work on another album in the near future. Along with their album, they sight the opportunity to open for "Rhythm and News," a Christian group, as one of their biggest events.

COLORBLiND's plans for the future are spreading their message and breaking new ground in the field of Christian rap music. Blaney sums up the thoughts of all the members when he adds, "We'd like to take this to a professional level."

Music Industry Association plans to record JMU sounds

by Elisabeth Bergman
contributing writer

He came to JMU because he liked the sound of it. The sound of "JMU Rocks On" that is.

Matt Roberts decided to attend JMU after reading about the record project, "JMU Rocks On," in the Richmond Times Dispatch. Roberts, now a junior and president of the JMU Music Industry Association, read this story in high school and first learned about the JMU music industry program.

At that time, Roberts says he was unaware of the JMU music industry department, the third oldest in the country.

"Until I read that article, I did not know a music industry department existed at JMU."

An album like "Rocks On" hasn't been done in several years, so Roberts is bringing it back to JMU. He hopes this album will give the music industry department the kind of public exposure that their first two did.

According to Roberts, the compilation album will be either titled "The Music Association Sampler" or the "JMU Campus Sampler." Plans are also being made for promotional events to boost sales of the recording in April, when the tape should be released.

"Right now we don't know who will be on the album," Roberts says. The recordings will be produced by the artists. The deadline for submitting a recording is Jan. 22.

"This is the only way we could do the album, it would be too expensive and take too much time to get 12 artists in the studio and record. We will be mastering the recordings into a single digital audio tape," he says.

Roberts says he has received calls from different artists but wants a greater response. "The response has been promising, but I would like to see more people aware of it. There are not as many people aware of the project as I'd like to see."

The overall sound will be a unifying theme for the recording, according to Roberts.

"I want this album to be different from ones produced in the past. There seems to be a definite JMU campus alternative sound. I want to produce something a little different, something with more of a variety."

"There have been two previously produced MIA albums entitled JMU Rocks and JMU Rocks On," says Robert Smith, a staff advisor for the project. According to Roberts, musicians such as Glass Onion and musician Mike Rayburn performed on the recordings. He says the albums attracted publicity and made their way to college radio.

Roberts says he hopes to give the Music Industry Association more publicity and awareness on campus. "I want to build a network and base for the MIA," Roberts says. "Look at XJM, The Breeze — they have the support. We need to start somewhere to get that kind of support."

CRAIG NEWMAN/THE BREEZE

Matt Roberts is the executive producer for the Music Industry Association's record project.

Driesell, Dukes dance all over Tribe, 90-72

by Steve Miranda
assistant sports editor

WILLIAMSBURG — It was another day at the office for the JMU men's basketball team, who dismantled William & Mary in the first half Saturday and coasted to a 90-72 victory.

The Dukes moved their season record to 10-4, 3-0 in the Colonial Athletic Association and have now beaten the Tribe in 12 straight games.

The Dukes, who had 46 points in the first half on 72 percent shooting, cut apart the W&M defense, which was holding opponents to a league-best 40.5 percent shooting going into the game. Senior guard Bryan Edwards led JMU with 14 points at intermission on 5-5 shooting, including four buckets from three-point range.

"Offensively, JMU is a great team," Tribe coach Chuck Swenson said after the game. "I was really impressed with Edwards and his ability to get his own shot off early. Tonight, he played a level above everyone else on the floor. He was terrific."

Edwards finished with a team-high 16 points and tied a career high with seven assists.

The JMU defense held W&M to 37 percent shooting in the first half to help the Dukes to a 46-28 halftime lead.

W&M forward Thomas Roberts, who came into the game averaging over 21 points per game, was held to a season-low nine, on 4-13 shooting.

"We had a good team effort on him," junior forward Clayton Ritter said. "I started out on him, but we had a couple different guys rotate on him. He might have just had an off night, but we played him tough defensively and made it difficult on him."

The big early lead gave Driesell the chance to give more playing time to players coming off the bench—particularly freshman Kareem Robinson, who had his best game of the season.

Robinson tallied 12 points, four rebounds, and three steals in his 16 minutes of action, which also included three thunderous dunks.

"Tonight was the best he's played," Driesell said. "He still does some foolish things, but he's a million percent better than he was when he first started. He wanted to dribble between his legs and throw crazy passes. But if he'll just settle down and stay inside, play defense and block some shots, I think he can really help us. He can jump and has good

JMU takes sixth straight with 66-55 win over UNC-W

by Drew vanEsselstyn
senior writer

Playing their third game in five days, the JMU women's basketball team came away from the Convocation Center Sunday with their sixth straight win, 66-55, over North Carolina-Wilmington.

"We have to be thrilled with the results," JMU head coach Shelia Moorman said. "It's due to the continued gutsy play of the kids. We're glad the week is over, and now we get a chance to rest a little."

The Dukes used a solid defense and several career highs to down the Seahawks in a game in which JMU pulled away late in the first half and never looked back. The Dukes boosted their record to 9-4, 2-0 in the Colonial Athletic Association. UNC-W fell to 4-9, 0-2 in the CAA.

UNC-W committed 27 turnovers on the afternoon, and Moorman was pleased with her team's ability to force Seahawk mistakes.

"We haven't been shooting as well as we should, but we've been forcing a lot of turnovers," she said. "[Our defense] was adequate, and Wilmington rarely got any thing easy."

JMU overcame just 40 percent shooting in the first half to take a nine-point lead into the locker room, on the strength of a late 12-2 run.

After just 6-15 shooting before the intermission, JMU sophomore forward Kara Ratliff scored 10 of her team's first 16 points on the way to a 20-point lead with only 4:50 left to play.

"In the second half, I selected better shots," Ratliff said. "Christina [Lee] did a very good job, and you always need good variety to do well."

The Dukes were led in scoring by Ratliff, who had 23 points on 10-19 field goal shooting. Sophomore guard Christina Lee pitched in with a career day of 18 points and nine rebounds, playing all but two minutes.

JMU's victory over UNC-Wilmington is the 21st straight since the two began their series with the inception of the CAA in 1985. But Moorman said no game can be taken for granted.

"Given our circumstances," she said. "There's not a time that we're going to go on the floor and think that things will be easy."

JMU is in action again next Friday at William & Mary and then hosts Old Dominion on Sunday afternoon.

"We're pretty exhausted right now," Ratliff said. "We just have to get rested for next weekend."

Last Friday night in front of a Convocation Center record crowd of 4,280, JMU defeated the Pirates of East Carolina 60-53 behind 14 points and five assists from Lee.

Senior swimmer's leadership helps fuel young Dukes

by Donna Ragsdale
senior writer

She stares into the water and a distorted reflection calls to her. Without hesitation, she dives in. Never looking back, she stretches out her arms and rhythmically moves her legs to propel her body through the water.

Her name is Cindy Walker, and for her this is a daily ritual. As a member of JMU's women's swim team, Walker practices about 20 hours a week. That's at least 20 hours of no homework, no class and no spare time.

Being a student and a swimmer, Walker has to make sure she doesn't get in over her head with activities. As a senior, Walker balances her sociology major and early childhood education minor with swimming and a social life. She usually has to do her schoolwork during the week to free up her weekends for meets. But she says being on the team is one of her great loves.

The team practices three times a week at 5:30 a.m. That means early to bed, early to rise. And it isn't always easy to jump into pool water that early in the morning, Walker says.

"Every morning when my alarm goes off, I think, 'I hate swimming,'" she laughs. "I think the fact that our team does so well makes it worth it."

For the last three years, the women's swim team has come in second place in the Colonial Athletic Association. This year, JMU looks to be the favorite to win it all. And as a senior and co-captain, Walker has taken on the added burden of leadership.

"In high school I swam for myself — here I swim with and for the team," Walker says. "I think I worry more about how everyone else is doing than how I'm doing."

Having swam since she was six years old, Walker became a high caliber swimmer in her preteen years. By her senior year in high school she decided to take a year off. When she came to JMU, she had her work cut out for her.

"She got into shape so quickly, she must have hurt so bad," remembers head coach, Judy Wolfe. "She worked very hard to be one of the fastest swimmers her freshman year."

Walker's eyes still show glints of that determination. "When I first came here, I didn't think I'd swim all four years because I thought it would be too hard," she smiles. "But it became a part of my life, and each year I got better. It became a goal to be faster than anyone in the conference."

Walker did become faster. She has set school records — one for the 50-meter freestyle and one for the 100-meter freestyle. She has also been a member of four relay teams that hold JMU records. Last year she was chosen as the CAA Outstanding Meet Performer.

"If there's a lot of competition, I'm thinking I want to come in first," she says. "I want to beat all those people. I think about getting my best time every time I get in the water."

The swim season fills almost every weekend between October and March and cuts holiday breaks short. But Walker says the work draws the team together.

"Our team is really close," Walker says. "I think the fact that 24 other people are doing the same thing makes it [swimming] easier."

But Walker says the swim teams rarely get the attention they deserve for their achievements. She says it would be encouraging for more people to come to the meets.

"I think this year's going to be our best year by far . . . I hate to jinx us, but I think we're going to win conference."

MICHELE LUM/THE BREEZE

Missy Zipf finished first in the 1,000-meter freestyle on Saturday vs. Shippensburg.

JMU finishes weekend sweep, sinks Shippensburg and GWU

by Kevin Finch
contributing writer

The men's and women's swimming and diving teams continued their winning ways this weekend, defeating George Washington yesterday and Shippensburg on Saturday.

The men defeated the Colonials of GW yesterday 139-104, improving their record to 6-2, while the women rolled 140-102 and improved to 7-2 on the season.

In the men's meet, the Dukes set the tone early. The 400-yard medley relay team of sophomores Gian Pozzolini, Derek Boles and Mark Gabriele and freshman Michael Powell set a pool record with a time of 3:28.68. Pozzolini also set a pool record by swimming the 100-yard backstroke in 51.13.

Another pool record was set in the 200-yard butterfly when Gabriele finished first with a time of 1:52.32. Gabriele also finished first in the 200-yard individual medley.

This year Gabriele returned as the Dukes top swimmer in the butterfly. At the Pittsburgh invitational in December, he made two NCAA consideration cuts, meaning that he is a possible choice to be selected to the NCAA championships in the 100 and 200-yard butterfly. In order to achieve this goal, he must cut one second off of his times in each event.

"Right now I'm considered," Gabriele said. "But I want to make the two cuts automatic."

The Dukes lead over GW was increased with a first place finish by freshman Rich Rowland in the 1650-yard freestyle and the 500-yard freestyle. Also winning their events were Boles and Pozzolini in the 200-yard and 50-yard freestyle respectively.

The meet concluded with the team of seniors Steven Ball and Eric Doetsch, junior David Caldwell and Boles winning the 400-yard free relay.

The diving team was led by junior Chad Triolet who won the one-meter diving competition.

Taking over the defending CAA champ's swimming program is not an easy task, but first year Coach Sid Cassidy appears to be continuing the winning tradition. He credits a lot of the success to the ability of the swimmers to adapt to his new program.

"This team works really hard," Cassidy said. "We put in a lot more training than they're used to and they have responded very well."

Cassidy said he is enthusiastic about the team's success, especially considering the fact that eight of its top 13 swimmers graduated.

"When I began this year, I thought it was going to be a rebuilding year," Cassidy said. "These guys don't want to rebuild."

Under the leadership of head coach Judy Wolfe, the women's team is enjoying a winning season as well. JMU started slowly Sunday, but got back on track quickly.

"I was proud because of our ability to stay focused even though we were down," Wolfe said. "The team was able to get up and swim and race well."

The comeback was led by junior Marcy Lipp and sophomore Becky Andrews who finished first and second respectively in the 1650-yard freestyle. Freshman Kristen David placed first in the 100-yard freestyle.

Senior Cindy Walker, the 1992 CAA champion in the 50-yard and 100-yard freestyle, won the 200-yard individual medley and the 200-yard butterfly. Winning the 100-yard freestyle was freshman Kristen David.

The team's impressive victory was concluded when the 200-yard freestyle team of Walker, freshman Denice Luviano, Andrews and junior Erin McDonnell placed first.

"We would like to perform well at the conference meet," Wolfe said. "I would like everyone to reach the finals and accomplish personal bests."

Both the men's and the women's teams defeated Shippensburg on Saturday, and the men's squad set four pool records. Gabriele broke the previous mark in the 100-yard fly while senior Jeremy Davey did the same in the 400-yard individual medley.

The 200-yard medley relay team of Pozzolini, freshman Adam Kidder, Gabriele and Caldwell and the 800-yard free medley team of Rowland, Gabriele, Pozzolini and Boles both set records.

Walker led the women's team by placing first in both the 50-yard and 100-yard freestyle.

Both the men's and women's next meet is Jan. 23 at William & Mary. Their next home meet is Jan. 30 against Richmond.

Paul Carter	15
William Davis	12
Kareem Robinson	12
Jeff Chambers	10
Kent Culuko	10

"Our subs came in and played well," Driesell said. "We didn't have to play anybody for a really long stretch of time."

Even though they trailed by 18 at the half, the Tribe played the Dukes even in the second half.

"I told them at half, let's play like its nothing-nothing, let's see if we can't build on the lead. We didn't really do that, but we had the game under control."

Senior forward Paul Carter finished with 15, senior William Davis had 12, and senior Jeff Chambers and sophomore Kent Culuko had 10 apiece.

"They have so many weapons," Swenson said. "Chambers is a good player, and he's just one of them out there on the floor. Carter is maybe their fifth option on offense, and he killed us."

The Dukes added a new face to their roster Saturday night that JMU football fans may be familiar with. Freshman Tony Jordan, who should be a lead candidate for the starting quarterback job next season, has joined the Dukes basketball team as a third-string point guard and shooting guard.

The 6-foot-3 Jordan saw his first action and came up aces: one rebound, one turnover, one foul and one blocked shot in one minute of play.

After slow start, Dukes pick up momentum over break

by Drew vanEsselstyn
senior writer

In a season which began with more youth and inexperience than ever before, JMU women's basketball coach Shelia Moorman saw her team make significant strides as well as suffer major setbacks over the winter break.

"I'm seeing a lot of growth in the kids that are playing," Moorman said. "They're getting a lot of game situations thrown at them, and they're gaining valuable experience."

The break got off to a rocky start as the Dukes lost to both Vermont and Nebraska by more than 20 points.

But since that point, JMU has rallied to five straight victories. The Dukes' closest game has been a three-point win over Virginia Commonwealth on January 7.

"When [the team] went home for their four day Christmas break, they did a great job of regrouping," Moorman said.

On the average, JMU has outscored its opponents by 24 points per game.

JMU RESULTS

Date	Result	Top Scorer
Dec. 21	Vermont 84, JMU 62	Ratliff 18
Dec. 28	Nebraska 87, JMU 63	Freeman 13
Dec. 29	JMU 92, CCSU 61	Ratliff 21
Jan. 2	JMU 84, St. Peters 61	Shelly 20
Jan. 7	JMU 65, VCU 62	Freeman, Ratliff 15
Jan. 13	JMU 63, UNC-G 45	Ratliff, Lee 13

Following the loss to Nebraska, JMU won the consolation game of the LaSalle Invitational over Central Connecticut State on December 29 to capture third place.

Sophomore forward Kara Ratliff led the Dukes with 21 points, followed closely by junior center Andrea Woodson, who had career-highs of 17 points and 11 rebounds.

"The LaSalle tournament was a learning experience, and we got a chance to see a lot of good basketball," Moorman said.

JMU returned home Jan. 2 for its contest against St. Peter's, and the Convocation Center crowd was treated to a career-high 20 points from junior guard Gail Shelly in an 84-61 trouncing of the Peahens.

The Dukes continued their homestand with a last-second victory over Virginia Commonwealth, 65-62. Kara Ratliff had a team-high eight rebounds to go with her 15 points, including the game-winning bucket with just 37 seconds left to play.

Last Wednesday, JMU cruised past North Carolina-Greensboro in style. The Dukes were led by Ratliff and sophomore guard Christina Lee, who had 13 points each. JMU also allowed its fewest points for the season.

JMU tallied a record of 4-2 while the rest of the campus enjoyed the holidays, they also saw their roster take some severe blows.

The Dukes had two key players go down prior to this past weekend's games. Following the Dec. 12 Maryland-Baltimore County game, sophomore forward Krissy Heinbaugh, JMU's second leading scorer, was diagnosed with mononucleosis and has not played since.

Sophomore guard Jackie Freeman made it through the break in good health, but in last Wednesday's 63-45 victory over UNC-G she injured her left knee and will be out of service for the Dukes indefinitely.

Moorman listed Heinbaugh's status as day to day and Freeman's condition will be evaluated today.

JMU had previously lost two players earlier in the season. Freshman forward Sarah Schreib will be out indefinitely with cartilage and ligament damage to her right knee, suffered against Maryland-Baltimore County.

And Moorman reported before the season started that sophomore forward Jackie Pratt would redshirt for the 1992-93 season due to a torn tendon in her left knee.

However, despite the injury-plagued break, Moorman was very encouraged with the results and progress of her team.

"You can't give the kids enough positive compliments," Moorman said. "The key to our success has been all-out determination."

But Moorman said that the toughest part of the Dukes' schedule remains ahead.

"We have to be playing like our backs are up against the wall in order to succeed. I still have to be realistic and say that we'll have hard times ahead. We were just really fortunate during that stretch."

Moorman

The Dukes outscored ECU 16-7 the last 6:36. JMU was again plagued by poor shooting, only putting in 34.7 per cent from the field. But they made up for their anemic offense by forcing 21 turnovers by the Pirates en route to the victory.

Ratliff chipped in with 10 points and a career-high 11 rebounds to go along with 11 points from junior guard Gail Shelly.

"We've come together really well," Shelly said. "We didn't play as well as we have, but we're playing good enough to win."

Wins over Oregon St. and Cal highlight 6-2 break

by Steve Miranda
assistant sports editor

With NCAA tournament at-large bids from the Colonial Athletic Association hard to come by, men's basketball coach Lefty Driesell knows his chance to turn some heads is with a competitive non-conference schedule.

And while the Dukes started the season slowly with losses to LaSalle and Penn State, JMU rallied over Christmas break, and entered the CAA season 7-4, the best record in Driesell's five years at JMU.

The highlight of the between-semester schedule for JMU was a 90-75 win over California, then ranked No. 19 in the country. It was JMU's first-ever win over a nationally ranked team, and will be important in March if the Dukes need an at-large bid to make the NCAA tournament.

Another win that should impress the selection committee is the 70-56 romp of Oregon State, now tied for first in the Pac-10 Conference at 4-0.

JMU went 6-2 over the break. This is how it went:

• Dec. 19: JMU 89, UMES 62

The Dukes put this one away early, limiting Maryland-Eastern Shore to just 24 percent shooting in the first half and took a 41-18 lead at the intermission. Sophomore Kent Culuko led JMU with 17 points, while freshman Kareem Robinson grabbed a team-high eight rebounds in just 15 minutes of playing time.

• Dec. 22: JMU 70, Oregon State 56

Bryan Edwards and Michael Venson each had 14 points to lead five JMU players in double-figures. Defense was the key for the Dukes, who limited the Beavers to 32 percent shooting on the night.

• Dec. 29: JMU 90, California 75

In the first round of the Seton Hall Holiday Tournament, JMU held a slim 58-55 lead with 12:38 remaining in the game before going on a 16-2 run to put the game out of reach. Heralded freshman point guard Jason Kidd played 31 minutes and had 17 points, five assists, and six turnovers. But he was outplayed by Edwards, who finished with 26 points.

• Dec. 30: Seton Hall 87, JMU 66

No. 7 Seton Hall ended the Dukes' three-game winning streak as all-American Terry Dehere dropped in 24 points. The Pirates opened the game on a 13-0 run and held a 45-33 lead at the half. JMU cut the lead to seven with 12:59 remaining, but that was as close as they would get. The game was marred by an ugly elbowing incident in the first half, when Dehere floored Culuko in front of the JMU bench. No foul was called, and Culuko charged down court after Dehere and threw a punch at the Seton Hall guard. Culuko was charged with an offensive foul and had to temporarily leave the game because of an NCAA rule that prohibits players from playing with an open cut. Edwards led JMU with 18 points.

• Jan. 2: JMU 73, Rutgers 61

Paul Carter scored 18 points and grabbed 14 rebounds, while Jeff Chambers had 16 points and 15 boards to lead JMU past Rutgers in a rematch of last year's first-round NIT matchup. Culuko scored seven points in a decisive 12-0 run midway through the second half that buried the Scarlet Knights. JMU outrebounded Rutgers 47-24 for the game.

• Jan. 6: George Washington 71, JMU 56

JMU shot just 24 percent in the first half and dug a hole too deep to crawl out of, trailing at halftime 32-19. Senior William Davis tried to bring the Dukes back with 16 second-half points, but solid free throw shooting by GW held off the Dukes' run.

• Jan. 9: JMU 98, ECU 82

The Dukes shot 58 percent from the floor to grab a win in this conference opener. Davis was on fire, going 7-8 from the floor and 13-14 from the line for a game-high 28 points. The Dukes connected on a team record 42 free throws.

• Jan. 13: JMU 99, UNC-W 83

UNC-W came into the game with an impressive 8-1 record, including wins over Auburn, Miami and N.C. State, but were taken out of this game early. Chambers led the Dukes with 16 points, seven rebounds and four assists to help move JMU's record to 9-4.

SPORTSHIGHLIGHTS

Tennis player signs at JMU

JMU women's tennis coach Maria Malerba has announced the signing of Tory Schroeder of Chapel Hill, N.C., to a scholarship.

Schroeder, a senior at Chapel Hill High School, won the North Carolina 4-A scholastic singles title this fall. Chapel Hill advanced to the semifinals of the state playoffs this fall.

Schroeder is ranked 12th in the Southern region and 126th nationally in her age group. She and her mother Jane have won three national mother-daughter doubles titles.

JMU to replace turf in Bridgeforth Stadium

JMU associate athletic director Brad Babcock said JMU will spend $600,000 to replace the eight-year-old Omniturf in Bridgeforth Stadium in time for the 1993 football season.

Babcock said the fiber has worn out, and the footing has become unsafe for football, field hockey and recreational activities.

Because the field is used so often, Babcock said he has ruled out natural grass.

Men's gymnastics places fifth

Todd Mercer took the top score in the floor exercise and Matt Garland placed first in the rings, as JMU finished fifth in the Navy Invitational over the weekend. William & Mary, Pittsburgh, Navy and Radford placed one through four.

Team MVPs named

Senior Amy Taylor has been voted the most outstanding runner on the 1992 JMU women's cross country team. Taylor placed second in the CAA championships and third in the Penn State Invitational.

Leslie Nason has been named most valuable player of the 1992 JMU field hockey team. Nason, a junior back, earned first team All-South Region and first team All-CAA this season.

Senior back Kevin Born was voted the men's soccer team's most valuable defensive player. Sophomore Brent Bennett was named the team's most valuable offensive player.
