“O nce in a lifetime” Our accumulated experiences mesh to form our common “once in a lifetime” experience,
OLIVET NAZARENE COLLEGE.

1984 was not the greatest year for Tiger football fans. The team took on some new "heavy-weight" universities, learning from the present for future reference.

DEDICATION

HARVEY COLLINS

Dr. Harvey A. Collins is an Associate Professor of Art, and Chairman of the Department of Art. He holds the B.F.A. and M.F.A. degrees from the University of Florida, as well as the honorary Doctor of Letters bestowed upon him by Olivet Nazarene College. He is the recipient of the Classroom Teacher's Medal from "Freedoms Foundation," Valley Forge, Pennsylvania. In 1971 he received the "Teacher of the Year Award" in Clearwater, Florida; and in 1978 he was named "Faculty Member of the Year" at Olivet.

Paintings by Professor Collins hang in numerous public buildings and homes in the Kankakee area. His major works include murals in St. Mary's Hospital, Kankakee; Wisner Hall for Nursing Education Building, Kelley Prayer Chapel, and Ludwig Center, all on the campus of Olivet. His most recent painting is a mural commissioned by the General Church depicting its 75 year history. This painting will hang permanently in the Nazarene Publishing House in Kansas City, Missouri.

In appreciation for his vast contributions, both professional and private, we dedicate this, the 1984 AURORA, to Dr. Harvey A. Collins.

PRESIDENT LESLIE PARROTT

One of the themes for 1983-1984 was announced last Fall as, "A Year of Gratitude." And it has been just that!

There is gratitude for the new Decker Quadrangle dedicated at Homecoming. The new focus on the Bible in chapel and the daily devotional concern for the Gospel of Mark has been met with continuing gratitude.

Some of the things I am grateful for include the gift of life, the many constituencies who are sincerely interested in what happens on the campus of Olivet Nazarene College, the four strong men of the Administrative Team, the beautiful parklike atmosphere in a growing, developing campus, inspiring chapel services, revivals, the Red Room, and a smile of recognition from students as I walk across campus; these are just a few of the things that make me grateful for our college.

Administrators Value Students

Willis Snowbarger

Responsible for the "academic program in the broadest sense of the word" is Willis Snowbarger, Vice-President for Academic Affairs and Dean of the College. This includes supervising the seven divisions and division heads, testing services, continuing education, Title III funds, graduate studies, artist/lecture series, and the campus radio station, among other things. Dr. Snowbarger also teaches in the Social Sciences division and although not required to teach, he finds the contact with students yet enjoyable. In his 26th year as Academic Dean, Dr. Snowbarger said, "In general, I enjoy working with the faculty on improvement of instruction."

Dr. Snowbarger and his wife Wahnona enjoy holiday visits, professional ballgames, travel, and camping on the Western slopes of the Rockies with their son, daughter, and four grandchildren from Olathe, Kansas. As a couple, Dr. and Mrs. Snowbarger try to regularly support music and athletic events, plays, and other campus performances. In this, Dr. Snowbarger attempts to show his appreciation to talented faculty and students of Olivet.

Ted R. Lee

In his position as Vice-President for Development, Ted Lee is involved in such areas of service as chapel coordination, publicity, alumni, the ONC Foundation, wills and annuities, special projects and events, public relations, admissions, and student recruitment. Dr. Lee works to bridge Olivet with her supporters on both the district and local levels. Included in that work are 845 churches with an educational budget, showing the interest of laymen and pastors in Olivet.

For Dr. Lee, enjoyable leisure activity is getting away to a cabin on Indian Lake, Michigan, to boat and water ski. Most of all, though, he and his wife Beverly like to relax and reflect on their work at Olivet. Their daughter, Debi Jo Cook, and granddaughter Katy also provide times for family enjoyment.

With his wife's position as Resident Director of Parrott Hall, and Director of Student Activities, Dr. Lee is the only administrator to live on campus. He has found that the longer he serves at Olivet and travels for her purposes, he gains "a deeper and greater appreciation for the students, for our church, and for the purposes and priorities of Olivet."

Grover Brooks

Grover Brooks was appointed Dean of Students in 1982. Prior to this position he served as Dean of Men and Associate Dean of Students. Although resident life is a main duty for Dean Brooks, also included in his responsibilities are the Student Activities Office, health services, the Counseling and Career Planning and Placement Center, student government, campus ministries, food services, and chairman of the Intercollegiate Board which includes intramural sports.

The quality of the student life is what Dean Brooks finds to be unique in his position this year. The students are what he enjoys most about his job, along with the administrative concerns and the opportunities he has to improve campus life.

"Everything" is what Dean Brooks enjoys doing with his family. More specifically tennis, hiking, jogging, traveling together, and sports events are some ways Dean Brooks and his wife Debra spend time together. Their daughter Debbie is now a freshman at Olivet.

Douglas Perry

Prior to becoming Business Manager in 1982, Doug Perry served as Assistant Business Manager in 1978 and Director of Olivet's Budget in 1979. As Business Manager he operates the budget and finances of the college. Mr. Perry's duties also include such things as supervising the bookstore, printing and mailing, and business office on campus. However, his main responsibility is Olivet's operating budget, which is approximately eleven million dollars a year.

Working with students, colleges, and community members is enjoyable for Mr. Perry. Although the nature of his position somewhat separates him from students, he feels a sincere commitment to them. Also, he finds the challenge of managing Olivet's budget an enjoyable task.

Family life is also enjoyable to Mr. Perry. He and his wife Sheila, with their son John and daughter Lauren, like spending time together traveling, camping, taking walks, and playing tennis. They also consider it important to spend time together in God's house and are involved in various church functions at College Church of the Nazarene.

Educational Zone Leaders Support Olivet

From throughout the educational zone each district elected members to the Board of Trustees for the college. These pastors, laymen, and district superintendents were actually the top administrators of Olivet. By them all major decisions were made concerning any affairs of the college. With the contribution of each man of his ability to lead, follow, and pray, Olivet Nazarene College continued to provide an "Education with a Christian Purpose."

Addressing the Board of Trustees and their wives is Chairman Bruce T. Taylor.

Division strives to give students

An understanding of human behavior

Included in the Division of Education and Psychology are fifteen disciplines that have teacher education programs, besides the departments of Education, Psychology, Physical Education, and Library Science service courses. Chairman of this division is Dr. Harry Westfall, who has been chairman of the Education Department for eleven years. Dr. Westfall also serves as Director of Teacher Education. His duties include responsibility for scheduling, faculty members, honor placements, and other departmental obligations.

The Division of Education and Psychology attempts to help achieve the aims of the college by trying to give the student an understanding of human behavior. With this understanding, good mental and physical health are emphasized through theory and practice.

This division also aims at helping students prepare vocationally in the fields of education, library science, psychology, and physical education. To these fields of service, the division attempts to help students see practical applications of Christianity.

Departments of art and music experience

A higher quality of performance

Within the Division of Fine Arts are the departments of art and music. Dr. Harlow Hopkins, head of this division, is a graduate of Olivet Nazarene College and Indiana University. He has been a part of Olivet's faculty since 1954.

Two objectives are focused on in this division. First, as a portion of a liberal arts education, the division hopes to develop within students an appreciation of and desire for the fine arts. Also, the division strives to prepare students who are professionally interested in the area of music.

The most recent major improvement for the Division of Fine Arts was the completion of the Larsen Fine Arts Center. With this improved facility, an increase in majors of these departments has been experienced. Art and music majors now feel they can obtain a better quality in their chosen fields.

The Art Department offers an art major of 34 hours with the option of three-dimensional or two-dimensional art. An art minor is also offered, as well as a teaching minor.

Optional areas of emphasis are offered in the Music Department. These include music education, church music, and music performance. All music majors are required to have a concentration of applied music from keyboard instruments, string and percussion instruments, voice, woodwind instruments, or brass instruments.

As divisional chairman, Dr. Hopkins looks forward to the future. Recent changes in the art and music departments, as well as the new center, should produce an even higher quality of education for any student involved in this division.

WKOC is an example of
Efforts to improve division

The Division of Language and Literature consists of the departments of English, Foreign Languages and Speech Communication. The common interest of each of these departments is the systematic study of the capacity we have which makes us distinctively human, our capacity to engage in symbolic interaction. The Department of English focuses its attention on the symbolic system we know as the English Language with particular concern for developing skills in the use of language in written form and appreciation for the rich literary heritage which permits us to learn from those who have used this system before us for hundreds of years.

The Department of Foreign Language attempts to direct students' attention to symbol systems other than our own, both from the desire to enable the student to communicate with people of different cultures as well as the conviction that the learning of a new set of symbols is in fact learning a new way to see the world around us.

The primary focus of the Department of Speech Communication is that of the use of the English language in spoken form, in both the media which impinge on our lives almost every day and in the interactions we have with those around us.

Future prospects for the Division of Language and Literature are favorable. Although Olivet's overall enrollment is down, these three departments are undergoing an increase in prospective majors. This could be attributed to the combined efforts of the faculty who are continuously revamping various programs in an effort to provide each student with the most updated material possible.

WKOC, the college's radio station, is one example of the successful efforts to improve the division's complete look. The stereo FM station that is now broadcasting at 421 watts continues to provide listeners with the very best in Christian music. They are now located in their new facilities in Benner Library that allow them to broadcast the latest in music and news, train incoming majors, and at the same time convey a message for Christ.

There are many opportunities to develop in a supportive atmosphere available to all who are a part of this division. The commitment to the future coupled with the desire to educate students for a Christian purpose makes this division a strong and very enticing one indeed.

Religion is man's quest for God; the Gospel is the Savior God seeking lost men. Religion originates on earth; the Gospel originated in heaven. Religion is man-made; the Gospel is the gift of God. Religion is the story of what a sinful man tries to do for a holy God; the Gospel is the story of what a holy God has done for sinful men. Religion is good views; The Gospel is good news. — Roy Gustafson

Goals of the Religion Division Include

Preparation for Christian Service

Included in the Division of Religion and Philosophy are the departments of Philosophy, Biblical Literature, Theology, and Christian Education. These departments work together to prepare students for full-time Christian service.

One of the goals prevalent in this division is giving all students a basic understanding of the Bible and basic doctrine. To graduate from Olivet, every student must take 12 hours of religion, consisting of Old Testament, New Testament, Christian Doctrine, and Church and Christian Living, thus better equipping all graduates for service in the church.

Another main goal pertains to students within the division. It is to provide training for church service in some phase of full-time Christian ministry. The religion major is preparation not only for ordination, but also for entrance into seminary and basic entrance into the master's program.

The religion major is unique in that personal commitment for a life career is not necessarily what must be decided. God's call separates these fulltime workers; the Division of Religion and Philosophy then educates and trains them for service.

The Religion Department is quite proud of the quality of Christian workers it produces. Olivet graduates have dispersed through the denomination and serve as evangelists, pastors, district superintendents, and missionaries, as well as in other ministries, such as working at Nazarene International Headquarters in Kansas City, Missouri.

As Division Chairman, Dr. Sayes sees many advantages to this group of departments. While he would like to build up the student body for increases in ministries on campus, Dr. Sayes also wishes to uphold the quality of faculty in his division. He feels the departments work well together and faculty members have good relationships. In stating the main objective of the division, Dr. Sayes replied, "To keep doing the kind of job we have been doing, continue that and if we can improve ..."

As she returns to the dorm from a day of hands-on experience, nursing student Donna Webb smiles.

Nursing majors are involved in

Diversified levels of health care

The Division of Nursing is headed by Alberta David, who has been with Olivet since 1978. She states that "nursing is a profession."

In this profession "we are interested with people at various levels; that is, we are interested in the prevention of illness and of any injuries that we can help people avoid. We are interested in teaching people health counseling that would keep their health potential . . . We are interested in the secondary level of care, that is, the early diagnosis and treatment of illnesses so that we keep the residual effects of the disease or injury as small as possible so people can return to a full state of health. We are interested in the third level of health care, basically that is taking care of people with chronic illnesses or chronic conditions that in some way inhibit their reaching a full potential so that we help them . . . in reaching the highest health potential that they can . . ."

The Nursing Department attempts to produce Christian nurses so their profession can be a practice of faith and belief in God through the means of service God gives them. In preparation for this service, the Division of Nursing attempts to prepare majors personally, spiritually, and professionally.

The broad liberal arts background offered is considered important for nursing majors because a better understanding of man in general, including the way he thinks, the way he recognizes himself sociologically, and the way he interacts, lends a better understanding of how to view people and how to give nursing care.

Future expansion is expected for the RN completion program offered. Although the program is young, the curriculum is being refined while expertise is being built.

Nursing students can hold high expectations in their chosen career. The division chairwoman expressed it thusly: "Nursing is a field as broad as you want to define it, and so the opportunities for our graduates are almost unbounded. We have people who are working in Appalachia, doctors' offices, clinics, as well as hospitals and other health care facilities. Any way you can define health, there is some opportunity then for our graduates to practice their profession."

Data presented to aid students'

View of Future by Understanding Past

The Division of Natural Sciences includes the departments of Chemistry, Biology, Geological Sciences, Physics, and Mathematics. These departments emphasize logical and orderly thought processes as much as the accumulation of facts and figures. It instructs the student in the application of the scientific method as a means for learning. It strives to show the harmony between religion and science.

The instructors in the Natural Science Division are faced with a dual task in the area of education. They must not only present historical and current data collected, but they must try to fit together the pieces of material in an orderly manner. Secondly, they must instill faith into the factual material which they are presenting to the students. What better way to grip the future than with a solid understanding of the past.

Over the past four years, this division has grown to become one of the most highly developed areas of study at Olivet. The Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry has only been offered for nine years, and yet we have access to some of the most sophisticated equipment available today. The Chemistry department development is representative of each department in this division.

Studies of Social Sciences Require

Constant Awareness of Changes

The Division of Social Science is comprised of the departments of Business, History, Home Economics, and Sociology. This division focuses its attention on past and present economic, political, and social principles and practices in America. Current trends are examined in light of historical review, so that predictions for the future may be formulated.

Dr. Joseph Nielson has been Chairman of the Division of Social Sciences since 1979. Following fifteen years of pastoring, Dr. Nielson became acutely aware of the need for an in-depth knowledge and understanding of sociology by leaders in the Christian community. Dr. Nielson received his undergraduate degree in Philosophy from Olivet. He later attended Michigan State University, where he completed both his Master's and Doctoral work.

Because of the nature of such studies, a constant awareness of the changes occurring worldwide must be maintained, and alterations within the various departments must be reflective of those changes. Recent additions to the Division include: Paul Koch, instructor of fundamental economics; a fully developed program for the Social Justice major; and a new emphasis within the Home Economics department, including fashion merchandising. Dr. Nielson's prospective goals for the division include offering a major in Public Administration which would be classified under the department of History.

Certainly, a clear understanding of such principles together with a Christian perspective will equip students in these fields with the character and knowledge required to make significant contributions in our society.

Responsibility of Assisting the Dean

Lester Jones' newest assignment as Assistant to the Dean of Students entails a wide variety of duties. His primary concern involves the overseeing of all campus residence halls, including selection of resident assistants as well as meeting with them on a regular basis. Dorm activities and dorm-centered social events likewise are carried out through the office of the Assistant Dean.

Secondary responsibilities include public relations, minor discipline problems, and general paperwork. Also, any of a variety of details that the Dean is unable to attend to fall into the hands of his assistant.

Lester began working on a Master's Degree in Theology in January of 1983. He hopes to have this completed by the spring of 1985. His future goals include the completion of a Doctoral Degree, possibly in psychology or theology, leading to a pastoral position. In a recent interview, Lester told us that he entertains ideas of eventually speaking or writing in order to reach a wider audience. His hobbies include all sports, hunting, fishing, and hiking, as well as mechanical work.

Lester graduated from Olivet in 1982, and he and his wife Marsha have remained at Olivet since then. He is currently Resident Director of Hills

Hall, so Lester has ground level contact with the details his job includes. Before moving to Hills Hall he served as the Resident Director of Northside Estates, and prior to that, as a Resident Assistant for the college. His past experiences make him both approachable and helpful to the men in his dorm. Marsha is currently serving as our Cheerleading sponsor. We are truly grateful for their vast contributions to our Olivet Community.

As Student Activities Director Bev Lee views all films before student viewing.

After chapel Dr. Bloom converses with Prof. Reinhart on their walk to Burke.

Beverly Lee enjoys her position as Director of Student Activities

"My consistent hope is that somehow at Olivet we can raise the quality of expectation of Christian young people." Mrs. Lee proves that this really is her hope by carrying out her duties as Director of Student Activities. In her position, Mrs. Lee is responsible for coordinating events, dates, and locations of activities on campus, as well as evaluating student activities and attempting to keep a variety of available activities. She must keep the college calendar so there are as few conflicts in events as possible. Mrs. Lee feels rewarded in her position and feels that the best thing about her job is working with Christian young people.

Prior to being Director of Student Activities, Mrs. Lee experienced various jobs, both at Olivet and away from the campus setting. In 1970, when her husband, Dr. Ted R. Lee, became Alumni Director, Mrs. Lee took the position of secretary to the President of the college, who at that time was Dr. Harold Reed.

For one year Dr. and Mrs. Lee pastored in New York. While being a pastor's wife, Mrs. Lee enjoyed spending most of her time with people and being able to meet their needs as they would seek her help. She found that quite rewarding.

Upon returning to Olivet, Mrs. Lee became secretary to the Dean of Students, who was her husband. While in that position Mrs. Lee began assuming some of the responsibilities of her current position, and from there worked further into becoming Director of Student Activities.

Besides all of these experiences, Mrs. Lee has also served as Resident Director of McClain Hall and is now Resident Director of Parrott Hall.

There are two things for which Mrs. Lee is most thankful in this Year of Gratitude. First of all, she is grateful to be a Christian, and feels wonderful in serving God. Secondly, Mrs. Lee is grateful for people; more specifically, people with whom she has had the chance to build relationships at Olivet.

A LONG WAY FROM HOME

BENNY LIEW

It's time to go — going to the great land of America, to a small county called Kankakee. What is America like? Will my experience in this famous “melting pot” be like a snooze in the sunshine or a fire in a furnace? Are all Americans as strong as the “Six Million Dollar Man?” Do all American girls look like “Charlie’s Angels?” What about Olivet? Is the college actually located on a mount? Well, too many questions . . .

These are some of the questions that I asked myself years ago, before I came to Olivet. During this not-too-long and not-too-brief stay in America, I have answered most of them (some of my questions are simply unanswerable for they are too stupid in the first place). Well, I have found out that some Americans are wimps. (See, I do know some American “colloquials!”) I have met some American girls who are . . .

But in addition to such “questions and answers,” I have learned and gained something that I did not really expect. Instead of losing my self-identity in the melting pot, I have gained, to a certain extent, some character. (Please don't laugh.) Instead of becoming more independent and defensive as I first thought, I have come to realize how human beings are interdependent on each other. I have become more appreciative of my family and what it means to me. But most important of all, I have found that the family of God is really an international family. I have truly experienced that the gospel of Jesus Christ is adequate in North America as well as in Southeast Asia.

Do I regret that I have chosen to leave home to study at Olivet? Certainly not. Yet, studying and living in a foreign country does involve certain difficulties that are unknown to outsiders. But the lessons and experiences that I have learned, are more than enough to offset the price I paid.

These years at Olivet have certainly been good years, and I can't help but say thanks to everyone who makes up this institution called Olivet.

Now it's time to go again, this time with a whole new set of questions. Will I ever come back to Olivet? (I mean to visit, not to repeat.) Will I ever have a chance to gather with my American “buddies” again? What will my life turn out to be like? Well, who knows? But I do know that the Chinese expression that “To have a personal friend overseas even at the far horizon, is to have a next-door neighbor” is true. Now I know that if ever I have a chance to tour America years later, I will always be able to find some free room-and-board services — that's right, I mean your homes. Hey, don't worry. The same is true in my part of the world. You will always find my home with an open door.

INTENSITY

KEVIN COOK

As a career resident of Dr. John Culp's philosophy classes, I've found myself asking that proverbial question "Why?" to trees, traffic lights and mannequins. As a graduating senior who contemplates the meaning of a pile of rocks, it would be unfair to myself if I did not consider, retrospectively, my years at Olivet Nazarene College.

Often I have found myself wondering what all the "other people" do at Olivet. By "other people" I mean those who I see, or don't see on campus whose interests are anything other than mine. (I can remember as a freshman calling these other people cliquish. I'm glad nobody says that anymore.) It seems we all live our lives on a horizontal plane upon which we jump from reference point to reference point. The span and intensity of our knowledge and understanding at one point might enable us to take in more than one reference point with the next jump. Take for instance, a nursing student who is a member of the ski club and active in student government. He/she has taken in three points with a single jump, that jump being the jump to this school for this period of time. Reference points are defined as interest, participations and activities. It would seem to be a gross limitation to live by the supposition that life can be illustrated with the use of a vertical plane. We like to say, life has meaning, intensity, passion, yet all of these seem to be qualitative evaluations. For us to be concerned with intensity, meaning, quality and the like, then life must be more than jumping from one reference point to another, taking in as many or as few as one desires. Therefore if we want to talk meaningfully about these qualitative ideas, we must view a moment of shared reference points as more than just a moment of shared reference point. We must in fact, become accountable. It is because of accountability that we stay up all night for the next day's exam and wear something other than blue jeans.

Hopefully our shared point of reference, Olivet Nazarene College, has done more for us than increase our skills and understandings in relation to our respective field of interest. For me this concept of accountability has been a major lesson—and has altered the way I look at the "other people." I see now the importance of making each shared point of reference as meaningful as possible, I have found that dialogue, sometimes debate and exchange of insight and experience has been most helpful in adding meaning to a shared point of his curiosity and visa-versa. There are however some experiences more meaningful than others and by virtue of their meaning merit more time. Such is the case for the experience of Salvation in Jesus Christ.

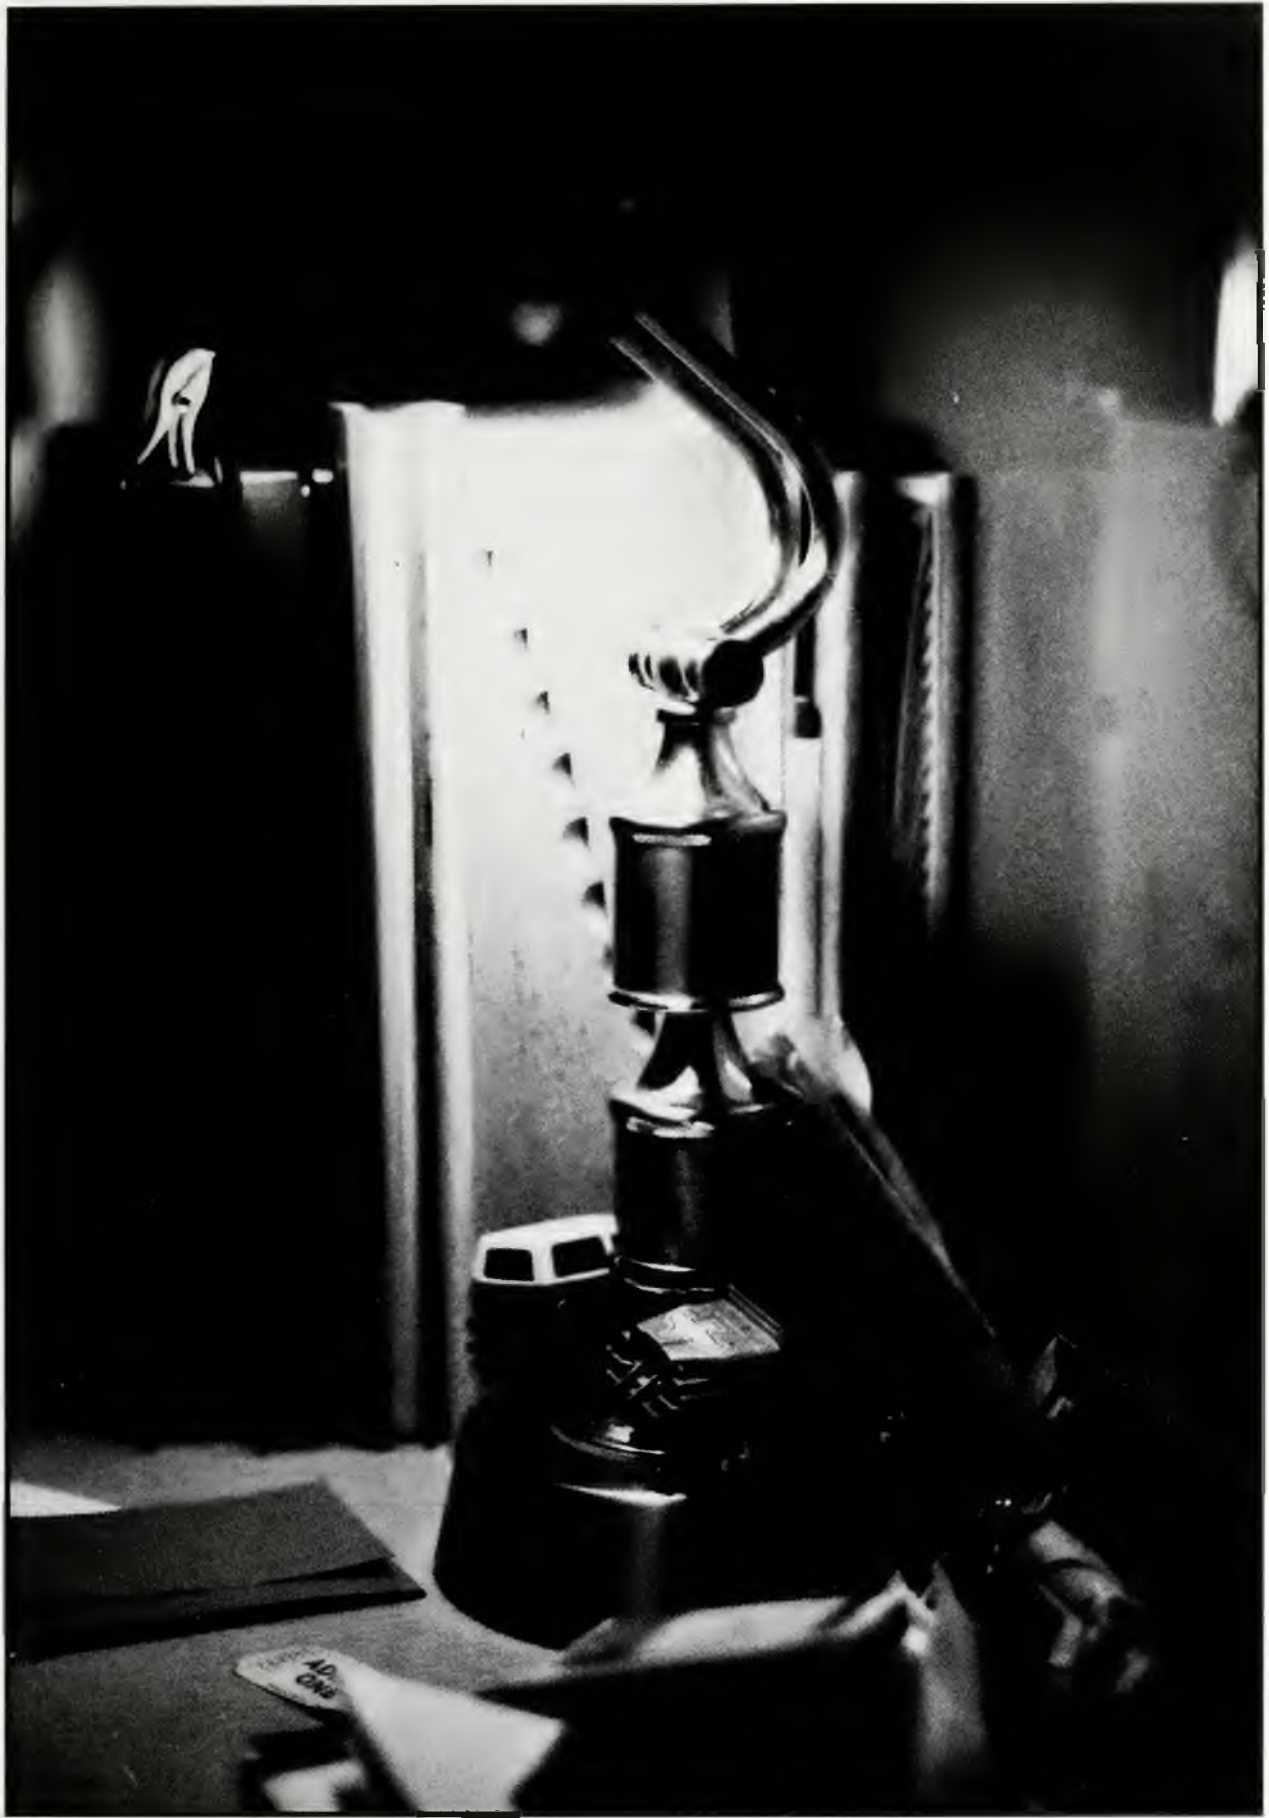

The reception of Jesus Christ into this individual's life has produced more intensity, meaning and quality than any other combination of reference points. It is for this reason that I write, share experiences, and contemplate piles of rocks. (Perhaps on a still afternoon I'll hear them praising God.)

If by chance you have yet to open your eyes to the reality of Salvation in Jesus Christ, I urge you to do so quickly. The sacrifice of a point of reference may be the sacrifice of lifetime.

Fullfilling His Commission

ALBERT BARKER

Jesus said, "You are the salt of the earth . . . you are the light of the world; therefore, go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you. And surely I will be with you always, to the very end of the age."

The Youth Department of the Nazarene Church each summer provides opportunities for college students to gain experience in summer ministries. These ministries range from international travel to home missions and from playing basketball to painting churches. The summer of '83 proved to be this kind of experience for 22 ONC students and graduates. These students raised money for travel and training, and they opened themselves to broaden their definition of commitment through a very rigorous ministry.

It all begins in October of the fall semester. Kansas City Nazarene Headquarters representatives come to Olivet's campus to talk to students who are interested in the Youth in Mission ministry. Interview times are arranged and the prospective student learns more about the specific program he is interested in. From this point, the student begins the formal application. Four references are required, and a five page application is to be sent in by the student. After the application is sent in, the student waits. And waits. And waits.

After waiting and waiting, it finally comes, but by now you are in the spring semester and anticipating spring break. It happens — you walk to your mailbox and open it and you see this long, light blue envelope with bold print saying "Youth Ministries." You stand there, knowing that either this letter is telling you that you've been accepted or the "I'm sorry this time, try next year" consolation. Your eyes fall on the words, "You have been selected to participate in the Youth in Mission program this coming summer." Your heart beats faster and you realize that your prayer has been answered.

A week passes and it's time to start preparing for your summer of ministry. You are given your discipleship journal which you will do on a daily basis and then meet with the others to share insights. This journaling prepares you in the basics of Christianity, and really asks some idea-provoking questions to make you stronger in your own faith in Christ.

School's out, and in just two more weeks it will begin. A summer of growing, practicing truths in different situations than you have ever encountered before, making adjustments in living, and learning to trust others whom you have never met before. We are confident that when we find ourselves in difficult situations, we can trust God to work out good through the situation. Many things cross our minds as we wait to go. Then the day comes for us to leave home and head out to experience what we have prepared for.

We board our plane and find a seat to look out the window as we head west to Kansas City for a week of intensive training and meeting the other participants from the other colleges. We meet new people and make new friends after only a week to leave most and go to our specific location of ministry, whether it be Venezuela or Colorado Springs. We all have one common goal, and that is to serve God and live an example which seeks to glorify God by serving others in need.

So out they go to further God's kingdom and learn what it means to live life through Christ. Tough times come and tough times go, but tough people last and grow. And most of the participants have come back to say that the experience was one which brought about immense growth and changed their outlook on life to the point that their life was changed.

When Jesus gave His followers a commission, He gave them a promise. This promise is a source of strength through thick and thin, and we can be assured that as we are obedient disciples, the Holy Spirit will forever be with us, giving us His fruit. As Jesus put it, ". . . and surely I will be with you always, to the very end of the age." What a promise, what a friend, and wow, what a life!

It has now been four years and they have gone by so quickly. It seems as if it were only yesterday that I saw for the first time in my life my father cry as he said goodbye to me, the first generation in my family to plan to graduate from college. I entered Olivet knowing not a single soul, having only visited once before.

While the time has seemed short, the list of events that have taken place while here go on and on. Looking over these four years in my life, I have seen the influence of Olivet and her standards on the academic, social, and spiritual areas of my life.

In coming to Olivet, I questioned the academic program. I am now convinced that Olivet has provided me with an excellent academic preparation to enter into my chosen field. Upon the completion of medical school, I'm sure that I will realize even more fully the benefits of having attended Olivet.

I came to Olivet not knowing anyone. I soon learned that a smile, a pleasant "hello," and a little initiative are many times all you need in order to make friends. I will always be reminded of Olivet and its social influence because it is here I have found my wife.

I knew that God wanted me to attend Olivet and I learned why. He opened and shut doors showing me the direction my life should take. It was here at Olivet I learned to trust in God and believe that God's Grace really is sufficient for my life.

ANOTHER PERSPECTIVE

BRYAN STARNER

Olivet is a great place to go to school; that's all there is to it. I feel very strongly toward Olivet. Four years ago I came here, a non-Nazarene, six hours from home, and not knowing a soul. But, I came with high expectations and was not disappointed. The administration really does care for the individual student, and the faculty members that I have been privileged to know have found a special place in my heart. But most of all, the friendships that I have made here I will remember and cherish for a long time. As they say, college constitutes four of the best years of your life. I don't know what is ahead, but I do know that I have had four great years here at Olivet. I guess the best way I can express myself is in these words: Forever, it's a long, long time. Forever, it goes beyond our minds. But that's how long I will remember the times we had together; The times we loved, the times we cared, The times we cried, the times we shared. I won't forget, I can't forget, Forever. Although our lives may go separate ways, I won't forget all those happy days. And now we face what lies ahead. But by our Lord we will be led. I won't forget, I can't forget, Forever.

Dear Katie,
 These days are hectic for us, and your father thinks you deserve an explanation.

Your mother and I are Christians. We believe in full and complete salvation in Jesus Christ and sanctification by the Holy Spirit. We both feel the calling of God on our lives and we are following His leading. For this reason we go early in the morning to classes, stay up with books long after you've gone to bed and clutter your house with typing paper, whiteout, and used pencils.

This is our last year of what we call undergraduate study. We are both anxious and excited to see what is in store in the future. This school means very much to your mother and me. We worked hard to get here, hard to stay here and if the time comes it will be hard to leave. We have found that following God is not always easy, won't always make one financially wealthy, or is it always fun. But we have learned that following God is always one thing for sure, the thing to do.

For one reason or another you, your mother or I have yet to miss a meal. We have a roof to protect us from rain, walls to protect us from wind and a good furnace to warm us in the cold. Two years ago when God gave us this dream, we had little more than a five-year-old car and our clothing. God supplied a good job, a good place to live, and the support of family and friends. All this has shown us that staying on your knees until God says its time to get up will still bring results. God is working miracles, He has worked one for us. Praise God!!

It seems parents have a knack for waiting for the perfect moment to land the great truths of life upon their children. Perhaps that moment will happen while climbing a mountain, eating in a foreign restaurant or walking a sandy white beach . . . but if it doesn't I should tell you now what I hope to tell you then.

The moment you are experiencing now is the most important moment of your life. I read once that life should be lived to the fullest, each moment an eternity of dimension, whether you're directing a symphony or peeling an orange. Trust God for every moment of your life, pray for His direction for the future, but by all means He has given you this moment . . . live it!

With diligent prayer and thoughtful consideration, establish your goals. Once you have done this, stick to your guns. Work hard, persevere, put your determination to usefulness and succeed. When God moves you to act, He will bless your action. No man has ever climbed a mountain, sailed a sea or built a castle without taking the first step and following through until the task is completed.

Katie, at the time this is being written, you are our only child, and we are as proud of you as any two parents can be. We have been praying for you and hoping you still love us after you realize how we hassled you when you were two. If you would choose to go to college and choose Olivet, (as if there is anywhere else) you would be a fourth generation Olivitian. (What would please Papaw any more?) We want you to be happy. God bless you, I love you.

ANOTHER PERSPECTIVE

As a "townie" I never gave Olivet a chance. I didn't think much of its academic programs and I never entertained the thought of enrolling here. But thank God, He intervened in my life during the last two weeks of my senior year in high school. That's when I made a serious decision to follow Christ. Not long after, I felt his call into some type of full-time service.

Now I am about to graduate, and as I look back on my four years here I realize that from a secular university I could have had:

*a chance to live in a different part of the country,

* a degree from a more respected university.

But this doesn't compare with what I found here at Olivet. I found that:

*most of my professors were willing to bend over backwards to help me out,

*I made more than just friends, but people that really care about the well-being of my life.

*most importantly, I was exposed to truths and deeper understanding of what Christ came to do here on earth.

When I look back on my years here I know that I will miss many people. Some of the activities I will miss the most include: Wahees on 4th floor, and scoping in the quad. "Blowing it off" in the Red Room and scoping in the cafeteria. Studying at Golden Bear, and scoping in the library. Worshipping in Prayer Band, and scoping at Late Skates. Working out in the gym, and scoping at basketball games. All-nighters for Prof. Lyons' classes, and scoping in general!

Seriously, I consider the four years I spent here as the start of my beginning. Beginning to understand that commitment is following through after the feeling is gone. Beginning to learn how to listen. Beginning to see people as valuable persons. Beginning to realize how short life is. Beginning to see how much I don't know.

Dr. Parrot has designated the 1983-84 academic year as a "Year of Gratitude". It is to this end, that we the editors of the AURORA, have chosen to extend our gratitude to Dr. Norman Bloom.

Dr. Bloom attended Olivet from 1941-1946, graduating with both the A.B. and Th.B. degrees. He pastored in both Kansas and Nebraska prior to his appointment as Superintendent of the Minnesota District. Dr. and Mrs. Bloom returned to Olivet in 1978.

GRATITUDE

As Director of Funds for Scholarships and Expansion, Dr. Bloom oversees the investment and subsequent distribution of all donations made to the college. He is currently serving as interim Director of Alumni, and thereby a major coordinator of all 1983 Homecoming activities.

Dr. Bloom's open-door policy has found him in constant demand by student and faculty members alike. The words penned by Mrs. Bloom shortly after the loss of her eyesight, refer to her husband as her own personal "Extension of God's Hand".

Mrs. Bloom's battle with diabetes could have been a real stumbling block for their faith. It has not been. Rather the Blooms have found that it affords them the opportunity to experience God's all sufficient grace, time and time again. Their abiding trust and assurance in the absolute goodness of God has proven to be a source of inspiration to many who are acquainted with them.

We thank you, Dr. Bloom, for being an "Extension of God's Hand" to the Olivet Community.

LES PARROTT III

The college years have been called the age between homes. Though I never really left home to go to Olivet, I did not escape the new freedom and new unsteadiness that these years bring for most students. I saw the whole experience as an elongated course in criticism. My English professors asked me to critique poetry and literature, the Science professors wanted me to experiment and ask questions, and when it came to Theology, I sometimes felt guilty for doubting.

It was during the early part of my sophomore year that my memorized statements of faith began to wear thin as I asked myself if I really believed. This was when I learned that Theology is one area where I must formulate my own beliefs until I am able to articulate them in terms other people can understand. This brings me to the first revision that the people of Olivet have helped me to make on the composition of my life, a commitment to honesty.

ANOTHER PERSPECTIVE

I believe life would have little stability without honesty. If I were to simply deny the existence of any doubt or unchristian urges within myself, I would actually be playing a role or wearing a mask. Honest admission of all that I am and honest acceptance of myself and the human condition is, in my way of looking at life, the perspective that leads to mature faith.

The second revision on my composition was made when I discovered the importance of a willingness to accept membership in a minority of Christians who will be living in a highly technological, and secularized society. My composition is being written for a Person, Jesus Christ. And I am willing to live as part of a minority in society.

Another important revision made in the construction of my life while here at ONC is a commitment to life-long learning. In a balance between knowing, being, and doing, I hope the greater weight of my life will come down on the side of knowing and being. Knowing books, knowing people, knowing life, will be coupled with being honest, being compassionate, and being fulfilled.

After two years of celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of both our college and denomination, I have learned the importance of keeping alive the values and priorities in my heritage. I have great esteem for my family. I have enjoyed the marvelous experiences of living in a parsonage and a college president's home in several sections of the country. My church is not perfect, but I highly respect its ideals and what it is trying to do in the world today. I hope my life will be an extension of the highest ideals and the best experiences I have enjoyed in my family, my church, and my college.

Dear Mom 11/2/80
 It's just been one of those days when you keep being reminded that you're a freshman . . . I woke up to the alarm — the FIRE alarm — the third one this week . . . made my way to the shower — got scalded — and headed back to my room, then on to class . . . I ran all the way to 4th floor Burke before I realized that I'd forgotten my Freshman Comp. paper — and everyone, except for a freshman, knows Dr. Phillips doesn't accept a late paper. Tonight a senior called to ask me out — my roommate offered to stall for time while I looked him up in a copy of last year's yearbook and asked the first three girls I could find if they knew him — don't worry, by the time I got back, he'd asked my roommate our instead! You asked if I've been making my bed? I'll let you know when I find it . . .

Dear Mom 11/5/81
 I'm so glad that I've matured so much in the last year . . . but I COULDN'T have acted like a freshman do this year — could I have?? We have to preregister for classes on Monday . . . How do I know what God wants me to do with my life? I sat behind Mrs. McCullough in church last week; she's such a "LADY" . . . I hope I can be just like her someday . . . do you think that means God wants me to be a preacher's wife?? Please write back soon, I have to know before November 15th . . .

Dear Mom, 11/1/82
 We've been over at Goodwin finishing up the Haunted House — it's been a real "memory-maker" — it's been so much fun working together as a class, and getting to know each other better . . . Speaking of "getting to know each other better," remember last year when I wondered about being a preacher's wife? . . . how about a Doctor's wife? . . .

ANOTHER PERSPECTIVE

Dear Mom,

With graduation fast approaching, Shellie and I were talking about how difficult it will be to leave Olivet. I wanted you to know how much I appreciate the sacrifices you have made so that I could be here. Along with earning a degree, I've spent four years learning over and over that God's Grace really IS sufficient, that prayer really DOES make all the difference, and that HE really WILL direct our paths when we trust in Him. I'm beginning now to understand that the application of all my education rests heavily upon my recognition of those truths.

I glanced up behind the speaker's head in chapel the other day, and read our motto, "Education with a Christian Purpose." When you drove away from Williams Hall in September of 1980, I know that's what you were praying for in my life. Olivet has been most faithful to that commitment.

through my mind — between assignments and tests, of course. Probably the best way that I could describe my experiences at Olivet is: "Growing — with Unlimited Resources".

I am privileged to have come from a very caring and giving family as well as very supportive church who encouraged me to venture out and grow as a Christian young person.

It was the Lord who guided me into the area of Home Economics and He really has provided through Olivet the resources I would need to start me on my way.

As I look back, it is exciting to realize that I have grown even though it is sometimes hard to see how the Lord was using the different situations in my life and my willingness to obey. It seems that whatever my need, I was assured of a resource with which to meet that need.

I became aware of this verse early in my college career — but I couldn't believe it anymore than I do right now. The One who calls me (you) is faithful and He will do it. I Thess. 5:24.

EUNA MAE FREEMAN

It was a big decision; leaving responsibilities at home and having to be away from my husband. I would never have done so just for self-improvement or gratification. But after two years of urgent prayer and with the encouragement of my husband, I made the decision to come to Olivet, to learn all I could about the scripture and then to see what direction God would lead from there. Because I am as sure as any human being can be about anything, that God was and is calling me. I can't blame others who don't understand, for it goes against everything in practical reasoning. I can only comfort myself in the knowledge that much of what God does makes little sense to man.

It has been quite an experience. Do you know how it feels to be forty-eight years of age and standing in the Freshman lineup? H-u-m-b-l-i-n-g. Little remarks like "How weird" in reference to what you are doing, don't really help much either, except to add a few layers of skin.

ANOTHER PERSPECTIVE

But there were those professors and students who would take time to say, "How are you?" and "I think its great!" just when I really needed it. Olivet has some of the BEST in all departments.

I've enjoyed all my classes, but the religion classes have been especially challenging experiences. I did not go into them with the mistaken idea that I didn't have much to learn, but at my age one is inclined to have his nice little theological package all tied up and the bow in place. One professor told me, after we became friends, that when he first saw me he didn't really expect to be able to teach me one thing. But I have learned a lot; enough to know that there is so very much more. And although I've learned much in the classroom the more valuable lessons have come on my knees as God helped me sort through it all.

What does tomorrow hold? I have asked the Lord this question many times. He doesn't rebuke for the questioning but the answer is the same. I'll know when I need to know. I once heard peace defined as "Not needing to know what is next."

Guess I haven't always had peace.

There are those to whom I owe a great debt of gratitude for their support: My four children, all of whom have been students here before me; friends, both at home and here, who have prayed for me; faculty members who have helped and encouraged; but most of all my husband, without whose love, support, and continual encouragement, I would have failed.

Finally, if I may be so presumptuous, I would like to offer a little advice. First, to all the young, hold to the idealism of your youth as you gain your maturity. Don't feel you must exchange one for the other. And secondly, to anyone who believes that God has called you. Pursue that calling with every ounce of strength you can muster. Don't be discouraged by indifference from others. I repeat, not every thing God does makes a lot of sense to man. But "Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and lean not on your own understanding. In all your ways acknowledge Him and He will direct your paths." (Prov. 3:5-6)

THE DECKER QUADRANGLE MADE POSSIBLE BY A GENEROUS GIFT FROM THE DECKER FAMILY
DR. GERALD DECKER SERVED AS A TRUSTEE OF THE COLLEGE FROM 1957 TO 1978 AND WAS FOR MANY YEARS CHAIRMAN OF THE BUILDING COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD

THE "MOD" QUAD

LIZ POWERS

The beauty of Olivet's campus has continuously been enhanced over the years. The latest enhancement which landmarks the 1983-1984 school year has been the development of the Decker Quadrangle.

Before this new development, the area surrounded by Ludwig Center, Nesbitt Hall, Benner Library, and Hills Hall, was viewed from two perspectives. Some people admired it as it was. They were hesitant to make a change. However, there were others who considered the "Quad" as being a dull, flat area which was not being used to its potential.

Finally, the 1982-1983 student council and administration worked together to materialize these ideas. The student council received ideas from the student body, compiled them with their own ideas, and presented them to the administration. Next, the administration presented the ideas to the architect, and the plans eventually evolved into what is now the Decker Quadrangle. None of this could have occurred, however, if it were not for two special and greatly appreciated people — Dr. Gerald Decker and Mary Roberts.

Dr. Decker, whom the "Quad" is named after, contributed to the financing of the Decker Quadrangle. Dr. Decker, a former member of the Board of Trustees, is recognized not only for his contributions to Olivet, but is highly acclaimed for his work in the business world. He is a former vice-president of Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation and was Director of Energy. He served as chairman of a 12-member congressional advisory panel on synthetic fuels. Now he has his own consulting firm on energy with its headquarters in Florida.

Mary Roberts is another who contributed greatly to the Decker Quadrangle. She is an expert in her field of landscape architecture. At the age of 68, she is still very enthusiastic about her work. She is responsible for the placing of for the placing of just the right plants in just the right places — creating the beautiful setting of the quadrangle. She is an inspiring woman full of energy, love, and charm which is all expressed in her work. Other than the contributing of her time and expertise, she has given as a gift the memorial gardens located southeast of Hills Hall. Mary Roberts has turned her appreciation for Olivet into a visible creation full of beauty which, in turn, is a reflection of her life.

During the planning of the "Quad" development, several goals were established. It was hopeful that the proposed "Quad" would become a more functioning area, providing a social center for students, improve foot traffic to and from buildings and enhance the aesthetic beauty of the campus. Within the Decker Quadrangle are several significant highlights. The firepit and the stage area both serve to make the "Quad" functional where activities may take place. Rather than functional, the President's Walk, the tree of knowledge, and the series of "O's" are more symbolic. The tree of knowledge is in the center of an "O"-shaped brick planter symbolizing "Olivet." The planter is encircled by an "O"-shaped, red bricked President's Walk on which appear plaques bearing the names of the past senior class presidents.

The students have seen the Decker Quadrangle develop before them almost as though they were watching an artist create a painting. Upon arrival in the fall there was a canvas of concrete and soil, but as time passed, the picture developed with the painting in of trees, plants, colors, activities, people. The Decker Quadrangle is more than just something to look at, it has become a focal point on campus. It gives the campus an atmosphere of "community." It is an area where friends can gather, activities can take place, and memories can be made.

Is Home Where Your Heart Is?

TERRI ROBERT

They say, "Home is where your heart is," but do we believe it? Before coming to Olivet, had we any idea what our homes and families meant to us? Did they mean anything to us at all, except for just being the places we grew up, with the people we grew up with? Before leaving home to say, "I love my family," seemed to be a phrase we felt obligated to say. The words seemed dead as they came out of our mouths, and we may have felt guilty for not really feeling them. Most of us were really glad to leave home and come to school, to get away from the hassles of the family scene. We may have been afraid, afraid we would never be homesick. Is it possible that we really didn't love our families, at least not like we thought we should?

The first couple months of school were fun, and we just didn't miss home. It was always nice to get a letter, money, or a phone call, but the desired knowledge of our love wasn't there. Most of our freshman year we wondered about our love, and every once in a while we felt a little of it. At the end of the school year we may not have wanted to go home, and we probably wanted to even less after summer began. The love we thought was beginning to develop just vanished.

Our sophomore year we were ready to come back and get into the swing of college life. We cannot explain how or when it happened, or when we began to feel love for our families, but slowly the realization came over us. As time went on our semesters got harder, and those phone calls to home when our parents would say, "Just do your best," they meant so much to us. We were beginning to really see our parents' love for us. For some of us, this may have been the first time we ever told our parents we loved them. We may even have hugged a brother or sister when we went home, we missed them and it was great to see them.

Well, now our love for our families is still growing. When we go home, we still see some flaws, and there is still some arguing, and there are still some hassles. But now, now our families mean something to us. Home is more than a couch and a television, where we get free food and a good bed, it is a place that we love and appreciate, a place where we know we are loved and wanted.

You may wonder why, why it took us so long to find a love for our families, or why we could never tell our parents we loved them? Somehow, we just didn't communicate our love well enough to our families. Maybe we got so caught up in ourselves we forgot to take time out, and really learn to love and appreciate our families. However, all that is now irrelevant, except that we may use it as a motivation to instill free and open love in our future homes. Home is where your heart is. As we continue to grow up and become independent, we realize our lives may take us away from home, and someday we will have homes of our own. But now, a very special part of our hearts will always be at our home where they belong.

Scope (SKOP) v. 1. to set one's eyes upon someone or in some direction in order to see 2. to glance or gaze at someone 3. to use sight in seeking, searching, watching 4. to express or suggest by looks 5. to view, inspect or examine 6. to inquire into 7. to investigate 8. to give attention to 9. to direct one's expectations or hopes to 10. to observe or behold 11. to regard with admiration or respect 12. to visually search or examine.

Scope (SKOP) n. 1. the recipient of one's attention 2. one who is admired 3. he/she who is gazed upon 4. that which is sought after 5. the observed or beheld 6. the searched out 7. one who unknowingly charms 8. he who lures, entices, magnetizes 9. fascinator 10. instigator of happiness 11. object of dreams 12. breath taker.

Olivet students, or for that matter, students anywhere, rarely need a handbook or manual of definitions in order to know how to scope or be scoped. Scoping is one of those things we take for granted. Sometimes it becomes so natural that it is an engrained part of our being.

Many times our day's happiness depends upon one small glance, a smile or "hello" to or from our scope. If we're enticed enough by this special person, we may find ourselves planning our day around them — even if they don't know who we are.

"Your eyes melt, you quickly look away."

For those who do scope, there are limitless opportunities. Walking into Saga, your eyes scan the cafeteria; you find the scope. Be careful, don't watch too closely. (Your eyes melt, you quickly look away.) Your mouth is parched, your stomach aches, and your thoughts race as you wonder whether "the scope" has noticed you, too.

The Decker Quad has added limitless benches where one can sit, and scope or be scoped. The cold winter wind moves "scopers" into the library. The true scoper takes books with him, but rarely if ever intends to study.

Chapel provides another place to scope. About forty times a semester we're assured that they'll be sitting in their assigned seat. (Of course, we know their section, row and seat number and if they're absent, our hearts are saddened.)

Whether your experiences with scoping have been good or bad, the next time you leave your dorm room, take that extra time to comb your hair, brush your teeth, or simply to put on that special smile — you never know who's watching.

Liz Powers, who was once an avid scope, says, 'It's just fun to have someone to look for, and to look nice for.'

COMPANY ATTENTION

CLAIRE FLAMMANG

“Beep-Beep-Beep: 0445-Ugh!” Another day is just beginning in the life of ROTC cadets here at Olivet Nazarene College. “Where are my boots? I can’t see a pickin’ thing — Ouch!” Every Wednesday morning ROTC cadets come together at 0530 in Birchard Gym for leadership training. “I hate mornings!” This training is the base training needed to prepare each cadet for the challenges that he will confront during his summer Advance Camp training period. “Psst-Psst-hey Door RA, I need to get out!” What a sight for sore eyes: thirteen people coming together in BDU’s (camouflage uniform), all of whom just rolled out of bed, to begin early a.m. training. “Company Attention!” — comes the cry from the gym. “File from your left-column left-MARCH!” “Right flank-MARCH!” You can hear the echoes of the training cut through the early morning air.

During this training, the cadets receive extensive training in drill and ceremonies. The three Senior Olivet cadets plan the training, teach the training, and continually evaluate the training. The Junior cadets, or more often called MSIII’s, are the main focus of ROTC training throughout the year. They are the people that have leadership training and responsibilities bombarded at them continually in hopes that they will gain the knowledge base and confidence in themselves to be able to perform above average during their ROTC military training experiences.

ROTC here at Olivet Nazarene College is three years old. We commissioned our first 2nd Lieutenant in May 1983. This year, 1984, we will commission three more 2nd Lieutenants and our dreams for the future are to increase the numbers five fold. The program is young. In a sense, every cadet is a pioneer, but through the encouragement of Captain Hicks, the administration, and the great enthusiasm of the cadets it will be easy for the Corps to grow.

We, the cadets, are becoming active here on campus. People are curious about us; about the scholarships available, about the commitments involved with each scholarship program. It is exciting to be a part of such a motivating group as ROTC. It is nice to see that honor and patriotism are not dead; that young people are interested in investing time out of their lives to allow the very young the opportunity to grow and have a future in a free land.

There are sacrifices involved with being in ROTC-training at odd hours, training on weekends, special activities and projects, and the like, cause added stress to the already stressful life of college students, but the rewards are numerous and continuous. Winning the scholarship, ribbons, medals, receiving letters of accommodations, cadet evaluations, and the rank structure; all these aspects and many more come together as a great motivating factor to create the want to meet each challenge and succeed.

It is indeed a privilege to be a cadet, but it is an honor to be an Officer Candidate affiliated with a Christian college. The realization of the need for Christian officers in the peace-keeping forces becomes evident when the cadet encounters his first active military base. There is a great need for Christian officers and each of the cadets here at Olivet realize how effective we are to the Corps for being Christians.

“Well, it is almost 0630, I have to dismiss the cadets. Another day in the life of an ROTC cadet has begun and ended. Just the same, I would like to convey to all that we, as the Corps of Cadets here at Olivet Nazarene College, appreciate all the support that you the students, faculty, and administration give us throughout the year. Thank-you!” — “Company — fall out!”

The Hands Sit Idle on the Clock Face, and No Chimes Ring

Susan Boe

Olivet's Milby Clock Tower has been undergoing some major repairs recently. The clock towers approximately 50 feet above ground, and its location is well known by students walking to Burke. The hands sit idle on the clock face and no chimes ring.

Jim Burton, from Buildings and Grounds, took on this major project with two other men, Jeff Tripp and Bill Jacobs. One whole day was spent building a porch-like platform at the top of the tower. Burton stated, "This has been one of the most challenging jobs I've worked on at Olivet." Climbing 50 feet in the air on ladders and also using an electric hoist, they managed to get the job done while dodging pigeons.

The Tom Milby Memorial Clock Tower was constructed in 1972 in memory of Tom Milby. The words "Tom walked this path on his way to heaven," are inscribed on a plaque on the clock tower. Tom was the son of Dr. J. Harlan Milby of Springfield, Illinois. "He was a dedicated Olivetian and a fine Christian young man," stated Mrs. Maybelle Reed. During his sophomore year at Olivet he was suddenly stricken with leukemia, and ten days later he passed away. He was a student with great ambiions but did not live to fulfill his goals concerning bettering Christian education.

After Tom's death, Mr. Harlan Milby, a highly regarded business man, decided to give years of his time in the field of development. Dr. Reed, past president of Olivet, approached Mr. Milby and asked for assistance concerning the development program at Olivet. During this time plans were being made for the construction of the Milby Clock Tower. The clock was very expensive, and many other instruments eventually were going to be added to the tower. However, within one year the clock had been vandalized and the mechanisms were damaged beyond repair. This brought much frustration to many who knew the significance and appreciated the beauty of the tower.

It's been several years since the clock tower has worked because of the weather and roosting pigeons. This repair project, under the direction of worker Jim Burton, is the first step to restoring the clock tower's original purpose.

A restoration process has begun this year on Milby Clock Tower.

MORE POWER

RANDALL KING

The staff of WKOC-FM faced a unique challenge when it returned for the 1983-84 school year. In the spring of 1983, a long awaited power increase had finally been completed and the station that once only had a range of several miles, now was broadcasting to all of Kankakee County. The challenge that faced these students was to take new power, build an audience in the Kankakee community and become a full service, Christian alternative to other radio stations.

Under the direction of faculty advisor, Prof. Don Toland, the student leaders of WKOC mapped out a comprehensive plan of objectives and ways that the station could improve to build its community audience. The first major change was in the orientation of programming and the mindset of the staffers towards the community. No longer would campus events be promoted that only were relevant to the Olivet community. Special emphasis was given to what was happening in Kankakee, Bradley and Bourbonnais and listeners were encouraged to send in their announcements of special activities for church or civic groups.

A significant change occurred in the fall semester when WKOC expanded its broadcast day to 18 hours. Daytime hours that had previously been off-the-air times for the station because of classes were now filled with inspirational music and WKOC offered its services from 6 a.m. to 12 p.m. every day. Further attention was also given to providing a variety of Christian music that would appeal to different age groups. A new format of "Adult Contemporary Christian" music was aired in the afternoon and received high praise from many listeners.

Another step towards becoming a full service station came with the addition of news to the daily programming schedule. A news staff was organized in the fall semester that reported the latest in state and local news every morning and afternoon of the week. Student reporters began covering local city council and school board meetings, and local elections were covered competitively. In February, a wire service printer from United Press International was added, and national events became an integral part of the news and information available to WKOC listeners.

More special programs were added to the weekly schedule also. In addition to the nationally known programs by Dr. James Dobson and Charles Swindoll, to name a few, WKOC produced a number of programs itself. Community Close-Up" featured interviews with the leaders of the service organizations in the area. The "Kankakee Countdown" weekly ran down the top ten Christian songs in the area based on listener's requests. And "WKOC Sports Weekend" took an in-depth look at national, state and local sports action and featured interviews with local high school and college coaches.

Special events were also aired by WKOC in this year of improvement. The staff went on the scene for special remote broadcasts of community activities. The "FM-88 Great Skate" invited area families to come for a night of roller skating to their favorite Christian music. And "Share the Joy" was the station's first radiothon where listeners contributed financially to the ministry of WKOC.

WKOC met the challenge that faced them and succeeded in this very important year because of committed people who believed in the importance of a Christian radio station. The audience in the Kankakee area for WKOC has grown considerably and will continue to do so because of young people who believe there is a higher purpose to their efforts and work hard to further improve the quality of the station's programming. WKOC is no longer just a campus radio station. It is an ever-improving service to Kankakee County that is more than just entertainment or information, but is a ministry.

"... those days when you receive as many as five 'real' letters at once, and then your box stays empty for the next week and a half!"

“... or Not Collecting Mail”

Jana Sherrow

We all have our own routine to follow. One part of our routine that we all share is that of collecting mail, or not collecting mail! If we were to watch the “after chapel crowd” hurry over to Ludwig to check their mail boxes, we would see a display of emotions ranging from disappointment to ecstasy.

A common occurrence on campus is to make the trip all the way to Ludwig, just to find out you still don't have any mail. There are days however, when you peek in the little window, see a lot of envelopes, and open the box only to find out it is the day for “junk” mail — announcements for club meetings, notices from Saga to come and sign your time card, or warnings that you have seven overdue books at the library. There are also those days when you receive as many as five “real” letters at once, and then your box stays empty for the next week and a half!

Fortunately, there does exist a brighter side to collecting mail. There are a couple of students who do receive mail regularly. The mailbox is not only a place to pick up letters, but also a place to collect those anticipated little pink cards. Slamming your box shut, you take a short cut through the ping-pong tables to the Post Office where you pick up your long awaited care package.

The “mail area” is a place to socialize as well. For instance, a friend may point out that special person that you have been dying to meet. Perhaps you and an acquaintance would be able to negotiate rides home. There are endless possibilities to the conversations that could take place in the “mail-box area.”

It makes the day seem more special when you receive a letter or card because someone was thinking of you. Not only does the receiver feel special, but the sender has a warm feeling inside to know he or she has helped to make someone's day better than what it would have been.

How does a real live freshman handle what happens to him the first several weeks after he arrives on campus? He is almost overwhelmed. Moving in, getting a meal pass, finding classrooms, buying books, locating the library and stamping its hours deep on his heart, take up the first few days. Life is a whirlwind of meeting schedules, making deadlines, getting used to the professors and new grading scales, staying up late studying or writing papers. Meeting new people at every corner and becoming the best of friends — changing, adjusting, growing from within, becoming stronger, perhaps wiser. Running for class office, voting again and again and again for the same people that no one really knows in the first place — waiting anxiously for the phone to be connected, then jumping to the sound of the cricket, eager for that first legitimate phone call, only to find that it is a friend down the hall. Being away from home, and changing, never to be the same again. Looking back on days past and learning from old mistakes. Doing laundry with no help from mom, managing a meager budget, having to learn to eat at Saga.

Reflecting, loving, cherishing old memories, somehow sad about growing up, realizing that people change, grow older, grow together and grow apart.

Accepting the present as God directs, cruising the quad, walking to K-mart, going down to the Red Room just to see who's there. Watching the upperclassmen and imitating them, trying to fit in, but looking like a freshman. Listening to tapes and looking at cards in the bookstore, checking the mail eight times a day, hoping to receive a church bulletin, a form letter or even an informative note from an advisor. Going to the home football games, and getting sunburned on only one side, running on the track, swimming with friends, taking walks that always seem to lead rightpast the Dairy Queen. Going to the library to socialize instead of study, having the new-found freedom but missing the comforts of home. At home there is rest and comfort instead of deadlines and pressures. No exams, just acceptance and love. Learning about life and taking the challenge, changing, struggling and growing. Change is often difficult, uncomfortable but necessary. Vital to life, growing stronger with Jesus Christ. Leaning fully on Him for every need. Meeting challenges face to face, together.

EYE OF THE TIGER

KARI GREEN

O-N.-C. Let's Go! yell the cheerleaders as they shout with enthusiasm to encourage the spirit of the 1983-84 season. This spirit has intensified over the sixteen-year-history of cheerleading at Olivet.

When cheerleading began in 1967, the squad had four members. By 1973, it had increased to ten, including five men. They helped with the chants and pyramid building. This helped to increase game participation by the spectators. By 1976, the squad united as an all-girl squad of eight. Coach Watson's daughter, Holly, was the mascot. Holly chanted on the sidelines and capped the top of a few mounts during the basketball season.

When 1977 came, two students dressed as male and female tigers and mocked the cheerleader's performances. They also entertained the crowds during the games by chasing each other around or by imitating a player when he made a mistake.

Since 1979, the Pep Band has been a spirited addition to football and basketball games. They play short one-line songs that the cheerleaders, and the crowd can yell; such as, "beat 'em up, beat 'em up, rah, rah, rah!"

Throughout 1980, cheerleaders maintained their renewed spirit. The addition of new cheers, routines and increased seating for fans enhanced the spirit. For the first time, a new Junior Varsity squad formed to boost school spirit. They combined with the Varsity squad at home games.

In 1981, a majority of the varsity squad members were new, including former cheerleader Jane Postin, who sponsored the squad. Daryl Hazelwood, then a student at Olivet, worked with the squad on their gymnastic stunts. He demonstrated the use of the mini-tramp, which proved to be a real advantage for the girls' stunts. "Christian unity keeps the squad from looking like any other," described then-captain Pam Gard.

"Shine for Christ" was the motto claimed by the 1982 squad, and that they did! The cheerleaders were invited, along with the basketball team to go to the Silverdome in Pontiac, Michigan. Sponsor Marsha Jones said of the trip, "The girls put hours of work into developing precise arm motions and steady mounts for a polished look." The girls took this opportunity to "shine" for Christ, to the thousands of people through their victory cheers and smiling expressions.

The cheerleaders adopted the football team's motto and had "the eye of the tiger" spirit during the 1983 season. The players wore tiger tee shirts with the logo on them.

Finally the 1984 year had furthered Olivet's cheerleading program. Its sixteen-person squad with eight men and eight women has added to the school spirit. New uniforms and stunts have also added to the squad's sense of uniqueness. Coach Watson feels that "Olivet is a step above cheerleading at the other colleges because of the quality of the participants and the level of skills that are used." Over the years, cheerleading has increased in its gymnastic skills. Since 1979, this has been an important aspect of the performance. This year the emphasis has been placed on dismounts and double stunts.

Captain Danielle Ainley feels that the sense of unity stems from devotions. The squad feels that prayer times together give them a better attitude and God's strength to glorify Him with "one heart and one mouth."

Cheerleading. A group of individuals who show a oneness in supporting a team with spirit. Emphasizing a Christian attitude keeps Olivet cheerleading continually climbing to its peak in performance.

SENIORS CAPTURE

The Class of 84 will never forget the Ollies Follies of their senior year. Winning almost every event, they dominated the competition during the day-time games and the night-time talent and skits. The Social Committee must organize quickly because the competition begins the first weekend of school. Resembling "Almost Anything Goes," the action-packed day provides the students with a little healthy exercise and a lot of fun and sunshine. Some of the annual events are human pyramid building, grocery cart races, tug-of-war, watermelon seed spit, pie eating competition, and marshmallow stuff.

One of the highlights of the Homecoming celebration is the coronation of the Homecoming Queen and the announcing of her Court. This year, they incorporated the theme "A Year of Gratitude" and presented it beautifully. Steve Close enhanced the evening with two ballads and Professor Don Toland served as the emcee. A CONGREGATIONAL HERITAGE

KELLI GILLIAM

College Church of the Nazarene was organized in Miller Dining Hall on August 18th, 1940. However, the roots of the congregation go back seventy-seven years to the beginning of our college. For the most part, the congregation was made up of members of the college faculty and the members of their families in 1940. Today the church ministers to thousands of students who go from this circle of worship to places all across the United States and around the world. In addition, the College Church congregation, now has significant community involvement with four full time pastors and staff, and programming for all ages from birth through senior adults.

During the first year of the church's existence, no full-time pastor was called. Instead, Dr.'s A. L. Parrott, L. H. Howe, S. S. White, and J. F. Leist, alternated filling the pulpit. In 1952, Dr. L. Guy Nees was called to pastor our college church. It was Dr. Nees who led the congregation through all the major steps of the building of the church. Groundbreaking ceremonies were held on May 23, 1954, as plans for the colonial type structure began to take the form of what we now know as College Church.

The graduating class of 1984 has seen three men fill the pulpit here. Dr. Bill Draper, who resigned in 1980 to move to Point Loma Nazarene College; Dr. Mevlin McCullough, now serving as the District Superintendent of the Northwest Oregon District; and our present pastor, Dr. John Bowling, who came to us from Dallas First Church of the Nazarene. All have been equally important in the work of the church and equally endearing to the hearts of the students and members of the congregation as well as the community people of Bourbonnais.

The College Church has indeed been blessed with the lingering spirit of her forefathers, and a constantly renewed sense of commitment to the Christ she serves. We are indeed fortunate to have access to a place of prayer, revival, and guidance such as is found there. We as students shall always find great gratitude in our hearts for the influence of College Church of the Nazarene.

GETTING INVOLVED

Club Day is a great way to indoctrinate new students to all the organizations on campus. At the beginning of the fall term, each club is asked to set-up a booth to answer questions and give the students a chance to sign-up. The lobby of Ludwig Center is usually filled to capacity with club members and students interested in joining. Some of the clubs which participated this year were Pre-Law Club, Business Club, Ministerial Fellowship, Ski Club, Secretarial Club, Art Club, L.I.F.E., Home-Ec. Club, Women's Residence Association, Men's Residence Association, and R.O.T.C. The Associated Student Government is very proud of its sub-organizations and believe that the best way for the students to get involved is to join a club.

BLADE RUNNERS

With all the cold weather, it was only natural that ONC students would brave danger to life and limb and hit the Kankakee Ice Rink. Although most of them spent more time on the ice (literally), and a few bruises were present when they left, laughter outweighed tears and many made return trips.

The Annual Christmas Banquet, "An Old Fashioned Christmas," was held December 10th in Ludwig Center. Guests were first greeted by Mr. and Mrs. S. Claus, and ushered through the lower level which was beautifully decorated with the trees representing various clubs. Social Committee carried out the theme in the cafeteria which contained a General Store and a ceiling decorated with handmade quilts, greenery, and hundreds of white lights. As per tradition, Dr. Sayes read the Christmas Story in a bedtime setting to Nicole and Camille White. Concert Singers and soloist Mark Parker provided the musical entertainment. This year's Presidential Gift was a beautiful reference Bible presented by ASG President Bill Slattery. The Banquet was dedicated to Dr. David Kale, Professor of communications and Chairman of the Division of Languages and Literature.

CHERI GREER

The phone system at Olivet was changed for Fall 1983. Several factors brought about the change from the dorm service to the residential system. Students now hold full responsibility for their own phones, as opposed to the old system where they only paid for long distance calls.

According to Jim Tripp, the key factor necessitating the change was obsolete equipment and the need for modernization. Doug Perry, business manager, further explained that the old mechanical syntrex system in the basement of Chapman Hall was getting extremely costly for the phone company to repair. It also utilized a large amount of space. Illinois Bell warned ONC that they would be unable to replace parts within a short period of time. The old equipment was being rented for $100,000 a year, with a drastic rate increase of 30 percent.

Other colleges have also found this type of system to be more effective and efficient. Northwestern University and the University of Illinois have residential systems as well.

Many students complain that the new system is very costly. However, this system has put Olivet in a better financial situation. This obviously will help students overall tuition expenses.

There was rumor that installation and monthly service charges were free for students under the old "dorm system." Actually, the cost was absorbed in the overall tuition for each student. Considering this, many students wondered why tuition expenses were not less to compensate for the difference. Doug Perry explained that finances are managed through several designated funds. The "auxiliary fund" which accounts for dorm and student services was balanced out by the fact that occupancy in the dorms was down. According to Sue LaMontagne, an administrator at Illinois Bell, "the school got the biggest benefit." However there are many advantages for the students.

A benefit that often goes unnoticed is the credit a student establishes when having residential service. The student then becomes responsible for his or her own bill and, because of the established credit with Illinois Bell, has a taste of what adults experience every day with juggling household expenses.

Although 95 percent of the students have phones here on campus, reaching those who don't can be a frustrating experience especially when trying to relay important messages.

Despite the confusion and all the controversy over the change, Illinois Bell believes "In the long run, it's going to be cheaper, easier, and more efficient using the residential service." It is expected that from now on students can obtain phone service within one week from the beginning of school. Last semester's delay was attributed to the "strike and the newness of the situation," according to LaMontague. The yearly installment fees have been a major concern for everyone involved. Grover Brooks, Dean of students, expressed that an effort would be made by the school to negotiate something with the phone company.

A final concern has been the split of Illinois Bell and AT&T, which took effect January 1. This implies that customers can no longer get all the phone services from one source but must deal with the two different companies to obtain a phone. This significant change will greatly effect businesses, but for the time being, it is believed that residential services are better protected. Among the students and faculty at ONC there seems to be a general feeling of satisfaction with the change.

CHAPEL

Three days out of the week, we
worship...

The Chapel services at Olivet are the few times during each week that every student joins together to re-focus on the real purpose of coming to this school--Education with a Christian purpose. Dr. Ted R. Lee directs the hour-long service by scheduling speakers and lining-up special numbers in song. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of each week, 9:35 brings every full-time student to Chalfant Hall. After four misses, fines are incurred. Jean Beatty, Chapel Coordinator, has the responsibility of recording and documenting each absence. She is assisted by the chapel checkers who are under the direction of Mark Parker, Bob Griffith, and Lynne Peters.

Students gather at 9:35 to worship together.

ENOUGH TO MAKE YOU HOMESICK

JILL FERREE

As college students we are faced with so many questions of major importance: What will I do after graduation? Where will I live? Who will my mate in life be? We are forced to make decisions daily that could change the courses of our lives: Will I go to class or sleep in? Will I eat that brownie or go running? Will I do my laundry or wash out underwear in the sink again tonight? Wait! Now there's a monumental question! Although often overlooked, the problems and hassles of doing laundry as a college student can be the cause of tremendous emotional strain and mental anguish. We all know the feeling of running to that drawer and realizing that it's that time again. It's time for some very important decisions to be made.

First of all we must decide whether or not we will indeed do our laundry. Do we have time? Will we make time? Are our priorities so in order that we will give up our afternoon nap for two and one half grueling hours over a hot washer and dryer?

After hurdling the first obstacle, we must then decide where we will wash. For those privileged few who have their own equipment in their dorm basements, the decision is already made. But for those who do not — two options are available — off campus and Ludwig. However if you have no car, and are not attired to meet regulation dress code in our student center, choices are very limited.

OK, so you've chosen a spot; on to the next question. How much money do you have or are you willing to spend? (What we are really asking you is "How cheap are you?") Will you spend the extra 50¢ for a dryer, or take an entire load of wet corduroys back to the room to be draped over chairs, window sills, dressers, and roommate's stereo speakers?

The questions are not all answered so easily. As Olivet students, we must take Christian attitudes along with us when we do laundry. We are confronted with still another decision when we arrive at our chosen laundering area and discover that all the washers are full and some jerk's laundry is done and he is not there! Here our fourth big decision confronts us as we decide if we will take out his clothes so we can put our load in. OK — so that we do. And then we run off to go study, watch TV, or socialize in the "Dead Room." Of course we have very legitimate reasons for being gone for any length of time. So upon our return we feel justified in exploding at the one who has carelessly dumped our precious garments all over the nearest table or chair.

One's fun cannot possibly end there: To our horror, we discover that the one person on campus we have worshipped from afar is indeed with us in the very room (also grappling with his own problems.) You glance his way, then quickly look away as you discover you have dropped your most embarrassing piece of clothing on the way to the dryer.

Your last few conflicts seem minute in comparison to the trauma you have just experienced. As we pull our best clothes out of the dryer (that we have decided to spend the 50¢ on), we realize two things: either they are wrinkled beyond recognition or they are now the size you wore in seventh grade.

Recovering from yet another disaster, you finally succeed in scrounging up enough hangers for all your shirts. As you begin the final trek back to the dorm room, however, it now seems as if you have four times more clothes than you did on the way. The laws of physics and folding have once again taken effect.

WHAT'S WHAT

RED ROOM AND GAME ROOM

Many ONC students enjoy playing Rook or backgammon in the Red Room while sampling some of the snacks such as grinders, pizza, and hamburgers. Video games, ping-pong, and foos—ball provide a great atmosphere for the Olivet community.

RESIDENCE HALLS SPONSOR OPEN HOUSE

Almost every Sunday night from 8:30 to 10:00, Open House is sponsored by the various Residence Halls. It's a great time to visit with your friends and see how the other half lives. Plus, it's a good incentive for the men in Hills Hall to clean their rooms . . . once.

MRA SPONSORS RUN FOR FOOD PANTRY

Run for the Food Pantry was an event sponsored by MRA to raise money for an organization in Kankakee. There was a successful turnout, and it was for a worthy cause.

SOCIAL COMMITTEE SPONSORS VALENTINES BANQUET

Love was in the air the night of the 1984 Valentines Banquet. This beautiful affair was sponsored by Social Committee and took place in Larsen Fine Arts Center. The meal was a prime rib dinner, and the musical entertainment was provided by Bryan Starner and Julie Green.

FRIDAY SPELLS LATE SKATE

A traditional weekend event on our Campus is Late Skate on Friday night. Between 12:00 and 2:00 a.m. Bradley's Skating Place is invaded by one or two hundred Olivet Students ready to tear up the rink. Various clubs sponsor this great money making event.

KRESGE GOES 3-D

All of these creatures gathered to watch "The Creature From the Black Lagoon" in 3-D. WRA sponsored this event in Kresge Auditorium. It proved to be an eye-opening event.

WHAT'S WHAT

PETRA "ROCKS" OLIVET

Through a setting of fog and colorful lights, Petra brought the best of contemporary Christian Rock and Roll to O.N.C. They strongly believe in using their talents and strengths for Christ in any way which includes ministering to non-believers also. Overall, Petra was an enlightening event which might have raised a little controversy, but broadened our campus into a different and energetic way of sharing our message.

PRESIDENTS TEA

This annual event hosted by the President and his wife was held in the lobby of the Larsen Fine Arts Center. During the Christmas season, it is a good time for the faculty and staff to gather for food and fellowship. The Concert Singers provided the entertainment for the SAGA catered event.

DRAMA/CHORAL DEPARTMENTS' SPRING PRODUCTION

This year's spring drama presentation was a combined effort between the music and drama departments. All of the scenes featured songs from musicals such as The Sound of Music, La Boheme, and The H.M.S. Pinafore. The selections featured members of the three school choirs and selected faculty.

McCLAIN HALL WINS FAMILY FEUD

After two weekends of competition, McClain Hall emerged the winner of Family Feud. Sponsored by Social Committee and emceed by Alan Dillman, the nights were filled with music, flashing lights, and lots of laughter as O.N.C. became a part of the daytime game show.

DR. MENDELL TAYLOR

Dr. and Mrs. Mendell Taylor spent two weeks on the campus of Olivet during which time he directed a seminar on evangelism and was a featured Chapel speaker. The Chapel messages were part of the Harry Dickerson Chapel Series.

ARTIST/LECTURE SERIES

The Artist/Lecture Series is an endeavor to stimulate the cultural awareness and thinking of O.N.C. students. These concerts, seminars, and guest appearances are free to students and subsidized through activity fees. Pictured, are Robert Hale and Dean Wilder who were accompanied by Ovid Young for an inspirational night of musical entertainment.

ORGANIZATIONS

The purpose of Student Government at Olivet is to secure a close relationship between the student body and the administration.

This past year the members of the Student Council and the Administration kicked off the year with their annual retreat held in Kalamazoo, Michigan. Student Council has worked on many projects this year including the Mary Scott Missionary House. We hope that what we have accomplished will be beneficial to future students.

There is a sense of eternity around the AURORA office. For that matter, a sense of eternity about yearbooks in general. Who hasn't flipped through old yearbooks, sometimes remembering the past, sometimes trying to visualize the past of others. Our staff is responsible to the Olivet of yesterday, our Olivet, and the Olivet of tomorrow, to produce a book on the 1984 school year. We hope for more than a laugh or two and a dusty bookshelf. We hope that we have made a reference book of ONC 1984. After all, it was here Only ONCe.

WORD FROM RICH

It is unbelievable to realize that we are two-thirds through the first semester. I hope you can feel along with me a greater sense of class spirit and unity. We have a great class and the turnout for the events we have sponsored has been fantastic. Our newsletter is starting later than I anticipated but your council has been busy! The first week of school we put on the Freshman Class Party and co-sponsored with WRA the first late skate. We sold T-shirts and candybars. If you are still interested in buying a T-shirt please talk with any of the council members. In September we presented a Rock Seminar with Michael Mills. During the month of October our class won the second pep rally competition in the quad. On the thirteenth we had a Sophomore "Class-Only" Barn party. It was a great time! Our Class Recognition display should be up by the time this comes out. It is in front of the rabbit. We hope you like it!

Looking to the future, our class will be presenting an all-school communion on November 20th at St. Luke's Church. Let's have a good class turnout for this special time before Thanksgiving.

Well, that was a quick run-down. Feel free to tell yourself or any of the other council members any suggestions or thoughts that you have concerning our class.

Thanks for your support
 Rich Jones

Thanksgiving break is just two weeks away and that in itself is something to be thankful for. We're so happy to get this first newsletter to you and we hope that you will enjoy it. We also hope you will offer any ideas and suggestions that you might have for it. The letter will come to you once a month and will include information that we feel you, as a member of the sophomore class will want to know. Please take advantage of the newsletter for items of interest and announcements you would like to share with your classmates. Contact: Pam Gooden, Box #802.

Thank you!

The Freshman Class are the new ones on campus. It is an exciting time to branch out, meet new people, try new things, and continue spiritual, mental, and physical growth. Orpheus ministers through music to people of all ages. In addition to blessing others through song, it builds and uplifts each member of its own ranks. Although composed of students from various backgrounds, interests and majors, Orpheus remains a closeknit organization. Those who enjoy singing come together, form bonds, and become a working whole. If even a personal problem arises, fellow members are there to help, support and pray for one another. Above all, the desire of Orpheus is for people to look beyond the notes they sing, and to listen closely to the words, words which tell the message of Jesus Christ. It is with Christ at its center that Orpheus choir becomes a blessing through which God is glorified.

FOOTBALL

Throughout the setbacks of the season, it has been a learning experience —
 Head Coach Ken Richardson

With a young, inexperienced team, the seniors were called to carry a heavy load. The four-year men were not to be denied in their efforts for team improvements. The seniors included: Stan Allen, Dave Bruce, Mike Conway, Alan Dillman, Brian Etchison, Jack Goudy, Darryl Harvey, Dave Malone, Brian Riesen.

Each of these individuals exemplified the quality effort of which was expected him. Through winning streak and bad break situations, the seniors maintained poise and the desire to move ahead.

Mike Conway, Senior Co-Captain, notes that over his four years at Olivet, he has enjoyed football on a personal level and wouldn't trade the Christian atmosphere — what the football team and college — represents — for anything.

BASKETBALL

"An Exciting Season for Both Players & Fans"

Coach Hodge

A year that began with many questions were well answered by the ONC Tiger Basketball team. Returning four starters, including top scorer John Allhands, Steve Davis, Kenton Hasselbring, and Jon Hodge, the Tigers began with a strong nucleus for this year's season.

Sophomore Todd Leander filled the fifth spot in the starting lineup this season, and showed considerable improvement throughout the year.

Giving crucial help from the bench was Senior Co-Captain Tim Robbins, plus Freshmen Dennis Metcalf, and Kevin Jennings.

The Tigers posted some impressive wins in the early season over Quincy, Millikin, and Northeast Missouri State, which prepared them well for the N.I.C. schedule. The Tigers charged through the conference with a 10-2 record in the N.I.C., 18-8 overall.

This record was sufficient to gain them a piece of the conference title and a berth in the NAIA District Playoffs.

The 83-84 campaign was one where individual talents were blended by Head Coach Ralph Hodge and Assistant Coach Mark Fleming. The result was the most successful season since ONC's 1980 Conference Champions.

Despite a season of cold and windy weather, the 1982-83 men's tennis team could not be stopped as it achieved its one desired goal — to once again capture the NIIC Conference Championship. This goal became a reality due to several key factors: a more experienced team, leadership by first-year coach Mark Fleming, and support from freshman newcomers.

The team was led by Senior and three-year conference champion Rod Carpenter. Rod ended his successful tennis career with his fourth year conference championship. Third-Year veteran Paul Horton also won the conference championship in both singles and doubles, paired with Monty Lobb. Freshman Jeff Schimmelfennig, playing at the number three flight, showed great promise for the team with his tournament win.

The team was rounded off with the support of Curt Crocker, Kent Meyers, and Jeff Arnold.

Although losing their top player to graduation, the ONC men's tennis team hopes to draw on past skill and experience to remain on top — and stay there.

Olivet Soccer became well acquainted with disappointment and frustration in 1983. After beginning their training camp with the potential for a strong squad, the team was plagued by injuries which cost them much needed offensive production. In spite of the injuries and very tough competition, ONC still managed to make a strong showing all season, losing seven games of their sixteen game schedule by only one goal and posting a much deserved win for a 1-15 record. The team loses Tim Bardy, Stan Boice, and Phil Walker, all 4-year starters, as well as Dan Wiens and Clayton Walker to graduation. They also lose a sixth man, as Coach John Culp will leave to take a new position on the west coast. Culp has only one regret of his six years with Olivet soccer. He wished that the program could have been more successful for the sake of the players. Culp leaves the team with what should be a strong offense for 1984.

The new Olivet Golf Team picked up this year where the Old Olivet golf team left off in 1977. In two of the last three years that Olivet had golf, 1976 and 1977, they won the NIIC Conference Championship. Now, six years later, the Tigers have done it again. The new program, under the leadership of Coach Larry Watson, participated in both the NIIC Conference and the Chicagoland Conference. The top five for the Tigers include Kip Hasselbring, Greg Harrell, Jeff Harrell, Scott Hines, and Ron Landis.

This Has Been a Year of

The Olivet wrestling team achieved another successful season in a year of transition for the perennially strong Tigers.

The team went through many changes during the season, as Head Coach Bob Drebenstedt worked through a myriad of injuries in his first year as the Tiger mentor.

The team was exceptionally young overall, yet a talented group. Leading the grapplers this year were Seniors

Dave Manville, team leader in take-downs, and Steve Klock, who was named MVP at three different tournaments. Also, two-time NCCAA Champion Dave Jennings, a Junior, took MVP at one tourney, despite struggling with injuries all year.

Among the other men who give ONC a bright future in wrestling are: Freshman Ken Tatum, Brian Tyler, Phil Cooper, and Kevin Hurt, plus Sophomore Scott Fitzgerald.

In a move to upgrade the quality of the overall program, ONC wrestled numerous NCAA Division I schools including: Notre Dame, Arizona State, Georgia Tech, Michigan State, Stetson, and University of West Ontario. Six of the seven team defeats came against NCAA schools and speaks well of the competitive, quality program that Coach Bob Drebenstedt has led this year.

BASKETBALL

Olivet's Women's Basketball team began its year with many inexperienced players that resulted in a slow start for the Lady Tigers.

As the team began to mature and improve, there were three starters who were sidelined with injuries: Lisa Miller, Dora Wilbur, and Lisa Mitchell.

With only two regular starters remaining, the Lady Tigers worked hard to salvage their season. With the injuries of three starters, the scores did not indicate the steady improvements that were shown despite their record of 3-15.

The Women's Volleyball Team winds down their season with a record of 14-13. Even though the record is just above the .500 mark, their play has been impressive. Coach Brenda Patterson and her team recently captured second place in the Millikin Tournament. They were also given an invitation to play in the NAIA District 20 Tournament. Statistically, Denise Brady is leading the team in both serving and attack efficiency with a 95 percentage. In the area of blocking, Cindy Campbell is the leader with four blocks a game. Tracey Setters is leading in assists with an average of 8.3 per contest.

SOFTBALL

What started out as a year showing much potential for the Women's Softball team simply didn't materialize.

Despite individual talents, the season was difficult due to the ability to put their efforts together as a team, finishing at 5-18.

However, the hopes for the coming season are high, as the Tigers only lost one senior, Jennifer Craig.

The goals for the coming season are improvements in offense, where they were weak this year, plus a district championship, to add to their capable defensive skills.

The Tiger Baseball team completed a successful season, tying the record for most wins in a season as they battled to 21-12.

Coach Tom Knowles mentioned that the years record could be attributed to the hard work and determination of the Tiger batsmen. He added that this year will show even more improvement, though he wasn't sure they would break the record for wins. The reason for this is the increased difficulty of the schedule in national leagues. Standouts for the Tigers were pitchers, Bob Drake, Dave Neal, and Dale Newsome. Anchoring the offense were senior first basemen, Mike Conway, Butch Stafford, and Brian Morrow. The Tigers experience and manpower should prove another fine season for Coach Knowles and his Tiger baseball Team.

According to head Coach Ralph Hodge, the 1982-83 ONC men's track team enjoyed its best season ever, teamwise and individually. Team highlights include:

— NAIA District 20 Champions
— First place

National Christian College Meet (NCCAA) — 4th out of 22 teams

Millikan Invitational — 5th out of 13 teams

Elmhurst Relays — 4th out of 12 teams

Individual highlights are illustrated in the following new school records:

Dave Bruce: Shot Put (46'8")

Mark Reader: 1500 Meters (4:00.6)

Tim Johnson: 110 High Hurdles (15.6)

Kirk Willard: Steeplechase (10:18)

Dave Malone: Long Jump (22' 3 3/4") and High Jump (6' 8 1/4")

Mike Ulrich: 5000 Meters and 10,000 Meters

Mike Phelps: Javelin (198'4")

Special individual honors go to Mike Ulrich who was the first ONC trackman to qualify for the NAIA Nationals held at Charleston, West Virginia. Mike was also named top performer at the NCCAA National Track Meet and NCCAA All-American.

Coach Hodge looks forward to an even higher level of performance in the upcoming seasons.

"A number of quality individuals are needed to make a successful program, and our track personnel gets better every year in a wide variety of events. We're making strides in the right direction."

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE...

Whether you enjoy participating in basketball, indoor soccer, or volleyball, intramurals provides something for everyone. Available to all students, faculty, and staff members, the activities are designed as a recreational break from the normal routine with an emphasis on developing social skills as well as vigorous physical fitness. The increasing popularity of the intramural program is clearly evident in the large number of participants.

ALL WORK and NO PLAY . . .

CHEERLEADING

With soaring spirits and unquenchable enthusiasm, the 1983-84 cheerleading squads excited the crowds with creative mounts and rousing sideline chants. The inclusion of male yell leaders to this year's varsity squad added a new dimension to the traditionally all-female sport.

The responsibilities of the cheerleaders include raising the spirits and morale of our athletic teams, as well as providing entertainment for the crowds and representing our school.

DR. AND MRS. JOHN C. BOWLING

On behalf of the congregation and staff of College Church of the Nazarene, I wish each 1984 graduate God's best for the future. College Church sits directly adjacent to the campus of ONC and provides a place for students, community, and college personnel to worship together. Part of the mission of Olivet, "Education with a Christian Purpose," is fulfilled through the varied ministries of College Church.

Students are challenged with the call to service through our Fall Missions Conference which includes speakers from a cross-section of world areas, films, displays, and opportunities to visit with missionaries one-to-one.

In addition to the regularly scheduled services, College Church contributes to the spiritual life of Olivet by hosting two special revival meetings each year and a weekend of spiritual renewal when school opens each fall. Throughout the year, a varied program of guest speakers and musicians serve to instruct and inspire the Olivet community.

Olivet students are able to find a "home church" away from home here at College Church. We are trying to provide a meaningful place of worship, nurture, fellowship, and service to all who attend. A great college family and a wonderful community blend together as we fulfill the mission of the church.

GREETINGS FROM WISCONSIN, your friendly northern neighbors. As you, CLASS OF 84, come to the end of this brief span of four years, I doubt if at this point you can truly appreciate what Olivet really means to you. After a few years down the road of life one of two things will happen. Either it will mean more to you or less. If you stay close to the "things we learned within these halls" you will never cease to thank God for the foundation provided for you at ONC. Should you go the other direction and drift away from the "Christ we gave first part" (tragic that many do), Olivet and its sacred influences will fade into oblivion. For years I have pondered over the fact that many of my own class mates, who sat in the same classes with the same Godly professors, attended the same chapel services and the college revivals, to say nothing of the dominant Christian atmosphere that pervaded campus and dorm life, and yet walk away from it all, almost as if it never happened. Our prayer is that the influence of this great Christian College will guide you and keep you until that one great lat "Homecoming" in the skies.
Blessings and prayers.

SEPTEMBER/IN THE NEWS

JESSICA SAVITCH DIES AT 36

Near its end, her life seemed to carry a storybook warning: ambition may lead to power and fame, but the path beckons to a precipice. And her death in a freak accident last week, at the age of 36, will probably give her a place in pop iconography, another televisable symbol of burning drive that guttered out. The reality did not perfectly fit the already emerging legend. But NBC Newscaster Jessica Savitch left resonances.

At 33, her position secure even in the nervous network world, she remained driven and dedicated, a perfectionist who rarely relaxed. In newsrooms she was sometimes jokingly referred to as "Jessica Savage."

The former general manager of Philadelphia's KYW-TV, Alan Bell, recalls. "There was a show-must-go-on quality to poor Jess. In the grand tradition of laughing on the outside and crying on the inside, when the red light went on she'd be out there giving 158%."

She was finding happiness with her new boyfriend, Martin M. Fischbein, of the New York Post. A week ago last Sunday, the couple left a restaurant in the Bucks County resort town of New Hope, PA. It was 7:15 p.m., and they had not been drinking. Moments later, in a heavy downpour, Fischbein apparently mistook a poorly marked towpath for the restaurant parking lot exit. His rented station wagon tumbled some 15 feet into the water-and-mud-filled Delaware Canal, coming to rest upside down. When the car was discovered four hours later, Fischbein was still strapped behind the wheel, and Savitch, along with her pet Siberian husky, lay in the back seat, drowned.

KAL FLIGHT ATTACKED

A South Korean airliner missing with 269 people on a flight from New York to Seoul was shot down in the Sea of Japan by a Soviet jet fighter near a Soviet island off Siberia, the United States said yesterday.

There were no known survivors of the attack, in which a heat-seeking missile was said to have been fired without warning at the airliner by an interceptor that had tracked it over Soviet territory for two and a half hours.

President Reagan expressed "revulsion" over what he called "a horrifying act of violence." He cut short his California vacation and called a National Security Council meeting in Washington today to discuss possible reprisals.

Members of Congress and other American officials erupted in a fury of outrage, and the United States and South Korea requested a United Nations Security Council meeting on the incident. The Council was expected to begin debate today.

There was no clear explanation for the reported attack, which occurred amid several puzzling circumstances. There was an unconfirmed report that the airliner had experienced radio trouble. Soviet officials said it was flying without lights. And United States authorities acknowledged that it was far off course, despite carrying what South Korean officials called sophisticated navigational equipment.

As American, Soviet and Japanese ships and planes searched frigid seas north of Japan and reportedly found traces of fuel where the jet apparently went down.

A Soviet explanation late yesterday was rebuffed by the State Department as "totally inadequate." The Soviet statement did not acknowledge that a Soviet plane had shot down the airliner and did not accept responsibility for the incident, the State Department said. 9/2/83 by Robert D. McFadden.

ANORXIA STRIKES THE CARPENTERS

The pop singer Karen Carpenter, who with her brother Richard sold more than 30 million records as the Carpenters, died Friday of cardiac arrest at Downey Community Hospital in Downey, California. The 32 year old singer was found unconscious by her mother, Agnes Carpenter, at her parents' home in Downey, a suburb of Los Angeles, and was taken to the hospital.

The Carpenters were a major pop team for the first part of the 1970's, with 17 million selling albums. Miss Carpenter's contralto was heard on such soft-rock singles as "We've Only Just Begun," "Rainy Days and Mondays," and a remake of "Please Mr. Postman." Their version of Burt Bacharach's "Close to You" won two Grammy awards in 1970, and their album "The Carpenters" won a third Grammy in 1971.

Karen Carpenter was born in New Haven, Conn., on March 2, 1950. She and her older brother, Richard, started a pop-jazz trio with a friend in California in 1965, with Richard on keyboards and Karen on drums. The group won a battle of the bands at the Hollywood Bowl and was signed by RCA Records, but the two albums they recorded for the label were never released; they were considered "too soft." The trio subsequently disbanded.

In 1980 Miss Carpenter married a real-estate developer. Thomas J. Burriss of Newport Beach, California. Mr. Bloch said the couple was getting a divorce. He also said Miss Carpenter had suffered from anorexia during 1981 and 1982, but had recovered. "She looked great," Mr. Bloch said. "She was anxious to record her new album, and she was in good spirits."

OCTOBER/IN THE NEWS

LECH WALESZA'S NOBEL PRIZE

After three years of consideration, the peace prize had finally been awarded to Walesa, the scrappy electrician who climbed over a fence at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk in 1980 to create the Soviet bloc's first independent trade union movement. The prize was a personal vindication for Walesa, and it gave a badly needed boost to the millions of Poles who had grown dispirited over Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's success in crushing Solidarity. Although Jaruzelski officially lifted martial law in July, he has kept the screws on Poland, and Walesa's attempts to establish a new dialogue with the regime have floundered. No one expected Walesa's award to ignite demonstrations or force the government to loosen its grip. But coming after the pope's triumphant trip to Poland in June, it was sure to inspire Poles with a fresh commitment not to abandon their struggle for freedom.

Walesa announced that he would donate the $194,000 that came with the prize to a foundation that Poland's Roman Catholic Church plans to set up to channel Western aid to private farmers.

To compare Walesa to political leaders was to miss the point. As the Nobel citation suggested, Walesa belongs in another category of prize winners, including Martin Luther King Jr. (1964) and Andrei Sakharov (1975), whose valiant struggle for human rights is worthy of reward in itself. Poles have always honored the principle that it is just as important to fight for freedom as to win it. And in their long quest for national independence, they have always looked for — almost mystically — any sign that their cause was just and honorable. Lech Walesa's Nobel Prize has given Poland just such a sign.

A MORAL VICTORY

No, it wasn't a case of mind altering drugs in the dormitory water supply. That really was Ted Kennedy speaking to 5,000 students and townsfolk at Jerry Falwell's Liberty Baptist College in Lynchburg, Va. And he was getting applause — for one of the best speeches he has ever given.

Kennedy's appearance resulted from the mass mailing equivalent of crossed wires: the senator received a membership card in Falwell's Moral Majority. "I know (you) are not all that happy with President Reagan, but this is ridiculous," Kennedy told Cal Thomas, a Majority vice president. When Thomas invited him to visit the campus, Kennedy offered to speak. "Some of our people see him as the devil incarnate," Falwell warned Thomas, but he acquiesced. And after a bit of stiffness, the Kennedys (including daughter Kara and sister Jean Smith) and the Falwells (including the minister's wife and son) enjoyed a pre-speech supper of beef Wellington. "He's a liberal and I'm a conservative and no amount of dinners will ever change that — but we like each other." Falwell said. But if it was wrong to call ERA supporters "blasphemers," he suggested, it was equally wrong for liberals to call Falwell a "war-monger." Kennedy drew applause by calling the shoot-down of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 "outrageous and barbarous," and by criticizing Reagan for not cutting economic aid to Poland. "You might have gotten to a few of them tonight," Falwell said later, "but I'll get them back."

AUSTRALIA'S CUP RUNNETH OVER

Never mind that it was nearly dawn, Australia time. The country had won "the race of the century," breaking the 132-year U.S. lock on the America's Cup, and Australia — to be quite mild about it — was going absolutely bonkers. Even Prime Minister Bob Hawke didn't seem to mind. "Any boss who sacks anyone for not turning up today is a bum," he told a nationwide television audience. "It's Australia's cup now."

And so it is. Australia had taken on one of the world's superpowers at its own game, on its own watery turf and by its own rules — and won gloriously. At first scorned and patronized, then feared and pettifogged by the blue bloods of yacht racing, Australia II with her upstart crew became the first successful challenger in the history of the cup, turning a 3-1 deficit first into a tie and then a decisive triumph over the U.S. defender Liberty in the exciting final race.

Australians have become state-of-the-art pioneers in more than international yachting. They are also at the forefront in radio astronomy, solar energy and microsurgery.

It is hard to see how a few scattered artistic and scientific successes can translate into solutions for Australia's fundamental economic problems — or how one world-class yacht could turn a whole nation into a world-class contender. But in the wake of Australia II's dramatic triumph, the spirit was certainly willing. For the moment, however, most Australians weren't thinking about the future. Only the present — and a silver mug that some of them have already begun to call "the Australia's Cup."

NOVEMBER/IN THE NEWS

WHAT MAKES JESSE RUN?

Our time has come! It was a rousing, revivalist war cry that thrummed through the cavernous exhibition hall of the Washington Convention Center, punctuated by joyous assents from the crowd. From slave ship to championship — our time has come! For 45 minutes, he held them — chanting, clapping, swaying — with the rhythmic, rhythmic message he has carried through the South on his drive to register black voters. From outhouse to White House — our time has come! He was making it official: the Rev. Jesse Louis Jackson was running for president, launching a maverick campaign aimed, he said, at restoring “a moral tone, a redemptive spirit, and a sensitivity to the poor and the dispossessed of this nation.” From disgrace to amazing grace — our time has come!

The performance was part of show-biz, part gospel meeting, part politics — and all Jesse Jackson. He is a fascinating mix, both philosopher and flimflam man, a peripatetic preacher-cum-politician of ferocious energy, spellbinding oratory and unending controversy. He has been defined as everything from a black messiah leading the dispossessed to the promised land to “Booker T. Washington in bell bottoms.”

Jackson is not the first black to run for the presidency; that honor belongs to former Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, who staged a largely symbolic presidential bid in 1972. But Jackson, who is both the best-known black and the most gifted orator in American politics, has every possibility of becoming the first black to attain credibility and political impact as a genuine presidential contender. Just how much impact he may have — on his Democratic rivals, on the Democratic Party, and ultimately on Ronald Reagan — very much remains to be seen.

AMERICANS AT WAR

ABC's “The Day After” forced viewers to face the ultimate horror.

What distinguishes “The Day After” from every previous treatment of nuclear war is that it forces us to graphically experience the ground-zero agonies of ordinary people. This film is not about politicians or generals mouthing clinically abstract references to “megatonnage” and “dense packs.” Instead, it focuses on average middle-Americans going about their day — a farm family preparing for a daughter's wedding, college kids registering for classes — while, off in the background, half-heard snippets of TV bulletins report “NATO armored troops breaking through ... Soviet-built MiG-25s invading West German airspace ... nuclear weapons in the low-kiloton range airburst over ...” Then come four minutes of the most horrifically searing footage ever to pass a network censor: building implosions, group immolations, a carnage of mass vaporizations. And when it all settles, the starkest nightmare ever broadcast has only just begun.

There's never been a movie like ABC's “The Day After.” “The Day After” has already emerged as the single biggest mobilizing point for the antinuclear movement, roused thunder from nuclear-freeze opponents who regard the film as a two-hour commercial for disarmament and inspired a nationwide educational debate about how to talk to children about the horrors of nuclear war. Aside from its special effects, what most explains the unprecedented controversy surrounding the show is the fact that it both coincides with and reinforces a growing nuclear consciousness. But “The Day After,” as even its creators acknowledge, will probably have negligible impact on the already committed. What the makers of this film fervently hope for is that their efforts will not only scare the public but inspire it to start asking some very large questions.

NUCLEAR NIGHTMARE

Body bags and concrete rubble. The mournful sound of taps and a parent's agony. Paratroopers fighting on a tropical island. The joy of rescued students kissing American soil. The Beirut bombing and the Grenada invasion came in a rush of conflicting images and emotions, almost too sudden to absorb. A nation plunged into anguish at the slaughter of Marines in Lebanon awoke just two days later to discover its troops were seizing control of a tiny island in the Caribbean. It was a week of both tragedy and triumph. And it was a week when Americans were brought face to face with the consequences of being a superpower intent on using its military might to try to shape an unruly world.

For Ronald Reagan, it was the keenest testing time of his presidency. In the course of a 24-hour span, he received both the appeal of Grenada's Caribbean neighbors to send a fighting force to restore order in the island and then the terrible news of the blast in Beirut. From the very first, Reagan was inclined to heed the call to go into Grenada.

How will the invasion turn out — for Grenada, for world politics, for Ronald Reagan? The world, to the alarm of some and the relief of others, has been shown an America prepared to exert its force in a cause it considers just. And Reagan, at the risk of seeming reckless, has acted strongly and effectively. A week that began in disaster looked like it might end up doing some good for America, for its president and for one small part of the world.

CABBAGE PATCH CRAZE

The first trappings of the season struck early and hard. It was as if an army had been turned loose on the nation's shopping malls, ravaging the Ficus trees, sloshing through the fountains, searching for the legendary stockrooms said to be filled with thousands of the doughfaced, chinless, engagingly homely dolls that have become the Holy Grail of the 1983 Christmas shopping season: the Cabbage Patch Kids.

No one went farther for a Cabbage Patch doll than Kansas City postman Edward Pennington who, despairing of finding one in the Western Hemisphere, flew to London to get one for his five-year-old daughter. His mission made eminent sense compared with that of a dozen or so Wisconsinites who drove through the cold Milwaukee County Stadium in the expectation that 2,000 dolls would drop out of the sky: a local radio announcer had reported, as a lark, that a B-29 bomber would be making the airborne delivery and that customers should bring catcher's mitts and credit cards to be photographed from the air.

By varying hair and skin color, clothing, type of mouth, location of dimples and freckles and other parameters (including sex: the ratio is roughly two girls to one boy), Coleco has thus far avoided making two completely identical Cabbage Patch Kids. Each one comes with a set of adoption papers and a name, assigned by computer to prevent duplication.

In the faces of the crowds pressed angrily against the Toys "R" Us window you see some of the worst of America, and, to tell the truth, it's not that bad. Who could doubt the basic humanity of a nation that rises as one to demand, of all things, a doll for Christmas?

DEMOCRATIC RACE

The race for the Democratic presidential nomination between Walter Mondale and John Glenn, almost neck and neck in September, shows signs of becoming a runaway, according to a poll taken for Time Magazine this month. The former Vice President's lead over the Ohio Senator has stretched to a gap of 34% to 18% among voters of the Independent and Democratic parties. Among democrats alone, Mondale does even better. In the poll of Democrats and Independents, the other candidates trail badly. George McGovern and Jessie Jackson are at 6%; Alan Cranston and Gary Hart at 2%; and Reubin Askew and Fritz Hollings bring up the rear, at 1%. But one-quarter still undecided, and polls this early in the campaign tend heavily to reflect name recognition of the candidates.

While Mondale has risen in the polls, so has the man he seeks to unseat, Ronald Reagan. The President is riding a tide of good feelings generated by the robust economic recovery. About 60% of those responding to the poll "feel that things are going well these days," while about one-third of them were as sanguine a year ago. In fact, the country's mood is better than at any time in the past six years. Most cite domestic issues, particularly lowered inflation, as the cause of their improved opinions.

In responding to the question of what were the main problems facing the nation, 31% said the danger of war, while 27% cited unemployment. Almost as many, 18% were concerned about the middle-East and the nuclear arms race, as about inflation, 20%. In January of 1981, by contrast, more than 80% of the public focused on domestic issues while only one-third were primarily concerned with public affairs.

REAGAN'S SPACE STATION

In his State of the Union Message next month, Reagan is all but certain to propose that America build a permanent, manned space station. The open question among his advisors is whether he should reach even farther — calling for a U.S. moon base, perhaps, or a piloted flight to Mars.

Putting up a U.S. space station is the practical alternative at hand. NASA has long sought the facility as America's next logical step into the solar system. The technology is available, and Reagan could finance the initial planning and design stages with an expenditure of only $100 million or so through 1985. At that relatively cheap cost, Reagan can position himself favorably as a high frontiersman compared with Democratic challenger Walter Mondale, who opposed the space shuttle — and as an outer-limits visionary to match John Glenn, who has already called for a space station. The idea is to present an incumbent candidate with ideas "grand enough, exciting enough to lead America into the 21st century," says Republican Congressman Newt Gingrich of Georgia, a co-founder of the Congressional Space Caucus. The political stakes are tangible, says Gingrich; "There's an entire generation out there that believes Luke Skywalker is real."

Weightlessness: NASA estimates that the United States could build a modular space station — its parts ferried up on the space shuttle — by 1991 at a cost of about $9 billion. Other nations might help with financing, hardware and expertise; Germany, Italy and Canada have expressed interest. The administration is also expected to offer tax breaks in hopes of attracting financing from private industries. The weightless environment could produce several industrial breakthroughs. For example, factories in space could make tiny synthetic spheres with a 100 percent insulation value — a feat that would revolutionize the construction industry. "President Reagan is very much attracted to the idea of creating something that gives us new opportunities to develop products that are going to be used back here on earth," says an aide.

"ON CAMPUS" — "1984"

With scholarly programs and gimmicky promotions, campuses take a timely look at Orwell's classic. It has been 34 years since George Orwell's novel of negative utopia, "1984," appeared, but now that the title year is here, academia is on an intellectual feeding frenzy. Scholars love to ruminate. So they are laying on lectures, courses and symposiums, relating the book and its author to everything from literature to political science.

It's not exactly that no one noticed 1984 approaching. The freshman yearbook distributed at Yale in the fall of 1980 — for the class of 1984 — contains 302 pictures of Orwell, used as substitutes for each freshman who did not submit his own photo. Orwellmania began to speed up early last year. In May the University of Michigan held a three-day symposium on "The Future of 1984," encompassing such topics as Orwell's views on women and the family, and whether the book was intended as satire or prophecy. Northern Illinois University plans an interdisciplinary symposium this spring that will examine "1984" through six different fields of study.

Iowa State's Institute on National Affairs has invited an FBI representative to its weeklong Orwell conference in February. "The FBI is, in some ways, a Big Brotherlike phenomenon," says James Lowrie, a professor of English and the meeting's organizer.

The book itself will also return to the curriculum in a big way. The novel has been taught only occasionally in college, mainly because so many students have already read it.

The book itself hardly needs sales impetus — more than 150,000 hardcover and 10 million paperback copies are in print — but the publishers, needless to say, are planning an anniversary trade-paperback edition.

Now on sale is the 1984 Big Brother Calendar. It notes about 250 dates that the creators consider anniversaries of government intrusion into the lives of individuals. Maybe "1984" just isn't funny. Ron Givens

PRINCESS CAROLINE WEDS

Princess Caroline

In sharp contrast to the pomp and circumstance of her first wedding five years ago, the marriage of Princess Caroline of Monaco this month to Italian businessman Stefano Casiraghi, 23, promises to be decidedly low-key. "It will be a strictly private affair with some close friends," said a palace spokesman of the civil ceremony. Since the Vatican has not ruled on the 26-year-old princess's request for an annulment of her two-year union to Philippe Junot, the marriage will not receive the blessing of the Roman Catholic Church. This time around, however, Caroline's family approves of her companion, a hardworking heir to one of Italy's largest oil and real-estate fortunes. And so, apparently, does Nancy Reagan. When the First Lady heard of the engagement, she promptly invited Casiraghi to join the rest of the royal family for a weekend at the White House in February.

THE BREAK-UP AT&T

"Good Grief."

That heading in American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s in-house magazine seemed to say it all. In the two years since chairman Charlie Brown boldly agreed to break up the 98-year-old phone system, sadness and apprehension have engulfed the country. Brown himself is holding back the tears, but he admits the experience has hurt him deeply. "We had a terrible time with it both emotionally and physically," he says. "I have to tell you, we are in chaos ..."

Chaos is right. Brown's "new" AT&T is continuing to lose market share in the lucrative long-distance phone business at the same time it's fighting to maintain dominance in the fiercely competitive market for telecommunications equipment. The turmoil spreads far beyond the immediate Bell family at the New York headquarters. The seven regional holding companies being spun off by the parent have serious problems of their own: they must somehow now operate local telephone systems without the backing of AT&T's corporate treasury — and in the midst of public outcry over the prospect of higher phone bills ahead.

AT&T's 3.2 million shareholders may be more perplexed than anyone; they have to decide what to do with the eight separate stock certificates they will soon be holding. In Washington, Congress has proposed legislation in the name of protecting consumers and small business that would muddy the regulatory waters even more. While divestiture was likely to increase competition, and lead to technological breakthroughs, experts still worry that it could prove a detriment to what is now the best telephone system in the world.

ANDROPOV DIES

For 176 days the Soviet people and everyone else had asked: Where is Yuri Andropov? He finally reappeared last week on Soviet television — Laid out on a funeral bier in Moscow's Hall of Columns. Another old Soviet boss had faded away — before his own people or the rest of the world even got to know him.

History could already write Yuri Andropov's epitaph: too old, too late. He had maneuvered his way upward with all the cunning of a former spy chief. But his body failed him before he could imprint a lasting record.

For all its early energy and purpose, the Andropov interlude ended in a melancholy reprise of Leonid Brezhnev's passing. Once again the lights were on late at party offices and KGB headquarters in Dzerzhinsky Square. A radio variety show gave way to strains of Chopin and Schubert. The people of Moscow slogged to work through a blinding snow squall. Then at mid-afternoon, newscaster Igor Kirillov appeared on television wearing a black suit. His message was plain before he spoke a word: it had happened again. Only 15 months after Brezhnev's funeral cortege wended its way through Red Square, workers began putting the flags at half-mast for Andropov.

If possible, Andropov's death seemed to surprise most Russians even less than Brezhnev's did. Andropov had last appeared in public with a group of visiting U.S. senators last August 18. Since then, the Soviet people had been told that he was recovering. But many knew better.

The Soviet government conceded the extent of Andropov's maladies only in announcing his death. Andropov died at 4:50 p.m. on Thursday, apparently at a special sanatorium for Central Committee members at Kuntsevo, on Moscow's outskirts.

THE POWER AND THE GLORY

The gold medals have been struck, the TV cables laid, the dreams dreamed. And so the Olympic year begins: with 1,438 skaters, skiers and sledgers poised to celebrate the controlled skid in all its wondrous forms. Of the 49 nations in attendance, the Soviet speed skaters have the sharpest blades, but they will be shadowed on the 400-meter oval by the East Germans, the Dutch, the Norwegians and a lone Japanese. On the slopes, it is the Austrians who are the defending Olympic champs; the current World Cup season has been so closely contested, however, that any of a half-dozen nations could capture the Olympic alpine gold. To make matters even less predictable, several certified superstars will be missing from the Sarajevo Games. Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark and Liechtenstein's Hanni Wenzel are among those who have been declared nonamateurs by the IOC for failing to funnel their incomes through their respective sports federations. The net result is that this is anybody's Olympics — a competition too close to call, too good to miss.

In the anything's possible atmosphere of Sarajevo, the fate of America will probably depend on a millisecond saved or lost here and there on steep slopes and good luck on ice — especially on how the hockey puck bounces. The United States is especially strong this time in the glamour sports of alpine skiing and figure skating. We look good going into the Games, if you don't concentrate too hard on less visible events and final medal tallies.

What America needs most, once every Olympiad, is a flashy ski racer who can beat the Europeans at their own game. This year, for the first time since the Winter Olympics were inaugurated in Chamonix, France, 60 years ago, the United States boasts a pair of male gold-medal hopefuls: the 26-year-old Mahre twins.

At the XIV Winter Games possibly the best team ever assembled by the United States will go to the gold with a handful of heroes and a lot of hope.

MARINES PULL OUT

The giant CH-46 helicopter lifted off slowly from its landing pad inside the U.S. Marine compound, its pilot carefully avoided jerking the huge netted crate that hung like balast beneath it. With machine gunners at the ready, it whirred low over the beachside terrain and headed for U.S. Navy ships on the horizon, there to set down its cargo just as gingerly.

Thus last week did the Marines begin pulling out of Lebanon — a complex and potentially hazardous retreat that must be staged under the gunsights of the Muslim militiamen who flanked them on three sides. Men and material will move across a strip of uncontested land directly west of the Marine compound to the beach and out to sea. So far at least, the huge camp breaking was proceeding with remarkable smoothness.

Logistically, says the Marine officer interviewed in the Pentagon, withdrawing from Lebanon "is like peeling an onion in reverse." Action begins in the center, with the pullout of nonessential materiel and personnel, while an outer ring of rifles and machinegun companies holds the compound. In addition to the tons of equipment already moved out, about 250 men have been ferried to Navy ships off the coast, and more were scheduled to leave soon.

Quite a few of the Marines are less than enthusiastic about sea duty. An understandable qualm perhaps, but it would be difficult to imagine more confining quarters than the bunkers into which the Marines were driven while trying to keep the peace in Lebanon.

COLOPHON

The 71st volume of the AURORA at OLIVET NAZARENE COLLEGE was printed by Taylor Publishing Company, Dallas, Texas. 2600 copies were printed (100 to be used by Taylor representatives as a sample design book, 650 to be used by the Development office of Olivet, 150 for the College in general distribution, leaving 1600 for distribution to the student body). The book is funded by the ASSOCIATED STUDENTS via an activity fee each semester, and by funds raised through advertisements.

There are 320 pages upon which all copy is set in Melior style. Body copy is set 12 point standard and Headlines vary between sections. The paper used is an 80 pound Enamel. The Only ONCE logo was designed by Jim Stonestreet. The opening section, Senior's section, Activities section (16 pages), and the Sports section (6 pages) were printed in four colors and the Gallery pages used Gun Metal Gray spot color on the Duotones background. The cover is rounded and backed and Smyth sewn to the vivi-text endsheet. Two sets of proofs (Camex system and Brownlines) were utilized.

The sad truth is it takes more than all of the above to produce a yearbook. It takes: writers, editors, photographers, job stamps, copy sheets, quad-packs, type books, grease pencils, techni-croppers, rough drafts, ghetto blasters, slide sorters, funky music, ladder diagrams, more ladder diagrams, typists, red pens, all nighters, representatives, friends, family, God, and a willingness to sacrifice time, fun, weekend travel, and more than a few test scores. Dedication is the key. When you have that, everything falls into place. Well, almost.

ONCE

It's hard to leave, even when it is time. However, we move on to tomorrow mourning that which is past, but anticipating what is to come. It is with these garbled feelings the school year ends.

NOTES FROM THE EDITOR ON THE LAST NIGHT OF THE FINAL DEADLINE

It's 3:26
(A.M.) and it looks as if there actually will be a 71st
Aurora.

It is finished; the battle is over. (And on time, too)

There are many to thank for this accomplishment, so here goes — Terri, Loren, and Shona; (my first deadliners), you are wonderful, you gave me confidence and were the hardest workers a man could ask for — Susan, Elizabeth, and Dave; maybe we were too laid-back and mellow, but we got the job done and you can be proud of your work — Marc and your cohort Becky — Munch Munch, Gobble Gobble, Zip Zip. Thanks for being imaginative and industrious and for making me laugh (and laugh and laugh ...) — Michelle and my assistant Kelli — thanks for the late labs, low tests, missed classes; you were my right arm(s) — and to the rest of my staff and friends — Mark, Mark, Andrea, Julie, Joy, Donna, Margie, Jeff, Ray, Nancy, etc. . . . a giant thanks for the back-up and for not always asking "How's the book coming?" My thanks also extend to Gordon Wickersham, Grover Brooks, Tim Haitz, Flo Walton, Dave Hannold, and Kerry Dollard and to my parents who spent more than one late night praying for me and this book. It is now 3:58 and someone just yelled "Last copy sheet — Praise God." That pretty much sums up my feelings, too.

Respectfully Submitted,

MICHAEL D. MALONE
