Bulletins

A gift in excess of $4,000 has been left to the Alumni Association by the late Carrie May Keller Horan, '20, of Tulsa, Okla. Mrs. Horan, who died last December after a long illness, began her teaching career in the public schools of Marshall, Ill., in 1900. Before taking the two-year degree at Eastern, she taught in the primary grades of Nowata and Sapulpa, Okla. She received her bachelor's degree from Ohio State University in 1925 and the master's degree from the same school in 1928. She was primary supervisor and principal at Ogmulgee, Okla., and primary supervisor at Port Arthur, Tex. For several years, she taught during the summer at Tulsa University. Up until the time of her illness, she was active in the First Methodist Church of Tulsa and was in charge of compiling a history and brochure of the church. Throughout her life, she was interested in civic affairs wherever she lived. More than half of her estate was left to charitable and educational institutions. The Executive Committee of the Alumni Association will meet July 26 to discuss the possible establishment of a scholarship from the gift.

Two juniors were presented the Livingston C. Lord Scholarships at the annual spring commencement ceremonies. Receiving the Alumni Association Awards for scholarship were Miss Sharon Kay Orndoff, Paris, and Miss Kathleen Rae Skinner, Albion. Miss Orndoff is studying in the field of secondary education and Miss Skinner is working in elementary education. Miss Sharon Carr, an honors graduate, received the Annie L. Weller Scholarship, given the first time this year in memory of Miss Weller, head of the geography department from 1903 to 1940. The award is made to a graduating senior planning to pursue graduate study prior to a career in teaching.

The Class of 1914 will hold its fiftieth anniversary reunion Oct. 17 at the 50th annual Homecoming celebration. Assisting in the preparations for the reunion are William John Schernekau, Robinson, president of the class, and Oren L. Whalin, Urbana.

Plans are underway to establish and reactivate Eastern Illinois University alumni county clubs. A manual on the establishing of county clubs is now being prepared by the Alumni Office. The subject will be one of the major topics of discussion at the July 26 meeting of the Executive Association. No decision has been made as to how many clubs the Association will attempt to get underway in 1964-65, but it is probable that the first efforts at organization will be made in those communities which formerly had clubs.

Virgil Sweet, '53, basketball coach at Valparaiso, Ind., High School, was one of the staff members of the 14th annual coaching school held this summer at Eastern. Others on the staff were Tom Stewart, football coach at Champaign High School; John McLendon, basketball coach at Kentucky State College; and Charlie Bradshaw, football coach at the University of Kentucky.

Harry Read, '50, city editor of the Charleston Courier-News, joined the alumni and information staff of Eastern July 1. Read will be assistant director of information, publications and alumni services. He will be acting director in information and publications during the absence of Dan Thornburg, who will take a nine-month leave for graduate study. A native of Calhoun, Ill., Read will be in charge of general news coverage, university publications (not student publications), and alumni publications. Director of Alumni Services is Ken Hesler, '51. Before joining the Courier-News in 1951 as sports editor, Read was a history teacher at Marshall (Ill.) High School. He became city editor of the Charleston paper in 1953.

Campus Talk

The largest graduating class in the history of Eastern received degrees May 24 in an outdoor ceremony on the University Union-Library quadrangle. The 462 new Eastern alumni were told by President Quincy Doudna that he hoped they would enter their various fields with enthusiasm and with the belief that Eastern was an Alma Mater to represent with pride. Students graduating with high honors: Charlotte Baker, Charleston; Mrs. Marilyn Breen Conley, Charleston; Barbara Logan Lawrenceville; Sandra Moore, Sidney; Keturah Reinbold Palestine; and Peter Lee Willson, Wilmington.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for Eastern's new classroom building were held June 9. The building, to be located south of Garfield street across from the light tennis courts, will consist of 29 teaching stations, four seminar rooms, one language laboratory, and office space for the faculty who will teach in the building. The $3 million building is scheduled to be ready for the 1966 fall term.

A record summer enrollment of 1,976 students has been reported for Eastern's combined 10-week quarter and 8-week graduate session. President Quincy Doudna said 1,553 students are attending the regular quarter, with 423 persons enrolled in the graduate term. The new high is an 18 per cent increase over the 1,671 enrolled last summer. Freshmen account for the sharpest increase, with 211 enrolling this year as compared with 127 last summer. Eastern will continue to push its summer program, according to President Doudna. "We have made important progress toward using our physical plant and faculty with greater efficiency by enlarging our summer school enrollment. Three summers ago, our enrollment increased only four per cent," he said.

The Teachers College Board recently approved an application fee of $15 which will be charged each new and transfer student beginning with the 1965 school year. The non-refundable fee is separate from any existing fee or advance deposit. It will be payable with the submission of an application for admission. All schools governed by the Teachers College Board will charge the new fee. They are Eastern, Illinois State University, Northern Illinois University, and Western Illinois University.

Reorganization of the Eastern speech department and appointment of an acting School of Music director has been announced. The speech department will be divided into three separate departments, effective Sept 1. They will be speech, speech correction, and theatre arts. Wayne Thurman, who has been acting head of the speech department, will become head of the speech correction department. E. Glendon Gabbard, professor of speech, will head the theatre arts department, and the new speech department will be headed by Donald P. Garner, associate professor of speech. Earl Boyd, chairman of the department of instrumental music, has been named acting director of the School of Music, pending a decision as to a permanent appointment to replace the late Dr. Leo J. Dvorak.

Eastern Restricts FALL ADMISSIONS

On June 22, Eastern president Quincy Doudna announced that the University would be unable to accept most applications for fall quarter submitted after 5 p.m. Friday, June 26, ten weeks before the registration date for fall quarter. The ruling applies to both new and transfer students, but not to students previously enrolled at Eastern.

The decision to restrict admissions was made

"I regret to advise you that since June 26 we have been unable to consider further applications for fall quarter admission except in a few limited fields."

So begins the letter which Eastern has been sending to most prospective students whose applications arrived at the University admissions office after June 26.

This is not the kind of letter any university likes to mail its applicants, particularly those with good high school records. But the surge of applications this spring made the move necessary.

President Quincy Doudna said Eastern regretted having to restrict admissions but that a lack of staff forced the decision.

The lack of faculty also plagued other universities.

Illinois State University ceased to accept applications for admission May 30 because, President Robert G. Bone explained:

"It has become evident that it is impossible to provide sufficient instructional faculty and maintain present academic standards unless we cease admitting students."

And on June 29, the University of Illinois announced that all applications received after July 1 would be placed on a waiting list.

The action at Illinois was taken "due to limitations of faculty and space," according to Dean C. W. Sanford of the Office of Admissions.

The decision to restrict admission for Eastern's fall quarter was not an easy one.

It is unusual and difficult for a state university in Illinois to inform qualified applicants that their admission to the University will have

"We are obligated to insist that students come only when we are able to care for them properly."

—Doudna

necessary by a shortage of faculty and not by a shortage of either classroom space or housing. In the first two weeks after June 26, the University received 46 applications of which it accepted nine.

The following discussion is presented in an effort to inform alumni of the factors associated with the decision to restrict fall quarter admissions for the 1964-65 school year.

to be deferred, for university officials are well aware of the importance to a student of getting an early start on his college education.

But there were also other things to be concerned about, particularly the several thousand students who had already enrolled or made application.

The Problem

Stripped to its bare essentials, the problem became one of educational philosophy and simple arithmetic.

President Doudna put it this way:

"Eastern can take care of approximately 4,300 students this fall. If we continue to accept applications, our enrollment will approach 4,600 students. We cannot properly handle this number."

The president said he did not wish to deny to any qualified student a chance to enroll at Eastern.

"We are obligated, however, to insist that students come only when we can care for them properly, which, for additional applicants now means winter, spring, or summer quarter," he said.

His statement expresses a conviction that a university should not dilute its offerings by accepting more students than it can properly handle. In other words, what has been gained if by accepting an additional 200 students a university lowers its quality of instruction for 4,300 students?

Closely tied with the matter of high-quality instruction is class size.

Although the size of a class may vary, depending upon the nature of the subject, President Doudna has long insisted that some limitation must be placed upon the number of students in a particular class if the learning situation is to be maintained at a high level.

Therefore, depending upon the number of teaching faculty available in the various subject fields, there is a limit to the number of students the University can "properly" accommodate at any one time.

Because Eastern has adequate staff available in some subject fields, it has not cutoff admissions entirely.

Limited Admissions

A limited number of high-ranking students are being accepted in the fields of botany, chemistry, geography, home economics, industrial arts, Latin, Latin American Studies, physics, and speech.

Unlike many private schools, state universities are unable to set an absolute limit on the number of qualified applicants they can accept provided they have adequate staff and facilities.

Thus, the key to having almost exactly the number of faculty members needed to accommodate the enrollment is a system of forecasting at least two years ahead. And the process of forecasting can be even more difficult for the university official than the political pollster.

The arithmetic for estimating the fall enrollment in 1964 began in the spring and summer of 1962 when Eastern, along with the other state universities, prepared its budget for the 1963-64 biennium.

At that time, the best available information indicated that the enrollment would increase substantially this fall, probably a little in excess of 400 students.

Consequently, the budget for adding new faculty was prepared on this basis and was subsequently approved by the Teachers College Board, the Illinois Board of Higher Education, and the Illinois General Assembly.

Using the standard formula of adding one additional faculty member for every additional 16 students, the budget called for 24 new staff members in the fall of 1964.

All of the state universities had anticipated a substantial increase in enrollment this fall, basing their estimates on the known college-age population, size of high school classes, and recent enrollment trends in their individual institutions.

New Factor

But as applications began to pour in at an ever increasing rate, a new factor began to appear—the percentage of high school graduates planning to go to college was apparently increasing sharply.

Consequently, President Doudna asked and received permission to employ six additional faculty members, drawing on limited contingency funds provided in the biennial budget for emergency use. But still the applications came in, running about 50 per cent above the same time last year.

With applications arriving at the rate of about 10 to 15 a day (about 65 a week), the University would have to add four new faculty members each week once the number of applicants exceeded the limit provided for by the 30 new staff members. At this point the decision to restrict admissions was made.

But two major factors continue to complicate the matter. They are (1) the increasing difficulty in employing well-qualified faculty members and (2) the ever-present but immeasurable number of applications from students who have also made applications to other universities.

As of July 15, Eastern had not yet been able to fill all of the 30 new positions approved for this fall. Dr. Hobart F. Heller, Eastern vice president for instruction, said recently, "We are thus far finding it nearly impossible to locate well-qualified persons for several of the new positions."

And new vacancies were being created almost weekly as some Eastern faculty members resigned to do graduate work or to accept positions offering a higher rank or more salary in other institutions. While the number is not unusual this year, more of a problem is posed because of the shortage of good college teachers.

Supply and Demand

As any economist would note, the supply of college teachers is shortest in those areas where the demand is greatest—those subject fields (English and science, for example) in which nearly all students are required to do study.

When a university sets out to find a new staff member in one of these fields, it quickly becomes obvious that other institutions are doing likewise. Most universities are searching for those persons who have the doctorate, teaching experience, strong recommendations, and a willingness to accept a new position.

As one president of a state university commented recently, "You just don't go out and find this kind of faculty member on two or three weeks' notice."

The factor of multiple applications poses a less serious but more confusing problem.

If Eastern has received 2,117 applications as of July 1, University officials can turn to the evidence of recent years and say that 75 per cent of these applicants can be expected to enroll.

But past experience in terms of statistics is based on averages, and the percentage for 1964 may be 78 per cent or 73 per cent, depending upon whether applicants are making up their minds earlier or submitting applications to more

Sterling Adds Political Buttons To Collection

When Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania made an appearance in Mattoon, Ill., on his whistle-stop campaign through Illinois prior to the Republican national convention, one of the persons most eager to meet him was an assistant professor of history at Eastern.

The faculty member, Robert Sterling, '50, was interested in campaign buttons to fill out a vacant corner of his display depicting a century of political campaigning.

Sterling, who had made advance arrangements to board Scranton's special train in Mattoon, held the display as the Pennsylvania governor personally added his button to the collection.

Although Sterling's collection of campaign materials extends back more than 100 years, his special display opens with mounted pictures (prototypes) of Lincoln and Johnson and their Democratic opponents, McClellan and Pendleton, in the campaign of 1864.

Among the more unusual buttons and lapel ornaments in the collection is a campaign device used in the election of 1880. Gen. Winfield Hancock was the Democratic candidate opposing James A. Garfield. Hancock's candidacy was symbolized with a rooster held by a hand which adds up to "hancock."

Another unusual item is a small, pin-backed metal "presidential chair." On the seat is inscribed "who shall occupy it?" By pressing a button, the seat flips up revealing a picture of Grover Cleveland, elected president in 1884 and 1892.

William Jennings Bryan's exciting "16 to 1" campaign of 1896 is symbolized in Sterling's collection with a ribbon bearing the picture of Bryan and his running mate, Sewall, and a clock. The hands of the clock are set sixteen minutes before one, or "16 to 1," and represents a demand for silver coinage in the ratio of 16 to 1 with gold. Gold and silver bugs with wings that extend mechanically and bear pictures of the candidates are included in the display.

stitutions to be sure of getting into a college.

This apparently small variation can, in terms of real persons, make a difference in the enrollment up to about 200 students—or roughly 12 faculty members.

Multiple applications may be of less concern next year because of a $15 application fee approved by the Teachers College Board in May. The non-refundable fee must be submitted with all applications for admission.

"Students are sometimes careless in making applications to enroll," said President Doudna, referring to the new fee. "We hope they will become more conscientious now."

President Doudna is always quick to point out that there is an opportunity for almost any high school graduate to enroll at Eastern during the summer quarter.

Eastern, one of the first universities in the nation to begin a year round operation (1958), could have accepted another 2,000 students for its 1964 summer term. And summer students are not only automatically eligible to return in the fall, but if they lived in the university residence halls, they have priority for campus housing in the fall.

Death Claims Veteran Faculty Members

Leo J. Dvorak

Dr. Leo J. Dvorak, director of Eastern's School of Music and a member of the faculty since 1940, died unexpectedly Wednesday, June 17. He was 59.

Dr. Dvorak, who came to Eastern as head of the music department, was named director of the newly organized School of Music about two years ago.

Prior to taking his Eastern post, Dr. Dvorak was a member of the music faculty at Illinois State University from 1935 to 1940.

He received his Bachelor of Music degree from Upper Iowa University, Fayette, Iowa, in 1931. He was awarded his Master of Arts degree in 1932 and his Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1939 by State University of Iowa, Iowa City.

In Iowa he served as music supervisor in the public schools at Stanley for two years, at Clamar for two years, at Oelwein for three years, and as director of instrumental music at Upper Iowa for three years.

For five years he was a professional musician at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where he was born and raised. During World War II, he served as a music supervising officer of the Air Corps bands. He held the rank of captain.

He is survived by the widow, Geneva, and two daughters.

Following notification of Dr. Dvorak's death, President Quincy Doudna issued the following statement:

"Dr. Dvorak had long been one of our most useful staff members. Under his leadership the music department grew in strength and quality to the point where it was given status as a School of Music about two years ago.

"The loss of Dr. Dvorak to the university is a severe one, which will be felt by his associates on the faculty and the many alumni and students who knew him well. I count it a serious personal loss as well, for he was a fine friend."

Harry L. Metter

Harry L. Metter

Dr. Harry L. Metter, a member of the Eastern faculty for 30 years, died June 7 at his home in Charleston.

Born April 28, 1898, near Columbia, Ill., Dr. Metter had wide professional experience in the public schools when he joined the Eastern faculty in 1934.

He received the diploma degree from Southern Illinois University in 1927 and earned three degrees from the University of Illinois: B. S. in 1924; M. S. in 1925, and the Ph.D. in 1933.

He began his career in education in the rural schools of St. Clair County in 1916. In 1921 he became principal of East Caron Delet (Ill.) grade school. The following year he was named superintendent of schools at Baldwin, Ill.

From 1925 to 1934, he was principal at Homer, Ill., Bethany, Ill., and a teacher of English and mathematics at Oakland (Ill.) Township High School.

After joining the Eastern staff in 1934 as principal of the Camp Elementary School, a position he held for two years, he became director of off-campus student teaching in 1936.

In 1938, he became Director of Teacher Training and Placement and professor of education, a position he held until he took a disability leave in 1953.

In 1949, he was sent to Germany as an educational adviser in teacher training institutions in Bavaria.

He was past president of the Charleston Rotary Club, a former member of the Masonic Lodge, a member of numerous educational organizations, and a member of the Methodist Church.

Dr. Metter was married to Nell Woracheck in 1920. She survived.

He also leaves a daughter, Mrs. Norma Crewe, '52, Midland, Mich.; sons Raymond, '48, Tulsa, Okla., and Dean, '57, Moscow, Idaho; a sister, a brother, and six grandchildren.

Wynemiah Rardin (Mrs. Garland D. Perry), '22, is employed as a bookkeeper for a labor organization. Mr. Perry died in April of 1963. Mrs. Perry, who lives at 3969 Harold, Detroit, Michigan, writes she is looking forward to Homecoming.

NEWTON E. TARBLE . . .

Alumnus Gift Makes Possible Student Center At Swarthmore

A retired industrialist whose pitching arm was once a topic of interest in Charleston has given $100,000 to Swarthmore (Pa.) College.

Newton E. Tarble starred in baseball while attending the "Model (Singing) School" and the "Normal (Singing) School" from 1903 to 1913.

The gift has assured the establishment of the Tarble Student Center at Swarthmore. The campus library building will be remodeled to provide recreational facilities when a planned new library is opened.

Tarble, co-founder of Snap-On Tools Corporation, now lives in Los Angeles, Calif.

As recalled by Eastern's first baseball coach, Albert Blythe Crowe, a teacher of physical sciences, Newton and his brother George were "naturals" in the sport.

The brothers came to Eastern from Cleone, a community near Marsville in Clark County, where baseball was the grand passion," as Crowe termed it.

In Eastern's first yearbook in 1913 Crowe described the beginning of baseball and the key contributions made to it by the Tarble brothers. Crowe wrote:

"The story of the organization of baseball in the school is largely an account of how George and Newton Tarble, at that time boys in the model school, talked baseball and worked for it until their fondest hopes for a first class, winning ball team to represent the school materialized."

Crowe relied heavily on the young brothers. He wrote:

"The team that first spring (1904) consisted of the Tarble Brothers battery and seven other men chosen from the available candidates as the ones least apt to handicap the season's success . . . Our battery wasincible and our team could score more or less on their opponents, so in spite of our somewhat primitive and anything but uniform accoutrement the season was a very successful one."

Games that first season were played with town teams in Mattoon, Charleston and Westfield. However, in 1905 the team "entered the fast company of the colleges of Eastern Illinois and Western Indiana . . . winning a majority of the games," according to Crowe.

Crowe termed 1905 and the three following years "the Golden Age of Baseball in our school." He said the words "baseball" and "Tarble" were synonymous, and "the question of great local interest was 'How's Newt's arm?'"

Crowe recalled that Newton had control, could throw with "varying speeds," threw a good curve, had an active mind and self-confidence.

Newton Tarble took his diamond ability with him to Swarthmore. A news release describing the $100,000 donation declares "Newt" Tarble "remains a legendary figure in the annals of Swarthmore baseball."

Tarble is still active in sports. He is an enthusiastic golfer and is a member of the Bel Air Country Club in Los Angeles, the Thunderbird in Palm Springs and the Eldorado in Palm Desert.

Baseball has not been Tarble's only contribution to Eastern. He is the principal contributor to the Livingston C. Lord Scholarship Fund and to the E. H. Taylor Memorial Award.

The Swarthmore College library which will become the new Student Center. It will be remodelled for recreational activities through the gift of Newton E. Tarble.

Guinagh's Departure Leaves Past, Present Traditional Link On Campus

One of the links that has helped to maintain the best of Eastern's past in its present traditions will be missing this fall with the retirement of Kevin Guinagh.

But Dr. Guinagh, an educator, scholar, wit, hobbyist, and author, doesn't plan to call it quits after spending 33 years on the Charleston campus.

To dispute those who believe that the late 60's is the time for retirement, the language teacher has taken a position on the Mayaguez campus of the University of Puerto Rico.

He will teach world literature in Spanish. He and Marie Rita, his wife, chose Puerto Rico because of the climate and the professor's interest in Spanish.

Dr. Guinagh came to Eastern in 1931 from Antioch College in Yellow Springs, Ohio, where he taught English. During his first few years on campus, he taught English, ancient history, and Latin.

He became head of the foreign languages department in 1934, a position he resigned in 1962 to devote full time to the teaching of Latin and Spanish.

For two years he assumed an additional role as adviser of student publications. He guided the student newspaper and yearbook during 1944-46.

To the general public, the former president of the IEA Eastern Division is perhaps best known as an after-dinner speaker. Since 1937, when his first book was published, Dr. Guinagh has authored eight books, the majority in the sphere of language.

His latest work is "Foreign Phrases and Abbreviations." It will come out later this year. This particular volume is for general library use.

His first book was widely read throughout the United States. It was titled "Inspired Amateurs" and told the story of 11 men who had revolutionized the scientific world by their discoveries. Dr. Guinagh called them "inspired amateurs" because they distinguished themselves in work other than that in which they earned their daily bread.

The same might be said of Dr. Guinagh. While an exceptional teacher of foreign languages, he has also achieved high honors in fields alien to his training.

"Blaine." When the heel is pushed upward, a hand with extended fingers flies to nose. The pin was circulated during the Cleveland-Blaine battle of 1884.

The oldest item in the overall collection which Sterling says could possibly have been used in a campaign is a metal token portraying Thomas Paine hanging from a gallows. The tokens were pro John Adams devices and were imported from England.

Another prize item in the collection is a "Tammany Bank" which lampooned political conditions in New York during the campaign of 1872. The "bank" represents a Tammany politician seated in a chair. When a coin is placed in his hand, the figure bows his head and places the money in his pocket.

Among other items in the collections are these:

Mr. Arnold Retires After Long Service In Textbook Library

The man whom Eastern Illinois University students have seen for the past 29 years working behind the counter of Eastern's Textbook Library has retired.

He is Henry Arnold, manager of Eastern's textbook library for 29 years. He will be succeeded by Garland Bryan, a 1939 graduate of Eastern.

When Mr. Arnold came to Eastern in 1935, he was in charge of supplying textbook to 1,317 persons including college, high school and elementary training school students.

During the past school year he supervised the supplying of textbooks to 3,847 Eastern college students.

Mr. Arnold said he used to know most of Eastern's students. He pointed out that during the war when there were only about 400 students at Eastern he knew all of them, but now he doesn't know 400 out of Eastern's more than 3,800 students.

During Mr. Arnold's management the textbook library had several locations. It was first in Old Main. Five years ago it was moved to the Concrete Block Building. It is currently being enlarged into other rooms of that building.

Mr. Arnold said that Eastern had about 93,000 textbooks at present. He said that he orders books every month. In May he ordered 1,000 books worth $15,000.

Mr. Arnold noted that he has the same number of helpers now that he had 10 years ago. He said the reason he has had only eight helpers was due to lack of space in the textbook library. More help will be employed this fall when the library had more space.

Mr. Arnold will continue work in the textbook library until the end of July. He and his wife plan to remain in Charleston.

Darling Named Cage Coach; Paap Appointed Assistant

Rex V. Darling is Eastern's new basketball coach. Darling, who has served as assistant basketball coach at Eastern since 1945, will succeed Robert Carey, who was recently named coordinator of graduate studies for the new School of Health and Physical Education.

Assuming the assistant coach's role is Ronald L. Paap, substitute coordinator of student athletics last year.

Walter A. Lowell, director of the new school, said the change was made to give Carey more time to develop the graduate program of the three divisions in the school. Carey will continue as head golf coach. (See latest story on Carey on page 12.)

ketball. He served as acting football coach in 1951 and was acting basketball coach in 1960-61. He will continue as tennis coach.

The new head coach is national chairman of the NAIA tennis coaches section and has served six years as director of the NAIA national tennis tournament. He is a member of the joint national USITA-AAPHER committee for the improvement of tennis instruction in college and secondary schools.

Darling holds the Director of Physical Education degree from the University of Indiana, where he also earned the Master of Science in Physical Education degree. He did his undergraduate work at Illinois State University.

Paap came to Eastern last year from Papillion High School, Papillion, Neb., where he was basketball coach for six years.

He holds the Master of Arts degree from Colorado State College and the Bachelor of Science degree from Peru State Teachers College, Peru, Neb.

Baseball Team To National Tourney . . .

Eastern's winningest baseball team fought its way to the national tournament of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics in June but dropped its first two games in the round-robin affair at St. Joseph, Mo. In tournament play, Coach Bill McCabe's Panthers lost 3-1 in the ninth inning to Sam Houston, Tex., and 10-9 to Mayville (N. D.) State, also in the ninth. Marty Pattin of Charleston, who captured the national collegiate strikeout title with 130, was the loser in both games. Over the regular season, the Panther nine won 22 and lost only six. Lefty Ted Colbert, Lisle, led the team in the earned-run category with a 1.74 to Pattin's 1.99. Junior Dick Wetzler led the team in three categories—five home runs, 22 runs batted in, and a batting average of .337. Eastern took second place in the Interstate Conference.

. . . Baseballers on IIAC Team

Eastern placed three players on both the first and second all-conference baseball teams. Val Bush, Champaign junior, repeated this year at second base after being chosen to an outfield berth last season. Also on the first squad were Nick Balodimas, Chicago, third base; and Marty Pattin, Charleston, pitcher. Second team choices were Gene Jordan, Champaign, outfield; Dick Wetzler, Peoria, outfield; and Gene Vidoni, Pekin, catcher.

Netmen Seventh In NAIA . . .

Eastern's tennis Panthers captured seventh place in the 13th annual NAIA tennis championships at Kansas City with a grand total of two entries. Coached by Rex V. Darling, who also managed the tournament, Tom Sterchi, Olney, and Bill Logan, Granite City, grabbed six points and, according to Darling, "gave everyone some anxious moments." In IACC action, the Panther netmen took second-place honors. Over the season, the tennis squad won six of 13 dual meets. Jerry Garver, Decatur, was the Panthers' leading netter, but the freshman ace had to pass up the Kansas City trip. Darling's netters won second place in the IIAC.

Carey Accepts Two-Year Position As PE Consultant In East Africa

Equatorial Africa will be the home of an Eastern Illinois University faculty member and his family for the next two years.

Dr. Robert A. Carey, coordinator of Graduate Studies of the School of Health and Physical Education, will be a consultant in the field of health and physical education at the National Teacher Education Center (NETC) in Somalia. Somalia is on Africa's east coast, two degrees above the equator.

Carey came to Eastern in 1953 as basketball coach. He was named coordinator of graduate studies when the School of Health and Physical Education was organized in May. His successor as coordinator has not been named. Assistant Coach Rex Darling was named head basketball coach last month.

Carey was selected for the African position through Eastern Michigan University. The Michigan school is staffing the African institution through a contract with the U.S. Agency for International Development. The NETC is under the control of the Somalia Ministry of Education.

The three-year school opened July 1, 1963, with five faculty members and 75 students. The same number of additional students is expected for each of the succeeding two years.

Each American instructor at NETC has a Somalia counterpart. The American staff-counterpart relationship is similar to that of a supervising teacher-student teacher. The Americans are headed by Dr. Stanley Gex, on leave as Dean of the School of Education at Eastern Michigan.

Robert Carey

The school is located near Afgoi, about 15 miles from Mogadiscio, capital of the Somalia Republic. Prospective students must know English and are screened by the Somalia head of the school and by Gex. Age of most students range from 14 through 17, according to Carey.

Dr. and Mrs. Carey will live in a modern house on campus. The children will attend an American school in Mogadiscio.

Carey said communication between the capital and Afgoi is largely dependent on short-wave radio and that faculty members alternate "radio watch" periods.

The Careys plan to leave Charleston sometime in August and will travel by air.
