Namesakes BOG approves Eastern's University Court proposal

By JEFF MADSEN
News editor

Lawrence Ringenberg picked up eight extra copies of the newspaper Thursday morning so he could show something to each of his grandsons.

The Board of Governors approved a proposal Thursday to name one of the buildings in University Court after Ringenberg, who was the first dean of Eastern's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

"I won't argue with them," Ringenberg said Thursday evening when he first heard that one of the buildings in fact would be named Ringenberg Hall. "I'm not ashamed of my name."

As a result of the BOG approval at Thursday's meeting in Macomb, five other retired faculty members also will have buildings named after them in the complex, which Eastern purchased for $3.9 million a year ago.

Eastern President Stan Rives had first approached Eastern's Faculty Senate with the idea of naming the buildings after retired faculty members — especially those who had made some kind of impact on the university. At that meeting last spring, faculty senate members also suggested naming the buildings for famous Eastern alumni and even animals that are extinct in Illinois.

But the retired faculty member concept won out. Rives then asked each academic department to submit a list of nominees for consideration, with the sole stipulation being the nominees were retired faculty members. "You can't put their names on a building if they're on the payroll," Rives said.

As a result, two faculty members from the College of Business, two from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, two spouses from the College of Fine Arts and one from the College of Applied Sciences will have their names etched above the front doors of the buildings and a plaque below with a brief biography.

"I'm surprised. At first I wasn't sure I'd really want a building named after me," said James Giffin, the first dean of Eastern's College of Business and the new namesake for Giffin Hall. "No one anticipates something like this."

Other names include:

- Cooper Hall — for George Cooper, a professor emeritus in the department of business education and administration. He was the chair from 1962-73 and retired from full-time teaching in 1982.

- Elliott Hall — for Charles Elliott, who died in 1988. He served on Eastern's faculty for 28 years in the school of technology and also served for many years as the university's faculty representative on the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

- Gabbard Hall — for E. Glendon Gabbard and his wife, Luciana. He is a professor emeritus in theatre arts and established the department in 1964. He also served as chair in 1969.

Mrs. Gabbard is a professor emeritus in English and began teaching full-time at Eastern in 1968.

Both retired in 1984 and are

News files for hiring information

A university official denied a verbal request Thursday by The Daily Eastern News for documents related to the 1989 civil service hiring of Scott Walker, son of an Eastern vice president.

Linda Moore, of the human resources office, said that a formal written request for access to the documents had to be filed under the Illinois Freedom of Information Act.

After Moore's denial, David Lindquist, editor in chief for The News, and senior reporter Cam Simpson delivered a formal request Thursday to Harriet Rose, Eastern's freedom of information officer.

Walker is the son of Verna Armstrong, Eastern vice president for administration and finance. He was hired on Oct. 2 by one of Armstrong's subordinates as assistant director of planning and institutional research.

Despite Armstrong's apparent withdrawal from the process, the administrative hiring sparked charges of nepotism and a Faculty Senate inquiry.

However, before being awarded the administrative post, Walker worked as a civil service employee for the university. According to the Oct. 27, 1989 University newsletter, Walker was hired on Oct. 5, 1989 as a microcomputer software specialist to work in Eastern's physical plant, an area beneath Armstrong's jurisdiction.

Under the state's Freedom of Information Act, The News has formally filed for all documents regarding that civil service appointment.

University officials have seven working days to respond, in writing, to The News' request.

U.S. ambassador to United Nations to visit campus

By DAVID LINDQUIST
Editor in chief

While Persian Gulf tensions mount worldwide, a point man for carrying out U.S. foreign policy is scheduled to visit Eastern's campus and share Bush administration views on global crises.

M. James Wilkinson, a current U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, will take a break from intensive Security Council negotiations to present a 7:30 p.m. lecture on Oct. 29 in the Buzzard Auditorium.

"It's an outstanding opportunity for people to learn about what is going on in diplomatic circles relative to the Mideast crisis," said Richard Goodrick, chair of Eastern's political science department, which is sponsoring Wilkinson's appearance. "Obviously we're not going to be privy to any top secret information, but it's nice for a school this size to attract a person of this caliber."

Wilkinson's audience likely will be afforded an insightful look at what the White House hopes to accomplish in the Middle East, according to John Faust, professor of political science and adviser to Eastern's Model United Nations organization.

"He speaks for Bush," Faust said. "As a mouthpiece, he

Security Council readies Mideast measures

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States on Thursday pushed for the swift passage of a new Security Council resolution condemning Iraq's human rights violations in Kuwait and demanding the release of all hostages held by Baghdad.

"It's one we hope will pass quickly," a State Department official said on condition of anonymity.

However, no formal council meeting, or even private consultations of the whole council, have been scheduled.

A text of the working document obtained by The Associated Press threatens Baghdad with unspecified further enforcement measures "under Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter if it doesn't obey this resolution.

Chapter 7 allows collective use of military force. Officials were told the council might act on the resolution over the weekend.

The working text of the resolution "demands that Iraq immediately cease and desist from deporting Kuwaiti nationals, taking third state nationals hostage, murdering, mistreating and oppressing Kuwaiti and third state nationals."

It demands Iraq stop "destroying Kuwaiti demographic records, settling foreigners in Kuwait, confiscating hospital supplies and equipment and carrying out unlawful and wanton destruction and seizure of public and private is the official policy of the United States."

Wilkinson, deputy secretary to the U.N. Security Council, has recently seen his role increased regarding global diplomacy.

"The Security Council has the power to create binding, multilateral actions to promote world peace," Faust said.

"The U.S. has taken the initiative in the Persian Gulf, and it has been supported by the Council's permanent members."

The five nations that hold permanent seats on the Security Council are the United States, France, Great Britain, China and the Soviet Union. For Security Council action to be binding, all five permanent members must be

Amnesty International remembers Guatemalan boy

By PENNY N. WEAVER
Staff writer

Guatemalan orphan Nahaman Carmona Lopez could never know a small group of Eastern students who walked silently around the Library and South quads for him, but they remember him and his story.

About 10 students attended the candlelight vigil Thursday night for 13-year-old Lopez, who died March 14 after allegedly being beaten in the streets of Guatemala City by police officers who caught him sniffing glue, said Sara Crerar, president of Amnesty International.

The vigil was part of Amnesty International Week, which concludes Sunday.

"He (Lopez) was killed by the national police," Crerar said before the vigil. "(After police beat Lopez) he went into a coma and he died a few days later."

Participants in the vigil, including Amnesty adviser and associate professor of English John Martone and his family, carried their candles from the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union Stage to the South Quad in front of Andrews and Lawson halls and back to the Library Quad.

The walkers marched silently, shielding their candle flames from the wind. At the end of the vigil, they gathered again in a circle to share feelings and thoughts.

"Remember what happened to this little street child," said Amnesty member Jamie

Riley after reading a verse from the Bible. "Remember that this (type of abuse) goes on all around the world every day."

Crerar also quietly added her own thoughts.

"I just hope that we can do something to keep this (kind of tragedy) from happening again," she said.

Amnesty's vigil for Lopez is one of the last events for Amnesty week. Crerar said the week's activities, especially Wednesday's combined signature-gathering and bake sale tables, have been successful.

"We got ... pages and pages (of signatures for petitions)," Crerar said. One of the petitions was for four South African political prisoners and another was to protest human rights violations in Brazil, she added.

In addition, Crerar said the bake sale raised money for her organization.

"We had a lot of professors making contributions," she said. "We really appreciate that. (All the donations were) really nice."

Amnesty will have a table Friday in Carman Hall to recruit freshmen to the group, Crerar said, and will finish the week with a walk-a-thon Saturday and a party Sunday evening.

"We will step off (Saturday) at 12 o'clock (noon)," Crerar said. "Our main (goal) is to be visible. Anybody at all is welcome."

Participants can register immediately before the 4-mile walk begins in front of Booth Library, Crerar added.

property in Kuwait."

Baghdad must permit "the immediate departure from Kuwait and Iraq of as many third state nationals, including diplomatic and consular personnel, as wish to leave," the draft says.

The five permanent Security Council members have reached broad agreement on the resolution, which also lays the groundwork for a system of compensation.

Under the measure Iraq would pay for damages stemming from its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, diplomats said.

The British, French, Soviet, Chinese and U.S. ambassadors continued meeting Thursday to refine the language of the resolution, while their capitals studied its legal ramifications.

The other 10 council members may receive the text later, they said. Since the five permanent members hold veto power, they customarily reach agreement on a draft text before presenting it to the other 10 council members.

According to the draft resolution, Baghdad would be liable only for compensation, not for new cooperative spirit among the five permanent Security Council members.

"It has become the backbone for multilateral actions in the Middle East," Faust said. "U.S. troops are in Saudi Arabia under the auspices of the U.N. Security Council."

Faust readily credits Soviet Union leaders, who have said they would be willing to commit military resources to a Security Council multinational force.

"This is the most cooperation we've ever had with the Soviet Union," Faust said. "When you can get the five permanent members together, then you can have action."

Rives said the six buildings closest to Ninth Street will be dedicated for the retired faculty members at a ceremony in January. The remaining four buildings, he said, will eventually be renamed at a later date.

In other business, the BOG also approved an $83,000 renovation proposal for the Panther Lair in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

The Lair, which has not been remodeled since 1961, will be redesigned to include several booths and partitions, similar to the design of the interior of a McDonald's restaurant, which is the restaurant presently located within the union.

Mixed Chorus hits a high note for concert

By LISA PRZYBORSKI
Staff writer

Who wouldn't be a little nervous about attending a concert that offered farm yard scenes, a change of seasons even more dramatic than that of the past few days and rapid-fire tempo maneuvering.

I know I was. But Thursday night's performance by the University Mixed Chorus and Chamber Singers made the concert and its unusual combination of song topics all worthwhile.

The University Mixed Chorus began the show on a dramatically depictive note about the change of seasons. Written by Linda Steen Spevak, the song "Seasons" separates each of the four seasons through different means of singing.

The chorus followed this up on a more upbeat note with a song titled "Fiddler Man." This rousing song made me feel like jumping right up on stage and joining the ongoing chorus of voices.

Review

Songs like "Fiddler Man" did more than make me feel glad to be there, though. It was evident the members also were glad to be there singing.

The Chamber Singers started performing next and even though they don't have as many singers as the University Mixed Chorus, they sounded just as great.

One of the songs they performed was "So Ben Mi Ch'a Bon Tempo" which is mainly composed of the words "fa la la la la."

Their closing song "Ein Hennlein Weiss" was funny and cute because it's about a hen parading around the farmyard because she just got done laying an egg.

The Concert Choir sang a spiritual song titled "Don't Let The Harvest" and completed with "And the Father Will Dance," which was a very pretty and inspiring song.

Senate rejects budget pact

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate rejected efforts Thursday to tamper with a bipartisan deficit-reduction package that would double gasoline taxes to 18 cents a gallon and cut Medicare and other federal programs.

In a close vote, lawmakers dumped an attempt to scale back the gas tax increase and substitute a series of tax increases on the wealthy. "Let's go and get it from those who've got it," said Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., but her plea was rejected, 55-45.

That vote appeared to clear the way for final approval of the bill by evening, and weary lawmakers said they were prepared to seek a compromise with the House and White House immediately in hopes of ending the government's month-long budget stalemate.

The House has approved legislation that relies heavily on tax hikes on the wealthy to close the federal deficit. It contains no change in the current nine cents a gallon gasoline tax.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president was prepared to sign separate legislation keeping the government's funds through next Wednesday.

CAA debates size of gen ed component

By STUART TART
Staff writer

An administrator from Eastern's academic affairs office called Thursday for council members to refocus efforts in selecting courses for the new general education program.

After listening to continued debate on whether and how the Council on Academic Affairs should implement Eastern President Stan Rives' request to pare down the number of courses approved for the "human behavior, social interaction and well-being" segment of the program, Stephen Whitley, who also sits on the CAA, hinted that the council has lost its focus toward building an integrated core.

"Approving courses is one matter; building a curriculum is another," Whitley said.

"Maybe the council has been doing one so long, we can't do the other."

The council is currently looking at courses to fill components of a general education program to be implemented with freshmen entering the university in fall of 1991.

CAA chair Larry Bates said Eastern currently has so many courses that will fill general education requirements that "you could never tell what (an Eastern student's) general education background was."

Even though the CAA faces a Nov. 18 deadline to pass courses that will appear in the 1991-92 catalog, Rives returned the 15-course package approved for the "human behavior, social interaction and well-being" component to the council on Oct. 11 and asked the council to recommend "a more limited set of courses."

"I feel like we did the best we could last time," member Kathlene Shank said. "We have been provided with no new criteria to evaluate these courses."

"A great majority of the council doesn't feel we have too many courses," member Timothy Shonk said. If the council reduces the number of courses in the segment, he said, "we are simply reacting to the president's request."

The psychology and home economics departments have added a new wrinkle to the problem with four new course proposals for the segment. Although a straw poll among council members indicated only one of the courses, a 3000-level psychology course, "Deviance, Disease and Sin," would be passed by the council in its present form, the council invited the departments to revamp and, perhaps, to combine their courses to be reconsidered.

This means CAA could conceivably be looking at 16-19 courses in the segment.

And if member Ron Gholson gets his way, the council could be considering even more courses for the segment.

"We thought we did our work," Gholson said. "Now, someone said we didn't. If we redo 15 of them, it is not fair not to look at the others."

The council has agreed to vote on a proposal by Gholson to reconsider courses that missed being included in the segment with a 6-6 vote, and they will vote on whether the council will even reconsider the 15-course package.

CAA will meet at 3 p.m. Tuesday in the 1895 Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

Alcohol consumption differs between sexes

By SHERIE DUMRAUF
Staff writer

About 90 percent of all college women drink alcohol, increasing their risk of breast cancer, osteoporosis and negative effects during pregnancy, said Gloria Leitschuh, a health studies instructor at Eastern.

Leitschuh, who presented a lecture Thursday titled "Alcohol and Women" in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union, said the high percentage of women drinkers can be attributed to the strive for equality.

However, what many women don't realize is that the effect of alcohol consumption differs between men and women, even if they drink the same amount, Leitschuh said during the lecture held in conjunction with Alcohol Awareness Week.

A woman's concentration of alcohol in the bloodstream will be higher than a man's because women have more body fat and less bodily fluid, she added.

To increase awareness of health and safety problems associated with alcohol, a number of local bars, including Mother's, Marty's, Stix and Ike's, have kicked off the Eastern Illinois University Designated Driver Program.

The program, sponsored by BACCHUS (Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students) and Student Government, began Thursday night with the bars offering non-alcoholic drink specials, free pizza and gift certificates donated by local vendors.

Under this program, the person who agrees to drive on any given night should ask the bartender for a designated driver cup, said Joe McCurdy, president of BACCHUS.

For 50 cents, that person will receive the cup with a soft drink of his or her choice. Refills are 25 cents. The driver cup may be used at any participating bar for the entire school year, McCurdy added.

To promote the Designated Driver Program, BACCHUS and Student Government released 72 red and black balloons on the Library Quad Thursday to make students aware of deaths caused by drunk drivers.

"The balloons represented the 72 people who die each day in the United States from alcohol-related incidents," McCurdy said.

Alcohol Awareness Week concludes Friday with a 4 o'clock club at the Afro-American Cultural Center and a dance later that evening at the Lighthouse, sponsored by the Wesley Foundation.

Simon campaign staying on track despite absence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Simon says a busy Senate schedule is keeping him in Washington during the home stretch of the election season. But that doesn't mean Illinoisans can't see or hear him.

Twelve people turned up Thursday for the weekly coffee-and-donut session he holds for state residents who stop in Washington. An aide snapped pictures suitable for framing.

Daytime cable TV viewers were able to see the senator use his seat on the Foreign Relations Committee to quiz Secretary of State James Baker on the Persian Gulf crisis.

And his Senate public relations staff is always quick with a press release, touting anything from transportation projects to law enforcement grants.

The story isn't the same for Simon's Republican challenger in the Nov. 6 election.

Rep. Lynn Martin cast a vote against the $500 billion deficit-reduction bill Tuesday, then left town to campaign.

She held a news conference in voter-rich Chicago, but none of the local TV stations aired any video Wednesday, spokesman Chris Allen acknowledged.

Even an attempt to publicize a legislative victory backfired.

She was forced to retract an announcement that said the House Ways and Means Committee had acted on her request to block an increase in customs fees at two airports.

The committee changed course, she said, at the direction of its chairman, Illinois Democrat Dan Rostenkowski.

The latest poll gives Simon a 2-to-1 lead over Martin, and permits him the luxury of being a modest front-runner at work in Washington.

"I'm involved in a lot of things," he says.

He got free exposure Wednesday when Cable News Network aired live a Foreign Relations Committee hearing on the Middle East.

Simon warned Baker that any "minor incident" should not be an excuse for the United States to launch the first strike against Iraq, especially when Congress leaves town.

"It's hard for you to give us a blank check," Baker responded.

"By the same token we can't give you one." The setting was informal Thursday when Simon offered a snack to Illinoisans who were visiting Washington. They asked him questions about the Middle East, the budget and the 1992 presidential race.

"You better figure on some other candidate," Baker said, "not Paul Simon." After 30 minutes, Simon's press aides arrived with a camera, offering a picture with the senator free of charge.

A 28-year-old teacher from Du Page County was impressed.

"The access is wonderful," Martha Horst Thomas said. "I used to live in Minnesota and I never had this much success." Martin, meanwhile, was back in Illinois trying to get the attention of voters and the news media less than three weeks before the election.

"The only way Lynn can build her name recognition is by being back there making statements covered by you people," said House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Peoria.

"When you're here you can't command the attention. You're smothered by 434 other House members." But first came the Keeping an earlier campaign promise, Republican senatorial candidate Lynn Martin will speak at Eastern at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Old Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

"Martin is coming here because she had arranged with the League of Women Voters to visit the Lincoln-Douglas debate sites," said Kevin Miller, president of Eastern's University Republicans.

He added, Martin, R-Ill., decided to keep her promise to visit all seven sites of the historic debates between Abraham Lincoln and Steven Douglas, despite the absence of her opponent, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Simon, who agreed to only two debates with Martin, is tied up in Washington as Congress tries to resolve the budget crisis.

"There'll be an empty podium in the front representing Simon," Miller said.

Shortly after the March primary elections, Martin challenged Simon to a series of debates, sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

The debates were to be held in the cities that hosted the Lincoln-Douglas debates during the 1858 senatorial election.

Among those cities hosting the debates were Charleston, Galesburg, Freeport, Anna, Alton, Chicago and Springfield. One of these debates was held on the site of today's Coles County Fairgrounds.

William Helmbacher, regional field representative for Martin's campaign in southern Illinois, said the mayors of all seven cities invited Martin and Simon to re-enact the famous debates more than a year ago.

"Due to her opponent's absence, it will not be possible to debate the issues," Helmbacher said. "Congresswoman Martin will relate her views on the budget crisis, the Persian Gulf and other issues affecting our nation."

Helmbacher said the decision to hold the debate at Eastern, rather than the original site at the Coles County Fairgrounds was made to "avoid the possibility of inclement weather."

news conference that produced no TV pictures.

Then came the embarrassment over the Rockford and Waukegan airports.

"We'll just have to keep fighting for the two communities involved," Martin said.

And, finally, when Martin told reporters she backs a 12-year limit on members of Congress, Simon's camp wondered why she had co-sponsored a measure to let presidents serve more than two terms.

South Africans have long trip ahead of them

Is apartheid dying? Some people would like to believe so. After all, President F.W. de Klerk's going through the motions of eliminating legalized segregation.

His latest political reform has eliminated The Separate Amenities Act of 1953. This law gave local governments and private enterprises the right to reserve services for whites only. In cities such as Johannesburg, black Africans weren't allowed into restaurants, swimming pools, libraries and many other places "white only" signs were hung.

However, as our own history has shown, the elimination of political restrictions doesn't eliminate personal hate and discrimination. A common white fear is found in the old axiom, "there goes the neighborhood" if blacks are allowed where they want. No amount of political reform is going to end discrimination and personal hatred.

Even in the United States, there is still discrimination against blacks. It does not evolve from a legal basis, but from personal feelings. Discrimination against somebody because of their skin color is just plain stupid. Nothing exists to bring about such a fear. How can you fear someone you don't even know?

It is important though that political reform continues in South Africa. Black citizens, although in some parts of the country they aren't considered citizens, must be allowed access to the same services the whites are.

But you can't really say de Klerk is doing a great service for the blacks. "Here, here's your freedom." Some favor - trying to give someone something they should already have.

Political reform is a start. But it is going to take much, much more. There is going to be a lot of bitterness, hatred and death in South Africa. It will likely require boycotts, organization and civil disobedience to get the blacks where they really want to be - freedom.

Hopefully, justice will run true course

"Did the guy at the door check for an ID?" City Attorney Brian Bower asked.

"Yes," the student replied. "What did you show him?" Bower questioned.

"My Eastern Illinois ID," the student responded.

"Does that ID have your correct birthdate and picture imprinted on it?" Bower asked.

The student replied "Yes."

This is basically how the testimony from most of the students sounded at Tuesday's liquor hearing. This hearing will determine if Dave Isbell is guilty of having 67 people under the age of 19, and one underage girl drinking a beer, in his bar, the Panther Lounge, at 11 p.m. Aug. 31 at the time a police raid hit.

The hearing was long, repetitive and boring. But over the course of eight hours, I watched the witnesses, and wondered what it would be like to be in their shoes. How it would be to be brought before a mayor and testify how you went out just looking for a good time, but got caught in the act. That would suck.

I guess they were taking a risk and probably knew what could be done if they did get caught, but probably never thought it could happen to them. Who does?

About a month ago, these students were brought before a circuit court judge and were told they were wrong. Their punishment was $100, a considerable amount for a student to pay.

If all of this wasn't punishment enough, try to tell your parents you were nabbed by the police for being in a bar illegally. No thanks.

When the testimonies rolled around Tuesday, it was the general consensus of the witnesses that on the night of Aug. 31 they gained entrance into the Panther Lounge with no problems, no matter how old they were. This seemed evident, even with the sometimes harsh cross-examination of Isbell's attorney, S. John Muller.

But according to the employees who testified, all of the people who entered the bar that night were checked for identification - two forms if they were under 21. Everyone arrested was under 21, but the 65 students who testified claimed only one form of identification was checked.

Lanman has until next Friday to decide. It looks like people will soon be able to sit back and watch justice carried out, and a wrong-doer pay for his crime. Yeah right.

Instead, I think this is going to be another instance of how justice is done the John Muller way.

Even if Lanman opts to revoke the license, which is possible, the decision will probably be appealed to the Illinois Liquor Control Commission by Muller, the "King of Continuances."

The right to appeal to a higher court seems to be "The King's" favorite trick from his bag. In fact, he's currently using it in a case from last spring, and would you believe it, it's for the same type of offense. Imagine that.

His client, Ken Keating, the owner of E.L. Krackers, is scheduled to appear on Nov. 28 before the ILCC's three-member board on a charge stemming from a March 9 police sting operation that netted 12 bars for serving a minor. Keating, however, was the only bar owner to plead innocent, and Nov. 28 marks the third time the hearing has been scheduled.

Keating is arguing the operation was entrapment, and that the police didn't conduct a chemical analysis of the liquid in the beer can to determine if it contained alcohol.

If history does in fact repeat itself, the "King" will appeal the decision and Isbell will have extra time to keep Panthers open for business, keeping the money from students flowing into his pockets until a final decision is made, which in the case of Krackers is an extra seven months.

The students caught in the raid broke the law and they paid the price.

Now it is Isbell's turn, if found guilty. Hopefully the law will not get in the way, and justice will be done.

Your Turn

Children deserve to know heritage

Dear editor:
This is in reply to Wendell Hutson's column in the Oct. 4 edition of The Daily Eastern News and a reply to Dave John's rebuttal.

In reading Hutson's column I can see the point he is trying to make. Hutson is trying to show how the child can lose touch with his heritage. Is it or is it not the child's best interest that is important? By being raised by a different cultural family a child can lose or never even realize his heritage. Hutson is expressing his concern for the children. I respect him for that.

Secondly, I commend all individuals willing to adopt other children not originally from their culture. Then again, in adopting the children you have the responsibility to let that child know who he/she is, referring to their cultural background. You must give that child the chance to know his heritage.

As for you Dave John, Hutson is not prejudice. He is one man stating his opinion. Malcolm X was not a prejudice pig. The honorable Malcolm X was a master teacher. He spoke and taught the truth. He was a leader who worked actively in solving the social and economic problems in the black communities. He only wanted what was right. If we couldn't get it on the ballot, we were going to get it one way or another.

This is not prejudice John, this is reality. If you cannot deal with reality, I believe you better return to the rock you crawled out from under.

If there weren't individuals like Dave John, the world would be a better place. You need to get your thoughts in order. I have numerous white friends. I like them and they like me. Yes, Dave John, "black pride" is here to stay and it is growing stronger everyday. The stereotypes of old are over.

I see no harm in speaking to every African American on this campus. John, you have to realize that there aren't 9,000 African Americans on this campus. Even if there were I would still speak. A simple hello would do.

Finally, John you have no right to tell another man to let his pride go. Why don't you let your pride go? After all, you are Mr. Know-it-all. Black pride and human rights coincide with one another. You can not have one without the other.

Walker questioning misses crucial point

Dear editor:
In regards to the recent inquisition of the Walker hiring, I've noticed that an important question seems to have been overlooked - was Walker the most qualified candidate for the job? If Walker was indeed the most qualified, then what matter is it what his mother's name is, or what race or gender group he belongs to?

Measle shots required for new students

By LORI HIGGINS
Campus editor

Although 150 new Eastern students have no records on file for having taken immunizations shots for measles, only 42 showed up Wednesday and Thursday for free shots at Health Service.

"I would say it's a poor turnout," said Joann Fritz, a registered nurse with the Coles County Health Department. "I've been calling the students and several have said that they have had them (immunization shots) already but haven't turned in their forms."

Under a new state law which took effect during the fall 1989 semester, students entering any Illinois university must have a second measles immunization shot before being able to register for spring semester classes.

However, Eastern did not begin enforcing the law and providing free immunization shots until this semester to allow students enough time to catch up on their medical records.

Fritz said only 12 students showed up Wednesday to receive the shots while another 30 students came Thursday.

For students who have already had their shots, they need to have the papers turned into Health Service by the end of the semester, Fritz said. She added students who fail to turn in the papers will not be allowed to register for classes.

Students may still receive shots between 9 a.m. and noon Friday at the Health Service. The service is being provided by the Coles County Health Department.

Fritz assured students that having the shot is an easy process. "It's real quick and easy," she said. "It's a relatively painless shot."

She added a couple of reasons students may have for not having the shots taken are a fear of needles and because they have forgotten they had to have the shots taken.

"It just slipped their mind," she said. "They've been busy with their studies and have just forgotten."

Not only will the immunization shots protect students from measles, it also will protect them from the mumps and rubeola.

"It's extra protection against all three diseases," Fritz said. "There have been cases of mumps in the last few years also," she added.

Fritz said that protection from rubeola is especially important for women. "Immunization can wane as you get older," she said. When doctors check pregnant women, they check their immunity to rubeola. If a pregnant woman is susceptible to the rubeola disease, it could affect the health of their baby.

"They could have a child with a serious birth defect or they could miscarry. It's important to have the shots, especially at this age. This may save some of the women from having problems."

Orchestra to play 'Pops'

AMY McCANN
Staff writer

Eastern's Community Orchestra begins its third annual season Sunday with a program titled "It's Pops Time," featuring selections from the late composer Leonard Bernstein.

A group within the orchestra, called Arcadia Ensemble, will perform a selection of Baroque music.

"This group is rapidly receiving recognition for its excellent performances of Baroque music in an authentic style. But that is not what they will be doing at the "Pops" concert. They will be soloists in the zany 'Karlsburg Konzert 90 (3.2)' by decomposer, Harry Zwingli," said orchestra conductor Donald Tracy.

The concert, which begins at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Grand Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union, will open with "Fanfare" by Paul Dukas.

Arcadia members include Gary Zwicky on the harpsichord, Kathy Ryan on the violin and Elaine Fine on the flute.

Celloist Gretchen Tracy, a fourth member of Arcadia, is also a member of the full orchestra.

"This work has borrowed so much by so many, we will have a contest to see who can recognize the most tunes. The winner will receive honorary membership in the orchestra and an official orchestra T-shirt," Donald Tracy said.

The Arcadia Ensemble will be followed by Cindy Moyer on her "magic" violin.

The orchestra will close its first half of the program with the suite from "West Side Story" by Mr. Bernstein. After intermission, Henry Butler a jazz pianist and recording artist, will play with the orchestra in a performance of his arrangement of "Giant Steps" by John Coltrane. Butler will then perform his solo piano composition, "Orleans Inspiration."

Tracy said the concert will end with a "rowdy" "Overture to Candide" by Mr. Bernstein.

Concert tickets can be purchased for $5 at the music office or in the Grand Ballroom prior to the concert.

RHA ushers in fall with activities

By ANN GILL
Staff writer

Eastern's Residence Hall Association is gearing up for a variety of Fall activities scheduled to start Saturday.

RHA will host the second of two car washes Saturday at Midas Muffler and Brakes, 515 Lincoln Ave., between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The car wash is being held to raise money for upcoming RHA events including the Great Lakes Affiliate of College and University Residence Halls, scheduled for Oct. 26-28 at the University of Wisconsin at La Crosse.

RHA will team up with Student Senate

Tuesday to host Hollywood Squares Eastern Style at 5:45 p.m. on the South Quad.

Hollywood Squares Eastern Style, a spin-off of the popular television show of the same name, will include a host of celebrities from such campus organizations as International Students Services, ROTC and University Board. The organizational members will help contestants win prizes.

"We have some great prizes," said Hollywood Squares co-chair Ryan Devlin. RHA President John Biernbaum promised that Hollywood Squares will be a blast.

On Oct. 30 and 31 RHA will sponsor its annual Thomas Hall Haunted House.

Scholarships awarded to ROTC transfers

By RED REARDON
Staff writer

Of the 24 scholarships awarded, 10 were state scholarships and 14 were transfer student scholarships, said ROTC Capt. Vance Chartier. He added the transfer scholarship "is the best kept secret in the state."

"It is basically a first-come, first-serve basis with the transfer scholarship," Chartier said. He added 10 more scholarships have yet to be awarded.

The scholarships cover all tuition costs and up to four years of undergraduate work, as long as the student participates in ROTC, said Maj. Robert Dinnen.

If a student decides to quit or drop the ROTC program, he must do so before the beginning of his junior year, Dinnen added.

If the student decides to stay with ROTC, he must sign a contract at the beginning of his junior year that states he must serve eight years in the National Guard, Army Reserves or go on active duty for the U.S. Army upon graduation.

"The student is absolutely in no way obligated to sign the contract," Dinnen said. He added almost $250,000 has already been given out for scholarships.

Dinnen said the scholarships are presented to students who are enrolled in ROTC and taking a military science class.

Other qualifications include leadership potential, academic performance, passing various physical aptitude tests and a presentation in front of a board of officers.

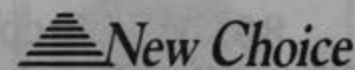

Students awarded with the scholarship must also maintain a 2.5 grade point average, Dinnen said.

If a student wishes to go on to graduate school after the eight years of service, the state will cover 75 percent of the cost, he added.

Men netters travel to doubles tourney

BY JIM KNOBLICH
Staff writer

Eastern's men's tennis team, led by coach John Bennett, will travel to Western Illinois University at 3 p.m. Friday to compete in Western's fall doubles tournament.

The three other teams in the tournament include DePaul University, Bradley University, and Western.

The tournament consists of two brackets. The No. 1 and No. 3 teams from all the schools will be paired and the No. 2 and No. 4 teams from each school will be paired together. The winners of each bracket will play for the title.

The Panthers have not seen action since being upset by Indianapolis University and a loss to Butler University in late September.

The team will also be without former No. 1 singles player Jay Meyer, who is out with a knee injury for the rest of the fall season. Filling in for Meyer at the No. 1 position is senior Mike Patrick.

In the past, the No. 1 doubles team of juniors Brad Iftner and Dan Beres has taken the court, limiting Patrick to singles play only.

Beres is coming off a heel injury that limited him to doubles play early in the season. "We've played well together in the past, but we're still getting used to each others style of play. Every match we play we'll get stronger" said Beres.

The team of senior Dave Maszmanian and junior newcomer Jeff Streul, who will be playing together for the first time, will be at the No. 2 position.

Freshman Paul Cook and Kurt Polk, also newcomers to the team, will find themselves at the No. 3 doubles position.

"We are going into the tournament with a very optimistic outlook. Kurt and I have been playing very well together in practice. We are very anxious to see what we can do in a match situation," said Cook. At the No. 4 doubles position will be seniors Mark Olsen and Mike Patrick. It will be their first time playing together.

The Panthers have spent the last month working on their doubles' strategies and conditioning for the tournament. "Basically, coach has been looking for the right combinations on the court. We have played on a lot of doubles in preparing for this weekend," Patrick said.

Hawks shut out Leafs

CHICAGO (AP) - Jocelyn Lemieux's second-period goal broke a scoreless tie and Ed Belfour notched his first career shutout Thursday night as the Chicago Blackhawks extended Toronto's winless streak to seven with a 3-0 triumph.

The loss gave the Maple Leafs an 0-6-1 record - worst in the NHL.

With Chicago just 15 seconds into its second power-play opportunity, Lemieux redirected Keith Brown's 55-foot slapshot past goalie Peter Ing at 11:52. Ing was bombarded by 49 shots.

The power-play goal was the 16th given up by the Maple Leafs in 44 penalty-killing situations, the worst in the NHL.

Belfour, winning his fifth game, lowered his goals-against average to 1.72 per game, second best in the league.

Appearing in his 30th NHL contest, Belfour was called upon to stop 20 shots, including just four in the third period, most from long range.

Miami, ND set to kick off

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) - The calm before the storm left Notre Dame eerily quiet Thursday, more sleepy college campus than killing ground for the championship hopes of Miami or Notre Dame.

But it's still early. "People will be fired up again," senior Phil Shaffalo said.

"It's a party." The campus batted down against needle-sharp, 40-degree rain driven by gusts of 30 mph winds. Ponchos, windbreakers, and raincoats covered the taunting T-shirts, the college football battle flags that trash the Hurricanes and exult the Irish.

"You see them everywhere. 'Catholics v. Convicts,'" Shaffalo said. "'This is your brain. This is your brain on drugs,' with a Miami sign."

The Notre Dame war regalia may see sunshine again Saturday when No. 2 Miami and No. 6 Notre Dame, both 4-1, stage the final episode of their bitterly contested rivalry. The weather forecast predicted sunny to partly cloudy skies for game day.

But the edge to the campus mood seemed dulled, especially compared to the hours before Notre Dame beat Miami 31-30 in 1988, the year of the Irish national championship.

Then, handpainted bedsheets hung from dormitory windows promising Miami annihilation and hurling unprintable insults against former Hurricanes coach Jimmy Johnson.

"The constitutional freedom of speech also protects bad taste," said Richard W. Conklin, vice president for university affairs.

Now the dormitory windows display only tame, professionally printed signs that read, "Fighting Irish." Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz senses the difference.

"We were undefeated at the time, it was new, and we were on a roll," he said. "Everybody seems to be a little down right now." Joseph Bartosz, a senior from Chicago, has it figured. "To boil it right down, we lost." The Irish did lose, a painful 36-31 defeat two weeks ago at the hands of unranked Stanford.

"It's only a game, but still ... How did Notre Dame lose?" said a mournful headline in The Observer, the campus newspaper.

Holtz publicly bade goodbye to his championship hopes. Then upsets stung Michigan, Oklahoma and Florida, and Notre Dame was back in the running.

The change in fortune stoked the banked fire of campus spirit.

The Friday night pep rally was moved from its smaller fieldhouse site to the basketball arena to accommodate an anticipated 11,000 fans - twice the usual number.

The winner may still dream of a national championship. The loser can only hope for a lucrative bowl bid. If Notre Dame's chances can be measured by the barometer of underground ticket sales, Miami may blow an ill-wind for the Irish.

Scalpers pushing tickets before the season-opener against Michigan asked $100 a ticket, according to police working a ticket sting.

The Great One nears 2,000 points

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - How Great is Wayne Gretzky? This Great: Only 25 players in NHL history have accumulated 1,000 points. At age 29, Gretzky is about to become the first to reach 2,000, and he's far from finished.

But as Gretzky approaches the milestone, he seems much more excited about the way the Los Angeles Kings are playing.

Gretzky is already the NHL's all-time leading scorer even though he's playing in just his 12th season. Gordie Howe, who completed his 26-year career with 1,850 points, is second.

Bryan Trottier, 34, of the Pittsburgh Penguins is the second-leading active player with 1,356 points, including three this season. Trottier ranks seventh overall.

Gretzky had a goal and two assists on Wednesday night to take over the NHL scoring lead with 17 points and raise his career total to 1,996 points.

"We're off to a very good start and we want to maintain this pace," Gretzky said after the Kings ran their unbeaten streak to five games with a 5-2 victory over Minnesota. "We're better now (than last season). We have more depth at every position." Gretzky has six goals and 11 assists in seven games this season, two points ahead of Pittsburgh's Kevin Stevens.

The Kings center had five points, including a late game-tying goal, in a game Oct. 11 against his former team, the Edmonton Oilers.

Only 69 players in NHL history have totaled 100 points in a season. Gretzky has more than 100 points in each of his 11 seasons and has scored more than 200 points four times.

Playing with Los Angeles high-scoring forwards Tomas Sandstrom and Tony Granato, Gretzky says he's likely to score 200 points again this season.

Phil Esposito of Boston was the first player to get 100 points, scoring 126 22 years ago.

A player would have to average 100 points per year for 20 years to reach 2,000 points. Conceivably, Gretzky might reach 3,000 before he hangs up his skates.

Gretzky's goal against the North Stars, which came with 14 seconds left in the game, was a strange one, as the puck didn't go in the net.

Although they lead 2-0, Reds see themselves as underdog

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds will feel like underdogs, even though losing four of the next five games is the only way they won't be wearing World Series rings.

"That role still applies to us," Cincinnati reliever Rob Dibble said Thursday during a 90-minute workout at the Oakland Coliseum. "Nobody's asking us to win it. We have a two-game lead, but against the A's, we need a two-game lead." When the man the Oakland Athletics can't get out, Billy Hatcher, says the roles are not yet reversed.

"I think they're a better team than us," said Hatcher, who is 7-for-7 with two walks in nine plate appearances. "They've been to three World Series. This is our first. But just being here helps us play with more confidence." Reds shortstop Barry Larkin said the 2-0 lead won't change the way the Reds approach Game 3.

"No matter whether we're the underdog, or the top dog, we'll play the same way," Larkin said. "They're the world champions, and that's the way it will be until somebody knocks them off. Until then, we're the underdog." Todd Benzinger, one of the few Reds with American League experience, knows how difficult playing in the Oakland Coliseum will be.

"The Oakland fans are loud, and at times they can be obnoxious," said Benzinger, who played at Oakland while with the Boston Red Sox. "I can't imagine it being any different this time.

"I try and tell our guys how tough it is to win here," he said. "I must have played here 12 to 14 times, and I can remember winning maybe two games. It's just tough to play here and win." Reds manager Lou Piniella remembers winning a few games at Oakland from his days of managing the New York Yankees.

• Game 3 Saturday at 7:30 p.m., CBS, Channel 3.

"Hey, I feel real good about playing in this park," Piniella said. "I can remember coming in here and winning a series against them. It's not impossible." Piniella is ready to shrug off the underdog role, even if his players relish it.

"I would say the odds are in our favor now, but we still have to win two ballgames," Piniella said.

"We've put ourselves in a great position to win the World Series," Benzinger said, "but we've also put ourselves in a position to be really, really disappointed if we don't." Catcher Joe Oliver, whose 10th-inning hit off Dennis Eckersley won Game 2, said the Reds will use their regular-season experience to help deal with any pressures of blowing a 2-0 lead in the World Series.

"Everybody looked for something to drag us down," Oliver said, "but we did some growing up in 162 games. That was a lot of pressure."

A's have Ex-Cub Factor

CHICAGO (AP) — The Oakland Athletics can't win. It's not a jinx.

And it doesn't matter if the Cincinnati Reds are a better team.

The reason: the Ex-Cubs Factor.

The A's have three former Cubs on their World Series roster. So it's no surprise they're already down two games to none.

Since 1945, when the Cubs themselves made the show, 13 teams have gone to the World Series with three or more Cubs on the roster. Twelve of them lost. Only the 1960 Pittsburgh Pirates succeeded in defying the Factor.

No team has even tried to defy it since the 1984 San Diego Padres. They lost to Detroit, four games to one.

The A's had only two former Cubs on last year's championship team, ace reliever Dennis Eckersley and catcher Ron Hassey. But they added pitcher Scott Sanderson this season.

And it gets worse. A's manager Tony LaRussa is also an ex-Cub.

The Reds, meanwhile, escape the Factor. They have only two former Cubs on the roster, Billy Hatcher and Luis Quinones.

They're a shoo-in.

Panthers

injured his knee in the Panthers' 23-22 win against Northwestern Louisiana on Sept. 8 and has not returned to action, may not play again this year.

"He will not play again this week," Spoo said. "A redshirt year is becoming more and more imminent. It's just not responding. He does not feel like it's stable.

"What's really a greater concern is (fullback) Broc Montgomery, who went out last week (with an injured shoulder). If one of these guys go down — we only have four guys left." Spoo added that Montgomery will see action Saturday.

The best news for the Panthers for the week came from the offensive line, where Spoo said that guard Brad Fichtel, who missed three games with knee surgery, is back on track.

"I think we're in reasonably good shape," Spoo said. "Fichtel's back and playing up to par — he was voted the MVP last week. The stability factor has a settling effect.

"Everyone's (OK) except for Lee Emhoff. I doubt he'll play again the rest of the year. He has serious problems with his ankle. He's had bad ankles from the start, but he's had real problems with one of them. I just don't think he can play."

Beat Salukis!

WHAT ELSE ON SAT.? GOOD QUESTION!

Panthers host Salukis in Gateway matchup

By CHRIS BOGHOSSIAN
Sports editor

Southern Illinois invades O'Brien Stadium for a Gateway Conference matchup with Eastern at 1:30 p.m. Saturday for the Panthers' second of four consecutive home contests.

Eastern, 3-4 overall and 2-1 and in second place in the conference, will be attempting to win its third consecutive contest and second straight with junior quarterback Lee Borkowski behind the center.

The Salukis (2-5, 1-3) jumped off to a 2-1 start under quarterback Brian Downey, but during last week's loss to Illinois State — the team's fourth straight — Saluki coach Bob Smith inserted senior quarterback Fred Gibson.

Smith, who led Southern to a 2-9 record in his first year as its coach last fall, said he expects both Downey and Gibson to see some playing time Saturday.

"Brian started (last week), but Gibson came in and played pretty well," Smith said. "I'm not saying that we'll rotate them every play, but Fred will see some time in there."

Eastern's quarterback position seems to be as unstable right now as the Salukis'. Freshman Jeff Thorne, who started the Panthers' first six games, suffered an ankle injury in Eastern's win at Western Illinois on Oct. 6. Although Thorne has practiced this week, Eastern head coach Bob Spoo said Wednesday that unless Thorne's ankle is 100 percent, Spoo won't even think about starting him.

Spoo said his main concern with Southern is its offense, which scored 45 points against Murray State earlier in the year (Eastern lost to MSU 14-10 on Sept. 22) and also scored 21 quick points in the first half against Division I-A powerhouse Illinois.

"There is concern because they have that potential," Spoo said. "From the games that we've seen, (Downey) seems to be a very poised guy. He adjusts well under pressure — that's how they've hurt some people.

"It seems like when they get Gibson — not that Downey can't run the option — but Gibson's more suited to that."

The two coaches had different views on how last year's game would affect Saturday's contest. Last fall in Carbondale in the Panthers' Gateway opener, Eastern botched a last-minute field goal snap that would have tied the game. As a result, Southern won the game 20-17 for its only conference victory of the season.

"(It's) very prominent," Spoo said. "They out-hit us last year, plain and simple — and it was embarrassing. Our players are aware of that game, yes.

"There's a direct parallel last year to this year. We lost our first conference game this year (a 28-7 loss at Illinois State on Sept. 29). We lost our first conference game last year, and it was an uphill battle all the way."

Smith doesn't think last year's game will effect Saturday's outcome.

"I wouldn't think so," Smith said. "This is the 1990 team and the game must be played Saturday for the conference.

"As a type of motivation and confidence builder, after the first few minutes that's not a factor. Preparation and execution are probably much more important to coach Spoo and to myself."

Smith added that Eastern's Jamie Jones, who is second in the Gateway in rushing with 1153 yards per game and fourth in the nation in Division I-AA, is his main concern.

"Obviously it's the tailback offense," Smith said. "And getting back to that defense, the overall improvement defensively. They're playing so well now — we're really concerned."

Not only is Jones a threat as a rusher, but as an all-around back as well. He is first in the conference and second in the nation in all-purpose yardage, averaging 176.2 per game.

Although Jones has been a strong point for the Panthers all season, injuries have caused Spoo concern at the fullback position.

Booters face two Ohio teams

By R.J. GERBER

Eastern's soccer team embarks on a two-game roadtrip to Ohio this weekend that will be crucial in its quest for its fourth straight Mid-Continent Conference championship and to extend its 19-game MCC unbeaten streak.

The Panthers face the Cleveland State Vikings in Friday night's contest and then take on Akron in Saturday's match. Cleveland State is third in the MCC, while Akron, a newcomer to the conference, is fourth.

In the seven-year history of the MCC, there have been only two champions — Eastern and Cleveland State. Eastern has taken the crown five times during that span and hasn't lost a conference match in four years.

Cleveland State is led by last season's leading scorer in the MCC, Nick Stavrou. The senior midfielder has 14 goals and seven assists for the 8-5-2 Vikings. Stavrou's 35 points rank him second in the MCC.

The Vikings other offensive weapon is senior forward Thom Clark, who has nine goals and four assists so far this season. Cleveland State also has the top goalkeeper in the MCC, sophomore Phil Ventre.

Ventre has a goals against average of 0.96 in eleven games and has four shutouts this season.

State, said that he is anticipating a good game from Eastern.

"I'm really looking forward to the game," Turner said. "We have been playing well of late, and I've never beaten Eastern since I've been here. Eastern is going to give us a lot of problems. The game could go either way."

Eastern freshman defender Vinko Kucinic, a native of Cleveland, said that he is looking forward to getting back home.

"I'm pretty excited," Kucinic said. "I'm really looking forward to playing — and hopefully winning — in front of my family and friends. I know a lot of the guys on the Cleveland State team from playing with them during a tour of China with my club team."

Kucinic said that once he visited Eastern, he knew that he wouldn't be playing for his home town team.

"Once I visited Eastern, I knew that I wanted to play here," Kucinic said. "I just liked the guys here better."

One of Eastern's big concerns is the scoring punch of Stavrou. Junior midfielder Terry Dixon is the man in charge of shutting Stavrou down.

Spikers host three foes over weekend

By ANN TASTAD
Staff writer

Eastern's volleyball team will try to even its record this weekend as it hosts three teams, including two Gateway Conference opponents, on each day of the weekend in McAfee Gym.

The Lady Panthers are 10-13 overall and 1-1 in conference play and are settling into McAfee Gym for a seven-match home stand beginning Friday night, when they take on Wichita State at 7 p.m.

"Wichita is a team we need to beat to get a chance to participate in the conference tournament," said volleyball coach Betty Ralston, who noted that Wichita State was picked to finish ahead of Eastern in the pre-season coaches poll.

"They are a real strong blocking team and our hitters are going to have to be smart against them," Ralston added that last year was the first year that Eastern lost to Wichita State in volleyball.

The Lady Panthers will take on conference rival Southwest Missouri State at 7 p.m. Saturday in McAfee Gym. Eastern has an 0-9 record against the Bears in conference play. "We've never beaten them in Gateway play," said Ralston. "They beat Wichita in five games last weekend, so they will be tough to beat."

The Bears feature three left handed hitters which will be an added dimension for the Lady Panthers to block against.

"We've had problems with left handed hitters in the past and we can't practice against any because we don't have any on our team," added Ralston. "We're going to have to play strong from the start if we're going to have a chance to win."

St. Louis will enter McAfee Gym Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. to round out the weekend action. The Billikens are the Mid-Continent Conference defending champion for two years running and defeated the Lady Panthers last season.

"We need to go strong against them and we want to avenge our loss from last year," said Ralston. "Our goal is to go (2-1) for the weekend and get back up to .500."

"These are three teams we should be able to contend with, but they are very good teams, too. A win Friday would give us the big boost we need."

The house that hope built

Habitat for Humanity helps those in need of homes

BY PENNY N. WEAVER
Staff writer

Home, sweet home.

We all have, or aspire to have, our own home. Pretty simple, right?

But that's not such a simple dream for some low-income families around the world, in the United States and, yes, right here in Coles County. That's why Habitat for Humanity exists.

"Anybody that wants to help (can help)," said Eastern Management and Marketing Professor Al Joyner, who is involved in the organization. "That's the way Habitat works."

The Coles County Habitat for Humanity is made up of volunteers from Charleston and its neighboring communities, Joyner said. The organization builds houses for low-income families who otherwise might not be able to afford their own home. But Joyner said Habitat doesn't give away the homes they build.

"It's not a handout, it's a partnership," Joyner said. The family who will receive the home must pay Habitat the cost of building materials and also is required to put in a total of 450 hours of work on the home and 100 hours helping with the next house Habitat builds, Joyner said.

Since volunteers build almost the entire house, Joyner said the cost of building a home is relatively low. A concrete company, an electrician and a plumber, for example, offer their time and labor at a discount as a partial donation, Joyner said.

When the house is finished, he said, it is sold to a family at no interest and no profit, and the money is invested into the next home. Because of this system, he noted, one donation to Habitat is on-going and continues to fund each house the volunteers build.

The first house by Coles County's branch of Habitat is currently under construction at the corner of north 11th Street and Poplar Avenue in Charleston, said Craig Eckert, an Eastern sociology instructor who is also involved in the organization. The roof of the house is finished and now workers are beginning the inside walls, Eckert said. Larry Helsel, another volunteer, said Habitat work crews hope to have the house enclosed by the time cold weather sets in.

"I'm hoping to finish by Thanksgiving," Helsel said. "I think we can."

Helsel said several crews of eight to 10 people each alternate weekends to work on the home and some crews work during the week. As an additional help, he said, many women, often from local churches, bring meals and drinks to the site for the crews.

Helsel noted that women also help with the construction work.

"I think every crew has at least one woman helping," Helsel said.

Habitat draws a wide variety of people, he added. Volunteers range from retirees to college students, Helsel said, and come not only from Charleston but also from Arcola and Mattoon.

"You can't sit around town all day every day," said 76-year-old Mattoon resident Ed Hortenstine, who worked up on the roof of the house right along with his younger co-workers. Hortenstine said he got involved with Habitat about five years ago through a minister in Austin, Texas, who was acquainted with his daughter.

"I wouldn't have got roped into it, but my daughter lives down there (in Texas)," Hortenstine said, and added he found out about Habitat in Austin and his interest led

Dear Reader

Although the theme this week was supposed to be one of "charity," we decided that a "hodge-podge" theme would be a better idea - especially as the week progressed and mid-terms began piling up.

As promised though, we do have a couple of charitable-type stories. In one, staff writer Penny Weaver interviewed some of the people involved with the organization "Habitat for Humanity," which works to provide housing for those who can't afford it.

Associate editor Debbie Carlson interviewed the people behind the movement that hopes to prevent the use of animals as test subjects for various cosmetics.

She also interviewed Rod Miller, the Eastern student who was used as an extra in the movie "Glory," which will be shown by the History department at 4:30 p.m. Monday.

In the review section, staff writer Denise Buck gives readers a first-hand look at The Phantom of the Opera. Also, resident movie reviewer Bret Loman gives readers his opinion on the Micheal Keaton movie "Pacific Heights." For you music lovers, Tim Shellberg also has a music review on the late Stevie Ray Vaughan.

And as always, whether we like it or not, Horseshoes and Hand Grenades can be found on page eight. Also making its final appearance in the Verge before going on to bigger and better things, such as drug testing in Sherad, Ill., is ever-popular Bullshot. It can be found on page three.

The Verge staff would also like to take time to say "thank you" to Jana, who lives in the Stanford building of University Court, and who took us in when some of us were in need of help.

BULL SHOT

By Thom Rakestraw, Debbie Carlson
and Terri McMillan

Lights, camera, action!

At least that's what we expected when we heard that CBS was coming to Eastern.

Forget about school, forget about the money invested in this quagmire of a university. We wanted to be stars, we wanted fame. Who's kidding whom, we wanted MONEY.

But we had decisions to make. Which show were we going to be on? Which executive were we suppose to suck up to?

We took it upon ourselves to call CBS headquarters to see which show we were going to be on when they came to our lovely, picturesque campus.

"Knots Landing," "Murphy Brown," "Designing Women," "60 Minutes." It didn't matter what we were on, but we secretly wanted to be on "The Simpsons." That was, until we realized it was, as they say, "on another network."

Anyway, our phone call was soon put through to the CEO of CBS, Laurence Tisch. Or maybe it was his secretary. Anyway, the voice on the other end informed us, that it wasn't a prime-time series that was coming to our campus. It was THE CBS MORNING NEWS!

What's that we asked?

After the voice explained what it was, we were obviously disappointed at this prospect.

What are they coming to Eastern for?

"We're coming down to film a segment about Alcohol Awareness Week," the voice said.

We told them, as we well know, Eastern is pretty aware of alcohol.

"No," the voice said. "National Awareness Week, is to bring awareness to the dangers of drinking."

And you're coming to Eastern, we replied.

"Yes," the voice said.

You're coming to Eastern Illinois University in Charleston, we asked.

"Yes," the voice said, but this time with a twinge of caution.

The Eastern Illinois University, that had 68 students violate the city bar entry age law? The town where more than 12 bars were raided? The campus where a fraternity was just closed down because of an alcohol-related incident? That Eastern?

"Excuse me?" the voice asked.

"Uh sorry wrong number," we said as we quickly hung up.

Unfortunately, we had to turn to plan B. What plan B was, nobody knew, but it just sounded like it would work.

If we were ever to get on television, we had to find out where they were going to be. After scouting the campus for more than a minute, we found them.

Yes, the CBS news crew was at one of the greek communities favorite watering-holes (no names needed).

Wait a minute, we thought this bar was closing - oh that's the one just opposite of this one! Sorry fans.

And here we were, thinking that this was to prevent drinking.

But after some grueling investigative work (along with a few beers), we finally caught up with one of the producers.

"We really enjoy your show," we said.

"Thank you," he said.

"I just love Deborah Norville's hair. Is that her natural color or does she dye it? I just think it's great she's 'having it all.' You know, with her having the little bambino and still working. I really admire that in a person," one of us said, trying to sound like we are just totally up-to-date on these famous-people types.

"She's not on our show," Mr. Big-shot (not to be confused with Bull-shot) said quietly. "We've got Harry and Paula."

"Oh, now I know, your show's the one with the balding weatherman, right?" Now we knew we were on the train to total hip-ville.

"No, that's not it either, our weatherman doesn't wear a hairpiece," Mr. Big-shot said.

"Hey, at least you guys are number one in the ratings game," said our top cub reporter.

"Never have and never will be" said the disgruntled Mr. Big-shot.

As the executive stumbled out of the bar we knew that we were in at CBS. We could see it now, our own dressing room, the crowds chanting our names and tons of fan mail.

"What about our own show? We could replace 'Earth Force' or 'The Flash,'" we yelled to Mr. Big-shot.

"Don't call us, we'll call you," he said, still stumbling.

We're still waiting.

Family Style should not have been adopted

Family Style
The Brothers Vaughan
Columbia Records

It sounded like a good idea: Guitar genius Stevie Ray Vaughan and his brother and mentor, Jimmie Vaughan, got together and cut 10 tracks for the first time ever as a duo. The man who stole the title of God from Eric Clapton, jamming with his big bro, the former songwriting craftsman of the Fabulous Thunderbirds. Sounds like the beginnings of a masterpiece, right?

Wrong.

Family Style, the first and unfortunately only collaboration between Stevie Ray and Jimmie Vaughan is a mixed bag of goods. Several songs are healthy, others are stillborn.

One can attribute the inefficiency of Family Style to producer Nile Rogers. Rogers, whose past production track record includes Let's Dance by David Bowie (on which Stevie Ray played guitar) and Like a Virgin by Madonna, unnecessarily over-glosses most of the album, often substituting tradition and technique with tarnish. On Family Style, Stevie Ray and Jimmie are, at many moments, trapped in a Nile Rogers's nightmare.

To even the untrained ear, the faults are obvious. Once you get past "Hard to Be," the album's opener, the album starts to lose gas. The Jimmie-sung "White Boots" is bouncy, but tacky, and two instrumentals, "D/FW" and "Hillbillies from Outerspace" are trite, also on these cuts, studio drummer Larry Aderman plays too tight in the wake (no pun intended) of Stevie Ray and Jimmie's trademark loose-handed wailing.

But things do get better towards the end: The Marvin Gaye-ish "Tick Tock" is a good sign of the direction Stevie Ray might have gone, and "Long Way From Home" and the excellent "Telephone Song" is the traditional Stevie Ray we all know and love, as is "Brothers," the album's closing anthem, in which Stevie Ray and Jimmie trade licks off the same guitar.

Yet in this writer's opinion, "Brothers" can make a stomach turn. If you think about it hard enough, that is the last song Stevie Ray Vaughan ever performed, studio-wise. When the song ended, I couldn't help asking myself "Is that it?" The death of Stevie Ray Vaughan is far more tragic than that of Elvis. Whereas Elvis, for music's sake, quit, but Stevie Ray died well before his time.

But unfortunately, Family Style is not the masterpiece allowing Stevie Ray to go out with a bang, as the Vaughan Brothers' collaboration is spotty and uneven. If you're looking for In Step meets Tough Enuff, Family Style just ain't it.

HERE'S WHAT'S ON BROADWAY

"A Few Good Men," Ron Perlman and Bradley Whitford star in Aaron Sorkin's play about two Marines on trial for murder.

"Aspects of Love," the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical about the romance between a young man and an actress.

"Black and Blue," a musical revue celebrating blues songs and the art of tap dancing.

"Cats," musical based on T.S. Eliot's cat poems, music by Andrew Lloyd Webber.

"City of Angels," a musical by Cy Coleman and Larry Gelbart about a writer of detective novels in Los Angeles of the 1940s.

"Grand Hotel," Tommy Tune directs a musical based on the Vicki Baum novel about the goings-on at a posh hotel in post-World War I Berlin.

"Gypsy," Linda Lavin stars as Mama Rose in a revival of the musical based on the early days of stripper Gypsy Rose Lee.

"Les Miserables," a musical retelling of the epic Victor Hugo novel.

"Lettice & Lovage," Maggie Smith and Margaret Tyzack star in Peter Shaffer's play about an eccentric English tour guide.

"Michael Feinstein: Piano and Voice," the popular cabaret singer and pianist in his one-man show.

"Once on This Island," a musical romance set on a Caribbean island.

"The Miser," a revival of the Moliere classic starring Philip Bosco, Carole Shelley and Mia Dillon.

MOVIE

No Heights are reached in movie

Did you ever think a movie would be made which placed landlords as the good guys? It's a nightmare come true in the new movie "Pacific Heights".

"Pacific Heights" stars Melanie Griffith and Matthew Modine as Patty Parker and Drake Goodman.

Patty and Drake are a young, unmarried couple who squander all their savings to buy a large Victorian home. To help pay the bills, they rent out part of the house.

Enter potential tenant Carter Smith played by Michael Keaton. Smith is well dressed, and owns an expensive car. He seems like the perfect tenant and with the promise of six months rent up front in cash, he's got himself an apartment.

But soon, the couple learns they've made a grave mistake.

Carter makes his living from real estate scams. He doesn't pay anything to the couple. What he does do is try to take the house away from them by planting cockroaches to drive away the other tenants and tricking Drake into attacking him in public to make him look good.

But when the couple is pushed to the limit, it becomes a game of revenge between tenant and landlord.

"Pacific Heights" is a good idea which turned out as an average movie.

Michael Keaton is the movie's best asset as the semi-psychotic tenant from hell.

Modine and Griffith are good as the seemingly helpless tenants who can only blame themselves for their predicament.

However, a big problem lies in David Pyne's unrealistic and incomplete script. It seems pretty hokey that the landlords can't quickly evict Smith for not paying any rent. The script also never tells us exactly why Smith wants their house, by what means he intended to take the house away (lawsuit?) and why he aborts his plan before it's completed.

Another flaw is John Schlesinger's directing. His use of carousel shots (the kind that spin and make you sick at the same time) are totally out of place.

Of course, if you'd really like to see landlords squirm, experience a lot of pain and not receive a single rent check, you'll really enjoy "Pacific Heights."

But in reality the only satisfaction that "Pacific Heights" will give you is a scare or two, maybe even a laugh or two. Other than that, the movie doesn't go beyond just being a mediocre film.

Phantom's aren't just for Halloween

Vampires are vicious. Mummies are mortifying. Phantoms are phantastic.

The novel, "Phantom of the Opera," written by the French journalist, Gaston Leroux, has a horribly disfigured man in love with a beautiful, young opera singer. Set in the Paris Opera House during the late 1800s, it is a story of "Beauty and the Beast" gone wrong.

In Leroux's best-known novel, the Phantom, as a young boy, has acid thrown on his face and was forced by his mother to wear a mask. It was sort of an Elephant Man born to an aristocratic family.

Consequently, he traveled in sideshows and became a court jester. However, his genius allowed him to work his way up the social ranks and design palaces for royalty.

While it would be considered mild by modern horror standards, the 1925 silent movie version of The Phantom of the Opera induced so much fear into the hearts of its first audiences that some people actually fainted when the Phantom's mask was removed. This is one of four movies based on Leroux novel.

Cameron Mackintosh created the musical version of Phantom of the Opera in 1986. It is currently showing to sold out houses at the Auditorium Theatre in Chicago. However, there are periodically cancellations and tickets can be repurchased.

Mackintosh's version of the Phantom of the Opera is about a beautiful young singer, Christine, who is unwittingly aided by the mysterious Phantom. The Phantom tutors Christine and she believes that her new teacher is an "Angel of Music" sent by her deceased father. Later she learns the Phantom wants her as his bride in exchange for the lessons.

Christine is torn by her loyalty to the Phantom and her feelings of love for Raoul, a childhood friend, also the Viscount of Changy. Raoul and the demented Phantom then declare war on each other.

The Phantom of the Opera had some exquisite scenic effects. The Auditorium Theatre was designed to look like the Paris Opera House, including the intricate golden angel ornaments around the theater.

One impressive special effect occurred in the first scene when a chandelier ascends from the middle of the stage to high above the audience's heads in the middle of the theater. The lights go off and on in time with dramatic organ music creating the illusion of a spaceship.

The Phantom wreaks havoc for the theater owners throughout the play by disrupting other performances and threatening the lives of opera singers. As the play continues tension builds until near the climax of the play, when Raoul jumps five floors from a bridge at the top of the stage into the lakes contained below the opera house. The jump was a desperate attempt to retrieve Christine from the clutches of the Phantom.

The music is widely recognized, but often the source is unknown. Andrew Lloyd Webber wrote the melody for such songs as "Think of Me" and "All I Ask of You" for The Phantom of the Opera. One marching band in this year's Homecoming parade even performed the theme song to the musical.

The Phantom of the Opera is a feast for the eyes as far as the scenery and costumes are concerned. Clips from three other plays are incorporated into this production so there is constant action. I would recommend listening to the sound track to familiarize yourself with the play and gain a greater appreciation for it.

However, if you don't have access to this, Phantom of the Opera is so entertaining even the most amateur theater connoisseur can enjoy it.

New label marks non-animal testing products

BY DEBBIE CARLSON
Associate Verge editor

The use of laboratory animals to test cosmetic products has long been a topic that has received much attention from various groups.

From protest demonstrations to a week-long series in the now-defunct "Bloom County" cartoon strip, animal testing for cosmetic reasons has outraged many animal rights groups as well as other concerned citizens.

So for those people who want to use personal hygiene products that don't involve animal experimentation, a new campaign labeling certain products as "not animal tested" has been devised.

The campaign is called "The Beautiful Choice" and was just started earlier this month by the Humane Society of the United States. "The Beautiful Choice" campaign offers companies a chance to join the society to help stop the use of animals in cosmetic testing.

Laura Chapin, spokesperson for the society, said a representative poll was conducted to find out what the nation's feelings were toward animal testing.

"Penn & Schoen, a firm here in Washington (D.C.) polled 1,000 adults nation-wide," she said.

One of the questions in the poll asked if it was necessary to use animals to test a product's safety. Chapin said 60 percent of the participants answered "no."

However, some may wonder what other alternatives there are for researchers to use to test the products on. "There are all kinds of alternatives. There are cell cultures, artificial skin and they can use a fertilized egg. There are many different alternatives to animal testing," Chapin said.

Deborah Reed, special campaigns director for the Humane Society of the United States, explained how "The Beautiful Choice" campaign started.

"We've always been involved in the issue of animal rights and throughout the years we've collected a list of companies - both large and small. When we decided to do this, we had a major mailing to more than 100 companies to invite them to participate in 'The Beautiful Choice' campaign," she said.

In order to participate, the companies would pay a fee and sign a pledge promising that the products they use in association with the label would not be tested on animals.

"They might have a variety of products, but those chosen for the campaign haven't been tested on animals. Also, the ingredients that make up the products haven't been tested on animals nor could they have a third party test it for them," Reed said.

The fee the companies pay is based on a schedule according to the amount of money the company makes. This money helps the Humane Society put together a "retailer kit."

Some of the things in the kit are five 'shelf talkers' - cards that stick out on the shelf and attract the customers attention to the product. "So far we've mailed packets to 2,000 retailers," she said.

Although the campaign is in its beginning stages, Reed said it has been going well. "The idea is a very positive campaign. It's not to attack those companies who test on animals.

"It's been very successful. Already we've been overwhelmed with phone calls and letters of people wanting to know where they can find these products. We're (drawing) a list of nationwide cosmetic retailers. By cosmetic I mean makeup, body lotion, shampoos, conditioners, deodorant, toothpastes and so on," Reed said.

Eastern history student basks in Glory

BY DEBBIE CARLSON
Associate Verge editor

Although most people's hobbies don't lead them into many adventures, the hobby of one Eastern student landed him a role in a major motion picture.

Rod Miller, a sophomore History major, became involved with Civil War reenactments through his father. "I've been doing them since I was 16 years old. (It started out when) we went to a local civil war reenactment. My dad wanted to get involved with it - I went because he told me about it. We saw one - I've always been very interested in history - and it looked really neat," he said.

Ever since then, Miller has been involved with the reenactments. "I started out in a Confederate unit, the 12th Alabama regiment," which he still is in, although he also is a member of an Illinois Union regiment.

It was through these reenactments that Miller ended up in the movie Glory, which is being shown by the history department on Monday at 4:30 p.m.

Glory is based on the 54th Massachusetts regiment which was the first black regiment accepted into federal service and raised entirely in northern states. The 54th had attempted to take Fort Wagner, S.C., in order to attack Fort Sumpter.

Fort Wagner is one and one-half miles south of Fort Sumpter in the bay near Charleston. By having Fort Wagner as a stronghold, Union troops would be able to attack Fort Sumpter, which would eventually lead to the downfall of Charleston. The regiment attack in July of 1863, but Fort Wagner eventually fell in August of 1863.

Miller explained how he ended up in the movie where Denzel Washington won an academy award for best supporting actor.

"Tri-Star productions sent out information to the larger units they sent our group information and we said yeah. It worked out really well; I was going to a community college at the time and I had spring break that weekend, they were offering three weeks and one of those weeks worked. We drove down to Jekyll Island, Ga. where the filming took place. It's an island right off of Savannah.

"They provided us transportation money, two meals a day and a campground for us to set up camp," he said.

Miller said he received $50 a day for being an extra. "Actually that's cheap compared to what they have to pay extras. The reason why they used Civil War reenactors is because extras in a regular movie is no problem to get because you can have people in normal clothes walk by. To get people with authentic uniforms or fairly authentic uniforms and teach them to march, teach them to fire a weapon and to do it right is really, really difficult," he said.

While he and the rest of the brigade were actual reenactors, most of the people playing soldiers in the 54th Massachusetts regiment were people in "the job corps."

"The 54th was made up of job corps people. Some were college students and some were just unemployed people from Savannah," he said.

That wasn't the only difference between the two groups.

Miller said the men who portrayed the soliders in the 54th Massachusetts regiment were put up in hotels while he and the other reenactors slept in tents outside.

He also added that the job corps actors were offered a chance to buy the equipment, such as the guns, uniforms and other items that they used in the movie at a lower price than if the actors were to buy the materials outright.

While most people think that being on a movie set is glamorous, Miller said there were some times when he was downright bored.

"There was a lot of sitting and standing around. We built sandcastles... One day it rained and it got really boring then; that's when we met Matthew Broderick. Sometimes the food was worse than what you get at food service," he said.

Although the main stars of the movie, Matthew Broderick, Morgan Freeman, Denzel Washington and Cary Elwes, were around, Miller said Broderick was the only one he met.

"It was actually a fluke how we met. One day it was raining and he was walking by us and we said 'hey.' It wasn't a real big deal. He was kind of a wimp. No, actually he had to get shots every morning because he was allergic to horses. He was the colonel regiment leader so he had to ride horses a lot. It was crazy,"

KEN TREVARTHAN Staff photographer

he said.

That's not the only story Miller could relate about Broderick, though.

"In the movie he was wearing a fake mustache and beard and tons of makeup. There was this one time where the mustache fell off and there was this blank, white space," he said.

The day he left, the producers offered to show a screening of what had been filmed at that point in the movie. "I didn't really see myself in it," he said. Miller said he plans on attending the Monday showing of the film.

While some reenactors say the movie business is just using Civil War reenactors in movies because this is their hobby, it didn't seem to bother Miller. "I thought it was a neat experience," he said.

Habitat

him to join Coles County's chapter.

The home at 11th and Poplar is being built for Bob and Julie Hardin and their 5-year-old daughter Ashley. Bob Hardin said he is grateful to the Habitat volunteers for all their help.

"All the people are great," said Hardin, a Coles County native who currently lives and works in Mattoon. "It's (the house is) coming along real fast.

"It's people helping people is what it's all about," he said. "They give up their Saturdays. They don't have to, but they do."

Hardin said the Habitat system seems "real fair to me" and he wants to keep helping the organization even after his obligation is fulfilled.

"We're gonna stay with the program," he said. "On down the line, whatever I can do (I will).

"It's really a good bunch of people," he added. "You can't really say enough about them."

In addition to area residents, some Eastern students are helping Habitat for Humanity. Trever Brown, president of Eastern's chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha, said his fraternity is planning to lend a hand.

"We're definitely going to try to (help out)," Brown said. "(It's) definitely a worthy cause."

Habitat for Humanity is an international organization that was founded about 15 years ago, according to Joyner. Millard Fuller, a self-made millionaire, gave away his money because he and his wife felt it "complicated their lives," Joyner said. The couple traveled to Zaire and began to build homes for the homeless people they saw there, he said. When the Fullers returned to the United States, Joyner said, they founded Habitat for Humanity.

"We build houses not merely in this country ... (but) all around the world," Joyner said. Habitat volunteers can travel to foreign countries for "Habitat workcamps," he said, adding that the workcamps fill up quickly.

"Habitat volunteers are very special people," Joyner said. "People ... who just want a change in lifestyle ... they ought to get out and (join the group)," he added.

The Coles County group, however, is still raising money for the house that will go to the Hardins, Joyner said.

"We need to raise some $15,000 to get the house finished," he said.

For this purpose Eckert said the group will have a "Habi-feast" Oct. 20 from 3 to 7 p.m. at St. Charles Borromeo Catholic Church in Charleston. Tickets are $7 for adults and $3.50 for children, Eckert said.

Joyner said Habitat's goal is to eliminate poverty housing. He noted the organization will observe their 15th anniversary next year by "converging" upon Columbus, Ohio. Joyner said volunteers from across the country will gradually work toward Columbus, building houses as they go, and will join in Columbus to build houses in that city.

Political opponents detained in Egypt

LONDON (AP) - Amnesty International said Wednesday it was concerned about reports that thousands of political detainees were held without charge in Egyptian prisons and were often tortured.

The human rights organization said 8,000 opponents of President Hosni Mubarak's government were reportedly detained in 1989 and detentions, although fewer, were continuing this year.

"Anyone can effectively be held for months without charge or trial if the Interior Ministry says they are a 'threat to national security,'" Amnesty reported from its headquarters in London.

Ali Rahmy, press counselor at the Egyptian Embassy in London, called the report "completely false." Amnesty attacked emergency laws that let the government hold people without trial or charge, for many months or even years. In some cases, family members were rounded up to force them to divulge a wanted person's whereabouts, it said.

Amnesty expressed concern that some hearings took place this year without detainees being in court, making it impossible for the court to know of any complaints of torture or ill-treatment.

Egypt signed the 1986 United Nations Convention against Torture and so must investigate such complaints of torture, but Amnesty said it failed to do so.

"The evidence of torture in Egypt has been increasing and yet there has so far been little sign of a response from the Egyptian authorities to indicate an official resolve to tackle or eradicate the problem," Amnesty said.

"More systematic torture including use of electric shocks to the genitals and other sensitive parts of the body, and suspension by the wrists from barred windows, or from doors, has been reported in dozens of cases, including many from 1989." Among cases of political prisoners it says were tortured in detention, Amnesty cited Ali As-Sayyed Batikh, a surgeon arrested on Sept. 23, 1989.

Right about now, some of you fine, upstanding and patriotic students are receiving your absentee ballots through the monopolized postal sluice gates. Therefore, the question undoubtedly crossing your mind is: "Should I do what my parents told me and vote straight Republican again this year?"

You're in college now, bucko. This is the only place in American society where men who aren't German can wear goatees, where women don't have to shave their legs if they don't want to and grown men and women can talk about the wonders of Marxist thought and lesbianism without setting a neighborhood watch on the lookout. Even here, home to the Edgar Family, strange things can happen.

"They're creepy and they're spooky; they're right wing and they're loopy; they're unrelentingly goofy: the Edgar Family. Da, da, da, dum. (snap, snap) da, da, da, dum..."

Fellow students, we are faced with a choice on Nov. 6. It looms as a date that will greatly affect the future of our personable, big-boned state. Constituents, we're talking about keeping bozos out of $50,000 rip-off-the-state lie-to-the-public jobs. We are sick and tired of these people lying to us year after year.

"Hawk" Martin
Barred from every locker room in North America

Sure, they won't raise taxes. Sure, they'll pull for more funding for our schools. Sure, the hand-shake and smile they give you on the campaign trail is sincere.

And they're never thinking to themselves, "Jesus Christ, who's this scumbag I'm touching with my hand? I've got to remember to wash my hands before I rub my eyes. They actually let this creature of serfdom vote?"

Granted, these 15 inches of newspaper space isn't going to change the nature of the political beast. After all, pigs will be swine.

But it is the power of your vote (or what we like to call the "anti-vote") that will save Illinois from being overrun by these plastic Guy Smilies from outer space.

Pete and Dave would like to urge all fine anti-voters, who are sick and tired of this bi-partisan crap, to take that ballot and write in the name of whoever you want - your mom, the garbage man, your favorite columnists, your dog, even Bugs Bunny. What the hell, it's his 50th birthday and he deserves to be comptroller. Maybe even Walter Mondale deserves some support. Ha ha, just kidding. Let's not get carried away.

As for this Lynn Martin thing, there hasn't been a more frightening candidate at this level of politics since Jane Byrne sang "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and made most of them cry. "Hawk" Martin is going to be in town this weekend and she's probably still reeling from last week's debate with Paul Simon when she revealed to the public her abilities in stream of consciousness L-word nagging.

Wait a minute. Is it just us, or has anyone noticed lately that Neil Hartigan looks more and more like Dick Van Patten every day?

And if not for this reason alone, we ask our readers to utilize the "anti-vote" and prevent fence-jumping two-facers like Hartigan or our supposed "favorite son" from occupying head honcho offices. Besides, their wives probably will just balloon out like Jayne Thompson and run us into debt with food bills.

So for the sake of keeping our state's precious grain supply a safe distance from the gaping mouth of the next governor's wife, vote for Porky Pig. He's less of a cartoon than most of those in the slop house this year.
