Chinese magic wows audience

by Angela Paoli

If magic the American way does not suit your style, you might have enjoyed magic with a Chinese touch Thursday in Dvorak Concert Hall.

"Chinese-style" magic was performed throughout the Chinese Magic Revue that was University Board-sponsored as a part of the Crazy Daze program.

The show, which attracted an audience of some 400 people and sold 200 tickets in advance, awed many with various magical acts and wondrous tricks.

The show began with a colorful dragon dance which featured tumbling and acrobats.

Throughout the entire show a comical note was present. One performer, while standing on her hands, lit a cigarette with a match using her toes and smoked it using only her toes. This evoked laughter throughout the audience.

A sword swallower amazed the audience by swallowing a lighted rod. The lights were turned off and the light could be seen in the performer's throat.

At one point, the same performer had three sharp swords placed in his throat.

The revue would not have been complete without some Kung Fu to amaze the audience. One performer broke bricks with his head after four bricks were placed on his head and then broken with a large hammer.

Balancing acts were also a predominant part of the revue. Performers climbed ladders while balancing people on top of their heads.

The most dynamic balancing act, which kept the audience spellbound, featured a performer balanced on top of six chairs while standing on his hands. Chairs were placed on top of four bottles situated on a table.

The mountain of chairs from this act extended to the top of the concert hall.

The show concluded with a bicycle act featuring all the performers on stage. Regardless of what your taste in magic is, you would have walked out of that performance magically satisfied and flipping with excitement.

Council holds action on core proposal

by Julie Cambria

A Council on Academic Affairs subcommittee Thursday recommended that no action be taken on the possible development of a new core curriculum.

The proposal, from Vice President for Academic Affairs Edgar Schick, suggests the university move from general education requirements to a core curriculum designed to "prepare students who should be living in the next century."

The subcommittee made its recommendation citing that neither the circumstances nor the timing was right for the proposal.

"I'm not going to lie down in the middle of Lincoln and kick and scream," Schick said, "but I think what I have proposed merits careful thought."

The CAA will discuss and vote on the subcommittee's recommendation at its March 7 meeting.

Schick said there is nothing wrong with the current general education requirements but added his proposal would "help integrate students into the highly interdependent world we live in today."

"We have entered an age of interdependence, and we now have a world in which we all live together," he added. "We are interdependent with our ecology, our past, our present, our future and with other nations."

Schick wrote in his proposal that the university has an "obligation and an opportunity to structure a core curriculum which will prepare our students—of all ages—to be effective citizens in a highly interdependent world."

However, CAA subcommittee member Kandy Baumgardner said the committee solicited a large number faculty opinions that did not favor the proposal.

"It wasn't so much a matter of them (faculty members) disliking the proposal but that a change wasn't needed," Baumgardner said.

She added that the subcommittee found there was no dissatisfaction with the current general education requirements and that there is "no reason to change."

The recommendation states that the present general education requirements went into effect fall 1981, and the first class which will have completed these requirements will be graduating this spring.

"Not quite four years of students have gone through the general education requirements we have now," Baumgardner said. "We haven't had a full cycle (of students) complete them."

Home owners have no legal protection from asbestos

by Jim Allen

If you find asbestos particles floating around in your apartment or residence hall, there is legally little you can do about it.

Legislation has set safety levels for asbestos in the workplace, but private homes have received no legislative protection from the disease-causing chemical, according to Cheryl Floyd, industrial hygienist for the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Charleston building inspector Jeff Finley said there are no problems with asbestos in Charleston businesses "to my knowledge". He added, however, "There have been instances in private homes."

Although there are no local or county building codes directly addressing asbestos, Finley noted, "Local codes provide for the building official to ensure the safety of the public. . . It's one of those things the federal government has set the standards for."

However, on the federal level, the Occupational Safety and Hazard Agency only regulates the workplace, Floyd said.

"Private citizens have been ignored," Floyd said. "It's a bad situation—no doubt about it."

Floyd added the primary responsibility of her agency is to regulate the demolition of buildings containing asbestos.

The fire-protection, soundproofing and insulating agent was used widely from 1940 to 1973, where it is estimated hundreds of thousands of tons of asbestos were sprayed in schools and other buildings, both public and private, Finley said.

The first bans on the use of the product came in 1973, when lung diseases were found in asbestos miners.

In 1973, the EPA prohibited the spraying of asbestos-containing materials for insulation, fire protection and soundproofing.

In 1975, the EPA prohibited the use of asbestos for pipe covering if the materials easily crumble after drying. And in 1977, the Consumer Product Safety Commission banned patching compounds and artificial fireplace materials containing respirable asbestos.

Floyd noted that not all products using asbestos are dangerous. Soft, easily crumbled asbestos-containing material has the greatest potential for creating health risks.

Issuance of class lists delayed

Students may still pick up their pre-enrollment packages Monday, but fall 1985 class listings will not be available until Wednesday.

University Relations Director Daniel Thornburgh said the fall listings will not be printed until Tuesday night and will be made available in the Wednesday Daily Eastern News.

The delay in printing, Thornburgh said, was caused when the Academic Assistance Center did not have the listings completed and ready for printing.

He added students who have appointments with the academic advancement center should still keep their appointments.

However, students who have made an appointment with their adviser and want to schedule fall classes should make their appointments for Wednesday or later.

Deadline for turning in pre-enrollment forms is 4 p.m. April 12 in the slot outside the registration office in McAfee's basement.

Students who want to schedule summer classes can meet with their advisers as soon as they pick up their registration packets because the summer class listings have been printed.

Ortega pledges changes...

School chief proposes funding

CHICAGO—Illinois' new school chief, raising Governor Thompson's bid for more state aid to public education, on Thursday proposed a $404 million school financing increase and a $20,000 minimum salary for teachers.

School superintendent Ted Sanders told a committee of the State Board of Education that public elementary and high schools need more money to maintain current programs, start new ones and raise salaries.

Measles outbreak slows down

ELSAH, Ill.—Travel restrictions are being eased for students at Principia College, where a measles outbreak that may have caused two deaths shows signs of slowing, school and local health officials said Thursday.

Students and faculty at the southern Illinois college must accept the tenets of the Christian Science Church, which teaches that prayer and faith can cure illness.

While many of the 93 Principia students who contracted measles since the outbreak began Jan. 11 sought healing through prayer, college president John Boyman said their religious beliefs did not prevent hundreds from voluntarily receiving immunizations in two recent clinics.

Agency looks into hospital costs

SPRINGFIELD—The state agency that keeps tabs on medical costs reported Thursday that hospital charges rose faster than inflation last year, and released the first-ever comparison of prices at Illinois' 251 hospitals in hopes of limiting future increases.

The Illinois Health Care Cost Containment Council said hospital prices for 15 common services rose an average 5.6 percent in 1984, while inflation was 4.3 percent. The study found that prices at 167 hospitals, or 67 percent, rose faster than inflation.

The panel's chairman also said the council would recommend legislation aimed at keeping hospital price boosts within increases in the Consumer Price Index.

MANAGUA (AP)—Nicaragua's offer to stop its military buildup in exchange for renewed talks with the United States reflects the pressure created by isolation, a shattered economy, a costly guerilla war and growing domestic discontent.

The leftist Sandinista government, which sided with Cuba and the Soviet bloc soon after it seized power in July 1979, now finds itself isolated from formerly friendly nations in Western Europe, distant from Soviet supplies and bordered by hostile neighbors in Central America.

It also is being squeezed economically by the United States, which cut off aid long ago and provided aid to 16,000 armed rebels.

President Daniel Ortega made a series of moves this week designed to placate the United States and bring it back to bilateral talks it suspended in January.

Ortega was almost conciliatory when he said of the proposals: "We hope President Reagan considers them and accepts them and contributes to a peaceful solution of the problems and to eliminate the alternative of war and increase the possibilities of peace."

He invited a bipartisan congressional committee to an unrestricted visit to confirm that Nicaragua's military is strictly defensive, said he was willing to send 100 Cuban military advisors home, and pledged to stop acquiring new weapons.

...Bush questions sincerity

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Reagan administration opened the door Thursday to a new dialogue with Nicaragua but dismissed as probably meaningless an offer by President Daniel Ortega to send home 100 Cuban military advisors and impose a moratorium on acquiring new arms systems.

"It is relevant to ask why they bother," Vice President George Bush told the Austin Council on Foreign Relations in Texas. He said the 100 advisors are about 1 percent of the Cubans in Nicaragua and that the army cannot absorb new weapons now.

On the face of it, Bush said in a speech, the steps taken by Ortega "do not appear to represent significant moves."

But Secretary of State George P. Shultz, flying to Ecuador, said he was "perfectly willing" to meet with Ortega next weekend when they attend the inauguration of Uruguayan President Julio Sanguinetti in Montevideo. "I'll listen carefully to what he says," Shultz told reporters.

U.S.-Nicaragua relations were heading toward a boil before Ortega announced his "unilateral initiatives and decisions" in Managua on Wednesday night, producing a subdued although skeptical response from the administration.

Shultz said that in view of the "several thousand" Cuban military advisors in Nicaragua, the withdrawal of 100 would be only a "token" gesture.

"But if the token is something that will lead to rather massive reductions, that's something else again," he said.

As for the weapons-system freeze, Shultz said there has been a "rather massive build-up of hardware" in Nicaragua "and it may well be that they've gotten what they needed. Anyway, if there is a cessation in the military build-up then that's welcome."

AB reduces Sports and Recreation's budget

by Lori Edwards

The Apportionment Board Thursday trimmed $6,475 from the Sports and Recreation Board's 1986 budget request of $55,885 in student fees.

However, AB Chairman Tammy Walker said the Sports and Recreation Board is receiving an increase of $4,160 over last year's budget of $45,250 at this point.

Intramural director Dave Dutler presented the Sports and Recreation Board budget with a requested increase of $11,825 from last year's budget.

Eight board line item requests were decreased during the deliberation of the budget including:

Blood total goal short by 32 units

by Michelle Mueller

With a final total of 1,644 pints, the Red Cross spring blood drive finished only 32 units short of the 1,676 pint goal Thursday, General chairman Diane Castellari said.

Officials netted 514 pints of blood the final day of the drive. That total is more than any other day of the drive.

"We had another big turn-out right at the end" which helped the boost, Castellari said.

However, she said she was disappointed that the goal was not reached after coming so close to success. "It makes me a little upset in a way, but I'm happy with what we got."

Last spring's blood drive total fell short of its goal by 123 pints, while last fall's drive was 274 pints short of its goal.

In addition, Castellari said 45 would-be donors were turned away. If Thursday's deferrals had been able to donate, the day's total would have been 559 pints, pushing the entire drive's total up to 1,689 units, 13 past the goal.

Castellari explained that deferrals are usually caused by health problems such as low iron counts.

Although deferrals may be a disappointment, the blood committee still sets high goals.

Eastern's blood drive committee and the Red Cross decided upon the 1,676-pint goal, Castellari said. "The Red Cross in St. Louis set it (the goal) for us. But we try to come up with our own."

"We take into consideration if it's the fall or the spring, and we take into consideration the previous goal and how close we came to it," Castellari explained.

"Normally, the spring (drive) does better than the fall," she said.

The next Red Cross blood drive at Eastern is scheduled for Sept. 30 through Oct. 3.

asked for an increase in student payroll to pay for an additional referee for each volleyball and flag football intramural game.

However, AB members said adding more referees would increase the "bitterness and competition between teams" and intramural sports are designed for fun and participation.

•$765 from commodities for volleyball nets, award plaques for residence halls and stadium cups.

AB Vice Chairman Paul Melcon said the racquetball courts, which are also used for walleyball, are full most of the time with people playing raquetball.

Ron Wesel, AB ex-officio member, said Dutler's request for residence hall award plaques could be funded by the halls if they wanted the program because members of the greek and off-campus communities sponsored their own programs of this type.

•$630 for mirrors in the Lantz Gym weight room and walkie-talkies for communication between building supervisors.

Union Area Head Bill Clark said he believed the project had been "very poorly researched" because durable equipment would cost more.

•$700 from a printing request of $1,000. The AB members said much of the work done for intramural informational printing can be completed by university duplicating at a lesser cost.

•$200 from office supplies which Dutler said would be increased because of an additional staff member in the intramural department.

During deliberation, Walker said the line items of a budget can be increased, decreased or remain unchanged.

However, she said the AB cannot say how money can be allocated within a line item.

In other business, AB approved the removal of Don Rogers, an AB faculty member, because of constant absenteeism.

Walker said a board member is only allowed three unexcused absences in the spring semester. She added that a student was dismissed on the same grounds two years ago.

"It is unfortunate," Walker said, adding that she had sent Rogers a letter requesting his attendance at meetings.

In addition, AB discussed the possibility of limiting non-AB member debate on the Student Senate budget to 15 minutes. Senate budget debate begins next week.

Senior John Prendiville, who circulated a petition to abolish student fee support of senate, and several senate members are expected to attend.

Correction

The caption in Thursday's Daily Eastern News which identified Linda Lockett pinning a corsage on Coretta Scott King was incorrect. It was actually Pamela Jones, not Lockett.

Also, zoology instructor Jaime Maya was misquoted in Wednesday's News. Maya's quote should have read, "It would be nice if Vice President Schick wrote a letter to minority faculty."

The News regrets these errors.

Mudslinging is fun

Editor:

This is in response to a letter in the Feb. 27 edition of The Daily Eastern News concerning playing football in the mud on university property.

I would encourage the News to continue occasionally printing pictures of people playing in the mud, or any other amusing student activity.

Esker certainly has an extremist view on destruction of property. I don't think "tearing up the lawn" by playing football warrants the initiation of a new rule or university policy to forbid this harmless (albeit, filthy) form of recreation.

While the lawn may be "torn up," I can hardly except his assertion that it will be "dangerous to walk on and a disgrace to visitors." Do you make a habit of walking in the middle of swamps, Mr. Esker? I certainly don't. And I certainly don't think it's disgusting to visitors to see people having good, honest fun.

I think it's only normal for students to want to get out of their rooms after a long, cold winter. Frankly, Mr. Esker, I don't care if you "wouldn't let others use your property in this way."

Your analysis of why people do this is also curious. You claim people do this to get attention. What's the matter with that? Maybe you can cue us all in on your secret of surviving this life without receiving any!

John Flaherty

Editor:

I appreciate reading Brian Ormiston's columns, whether I agree with them philosophically or not, and I believe he should be encouraged to sharpen his skills.

I know that criticism hurts, but that is part of the journalistic game.

It is unfortunate that some people forget that the News is a training ground for students who are not yet professionals. I only wish some faculty would subject their classrooms and themselves to the same kind of criticism often leveled at some of our young writers. Keep the faith.

Long, winding road lies ahead for equal rights

Miles and miles of the road to equal rights for both sexes have been paved in the last few decades. Equality, the preferred destination for women, has yet to be reached, however.

Women's History and Awareness Month, which is observed in March, presents the perfect chance to remember strides which have been made and to become aware of gains needed.

The economics of womanhood have undergone immense change since World War II and the days of Rosie the Riveter. While the men of America went off fighting, the void in the work force had to be filled. The women of America came to the rescue, but that period of a female-dominated work force was short-lived.

Once the soldiers returned, the women workers—no matter how competent they were—often had to give up their new-found jobs.

Today, women are an integral part of America's work force. In the 1980's, women have flooded into the job market. As a matter of fact, women have seized two-thirds of the jobs created in the past decade.

And although disparity exists between wages earned by men and those earned by women, it has decreased considerably in the last decade. Women today earn 64 cents to every dollar earned by men; in 1979 women only received 59 cents to their male counterparts' dollar.

In the professional arena, the percentages of women acting as doctors, lawyers, newspaper editors and accountants is disheartening. Only 38 percent of America's accountants are women; 11 percent of newspaper executive editors in the United States are women.

The economic and professional gains of women have presented a new dilemma which students who are about to graduate will face. Must women choose whether to have children or careers? Can they attain both goals successfully or will sacrifices have to be made?

The long and arduous road to equality looms ahead.

Black History Month closes with Unity Day

by Laurie Heller and Dave McKinney

About 30 Eastern students participated in a Unity Day Gathering Thursday afternoon on the Library Quad to wrap up Black History Month.

During the five-minute gathering, about 30 Eastern students held hands and said a short prayer to "thank God for Black History Month." The prayer was followed by the civil rights anthem "We Shall Overcome."

One of the participants, junior Joseph Morales, pledged to go on a three-week fast for "peace and world hunger."

Senior Clifton Graham, the organizer of the first Unity Day Gathering three years ago, said Thursday's assembly was "a success."

Black History Month

"It's hard to get people to come out between classes," he said. "But it would be a success even if only one or two happened to come out."

Johnetta Jones, director of the Afro-American Studies program, said Thursday, "It's been one of the best we've had in a long time."

"I guess I came out of the month with more of a positive feeling than I have had in a long time," she said.

Warbler, News editors chosen

by Paul Hays

The Publications Board Thursday chose editors in chief for the 1985-86 Warbler and Daily Eastern News.

The board unanimously approved the selection of juniors Nancy Yamin as Warbler editor and David McKinney as News editor in chief.

The selections were made following recommendations by Warbler adviser Mary Wohlrabe and News editorial adviser Michael Cordts.

Wohlrabe said she recommended Yamin, an English major, because she has strong leadership abilities and three years of experience at the Daily Eastern News.

McKinney, a journalism major, was recommended because of his news experience, commitment to readers and a desire to learn, Cordts said.

In addition, Student Publications adviser David Reed said the Summer Eastern News editor in chief will be chosen in April because prospective editors are not sure what their summer plans are.

Lady cagers gain revenge on SWMO, 71-68

by Dan Verdun

For a split-second Eastern's women's basketball coach Barbara Hilke thought she might be watching a re-run of the Panthers' first meeting with Southwest Missouri.

In that game, the Panthers blew an eight-point lead with three minutes left in the contest to drop a 76-72 decision to the Bears in Springfield, Mo.

But, history didn't repeat itself on Thursday as Eastern held off Southwest Missouri to post a 71-68 Gateway Conference victory in Lantz Gym.

"It (the loss to Southwest) went through my mind in the last few minutes," Hilke said. "But the team sure didn't show it. They were still pretty much dynamite going to the basket."

Hilke said the win—which boosted Eastern's record to 14-11 overall and 6-9 in GCAC—was an indication of the Panthers' growing maturity.

"That earlier loss to Southwest was a stunning setback to us," Hilke said. "We had quite a bit to prove tonight. It was a great team effort."

The Panthers indeed had a great team effort. Eastern's scoring attack was so balanced that all five starters scored in double figures.

Junior forward Chris Aldridge led the way with 15 points. The junior was forced to the bench with an ankle injury late in the game. The injury, however, was not serious.

Senior Toni Conine and junior Melanie Hatfield added 14 points each to the Panther attack. Collins, Eastern's all-time leading rebounder, had a game-high 17 rebounds.

Senior Lori Conine and junior Sue Hynd both chipped in 13 points.

"It was a real pleasant surprise," Hilke said of the balanced scoring. "I hope we keep it going in the last three games."

After Southwest Missouri had trimmed the Panthers' lead to 61-58 with 5:04 left, Eastern ran off six unanswered points to build a 67-58 margin to put the game on ice.

"They put tremendous pressure on the ball late," Hilke said. "But Hatfield's running down the floor saved our necks."

"Our defense came through at the end. The key was that we were moving our feet and seeing the ball better."

The Panthers also made the front ends of their one-and-ones late in the contest.

"We did a great job at the line," Hilke said. "We hit the crucial ones when we needed them."

Junior Jeanette Tendai led Southwest Missouri with a game-high 27 points. Center Sharon Zeilmann added 16 points and seven blocked shots to the Bear

Last home game

Cagers to face new Division I opponent Chicago State

by Ken Dickson

Oh, the woes of being a first-year Division I independent.

Eastern's men's basketball team's final home opponent, Chicago State University, has had a few problems this season. But they're nice kinds of problems.

The Cougars, who are competing in their first year as an NCAA Division I school, were 31-5 last season and third in the nation on the NAIA level.

This season, while trying to make the required number of Division I games to be considered Division I, Chicago State only managed to schedule nine home games.

Assistant coach Dennis Willis said, "the only way you would like our schedule is if you were a travel agent."

Despite the thick travel log, the Cougars are 16-10 overall and 9-0 at home in its freshman season. And even their road-game record is respectable at 7-10.

So this season Chicago State is getting its feet wet in the big leagues. But instead of wet toes, its gotten a cold head-drenching.

The Cougars have played several major Division I universities like Illinois, Texas Tech, Wichita State, Illinois State and Southern Illinois.

Not a bad start for a youngster, especially when you're 16-10.

Eastern coach Rick Samuels just hopes they don't have a successful finish in Saturday's Parents' Weekend game at Lantz.

"It's their last game of the season, and they've had a pretty successful season for a first year Division I team," Samuels said. "They'll be anxious to close the season out on a good note."

Chicago State, which has been compared to Cleveland State, is led by its two guards. Charles Perry, a 5-foot-11 senior, is averaging 18.1 points, while Darron Brittman is scoring at a 15.2 clip.

The team's front line is not big, only 6-7, 6-6 and 6-3, and combines for only 24 points and 15 rebounds.

The Cougars use a full-court defense for most of the game and 329 steals in 26 games (over 12 per game) is evidence of its effectiveness.

In addition to it being the Cougars' last game of the season, it will also be the last regular season home game for five of Eastern's players. Dirk Androff, Troy Richardson, Tim Dykstra, Steve Hopkins and Paul Neidig are completing their final seasons.

Looking for something new and interesting to do this weekend but don't want to travel far to do it? Page One Tavern might be the perfect cure for the same-old routine.

Page One, 406 Sixth St., has some new additions that offer more than mass quantities of alcohol or the opportunity to pick up a member of the opposite sex.

When trying to forget about midterms next week, perhaps the decision of whether or not to go to a movie or to the nearest drinking establishment is a difficult decision to make.

To avoid this dilemma, Page One has set up a big screen television in its lounge area so patrons may enjoy the best of both worlds. Movies are shown all day and soap operas are played every other hour.

Live entertainment on the weekends is another new feature added to Page One.

"We've just started it this semester. We are trying to book local bands that have some originality," Dave Harris, Page One entertainment coordinator, said. "We give them a break to get them up on their feet."

Harris noted that the crowd for the bands is almost strictly college students. He added that these band have only been marginally successful so far.

"After spring break and definitely next fall, we will be booking some big name bands," Harris said.

In addition, Page One's upstairs room is available for private parties during the week. "There is no charge for the use of the room per se. It is included in the price of the kegs, which are available for $50 each," Harris added.

"Renting out the upstairs began last semester with various fraternities and sororities and now The Romans are up there every Wednesday night," he added. The room holds up to 150 people.

For those people who are not particularly excited about the idea of a movie or a band, Page One now has a case delivery service to go along with their keg delivery service that started last semester.

Harris said there is no charge for the delivery and the beer is competitively priced with the liquor stores.

While trying to decide what to do this weekend take these ideas into consideration. If all else fails, this could be the weekend that procrastination comes to an end since midterms start next week. But then again, there's always Monday.

Opinions given on conservatism

by Theresa Phelan

A definition of conservatism and liberalism is often hard to specify because of the assorted personal beliefs that enter into the meaning.

At Eastern, several students gave their views on the topic of conservatism and how it affected their political opinions.

These opinions were, for the most part, similar in nature with most students stating that conservative people tend to be afraid of change and less accepting.

Sophomore Keith Blythe, said he describes conservatives as those who are "influenced by their environment and don't accept change easily."

He added, however, that he believes he is conservative mainly because of his upbringing in a small town and the school he attended.

Sophomore Steve Hogan agreed with Blythe saying that a conservative is "one who doesn't take a lot of chances" and is willing to "accept status quo."

He also described himself as conservative on political issues and believes his opinionated views come from watching what actually happens in politics.

"If today's government is working, why change it," Hogan said.

Senior Felicia Weinstein said, politically, she does not know enough to take a liberal or conservative stand, but in her opinion, most students want to be liberal at times but their practices may be different from their views.

Weinstein said she believes Eastern student's political views are mixed because of the different backgrounds and parental influence.

Sophomore Marlene Harrell agreed with Weinstein noting that her father had a lot bearing on her political views while she looks to her mother for moral views.

However, senior Dee Haefele said although her parents were liberal on some points, she tries to make her own decisions on what is right.

Haefele added that she believes Eastern students are forced to be conservative because they do not have enough of a voice on issues concerning them such as setting policy, student government and alcohol laws.

Some students, however, do view Eastern's campus as being more liberal than conservative. Sophomore John Gildea said he believes Eastern is "generally pretty liberal."

He cited the tailgate issue as an example, saying that once the campus expressed uproar, something was accomplished.

"Politics are now conservative and should continue. The trend will probably stay because it is pretty successful."

—Steve Hogan
—Eastern student

Gildea said a lot of people may be conservative on campus, but in his opinion, there are also a lot of students becoming more liberal.

Freshman Donna Lemrise also believes that Eastern is pretty liberal in comparison to other schools with the majority of people being easy going.

In addition, opinions on what political views will be like in the future tend to favor the conservative side with the views likely to stay as they are.

"Politics are now conservative and should continue. The trend will probably stay because it is pretty successful," Hogan said.

Lemrise also believes that the population will never be totally liberal and that people will also need some type of guidance deep down to make decisions.

Harrell said she thinks the old-fashioned beliefs will stay with us for awhile because we have seen how they worked for our parents.

Gabbard no

by Lisa Albarran

With each generation comes perspective on life and sometimes in both values and morals. And the opinions of Eastern students are no different are they?

As a retired Eastern instructor, Gabbard said he believes that students have experienced change in viewing and dealing with life.

Gabbard, who taught at Eastern for 25 years, said he has not seen as much in the classroom as out of it.

"In the 60's and 70's there wasn't a revolution here on Eastern's campus," Gabbard noted. "The students here want to prove themselves instead of the way we did."

Gabbard believes that he knows the reasons behind the lack of involvement.

"I have always thought of Eastern as a man's school. The students all come from good hardworking families," Gabbard said.

He explained that because students were attending college as a privilege, they didn't bother themselves with all the problems of the world.

"They were not like the other schools from more the affluent schools demonstrating," he said.

"Actually it was almost embarrassing that they (Eastern students) didn't revolt the same time it was comfortable."

Gabbard said he believes Eastern students' "not getting involved attitude" remained constant throughout the years, however, the reasons behind this have changed.

He noted that students are not more liberal or conservative, just in-

"Look at all these national scandals," Gabbard noted. "Students have so many models."

Conservative student shares personal views about political and moral codes

When old high school classmates see me walking on campus with my three-piece suit and briefcase, they ask me, "What happened to you? You look like a conservative."

When I tell them that I am a conservative, they usually start to laugh; "You're a conservative! The most liberal student in our graduating class, that's a good one."

However, after I explain some of my views on abortion, sex, under-age drinking and national defense, they usually say "My god! You really are a conservative."

I tell them, "Yes I am a conservative, both politically and morally. I voted for Ronald Reagan last November and my personal views are based on an extreme moral code I have established."

After hearing this, my friends usually walk away shaking their heads in disbelief.

Although I was considered a liberal in high school, my conservative views are deeply rooted. They have been structured by the numerous events and happenings that I have seen and read about.

I feel abortion is murder. The waste of future doctors, farmers and workers is inexcusable and people should do all they legally can do to stop this senseless slaughter.

The list for couples who can't have children for physical reasons has grown immensely in the last decade. They offer a home and a future for unwanted children that would have otherwise been destroyed.

Personal file:

Andrew Leyden

My view on abortion has been shaped in part by my views against pre-marital sex. I don't believe in it. I have seen a number of people, even some of my own friends, run into many problems such as venereal disease, unwanted pregnancies, and "shotgun weddings" because they wanted to have fun with a girl before they were married.

I also am against drinking alcohol. This may sound strange coming from a college student, but I do not drink. I never have and I don't see myself starting any time soon.

In the past, I have used the excuse "I'm not 21 so I can't get served," but that excuse didn't stand up with my peers because of Charleston's liquor policy enforcement.

The excuse I have been using lately is a good one: "Drinking is against the law at my age." I don't think my desire for alcohol is great enough to invalidate a federal and state law. If I am to live in this country, I believe I should abide by the laws of this country.

This is a good country. It stands for freedoms unlike any country on the face of the earth and should be defended to the best of our ability.

Since I have been alive, I have seen my country disgraced by the Viet-cong in Vietnam and threatened by the mad-man Ayatollah Khomeini in Iran.

To protect our interests, we must be ready to respond to aggression in any form. Whether the threat be from a small island nation in the Carribean or from a global superpower, our defense should be maintained at a level which is second to none.

If a person was to look at me at home, they would see more examples of my conservatism. After high school, the centerfolds came off the wall, the t-shirts went to Goodwill, and the punk rock tapes went into a box in my closet.

These were replaced by an American flag on my wall, sport coats and slacks in my wardrobe and classical music albums near my stereo.

Statistics have shown that a large number of college students are now conservatives. Although I like this thought, I think it is inaccurate.

I seldom see college students holding a majority of conservative ideas. Many students consider themselves conservative only because they think it is the "in" thing to do and not because of their views.

I confess that I am not a total conservative. I disagree with some of the policies being put forth by conservatives and I am working against them.

Sometimes, when no one is looking, I get the feeling I would like to slip on a t-shirt, some blue jeans, and crank some old Sex Pistols on the record player. But, thank God, I soon return to my senses and these thoughts go away.

Breakfast Club is a brunch of fun

After seeing so many derogatory movies about teenagers', I was pleased to finally see the release of a movie that shows teenage life in a more realistic light and dealt seriously with their lifestyles and problems.

The Breakfast Club is a movie about five high school students who have to spend a Saturday in school detention writing an essay about themselves and the reason for breaking the rules.

These teenagers represent almost every clique that could possibly exist in high school.

One character, Judd Nelson, plays a pot-smoking rebel. He is the typical burned out pessimist who hates society and the system.

On the other end of the spectrum is Emilio Estevez who plays an all-state wrestler who believes life doesn't mean anything unless you're an athlete.

Then there's the Prom Queen who is well portrayed by Molly Ringwald. She plays Claire, a mindless pretty girl whose outstanding skill is applying lipstick with no hands. She is, however, the most popular girl in school and knows it.

The fourth person in this varied assortment of people is Anthony Michael Hall, who portrays a brainy wimp concerned only with his grade point average and living up to his parent's expectations + excellence.

The last character, played by Ally Sheedy, is a mental case who spends the first half of the movie in complete silence and the second half as a compulsive liar.

A stereotypical principal, who dresses in cheap polyester suits and credits students with very little intelligence, supervises the group.

He's a hard nosed power-seeker who is thrilled with the idea of having five students under his thumb for an entire day uninterrupted.

Throughout the movie, the small cast acts out the conflicts that occur between student cliques in a normal suburban school.

During the first 10 minutes of the movie, the audience gets a premonition that the group is eventually going to become close friends, but things don't look hopeful at the start.

Each character shows contempt for the other. Then the rebel Bender breaks down the barriers and gets them more comfortable with each other.

From there, they begin talking to each other and realizing that there are similarities in their lives.

The Breakfast Club concerns the real and painful problems teenagers go through. These characters all have problems with their parents and are greatly affected by the way they are treated by them. This is what these characters have in common.

One of the best scenes in the movie is when the students are talking about their problems and views on sex.

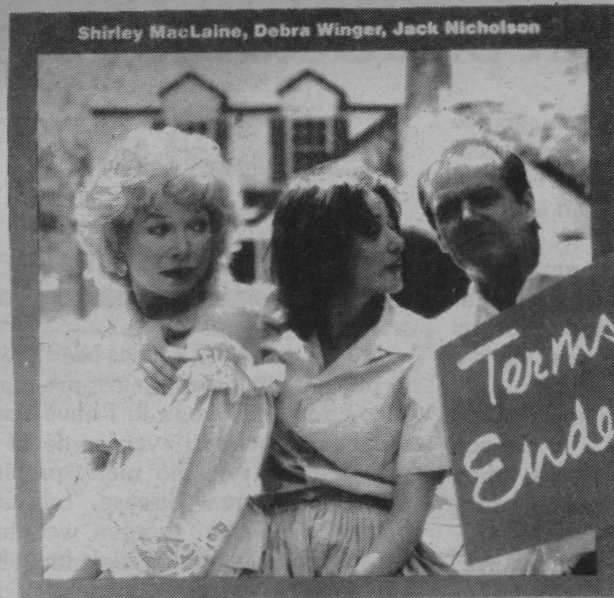

Prior to this discussion, the group had gotten high with Bender and the effects of the pot loosened their inhibitions.

For the first time, the students have an honest conversation about what they are really thinking.

I think this movie is refreshingly funny at times, with a serious them and although it is centered on the problems of teenagers, I recommend it for any person who still remembers their high school days.
