

Copyright is owned by the Author of the thesis. Permission is given for a copy to be downloaded by an individual for the purpose of research and private study only. The thesis may not be reproduced elsewhere without the permission of the Author.

“It’s complicated”: The lived experience of female sexual desire

A thesis presented in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of

Masters of Science in Health Psychology

at Massey University, New Zealand.

Kate Ferris
2017

Table of Contents

Preliminaries

1) Abstract .....	vi
2) Acknowledgements.....	vii
3) List of tables/figures .....	viii

Part I: Study outline and existing knowledge

4) Focus of interest .....	3
5) Significance of the study .....	5
6) Study aims and research question .....	7
7) Arguments for the study.....	7
8) Literature review .....	8
a) A brief history of sex research.....	8
b) Contemporary research .....	10
i. What is desire? Empirical referents.....	11
A. Cognitive .....	11
B. Physiological .....	12
C. Behavioural .....	13
ii. Sociological understandings.....	13
A. The goal of desire .....	15
B. Relationship factors .....	17
C. Self-consciousness .....	19
D. The paradox of desire fulfilment .....	20
iii. Sex-based differences .....	21
c) Female sexual interest/arousal disorder: A case study .....	23
i. DSM-5 and its controversies .....	24
ii. The evolution of diagnosis.....	26
iii. Low desire as an arguably normal experience .....	27
iv. Medicalising female sexuality.....	29
d) Moving female sexual desire research forward.....	32

Part II: Research philosophy and processes

9) Introduction .....	37
10) Methodology .....	37
a) Qualitative research .....	37
b) Hermeneutic phenomenology.....	38
i. Definitions.....	38
ii. The genesis of phenomenology.....	39
iii. The evolution of hermeneutic phenomenology .....	40
iv. Transitioning from philosophising to research.....	40
c) Applying philosophy to the current study .....	41
i. Epistemology .....	42
ii. Ontology .....	45

iii. Language .....	45
iv. Analysis .....	46
d) Relevance to the field .....	47
11) Sampling .....	48
12) Method .....	48
a) Hermeneutic process .....	49
b) Orienting to the phenomena .....	49
c) Entering into dialogue: Interviews .....	50
i. Making contact .....	51
ii. Considering context .....	51
iii. Eliciting the lived experience .....	52
iv. Capturing the lived experience .....	54
v. Researcher/researched boundaries .....	54
vi. Concluding the interview .....	55
vii. Psychological safety .....	55
d) Deepening in understanding: Art .....	56
i. Methodological relevance .....	56
ii. Inviting audience interpretation .....	60
iii. Embodiment and performance based method .....	61
iv. Building a case for analysis .....	62
e) Reflexive practice .....	62
13) Theory .....	63
14) Ethics .....	65
a) Procedural ethics .....	66
b) Ethics in practice .....	67
i. Informed consent .....	67
ii. Anonymity and confidentiality .....	68
iii. Vulnerability .....	69
iv. Image construction/consumption .....	70
c) Reflexivity .....	71

Part III: Research results and analysis

15) Participant narratives and artwork .....	76
a) Rose .....	76
b) Violet .....	77
c) Peony .....	80
d) Lily .....	82
e) Jasmine .....	84
f) Dahlia .....	87
16) Grasping at the lived experience .....	90
a) Part I: Conceptualisation .....	91
i. Acknowledging complexity .....	91
ii. Co-construction of self and world .....	93
iii. Ambiguity and intangibility .....	94
iv. Caring/thinking about sex .....	96
v. Relational health .....	99

vi.	The experience of sexual fulfilment .....	100
vii.	Conceptualisation conclusions.....	102
b)	Part II: Development through the life-course.....	102
i.	Early influences: developing a stance .....	105
	1. Sex is bad and/or taboo.....	105
	2. Sex is confusing .....	107
	3. Sex is natural.....	110
	4. Sex is for marriage.....	110
	5. Cumulative impacts.....	111
ii.	Early experiences.....	112
	1. Self-awareness and self-exploration.....	113
	2. Playing with others.....	117
	3. Cumulative impacts.....	122
iii.	Sexual relationships of consequence .....	123
	1. Validation, encouragement and affirmation ...	123
	2. Partners that fail to validate, encourage or affirm .....	126
	3. The social construction of marriage .....	129
	4. Cumulative impacts.....	132
iv.	Role and relationship changes .....	133
	1. Relationship .....	133
	2. Motherhood .....	137
	3. Cumulative impacts.....	141
v.	Embodied changes.....	142
	1. Conception, pregnancy and the maternal body .....	142
	2. Menstruation, menopause and aging.....	145
	3. Cumulative impacts.....	149
vi.	Self-acceptance.....	150
vii.	Staying sexual subjects.....	152
17)	The significance of sexual scripts and double standards .....	154
18)	The journey to understanding .....	157
a)	Interpretation of results.....	158
i.	Acknowledging the sexual self .....	159
ii.	Relational sexual ethics.....	160
b)	Theory surrounding emerging themes.....	161

Part IV: Conclusions and reflections

19)	Conclusion.....	164
20)	Contribution to knowledge .....	164
21)	Validity of knowledge claims .....	165
a)	Assessing validity in art.....	166
22)	Limitations of the study .....	167
23)	Future research recommendations.....	168
24)	Reflections on the journey: concluding statement .....	169

Back room

25) Appendices.....171
    a) Letter of approval from institutional ethics board.....171
    b) Informed consent form.....172
    c) Information sheet.....173
    d) Jasmine poem transcript.....175
26) References .....176

Abstract

‘What is sexual desire and how do women experience it?’ is the central question of this hermeneutic phenomenological study. The goal was to challenge the pathologisation of women’s sexual desire by highlighting its complexity, situatedness and temporality. In-depth interviews and autobiographical art data elicited in partnership with seven participants were interpreted and analysed using a life course perspective to highlight how both positive and negative experiences, as well as the acceptance or resistance of cultural scripts and double standards, contribute over time to a woman’s sense of her own access to sexual desire, agency around sexual decision-making, and entitlement to sexual pleasure. In line with the study’s meta-theoretical principles, the researcher completed a parallel reflexive writing and art practice to deepen her engagement with participant experience. In analysing all data, it became evident that women’s sexual desire, develops through a complex multistage process over the lifetime. Participants all reflected MacNeil and Byers’ (2005) finding that the more comfortable and agentic a woman feels in expressing her sexuality and communicating her desires, the greater her feelings for intimacy and the higher likelihood that she will derive satisfaction in sex.

Acknowledgements

Firstly, a huge thank you for my family for supporting my education and journey toward independence. To my son, you are too young to understand or rationalise the sacrifices required to make this project happen, but I hope that in time you too come to relish hard work, persistence and intellectual curiosity. Gratitude also goes to my supervisor Kerry Chamberlain, who gave me significant latitude and space to explore my topic. I am grateful for your encouragement toward taking risks and challenging the status quo. Finally, but most importantly, thank you to the women who entrusted me with their stories.

List of tables/figures

Tables

1) Anticipated outcomes.....	6
2) The life-course development of women's sexual subjectivity.....	105

Figures

1) Marbling 1 (reflexive practice).....	2
2) Marbling 2 (reflexive practice).....	37
3) Marbling 3 (reflexive practice).....	76
4) Sexual sand art mandala .....	78
5) The light shines in the darkness.....	80
6) Not just a bit of fun .....	82
7) It's complicated.....	85
8) Systems.....	90
9) Ethereal (reflexive practice).....	96
10) Musings on Lily (reflexive practice).....	102
11) Taboo (reflexive practice).....	107
12) Duplicity (reflexive practice) .....	119
13) Abundance (reflexive practice).....	139
14) Youthful paradox (reflexive practice).....	144
15) Hermeneutic circle (reflexive practice).....	158
16) Self-reflection (reflexive practice) .....	160
17) Marbling 4 (reflexive practice).....	164
18) What lies beneath (reflexive practice) .....	170