Introduction

The E. Stanley Jones (1884-1973) Papers include personal materials that relate to his career as a missionary/evangelist and author. These papers cover his adult years from the time he first went to India to the time of his death in 1973. There are some materials included, mostly about his wife Mabel, from after the time of his death.

The papers are composed of biographical materials; correspondence sent to and from E. Stanley Jones; subject files which focus mostly on the Ashram movement and Church Union; literary productions, such as addresses, articles, manuscripts (book), personal notebooks, sermons and other notes taken by Jones; scrapbook material; financial records; and printed matter. An extensive photograph collection, audio materials (tape cassettes), and realia are also a part of the collection.

This collection came to the Special Collections Department of the B. L. Fisher Library in the year 2000 from Jones' daughter Eunice and son-in-law James Matthews. The collection is 25 cubic feet and is available for use through the Special Collections Department.

This finding aid was prepared by Grace Yoder in September of 2001.

Biographical Sketch

Honored in a 1938 Time Magazine article as the greatest missionary of our time, E. Stanley Jones (1884-1973) was converted in 1899 and experienced entire sanctification in 1902 after reading Hannah Whitall Smith's Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. Desiring to preach like the famed holiness evangelist H. C. Morrison, Jones enrolled at Asbury College, graduating in 1906. While at Asbury College, Jones shared a room with J. Waskom Pickett, later a legendary missionary bishop in India. Appointed as an MEC missionary to India, Jones served as pastor of an English language church in Lucknow (1907-1911) and then was appointed conference evangelist. In India, Jones often worked with Pickett and another Asbury College graduate E. A. Seamands. In 1911, he married missionary educator, Mabel Lossing. Following a physical and emotional breakdown in 1915, Jones gradually experienced healing. No longer content with defending the certainties of his Western Evangelical faith, Jones became convinced that the living Christ transcended national and cultural boundaries. In his best seller, The Christ of the Indian Road (1925) which made him an international celebrity, he articulated his vision of a Christ-centered non-Western Christian faith. Continuing his intentional effort to root Christianity in indigenous social institutions, Jones created the first Christian ashram, modeled after Hindu spiritual retreats, in 1930.

Equally important for Jones' mature articulation of the Christian faith was a 1934 visit to Moscow. Keenly aware of the attractiveness of Marxism to intellectuals in the depression-ridden decade of the 1930s, Jones was deeply moved by Russian social and economic experiments aimed at improving the lives of peasants. Convinced that the West had much to learn from these experiments, Jones, nevertheless, believed that Christ's teaching in the Sermon on the Mount and the Biblical image of the Kingdom of God offered a superior model of social regeneration. In Christ's Alternative to Communism (1935), The Choice Before Us (1937) and Is the Kingdom of God Realism? (1940), Jones outlined his vision of a non-capitalist egalitarian social order.

On furlough in the United States during the early 1940s, Jones directly confronted America's history of racial discrimination. In his 1944 book, The Christ of the American Road, he urged African-Americans to employ Gandhian style civil disobedience to achieve a racially integrated society. A friend of Gandhi, Jones wrote Mahatma Gandhi: An Interpretation (1948) following the Indian leader's assassination. Although he was immensely popular, Jones' commitment to pacifism, criticisms of capitalism and support racial integration troubled many of his contemporaries. Dismissed as a naive liberal by writers as diverse as Walter Horton, Reinhold Niebuhr, Keswick writer Robert C. McQuilkin and holiness evangelist John Paul, Jones remained an unreconstructed holiness evangelist who united Wesleyan personal piety and social gospel activism. Although convinced that much of his training at Asbury College, such as premillennialism and dogmatic style apologetics, was anachronistic, Jones remained deeply rooted in the experiential piety of historic Methodism. In his widely read devotional books and especially in his important later work, Victory Through Surrender (1966), Jones taught that in self-surrender to Christ an individual realized his or her true potential.

This biographical sketch was prepared by Bill Kostlevy in Fall 2001.

Scope and Content

The E. Stanley Jones papers span the years of 1903 - 1984, with the bulk of the material covering Jones adult years.

The collection has approximately one half of a cubic foot of biographical material. These materials are mostly records of his memorial services, biographical sketches, information about his 70th and 80th birthday celebrations, records of his honors and awards, and certificates. The earliest document in the collection, a 1903 Local Preachers License, is included in the biographical materials.

Correspondence is a significant part of the collection, approximately three and one half cubic feet, and is arranged chronologically. The correspondence is both to and from Jones and covers all facets of his life. Some of the notable correspondents are Gandhi, Nehru, G. Bromley Oxam, Georgia Harkness J. T. Seamands and J. Waskom Pickett. A small portion of the correspondence is restricted.

The content of the subject files strongly reflective Jones' deep love for India and cover such topics as United Christian Ashrams, Association for a United Church of America, Church Union, communism, E. Stanley Jones

Foundation, Gandhi, Japan, Martin Luther King, India and evangelism. There are approximately two cubic feet of subject files.

The largest portion of the collection are the literary productions. They are approximately eight and one half cubic feet, and contain what Bishop James Matthews (Jones son-in-law) has referred to as what may well be the most significant part of the collection, personal notebooks and notes. They begin in 1926 and continue to 1973 the year of Jones death. Materials such as addresses, articles, editorials, manuscripts (book), open letters, pamphlets, pocket diaries, radio addresses, sermons and sermon notes are included.

A smaller portion, about one third of a cubic foot, of the collection are legal and financial documents. The legal documents deal mostly with his last will and testament and estate. The financial documents give some documentation of Jones personal finances and his own detailed financial accounting.

The scrapbook materials include mostly news clippings about Jones and his involvement in various interests. These clippings were collected by Jones, his wife Mabel, and other persons. These clippings were all photocopied on acid-free paper and the originals were discarded. Other materials included are scrapbooks. The scrapbook materials are approximately two cubic feet.

In the printed materials section are articles that were of interest to Jones. Many of them are underlined and commented on in the margins. There are also articles about Jones and his endeavors. Pamphlets, editorials and some books complete this section of approximately three cubic feet.

An extensive photograph collection is included in the collection. It includes some personal family photographs, and many photographs of Jones in all stages of his life. Other photograph subjects include ashrams, Gandhi, Nehru and speaking tours. There are three cubic feet of photographs. Most are identified, and are arranged alphabetically by subject.

There is one cubic foot of audio recordings (cassette tapes and reel-to-reel tapes) of Jones.

The collection is completed with one cubic foot of realia. This includes items such as a silver communion set and other personal items.
