Course Description:

Within this century, Biblical Archaeology has proven itself a discipline essential to the serious study of the Old Testament. In many instances, this particular discipline has served to clarify difficult passages, fill in correlative sociological and historical details, and, generally, shed important light on the intent of the biblical narrative. Moreover, archaeology has helped to correct minimalist viewpoints regarding the historical integrity of the text. Recognizing the imperative nature of this still-young discipline, this class seeks to (1) expose the student to the major archaeological and epigraphic discoveries of the biblical world, and (2) to train the student in a sound biblical archaeological method.

Course Objectives:

At the conclusion of this course, the successful student will have gained the following:

- 1) An enhanced knowledge of the history, sociology, and geography of the peoples of the biblical world.
- 2) An introductory understanding of the goals and methods of archaeology in the land of the Bible and its application to biblical studies.
- 3) The ability to interact with scholarship demonstrating the intersection of archaeology (i.e. the remains of material culture) and the Bible.
- 4) A growing ability to distill from the remains of material culture meaning significant to the interpretation of the Old Testament.

Course requirements:

Method of Instruction:

Slide-presentations, lecture, and class discussion of materials read will dominate the first two-thirds of this class. Students will be responsible to thoroughly prepare for and participate in these class meetings. The last third of this class will consist primarily of student presentations on various topics critical to the discipline of biblical archaeology.

Class Expectations:

25% Class Participation. As this is a seminar class, students must come to class prepared to discuss (intelligently!) the topic of the day. Periodically specific discussion/brief presentation topics will be assigned for the following class meeting.

35% Quizzes. Five quizzes will be given on a range of topics central to class content.

40% In-class Student Presentations. Each student will be responsible for a class presentation in which s/he will teach the class for 45 minutes on his/her assigned topic. A visual presentation, a lecture outline, an appropriate reading assignment for the class, and pertinent handouts (map/chart/site survey/etc.) must augment the lecture. Each presentation will be followed by a question and answer session. The student will be provided with an "essential" bibliographic list for his/her topic, but will be expected to go beyond this list in her/his collection of data and visual material. Students will be evaluated by their peers and by the professor.

* Attendance is essential to a seminar class, and, therefore, it will be recorded. The equivalent of one week's absence will be waived; following absences will significantly affect the student's final evaluation.
