

A Selected Bibliography

of American Methodism

Kenneth Kinghorn

This bibliography is limited to works published during the last thirty-five years. There are several reasons for this. Any student of American Methodism recognizes the value of the pioneer work done by such men as Nathan Bangs, Abel Stephens, James M. Buckley, and John Hurst. But following these men there was a period of relative inactivity. However, the last three and one-half decades have seen a renewed vigor in American Methodist studies, and these recent works are the concern of this bibliography. Moreover, these works are more readily available because most of them are yet in print. Thus, only works published since around 1930 are included.

Only works that specifically relate to American Methodism are listed. For example, works properly coming under the category of "Wesley Studies," although indirectly related to American Methodism, are not included.

In addition to the monographs on American Methodism, the bibliography contains all the salient articles and dissertations in this area written in the last thirty-five years.
