Promoting Mental Health Awareness at URI

Megan Kurose

Introduction

Mental health is one of the most heavily stigmatized topics among modern-day teens and young adults. The issue stands as a “don’t ask, don’t tell” topic of discussion, yet it is one of the most pressing and relevant issues faced during adolescence. The goal of my project was to open up the conversation to URI students about the importance of seeking out mental health care, should they, or a friend, need help. Eleven mental health-related organizations from URI came together on April 11, 2018 to host a “Mental Health Awareness Day” on the URI Kingston Quad from 12-3 PM.

College and University Students: Mental Health Facts and Figures

- Suicide is the 2nd leading cause of death among U.S. teenagers.<sup>1</sup>
- 7% of college students have “seriously considered suicide” during the past year;
- 1 in 4 young adults between the ages of 18-24 have a diagnosable mental illness;
- More than 25% of college students have been diagnosed or treated by a professional for a mental health condition in the past year;
- 31% of college students have felt so depressed in the past year that it was difficult to function, and more than 50% have felt overwhelming anxiety, making it hard to succeed academically;
- Almost 73% of students living with a mental health condition experienced a mental health crisis on campus, yet 35.2% reported their college did not know about their crisis;
- Concern of stigma is the #1 reason students do not seek help.<sup>2</sup>
