

The Cupola

Scholarship at Gettysburg College

Student Publications

Student Scholarship

Spring 2018

Elegy to My Eyes

Grace E. Timko
Gettysburg College

Follow this and additional works at: https://cupola.gettysburg.edu/student_scholarship

 Part of the Poetry Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

Timko, Grace E., "Elegy to My Eyes" (2018). Student Publications. 593.
https://cupola.gettysburg.edu/student_scholarship/593

This open access creative writing is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.

Elegy to My Eyes

Abstract

This elegiac poem focuses on the speaker's limited eyesight as she wakes up in the morning after letting her contacts dry up overnight.

Keywords

elegy, poem, eyes, myopia

Disciplines

Creative Writing | Poetry

Comments

Written for ENG-302: The Writing of Poetry: New Poems, New Poets.

Creative Commons License

Creative

Commons

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-No Derivative Works 4.0 License.

License

Elegy to My Eyes
Grace Timko

Dried contacts rest on the bedside table—warped by the cool night air and rattling with his every breath. I touch his face and stubble pricks my fingertips but I cannot tell if his eyes are blue or brown until our noses are almost touching.

I don't remember what it was like to wake up and not have to worry if I could see street signs—asking myself is my vision better or worse today—because at five years old I never thought I would be classified as “extremely myopic.”

At twenty-one, I wake up and tear the foil off the tiny pods holding the only two things that literally get me out of bed in the morning—even if my body, my corneas are failing me. A balancing act on my fingertip, I lightly touch my eye, blink, and see.

But here, I'm helpless. Yesterday's eyes just cracked under the weight of his phone, the dry contacts in pieces on his bedside table. He drives me home because he knows I won't get there alone. I put in my contacts through the tears knowing that my eyesight continues to slip away.

I can't make out my own features in the mirror.