

BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.

The Irish Brigade to Unveil their Monument

There will be a memorable reunion of the veterans who took part in the fight at Gettysburg in the July days of 1863, on that famous battle-field next week. It is thought that fully 50,000 soldiers will assemble there, and, while the majority of them will be boys who wore the blue, there will not be wanting those who fought in gray, as an invitation has been very properly extended to many of the latter. In order that the occasion may show how the unhappy feuds which divided the North and South twenty-five years ago have long since been replaced by fraternal friendship. The reunion will, consequently, have a national significance, and the fraternization in which the veterans of both armies will indulge will be a forcible contradiction of the calumnies of those sectionalists who never weary of declaring that the war is not ended yet.

A feature of the coming celebration which will have an especial importance for Irish Americans, will be the unveiling, by the veterans of the Irish Brigade, July 2, of the monument erected to the memory of their gallant fellows who fell on the field of Gettysburg. This brigade, which was composed of the Sixty-third, Sixty-eight and the famous Sixty-ninth regiments of New York, took part in the Gettysburg battle, and, considering the number of men engaged, it suffered severely. The Sixty-third regiment sent two companies into the fight, and lost 23 men; the Sixty-ninth, with the same number of companies engaged, lost 25, and the Sixty-eight was decimated by a loss of 138. The monument the brigade has erected to the memory of its dead heroes is one of the handsomest of all that stand on the famous field where those soldiers fought and fell, and it will be unveiled next Sunday, the two old Chaplains of the brigade, Fathers Corby and Ouillet, having signified their intention of being present and joining in the ceremonies.

The re-union is to continue three days, the 1st, 2nd and 3rd July, and there will be thousands of civilians attracted to Gettysburg to watch the veterans assemble on the field so full of memories for all of them, and to notice how the men who, twenty-five years ago, faced each other as deadly foes, now meet and fraternize as if no hostilities had ever separated them. May the skies smile on the old battlefields while the veterans revisit it, and may their re-union knit still more closely the bonds which now unite the loyal North and the equally loyal South!—Exchange.

THE ROYAL NAVY.

A late London paper says: The admiralty commenced the mobilization of the Nore division by ordering the following vessels to be commissioned on the 19th ult. for active service: The Rodney, 10, first-class battle ship, 9,700 tons, 11,500-horse power; the Warspite, 10, first-class cruiser, 8,500 tons, 10,000-horse power, and the Northampton, 12, first-class cruiser, 7,630 tons, 6,070-horse power. The Rodney and Warspite are new ships, and have never hoisted the pennant. The first-named is plated with armor 18 inches in thickness, and will be manned by a crew of 526 men. She is armed with four 69-ton guns and six 5-ton breech-loading guns, with a strong equipment of guns and torpedoes. The Warspite is a new cruiser of the Imperieuse class, and is mounted with four 22-ton guns and six 5-ton guns. She is plated with armor ten inches in thickness, and will be manned by a crew of 500 men. The Northampton was built in 1878 by Elder & Co., of Glasgow, and has had six years' service as flagship on the North America and West Indies station. Since her return to England she has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired at a cost of £40,000. Admiral Sir J. E. Commerell, V. C., began his command at Portsmouth on the 20th ult., hoisting his flag temporarily on board the Monarch, turret ship. His predecessor, Admiral Sir G. O. Willes, hauled down his flag at sunset on the same day, and Admiral Commerell's flag will be transferred to the Duke of Wellington.

While workmen were engaged in digging for sand at Vanmeter's Bend, Ill., a short time since, they unearthed the bodies of six men that are supposed to be those of an extinct race of giants. The bones are much larger than those of the present day. The mound has produced a large number of skeletons and many other interesting relics.

A Select Story. Her Just Sentence

BY AUTHOR OF "SET IN DIAMONDS." CHAPTER IV—(continued.) AN ANXIOUS MOTHER'S QUESTION.

Trembling with emotion, the girl drew nearer; she knelt down by her mother's side, and kissed her face. "You did not tell me," she said. "I did not know." "I was not sure myself until to-day," said Mrs. Audley. "You see the bandage lies so lightly on my eyes that your hands may move it. What shall I read on your face, Lenore?—the promise of a happy life, or the shadow of a sad one? I am nervous, as though I were looking for the first time behind the veil of fate."

Then the mother's heart was at rest; she was sure that Lenore liked both, but loved neither; while, an hour later on, Lenore stood watching the pretty wood-pigeons, and thinking to herself: "Which do I like best—most admire? Who could be more kind to me than Austin? He sings sweetest songs to me; he writes poems that ought to immortalize himself, if not me, all in my honor; he pays me a chivalrous worship, like that the troubadours in olden times gave to their queens; he has a gentle face, and a poet's soul; he has a clear, true voice, a noble heart. I like him very much; I wonder if I like him better than Cyril. Yet who could be like Cyril? I like to call him by his three names best—Cyril Leslie Vernon. Who could be like him, with his knightly face, his earnest voice, and brave, princely courage—a soldier's son, and a gentleman. I wonder if I prefer him—I should like to know."

OPENING OF THE REICHSTAG.

If Emperor William's speech at the opening, recently, of the German Reichstag can be taken as an indication of his future policy, that will be one of peace toward the rest of Europe.

It now remains to be seen how far this peaceful policy can be carried out. Nobody knows better than William II. that there is no truth in his declaration that Germany's friendly relations with Austria will permit the careful cultivation of the Emperor's personal friendship with the Czar.

The precedence which the imperial speech gives to Austria is also another proof of the lesser regard, not to say the lack of regard, which the Emperor entertains for Russia, and it may also be taken as an indication that Berlin will uphold Vienna on the Bulgarian issue against Saint Petersburg.

Tupperian Nepotism.

An Ottawa despatch says:—Colonel Cameron, son-in-law of Sir Charles Tupper, has been appointed commandant of the Kingston military college, at $4,000 a year, vice Major-General Oliver retired.

The Berlin correspondent of the London "Daily News" says: Prince Bismarck, in a conversation with several members of the upper house of the Prussian Diet, expressed his conviction that peace would not be disturbed unless other powers provoked a war.

His Excellency the Governor in Council has been pleased to appoint Rev. J. J. Walsh, and Messrs. Michael Vassour, Henry Slaney, and Alphonse Fitzpatrick (St. Lawrence), Patrick Murphy (Lawn), David Collins and Jas. Fleming (Lamaline), to be a Roman Catholic Board of Education for St. Lawrence; and Luke Pitman, of New Perican, to be a surveyor under the agricultural act of 1888.

VICTORY DECIDED FOR "SHAMROCKS."

A Sharp Contest and Good Play.

Yesterday, the long-talked-of contest between the Shamrock and Terra Nova cricket clubs came off at the Pleasantville grounds, Quidividi. The Shamrock and Terra Nova are the clubs par excellence of the city, and each has held in turn the willow supremacy for the last three seasons.

The "Shamrocks" again went to the wickets but could not play till the time at which it had been previously arranged to draw the stumps—7 o'clock, owing to the setting in of a cold east wind accompanied by a dense white fog and drizzling rain.

THE PRESS—ITS POWERS AND ITS DANGERS.

LECTURE BY MR. WILLIAM O'BRIEN, M.P.

All the powers of earth have in their turn resisted newspaper meddling in their affairs, and all in turn have ended by fraternising with their ragged invaders. They used to search in the Strangers' Gallery of the House of Commons for notetakers as they now search for dynamites.

O'DONNELL-TIMES LIBEL SUIT.

It is now believed by many that the O'Donnell libel suit was "a put up job." O'Donnell is a renegade Home Ruler, and is at present employed on a government-organ—the "Morning Post."

LONDON, July 6.—Mr. Parnell, in the house today, took the first occasion to raise a privileged question and pointing out that the letters, over what pretended to be his signature, which had been published by the "Times" and produced in court, denied them as absolute forgery.

Mr. Parnell denies O'Donnell's statement that the method of procedure adopted in the latter's libel suit against the "Times" was adopted with the consent of himself and the other Irish leaders. The unsuccessful tactics of the counsel for the prosecution must therefore be attributed to Mr. O'Donnell solely.

LONDON, July 6.—The trial was resumed this morning. Attorney General Webster continued his presentation of the case for the defence. In the course of his remarks he said no man was libelled to a greater extent than Mr. Parnell, yet O'Donnell was put forward to meet the "Times" charges.

News from Cape Broyle.

(To the Editor of the Colonist.)

DEAR SIR,—American, Nova Scotian and Newfoundland fishermen are daily coming and going this past week. At present about forty vessels are here; but, unfortunately, the caplin struck off since Saturday.

"Ferryland Man" should abide by the golden rule: "He who has a wise head keep a close mouth." What Cape Broyle accused the officer of H. M. Customs of is known, I may say, to the whole population, and best of all to American and Nova Scotia schooners.

Correct Answer to Problem.

(To the Editor of the Colonist.)

DEAR SIR,—Allow me to correct what must have been a typographical error which appeared in last evening's issue. I stated that the answer was 6 3/7 per cent. and not 6 1/2 as appeared in your columns.

Hoping that the author of the problem will see how the mistake occurred, and that it was not my mistake, as I would have put the answer in long ago but for its being so simple. I remain, etc. GREAT AUK.

Thousands of singers and friends of the singers are now in Baltimore attending the national Sængerfest. At the headquarters of the Executive Committee it was ascertained that there are seventy out of town societies now in the city represented by 2100 singers.

Captain J. Callahan, of the custom house night-boat, desires us to say that the statement in last evening's "Telegram," to the effect that the insane man frightened the night-boat men, is untrue, as at the time the madman passed the custom house, the night-boat was out in the harbor, a long distance from the scene.

Mr. Michael Condon received a telegram from his father, who is at Holyrood, St. Mary's Bay, this morning, to the effect that the work of loading the schooner Cherokee and the steamer Plover, with lumber from the stranded steamer Fernholme, will be finished by tomorrow evening. The weather still continues fine there. The steamer and schooner will take on board, between them, four hundred thousand feet of lumber.

Five of the marines of H.M.S. Emerald, who had broken leave, were so closely pressed by some of the police force on Wednesday last, who were endeavoring to capture them, that they jumped over Woods' wharf and swam beyond the reach of their pursuers. The policemen felt somewhat disappointed, as it meant the loss of five pounds to them. Some passing boat picked the "lobsters" up and put them on board their ship. Said a wag present, who had witnessed the whole scene: "Those red-coats take to the water in Hoylestown as naturally as they do to a stronger liquid in Riverhead."
