

Alex Thompson (right), associate professor of political science, introduces Mark Capelovitch, assistant professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, on January 11, 2012.

Mark Copelovitch, assistant professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, spoke about "Currency Wars by Other Means? Exchange Rates and WTO Dispute Initiation" on January 11, 2012, at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.

Mark Copelovitch is author of The International Monetary Fund in the Global Economy: Banks, Bonds, and Bailouts (Cambridge University Press, 2010), as well as articles in the Journal of Politics, International Studies Quarterly, and the Review of International Organizations.

Mark Copelovitch spoke as part of the Mershon Center's Globalization Speaker Series, organized by political science faculty Alex Thompson and Sarah Brooks.

Raphael da Cunha (center), a graduate student in political science, responds to Mark Copelovitch's paper.

Alex Thompson (center) speaks during the discussion after the presentation of Mark Copelovitch's paper "Currency Wars by Other Means? Exchange Rates and WTO Dispute Initiation."

(Left to right) Alex Thompson, associate professor of political science; Mark Copelovitch, assistant professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison; Sarah Brooks, associate professor of political science; and Raphael da Cunha, graduate student in political science.