PREFACE

M.A. Jaspan did anthropological fieldwork in the Rejang country in 1961-63. His research was based at Topos in Lebong and he learnt to speak the Lebong dialect of Rejang fluently. He was able to record folktales on a typewriter without the help of a tape-recorder.

Still in the field he began collecting materials for a Rejang dictionary. This he did not merely as a contribution to linguistic science, but perhaps in the first place in order to give the Rejang people a document of their linguistic heritage. The need of such a dictionary was widely felt among Jaspan's Rejang friends and informants. It should not only give English translations, but also Indonesian equivalents. A small committee on lexicography was formed with whom the problems of the dictionary were discussed.

One of the first problems was that there is no established orthography of Rejang in Latin characters. This does not mean that there is no tradition of literacy. The traditional script is a form of the South-Sumatran Ka-Ga-Nga syllabary, sometimes called réncong script or simply Rejang script. This last name is misleading because the use of this script is by no means restricted to the Rejang area.

Jaspan became much interested in the traditional script. He collected every written text which he could find in the country and began copying and transliterating Ka-Ga-Nga texts preserved in museums and libraries in Europe. In 1964 the Australian National University published his Rejang Ka-Ga-Nga Texts, for which a special typewriter was constructed. In the card file for the dictionary the entry-headings are given in Latin and in Ka-Ga-Nga script in Jaspan's handwriting.

This use of the Ka-Ga-Nga script was a novelty. The traditional script had never been used to write the Rejang colloquial. It was part of a tradition which used a general South-Sumatran literary language which is fundamentally Malay. Occasionally a special Rejang word may be used, and in reading such a text it is adapted to Rejang pronunciation. The Middle-Malay word serambah, for instance, will be pronounced sramea', though in writing the traditional orthography sarambah is used. Very seldom does one find special Rejang spellings in old Ka-Ga-Nga texts, such as -m- for -mb-. There is one exception: the Rejang réncong script has no buwah ngimbang, special signs for nasal plus unvoiced stop clusters (ngk, nc, nt, mp). A text of unknown provenance without buwah ngimbang is very probably from Rejang, where these clusters have become k, c, t and p.

Neither the Rejang language nor the Ka-Ga-Nga script was ever used in the schools, but the idea that language and writing belong together was firmly established through the school system. Jaspan accepted this idea, and so he and the Rejang committee were confronted with the problem of devising a practical orthography for Rejang in Latin script and also of adapting the old literary script to the spoken language, for which it was utterly unfit.

The réncong script has no sign for the e(pepet) sound. A syllable without a vowel sign can have the vowel a or e(pepet). In many Middle-Malay texts a distinction is made through writing ah for a in open syllables and no vowel sign for e(pepet). Jaspan's helpers found another solution by inventing a new sign for e(pepet). This sign is never found in old manuscripts.

In réncong script there is no fixed tradition regarding the spelling of the glottal stop. Various methods are used, and this has caused much confusion in modernised Ka-Ga-Nga writing. But the most serious drawback in writing colloquial Rejang in réncong script is that it has no signs for the frequent Rejang diphthongs ea, éa, ia, oa and ua; that there is no traditional method of writing consonant clusters such as bl, sl etc., and that the 'barred nasals' can only be written with the signs for the clusters from which they have developed. These signs are modifications of the signs for the voiced stops, whereas in the Rejang 'barred nasals' these stops are nearly inaudible.

For all these reasons it would be a difficult task to construct a satisfactory orthography for Rejang in réncong script. The entries in this script in the dictionary are not consistent and it is no great loss that they cannot be reproduced in this edition. With few exceptions they are clearly derived from the orthography in Latin characters. In a few cases, however, some additional information can be derived from them.

As Jaspan began making notes in Rejang during an early stage of his fieldwork and almost nothing had been published in this language previously, he had to find his own answers to all the problems of writing it in Latin script. During the time he worked on his thesis in Canberra he received some advice from professional linguists, but until the end of his life he never felt quite satisfied with his orthography and kept on making changes. For readers of his publications it is difficult to understand his system because of the use of the non-existent word 'fringilisation'. Thereby Jaspan tried to describe the 'pharyngeal' sound of the diphthongs in which the second component part is a. In using Jaspan's unpublished folktales, proverbs etc. (now in the Brynmor Jones University Library, Hull) one should be aware of the development in his orthography. Then one will find them a precious source of information.

One weak point always remained: the glottal stop had often been neglected in Jaspan's notations. He tried to get the help of a Rejang speaker when he was editing the dictionary in Hull, but without success. He himself often felt uncertain on this point. For some time he had the help of a non-Rejang Indonesian assistant. Probably the Indonesian translations are partly his work.

During Jaspan's life I sometimes discussed questions of Rejang orthography with him. My experience of the language was restricted to two months of fieldwork and a few weeks of co-operation with my teacher Guru Aliakbar in 1941. After the loss of my notes in wartime I forgot nearly everything until I found W. Aichele's unpublished sketch of the Rejang language in the Kern Institute, Leiden. This brought back some memories and on the whole I thought that Aichele's analysis of the language agreed with what I had found. However, conflicts between Jaspan's material and Aichele's rules could of course not be solved arbitrarily. We always hoped that a copy of my lexicographical notes, which Jaspan had seen in the possession of Guru Aliakbar, would become available and help us solve our problems, but this never happened. So the dictionary was typed (before May 1970, the date of a note in my copy) and later on Jaspan gave one copy to me and one to the Royal Institute (KITLV) in Leiden. He kept the card file, and probably the top copy, but this was never found. After Jaspan's death I still waited for my notes, but in vain. At last, W. Stokhof took the initiative to publish contributions to Indonesian linguistics which are lying unused in various collections. It was decided to include Jaspan's dictionary in this project and I accepted the task of editing it in its unfinished state, almost exactly as Jaspan left it. For this edition I have used the carbon copy which Jaspan gave me, comparing it with the card file. This was kindly lent to me by the Centre for Southeast Asian Studies, University of Hull.

OLD SPELLING USED

The new orthography for Indonesian was introduced on August 17th, 1972. The card file as well as the typed copies of the dictionary, made before 1972, are in the old spelling and the Rejang orthography is in accordance with that system, hence: tjatji, not caci; Redjang, not Rejang (but Rejang in the title and editorial notes); njabai, not nyabai; jo, not yo. The institute's copy was retyped in Jakarta in the new spelling, but this was done so inconsistently that I could not use it.

DIALECT

The language of the dictionary is the Lebong dialect of Rejang as spoken in Topos (in Mergo 5, see map page iv). Jaspan also spent some time in Padang Bendar (Mergo 13 in the map). Most words marked UB were probably collected there. UB means Ulau Biowa, The Headstreams, i.e. 'the Bukit Barisan foothills facing the sea'. Words marked M, Mu or S are from the Musi dialect. They were obtained from oral information or from the wordlist S (see Abbreviations).

ARRANGEMENT

Except in Pigeaud's Concise Javanese Dictionary it is a common practice in Indonesian lexicography to list the words under their stems. This practice is not followed by Jaspan. Generally he lists derivations under their first letter but there are a few exceptions. Some words with the affix be- are listed under their stems, e.g. begandeu, but bedéker under b. Often under one derived form other derivations are mentioned. When these have no separate entries I have mostly included them in the Supplement. Sometimes a derived form is given under the stem as well, e.g. badu' also under adu', bekdeuw also under kedeuw (be~).

METHOD OF THIS EDITION

In editing the dictionary I have tried to adhere to the following rules:

- (1) I changed nothing in the Indonesian and the English text, except obvious typing errors.
- (2) In the typescript the acute accent ' which distinguishes é from e(pepet) was often omitted. I added it where I was sure that é is meant. The entries in KGNG script on the cards often were decisive in this respect. When I felt unsure I left the e unmarked, so there may still be some e's which should be é.

- (3) The allophone of e heard in a stressed final syllable is written eu by Jaspan, except in the diphthong ea. Therefore e in a final syllable should always be é, but ea may be ea or éa. In the diphthongs ue, oe and ie (occasionally written ije as if it were dissyllabic) e is a weak pepet.
- (4) For a long time Jaspan could not decide how to write the diphthong ea. He hesitated between the spellings eu'a, eu'a, e'a, e'a, éa and ea. In his thesis he decided on éa. In the dictionary all the spellings were found. I have unified them to ea. A few words would be homonyms without the difference between eua and ea. There I left the eu unchanged. I do not know whether there is a real difference.
- (5) Jaspan used the apostrophe ' for the word-final glottal stop, but in part of my copy of the typescript he changed these apostrophes to -k in congruence with the orthography of Indonesian. I undid these changes, because there is a real word-final -k in Rejang.
- (6) Word-final glottal stop is often neglected in Jaspan's spelling. I added it when I found any indication on the cards or in the typescript that Jaspan had sometimes heard it.
- (7) I have deleted all apostrophes written in the middle of diphthongs, but I have not deleted j and w in ija, owa and uwa in words where Jaspan has always used them. At the last moment I found that Jaspan writes bulua('), not buluwa', in his thesis but it was then too late to make this change in the dictionary.
- (8) An apostrophe in the middle of a word often has no phonetic value at all. I left these apostrophes untouched where they might represent a glottal stop (e.g. in sa'ang, Mal. sarang). Otherwise I deleted them unless some frequent word is written consistently with an apostrophe, e.g. ni'eun (though it should probably be ni'jeun).
- (9) Jaspan gives some words in their pausal form with diphthongised stressed vowel, e.g. gijes, for gies (Wink's wordlist gis) ill; gemeuet or gemeut mean. Sometimes there is a difference of meaning or use, e.g. tuen a person, but tun Djang a Redjang, menganduen a polite word for to approach, but mengandun sparring for a fight. Here, as in rule 7, I have deleted the apostrophe (tuen not tu'en) but not the j in such words as gijes.
- (10) In the question of the 'barred nasals' (see Aichele 3.14.b) Jaspan maintained that Rejang has only ñ and ñ, explained by him as nd̪ and mb̪ with 'implosive attack'. He denied the existence of ny and ng. He spells ndj in mendja'ai and mendjuoa, but nj in djanjai and panjang; nng in menggeliti', menggelitja and menggréndéng but ng in tangea' and tingea. I have omitted the dots under d and b and made no further changes. There may be words in which Jaspan wrongly did not hear a barred nasal, e.g. mnea' guest for mndea' (Middle-Malay mendah).
- (11) It seems that in Rejang the pepet in an unstressed syllable is very weak and is often totally dropped. When I asked Jaspan why he did not write e in a word like belau new, he said that his Rejang informants expressly denied that there is an e in such words. According to them consonant clusters are characteristic of Rejang in distinction from Malay, e.g. Rejang tlapa' = Mal. telapa'. The old wordlist collected by C.A. van Vloten (LOr.3391a) gives many instances of this phenomenon. Jaspan sometimes gives both forms, e.g. senadjai and snadjai, teneui and tneui (Van Vloten tnoy). I found one instance where Jaspan makes a distinction in meaning: nelekeut about to affix; nlekeut affixed. I did not make any changes.

- (12) Originally Jaspan had made no distinction between homonyms and different meanings of the same word. In both cases he used the numbers 1, 2, etc. However, he began numbering homonyms I and II (e.g. ajo'). I changed 1 and 2 to I and II when I felt sure that the words are homonyms.
- (13) The unfinished state of the dictionary shows in some translations which are grammatically incorrect, e.g. tenimbu' is given as an Ulau Biowa synonym of Lebong timbu'; tnimang, Mal. menimang but tnimbang, Mal. ditimbang; tma'eun, Mal. ditahan but tmangeun, Mal. memukul; genaleus to carry a load on the shoulder instead of: being carried on the shoulder; geni'ok to drill a hole, but under gi'i' correctly: geni'i' drilled. As this is an edition for scholarly use I have left it to the reader to interpret Jaspan's information.
- (14) It is apparent that Jaspan's informants had only a vague knowledge of Arabic religious terms, e.g. djus, hadrah, sabéa. For this last word they gave a curious explanation which Jaspan repeats, perhaps as a specimen of folk-etymology. I did not add any comments.
- (15) I have added a Supplement containing nearly 600 words which are mentioned in the dictionary but do not have separate entries. There are no translations, but references to the articles where they are found. The absence of some of these words in the alphabetical order may be due to the missing of a card from the file when the text was typed, e.g. semendo, tangeun, uteun.

In editing the English translation of W. Aichele's Fragmentarische Skizze des Redjangischen I have taken considerably more liberties than with Jaspan's dictionary. After finding the article in the Kern Institute I wrote to the author and proposed some corrections. There never was an opportunity to discuss these points in a personal encounter, but from Aichele's letters I conclude that he would have accepted my emendations. I have incorporated them in the text without further notice. Aichele died in 1971 (see Berg, 1972). In a letter dated 20th June, 1971, his widow gave Jaspan and me permission to publish an English translation of the article together with Jaspan's dictionary. Aichele's German text was translated into English by a student under the guidance of H. Steinhauer, who is mainly responsible for the English linguistic terminology. The translation was revised by me with the help of my son C.L. Voorhoeve in Canberra. Corrections which had not been submitted to the author and notes added during the revision are between square brackets.

Recently R. Blust kindly sent me a draft of his forthcoming article 'On the history of the Rejang vowels and diphthongs'. This covers much of the same ground as Aichele's sketch. It clearly shows the progress of comparative Indonesian linguistics in the last half century. Nevertheless I think that Aichele's work should still be appreciated as the first scholarly approach to the Rejang language. It also has a more immediate connection with Jaspan's dictionary, because R. Hasan's texts, on which it is based, are in the same dialect of Lebong.

During the last few years several studies on the Rejang language were made and some of these were published. It may be expected that it will not be long before the two old studies published here will be of historical value only, but the labours of their authors will not have been in vain.

A FRAGMENTARY SKETCH OF THE REJANG LANGUAGE

W. Aichele

INTRODUCTION

In 1927 O.L. Helfrich edited a collection of South-Sumatran folktales with Dutch translations. They are an important source, not only for the knowledge of South-Sumatran folklore, but also for the study of several languages and dialects. The last five pages of this collection contain the first texts ever printed in the Rejang language. They were written by Raden Hasan, at that time a member of the civil service under the Dutch Colonial Government. Apparently he also made the Malay translation on which Helfrich based his Dutch rendering of the tales. Thanks to his efforts linguists can get a first impression of the structure of the Rejang language.

There are three tales, numbers XXV-XXVII of Helfrich's collection (p.244-248, translation p.308-315), entitled 'The tale of the monkey', 'The tale of the dog, the tiger, the anak lumang (orphan boy) and the mousedeer' and 'The tale of the monkey and the cecalik bird'. The first two, which are longer than the third, have their origin in Indian literature. The first text is a folk version of the story of Rāma. In this version the two Monkey-kings Sugrīwa and Hanuman have become one person. In this respect the Rejang tale agrees with a Minangkabau popular version of the story of Rāma.*

The second tale is a variant of the fable in the Pancatantra about a Brahmin who saves an ungrateful tiger. It is a close parallel to the version cited by Hooykaas, 1929, p.99-101 from Leclère, Contes Laotiens et Contes Cambodgiens (92).

As mentioned before, the texts written by Raden Hasan are the first published specimens of spoken Rejang, from which a linguist can at least get a partial insight into the structure of the language. The 'Specimens of Rejang' published in 1885 (Anon.) with a Malay translation which can only partly be understood, are written in a quite different idiom. When one compares Raden Hasan's texts with the 'Specimens', the differences in vocabulary, morphology and syntax are obvious. The language of the 'Specimens' is the Rejang literary language, an idiom composed from elements of other Indonesian languages. This will be clear from the following short citation (Anon. 1885:490):

*This Minangkabau version was written down in 1930 by Osman Idris Gelar Soetan Pangeran, at that time lecturer in Hamburg. During a study leave in Minangkabau he tried, at my request, to find out whether a popular version of the story of Rāma was known there. And indeed, Mr Idris found an old story teller in Payakumbuh who knew such a tale, Curito Tan si Romo dan Ula'sumono jo rajo Noruano. He wrote it down and afterwards I translated it into German. Text and translation each have 43 pages typescript.

Malay translation in 'Specimens'

Ini surat bujang kasian rawu maring gadis miliye aning saraba ricang ading karatas layang pakirim wadari caking barabas kisa batang	Ini surat bujang kasihan sampai kapada gadis mulia dengar pantun sahaya adik kertas surat terkirim datang dari mana jatuh dari batang

The words kasian = Mal. kasihan; rawu = Jav., Sund. idem arrive; maring = Jav. idem or marang towards, to; ricang = Jav., Sund. réncang servant, friend; barabas from Mal. rebas fall; aning, Middle Malay idem listen; ading, Middle Malay idem younger brother or sister; kisa, Middle Malay kisah origin [Jav. késah go outsaraba, Middle Malay serambah pantun may scarcely be found in spoken Rejang. Some of these words do not follow the Rejang phonemic pattern. On the other hand, the influence of the spoken language on the literary language appears in such forms as samayang = sema(h)yang ('Specimens', p.485,25); diri = Mal. dari (487,19); kamali = Mal. kembali (485,10); miliye = Mal. mulia (490,13). The tendency of the spoken language to reduce a nasal + media to nasal and to assimilate vowels makes itself felt in these forms.

The use of a literary language widely different from the colloquial is not a Rejang peculiarity only. In other parts of South Sumatra, among the Besemah, Serawai and Lampung, literary languages have been developed from the same elements as in Rejang. Here too, peculiarities of the spoken languages have influenced the languages of literature. This conclusion can be drawn from a comparison of the folktales in Helfrich (1927) with the literary texts edited by the same scholar in 1904 (Middle Malay) and 1891 (Lampung).

Research into the origin of literary languages and their connection with the colloquials is an important subject in Indonesian studies. The result may not only give an insight into the history of language but it seems to me that it may also supplement and enrich our views of political and cultural developments. In South Sumatra we still find literary language and colloquial side by side. This supports my hypothesis about the character of the old Indonesian languages known to us from Old-Javanese literature and from the small part of Old-Malay literature which has been preserved [cf. Aichele, 1943]. It shows the direction to be taken in the study of these languages.

In Helfrich's collection of folktales we find some Malay passages in Lampung and Rejang texts. The Mousedeer's recitation in a Lampung tale (p.198) and the alternating song of the Monkey and the female Cecalik bird in the short Rejang fable (p.248) are in Malay. It seems that Malay, the language of government, schools and the press is taking over the function of the historical literary languages [the author refers, of course, to the Dutch Colonial Government].

The song in the Rejang fable is given here. My interpretation differs in some respects from that of the editor.

The Monkey begins:

"Cecalik, cecalik, dimano sarangmu?"

"Cecalik, cecalik, where is your nest?"

"Di rumpun padi, beuk!"

(The female cecalik:) "Between the rice stalks, Monkey!"

"Di rumpun padi, kalu miang?"

(The Monkey:) "Between the rice stalks - what if the hairs make you itch?"

"Miang - ku (for aku) mandi!" padeak cecalik.
 "If hairs cause itching - then I take a bath!" quoth the cecalik.

Padeak beuk:

The Monkey says:

"Mandi - kalu dingin!"

"Take a bath - what if you get cold?"

"Dingin, aku jemur!"

"If I get cold - I shall dry in the sunshine!"

"Jemur - kalu panas?" padeak beuk.

"Dry in the sun - what if you get too hot?"

"Panas - aku betudung!" padeak cecalik.

"Too hot - then I'll use a sunhat!"

"Betudung - kalu dimakan tumo?" padeak beuk.

"Use a sunhat - what if the lice eat you?"

"Makan tumo - aku mati!" padeak cecalik.

"Eat lice - I'll die for that! (i.e. I'll give my life for it)", quoth the cecalik.

This unexpected cunning answer of the bird makes the Monkey laugh, so that the bird can fly away from the monkey's open mouth.

The orthography of the three Rejang texts is not absolutely consistent, but on the whole it is sufficiently clear to give an idea of the phonemic structure of the language. There are, however, a number of confusing printing errors, which should be corrected. [The following is a complete list of Aichele's corrections. Those which seem doubtful I have marked with one ?, and one which I think is definitely wrong with two ??]:

THE REJANG COLLOQUIAL LANGUAGE

1. Method of this study

It goes without saying that a sketch of the spoken Rejang language based on this restricted material can only be fragmentary. Looking at these five printed pages one can conclude that there is a strong phonetic difference between Rejang and the neighbouring South-Sumatran languages and that this difference represents a later development. We see that mainly the word-end is subject to changes of sound — word-final vowels and diphthongs as well as *-h, *-r and *-l. Combinations of nasals and voiced as well as voiceless stops are modified too. Moreover word-initial and -medial *r has disappeared [or rather, it became glottal stop word-medially], except in a number of loanwords. Vowel assimilation, a somewhat uncommon phenomenon in Indonesian languages, is found in several instances.

As matters stand at present [i.e. in the 1930s] the only presentation possible to show the special features of Rejang is comparative. However, the aim cannot be to link Rejang directly with a 'proto-language', which can be constructed from a common stock such as it is scattered all over the Indonesian language territory in regular sound correspondences. The share in vocabulary which Rejang — like every individual language — has in common with the 'proto-language' would be insufficient to comprehend it in its present development. For a clear understanding of Rejang we better turn to the nearest cognate living languages of Sumatra and West-Java. These have been more conservative in their development. They may help us to understand at least the latest developmental phases which Rejang has gone through.

Moreover, comparative linguistics cannot possibly restrict itself to sound systems alone. Only by analysing phonology, morphology, syntax and semantics in their mutual interdependence can it hope to achieve a clearer understanding of these factors individually. For the present comparative linguistics can approach this goal only if it starts from individual living languages which are sufficiently well-known. But, however much the language to be studied may have lost from the common characteristics of its group, it may still show forms which are in some respects more archaic than in the nearest cognate sister-languages. We shall find some examples in Rejang. In such cases one has to refer to languages farther away which, according to the result of Indonesian comparative linguistics, also preserved the older form.

2. The sound system

VOWELS: a, é (in the texts: e), i, o, u (in the texts: oe)

e [i.e. ə] (in the texts not distinguished from é) [In the last, stressed, syllable it has an allophone which is sometimes written eu in the texts. Aichele thought it was a separate phoneme for which he used ö.]

DIPHTHONGS (only occurring word-finally):

ai, ei, au, ew
ea, ia, oa, ua, oi

The diphthongs ea, ia, ua also precede word-final ' [glottal stop]
(in the texts written: k)

CONSONANTS: ' [glottal stop; word-medially in the texts only indicated in do-o or doō for do'o; word-finally in the texts written k]

k, g, ng
 c, j, ny (in the texts: tj, dj, nj)
 t, d, n
 p, b, m l y (in the texts: j), w s, h r (occurs mostly in loanwords).

[Concerning the 'barred nasals' see 3.14.b]

Voiced stops in word-final position are as rare as in Malay. At most they only occur in loanwords such as sebab reason, cause. h occurs only in interjections: hai hey!, céh phew!

3. The sound changes

In opposition to the supposedly better preserved sound forms found in other languages of the group to which Rejang belongs, the following changes appear:

(1) Word-final vowels:

*-a > -o (as in Minangkabau), e.g.:

imo forest (cf. Mal. rimba) geruwo cave (cf. Mal. gua) seto yard (cf. Mal. hasta)

*-a > -é, e.g.:

adé be on hand
 t-en-anyé be asked

*-a > -e(ö), e.g.:

ipö where? (cf. Lampung ipa where?)
 itö we incl. (cf. Mal. kita)
 -ne 3rd pers. poss. pronoun (cf. Mal. -nya, Bat. -na)

*-a > -ai, e.g.:

duwai two te-tawai laugh
 matai eye tuwai old

*-a is retained in the particles ba, na[?] and the 3rd person possessive pronoun is sometimes spelt -na in the texts, sometimes -ne.

*-i is as a rule replaced by -ai, e.g.:

rugai loss, detriment meterai princess (cf. Skt. putri, Mid. Mal. beteri) rezekai provisions, food (this Arabic loanword is in the texts the only word which contains z) sepertai as, like [bilai day (cf. Mal. hari and see 3.7)]

*-i is retained in:

- tapi but
- api all that [Jaspan: who?]
- siapi anyone who
- udi you (polite)
- kuni from

*-u is as a rule replaced by -au, e.g.:

- ulau head
- telau three
- te-temau meet
- t-en-ipau be deceived
- lalau go on
- mengabalau marry a widow

*-u > -o, e.g.:

- meto come out (cf. Jav. wetu)
- te-temo meet

-u is retained in the personal pronouns uku I and kumu you (plural)

The diphthongisation of *-a and *-i to -ai and of *-u to -au seems to be caused by the word-final stress.

(2) The original word-final diphthongs *-ai and *-au appear as -ei(öi) and -ew(-öw) respectively, also in those cases where they are for some unexplained reason replaced by -i and -u in Malay and Middle Malay, e.g.:

*-ai > -ei in:

- atei heart, mind (Mid. Mal. etc. hati, ati, but Tagalog atai, Batak ate, Ngaju- and Maanyan-Dayak atäi, Malagasi (Merina) ati, from *atai, *atäi or *ate, because *-ti would have been palatalised to -tsi)
- matei die (Mid. Mal. etc. mati, but Tagalog matai, Batak mate, Dayak matäi, Malagasi mati)
- sapei arrived, so that (Mid. Mal. etc. sampai, cf. 3.14a)
- pei just, just now (Mid. Mal. (e)mpai)
- bei mother, mother-animal (Mid. Mal. bai)
- m-elei give (cf. Mal. beri, but Tagalog bigai, Karo beré)

But *-ai > -é in:

- gawé work, activity (as in Sundanese and Javanese)
- bé presently (cf. Mid. Mal. etc. tembai first, earlier, from the stem bai mother[?], Karo-Batak lebé before, Jav. tembé just now)

*-au > -ew in:

- kebew buffalo (Mid. Mal. kebau)
- m-ulew hunt, chase, imperative k-ulew you chase (Mid. Mal. buru, but Tagalog bugaw, Batak buro, cf. 3.7 and 3.9)
- imew tiger (Mal. harimau)

(3) Accompanied by diphthongisation of its preceding vowel, final -h becomes glottal stop. Thus:

*-ah > -eak, e.g.:

- uleak behaviour (< *ulah)
- upeak wages (< *upah)
- beak below (Lampung bah)
- padeak word (< *padah [cf. Aichele, 1943, p.47])
- payeak tired, weak (< *payah)
- teak do not know (< *(en)tah)
- mareak cross, furious (< *marah)
- kileak also, as well (Mid. Mal. kilah, kinah idem)
- leceak muddy, wet (Mal., Karo lecah)

*-ih > -iak, e.g.:

- buliak can, be allowed, obtain (< *bulih)
- putiak white (< *putih)
- keliak see (Mid. Mal. kelih)

*-uh > -uak, e.g.:

- asuak younger brother or sister (< *asuh, cf. Mal. asuh nursing)
- m-unuak kill (Mal. membunuh)
- ne-luruak arrangement (Mid. Mal. melurohi take care of, cf. Mal. luruh fall down, Old Jav. ruru, Ngaju duroh; as to the meaning cf. Jav. tiba fall, judge)

(4) *i, *é and *u preceding an original word-final glottal stop are retained, e.g.:

- titik small, little
- pék take, [put] (Old Jav., Jav. idem take)
- kuyuk dog (Lampung idem)

*a on the other hand tends to become o in this position, e.g.:

- anok child (< *anak)
- sok ripe, done (Lampung sak, Mal. masak)
- tuwok palmwine (< *tuwak)
- mukok open (Mal. membuka(k))
- bok reason (Lampung bak)
- sesok oppression, tightness (Mal. sesak)
- otok brains (Mal. otak)
- ke-galok desire, passion, wanted (< *galak)
- ke-jinok tame (Mid. Mal. etc. jinak)

*a is retained in:

- telapak in telapak tangan palm of the hand (Mal., Mid. Mal. idem)
- n-apak married (cf. Mid. Mal. mapak conduct a wedding ceremony)
- nak in (cf. Lampung, Mid. Mal. tunak stay)

(5) Word-final *-r and *-l disappear while the preceding vowel becomes a diphthong. A similar process of diphthongisation is found in Minangkabau, where, however, *-ar and *-al are excepted.

*-al, *-ar > -ea, e.g.:

ke-libea	width (Mid. Mal. libagr wide) ke-luwea	go outside (Mid. Mal. lu(w)agr)
asea	origin, main point, if only (Mid. Mal. etc. asal from Arabic) akea	sense, trick, deceit (Mid. Mal. etc. akal from Arabic) magea	to, for (for persons) (cf. Lampung peger, meger come , BKI 83, 197; cf. Jav. dateng come , prepositional to, toward, for)

Deviating diphthongs are:

d-ipoa	on the other side (Toba, Mandailing ipar)
biyoa	water (Mal. ayar, Lampung wai; with regard to the initial sound cf. Old Jav. wway and 3.10)
be-juwoa	offer for sale (Mid. Mal. etc. ju(w)al)

*-il, *-ir > -ia, e.g.:

kecia	small (Mal. kecil)
bibia	lip, edge, seam (Mid. Mal. bibigr, Mal. bibir)

*-ul > -oa, e.g.:

t-em-otoa	pursue (Mid. Mal. tutol, Lampung tutul)
soa	get, search(?) (cf. probably Lampung surul drag, get) betoa	be true (Mid. Mal. betol, Mal. betul)
tenoa	egg (< *telul, cf. 3.7 and 3.13; Mid. Mal. telogr, Mal. telur)

*-ur > -ua, e.g.:

gugua	fall off (Mal. gugur)
tidua	sleep (Mal. tidur)

Word-final *-r is retained in the interjection purr (for: a bird flying up, cf. Sundanese pur), and in the noun tepur moment (cf. Mid. Mal. tempor moment) which is probably derived from it.

[senimar, p.245, is either a misprint for senimat or a loanword, though a Malay dialect form *simbar for Mal. sambar, Minangkabau sémba is only hypothetical.]

(6) *r, and sometimes also *l, have disappeared word-initially, e.g.:

asai	feeling, opinion (also Mid. Mal. ase, asaw; from Skt. rasa)
acun	poison (Mal. racun)
imew	tiger (Mal. harimau, Mid. Mal. grimau)
tai(-na)	(its) meaning (Mal. erti, reti, from Skt.)
ne-but	snatched away (Mal. rebut)
ke-tang	you, stretch! (Mal. rentang, or Mal., Mid. Mal. bentang cf. 3.9)
bang	door (Sundanese etc. lawang)
me(m)-pas	set free (cf. Mal. etc. lepas)
igai	still, moreover (Mal., Mid. Mal. lagi, Mid. Mal. also agi; cf. 3.12)
amen	(along with lamen) if, while (Sundanese, Jav. lamun, Mid. Mal. lamon)

Word-medially, *r [becomes ' (glottal stop) or sometimes] disappears, e.g.:

be'uk	kind of monkey (Mal. etc. beruk)
sa'ang	nest (Mal. sarang)
pa'ok	approach (Sund., Jav. parek, Lamp. parok)
be'em	rice wine (Sund. berem, Mal. beram)
sebe'ang	the opposite bank of a river, the other side (Mal. seberang) soa	(< *sul) search (cf. (?) Lamp. surul drag, get)
bingin	banyan (tree) (Mal. beringin)
m-em	brood (Mal. eram, Jav. angrem, Karo kerem)

Perhaps *l disappeared word-medially in:

soa	piece (auxiliary numeral, among other things for eggs; cf. (?) Sund. solor)
ke-nam-ku	as far as I know, to my knowledge (to be compared(?) with Lamp. nalom, nalam clever, all-knowing, experienced ; cf. 3.13)

The sound-sequence *-ari becomes the diphthong -oi because of the loss of *r, e.g.:

moi	come, come on! (Mal. etc. mari)
t-oi	let us (incl.)! (cf. Karo ari, root morpheme of *mari in ari ko come here ; toi is therefore a contraction of ite us (incl.) and *ari > oi)
poi	rice (Lamp., Jav. pari)

Word-medial *r is preserved in the following examples, all of them probably being loanwords:

kereno	because (Mal. karena, from Skt.)
garang	wild, grim (Mal. idem)
meterai	princess (Mid. Mal. beteri, Mal. puteri, from Skt.)
pere(m)puan	wife (Mal. idem) maro	very well, let's go! (Mal. mara forward!)
percayo	believe (Mal. percaya, from Skt.)
perbuatan, perbuaten	action (Mal. idem)
tarak	asceticism (Mal. idem)
mareak	be furious, cross (Mal. marah; cf. 3.3)
sepertai	like (Mal. seperti, from Skt.)
sekaran	endurance, grief (Mid. Mal. sengkaraw'an, sengkare'an)

[But is geruwo cave (cf. Mal. guha) a loan word too?]

Word-initially r appears in the texts only in:

rugai	loss (Mal. rugi)
-------	-------------------------

- (7) The sound recorded by Dempwolff (1934) in his proto-Indonesian sound-system as a voiced velar fricative and written γ, became l in Rejang. This is the sound of Van der Tuuk's first phonetic rule, usually called the RGH-rule, because it appears regularly as r in one language, as g in another and as h in a third language (and as y (z) in yet another); in some languages it disappears altogether. The Rejang l which corresponds with the sound of the RGH-rule is now only found word-medially. If our analysis of the word tenoa egg is correct (see 3.5) it formerly also occurred word-finally. [In the word list of the Rawas dialect of Rejang by Van Hasselt (1881), what is now the diphthong -oa in Lebong is written -ol. It seems that in the late 18th century this pronunciation was still heard among the Rejang speakers on the coast; see Marsden, 1811 p.203: water = beole, coconut = niole. There is no parallel to the shift of the RGH-sound to l in the neighbouring languages of Rejang.]

It should be noted that in the Middle-Malay dialects Besemah and Serawai even now two r-sounds can be distinguished, which Helfrich wrote as r and gr. This gr represents velar r, and indeed in most of its occurrences it is the output of Van der Tuuk's first phonetic rule, although it is not seldom interchangeable with r.

Examples for the RGH-sound in Rejang:

daleak	blood (Mid. Mal. dagrah)
mileak	red (Mal. méräh, Karo mirah)
belau	new (Mal. beharu)
m-elei	give (see 3.2)
m-ulew	chase (see 3.2)
bilai	day (Mal. hari, Mid. Mal. agri; cf. 3.3 and 3.12)
lilai	run, flee (Mid. Mal. lari, lagri; see 3.12)
balet	root (also aerial) (Mid. Mal. urat, ugrat fibre, vein, root , Old Jav. wwat root , with reduplication owad parasitic plant , otwat veins [but these connections are doubtful]; Lamp. bayit climber, wayit root, climber, creeper . a instead of u in balet and in Lampung bayit, wayit can be explained by shift of stress onto the last syllable. As to the vowel e(ö) (Rejang), i (Lampung) compare Gayo uyöt vein, root, climber)

Exceptions (which follow 3.6 and are probably loanwords from a language with r for the RGH-sound):

tu'un	descend, leave the house (Mid. Mal. tugron)
binai	venture, dare (Mid. Mal. begrani, Lamp. bani; cf. 3.12)

Remark: Lampung talum indigo blue (instead of *tayum) may be considered a borrowing from Rejang.

(8) Unfortunately the texts do not contain enough examples to be able to recognise with certainty the Rejang reflection of the sound of Van der Tuuk's second sound-rule, the DGRL-rule.

Because it is certain that adik in adik-sanokku my fellow villager is a Middle-Malay loan word, only poi rice and gén name need to be explained. Of these poi might have been borrowed from Lampung (pari); cf. 3.6. Thus the only example of the DGRL-sound would be gén name if this could be identified with Jav. aran name. The dropping of the first syllable would not be exceptional; see 3.9 and 3.11. But because in the Batak dialects a corresponding *agan, as the word would be, is lacking, this identification is very questionable. Presumably gén belongs to a totally different stem, cf. 3.11.

[A clear example of the DGRL-sound in Rejang is dalek fly (Mal. lalat, Simalungun Batak lanog). The final consonant in this and some other Rejang words is not a glottal stop but k, which may go back to *-g. The word is not in Helfrich's texts. Thus, the etymology of gén proposed here is perhaps not as improbable as Aichele thought.]

(9) Occasionally *b has dropped word-initially, e.g.:

- ngus muzzle (cf. Sund. bangus snout, bill, muzzle (of an animal))
- tang in: ke-tang you, stretch (cf. 3.6)
- ulew in: k-ulew you, chase (cf. 3.2)
- uang in: k-uang you, throw away (cf. Mal. buang)

[Aichele assumed an original word-initial *w in lai, because he doubted Helfrich's translation large and would connect it with Mal. Arab. wali patron. This etymology is impossible because lai indeed means large.]

(10) Word-initially *w becomes b, e.g.:

- bang door (Sund. etc. lawang, cf. 3.6)
- balet root, aerial root (cf. 3.7)
- biyoa water (cf. 3.5 and 3.12)
- bilai day (cf. 3.3)

Exception:

- wipe in what way, how (cf. 3.15)

(11) Some originally disyllabic word stems have become monosyllabic as a result of merging of sounds, e.g.:

- lut very (cf. (?) Lamp. luwot more)
- pun tree, trunk (Mal. pohon)
- tot tree-stump (cf. Lamp. tuhot stub, Tagalog tood stump)
NB. tot bingin, p.247, is translated banyan-tree (p.313) but from the context it is evident that it refers to a stump which was left after the tree was hewn.
- gén [Aichele was not satisfied with the etymology given in 3.8 and preferred deriving this word from a stem *gah (Achehnese fame) with a suffix *-an, but this seems much less probable.]

(12) The texts contain a number of words which show vowel assimilation, a relatively rare phenomenon in Indonesian languages. Evidently this is caused by the prominence in pronunciation of the stressed second syllable, so that its vowel becomes audible in advance, e.g.:

- uku I
- kémé we (excl.)
- kumu you (pl.)
- bélék return (via *balék < *balik)
- binai brave (via *bini < *bani, cf. 3.7)
- butau stone (via *butu < *batu, cf. 3.1)
- igai moreover (via *igi < *agi, *lagi, cf. 3.6)
- jijai become (dialectal ijai, cf. 3.17) (via *jiji < *jaji < jadi)
- lilai run (via *lili < *lali, cf. 3.7)
- bilai day (via *bili < *wali, cf. 3.7)
- nosok hidden, concealed (via *ne-sok < *ni-sok, cf. Mal. sorok hide, conceal, cf. 3.6)

[Aichele also mentions kiyew tree (Mal. kayu, one would expect *Rejang kayau) and biyoa water (cf. 3.5 and 3.10), but in these words there is no vowel assimilation; the *a became i because of the immediately following y.]

Vowel dissimilation appears in:

su'et wasp (cf. Sund. seureud, Mandailing sorot sting) lungen upper arm (cf. Sund. leungeun, Jav. lengen)

(13) A possible instance of *l assimilating to n in the vicinity of a nasal is:

m-ino perhaps meaning follow, join (cf. Mid. Mal. milu, borrowed from Javanese, Sund. ilu). The word is found at the bottom of p.246 in the phrase mino embuk dilem tabang, which has not been translated by Helfrich. It should [perhaps] be interpreted (he emptied the whole bamboo container and with it he also drank the dregs).

A comparable assimilation is found in Lampung manom < *malom evening.

*l has dissimilated to n in:

tenoa egg (< *telol, cf. Mid. Mal. telogr; cf. 3.7)

A comparable dissimilation is perhaps found in Lampung nalam, nalom clever, competent (< *lalam, *lalom, being a reduplication of lam, lom interior, deep). Presumably this is present in Rejang ke-nam-ku as far as I know (cf. 3.6; also Tagalog alam know)

[and possibly in:

namen know. This is only found p.245.
Aichele thought it was = lamen when.]

(14) The change of original nasal clusters.

(a) In the vast majority of cases the nasal has assimilated to the voiceless stop [without prolongation of the explosive as found e.g. in Toba-Batak].

*ngk > k, e.g.:

takep grab, catch (Mal. tangkap)
ikut be carried (Sund. ingkud) akuak resembling (Minangkabau angkuah) sekaran endurance, grief (Mid. Mal. sengkare'an)

*nc > c, the only example:

kacéa mousedeer (Mid. Mal. etc. kancil)

*nt > t, e.g.:

(petat)memetat chop off (Mal. puntat chopped-off stump) me-litas to pass by suddenly (Mal., Mid. Mal. lintas)

*mp > p, e.g.:

sapei arrive, so that (Mal. etc. sampai)
me-lupat jump (Mal. lumpat)

tupas	throw (Mid. Mal. tumpas)
k-en-apé	be pressed (Sund. kampa press , Mid. Mal. kampe'an, Mal. kempaan press, oil press)
tepur	moment (Mid. Mal. tampor, cf. 3.5)

Exception: the Malay loan word perempuan wife.

A nasal followed by *s assimilates to s as well, the only example being:

d-asei	(< *d(i)lan(g)sai, cf. 3.6 and 3.1). According to the translation, p.316, at home , literally at the inside of the curtain, behind the curtains (which hang in front of the sleeping-place or separate a part of the room). Cf. Sund. dina kulambu on the inside of or behind the curtains ; Old Jav. (Poerbatjaraka, 1931, p.27) ri jro langssé on the inside of the curtain , indicating the sleeping-place.
--------	--

(b) [The nature of the sounds developed from clusters consisting of a nasal followed by a voiced stop has only recently been satisfactorily explained by Coady and McGinn (1982), who call them 'barred nasals'. A vowel immediately following an 'unbarred nasal' is always nasalised. The Encyclopaedie van Nederlandsch-Indië (1919) probably refers to this phenomenon where it says (III, p.5) that Rejang speech has a strong nasal sound. On the contrary, a vowel immediately following a 'barred nasal' is not nasalised. Aichele's examples of 'barred nasals' are]:

*ngg > ng, e.g.:

men angeak	look up (cf. Sund. tanggah, cf. for the Rejang form also Old Jav. tangā, teng(h)ā)
t-em- ingang	fall down on (cf. Sund., Toba, Mandailing tinggang)
ting ea	stay behind (cf. Mal. etc. tinggal)
s-em- anget	put up (cf. (?) Mal. sanggat put ashore (a ship)) s-em- engut	(used as a conjunction) till, until (cf. Mid. Mal. sunggot arrive, land)

But the cluster is written ngg in the Malay loanword ketanggungan grief, endurance.

*nj > ny, e.g.:

p anyang	(in the name Gerobok musea panyang) is probably Mal. panjang long .
m enyalai	to fish with a cast-net (Mal. menjala, from Mal. Skt. jala, Rejang jalai)

The cluster is written ndj (=nj) in:

m-unjuk to hand, give *nd > n, e.g.:

ta ño	(also written tando) sign (Mal. etc. tanda)
ta nuk	(also written tanduk) horns (Mal. tanduk)
po nok	hut (Mal. pondok)
i neak	be remarkable, peculiar (Mid. Mal. indah peculiar ; Mal. éndah calm, satisfied, beautiful, remarkable)
u nang-unang	law (Mal. undang-undang)
me- liñung	keep, protect (cf. Mal. lindung)
te- miñok	having arrived, having reached one's goal (Mid. Mal. temindak; cf. 3.4)

*mb > m, e.g.:

a m o	slave, I (Mal. hamba, but cf. 3.15)
i m o	jungle, forest (Mal. rimba)
t i moa	emerge, appear (Mal. timbul)
n-a m ung	slung up(wards) (spelt with mb in m-ambung sling up(wards) , throw upwards; cf. Mal., Gayo lambung, Achehnese lambōng; cf. 3.6)
ne- m in	be carried on the back (also spelt ne-embin; cf. Mid. Mal., Mal. ambin)
s-en-i m at	be caused, be seized (cf. Mal. sembat) [? cf. 3.5]

(15) Word contraction.

The texts give a few examples of compound constructions with word contraction:

cigai (sigai)	not any more , from *coa igai
wipe	how, in what way (Mal. bagaimana), from *awei ipe

The personal pronoun of the 2nd person ko also fuses to one single word with the imperative, which it often precedes. If the imperative root begins with a consonant, it is prefixed as ke-. If the root begins with a vowel the pepet also disappears. Hence e.g.:

*ko pék	becomes kepék you, take!
*ko sok	becomes kesok you, cook!
*ko uang	becomes kuang you, throw away!
*ko ikut	becomes kikut you, carry!

[cf. Aichele, 1943, p.51. According to Aichele, the pronominal prefix of the 1st person *ku- also becomes ke-. The only example in the texts is amo moi kecat I will take down, where amo would be the personal pronoun (Mal. hamba) and kecat from *ku-cat. Such a combination of amo (=hamba) and ku- is very unlikely. Perhaps amo has nothing to do with hamba and kecat is an imperative. The explanation of the prefix ke- in the imperative as *ko is hypothetical too.]

(16) Shortening of words used as conjunctions, prepositions and particles is found in several Indonesian languages (cf. Brandstetter, 1915, par.274 ff.). Examples in Rejang are:

lok	as a particle, indicating the future, along with galok to wish, to desire
nak	as the preposition in (cf. Mid. Mal. tunak stay)
das	as the preposition on (cf. Mal. di atas, but also Karo dās) dan	as the conjunction and (along with: dengen; cf. Mal. dengan with, Batak dongan fellow; also Mal. dan and) ngen and, to, with (from dengen; cf. Mid. Mal. ngan)

(17) Dialectal divergencies.

In the three Rejang texts which Helfrich's collection contains, nrs XXVI and XXVII as compared with nr XXV show dialectal deviations in two cases:

instead of jijai (cf. Mal. jadi) become, thereupon: ijai instead of cigai not any more (cf. 3.15): sigai

POSTSCRIPT

In the Preface I should have referred to Jaspan's note on Rejang orthography in his Thesis (1964a:xii-xv) and I might have mentioned his optimistic view of the editing of his dictionary (xviii).

I should perhaps have taken more freedom in splitting up articles in which homonyms are treated as one word, e.g. djenang.

My omitting the dots under d and b (preface p.viii no.10) may in a few cases have obscured a difference between the barred nasals (ñ, m̄) and nd, mb in which n and m are infixes. Compare Jaspan's djendjo', which probably represents (in my spelling) jenejo', not jenyō'.

If we accept McGinn's opinion (1982:60) that the infix -en- may be causative as well as passive in Rejang, some of Jaspan's active translations of -en- forms may not be wrong, as I supposed in the preface, p.ix no.13. Perhaps it might even be possible to explain some 'printing errors', supposed by Aichele (p.147, last line), in this way.

Many persons whose help Jaspan acknowledged in his Thesis (1964a:xxvi ff.) also gave their help in compiling the dictionary. I thank others who helped me in editing this book. The names of most of them appear on the title pages and in the preface. I regret that I could not use Patrick Sweeting's tape-recordings of a reading of Jaspan's manuscript with numerous additions by A. Sani, performed by three Rejang speakers. My hearing is now too weak to use such a tape. My special thanks go to Mrs Dianne Stacey, who coped successfully with the typing of the difficult manuscript and with my moods of making changes until the last moment.
