Appendix 1. A Calendar of references to the trombone and the contexts in which it was used before 1850

Introduction

This Appendix forms a Calendar of references to the trombone in Portugal and the contexts in which it was used before 1850. It includes references from archival and literary sources, as well as iconographical and musical sources organised in chronological order. Dating of iconographical sources and musical instruments is according to the Portuguese Institute of Museums. The criteria for inclusion in the Calendar is that the entries specifically refer to one of the terms used to denote the trombone, the shawm or any instrument of the shawm band. References to the trumpet are also included when its use can be related to the shawm band. References to the trombone are fewer than those referring to the shawm, perhaps because trombone players were regularly referred to as player(s) of the shawm band (charamela or charameleiro). Therefore, although occasionally ambiguous, all references, textual or otherwise, to haut instruments that may refer to the trombone have been included (see Glossary).

Entries for shawm in the Calendar are followed by the original term in Portuguese, in Italics, inside parentheses as follows: for entries referring to the shawm as the instrument, the shawm band or shawm player (charamela). The term “player/s” has been added in square brackets when shawm (charamela/s and charameleiros) is used to refer to the player/s. For entries to shawm (charamela and charameleiros) which refer to the ensemble, the term “band/s” has been added. Entries which refer to the shawm instrument (charamela) need no further explanation. The use of the term (charameleiro) is the only exception, as it specifically means shawm player. In this case there is also no need for further explanation. This facilitates the understanding of the content of each specific reference. From 1700 onwards, the term shawm

(charamela), referring to instrument, band or player, has been replaced by the term wind, also referring to instrument, band or player.¹⁹⁸

The same applies to references to trumpets: for entries referring to the trumpet as an instrument, ensemble and player (trombeta). The term “player/s” has been added in square brackets when trumpet (trombeta, trombeiro and trombeteiro) is used to refer to the player/s. For entries regarding trumpets (trombetas and trombeteiros or trombeiros) which refer to the band, the term “ensemble/s” has been added. Entries which refer to the trumpet as an instrument (trombeta) with further specification of the nature or physical characteristics of the instrument are followed by the translation of the named term (when possible) and the term “player” in square brackets. When translation is not possible, the term trumpet is followed by the original term in Portuguese, in italics i.e. trumpet bastarda. The term clarim is also used to refer to the trumpet.

The brass instrument with a double slide system is denoted throughout this thesis as the trombone for entries referring to sacabuxa and its various spelling modes. For earlier references when the term sacabuxa could refer to the single slide instrument notes are provided.¹⁹⁹

Transcriptions

Where appropriate (and possible), original language transcriptions of unpublished source materials are provided in full alongside translations (see note on translations below). Transcriptions of published sources have also been provided when issues of terminology, punctuation or grammar could compromise interpretation of the original text. The transcription of manuscripts is my own work unless stated otherwise (secondary sources are used) whilst the original spellings are also retained. Old Latin alphabet letters have also been retained. The long “s” (f) is used at the beginning and/or middle of words (facabuxa, fāhuca, eftromento).²⁰⁰ The same applies to the use of “u” with vocalic value “v” (tiuerem) and the “j” as both the letter “i” and the Roman numeral form “i”. With some sources the tilde, which normally appears above the letter “a” with the ending “ao” (João, procissão) is occasionally misplaced on the following letter “ð”; this has also been retained. Misspellings and/ or different spellings of terms have also been retained (charamela, charamella and sacabucha sacabuxa, saca-buxa, saquabuja). When names appear abbreviated, the remaining letters are given inside square brackets when possible (J.^º [João]).

¹⁹⁸ Although by 1700 shawms were broadly being replaced by oboes and bassoons in other European countries, in Portugal the term shawm remained in use until the second decade of the nineteenth century.

¹⁹⁹ See Chapter 2 for a more detailed discussion.

Translation

The translation is my own work unless stated otherwise. I have tried to strike a balance between retaining the basic structure of the original sentences (which, as in the case of the chronicles, is often highly idiosyncratic) and providing an idiomatic English version. In some cases, this has resulted in translations which may seem overly dependent on the Portuguese original text, although compromises had to be made.

Currency

References to currency in Portugal for the period between 1380 and 1910 are in reais or réis and cruzados at a rate of 400 cruzados equal 1 real until 1561. During the reign of King João IV 1 real was worth 500, 600 and 640 cruzados. By 1730, 1 real equals 400 cruzados again.

Julian and Gregorian calendar

In Portugal the Gregorian calendar (New Style) was adopted in 1582, establishing 1 January as the beginning of the year. Under the Julian (Old Style) calendar the year commenced on 25 March. In this study, for events in Portugal and when referring to Portuguese documents prior to 1582, I have followed the same system adopted for transcripts of English court records in Ashbee (1986 - 1996), where for the period between the 1 January and 24 March, the year is given in both the Old and the New Styles (in the form 1491/2, for example). In some cases it has not been possible to provide a specific day or month, in which case I have used the sigla [N.D] (i.e. no date) in square brackets and positioned them immediately before or after the nearest possible date. Moreover, I have divided centuries into three stages, namely early, mid and late-centuries for entries when more precise dating was not possible (i.e. iconographic sources). As a consequence of this, some dates within the year, and in the case of the iconographic sources the decade or quarter of the century, may not be rigorously chronological.

References to published sources appear in an author-date format. References to archival sources which have been published also appear in author-date format followed by the archival location reference code (when possible).

In the same document there is a list of much needed (muyto mister) instruments ordered to Calisto, a Flemish merchant, including two soprano shawms (typlles), two tenor shawms (tenores) and two trombones (sacabujas).²¹⁹

Jacques has been in contact with Calisto, a German merchant, regarding the acquisition of shawms (charamelas) and trombones (saquabujas), which we do not have. You [Silvestre Nunes] should enquire Calisto of the whereabouts of the named instruments. If in possession of them Calisto should be paid and send the instruments immediately. You should otherwise inform him of the urgency of this matter and the need of the named instruments.

²²² Mestre Ås [Hans Nagell] was one of the most notorious trombonists of the early sixteenth century (Carter 2012, pp.103–4, 210, 224, 348).

²²³ Date of publishing of Cancioneiro Geral.

²²⁴ In 1516 Cancioneiro Geral, Resende gathered poems and lyrics of songs from some two hundred and eighty six Portuguese noble men. The subjects of these poems were love, satire and epigram written in Portuguese and Castilian. One of these poems, a satire written by Afonso Valente in honor of Garcia Resende presented us with evidence of some of Resende's features and facets. See Chapter 2.

Accounts of wind instruments and players from the sixteenth century collection of Portuguese Sayings worthy of memoire by a contemporary anonymous author:

Account of a bet between a shawm player and a trumpet player

[444] A trumpeter of the King and a shawm player (each with a horse) came before Marcos Mendes (a personality of the time) to bet who had the best horse. The three of them went to a field and the two contestants started to gallop each on their own side; and the horse of the trumpeter fell with its owner to what Marcos Mendes said:

- Villain [the trumpet player], if you are not a trombone [player] (sacabuxa) why would you [want to] play (concertar)²³³ with a shawm [player]?

(Saraiva 1975, p.164)

Accounts of the life and personal character of Jácomo Feio, shawm player of Duke Dom Jayme of Braganza.

[540]²³⁴ This shawm [player] (Jácomo Feio) was black (negro) but very discreet, however because he became a thief he was whipped many times but he wouldn't change his habit. Once in such occasion, after being well punished and then treated for his wounds, he was punished yet again by being covered in animal's excrements up to his neck.

Under such shame, Jácomo was visited by a friend to whom he said:

I am sorry I cannot greet you but I have been earthed (aporcado)²³⁵

²³³ Double meaning of concertar: playing in a concert; and running side by side.

²³⁴ Numbers in square brackets refer to the number of the saying in the original transcript.

²³⁵ Meaning of aporcado, covering the root of a lower stem of a plant so it becomes softer and whiter.

[541] Once he was chained for a similar crime in Vila Viçosa and whilst he was chained a bachelor with the nickname of Cepa (thick as a wood log) passed by and said:

- *Quod natura dat nemo negare potest.*²³⁶

To what Jácomo replied:

- You are right because you too are Cepa (thick) and cannot deny it [potes(t)].

[542] Once whilst walking he saw a young man with extremely big ears to whom he said:

- Young man, save me the first pair of ears that you grow because I am about to lose mine.²³⁷

[543] Once he was approached by five or six young men who asked him:

- How old are you? (with double meaning) Are you a dog?²³⁸

To what he replied:

- But dog [bitter] (perro)²³⁹ for seeing so many fools (parvos).

[544] When Feio was once told he was wearing his tights inside out, he replied:

- How come you want me to be right if the world his upside down?

[546] Walking along one of the streets of Vila Viçosa, where [one such] Leonor Fernandes, a favourite of Dona Isabel de Lancastre and then Queen Done Catarina, was given a very good house [for her grace], he [Feio] said:

- Houses given for free [grace] (graça), grace (graças) the Lord.

²³⁶ You cannot deny your nature. Feio replies with a Portuguese-Latin word game.

²³⁷ Cutting the ears was a common measure of punishment for thieves. King João III suppressed this.

²³⁸ In Portuguese cão velho is a play on words and it has double meaning: How old are you? and Are you a dog?

²³⁹ Perro, comes from Spanish for dog. It is also used colloquially as an adjective to describe something sad or negative.

[547] On one occasion when walking in the fields he met a couple of farmers from the village [Vila Viçosa]; One of them, a bachelor, who Feio considered the most quiet and gracious asked him in colloquial black people's accent what his name was. Feio [ironically] replied:

- Frunando.

And then turned to the others:

- What can I say to an evil villager who cannot speak Portuguese, never mind the language of the black people [Portuguese with African accent]?

Account of an argument between a singer and a shawm player of King João III.

[1231] This singer, (Estevão Pinheiro) had a disagreement with His majestys' trombone player (sacabuxa) who [the trombone player] said that the shawms were just as honoured as the singers. To this the singer [Pinheiro] responded:

- And you [trombone player] are even more [honoured] because you are one step above the trumpet [player] (trombeta).

Chronicles of Dom João Manuel Bishop of the Viseu Cathedral (c.1610-1625). How the bishop procured a shawm band to take part in the city's festivities.

There are no shawms (charamellas) in the city of Vizeu. For the occasion of the more important celebrations the city would invite shawms from other city of Guarda or any other parts where they were available. For this reason the bishop decided to look for men with sufficient ability that would be willing to learn the shawms (charamella). He found four or five young men with who could read music willing to learn the shawms. The bishop then arranged for a master to teach and ordered instruments to be bought. In no time all five of them were sufficient in the instruments. Nowadays there are in the city two groups of shawms (ternos de charamellas) and they may even be the best in the all of the Beira region.

8 January

Graduation ceremonies at the Coimbra University.

The shawms and trumpets (charamellas e trombetas) played as customary at the door of the new Doctor [Dr. Francisco Rebello da Silva], at the door of the principal of the University, at the Colleges of St. Peter and St. Paul and all other usual places.

9 January

On Sunday, the new Doctor read for one and half hours with great pleasure of the University, students and many religious men who honoured the named doctor with their presence. At the end played the shawms, as it happened at the beginning, with much joy from all.

Details of the shawm band of the city of Lisbon:

Letter from the City Council of Lisbon certifying the position of master of the shawm band (Mestre da Charabela) to Marco Nunes. In this letter Marcos Nunes takes over the responsibilities of organising the shawm band, which is formed of two sopranos, a tenor, an alto and a trombone (dois tiples e um tenor e um contralto e uma sacabuxa) for every procession of the city. The Council will pay Marco Nunes, for all this work, only 40.000 réis per year, for all five players, to be in quarterly instalments of 10.000 réis. The Council will also pay Marco Nunes for his accommodation, for as long as he serves as shawm player of the city.

In the same letter we understand that Marco's father had been a shawm [player] (charamela) of the city previously. The document states that father and son lived in a house provided by the council.

PT/ TT/ TSO-IE/ 9183

²⁵⁷ The surname Pereira (from pear tree) was likely of Jewish origin (as many other tree and animal related names) and adopted after conversion into Christianity. Many new Christians were often accused of Judaism, apostasy and in some occasion of witchcraft. Following the Iberian Alliance by means of the wedding of King Manuel I and Isabel of Spain, the King signed a decree 5 December 1496 which established that all Jewish should be converted to Christianity or otherwise be expelled. One year after all Portuguese frontiers were closed remaining Jews trying to leave the country via Lisbon's port were baptized against their will. Most of these new Christians were never completely accepted and their faith was often questioned.

[N.D.]

Account of the music ensembles participating in the processions of Braga before the second half of the eighteenth century.

As well as the wind instruments (charamellas), now replaced by the clarinets ... there were [in Braga] other instruments called trombones (sacabuxas) and vacas with their hoarsely tone like trumpets (roucas trombetas chamadas vacas) ... It is believed that Dom Diogo de Sousa [c.1505], archbishop of Braga introduced the shawms (charamelas), but the trombones (sacabuxas) and the vacas were instruments that have been in use [Cathedral] since the Moors, these instruments were taken from them during the battles... These were instruments that they [Moors] offered in the temples.

Trombone with a forward-pointing bell styled as the head of a serpent or dragon.

Inscription on the bell reads: JO O JONES, LX^a.²⁷⁹

PT/ MM/ MM/ 171

²⁷⁸ The bass line of these compositions is very likely for serpent. See Chapter 7.

²⁷⁹ The dating of this instrument by the Museu da Música de Lisboa seems very unlikely (See Chapter 2). The abbreviation LX^a stands for the city of Lisbon (Lisboa).

Newspaper concert review, of a trombone solo played at a concert at São Carlos Opera Theatre, reads:

Last Friday we were all positively surprised by the discovery in this theatre of yet another national talent. / In an instrument so difficult to play, as it is the trombone Mr. J. N. D'Oliveira [João Nicolau de Oliveira] played the promised aria of [from the Opera] Fausta [by Gaetano Donizetti] with extraordinary perfection. The public applauded him with the same enthusiasm they applauded [Luigi] Maggiorotti [bass].²⁸⁷

²⁸⁶ Probably the same Thiago Calvet, composer of the collection of music for brass cited on (1823, n. d.) and musician of the royal band which name abandoned the payment list in 1832. See 15 September 1827.

²⁸⁷ The Aria from Act 2 from Opera “Fausta” by Gaetano Donizetti was sang by Luigi Maggiorotti (Constantino) and conducted by Maestro Francesco Schira on Tuesday, 27 December 1836. The aria played by João Nicolau was probably the same (see AmadeusOnline.net).

Sexta-feira passada fomos agradavelmente surpreendidos com a aparição n'este theatro de um novo talento nacional cuja existencia se ignorava. Em um instrumento tão difícil e tão ingrato de tocar a solo como é o trombone, executou o sr. J.N. d'Oliveira a promettida aria da Fausta com extraordinaria perfeição.

Newspaper's article describing the audition for the position of professor of the brass class of the Royal Lisbon Conservatoire.

On the 23rd of the current month [July] the conservatoire convened in public session for the occasion of the audition (competition) for the place of professor of brass instruments (instrumentos de latão). There were two competitors: Mr Gazul, first horn at São Carlos [Opera Theatre] and Mr Pinto, first keyed bugle at the same orchestra and widely known for his compositions. Mr Gazul, being indisposed, only played three of the five instruments stipulated for the competition and was automatically eliminated. Mr Pinto played excellently on all five instruments – horn, trombone, natural trumpet, keyed bugle and ophicleide. All pieces were performed with orchestra and it would have been very difficult to establish or distinguish which instrument the artist interpreted the best. The applause from the knowledgeable audience anticipated the result from the panel, which unanimously decided Mr Pinto had the abilities to fulfil the role of professor of the class. We (the general public) now wait for the decision of Her Majesty.

No dia 23 do corrente, reuniu o conservatorio real em sessao publica para assistir ao concurso sobre o provimento da cadeira de instrumentos de latao. A sessao esteve brilhante. Dois foram os concorrentes: o sr Gazul, 1º trompa da orchestra de S.Carlos, e o sr. Pinto, 1º corneta-de-chaves da mesma orchestra, e assaz conhecido pelas suas numerosas composicoes. O sr. Gazul por incomodado pode apenas tocar tres instrumentos dos cinco que foram marcados no programma: esta circunstancia fez com que este artista ficasse considerado como fora do concurso. O Sr. Pinto tocou excellente mente em todos os cinco instrumentos- trompa, clarim, trombone, corneta de chaves e phigle: todas as peças foram acompanhadas pela orchestra, e seria difícil distinguir em qual delas o ilustre instrumentista mais louvor merece-tal foi a habilidade que em todos mostrou. Os aplausos do seu inteligente auditorio e dos seus numerosos espectadores, anteciparam a decisao do jury que unanimemente o julgou digno de ocupar a cadeira de professor.

Appendix 6. Francisco António dos Santos Pinto (1850), Princípios Elementares para Trombone

The transcription and translation of the trombone method by Pinto (1850) is my own work. The transcriptions of the manuscript's text and its translation are presented side-by-side in order to allow a better consideration of the original text. Folio numbers are given in text. Transcriptions of musical examples are provided in modern notation.

(fo. 1V) A Tuba Ductiles dos antigos, estando muito tempo desprezada foi	(fo.1V) The antique Tuba Ductilis was neglected for a long time, but was reborn

renascida com o nome genérico de Trombone no princípio do século XVIII e no fim deste século foi ampliado a grande perfeição sendo subdividido em três espécies divididas a diferença de extenção sendo o mais agudo o Alto (ou contralto) o médio o Tenor, e o grave o Baixo. Dando-se-lhe estas denominações pela relação em que esta a sua extenção com as vozes que tem a mesma nomenclatura.	in the beginnings of the 18th Century with the generic name of Trombone. Later in the century the Trombone was developed to great perfection subdivided in three different range categories with Alto being the highest [agudo], Tenor the medium [medio] and bass the lowest [grave]. These terminologies were attributed to the instruments according to the relation they had with the vocal lines with the same nomenclature, i.e. contralto, tenor, bass.
Do Bocal O Bocal difere em diâmetro conforme a especie de trombone, sendo mais estreito para o Alto do que para o Tenor e mais para este do que para o Baixo, deve com tudo ser regulada a largura Segundo a grossura dos beiços dos alunos, sendo mais estreito para os beiços delgados e mais largos para os grossos, conem em todos os casos que tenham a borda boleada e larga para que os beiços achem apoio, o orificio nem muito estreito nem muito largo pois no 1º caso deteriora as notas graves, e no 2º as agudas, convém que a caldeira seja um tanto quanto cónica, assim como sejam de marfim pois se torna o som mais suave, preferindo-se os de metal para tocar em bandas militares por serem mais vibrantes.	The mouthpiece The mouthpiece differs in diameter according to the category of the Trombone; the Alto being narrower than the Tenor, and the latter narrower than the Bass. However, the mouthpiece should be shaped according to the needs of the students and the thickness of their lips i.e. thinner for smaller lips and thicker for bigger lips. It is convenient that the rim of the mouthpiece is wide and has a round shape so the lips can have a firm base. The “throat contour” should not be either too wide or too narrow, as if it is too wide it deteriorates the high notes and if it is too narrow it deteriorates the low notes. The cup of the mouthpiece should be slightly conical and made of ivory [marfim] as this makes

	the sound much softer. For military bands however, the mouthpiece should be made of brass as it is much more resonant [vibrante].
Da Embocadura	Embouchure
Testam-se os beiços sobre os dentes, depois coloca-se o bocal ao centro da boca dois terços sobre o beiço superior, e um terço no inferior, fazendo-se mais apoio no beiço superior que no inferior.	Position the lips against the teeth and then place the mouthpiece in the centre of the mouth, two thirds on the upper lip and one third on the lower lip using the upper lip for more support than the lower one.
Da Articulação	Articulation
Determinar regras para fixar o uso das diversas articulações, e como estas se devem variar é impossível. A natureza do instrumento, seus meios de execução e caráter da melodia ou da frase, seu movimento, são as causas que a determinam, é pois o sentimento mais que as regras particulares que a indicam, com tudo o seu uso conjunto a algumas regras gerais fará com que o aluno possa adquirir o conhecimento do que lhe convém por em prática. A articulação se divide em quatro espécies: Ligado, picado, destacado e picado acompanhado de ligadura.	Establishing the use of the rules of the articulations and the way they should vary is problematic [nearly impossible]. The use of different articulations varies according to a number of factors: nature of the instrument; [their] means of execution; the character of the melody or phrase and its movement. It is mainly the personal feeling (sentimento) rather than particular rules what will determine the articulation. However, the personal feeling in combination with the knowledge of general rules will indicate to the pupil which particular articulation to use. Articulation can be divided in four different categories: legato (ligado), staccato (picado), staccatissimo (destacado) and tenuto (picado acompanhado de ligadura)

Ligado [Ligado] Hé a 1 ^a especie aquella que offerece mais dificuldade para o Trombone e para a qual chamo a atençao dos allumnos. 1º quando as notas ligadas podem ser dadas na mesma posiçao. Não há inconveniente a observar. O mesmo nas outras posições.	Legato [Legato] The first category is the most difficult for the trombone and the one the pupils have to pay most attention to. 1 st - When legato (ligado) notes can be played in the same position. There is no inconvenience to be noted (i.e. no need for particular explanation). The same in the other positions

2º quando há intervallo maior de semitone pode-se ligar de uma a outra posicao emediata.	2 nd – When there is an interval bigger then a semitone one note can be tied to the other in an immediate position.

3º logo que não esteja nos casos acima apontados deve-se procurer que o	3 rd – When none of the previous examples/situations apply, one should try

movimento das varas esteja em oposição com o da melodia afim de nao haver arrastado.	to make sure the movement of the slide[s] is of the opposite direction to the movement of the melody in order to avoid [glissando?] (arrastado).

Analizando este exemplo se ve que quando nas notas ligadas a melodia sobe as varas descem e ao contrario quando aquella desce estas sobem, menos no compaço final porque qualquer destas notas somente tem uma posição, o que acontece também a todas as dó-re# para o grave pela mesma razao, acrescento ainda que as vezes torna encomodo (fo.2V) e mesmo dificil quando as posicoes estao mui distantes como aconteceu nas duas primeiras notas do 5º compasso, seguir restritamente esta regra, porem nestes cazos a maneira de remediar este inconveniente é dar uma pequena inflexao de lingua pronunciando o monossilabo “Dá” na segunda nota, e em todo caso convém que as varas vao de posicao a posicao com a maior velocidade possivel.	Analysing the previous example one can understand that when there is a group of tied notes and the melody ascends the movement of the slide should be of the opposite direction. The last bar of the above example is one exception to this rule as there is only one position for this note. The same happens to C#-D (Dó#-Re) in the low register. It also becomes very uncomfortable (fo.2V) and difficult to follow these rules when the positions are very far apart as it happens in the first two notes in bar 5. The solution to this would be a little inflection of the tongue using the monosyllabic “Da” in the second note. However, in any of these cases it is essential that the slides move from one position to another as fast as possible.

Picado	Staccato
Na 2 ^a especial “Picado” deve-se ferir a nota conservando $\frac{3}{4}$ do valor	One should (ferir) ²⁹⁵ articulate the note keeping three quarters ($\frac{3}{4}$) of the actual value of the note.
Example

Performative notes

Destacado	Staccatissimo
Na 3 ^a espécie “Destacado” deve-se conserver somente metade do valor.	One should only play half ($\frac{1}{2}$) of the value of the note.
Example

Perfomative notes

Picado Accompanhado de Ligadura	Tenuto
Na 4 ^a especie “picado acompanhado de ligadura” deve-se ferir todas as notas	One should (ferir) articulate all notes with much (doçura) sweetness, so that

²⁹⁵ Ferir; the same as to hurt, wound, to inflict an injury, in this case inflict an action, use a certain articulation;

porem com bastante doçura conservando todo o valor ás figuras e unindo o som de cada nota á outra que segue.	one keeps the entire value of the note (unindo) tying up the notes to one another.

Segue pequenos exercícios e duettos, em diverços tons.	Follows short exercises and duos in various tonalities/keys. [these exercises could not be located]
(fo.3) Da respiração e da formaçao do som A respiração é a accção que fazem os pulmões para obsorver e repelir o ár, esta acção se divide em dois movimentos alternaticvos, Aspiração e Expiração cujos movimentos para tocar, se fazem, o primeiro com rapidez e o Segundo lentamente, devendo fazer-se estudo especial neste objecto pois é bastante transcendente, e desta circunstancia depende o bem Phrasear. No primeiro movimento, a Aspiração, os beiços se alargam, a lingua faz um movimento retrogado e o ár se introduz nos pulmoes, em maior ou menor volume, unem-se entao os beiços, e a lingua se adianta para fechar a abertura que fica ainda ao meio dos beiços para reter o ar Aspirado, Segue-se entao o 2º movimento, A Lingua se retira com precepitação e o ár	(fo.3) Breathing and sound formation Breathing is the action taken by the lungs in order to absorb and repel the air [the movement of the lungs in order to inhale and exhale]. This action is divided in two altered movements: breathe in (Aspiração) and breathe out (Expiração). In order to play, the first movement of the lungs has to be quick and the second one slow. One should especially practice this and give it the right attention as it is (bastante transcendente) most important and the success of the phrase depends on it. (bem phrasear) In the first action – Aspiração, the lips open, the tongue moves backwards and the air gets into the lungs in smaller or bigger volume [in different capacities]. The lips then close again and the tongue moves forwards to close the gap between the lips in order to retain the air inside.

sendo compellido pela Expiração fere aquelle que o instrument contem, e este choque de ár produz o som. Conforme os movimentos da lingua são mais ou menos chegados aos beiços assim as notas sao mais ou menos seccas	The second action – Expiração, happens with a quick movement of the tongue backwards allowing the body to let the air out. The air expelled by exhaling when (fere)²⁹⁶ in contact with the air inside the instrument is responsible for the production of the sound (som). The articulation of the note will differ according to the proximity between lips and tongue, when tongue is closer to the lips notes will be shorter.
Das Posições Há 7 posicoes no Trombone procedendo por semitones, a distancia de uma a outra posição varia conforme a especie de trombone, sendo pouco mais ou menos de duas polegadas e meia no Trombone Alto, 3 no Tenor e 4 no Baixo, Em cada posição se obtém a 1^a a 5^a a 8^a a 10^a e a 12^a, também se obtém em todas as posições a 14^a (ou 7^a menor na 8^a) porém alguma couza baixa, o que é facil de remediar tomando a posição mais curta, e sendo por essa mesma razão inconveniente (fo.3V) ferir esta nota na 1^a	Positions²⁹⁷ There are seven positions all one semitone apart from each other. The distance between positions varies according to the category of the trombone i.e. slightly more than two and a half inches (polegadas) (2½) in the alto trombone, three (3) in the tenor and four (4) in the bass. Harmonics 1, 3, 8, 10 and 14 (or minor 7th) can be played in all positions, although harmonic 14 will be slightly flat. However this is easy to solve (fo.3V) by shortening the distance between positions. This does not apply to the first position [first position cannot be shortened]. Harmonics 15, 16 and 17 can

posiçao por isso que nao pode ser remediado este defeito, alem desta nota se tira a 15^a, 16^a e 17^a, porem com bastante dificuldade e só havendo forte embocadura, derivando deste jogo de posições que muitas notas principalmente do centro para o agudo se obtém em diferentes posições o que tudo vai demonstrado na Tabella da extençao geral. O Trombone Alto está em Mib na 1^a posiçao, o Tenor em Sib e o Baixo em Sol, havendo tambem em Fa, porem estao em desuso por se tornar violento e muito pesado na execução	also be played, however with great difficulty and only if one has strong embouchure. In addition to this, from the centre (centro) to the high register [agudo] many of these notes can be obtained in different positions – see table below. The Alto trombone is in Eb [Mib] in the first position, the tenor in Bb [Sib] and the bass in G [Sol] and in F [Fá], however the latter is not used as often as it becomes violent (violento) and heavy to play.
NB. Havendo o uso de se escrever a musica para o Trombone Tenor na clave de Fá na 4^a linha, por isso vai o exemplo em ultimo logar, As notas pretas sao aquellas que saem do uso geral por serem difficultosas, e por essa mesma razao mais raras vezes empregadas.	NB. Notes in black are not used as often as they are more difficult to produce therefore less found in compositions. The tenor trombone is often written in the bass clef; therefore we have the last example to demonstrate this.

(fo.5) Nas lições q[ue] se seguem deve haver todo o cuidado em ferir com egualdade todas as notas, tomando a respiração no fim de cada compasso nas primeiras dez lições e sostentando com egualdade de som a nota do principio ate ao fim, e não se deverá passar das 4 primeiras, sem q[ue] haja alguma firmeza na embocadura. N.B. Todas as lições contidas nestes principios servem p ^a [ra] o Trombone Alto sendo Transportadas 4 ^a (exacta) acima, e p ^a [ra] o Trombone Baixo 3 ^a menor abaixo.	(fo.5) Explanation of the exercises that follow. All notes should be played with the same articulation and breathing at the end of each bar (for the first ten lessons). All of the following lessons can be practiced on the alto trombone (a 4 th above) and on the bass trombone (a minor 3 rd below)
The exercises that follow are identical to those of Cornette (1831) and have therefore not been transcribed. There are no particular notes to accompanying these exercises.

Appendix 7. Santos Pinto (1849)

The transcription of these exercises is my own work. All dynamic marks have been retained and placed as accurately as possible in relation to the original manuscript by Santos Pinto. Articulation marks have also been retained.

Exercise 2 - Portamento

Andante

Francisco Santos Pinto (1849)

The musical score for Exercise 2 - Portamento by Francisco Santos Pinto (1849) is a bassoon part. It features six staves of music. The key signature is three flats (B-flat major). The time signature is common time (indicated by '4'). The tempo is marked 'Andante'. The score includes portamento markings consisting of a curved line above the notes and arrows below the notes indicating the direction of the slide. Measure numbers 1 through 35 are indicated on the left side of each staff.

Rui Pedro De Oliveira Alves

Exercise 3 - Gruppetto

Maestoso

Francisco Santos Pinto (1849)

The sheet music contains eight staves of musical notation for bassoon. The key signature is A major (two sharps). The time signature is common time (indicated by '4'). The music consists of eighth-note and sixteenth-note patterns with various slurs and grace notes. Measure numbers 1, 5, 10, 14, 17, 21, 25, and 29 are visible on the left side of the staves. The title "Exercise 3 - Gruppetto" and subtitle "Maestoso" are at the top, and the composer's name "Francisco Santos Pinto (1849)" is to the right.
