1. Introduction

The major component of socio-economic status of the population is the quality and the level of pensions. The pension system is closely intertwined economic and social relations, so that's why its development and improvement is a necessary element of state policy. Exactly the state plays a key role in the regulation of social processes in law, finance, management, coordination and supervisory levels (The Constitution of the Russian Federation, 2016). In the Russian Federation, the state social security system is based on the principles of universal social security, social security warranty, targeting social security, completeness and differentiation methods of social security, the adequacy of the level of social security to meet the vital needs of the recipients (Yershov and Tolmachev, 2009).

It is necessary to improve the pension system, on the one hand, it is associated with an increase in the Russian Federation, as in most European countries, the number of persons who have reached retirement age and reducing the number of employees. Thus, data of Russian Pension about 41 million of pensioners are registered in Russian and seniors 83% of those who receive a retirement pension. On the other hand, the improvement of the existing pension system of protection is due to the need to adapt to the demands of a market economy. In these circumstances, the responsibility for their old age begins to shift from the state directly to the person (Ermakov and Hmelevskaia, 2014; Makarov and Smirnova, 2009).

2. Materials and methods

The materials of a research have been served the actual and standard data. The methods of the system and structural and analytical analysis are used in work.

3. Results and discussion

3.1. Formulation of the problem

One of the most serious attempts to reform the pension system applies to 2002. It was at this time the government recognized the need to address the many problems of pension insurance, accumulated since the late 90s. of the XXth century. The new stage of reform relates to 2012.

Despite the measures are taken with the State to change, the pension system in the Russian society has developed a critical attitude to the ongoing pension reform (Adonina et al., 2015; Kusina and Fisenko, 2015).

This is due to very specific reasons: the situation of today's pensioners practically doesn't improve: replacement rate with pension of salary is about 28% (by the standards of the International Labor Organization, the rate should not be lower than 40%), the ratio of pension and subsistence minimum while growing, but fundamentally picture does not change. The subsistence minimum of pensioner hardly ensures his physiological survival. Money slowly build up in the storage component of the system, but per person, it is so insignificant amount that the citizens aren't interested in it. At the same time to return to a distribution scheme and it has neither theoretically, nor, moreover, practically impossible, since a significant deterioration in the demographic situation can lead to the fact that employees will be much less than the pensioners.

3.2 Non-governmental pension system in the Russian Federation

In world and Russian practice, the non-state pension funds have arisen and have gained development as institute of social protection which exclusive kind of activity is non-state pension provision. The analysis of a state and structure of monetary assets of the non-state Pension Funds of the Russian Federation allows drawing a conclusion that on this indicator they gradually become the most important element of pension system. Today, the pension payments consists of two parts in the Russian Federation: the single social tax and insurance payment in the form of a tax deduction. Common social tax sends for the payment of the basic part of pensions to current pensioners.

Since 2005, its value is 26% from fund of remuneration of labor. Insurance payment in the amount of 14% from the fund of remuneration of labor ,in part it is directed to the financing of pensions to current pensioners, its insurance part, partially it is reserved in the form of pension savings and it is transferred and optionally insured in trust authorized by this work to non-state pension funds and insurance companies. Since 2004, the Pension Fund of the Russian Federation has started to carry out the transfer of pension savings of insured persons in the management of state trust management companies, private management companies and private pension funds, what were admitted to working with the state compulsory pension insurance (Kaspariants and Lukianchenko, 2015).

The main document what regulates activity of the non-state pension funds is the Federal law of the Russian Federation No. 75 "About the non-state pension funds", was accepted on May 7, 1998. It is non-state pension provision, including early non-state pension provision, and mandatory pension insurance ". Such activity is carried out with fund on the basis of the license for implementation of activities for provision of pensions and pension insurance" (Yershov and Tolmachev, 2009). In the Law are established the legal, economic and social relations, which arise during creation of the non-state, pension funds. There are their activities for non-state pension provision of the population, to mandatory pension,

It is taken into account probability of their approach and extent of influence on result of management of means of pension savings and pension reserves. The fund won't be able to fulfill the obligations to the investors, participants insured by people and their assignees, the "Deposit Insurance Agency" state corporation and "the organization of process of management of risks including establishment of restrictions of risks with fund (By the way, it is establishment of the cumulative extreme rate of risks)" (The Federal Law, 1998).

Thus, in Russia to compare with many European countries, the low standard of living of the citizens receiving pension is observed. The tendency of increase in senior citizens imposes additional load of the state budget. In these conditions there is relevant a creation of the non-state pension funds capable to provide a funded part of provision of pensions by the citizens. The formation of non-state pension system in the Russian Federation is a necessary element of social policy. Reforming the system of occupational pensions involves reducing the funds of the Pension Fund, for financing pensions by moving to pension insurance, in which the formation of mandatory occupational pensions will be implemented on the principles of cumulative funding. "Sberbank " was one of the most successful projects in the non-state pension fund. The main goal of which is to create a decent life of citizens of retirement age. The undertaken research can be continued due to comparison of programs of pension insurance of citizens in various pension funds.
