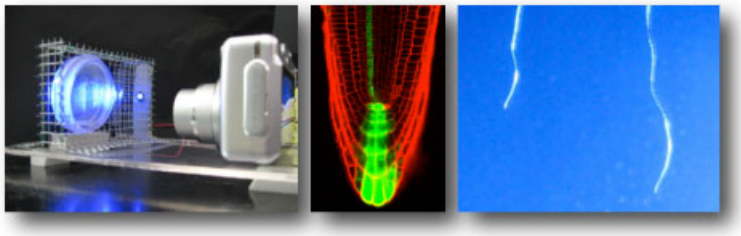
Auxin Transport During Gravitropism and Phototropism using a GFP-based Biosensor

Full Text Search: Go

Advanced Search



Plants are extremely sensitive to their environment, able to detect and respond to such stimuli as gravity, touch, light, moisture, and nutrient gradients. One of the most common outcomes upon sensing a stimulus is for the plant to undergo differential growth either toward or away from the stimulus. Growth responses toward or away from stimuli are known as tropisms. Plant tropisms have been the object of scientific study for over 200 years, with each successive generation of researcher applying current state-of-the-art technologies and approaches to further our understanding of the mechanisms responsible for growth regulation. Research on tropisms provides a point of integration today among the fields of cell biology, genetics, molecular biology, biophysics, biochemistry, and physiology.

Constantly evolve

The Red Queen Principle

"Well, in our country," said Alice, still panting a little, "you'd generally get to somewhere else — if you run very fast for a long time, as we've been doing."

"A slow sort of country!" said the Queen. "Now, here, you see, it takes all the running you can do, to keep in the same place. If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least twice as fast as that!"

DRC Awarded NEH Grant to Build Creative Humanities Scholarship Tools OhioLINK's award-winning Digital Resource Commons (DRC) will soon add new tools to encourage creative scholarship within the state's historical collections, thanks to a $50,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The funds will be used to host three "design and build" workshops, each bringing together humanities researchers, librarians and software developers to create applications that will make it easier to combine historical collections in new ways.

Liaison Stephen X. Flynn (College of Wooster) has been named a Library Journal Mover and Shaker for 2012! More information here.

With the launch of the Digital Resource Commons, OhioLINK recognizes the importance of increasing cooperation in the creation and sharing of digital collections. The Digital Resource Management Committee facilitates that cooperation by developing a community of digitization practitioners to share expertise and resources. Membership is weighted towards library staff with hands-on digitization experience. For more information, see the Scope and Organization of the DRMC.
