ABSTRACT: Military training often results in environmental degradation that has negative impacts on future training missions. The U.S. Army Construction Engineering Research Laboratory (CERL) conceptualized the Army's Integrated Training Area Management (ITAM) program in response to the concerns expressed by military land managers and trainers over the declining condition of training and testing lands. ITAM has evolved to include land condition and trend analysis (LCTA), environmental awareness (EA), training requirements integration (TRI), and land rehabilitation and maintenance (LRAM). The need for LRAM has increased dramatically over the past decade. Among the many difficulties faced in planning and implementing a land rehabilitation project is procurement of appropriate plant materials for revegetation of damaged lands. To satisfy government procurement requirements and ensure a fair and reasonable price for materials, it is usually necessary to identify and solicit bids from multiple vendors. Moreover, there is an increasing emphasis on the use of locally endemic or adapted plant species. These factors increase the demand to identify multiple commercial sources of regional or local sources of plant materials. This research compiled a comprehensive, current list of plant material vendors, including vendors of trees, shrubs, grasses, wild-flowers, and wetland plants.

Preface

The work was performed by the Ecological Processes Branch (CN-N) of the Installations Division (CN), Construction Engineering Research Laboratory (CERL). The CERL Principal Investigator was Heidi Howard. The technical editor was William J. Wolfe, Information Technology Laboratory. Stephen E. Hodapp is Chief, CEERD-CN-N, and Dr. John T. Bandy is Chief, CEERD-CN. The associated Technical Director was Dr. William D. Severinghaus, CEERD-CV-T. The Director of CERL is Dr. Alan W. Moore.

CERL is an element of the U.S. Army Engineer Research and Development Center (ERDC), U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The Commander and Executive Director of ERDC is COL James R. Rowan, and the Director of ERDC is Dr. James R. Houston.

1 Introduction

Background

War, by its very nature, is destructive to the environment. It follows logically that training for war is also destructive to the environment. Environmental ills associated with heavy training include soil compaction, soil erosion, siltation of waterways and wetlands, increased threat of flooding, loss of wildlife habitat, declining biodiversity, and invasion by noxious weeds. Such environmental degradation has a negative impact on the training mission as well. Tactical concealment resources are lost. Realism of the natural environment is diminished. Heavily eroded areas become dangerous or impassable with tactical vehicles. Moreover, public outcry over the condition of military training lands jeopardizes the image of the Armed Forces as a capable steward of the land.

The U.S. Army Construction Engineering Research Laboratory (CERL) conceptualized the Army's Integrated Training Area Management (ITAM) program in response to the concerns expressed by military land managers and trainers over the declining condition of training and testing lands. ITAM has evolved to include land condition and trend analysis (LCTA), environmental awareness (EA), training requirements integration (TRI), and land rehabilitation and maintenance (LRAM).

The need for and the interest in LRAM have increased dramatically over the past decade. Among the many difficulties faced in planning and implementing a land rehabilitation project is procurement of appropriate plant materials for revegetation of damaged lands. To satisfy government procurement requirements and to ensure a fair and reasonable price for materials, it is usually necessary to identify and solicit bids from multiple vendors. Moreover, there is an increasing emphasis on the use of locally endemic or adapted plant species. These factors have increased the demand to identify multiple commercial sources of regional or local sources of plant materials. This work was undertaken to fill the need for a comprehensive, current listing of plant material vendors.

Objective

The objective of this research was to create a comprehensive and up-to-date list of plant material vendors. The list includes vendors of trees, shrubs, grasses, wildflowers, and wetland plants.

Approach

1. Researchers began this work by purchasing a vendor list from a company that specializes in extracting and compiling business information from telephone directories.
2. Web-searches on the key phrase “seeds and bulbs retail” identified approximately 3650 businesses across the United States.
3. These lists were supplemented with information from a number of published sources (listed in the “Bibliography” section of this report).
4. Researchers called each listed business to verify that it was currently still active, and also to eliminate those business that sell only crop seed.
5. The resulting list was cross-referenced with the PMSource plant vendor database maintained by the Soil Conservation Service. Duplicate names were removed. New names added from the PMSource were called to verify that they were still in business.

Scope

Users of this list of sources should be aware that not all vendors will carry all species. For any given species, it may be necessary to contact a large number of potential vendors. In addition, the availability and price of many species tend to vary seasonally and annually based on growing conditions and supply and demand.

3 Conclusion and Recommendation

Conclusion

This research has created a comprehensive, up-to-date listing of plant material vendors. The list includes vendors of trees, shrubs, grasses, wild-flowers, and wetland plants.

Recommendation

Plant material vendors, like all seasonal, agricultural businesses, are subject to changes in weather and market shifts. It is reasonable to assume a number of the businesses listed here will leave the market, and many new businesses will take their places. It is recommended that this listing be updated and verified annually, and that current listings be made available via the World-Wide Web.

14. ABSTRACT Military training often results in environmental degradation that has negative impacts on future training missions. The U.S. Army Construction Engineering Research Laboratory (CERL) conceptualized the Army's Integrated Training Area Management (ITAM) program in response to the concerns expressed by military land managers and trainers over the declining condition of training and testing lands. ITAM has evolved to include land condition and trend analysis (LCTA), environmental awareness (EA), training requirements integration (TRI), and land rehabilitation and maintenance (LRAM). The need for LRAM has increased dramatically over the past decade. Among the many difficult-ties faced in planning and implementing a land rehabilitation project is procurement of appropriate plant materials for revegetation of damaged lands. To satisfy government procurement requirements and ensure a fair and reasonable price for materials, it is usually necessary to identify and solicit bids from multiple vendors. Moreover, there is an increasing emphasis on the use of locally endemic or adapted plant species. These factors increase the demand to identify multiple commercial sources of regional or local sources of plant materials. This research compiled a comprehensive, current list of plant material vendors, including vendors of trees, shrubs, grasses, wild-flowers, and wetland plants.
