ABSTRACT

This research aims to explore and examine the discipline of 'scientific exegeses' by providing a critical study of one of the first major works in that field, the al-Jawāhir fī Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-Karīm of Ṭanṭāwī Jawharī (1862-1940) a contemporary prominent Muslim theologian and exegete of Egypt.

Since the aim of this thesis is critically examine and explore the al-Jawāhir fī Tafsīr al-Qur'ān al-Karīm as a founding document of scientific exegesis in contemporary Muslims world, historical development of scientific exegesis from the traditionalists up to contemporary scholars' arguments, rational and textual, are examined to provide context for the research. Comparative discursive analysis method is used in order to differentiate between the traditionalists and modern time with regard to their methodology in dealing with the scientific exegesis.

Ṭanṭāwī Jawharī is chosen due to his seminal contributions in pioneering some important intellectuals in the study of scientific exegesis. Besides providing a biographical sketch of Ṭanṭāwī Jawharī, this research examines some of the significant matters and assesses the methodology of Ṭanṭāwī in dealing with his magnum opus incorporated into discussions of the al-Jawāhir in the eyes of other prominent scholars.

This research concludes that classifying the al-Jawāhir as an encyclopedic scientific exegesis is fairly justified and that it significantly contributed to the rich of Islamic scientific exegesis in contemporary Muslims world. Ṭanṭāwī and the al-Jawāhir's main contribution, as suggested by this study, is in the integration of two branches of knowledge; the Qur'ān and science. In this, the al-Jawāhir represents a trend parallel to a new school of thought, the pioneers of which were philosophers who attempted to reconcile philosophy and religion.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First of all, praise and gratitude be to Allāh without whose help and success this work could not have been accomplished.

It is also a pleasant duty for me to recognize and thank many people for their help and contribution leading to the completion of this study. First and foremost, I take great pleasure in expressing my deepest and utmost appreciation to my supervisor, Dr. Colin Turner, to whom I owe a special debt of gratitude for his skilful supervision, guidance, encouragement, comments, criticism and support throughout the process of completing my research in Durham University.

Then I wish to express many thanks to members of my family, in particular my father, Haji Mohd Noor bin Adam, and my mother, Hajah Chik Tom bt Mohd Som, for their love and care, their sacrifice and endurance, as well as their unstinting encouragement to pursue my dreams in every single way – morally and spiritually. Without their prayers and love, this work will never become reality. I would like to offer as well my indebtedness to my beloved wife, Asmilyia Mohd Mokhtar, and my two little princesses, Nafisah Humaira' and Norkhadijah Alisya, as well as my little prince, Akmal Syamil, all of you have been my inspirations and thank you for your understanding when unable to enjoy the attention you fully deserved.

I would also like to express my thanks to all my fellow Malaysians, and my colleagues in the School of Government and International Affairs, Durham University. Special appreciation to Brother Ibrahim Imseilekh, and Brother Hesham Shernanna from Libya, and Brother Amin Shanqiti from Saudi Arabia, provided me great help and a joyful experience in the UK. Last but not least I would also like to thank all my dear friends, brothers and sisters in Durham, Ustaz Jailani and kak Shidah, kak Amy and Brother Asyraf, Stephen Seymour and family, Brother Amirudin and kak Azizah, Brother Nasorudin and kak Zarina, Haji Rosli and Hjh Mas, Brother Zul and kak Wan, Brother Shah and kak Liza, for their sincere friendship and invaluable support and contribution.

I am also grateful to the Public Service Department of the Malaysian Government and to the National University of Malaysia for providing me with a scholarship and study leave, which has enabled me to undertake this research successfully. Finally, I would like to thank the Faculty of Islamic Studies, all faculty members, the department of Theology and Philosophy and its staff's members, Puan Normah Adam (Registrar's Office), Puan Zaidah (Bursar's Office) and Puan Khatijah Sabtu (Department of Theology and Philosophy) for their endless assistance and support throughout my study.
