Publishing Philosophy

- Faculty publications that have commercial value or market value
 - *Published by University Press or other publishers
- 2. Faculty or student research or manuscript with little commercial market
 - *Publish through the Institutional Repository. More about that later.
- 3. The gray world between the extremes
 - *Work with the Press to create a publishing model that includes peer review and scholarly vetting

Library Services

 Library provides campus wide access to a number of publishing options, database software, and search engines that will bring a coordinated approach to providing access to scholarly work of our faculty and students.

Publishing Options

- 1. Digital publishing in the Humanities
- 2. Center for Digital Research in the Humanities
 - Creating digital publications
 - Creating tools for text analysis

Publishing Images

ContentDM databases for images and video

- Architecture and Art Slides
- Campus Museums
- Video Archive for Nebraska Educational Television

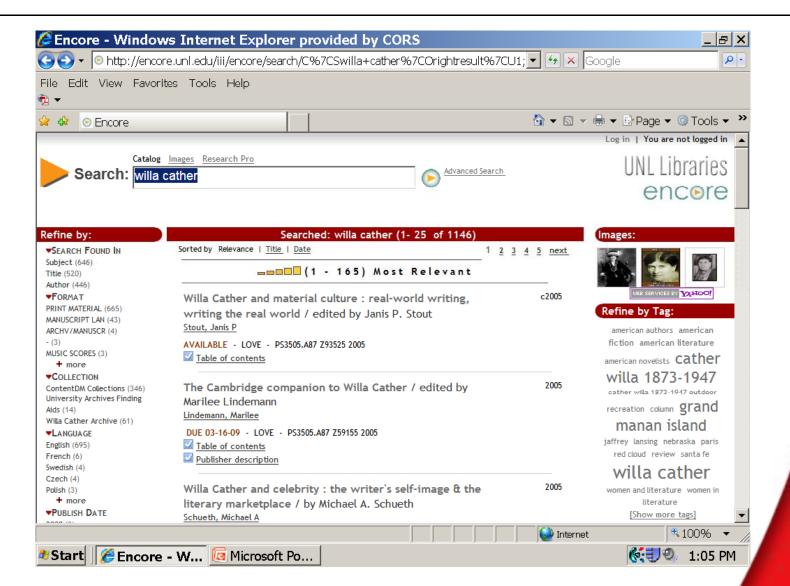

Encore Search Engine

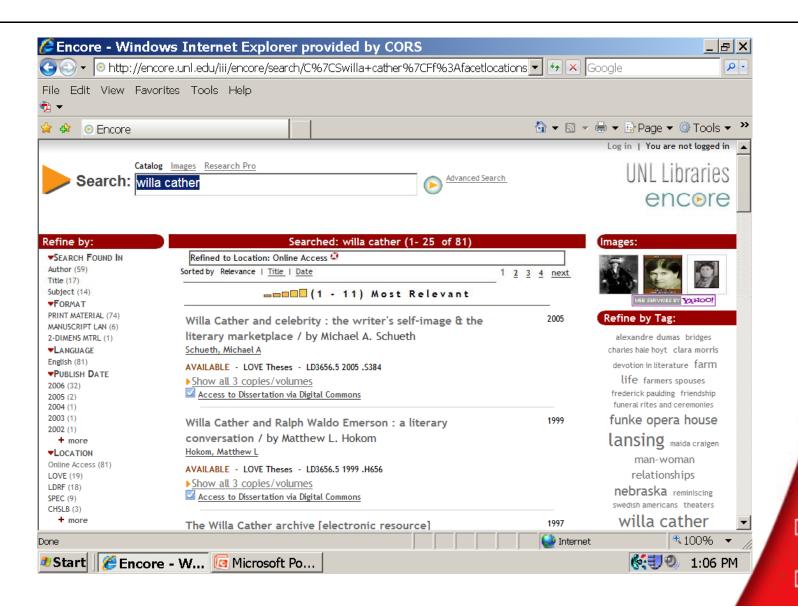

Brings different databases together

Harvesting Dublin Core, TEI, and EAD systems into the MARC catalog

Raising the visibility of diverse collections

 And now, the Institutional Repository, Digital Commons, and the publishing support available to our campus

Permission-ing

- Most faculty are confused and put off by the patchwork variety of publisher's policies, prohibitions, and stipulations.
- Many simply ignore their contracts and post their articles regardless of the publisher's policy.
- By taking on and centralizing this, we achieve better and more consistent compliance.

Hunting and Gathering

- Finding files that are eligible for the repository is a learned skill; knowing the publishers' policies is an advantage and a hedge against wasting time on unpostable articles.
- We often find the articles first, and then seek out the author. This works more than 90% of the time.
- Obviously, a vita helps, but it's not required (and not always accurate).

American Indian treaties in the Courts of Claims: A guide to treaty citations from opinions of the United States Courts of Claims

Abstract

Since 1855, the federal Courts of Claims have provided relief for citizens in cases against the United States. President Abraham Lincoln, in his first annual message in 1861, declared his support for such a process: "It is as much the duty of government to render prompt justice against itself, in favor of citizens, as it is to administer the same between private individuals" [Message of the President, (1862), Appendix to The Congressional Globe, 37th Congress, 2d session, 3 December 1861, p. 21.

Among the Courts' cases, 240 of 375 recognized American Indian treaties have been cited 992 times in 342 opinions between the years 1884 and 2004. The reliance upon so many of these instruments — more than the number referenced before the United States Supreme Court — demonstrates their importance within the federal courts.

Self-archiving authors sometimes fail to include:

- abstract
- original publication citation
- co-authors
- date
- copyright information

By taking on this work, we ensure greater consistency and usability.

Uploading & Posting (= Deposit)

- Although self-archiving is "so simple even a child can do it,"--sometimes a child is not available.
- The first time takes about 10-15 minutes; the second time about 5; the fifth time about 3.
- The learning curve is short, but can be daunting for the electronically-challenged and impatient faculty member.
- Our undergraduate work-study student deposits 20 to 30 files per hour.

Usage Reporting

- We are a "Digital Commons" repository, so the Bepress system automatically generates monthly downloads reports & sends them by email to every author of record.
- I cannot overestimate the power of that message: "Your article was downloaded X times"--independent of the value of X.
- If we can get someone participating, this feature really gets them looking for more stuff to archive.

Promoting

To enhance dissemination (i.e., increase usage), we solicit or place links from such sites as

- Wikipedia
- Online Books Page
- WorldCat
- subject or discipline-based websites

We also actively solicit & publish original materials

- Among our most popular content
- In some cases, we have developed an on-demand printed version for sale by 3rd party

Open-Access Dissertations

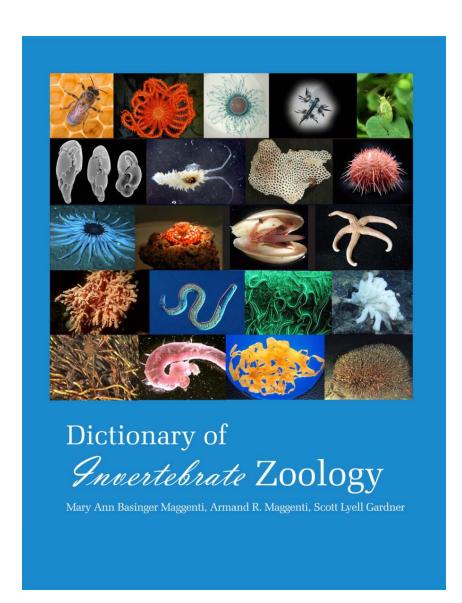

- Downloaded 60× more than restricted payaccess versions.
- Currently gathering only about 20% of new dissertations

CHAPTER 1

The Hopi Nation in 1980

Abbott Sekaquaptewa

"It is a time to recall and to revitalize the good things of Hopi life and to celebrate Hopism."

The Hopi Tricentennial Year is probably one of the most significant and important events in contemporary Hopi life because it has relevance to every facet of Hopi life and will hopefully retain that relevance in the future. It is a time to recall and to revitalize the good things of Hopi life and to celebrate Hopism.

The Hopi people have retained their cultural life to perhaps a greater degree than most Indian peoples in the United States today. Customary practices which govern the pattern of life from birth to death for most Hopi are still carried out to a large extent.

The Hopi mesas are located in northeastern Arizona in the plateau country where the Hopi clans began gathering a millennium ago. The clans were not strangers to the land at that time, for many had passed through this country during the migration period after the arrival from the other world. This was a predestined place, a chosen place, where they were to come together and settle while awaiting the return of the white brother. Presently there are approximately 9,000 Hopi living on the reservation established in 1882. The original tract of land set aside for the use and occupancy of the Hopis comprised 2,500,000 acres. Due to encroachment by other Indians and the failure of the federal government to protect the land rights of the tribe, it has been reduced today to 1,500,000 acres, two-thirds of which is still occupied by

Originally published Indiana University Press 1983; electronic edition 2008 3,549 full-text downloads since February 2008

Staffing

- 1 full-time manager (me)
- 1 half-time librarian (since Sept. '08)
- 3 work-study students working 10 hours/week, each

Benefits

- Increased faculty participation more than 500 authors & centers
- faster rate of content recruitment adding ~ 7,000 documents annually
- greater degree of usage average 120,000 downloads/month

Benefits (2)

- Most recruiting is now by word-of-mouth recommendation among the faculty: the
 - a) easiest, and
 - b) most effective method
- The library is where faculty come first for their electronic publishing needs.
