

Efficient securing of iris image template by using grayscale level incremented/decremented method

Abstract

The proposed techniques in the paper is based on grayscale level incremented/decremented method. In this paper we used CASIA dataset for experimentation. Efficient results were achieved with respect to image hiding validated by entropy. Graphical results are also shown at the end to visualize our results.