

I wake up, I'm black. I look in the mirror I'm black. I see other people see me, what they see is black. Being black is part of my life. I cannot escape it, nor do I try to. It's who I am.