Nixon Gets Five-Day Delay Deadline Extended for Subpoena Answer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Tuesday won a five-day delay — until next Tuesday — in the deadline for responding to the House Judiciary Committee's subpoena for tapes and documents on 42 Watergate-related conversations for its impeachment inquiry.

At the same time, the White House said the President's lawyers had received a new committee request for additional materials, and that it was "more broad in scope" than the ITT and milk fund cases suggested in previously published reports.

Both the White House and House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes indicated Nixon sought the extension because of trouble transcribing the subpoenaed tapes in time to meet the committee original deadline of 9 a.m. CDT Thursday.

ALTHOUGH NEITHER side specified how approval was granted, it was believed that Rep. Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., the committee chairman, informally consented to Nixon's request for a delay, subject to a vote by his panel when it meets Thursday morning at the hour of the subpoena deadline.

The White House announcement of the five-day delay caught most other committee members by surprise, and their immediate reaction was critical of Nixon. But the committee seemed to have little choice but to go along with what Rodino termed "a reasonable request."

Deputy White House Press Secretary

Gerald L. Warren, indicating Nixon did not intend to furnish the committee with the actual tapes it had subpoenaed, said the staff had been hard at work "compiling" materials but had found the task "time consuming."

BOTH COMMENTS tended to reinforce persistent speculation that Nixon would not supply everything the committee had subpoenaed but instead would submit edited transcripts of what he regarded as pertinent conversations.

Warren said Nixon's response to the subpoena would be "sufficient, comprehensive and complete," in keeping with the White House policy "to deal responsibly with the House Judiciary Committee."

He pictured the President as preoccupied with other problems, including inflation, tornado damage in the South and Midwest and foreign issues. "The President has determined he would like some extra time to review the response in its entirety," Warren said.

Chapter Honors Law Dean Keeton As Humanitarian

By ANNE COLLINS
Texan Staff Writer

Dean W. Page Keeton of the University School of Law received the National Brotherhood and Humanitarian Award of the Austin chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews (NCCJ) Tuesday.

The award was presented by former Gov. John B. Connally, onetime law student of Keeton's, at a ceremony attended by leaders of the state and the community. Edward Clark, former ambassador to Australia under President Johnson, was chairman of the dinner held at the Caravan Club.

The NCCJ is an interfaith organization dedicated to gaining greater understanding among peoples of all creeds and origins.

THE AWARD READS in part ... "For distinguished service in the fields of law, justice, education, human rights, and for promoting the cause of Brotherhood of Man under the Fatherhood of God."

Keeton, who has twice received honors for outstanding teaching, retires this year after 25 years as law school dean. He is not, however, retiring from teaching. He will spend the fall semester at St. Mary's University School of Law in San Antonio; spring semester will find him a visiting fellow at Emmanuel College at Cambridge University in England, where another famous Texas-ex, J. Frank Dobie, once occupied the same position.

Keeton's outstanding career includes service under President Johnson as a member of his Labor-Management Policy Committee in 1966 and a term as chairman of the Association of American Law Schools.

Connally told the large gathering he had known Keeton 39 years "although the dean has only known me for 25. I was in the gray middle at law school where I attracted no particular attention."

HE CITED the profound changes that have taken place in the United States and the world since 1949 when Keeton became dean, changes which produced strife and upheaval and problems in human relations.

"Through all this period Dean Keeton has used his talents with great aplomb and fierce determination to do what he believed right in the pursuit of education," Connally said.

"Although much harassed from all sides, he was always reasonable and upheld his principles and protected the individual," Connally remarked. "He is a great teacher who has dealt with candor and understanding with students; they could always talk to him," he added.

The former governor gave Keeton credit "more than any other person for the new Texas penal code."

IN PRAISE OF Mrs. Madge Keeton, he said that while men get the plaudits the real strength, stability and tolerance emanate from the distaff side.

Keeton received the award to a standing ovation. "Each human has a deep longing to believe he is useful," Keeton said, and the more useful one feels the happier he becomes.

The dean drew a laugh when he said "it is not for those who receive honors to question the wisdom of those who give them."

"EVER SINCE Anne Hutchinson was banished for her views, we have been striving for religious tolerance," Keeton said. "We may not be our brother's keepers but we are our brother's brothers, and we need to show some concern for him," he added.

In his closing remarks, Keeton said he hopes not to disappoint those who have been responsible for the great honor he received.

He also took honors for the evening's best joke when he said, "around the law school they say old deans don't die — they just lose their faculties."

Former Ambassador Clark, in remarks before the banquet, said he has known Keeton since he (Clark) was an assistant attorney general.

"HE HAS BROUGHT the law school from a good school to a great school," Clark said. "It was not rated in the first 20 when he became dean, but I can say without fear of contradiction that the University law school is rated as fifth or sixth best in the United States now," he added.

Clark cited three great qualities possessed by Keeton: "He is the most popular teacher at the law school, he is a great writer and he has great executive and administrative abilities."

"He brought liberality, understanding and dignity to the law school for all people," Clark said.

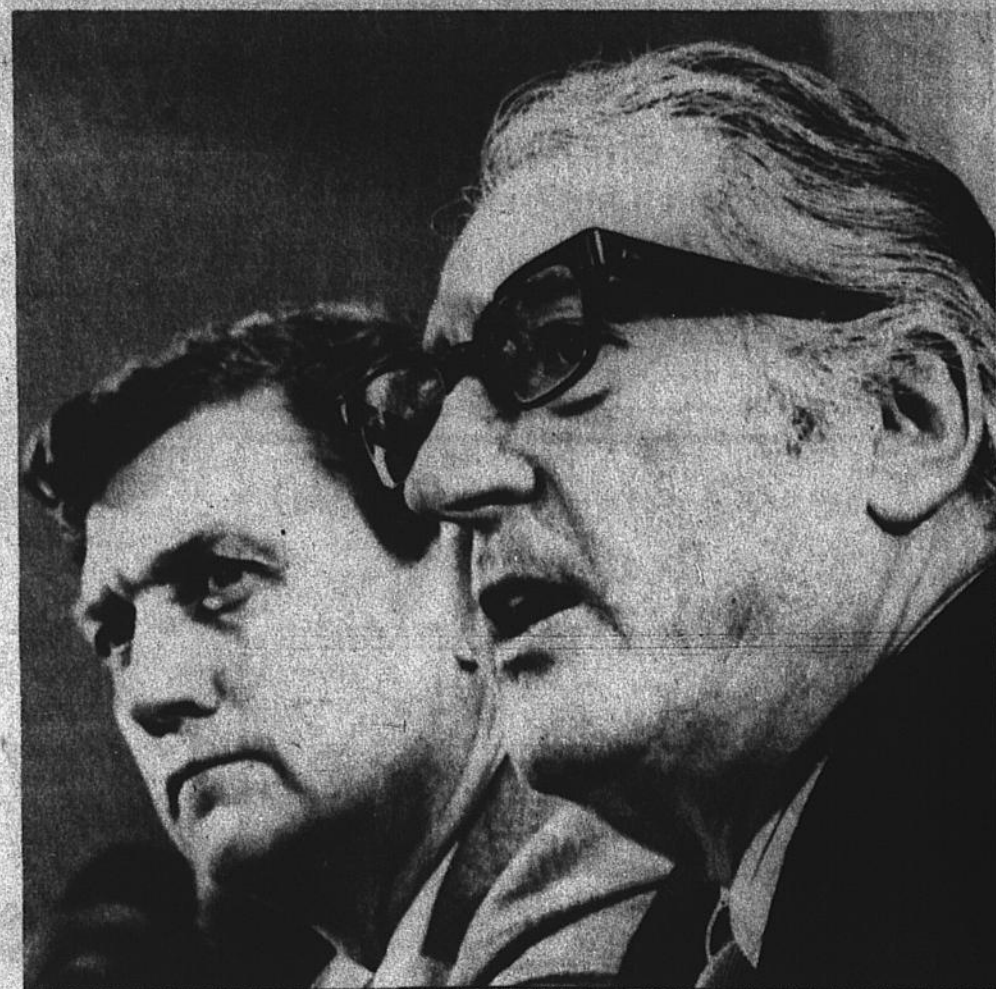

Keeton expressed disappointment in response to a question about the U.S. Supreme Court's 5-4 vote against ruling on a white students claim that the University of Washington's minority admission to law school program discriminated against him.

"I'M A LITTLE disappointed they did not rule," he said. "The issue needed defining whether a state law school may make racial distinctions. One of the great needs of society is for more minority representation. Numbers of students should be taken from ethnic minorities, the dean added.

Connally had earlier declined a press conference "because it would be patently unfair to inject anything else into this program. Besides I don't have anything to say that I haven't already said before," he remarked.

He did, however, answer a question on whether he would like to be a member of the Board of Regents.

"I am interested in the University of Texas and would be willing to serve the University in any way I could and would be happy to be a member of the Board of Regents," he answered.

San Antonio Plans Second Nuclear Plant

By BOBBIE CRISWELL
Texan Staff Writer

Austin voters may be in for another nuclear power plant bond election, San Antonio City Public Service (CPS) Director J.T. Deely indicates.

CPS Monday tentatively agreed to participate and become project manager of a second nuclear plant to be built between San Antonio and Austin.

DEELY SAID Tuesday the City of Austin, Houston Lighting and Power Co., Central Power and Light of Corpus Christi and possibly the Lower Colorado River Authority had indicated they will join in the plant project.

Although the other South Texas Project members, which have already agreed on a nuclear plant to be built in the Baytown area, have not signed an official agreement on the second project, Deely said they would probably do so in the future.

The CPA manager said he expects the first unit of the second plant to be completed by 1983 and the second unit by 1985. The plant would be comparable in size to the Baytown plant which is expected to be completed by 1980.

AUSTIN CITY Councilman Jeff Friedman, the only councilman available for comment Tuesday night, was unfamiliar with the proposed second power plant. He said "the city may join in the feasibility of studying it, but unlike San Antonio, it will be up to the Austin voters to decide on it."

"After seeing the coal plants Tuesday, I would tend to be against it, although I wouldn't mind studying the proposal."

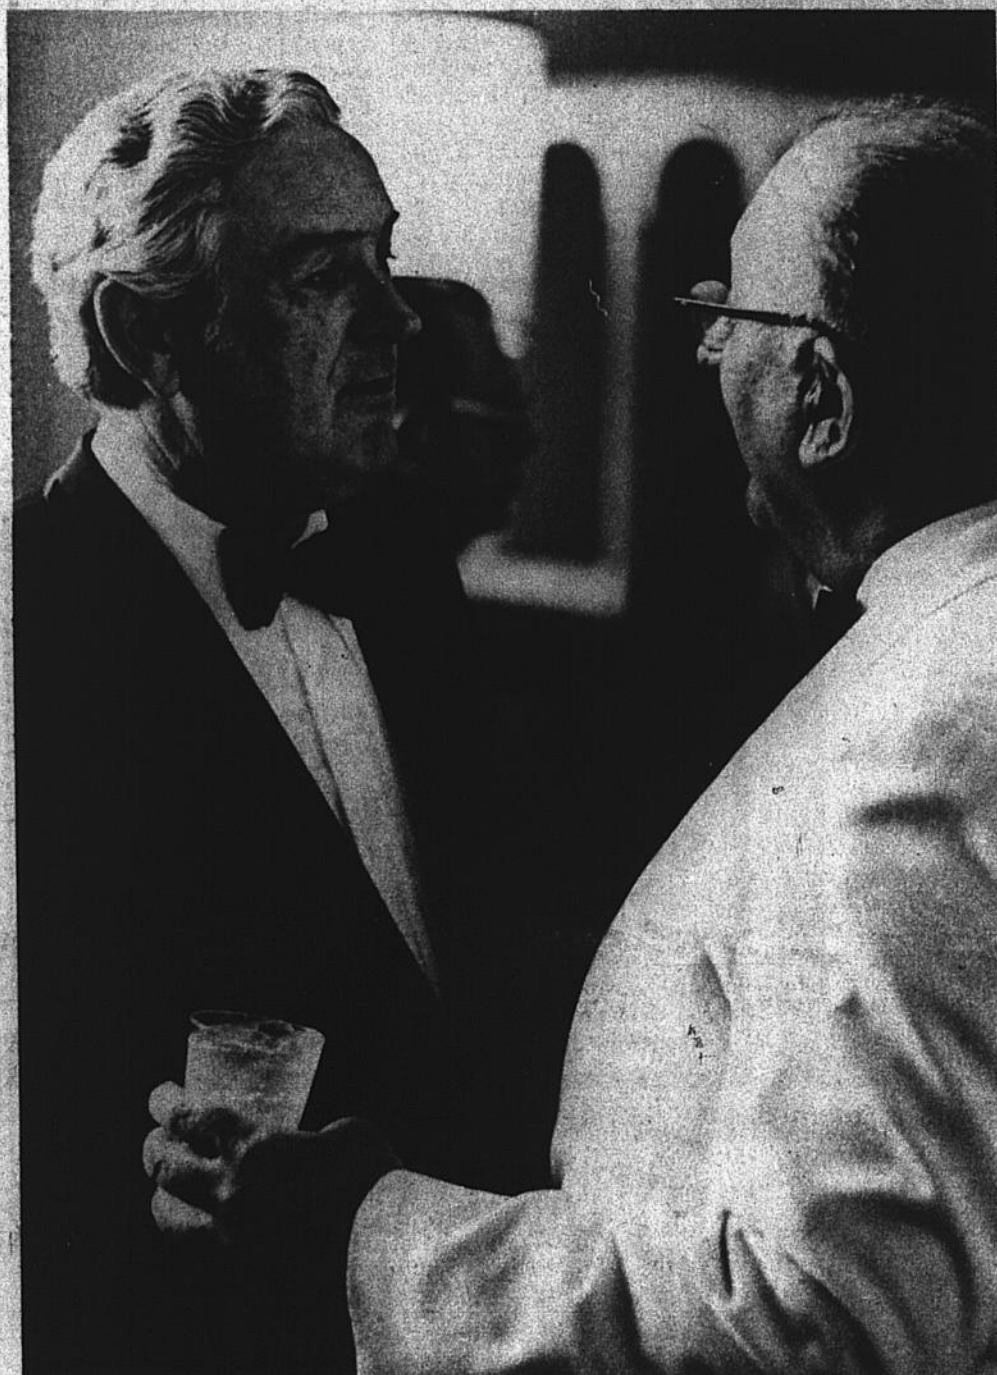

Friedman said he would really like to see Austin, with perhaps the aid of state and federal funds, research the feasibility of solar and geothermal forms of energy.

IN CONTRAST to Friedman's attitude, Deely felt nuclear power was the only real answer.

"It's an open and shut case. When you talk about solar and geothermal energy, you're talking in terms of 20 and 30 years from now," Deely said.

Even if Austin votes down the second power plant Deely said it probably still will be located somewhere between Austin and San Antonio because the location of the plant is determined by the availability of cooling water.

The San Antonian could not give an estimate of the approximate cost of the second power plant to Austinites, if a bond issue should pass because it depends on the percentage of energy Austin would be using from the plant.

Farenthold To Speak; Briscoe Suit Delayed

Gubernatorial candidate Frances Farenthold will address the campus at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Gregory Gym in an appearance sponsored by Student Action Committee and the UT Young Democrats.

But the scheduled Wednesday hearing of Mrs. Farenthold's suit against Gov. Dolph Briscoe was postponed Tuesday until after the May 4 Democratic primary, at the request of Raymond Needham, her Houston attorney.

Mrs. Farenthold's suit revolves around Briscoe's alleged failure to name a campaign manager before accepting $500,000 in campaign contributions gathered at an Oct. 30, 1973, fund-raising dinner.

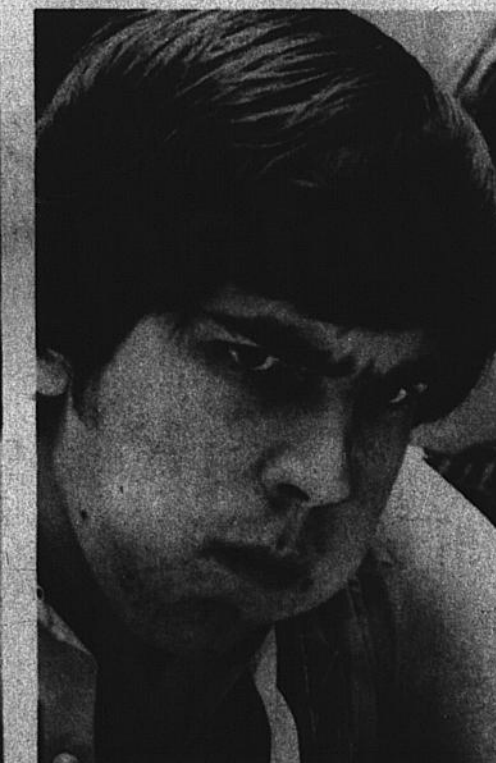

Judge Herman Jones of 53rd District Court said the case was postponed because Needham had a previous commitment and could not attend the session. Jones said the case would have been postponed because Jess Hay, chairman of the dinner and co-defendant, had asked that the trial be transferred to Dallas.

Briscoe's attorney claims that Hay's appointment as manager of the dinner Oct. 19 and Joe Kilgore's appointment as campaign manager Oct. 30 satisfies the law so far as contributions made at the dinner are concerned.

Because of the lawsuit, Briscoe has put the dinner proceeds in escrow and is personally financing his re-election campaign.

Jones said Tuesday the hearing for the $2.5 million suit may be held May 8.

If Aunt Jemima Could Only See Her Children Now

A 15-minute pancake eating contest sponsored by the Jester Student Food Service Committee Tuesday night attracted 36 gorging contestants. Each person began with a plate of 10 pancakes which were replaced by runners every time emptied. The contest was divided into men's and women's divisions. Dennis "The Menace" Vacula took the men's after consuming 22, and Helen "Slim Pickens" McGlynn captured the women's with a bloating 14.5. Trophies and pancakes were supplied by Campbell's Soup Company. Although not winner, David "Uncle Van" Woodward, pictured, put out an outstanding effort by pushing down 20 pancakes.

Councilmen Tour Coal Plant

By JEFF SOUTH

If what they saw is what they'll get, city councilmen agreed Tuesday that one local coal-fired electric power plant may be enough.

After Monday's tour of the Navajo Generating Station, a coal-burning facility near Page, Ariz., Austin officials' reactions ranged from "disappointing" to "obnoxious." "I don't like it at all," Mayor Roy Butler said of the Arizona power plant, located on a stretch of desert on the Navajo Indian reservation.

"AWFUL AND unsightly," Councilman Berl Handcox quipped. "This was the very latest, most sophisticated equipment. Coal burning, at best, leaves much to be desired."

While other council members joined in the criticism, none demanded that Austin withdraw from construction of a proposed coal-fired power station near LaGrange.

"The trip to Arizona won't affect the city's decision to build the LaGrange project," Handcox said.

Butler and Councilman Lowell Lebermann agreed, predicting Austin will need additional generating facilities two years before the completion of the South Texas Nuclear Project in 1982.

THE LaGRANGE project, a joint effort of the City of Austin and the Lower Colorado River Authority, is the only way to go," Lebermann said, because it can be in operation by 1979.

Lebermann said he would go along with a coal-fueled facility "for this particular plant."

City officials' criticism of the Navajo facility focused on a mountainous pile of crushed coal that spurted black clouds into each gust of wind.

The mountain, a 45-day, 1/4-million-ton coal supply covering a rectangle the size of two football fields, feeds three burners at the plant.

Although electrostatic precipitators filter 99.8 percent of the particulates rising through the smoke stacks, eliminating emissions, the disposal of furnace ash and fly ash poses a nuisance, Councilman Jeff Friedman said.

FRIEDMAN SAID the Navajo facility will have "no effect on whether Austin's coal plant will be built. It will, however, have a definite effect on the environmental considerations at the LaGrange site, and on the type of power we will turn to in the future."

TEAC The leader. Always has been.

159,090 professionals and audiophiles chose the TEAC 1200 series over every other tape deck. For one reason: reliability.

TEAC's fabled 3-motor/3-head tape transport system set a new standard for the industry—in reliability. And in performance. Now, TEAC has topped the 1200 series with the new 2300S. They took that 3-motor/3-head transport and added touch-button control which lets you shift instantly from fast forward to fast rewind—and record from pause or directly from playback.

The TEAC 2300S has total remote capability, and bias and EQ switches for instant electronic adjustment to the new high energy tapes. It's a deck you can use, and use hard! And forget about problems.

So come in and check out the 2300S. Then try to settle for anything less than TEAC leadership.

HEW Unable To Determine Impact of New Action Plan

By RICHARD FLY Texan Staff Writer

Implementation of the University's Affirmative Action Plan at the Balcones Research Center has "just barely started," making it too early for Department of Health, Education and Welfare investigators to judge its impact, the center's director said Tuesday.

"We've had no significant change in our personnel picture other than normal turnover," J. Neils Thompson said.

Affirmative action goals to establish more minority and female representation at the University were approved by HEW in October.

"In achieving these goals (under a five-year program) we're bound by budgets, so it's a slow process," Thompson said.

INVESTIGATORS from the Dallas regional HEW office are in their third and final week of study of alleged University discrimination in employment and student recruitment.

In meeting with one investigative team Tuesday, Thompson said he "outlined for them what we have been doing here in trying to achieve the goals we have established for ourselves."

The meeting was beneficial, he said. "In establishing what they really want to accomplish."

MINORITY representation at the research center has always been "pretty good," Thompson said, except in the skilled and supervisory fields. "We're surrounded by industries who can pay more than we can," he continued.

Talented minority researchers are attracted to the higher paying industry jobs.

Student Health Center

Director Dr. Paul Trickett, who also met with investigators Tuesday, said, "One of the major problems in health is that minorities haven't entered the field."

The health center has made efforts to interest minority students in health professions, he said, pointing to a program the center participated in last year.

THE PROGRAM briefly trained minority students in the various services at the health center.

In studying "hiring goals and whether they've been followed," Sandra Williams, chairperson of the investigation, said, the teams have met both with administrators and some employees.

Information is collected through interviews and statistics the University has provided.

"We haven't really had enough time to analyze any of it," Ms. Williams said.

"We've been trying to organize the information into folders for each area of study," she added.

SHE RESTATED that Friday should be the last day of the investigation.

Group Seeks To Equalize Austin Electricity Rates

Uniform electric rates for Austin which would reverse the current policy of lower rates for large volume electricity users was proposed Tuesday by the Citizens for Fair Electric Rates.

Hunter Ellinger, chairman of the organization, said uniform rate would lower the cost of electricity for residential users by an average of 21 percent while increasing the rate of large users by 50 percent.

He also said uniform rate would slow Austin's growth, especially in the area of electrical production which, he said, is doubling every five years.

"Our main findings are that the current rate structure encourages waste of electrical power in various ways and that establishment of a uniform rate for electrical power for all users is advisable from both an economic and environmental standpoint," Ellinger said. There are three major disadvantages to the current rate structure, Ellinger said.

• The waste of electricity is encouraged because of the lower rates for large volume users.

• The current policy encourages small businesses to move into "bills paid" shopping malls, thus competing unfairly with small stores and offices.

• Potential revenue is lost to the city by the low rates that are charged to large electricity users.

This is your key to unprecedented calculating capacity. Only Hewlett-Packard offers it.

It lets you "speak" to your calculator with total consistency, because it lets you load data into a 4-Register Stack. This means: (1) you always enter and process your data the same way, no matter what your problem; (2) you don't have to re-enter data; (3) you can see all intermediate data anytime.

Our HP-45 is one of two pre-programmed scientific pocket-sized computer calculators with this key. That's one reason it's the most powerful pre-programmed pocket-sized scientific computer calculator. Here are three of many others:

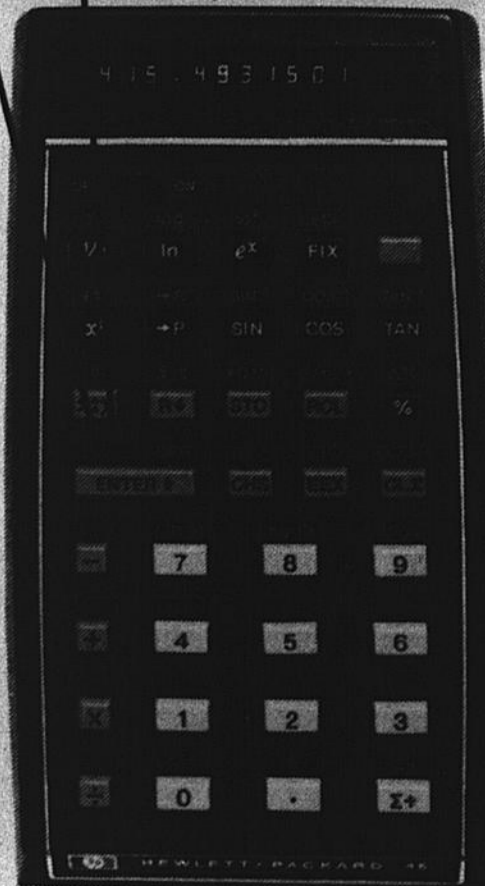

1. It's pre-programmed to handle 44 arithmetic, trigonometric and logarithmic functions and data manipulation operations beyond the basic four (+, -, x, /).

2. It lets you store nine constants in its nine Addressable Memory Registers, and it gives you a "Last X" Register for error correction or multiple operations on the same number.

3. It displays up to 10 significant digits in either fixed-decimal or scientific notation and automatically positions the decimal point throughout its 200-decade range.

Our HP-35 is the other. It handles 22 functions, has one Addressable Memory Register and also displays up to 10 digits in either fixed-decimal or scientific notation. It's the second most powerful pre-programmed pocket-sized scientific computer calculator.

Both of these exceptional instruments are on display now. If you're looking for unprecedented calculating capacity for your money, by all means see and test them.

State Employees Seek 10% Raise bill garland

By JOSE M. FLORES
Texan Staff Writer
Armed with a petition bearing more than 45,000 signatures, the Texas Public Employees Association (TPEA) asked Gov. Dolph Briscoe Tuesday to call a special legislative session to give them a pay increase aimed at bringing their wages up to the national level.

Walter Looney, TPEA president, said because of inflation employees of the state were taking a cut in pay despite the 3.4 percent salary increase already established by the Legislature for this fiscal year.

Pointing out that the Consumer Price Index rose 10 percent from February, 1973, to February, 1974, Looney said the rate of inflation is rising with accelerated speed.

"STATE EMPLOYEES need a 10.2 percent adjustment just to keep pace with the inflation which has occurred during the last year," he said.

Looney estimated an immediate 10.2 percent increase in the state payroll of 70,000 persons for the remainder of the business year, which ends Aug. 31, and a 6.8 percent increase above the 3.4 percent increase already scheduled, would cost a total of $70 million over the next two years.

"According to comptroller's estimates, we know that the money for these increases is there and available," Looney said.

Although Briscoe was out of Austin and unable to comment on the petition personally, a statement issued by his office expressed concern on the issue.

PROMISING to consider the employees' situation, the issued reply acknowledged the 10 percent inflation rate across the country has severely affected people with fixed incomes.

"I am very concerned about this situation and will certainly consider the employees' plight along with the other priority matters in state government," the governor's office statement said.

Dr. Ray Marshall, University professor of economics who conducted a study on the wages of Texas state employees, said, "The income position of Texas state employees has significantly deteriorated since October, 1968, when average earnings of Texas public workers were 97 percent of the average earnings of other state employees in the nation. By October, 1974, the average earnings of Texas employees will be only 84 percent of the national average," Marshall said.

September, 1975 would be required unless something was done immediately.

"To maintain Texas employees' position with the national average in the fiscal year beginning September, 1976, will require an additional 6.8 percent raise," he said.

However, to prevent state employees from lagging behind further increases in the Consumer Price Index during fiscal year 1975-76, an additional raise of 9 percent would be required," he added.

The petition presented by the employees called for classified and hourly salaries of state employees, including nonacademic employees of colleges and universities with provision for an immediate 10.2 percent increase in salary schedules.

Also included in the petition was a request for per diem provision for a minimum daily allowance for travel on state business of $25 per day, a increase in the mileage rate from 12 cents to 20 cents per mile allowed for travel on state business in a privately owned vehicle, and an increase of 6.8 percent over the already provided 3.4 percent salary boost next year.

When HE questioned both women on the management's position on their giving "locals," the undercover agent said Ms. Kuhlman answered "she was the management, and Ms. Taft said the management did not care."

Hall gave similar reports about Both Sexes, describing acts, including oral sodomy, that violate the city code.

According to the ordinance, any act or acts of sexual intercourse within an establishment, or any solicitation for immoral purposes by an employee are grounds for the revocation or suspension of a license, Sessums said.

The City Department of Public Health will hold four more hearings involving Caesar's Retreat, Castillo Del Reys, Cleopatra's Cove and Magic Touch of Venus. A Wednesday hearing has been postponed to a later date.

Next time you pause alongside India's Narbada River, contemplating the Vindhya Mountains to the north, the Satpura Range to the south, resting before continuing your trek to the cities of Barwani and Rajpipla before turning south to the city of Surat on the Gulf of Cambay, you might consider just how the new Texas Constitution, if adopted, could affect your life.

Or you might not. I wouldn't blame you, either way.

The friend across the table, in Texas, chose not to think about it, or anything else "beyond the immediate, visible and ineluctable moment."

There are, after all, only two approaches to that sort of thing," he elaborated. "You can either participate, dedicate your life to the involvement game, or choose not to."

"You mean there are no in-betweens? I inquired rather dispassionately, believing the theory to be a little oversimplified. "Not really. You either orient yourself one way or the other," he said.

Perhaps so, it depends on the definition of "participation." But interest in the state constitution (remember you're alongside the Narbada, pausing), participation, or whatever, seems to run along narrow, partial lines in a sort of twilight where nearby objects are well-defined, but where those in the distance appear fuzzy, if they appear at all. Things nearby are the often mentioned special interests, of which the larger ones have captured most attention during the Constitutional Convention (Permanent University Fund and Highway User Revenue Fund).

However, "in the real world, especially businessmen and the employed, have interests to which they will pay special attention instead of the multi-million-dollar, really rather abstract funds."

Bankers, employers, judges, homeowners, taxpayers, property owners, governors, ex-felons, teachers, city council members, and many, many others have certain provisions, often contained in a single paragraph or section, which they will follow closely during the convention, and probably use as the basis for a yes or no constitution vote.

Though a new constitution could greatly improve the system, eliminate the verbiage and please the theorists, it couldn't stand for a day if it offended too many of those smaller interests.

For those things beyond the immediate, those other fuzzy constitutional issues, just don't interest a great number of people, and textbooks say such things never have.

As for the importance of that: judge your interest.

Parlor Licenses Revoked

The licenses of two Austin massage parlors were revoked Tuesday by Dr. John Sessums, director of the City Health Department, after hearing testimony from sole witness Steve Hall, a police undercover agent.

Edie's of Hollywood, 1010 W. 19th St. and Both Sexes, 2101 Interregional Highway, were found in violation of section 18-6 of the Austin city code.

Although representatives of the massage parlors were given notification of the hearing, no one was present to defend them.

BOTH PARLORS voluntarily surrendered their licenses to the police last week, Sessums said.

In revoking Edie's of Hollywood's license, Sessums made his judgment from Hall's testimony in which he stated he had visited the parlor twice, March 13 and April 12, and at both times received a "local" from parlor employees, Ruth Kuhlman and Kay Taft.

A "local" massage involves hand manipulation of the male genitals and violates the newly-revised city code.

Hall said he paid both women $10 personally for the "locals," rather than pay the receptionist, who usually collects the fees for missions Court granted a 2-cent per gallon increase from 9 to 11 cents, but the rise in gasoline prices was more than expected, Frank said.

"Price of gasoline is expected to go to 60 cents a gallon this year. If the energy czars are correct, it will stop there, but I don't think it will," Frank said, indicating that future increases may be necessary.

Sheriff's Department Gets Gas Allowance Increase

Travis County Commissioners Court granted an increased gasoline allowance from 11 to 13 cents a gallon to the Sheriff's Department Tuesday to compensate partially for the higher costs of operating departmental vehicles.

Sheriff Raymond Frank said the department was losing money because gasoline prices have risen 40 percent since Jan. 1. He had requested an increased allowance of 15 cents a gallon.

"We were very happy to get it (the increase). It's not enough, but it's certainly better than 11 cents," he said. LAST YEAR the Commissioners Court granted a 2-cent per gallon increase from 9 to 11 cents, but the rise in gasoline prices was more than expected, Frank said.

"Price of gasoline is expected to go to 60 cents a gallon this year. If the energy czars are correct, it will stop there, but I don't think it will," Frank said, indicating that future increases may be necessary.

No Clues in Pickle Theft

Investigation by the Austin Police Department into the weekend burglary of U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle's campaign headquarters had turned up no new clues Tuesday.

"The investigation is continuing, and there are no suspects at present," Sgt. Sid Barton of the burglary division said.

The burglary, undetected until Monday, netted $400 to $500 in cash and close to $3,000 in checks taken from a strong-box.

The campaign committee "will not make any speculation concerning the burglary that might interfere with the investigation by the Austin Police Department," John Bender, assistant information director for the campaign, said.

Take the night off

Let us pose a question. If from the myriad lot of Texans you had to choose one person most likely to start reversing the control of our public affairs by the large corporations, whom would you choose? If public as opposed to special interest government is your goal, odds are you would name Sissy Farenthold.

A SECOND QUESTION. Is there a nonstudent journal in the state of Texas sufficiently independent to honestly investigate the state's political and social realities? Our answer is yes, there is one such paper; The Texas Observer. Without the Observer's well researched stories Texans would lack even one major journal not controlled by big money.

As usual with individuals and institutions not on the corporate gravy train, the Sissy Farenthold campaign and The Texas Observer are in dire need of financial support. At two events Wednesday night the University community could provide some of that help.

AT 8 P.M. IN GREGORY GYM local folk artist Bobby Bridger and the band Homesing will kick off a Farenthold event; Sissy will deliver her thoughts on the state of the University at 8:30 p.m. Admission is free, but the Farenthold campaign needs as much money as all of us can spare.

The Observer is also having a rough go of it financially. To mitigate their predicament the editors are putting on a special benefit showing of Jerry Bruck's "I.F. Stone's Weekly," a brilliant new film about one of America's premier journalists. The Texan will have more to say on the Stone film later; suffice it to say it is the most entertaining hour of cinema we've seen in a long time. "I.F. Stone's Weekly" shows at regular prices during the afternoon—proceeds go to the Observer—and runs at a $5 benefit tag at 8, 9 and 10 p.m. If you believe in Sissy Farenthold and the investigative traditions of The Texas Observer, Wednesday night's events just shouldn't be missed.

Dollar censorship

Texans need no longer feel politically backward. For once we seem to be assuming the lead — in safeguarding the civil liberties of students by bankrupting the campus press. The following is reprinted from The New York Times of April 4, 1974:

State Senator John Marchi has introduced a bill which would ban the use of student activities fees for the operation of undergraduate newspapers on the campuses of the state's public colleges and universities. The explanation offered for this prohibition is that it would safeguard the civil liberties of students so that their contributions are not used to subsidize causes with which they differ and which are advocated without regard to their approval or disapproval.

The impact of the Marchi bill would be to cripple, if not eliminate, the student press at the city and state universities. Those who advocate such a course can, of course, point to occasional examples of inexcusably irresponsible or offensive actions by undergraduate editors. But muzzling the campus press by withdrawing fiscal support is hardly a constructive way to inspire faith in civil liberties or to improve the responsibility or the taste of student editors.

Now where could they have gotten that idea? — C.W.

Day care: enroll now

At last, at long last, at long, long last there is to be a University Student Day Care Center. Near campus at the University Presbyterian Church, 2203 San Antonio St., the center will provide low-cost day care service.

THE CENTER IS TO BE a nonprofit, fully licensed, student operated service to an often neglected segment of the University community, the student family. Because of the ready availability of day care services for 3- to 5-year-olds, the center will limit its care to infants of up to 3 years. Tuition is likely to be 50 cents an hour.

The education of student-parents often depends on the availability of affordable day care for their children. The center's board of directors has received funding from Student Government, the Austin Urban Council and several benefits. Their nine months of work now hinges on the registration of adequate numbers of children to warrant spending the $2,000 needed to equip the center. If there is insufficient registration, no center.

ENROLLMENT FORMS are available now in the Student Government office, Union Building 321. They must be returned by 5 p.m. Friday. Friday is the deadline, and if student-parents do not take advantage of the service now, there will be no second chance in September.

Lower power bills

One of the many means by which the city government gives incentives to commercial and business development and encourages the general growth of the city is through the structure of its electric utility rates. Austin is one of the few remaining cities that owns its own electrical generating system. The electric rates are set by the City Council.

For many years, the City Council has maintained electric rates that decrease as the volume of usage increases. The largest users pay the least. Large-volume electricity consumers benefit greatly from this policy, which is why it was originally proposed. Like refund contracts with developers for sewage systems, the regressive electric rate encourages growth.

IN THE 1940s that philosophy was attractive to everyone — seeing as how our natural resources were undepletable then, and we knew progress would raise everyone's standard of living forevermore.

Now that our undepletable resources are vanishing, it is necessary to restructure the systems which encourage greater energy use. A uniform electric rate would help to stabilize energy consumption and also allow large-volume users to pay their fair share of the cost burden.

Citizens for Fair Electric Rates has a table on the West Mall this week to collect signatures to petition the City Council for a uniform electric rate. You can help to change a regressive system by signing that petition, and we urge you to do so.

Thumper loves Flower

In striking contrast to their behavior at Bevo's on Monday, Austin's finest have taken actions which could make Austin the laughingstock of the Southwest. Last Friday instead of heads, they busted a cartoon. A cartoon. Not Marilyn Monroe rolling an apple all over her luscious body. Not Candy Barr doing god-knows-what with god-knows-whom. A cartoon.

THE ANIMATED FEATURE "Eveready" shows various animals engaged in various sexual antics, sometimes a bit crudely, but always cleverly, and certainly not outside the boundaries of cartoon slapstick. There was no violence in the cartoon, unlike most of the dreadful your little sister watches on Saturday mornings.

What's worse is the circumstance of the arrest. Had this been the first showing of the feature, or had the film been less descriptively billed than "The Erotic Film Circus," the timing of the raid on the Vagabond might have been more understandable. But not only had the film been held over into the second week, "Eveready" had also been screened twice previously at the Dobbie. To charges of discrimination Vice Squad Sgt. John Boyd gibbered, "We just didn't know they had the film, or we would have sent someone over there, too." It must have been the deceptive titles: "The First New York Erotic Film Festival" and "The Second New York Erotic Film Festival." Sounds like good clean fun, doesn't it, Sgt. Boyd.

When the guffawing around the state dies down (let's just hope no one sends it in to the National Lampoon), we might just give some thought to reviewing the activities of the vice squad, or at least to hiring a publicity person. Until then, let's just hope they don't look inside an underground comic book.

Brutality at Bevo's bar

By ROBERT B. RHOADES

Just before 10 p.m. Monday, as I approached the corner of 25th and Rio Grande Streets, I saw something very strange — an Austin city police car speeding the wrong way on a one-way street. Consider that for a moment. It is hard to conceive of a crime that could justify such recklessness and disregard for the lives of human beings.

I couldn't help but follow him. What was the crime that brought nearly a dozen police cars to a screaming halt at the corner in front of Bevo's? A scuffle between two persons over a pool game? That's not the worst of it. As several bystanders objected to the treatment the two were receiving during their "arrest," they, too, became involved in the administration of justice. I stood no more than 15 feet from an Austin city policeman while he repeatedly swung his club in loud cracking blows at the knees and groin of one such bystander, as the witness sat with his hands cuffed behind his back in the front seat of a patrol car. One person next to me began to cry and others of us simply stared in shock at the attack we were witnessing.

Serious questions

As I turned to walk home I began asking myself some serious questions. The policeman I saw speeding the wrong way down Rio Grande Street turned out to be one of the last to arrive on the scene. I should also note that it was this same officer who was responsible for the beating of the witness. This is not to imply that he was the only policeman who treated his handcuffed "prisoners" like cattle in a chute. Why with a southbound street only a block away, did he choose to ignore the law? Why, in response to a fight between only two people, did there gather 12 police cars with still others cruising the area? Why were the two involved in the fight not simply separated (even forcibly if necessary), escorted to patrol cars and quickly hauled off? Why did the city policemen instead not only allow, but cause it to become a series of useless and illegal beatings?

Then I ask myself, why was a protester to the injustice viewed as a threat and not as a responsible citizen? Why was he dealt with so viciously? It makes me wonder ... are our policemen trained? What constitutes a qualified police officer? Who is to judge whether they are or are not qualified and responsible? Who are they responsible to?

Fear strikes out

It may seem totally absurd, but why must one be afraid to write an article like this? How do citizens like myself have these questions answered and how can we go about correcting these injustices? And finally, one question which I am no longer asking myself is, why the East Austin community has been calling for an end to overpolicing and police brutality?

(If you were a witness to any portion of this incident and are willing to testify to that effect, please leave your name and telephone number at the Posse Beverage Store on the corner of 24th and Rio Grande Streets.)

Stoned on good media

To the editor:

Good luck holding the line against Frank Erwin and the new punitive fee scheme. The Texan's traditionally stable income source is one of the main reasons that it's an unusually strong and influential student paper. May you always be a well-funded cocklebur in the vulnerable anatomy of the UT administration.

Being poor — like the Texas Observer — is no fun at all. We are in an unusually tight financial crunch right now, and that's the main reason I'm writing this letter. We are having a fund-raiser in Austin, Wednesday, April 24. Thanks to film maker Jerry Bruck and the folks who run Dobbie Screen, the Observer is getting the first day's revenues from "I.F. Stone's Weekly." The afternoon screenings will be at regular Dobbie prices and the evening shows (at 8, 9 and 10) will cost $5 a person.

"I.F. Stone's Weekly" is an exceptionally fine documentary about a journalist who has never been gulled into blindly following a government line. "Every government is run by liars. Nothing they say should be believed," Stone says during the movie. Of the Washington press corps, he says, "You begin to understand there are certain things the public ought not to know."

"Honey," Stone told his wife after he was blacklisted during the Fifties, "I'm going to graduate from a pariah to a character, and then if I last long enough, I'll be regarded as a national institution." Jerry Bruck's film is not about an institution, however but about a delightful eccentric outrageous and very successful man. Y'all come.

Tenuous thesis

To the editor:
In the Firing Line of April 23, a Noel Levy expressed fascination at the "Young Texans for Pickle" endorsement ad. This individual professes to finding it odd that the names "John Cool," "Rick Dope" and "Cundy Knox" were among the 500 or so (not 450) listed, and proceeds from there to the conclusion that the ad was, shall we say, falsified. The implication is that we at "Young Texans for Pickle" have fattened our endorsement advertisement in hopes of duping the student into backing our candidate. This is a tenuous thesis at best.

And, of course, a minimum of research explodes it entirely. The correct spellings of the three names are John Kuhl, Rick Cope and Cundy Knox. The names that appeared in the ad were typographical errors, not a part of a diabolical plot.

Levy also alleged that the Greeks were overrepresented in the ad. This was something of a surprise to me, as I personally supervised the collection of signatures and will vouch for the fact that there is a respectable number obtained from all segments of the University community. Further, Levy's astute observation has turned up "quite a few Young Republicans." Our people do not demand that all signers be Democrats. Perhaps Levy would restrict an individual's right to endorse simply because that individual chooses to associate with a particular organization.

It is unfortunate that there are those who refuse to remain silent when the only alternative is to demonstrate the pettiness of their motives. And as for Levy's last paragraph, he should remember that Bales, whether they be Larry or cotton, are cranked out by machines.

Red, white and blue marches off to Tinian

By ROGER GALE
©1973 Pacific News Service

TINIAN, Micronesia — Tinian, the small island in Micronesia from which the United States launched its atom bomb attacks on Japan at the close of World War II, will soon become another link in the chain of American military bases in Asia.

Sometime in the next two years, the Air Force is expected to ask Congress for the first installment on a $150 million "replacement" air base on the island from which the B-29 Enola Gay lifted off on Aug. 6, 1945, to drop the bomb which killed 200,000 Japanese in Hiroshima.

Once controlled by Japan, taken over by the United States during the war in the Pacific and essentially abandoned by the great powers during the last 25 years, much of Tinian now is covered by a thick mantle of tropical vegetation. As part of a "fallback" defense perimeter in the Pacific, Tinian with Guam is slated to replace Okinawa as the "Keystone of the Pacific" in the event the United States is forced to abandon bases in Japan, the Philippines or on the Asian mainland.

Tinian and Guam are part of a 2,000-mile-long arc of volcanic islands stretching from Japan's Mt. Fuji to within 400 miles of Indonesia and the Philippines. The Air Force now plans to turn this 40-square-mile Manhattan-shaped island into a major forward supply depot and weapons storage base.

Grim memories

Two small stone pedestals, marking the pits where the atom bombs were once stored, are the only remembrances of Tinian's past. But the new air base will soon be a potent symbol of America's military might in Asia. And Tinian's people want neither to remember the past invasions nor to face the current resurgence of the U.S. Air Force on their land.

For at least two or three years now, civilian-clad U.S. military officers have been visiting the island. Nowadays, however, the military comes in uniform. Two teams have visited since May when a tentative agreement was reached between the Mariana Islands District of Micronesia and the United States to allow the air base development in spite of the opposition of most of the people on Tinian.

To date there has been no official announcement of plans for Tinian in the United States. But in June 1, 1973, radio address to the people of Tinian and its neighboring islands, Ambassador Haydn Williams, the Nixon administration's chief military negotiator for Micronesia, announced plans for the take-over of the island. He told the people, "U.S. land needs are extensive ... so much so that we feel we should acquire the northern two-thirds of the island for military purposes. We feel we should also ask to acquire the southern third...."

Public outcry

Public reaction on Tinian was immediate when people learned that they would be moved from their homes. Thirty-four-year old ex-Mayor Vincente Mangiona summed up many people's feelings. "We feel we are just getting going. This week we are sending over 40,000 pounds of watermelon to Guam. If the military comes and takes away our best land, all we will be able to export is bombs, and that will neither put money in my pocket nor do anything to help the rest of the world."

Despite this local opposition the Air Force remains committed to its plans. For the United States, this new island-based strategy will guarantee the United States a string of bases under complete American political control. There will be no need for leases, no evictions and no Okinawa-type "reversions."

Bare base

But the Air Force's "development" plans for Tinian are still far from modest. Construction, slated to end in 1982, will have seven phases. Phase III, formally entitled "Bare Base Capability," includes plans for "airfield pavements, port facilities, fuel storage and transfer and utility systems." This part of the program will involve 1,000 laborers and will cost $30,353,000.

According to informed sources, construction plans for Phase IV include facilities for "limited flight operations, port warehousing, material storage." In U.S. military terminology "material storage" usually refers to ammunition and nuclear weapons.

When completed, the United States plans to have 2,600 military personnel on Tinian even though much of the base support will be provided by Guam-based technicians.

Other strategic interests affect the longer range military thinking of U.S. policy makers. Lawrence Griswold, editor of Sea Power, considers the new base on Tinian a necessary hedge against Japan's own "strategic interest" in regaining control of the Micronesian islands.

Coupled with this military planning, a growing number of observers predict serious antagonisms between the two giant Asian trading partners as economic rivalry becomes more intense and American economic hegemony is threatened. A strategic base like Tinian, located only 1,400 miles from Japan's heartland, will be a reminder to the Japanese that although the dollar may be weak, the U.S. military is still a factor to be reckoned with.

But it is the people of Tinian who will feel the effects of the base most. Felipe Mendiola, a 59-year-old farmer and local political leader, says, "I can see it all happening to us again. The Americans will build a base here and in 10 or 20 years some other country will destroy our island like the Americans did when they took it from Japan in WW II."

Whoops! Arresting officer commits prostitution

To the editor:
In a capitalist society it would seem that folks would have the right to buy or sell what they want.

In a constitutional democracy it seems folks would have the right to do what they please (as long as they do not infringe on other people's rights to do as they please).

And in a society with any freedom, it seems the citizens would be left alone and not prosecuted, in matters that affect only consenting adults and their own bodies.

But there are those who think prostitution is immoral and have made laws making prostitution illegal; so those laws should be enforced (until they are proven unconstitutional).

However, I question Steve Hall's procedure in his investigations of prostitution in Austin. I think he went above and beyond the call of duty by allowing the act to continue to its climax when "he could have made his case simply by coming to the agreement" with the masseuse that she would perform an illegal act!

When someone is busted for grass does the arresting officer have the right to smoke it? No, as soon as he determines that it is marijuana, that's all the proof he needs; he does not need to smoke it to find out.

Why did Hall allow the act to continue to its climax when he had enough proof to convict Ms. St. James?

According to the new Texas Penal Code, both the man and woman are guilty of a crime if they participate in the act.

The fact is that Hall said (Daily Texan, Thursday, 4/18/74) that he was "bored" and "had no feeling of enjoyment" during the act. Most authorities agree that prostitutes do not enjoy the act.

So since the deputy constable was paid by the taxpayers to perform the act and did not enjoy it, I conclude that he is a PROSTITUTE himself!

Therefore, I ask Sheriff Raymond Frank to arrest Hall for prostitution. If Hall does not get arrested, Ms. St. James should appeal her case because of discrimination. Louisiana's prostitution laws have already been ruled unconstitutional by Dist. Judge John Covington, because they discriminate against women and only punish women. It seems that Austin practices law that way also.

Country digest

To the editor:
We long time country fans are glad to see The Texan giving some well deserved recognition to the Austin country scene. (In re: Mark Peel's and Norma Gleason's articles Friday.) However, to say that the country scene is entirely "progressive" ignores some excellent area bands and clubs.

Groups like the Moods of Country Music or Jess Demaine and the Country Music Revue along with others can fill huge dance halls like Big G's, Dessau or the Skyline every Saturday night. Even KOKE-FM plays the Mood's latest regional hits.

About the only thing The Texan could learn from the American-Statesman is to run a country column like Townsend Miller's weekly. No true country fan in Austin would miss Miller's insight. (It beats taking shorthand while Rusty Bell or someone at KOKE-FM rushes down a list between Shiner ads.)

Brad Rice, TA

To the editor:
If I read another article in your newspaper about Michael Murphey, Jerry Jeff Walker, Greezy Wheels, or "progressive country" I will come to your offices and personally puke all over your presses. Stupid UT frat rats in hippy clothes and cowboy hats may think long hairs from upstate New York or downtown Oak Cliff singing 'yodel-eee-ay-hee' is big fun, but I'm not convinced. Why don't these people celebrate their real past; skateboards not saddles, hotrods instead of backboards. It takes real talent for these country progressive people to get nostalgic about a honky-tonk part most of them never even experienced. I don't mind them doing it, but I get tired of reading about it.

Bulshevik Bob
Not so Jake

To the editor:
Where does The Texan get off calling Jake Pickle's profiteering on Decker Lake "only marginally improper?" Federal funds were used on the project, and it's against the law for a congressman to profit from a contract with the United States. Pickle could have been fined $3,000 and if the feds had chosen to press the point the whole contract could've been voided. If that's just "marginally improper," what does the Texan consider real corruption? Bank robbery?

David Reynolds
Third Year Law
Pickle profits

To the editor:
The Daily Texan editorial, "Money Everywhere," (April 23, 1974) was a bigger fairy tale and less journalistically sound than the original television attempt to promote a shotgun wedding between real estate and politics in the 1968 congressional election.

Contrary to the writer's statement, the television broadcast did address itself to "whether Pickle could have been aware of the Brown and Root contract and arranged the smaller transaction to cover himself."

On Page 9 of the original script — which appears to be the writer's only source material — the broadcaster said:

"Let me interject at this point that there is nothing expressed or implied that either J.J. Pickle, W.S. Birdwell or Robert Mueller Jr. were doing anything more than following the dictates of good land speculation."

Even the original Republican-inspired charges against Pickle ruled out any conflict of interest based on prior knowledge of construction on the power plant site.

The question the 1968 broadcast tried to raise was whether Pickle's partial ownership of property near Decker Lake would endanger a Department of Housing and Urban Development open space grant, and perhaps the electric generating station itself.

The Washington HUD office in a memorandum in 1968 dismissed these allegations.

Is the writer trying to shove a warmed-over Republican red herring down the throats of the Texan readership as the basis of a somewhat fuzzy theory that an elected official who owns any property cannot care about the environment?

If this is the case, Larry Bales is not qualified to represent the 10th Congressional District because of his association with the North Cape Development Company, and the same would apply to E.H. Meadows because of his ranching interests.

It appears that the writer would lead the Texan's readers to believe — if his theory is applied universally — that, for example, any elected official who owns an automobile should disqualify himself from voting on matters of traffic safety, gasoline taxes or air pollution.

To the editor:
We appreciate the editorial support provided by The Texan this year in informing its readers of the national activities of the United Farm Workers Union and its Austin support committee.

With 168 out of 180 contracts in California's grape fields pulled out from under them, farm workers are once again calling on consumers to help by boycotting Gallo wine, table grapes and iceberg lettuce.

The Friends of the United Farm Workers in Austin, a student support group, is responding to the requests of the farm worker; we encourage all persons sympathetic to this struggle to lend their support. Our next weekly meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in Union Building 354 (the Mexican-American Culture Center), at 7:30 p.m. We will also plan our support work — picketing, leafleting, and the Gallo survey, as we attempt to reduce Gallo wine sales in Austin. Join us!

RE Joe Nick Patoski's letter on Herb Holland:

Admittedly, Herb has his faults, but they do not include indulging in pointless verbal diarrhea or appearing in his column with a third eye pasted to his forehead like you did in your "column" in last month's issue of PEARL.

Boyooboyoboy, if you want to do something really exciting that would satisfy your proven juvenile approach to journalism, why don't you sit down and write a letter to PEARL praising yourself like the one your co-staffer and former editor Barbara Longway did? The fact that you don't have a married name to hide under surely won't deter PEARL from printing it; they need all the support of the staff in activities like this that they can get. If you guys don't write these letters to PEARL, who will?

UT Golfers Tie for SWC Title

By BRIAN BLAKELEY
Texas Staff Writer

HOUSTON — Texas golfers earned half an orange Tower Tuesday when they tied with the University of Houston for the Southwest Conference Golf Championship.

And, as Texas Coach George Hannon said, "Half a championship is better than none."

The Longhorns began the final round of play at Bear Creek Golf World with a six-stroke lead over the Cougars and held on through the day's first 18 holes. On the final nine of the 54-hole tournament, though, Houston surged.

The Cougars were one stroke ahead when Texas Sophomore Jim Mason came up to the final hole and sank a 50-foot birdie putt to tie the score.

Houston's Keith Ferguson then missed a 14-footer that would have given Houston the championship anyway.

Ferguson took individual honors with an even par 216, and Mason ended second with 218.

Going into the final day Mason was tied for the lead with SMU's Mark DeBolt, but DeBolt slipped to a 78 Tuesday and finished with a 54-hole total of 222.

Texas' Randy Simmons had a one-over-par 145 through 36 holes, but he also fell back to a 78 on the last 18 and ended with a 223 for fifth place.

Johnny Dill was next for the Longhorns with 228 while Tony Pfaff and Bob Mase both finished at 234.

Scores were high throughout the two-day tournament, but Hannon was not complaining too much about his team's performance.

"They could have played better, that's for sure," Hannon said. "But of course, so could Houston."

Since all eight SWC teams finished playing in the four-day, 72-hole All America

Intercollegiate just two days before the SWC competition began, the high scores were attributed to fatigue, although Hannon does not see why that should have been a factor.

"They're young, and they should be able to take it," Hannon said. "They play every day anyway."

Texas and Houston finished with 903 totals and SMU was third with 921. Texas A&M and Texas Tech tied for fourth with 941, and TCU came in at 955 for sixth place.

Arkansas was next with 967, and Rice parlayed its home course advantage into a 978 for eighth. Baylor was last with 986.

The tie gave Texas its third consecutive SWC golf championship. Texas Tech won in 1971 when the Horns did not compete for the title. Texas, however, did win in 1970.

The Longhorns will not compete again until June 19 when they travel to San Diego State for the NCAA championship.

Arlington Stadium Picked For Baseball Playoffs

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech Baseball Coach Kal Segrist, chairman of the NCAA Dist. 6 selection committee, announced Tuesday that Arlington Stadium will be the site for the 1974 district playoffs.

The playoffs are scheduled for May 23 to 26.

Arlington Stadium was approved on a continuing basis by the NCAA rules and tournament committee in January.

The champions of the Southwest Conference and Southland Conference qualify automatically. The other tournament berths are selected from at-large independent teams in Texas.

Rough Riders

The rodeo still has calf roping, team roping, steer bulldozing and barrel racing, but the bucking stock events like bull riding, bareback riding and saddle bronc riding are the real crowd pleasers.

Bullriders, as a group, are almost all thin. But what they lack in physical size, they make up for in guts. Steiner rode his last two rides at the finals in intense pain.

A rider must remain on the bull for eight seconds to score points. Sometimes the cowboy rides the full amount of time, but more often than not he gets thrown into the air and makes a crash landing.

Steiner was the top money winner going into the National Finals Rodeo in Oklahoma City last December and won the event to take the championship.

Steiner has retired from the circuit and is working with his father, T.C. Steiner, to produce rodeos and provide stock for them. At a large rodeo, the Steiners bring about 80 bulls, 40 saddle broncs, 40 barebacks and 200 roping calves and dogging steers.

Rodeo people are a lot like a visiting football team. "Always on the road," Steiner said, "always playing a strange arena. And the crowd is always rooting for the cowboys."

All bucking stock riders carry a little book on the stock they've ridden. The riders talk to each other about the stock they've drawn like batters talk about pitchers. They make notes on which animal comes out of the chute, which way it spins, how it bucks and so on.

One cowboy described all the riders who travel together as "the biggest traveling hippie commune in the world." The old cowboys didn't call it a commune, they called it freedom.

In his last year on the circuit, Steiner made $38,200. That may be a lot of money for a rider his age to make, but it is a paltry sum when compared to the amount Jack Nicklaus, Steiner's equal in pro golf, made last year.

Steiner explained his reason for getting out while the getting was good. "After you win the world championship," he said, "there's really not anywhere else to go. Besides, I have a wife and a 6-month-old son to look after now."

Career Change

Besides working with his father in producing rodeos, Steiner also is embarking on a music career. He plays guitar and has written some songs which he hopes to record soon.

Some people may call Steiner a slacker for retiring from bullriding after getting the goodies, but he has enough scars and has carried more plaster around in his 22 years than most people receive in a lifetime. Steiner can look back now and laugh, knowing that he did it and has emerged with all his limbs and his life and some money, too.

Doubles Advance For UT

HOUSTON (Spl.) — Texas' No. 1 doubles team of Graham Whaling and Dan Nelson advanced to the finals of the Southwest Conference tournament Tuesday, after defeating Charles Emley and Bill Wright of Texas A&M, 6-2, 7-5.

Nelson and Whaling advanced to the semifinals when Houston's Bob Ogle failed to show for the second straight day. No. 1 seeds Ogle and Ross Walker were forced to default.

In the Longhorns' only other doubles match Tuesday, Stewart Keller and Brad Nabors were defeated by A&M's Dan Courson and Bill Hoover, 5-7, 7-6, 6-4.

Dan Nelson was the only Texas singles player going into the quarterfinal round, and he was eliminated in his first match by A&M's Hoover, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

After defeating Nelson, the unseeded Hoover beat Rice's Allan Boss to advance to the finals where he will meet SMU's Hardie.

No. 1 seed Hardie is in the finals for the third year in a row. His freshman year he lost to former teammate and present coach John Gardner and last year defeated Houston's Lee Merry.

Nelson and Whaling will meet Houston's Dale Ogden and Lee Merry at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Rice Courts.

Cards Whip Astros, 8-2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Veteran Lou Brock delivered three hits, stole three bases and scored two runs in support of Sonny Siebert's eight-hit pitching, pacing the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-2 victory over the Houston Astros Tuesday night.

The three stolen bases marked the 14th time in 14 National League seasons the Cardinals' 34-year-old left-fielder totaled three stolen bases in a game. The Astros jumped to a 2-0 lead in the second inning on John Edwards' two-run homer, his first of the baseball season, but St. Louis halved the margin in the bottom of the inning on Joe Torre's double and Mike Tysen's single.

The Cardinals then scored four runs in the third. Houston starter Doug Konieczny, 0-2, balked in one run, then Bake McBride laced a two-run single and Ken Reitz followed with an RBI single.

The Cardinals made it 6-2 in the fourth. Brock singled, stole second, moved up on a sacrifice and score on Reggie Smith's fly ball.

In the sixth, Brock hammered a ground-rule double, stole third and came home on Ted Sizemore's single.

Reitz' triple and Torre's single in the seventh produced the final Cardinal run.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A controversial second-period goal by veteran defenseman Ed Van Impe that set off a violent 10-minute argument helped the Philadelphia Flyers to a 5-2 victory over the New York Rangers Tuesday night. The victory vaulted the Flyers into a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven game National Hockey League Stanley Cup semifinal playoffs. The series resumes Thursday night in New York.

Bobby Clarke, and Rick MacLeish each scored once and Ross Lonsberry scored twice for the Flyers, regular-season West Division champions, who entered into the semifinals with a four-game first-round sweep of Atlanta.

Jack Egers and Brad Park tallied for New York, who wound up third in the East Division and reached the semi-final by eliminating defending champion Montreal.

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Pappin's goal at 3:48 of a sudden-death overtime gave the Chicago Black Hawks a 4-3 victory over the Boston Bruins Tuesday night and a 2-1 edge in their best-of-seven semifinal Stanley Cup playoff series.

The Hawks, trailing 3-1 early in the third period got a pair of goals from Stan Mikita, including one with 42 seconds to play in regulation time to tie the contest and send it into overtime.

The Hawks came out swirling in the overtime period and never let up their attack until Pappin ended the game with his winning goal.

Game No. 4 will be played in Chicago Thursday night and the fifth game is set for Boston Sunday. If a sixth game is needed it will be played in Chicago next Tuesday.

Dean Accused of Lying

Stans' Attorney Makes Charge in Summation

NEW YORK (UPI) — Emotionally appealing for an acquittal "before God," the defense in the criminal conspiracy trial of former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans said Tuesday that former White House counsel John Dean III "lied" on the witness stand during the trial.

Defense lawyer Walter Bonner also suggested that G. Bradford Cook, former counsel to the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and later its chairman, should be on trial in the conspiracy and obstruction of justice case rather than Stans. Bonner termed Cook a "snotnose kid" who "lied" to Stans.

Dean, a crucial prosecution witness, "was afraid to tell the truth," Bonner told the jury in his summation in federal court here. "He feels guilty about it. It scares him, so he lied to you," Bonner said.

STANS AND former Atty.

Gen. John Mitchell are accused of conspiracy to influence a major fraud investigation of international financier Robert L. Vesco in exchange for his secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign. Mitchell and Stans headed that campaign.

Earlier, Bonner told the jury, "There is a disease in this case which was conceived in the test tube of the prosecution and which has permeated the lives of the defendants for a full year." He said the disease was "Vesco-itis."

Dean had testified he could not recall the telephone conversation with Stans on Nov. 13, 1972, in which Stans said he asked Dean for his legal advice on whether he should disclose Vesco's contribution to the SEC. The Vesco contribution had been delivered to Stans, who headed the President's Finance Committee seven months earlier.

In that 17-minute telephone conversation, Stans testified that Dean advised him he had no obligation to make such a disclosure, that if the SEC wanted such information it could ask for it in a proper, formal way.

AT THE TIME the SEC was preparing a massive civil suit in which it charged Vesco with looting $224 million from four overseas mutual funds he controlled.

The telephone conversation, Stans said, followed a goose hunt in Texas during which Cook raised Vesco's name and his problems with the SEC.

Bonner described Cook as "a wealthy, willful, spoiled and ambitious young man," who lied to Stans later when Stans asked him if he could recall bringing up the matter during the goose hunt and before a formal complaint was issued, in violation of SEC regulations.

Progress of the trial was stalled earlier Tuesday by legal argument over the admissibility of evidence about telephone calls and meetings of the two defendants.

Federal Judge Lee P. Gagliardi previously had indicated that the case would go to the jury late Wednesday, but the change in schedule raised the possibility that the jury would begin deliberations Thursday.

Robert L. Marion: Relevancy in Education

By VICKIE L. HENRY
Texas Staff Writer

With a personal aspect of relevancy in the education process, Dr. Robert L. Marion, assistant to University Vice-President Lorene Rogers and an assistant professor of education, reflects many areas of professional excellence.

Coping with present educational demands and needs, with goals toward future concerns, Marion said that in the face of social, economic and political change, educational concerns must be dealt with adequately in correspondence to a changing environment.

MARION HAS been at the University since August, coming from Los Angeles, where he served as administrative consultant to the deputy superintendent of the Los Angeles City Unified School District.

Marion finds the fulfillment of tasks in his present position aided with natural input and commitment, advantaged by prior educational administrative experiences.

Areas of prior experience in student recruitment, counseling and public relations, he said, has involved working closely with the University faculty and administration; also areas of secondary school personnel, parents, civic groups, business and industry. He has served in urban affairs as a specialist in programs for the hardcore.

PRESENTLY Marion's more involved function at the University is being chairperson of the Achievement Scholarship Task Force, which he says "is designed to serve those Texas high school graduates who have demonstrated or have shown strong potential for demonstrating outstanding characteristics of scholarship and leadership in spite of limitations imposed by economic circumstances, geographic isolation, ethnic background or limited educational opportunity.

Dr. Marion discusses his role at the University.

"All students who are to be considered for the program," he said, "must meet the minimum requirements for admissions to the University. The scholarship program is principally geared toward the minority student, although other disadvantaged students are eligible for consideration.

"Additional consideration will be given to those in the top 25 percent of their class with 'B' averages in computed college preparatory courses and to those who have demonstrated leadership qualities in high school and/or their community."

Recommendations for potential students in the program, Marion said, are being sought through community groups as well as from high school principals and counselors. Students may also apply directly by submitting a complete application and indicating an interest in the scholarship program.

Recommendations should be forwarded directly to the Achievement Scholarship Program, Office of Admissions.

The scholarship program will provide all educational expenses and all demonstrated financial need for the entire length of the recipient's degree program, Marion said.

MARION'S past involvements before coming to the University were experiences serving in such positions as special administrative assistant to the superintendent of San Diego and personnel consultant, Flint Community Schools, Flint, Mich.

He has also served as principal/assistant superintendent of Highland Park School District in Highland Park, Mich.; assistant director of admissions, University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, and professor, Dillard University in New Orleans, La.

Further administrative training and experience include positions as admissions and financial aids officer for the University of Michigan Opportunity Award Program, a program designed to assist culturally and economically disadvantaged youth.

While at the University of Michigan, Marion developed the Transfer Award Program, the junior college supplement to the original Opportunity Award Program, and was a specialist with the identification and recruitment of disadvantaged youth.

A NATIVE of Muskegan Heights, Mich., Marion received his bachelor degree from the University of Michigan in 1957 with a major in general science and a minor in education.

profile

From the same university he received a master's in physical education and health, a PhD in educational administration guidance and counseling and a minor in psychology.

Civic and professional memberships, Marion said, include the Rotary Club, Phi Delta Kappa, NAACP council for Exceptional Children (national and state), and the Texas Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

WITH MANY notable achievements and contributions to all areas of community life and affairs,

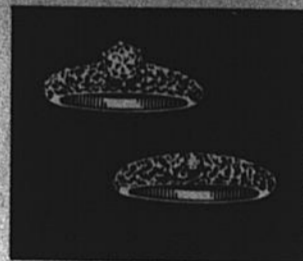

Marion said of his task and positions in general, "I will always strive to avoid the 'ivory tower' structure and barrier in my work."

His urban education goals, he said, are to make education more responsive to the needs of the people, to bring meaning into the lives of students and to do his part in reducing the isolation of systems and citizens.

Marion and his wife, Irene, have two children, Renee, 10, and Bob Jr., 8.

City Council To Decide On Shuttle Rerouting

By LINDA FANNIN
Texan Staff Writer

Changes in University shuttle bus routes will be among routine items scheduled to come before City Council for approval Thursday.

The meeting will be at 1 p.m. in the City Electric Building Auditorium.

The changes, recommended by the University Shuttle Bus Committee, are mostly revisions of existing routes, George Henry, acting assistant director of the city Transportation Service, said.

CALLING THE revisions "a real outstanding job," Henry said, "This is the first time we have had time to review routes to see what they will do to the traffic flow."

One of the most significant changes in the routes, Henry said, will be the addition of a third route in the Riverside area, with small changes to be made in the North Riverside and South Riverside routes.

In addition, the West Campus route will reverse directions so the buses will make more right turns than left and the Married Students route will stay on the major streets instead of entering the apartment areas.

Henry said there also will be a relocation of some strategic stops on major thoroughfares.

IF APPROVED, the revisions are scheduled to take effect for the fall semester.

In other business, the council will hold a public hearing on an application for a federal grant to purchase new city buses and related equipment.

Among the items to be bought with the requested funds are 18 45-passenger buses, fare boxes, mobile radios, bus stop shelters, benches and route markers.

IN A SECOND public hearing, councilmen will consider increases in nonemergency ambulance rates requested by Austin Ambulance Service.

The increases, which have been recommended by City Urban Transportation Director Joe Ternus, would raise the rate for a one-way transfer from the present charge of $22.50 to $27.50. Emergency service to a hospital other than Brackenridge Hospital would be increased from $26 to $35 and the current rate of $10 per hour for waiting time would be doubled.

political roundup Candidate Alleges 'Low Blow'

Gerald Weiss, Democratic candidate for state representative, Place 4, said in a prepared statement Tuesday that opponent Lou McCreary was guilty of "a low blow, hitting below the belt" in his charges of wrongdoing and political favoritism against Travis County Democratic Chairman Ken Wendler.

McCreary said Monday that Wendler should resign because he has been using "paid political organizers, party favoritism and rigged endorsements" in an attempt to set up his own political machine in Travis County.

Weiss said these charges were "unfounded" and "unfair" and that McCreary should "lift himself out of the mire and address the issues that the people are really concerned about."

which has "led him to the conclusion that he has to make waves before election day comes."

McCreary's type of mudslinging campaigning against Ken Wendler is exactly the reason Travis County voters are dissatisfied with all politicians and state government in general. But perhaps nothing better can be expected from perennial and professional politicians."

McCreary said Tuesday that two reasons he accused Wendler of favoritism were a $1,000 contribution by Wendler to the Ronnie Earle campaign last summer, despite the fact there were other Democrats in the race, and a campaign pamphlet from Bob Bullock, candidate for state comptroller, which listed Wendler as a co-chairman for his campaign.

McCreary explained his actions as an attempt to keep corruption out of Travis County politics. "We have been working like hell to clean up state politics, but if we have favoritism and bossism in the Democratic Party in Travis County, we are just spinning our wheels," he said.

WENDLER SAID Tuesday that in a special election such as the one held last summer there is no primary and the race is wide open to anyone from any party who wants to enter. He said he made the contribution to Earle's campaign because "I felt it was up to me to move in and make sure we did not lose that seat to someone undesirable to Travis County Democrats."

Wendler said he no longer is co-chairman of Bullock's campaign and that the pamphlet which listed him as such was an old one printed before the filing deadline for candidates.

Nursing School Studying Affiliation With City College

The Brackenridge School of Nursing would not oppose being affiliated with Austin Community College (ACC) if a written agreement was presented stating that the school's three-year diploma program would not be changed, Sarah Bradley, director of the school, said Tuesday.

The Brackenridge Hospital Advisory Board delayed action on a proposed ACC takeover of the Brackenridge school in a Monday night meeting.

The faculty of the school believes the program might be downgraded to a two-year degree program if ACC takes over, Ms. Bradley said, because most junior colleges only offer two-year programs.

Honts
Closer cooperation between county and city government on joint projects was advocated Tuesday by Bob Honts, candidate for county commissioner, Place 2.

Speaking before the Executive Committee of the Northwest Austin Civic Association, Honts said, "City residents contribute more than 70 percent of total county revenues and, therefore, should be aware of where and how their tax dollars are being spent."

SEVERAL AREAS which Honts said might need closer coordination between city and county include tax assessment and collection, road construction standards, building inspections, library services, parks and recreation activities and health services.

"We have been told that a written agreement would be given, but we have not seen it," she said. "We have heard of problems arising without one."

The problem is that there is no guarantee without an agreement that the present program would not be changed.

Austin Under Gas Curtailment

Lo-Vaca Gathering Company's lack of gas supplies left Austin with a whopping 50 percent gas curtailment Tuesday.

R.L. Hancock, director of public utilities, said the curtailment was caused by "Lo-Vaca's inability to purchase enough gas to fill the demand for the normal amount needed."

He said he did not know how long the curtailment would last.

Austin is not the only city suffering from a curtailment. Most public utilities in South Texas are serviced by Lo-Vaca, and they all will suffer curtailments, Hancock said.

ed, Ms. Bradley explained. The ACC takeover of the school was recommended by William K. Brown, Brackenridge Hospital administrator. He said the takeover would reduce the direct expense to Austin taxpayer for operating the school.

The International Student Organization will have its second general assembly, April 24th in the Academic Center at 4:00 p.m.

The presence of all members and those interested in joining the organization is necessary, since important decisions concerning the future of it will be made. The main issues to be discussed are the constitution, and electing the Advisory Board and the organization's advisor.

THINGS AIN'T LIKE THEY USED TO BE.*

No ma'am. They're better. Remember the times when you used to catch a lot of flack for short dresses? Nowadays, you can stroll (rather quickly of course) across campus carrying your short dress. And nobody minds. And remember when male visitors in your quarters were a thing of the future?

Well, the future is now, and it has been for two years, at Tri-Towers North. Once upon a time we had male visiting regulations in all our towers. But no longer. Drop by Tri-Towers and see how times have changed. For you and your man. 801 West 24th — 476-7636

Regent Clark Outlines Hopes for the University

By BILL TROTT
Texan Staff Writer
University Regent Edward Clark Tuesday outlined his hopes for the University's future, highlighting five specific areas in an informal address to a University class in General Studies.

Before beginning his topic, "My Hopes and Dreams for the University of Texas at Austin," Clark stressed the need for exchanges of ideas between students, regents and administrators.

Speaking to members of General Studies 323 (Self and the University), Clark said, "Being a student is more complex than it used to be. By the

Registration Transfers End Monday

Voters who have moved from one precinct to another within the same county must file a transfer by Monday to be eligible to vote in the May 4 party primaries.

Texas Secretary of State Mark W. White Jr. said a transfer of registration must be filed with the county tax assessor-collector five days before an election.

A voter may only vote in the precinct of his former residence for 30 days after he has moved.

Travis County voters may file transfers at the tax assessor-collector's office at County Courthouse.

same token, being a regent is a more complex task than it once was. They (the regents) try to serve the public good as they are given to see it. How well we do, the future — as well as The Daily Texan — will judge." CLARK SUMMARIZED the responsibilities and powers of the board and then outlined his five areas for improvement within the University. "By many ways of measuring, this is a good institution," Clark said. "It has an alert and sensible student body. It has an excellent faculty. It has a concerned and forward-looking administration."

Clark called for more emphasis on undergraduate study programs, saying that very good required courses are matched by some rather poor courses — poor from the standpoint of instructor interest and student motivation.

"My concern, however, is that UT-Austin's proper commitment to graduate instruction and research excellence does not result in a downgrading of undergraduate instruction, whether intentional or not."

CLARK ALSO stressed graduate programs that are more readily applicable to today's society, rather than general research, theory and abstraction. He listed areas such as public transportation, health care and urban living as examples.

Clark's third point dealt with diversity among students and faculty as an educational tool. "I think it is important that the University be a diverse learning environment populated by people of different races, cultures and religions. As diverse a university community as possible consistent with its educational mission should be encouraged."

A lack of student participation in decision making processes also was brought out by Clark as an important priority. He cited The Daily Texan editor and Student Government elections as examples of general student apathy.

"These examples probably do not reflect any worse states of affairs than exist in public elections," he said. "However, apathy is not a healthy sign wherever it appears."

Clark also expressed strong feelings on the quality of actual teaching and instruction at the University.

"IT IS HARD for some department chairmen, budget councils and faculty committees not to place more trust in a lengthy publications list than less objective attests that this person is an outstanding teacher."

"I would add immediately that this concern for good teaching is in no way meant to downgrade publication and research. But I am persuaded that their overemphasis has resulted in some faculty members viewing teaching — especially of undergraduates — as at the bottom of the list."

In response to a question by Ronnie Franklin, at-large member of the Texas Student Publications Board, Clark said that he would consider presenting to the regents TSP's plan for having funds budgeted to retain legal counsel in the mandatory funding issue for Student Government and The Daily Texan.

"Student Government and The Daily Texan will be funded — don't you doubt it," Clark said, "one way or the other. But a lawsuit won't get you any funds."

Rules Changed By Democrats

By BOB ETNYRE

New rules adopted by the Texas Democratic Party guarantee greater participation at May 4 precinct conventions by students, minority groups, women and senior citizens, Carroll Abbott, executive director of the Texas Affirmative Action Committee, said Tuesday.

"If 20 percent of those delegates attending the precinct convention desire to caucus separately, all they have to do is submit a written petition to the permanent chairman of the precinct," Abbott said.

"Then that caucus can elect their respective percentage of delegates to the county convention," Abbott added.

FOR PURPOSES of illustration, Abbott said that if 28 percent of the delegates from Precinct "X" decided to caucus separately around some personality, issue or candidate, they could rightfully elect 28 percent of the delegates to the county convention on May 11.

To enforce the new rules, Calvin Guest, Democratic state chairman, warned "the failure of a precinct delegation to include therein the selected persons representing a group comprising at least 20 percent of those participating at the precinct convention shall be deemed a violation of the intent" of the new rules.

KEN WENDLER, Travis County Democratic chairman, said the rules for Travis precinct conventions "go a little bit further than those of the state."

"Any group that constitutes a percentage large enough to elect one delegate to the county convention can caucus separately," Wendler added.

To become a delegate to a precinct convention, a citizen must simply vote May 4 in the party primary.

TV Lion Costume Stolen From Children's Program

Six to 10-year-old children and University police are on the lookout for the impersonator of Agapito Gomez y Gomez y Gomez.

Agapito Gomez y Gomez y Gomez is the lion on the KLRN TV, an award-winning bilingual program for children which is broadcast nationally. The lion was stripped of his costume between April 11 and 18.

Sgt. Bill Best of the University police said Tuesday he has no leads yet as to why the costume was taken, or who took it.

"Our only hope is that someone will be seen wearing the costume," he added.

A new head for Agapito was flown here Friday night from California. The costume is valued at more than $1,500, which makes the theft a felony. KLRN is offering a $50 reward for information leading to the apprehension of the thief.

Summer Theater Previewed

By LYNN BAILEY
Texan Staff Writer
Students "unfortunate" enough to be staying in school this summer will at least be afforded some opportunities to be entertained by Austin's theatrical medium.

begin the summer season for Center Stage, 403 E. Sixth St., during the second week of June. Director Ken Johnson, also plans to present "Dial M for Murder" in August and September.

A black tie gala opening of "The Amorous Flea" is scheduled at Zachary Scott Theater Center for May 3 and 4. "Flea," the musical comedy adaptation of Moliere's "The School for Wives" will run through June 1.

Star-studded plays (perhaps those most inaccessible to University students since the ticket price is $9, for both dinner and play) will debut at the Country Dinner Playhouse (CDP) this summer.

When "The Reluctant Debutante" starring Joseph Cotten closes May 12, CDP will present "Goodbye Charlie" with Ruta Lee, opening May 14. The first show will be a benefit preview to aid the March of Dimes.

Dorothy Lamour will open at CDP June 18 in the Noel Coward play, "Fallen Angels."

Students who stay in Austin during the first six weeks semester only may miss Mickey Rooney in "See How They Run." Rooney's own adaptation of the play, which has not yet been chosen, will open July 1.

Three original scripts will be presented in repertory theater by the University drama department, Bill Patterson, drama spokesman, said Tuesday. The first play, which has not yet been chosen, will open July 1.

Even though many opportunities to patronize theater arts await students, many settle for the cheaper thrills. Summer television reruns can become tedious after awhile, though. And when they do, it's nice to know that legitimate theater still thrives in Austin.

Wendy Hiller and Leslie Howard in 'Pygmalion.' 'Pygmalion' To Screen

"Pygmalion," the 1938 film of George Bernard Shaw's comedy of manners which was later translated into the award winning musical "My Fair Lady," will be screened Wednesday night in the Union Theatre.

Leslie Howard portrays Prof. Higgins, and a then-unknown Wendy Hiller is Eliza Doolittle in this adaptation, which Time magazine said was "not merely good, but practically perfect."

Shaw himself adapted the play for the screen, and at the age of 82 won an Academy Award for Best Screenplay. "Pygmalion" will show at 7 and 8:45 p.m.

The Austin premiere of the last film which Charles Chaplin produced, wrote, directed and in which he played a major role, will be Wednesday night in Jester Auditorium.

"A King in New York," made in 1957 but withheld from release in this country until this year, marks the culmination of the rare "Chaplin Masterpieces" series being presented by CinemaTexas.

The film will be presented at 7 and 9 p.m. Wednesday and Monday.

On May 1, CinemaTexas will present "A Countess From Hong Kong," the 1967 film in which Chaplin directed Marlon Brando and Sophia Loren.

By Zodiac News Service
It's now official: Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young will get together for a series of concerts this summer, opening with a festival in Fort Collins, Colo., June 29.

Promoter Bill Graham says the various personality hassles that have caused the group to split up repeatedly have been settled—at least for the time being.

Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young will appear with three or four other groups, but they will be the major attraction at each festival.

Evans Documents Farm Life

By IRVIN LIPPMAN
 "Walker Evans and Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," in the Michener Galleries (second floor of the Humanities Research Center); through May 5.
 Digesting Walker Evans' photographs into art would be wrong. Certainly Evans and James Agee would say so. "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," is Agee's verbal and Evans' pictorial documentary of three tenant farmer families in Hale County, Ala., in the summer of 1936. Published in 1941, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men" has become a classic statement on the other America.

The show at the Michener Galleries is comprised of more than 100 photographs of the Alabama project. The prints are from the Photography Collections of the Humanities Research Center.
 To record the sharecroppers' life in a way less casual than by opening a book, Agee writes that he would have forfeited the verbiage for a presentation of photographs, fragments of cloth, bits of cotton, lumps of earth, records of speech, pieces of wood and iron, phials of odors, plates of food and of excrement.

ONE TRIES, as the photographs do, to get as close as possible to the elements that make up the pride and simple dignity of the Gudger, Woods and Ricketts families. The nature of Evans' photography makes one want to break through the limiting photographic dimension, as revealing as it might be.

The sociological problem and the emotional story do not overcloud the personal portrait. The "underprivileged" fate is subsumed but is not concealed. Sadie Ricketts, sharecropper wife, barefoot in soiled smock, carefully presents herself posed in a noble state, tempered with shyness. The photographs reveal the human capacity, stripped of metaphor, to be overborne with an essence that is basic and strong. The physical strength steeped with that ineffable rugged power dominates the frame and becomes the subject.

THE PHOTOGRAPHS of the dwellings show an architecture with no other function than to form a basic shelter. There is no pretention. The cardboard signs that sometimes spark the rudimentary structure become part of the rustic vernacular. There is a respect for the thing, the simple object.

The Coke sign becomes more than a wall covering. Three-year old Black-Draught calendars, gasoline cans and flatware that are hung on the wall are permeated with the being of the lodger. They do not hide the flaking, whitewash walls, nor do they become a frivolous layer. There is that I and Thou, soul of my soul encounter. The object or the person, no matter how base, comes across as refined and regal.

Candidates Vie for Justice of the Peace

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series on the contested races in the May 4 Democratic primary and the candidates involved.)

Three candidates are challenging incumbent W.S. (Bill) Sandifer for the position of justice of the peace, Precinct 1. Sandifer has held this position for 12 years.

was a city park ranger for two years.

Sandifer
Sandifer, a 70-year-old rancher, is basing his campaign on his many years of experience in the justice court. Educated in a Bastrop County school, he is a past president of the Manor School Board and City Council, and a member of the Manor Lions Club and the Volunteer Fire Department. He is the father of three children.

Richard E. Scott, 28, is running for justice of the peace with several changes in mind for the court. "I'm pushing the County Commission to hire a county coroner to relieve some of the duties of the justice of the peace and leave him more time to deal with the legal aspects," Scott said.

Scott, a local attorney, is a graduate of Prairie View A&M and the University law school. He is a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and a board member of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Thomson
Citing concern about the survival of the justice courts as the reason he is running, Tommy Thomson, if elected, plans to "get to know the position of justice of the peace a little bit better and help fight the Constitutional Convention in their attempts to do away with JP courts."

Thomson, 31, is the manager of Southern Bedding Manufacturing Co., Inc. He is a graduate of Austin High School and Texas Wesleyan University.

Justice of the Peace, Precinct 1

Burke
If elected, James Burke, 29 and self-employed in the landscape business, would try to put the justice on a 24-hour basis, and move the office closer to the people. The office presently is 12 miles from the city limits.

Burke graduated from Travis High School and attended the University for two years. He also is a graduate of the Austin Police Academy and sessions for the justice court to help working people to use the court without having to lose a day's pay.

Owen
Harriet Saron Owen, 56, a practicing local attorney for seven years, is a member of the State Bar of Texas and the Travis County Bar Association.

Mrs. Owen received her bachelor's degree from the University of Texas, and she graduated magna cum laude from St. Mary's University School of Law in 1967.

Availability is a quality which Mrs. Owen lists as vital to the position of justice of the peace.

"A justice of the peace must be on 24-hour call," she said.

Wisser
John Wisser, 28, has served as assistant county attorney for Travis County, as senior chief prosecutor and as head of the county attorney's hot check division.

He received a BA from the University and graduated in the top quarter of his class from the law school in 1972.

While at the University, Wisser served as director of the housing division of the students' attorney's office and assisted in formulating and drafting the new landlord-tenant statutes which were adopted last August.

Justice of the Peace, Precinct 2

This year for the first time, voters in Northwest Austin and Travis County will elect a fulltime justice of the peace.

Owens
Dale Owens, an Austin realtor, said he believes he has the "finest qualifications of any of the candidates" for Precinct 2 peace justice.

Owens has been chief administrator for the justice courts in Travis County and is a graduate of the Justice of the Peace Institute of Texas (Texas A&M Engineering Extension Services).

"I pledge to devote all my time necessary to have the first fulltime JP court in North Austin," Owens said.

Priem
Emmalea Priem, has worked for Travis County for 15 years.

"I have worked in all types of county government," she said, including the justice of the peace office, constable's office and accounting.

"I have had schooling in law enforcement and training on the new penal code," she said.

Ms. Priem also said, "I feel I have a good chance" to be elected.

Webb
Charles Webb, an Austin attorney, said he feels he should be elected because "I am the only attorney in the race."

Webb has been involved in domestic and criminal law for 10 years, since graduating from the University law school.

Webb said he wants to make the justice court "an effective small claims court."

"The best small claims court is one without attorneys so that people can come in and pay their fines without having to hire an attorney," Webb said.

Office Duties Explained

The Justice of the Peace in Travis County presides over civil, criminal and small claims cases; he performs marriages, issues warrants and subpoenas, examines prisoners, sets bail and acts as official coroner. The Justice of the Peace is the registrar of vital statistics, issuing birth and death certificates. Extracurricular activities include counselor and adviser to the people in his precinct and settling out-of-court suits.

A subdivision of the Justice of the Peace Court, the small claims court, is presided over by the Justice of the Peace and deals with claims of $5 to $150.

Precinct 4 includes parts of Northeast, East and South Austin. This area covers a predominantly Mexican-American and black population with most in the poor and middle income bracket.

Justice of the Peace, Precinct 4

Perkins
Citizens should be fully aware of their constitutional rights, candidate Bob Perkins explained. He proposes discussions on law for chicanos on Austin's East and South Sides.

Perkins, a lawyer, feels that a basic knowledge of law is essential to be a good peace justice. Of the three candidates, Perkins said, "I'm the only one who has the ability to protect the rights of the people. I'm the only one who knows what the rights of the people are."

Ross
John Ross, present peace justice for Precinct 4, bases his candidacy on his past performance and his experience at the job.

"I've been a justice of the peace for seven years now. I've filed around 1,500 cases a year. I've handled criminal civil and other types of cases. I try to be fair and impartial in each case," Ross said.

"I've given the job importance," he said. "I've taken a job that was nothing, and I've made something out of it."

Ruiz
Mexican-Americans, the largest identifiable minority group in Precinct 4, should be represented in local government, Dan Ruiz said.

Ruiz has worked in several organizations within the community, including the Model Cities Program, the Humanities Relations Commission and the Mexican-American Chamber of Commerce.

Ruiz proposes to work with the schools to lower the truancy rate, hold night court, publicize and educate people about the court.

DON'T YOU CARE?

There is no such thing as a small cut to a hemophiliac. They may bleed to death from a cut finger. Minor surgery can be traumatic. Over thirty pints of blood might be used to normalize a tooth extraction. Hemophiliacs may have frequent internal hemorrhage, or may become severely bruised or crippled. They are under the constant fear of these conditions. Try to compare the temporary discomfort which you may experience when giving blood to the constant anguish which is felt by the hemophiliac and his family.

"It may not be your last chance, but it may be someone else's."
