

THAT IS TWIDOX //

Twidox is a free online library that allows individuals, universities, companies, non-governmental, governmental and other organisations to easily publish or find documents.

Documents on twidox are accessible to everyone online, free of charge, enabling people to share their knowledge and help others with their work, learning, teaching and research.

The focus of twidox is on:

- › professional and industry specific documents
- › research material
- › academic papers and articles
- › coursework and dissertations; and
- › data and statistics

The site archives, tags and indexes every published text and therefore makes it easier and quicker to find via search engines.

THEREFORE TWIDOX //

Universities and organisations can easily set up profile pages and their own libraries of documents, which can be customised and branded, allowing universities and organisations to increase their brand recognition and web presence without any additional costs.

- › All documents are full text indexed, meaning they are easier to find via search engines
- › Documents are categorised
- › User friendly interface and administration tools
- › Detailed reports about documents, such as views, downloads, ratings, comments, linking and citations
- › Document management and backup with export-functions
- › Free of charge

SUMMERY //

- › Unique links for every document, profile and organisation
- › Easy integration of documents into other websites, blogs and social networks
- › Every document is full text indexed and categorised and therefore found easier and quicker via search engines
- › Users can convert documents into PDF or Word format
- › Users can create or join groups, add documents to these groups or participate in forum discussions
- › RSS functions for profile, organisations and groups
- › Extensive community features