Published for Alumni, Parents and Friends of Gardner-Webb College

Nov./Dec. 1979

"As we have been excited about the growth and development of the College's programs on so many fronts, we have all been very much aware of the fact that the challenge of the Convocation Center has stood as the flagship of the entire program."

President Craven Williams

Groundbreaking Ceremonies Held

Under cloudy and slightly threatening weather conditions on October 20th, several hundred persons observed groundbreaking ceremonies for Gardner-Webb's $3 million Convocation Center.

Ten years of envisioning a structure to enhance the programs of Fine Arts and Physical Education is finally becoming a reality to the campus.

To be the core of the campus for student life, the building will include features as a student lobby area, classrooms, basketball arena and a fine arts theatre.

The College Band and welcoming remarks from College President Craven E. Williams initiated the series of events preceeding the actual groundbreaking. Rev. Richard McBride, Campus Minister gave an invocation.

President Williams opened his speech with remarks pertaining to the $10.5 Million "Bold Dimensions" program which encompasses numerous creative education concepts. "To date," he said, "Gardner-Webb College has secured $4.5 million in response to this program. As a result, significant Bold Dimension objectives have already been realized."

He sited a 10% increase in the College endowment, a 256% increase in total giving to the College, an increase from 43% to 70% in faculty earned doctorates, a 22% increase in library holdings and more than a quarter of a million dollars expended in the improvement and upgrading of campus facilities, as positive results within the past three years.

"As we have been excited about the growth and development of the College's programs on so many fronts, we have all been very much aware of the fact that the challenge of the Convocation Center has stood as the flagship of the entire program. And that is what makes this day a particularly important one for us. The completion of this building will fill a void in the life of this campus as broad and desolate as this barren ground is now. Our musicians have no platform. What we do today will fix that. Our Health and Physical Education majors have no laboratory and activity areas. What we do today will fix that. Our Basketball team has no arena appropriate for their skills. What we do today will fix that. Our 1,400 students have no recreational area for free play. What we do today will fix that," Williams stated.

Completion date is set for April 1981.

"The 1980's – A Good Time for Us"

President Craven Williams

During the decade of the 1970's, 120 private colleges have closed their doors entirely; 40 merged with other institutions, and 16 shifted to public control. Truly this is a new era in higher education, a time of reevaluation, restructuring, and rethinking of old traditions. The struggle for survival is one.

The nation's institutions of higher learning, so long revered and held aloft as an American ideal, are facing times of declining enrollment, shifts from the traditional 18 to 24 year old students to an older adult student population, and confusion over the role education should play in a time of changing American attitudes in the face of real economic struggle.

Like puppets suspended by the tenuous strings of change, some colleges dangle uncertainly in the wake of recession, unemployment, and inflation. At its worst, it is a crisis in higher education; at best, it is a challenge for the nation's colleges and universities.

The rules of the game today are flexibility, adaptability, adjustment. The goal, for many colleges, is simple survival. I hope I am not being overly naive when I disclaim survival as being a threat to Gardner-Webb. Gardner-Webb College will live. But, the challenge to us is this: In what form will we live?

In 1961, the number of babies born in America hit an all time high: 4.3 million. The baby boom, coupled with surging college enrollments, precipitated a college boom and scores of new schools sprang up all over the country. Then the downward trend began. Births hit bottom from 1973 to 1976 when the national birth rate hovered between 3.1 million and 3.2 million, the lowest numbers since World War II.

A Duke University Policy Analyst recently said, "Full time enrollments at private four year institutions, even for the most optimistic forecast, will decline 200,000 over the next ten years." He went on to say, "At least 200 of the nation's 1500 independent colleges will close their doors in the coming decade. And I suspect, they won't all be spread out, they'll be dumped together. By the early 1980's, there will be one college closing a week."

The decline in the number of "traditional" college freshmen can be viewed in two ways: as a catastrophe or, on the other hand, as an opportunity for institutions to serve a different kind of student. We've all been so eager to serve the needs of the 18 to 24 year olds that we have frequently ignored the varied and different needs of other groups, particularly women and adults. Adults are going to school in large numbers now because of the changes in the work force or because they want to retrain for other fields, upgrade their careers, or get the liberal arts enrichment they never had. These kinds of people haven't really been dealt with by higher education before. I do not think it is too absurd to think they will likely make up 40% of the total student population by the late 1980's.

The challenges to Gardner-Webb College are going to be great—new admissions procedures, more night classes, more off campus courses, and don't be surprised if we start offering weekend classes.

Although the educational prophesy for the 1980's is grim, it could really be a glorious time for Gardner-Webb College. Hopefully, we are going to be prepared for that. But in order to be prepared for the problems of the 80's we must commit ourselves to some plans at this time; we must look at trends in our area and determine what students needs are going to be 20 years from now. A college which does not do this sort of planning is going to be in real trouble.

The Gardner-Webb faculty has been busily engaged in a wide assortment of planning, creating, and discarding. In future issues of The Web we will be telling you about these plans. You'll be hearing about things such as Regional Education Center which includes a Gifted and Talented Program, a Reading Clinic, a Collegiate School, and others. In this issue you have been more fully introduced to the new graduate program which will be underway in the summer.

It's a busy place, this college "at the foot of the mountains."

It's fun to be part of a creative community which is responding constructively to new challenges. Oh, for sure, we have our problems and frustrations. But we also have an effective group of problem solvers.

I hope you will stay in close touch with us so we can have the benefits of your comments and criticisms as we plan. I am convinced that the 1980's will be a good time for us.

Former G-W Administrator Named Limestone President

Limestone College has named Dr. William J. Briggs president of the four-year liberal arts college.

He has been acting administrator since May at the college.

Briggs, 44, a native of Lincolnton, N.C., had been director of development and alumni affairs at Limestone for the past two years.

Before joining Limestone, Briggs was director of development for Gardner-Webb College. He also has served as dean of students and associate professor of education at Pfeiffer College.

Gardner Appointed To Executive Board

Gardner-Webb Assistant Professor of Health and Physical Education Dave Gardner, Jr. has been appointed to a 3-year term on the executive committee of the North Carolina College Conference of Professional Preparation in Physical Education and Health Education.

Gardner will assist in planning the annual conference for professional physical education and health education authorities. Also, he will keep abreast of Legislative acts in North Carolina and give information on teacher preparations for the classroom.

Professors Make National Presentation

Dr. Larry L. Sale, Dean, Continuing Education and Summer School; and Dr. J. Allen Queen, Chairman, Department of Education were selected to make a presentation entitled "Classroom Management Strategies, Facilitating Self-Discipline in the Middle School" at the National Middle School Association Conference, November 1, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, Dearborn, Michigan.

Dr. Sale is the author of Introduction to Middle School Training, a college textbook published by Charles E. Merrill Publishing Company, Columbus, Ohio. He has had extensive teaching and consulting experience in middle school education at public school, undergraduate, and graduate levels of education.

Dr. J. Allen Queen, recently named Chairman, Department of Education, Gardner-Webb College, has had extensive teaching experience at the public school, undergraduate, and graduate levels of education.

Dr. Sale and Dr. Queen are currently providing leadership in the implementation of new Master of Arts degree programs at Gardner-Webb College in areas of Early Childhood Education, Middle School Education, and Physical Education.

Crest High School To Begin New Radio Program

Local Artist's Display

Linda Putnam, a local artist and native of Cleveland County, is currently exhibiting a collection of her work at the John R. Dover Memorial Library of Gardner-Webb College. The display, which consists of watercolor and oil paintings, will be on the upper level of the library until December 10. The exhibit is coordinated through the Fine Arts Department of Gardner-Webb and Mr. James Rash, associate professor of art.

Chang Named To "Who's Who"

Jeffery Chit-Fu Chang, professor of statistics and computer science at Gardner-Webb College, has been chosen as a member of Who's Who in the South and Southwest as a result of his outstanding achievements in the math field. Chang will be included with other outstanding men and women in this section of the country in the 17th edition of Marquis' Who's Who in the South and Southwest.

Graduate Studies Anticipated To Begin In 1980

The Council on Christian Higher Education heard a formal announcement last month from Dr. Craven Williams, president of Gardner-Webb College, concerning the intentions of the college to initiate a Master of Arts degree program. The announcement, made in Winston-Salem, N.C. cited that the first degrees would be awarded in May, 1982.

Since that time, the Council has visited the college campus and submitted a favorable report to the General Board of the Baptist State Conven-

The recommendations to the General Board of the Baptist State Convention were reviewed and approved this month. Recommendations from the General Board will be presented to the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities in Atlanta, Georgia, for accreditation.

Documentation of the College's capabilities were received in April, 1979 when the Department of Public Instruction, State of North Carolina, issued its report after a three-day campus examination. This report gave a number one (superior) rating to the Department of Education.

The College's undergraduate enrollment is the highest since 1974, while other colleges are suffering a considerable enrollment drop. The gift income is the highest in the history of the college and faculty expertise and credentials surpass any period of the College's past. Library resources in the proposed areas are far above the minimum required to support these graduate studies.

Dr. Williams noted, "The capability of Gardner-Webb College to offer, with the summer session of 1980. The projected master's degree program will be offered on a thirty-semester hour format. Six credit hours would be taken during each academic year and nine credit hours during each summer over a two-year period. A set of core studies would serve all three concentrations with advanced professional work beyond the core reflecting the concentration's requirements.

A minimum of 55 students is projected as necessary to enable the college to offer the program at formulated Evening College tuition rates.

During the upcoming months, the College plans will be reviewed by a Committee of Council on Christian Higher Education which will submit their recommendations to the Executive Committee of the General Board of the Baptist State Convention. Recommendations from the General Board will be received at Gardner-Webb in November and presented to the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities in Atlanta, Georgia.

Course scheduling and coordination will be done by the Office of Continuing Education and Summer School under the direction of Dr. Larry Sale.

"It's only one step in our efforts to progress in our Regional Education Center growth plan," stated Williams.

The Fall Concert is scheduled for Thursday, December 6 and the Spring Major Works Concert will be on Thursday, May 1, 1980.

BASKETBALL OUTLOOK

Randy Alexander
Sports Information Director

The 1979-80 basketball season could prove to be an exciting one as a bunch of new faces appeared on the floor Saturday night, November 3, to play an exhibition game against the Gardner-Webb College alumni basketball team. The new team won with flying colors.

Even though the Bulldogs will be missing five starters off last seasons 10th nationally ranked team that went 24-6, head coach Jim Wiles is optomistic and is looking forward to the roundball season.

Seven players return to the 1979-80 squad and only three saw regular game action. Newcomers to the squad include three transfer players and five freshmen.

The point guard position was shared last season by Earl Nesbit and graduated Steve Mitchell. Nesbit, a senior at 6-1, 170 pounds, averaged 7 points per game last season and looks to be a starter this year but he will be hard pressed by sophomore Tom Clark. Coach Wiles says that the 6-0, 170 pound Clark has worked hard during the summer and right now he or Nesbit could start at the point. Junior Dennis Smart, 5-10, 165 pounds, will add depth at the point guard position.

The Bulldogs lost both wing starters last season but Wiles feels that the wing position will be his teams' strongest area this year. Ron Fuller, 6-3, 185 pounds, returns for his senior season and he averaged 9.1 points per game in 78-79. After Fuller, Wiles is confident that he has an abundance of talent that can start at the wing position. Durham College transfer John Bishop, 6-21/2, 200 pounds, averaged 26.1 points a game last season and is a great outside shooter. Freshman Tony Davenport, 6-1, 170 pounds, is a high school All-America player from Pleasentville, New Jersey, and last season he led his team to a 25-1 record as he averaged 26 points a game. Davenport could be one of the quickest players in District 26 this year. Montreat-Anderson transfer Willie McCray, 6-3, 180 pounds, is a fantastic penetrator and last season he averaged 23 points and pulled down 14 rebounds a game. Freshman Rock Morris, 6-4, 190 pounds, averaged 23.9 points a game at Columbia Richland Northeast High School last season, and he is another good outside shooter. Senior Jeff Medford, 6-3, 185 pounds, will add more depth to the wing position.

The post starters from 1978-79 will not be here this season but the positions will be solid with seniors Ed Cook and Curtis Odom returning. Last season the 6-6, 210 pound Cook averaged 8.9 points and 5 rebounds a game while Odom, 6-4, 185 pounds, averaged 6.3 points and 4.3 rebounds a game. Freshman Frank Streater was red-shirted because of the experienced returning players at the post positions in 78-79. Coach Jim Wiles feels that the 6-7, 190 pound Streater can do it all under the basket but adds that he needs playing experience. Transfer Bill Meyler, 6-7, 215 pounds, averaged 17 points and 13 rebounds a game last season for the County College of Morris in Bernards ville, New Jersey. He will be eligible to play on December 15 and he is an excellent offensive player. Freshman Larry Jewell, 6-8, 220 pounds, will add strength and bulk to the post

On the schedule coach Wiles commented, "We have a tremendous schedule this season with 16 home games, the Quincy Holiday Tournament in Quincy, Illinois, our own Bulldog Classic and the trip to Mexico. We are a young team and the schedule really starts off tough so we are hoping that our players can mature quickly. I think our schedule is one that our fans can be proud of and I can assure the fans that with the teams we are playing, there is going to be some fantastic ball games in Bost gymnasium this season."

Decker Oak Tree Decaying

A 200-year old post oak, was worked on extensively last year, by the Science Club to keep it alive. The job, which took several months, was paid for by the '77-'78 residents of Decker, who gave over $200 for their allotted dorm money to pay for the undertaking.

"We sprayed it with fungicides and pesticides, and painted it with asphalt to fill in decayed areas," stated Dr. Mike Harrellson, Science Club mentor.

The school plans to select a tree on the school farm to keep root-pruned until the old tree at Decker dies. The selected tree will then be transplanted to the oak's present location.

In the second year, the Gardner-Webb women's volleyball team is receiving increased support from GWC students and community. The team moved into NCAIAW (North Carolina Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) Division II play this year, placing them in competition with larger, more experienced teams. With eight players returning to next year's team, Coach Dee Hunt expects an improved record next season. Aside from their regular games, the team has conducted volleyball clinics for GWC students and area communities.

G-W Psychology Major Meets Prominent Psychologists

Michael Stephens

Michael Stephens, a senior psychology major at Gardner-Webb College packed his bags not long ago and headed out to explore the world of Psychology. In a manner most enviable to anyone in the psychology field, Mike reached for the experience to aid him in attaining his long range goal of a doctorate of psychology.

The Gardner-Webb student joined a tour specifically designed for Christians studying psychology coordinated by Dr. Michael J. Rulon of Covenant College in Lookout Mountain, Tennessee.

Seven specifically selected students hopped on the eight-passenger van with Dr. Rulon to experience the ultimate learning situations.

"As an orientation, we were shown slides from last year's trip. We started our tour in the Tennessee area. At the Orangegrove Mental Institute, we observed researchers working with monkeys on sign Janguage. We saw tremendously exciting research all across the United States, but the thrust of the program was in California. We attended a counseling session at the Brain Research Institute at U.C.L.A. The tour really let me see how wide a field psychology really is. There's educational psychology, counseling medical psychology and more," Michael said.

"I've had a chance to be in touch with encounter groups, sensitivity groups and people who express themselves in ways that members of society usually do not," he added.

Prominent psychologists, leading graduate programs, important research centers, major universities, hospitals and clinics in psychology were visited.

Dr. Rulon's goals of the tour included providing the students with "broad exposure to the discipline of psychology, contact with where psychology is being applied in its many settings, opportunities to investigate areas of parallel concern to psychology and Christianity, and a climate where ideas and theories can be examined in the presence of prominent psychologists and dedicated Christians."

Highlights of the 4-week journey included meeting Dr. Albert Bandura, Stanford University; Dr. Warren S. Brown, Brain Research Institute; Dr. Paul Clement, The Psychology Center; Dr. Nicholas Cummings, Kaiser-Permanente Health Plan; Dr. William C. Dement, Stanford, Dr. Roger Fouts, University of Oklahoma;

bardo, Stanford.

Michael is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Stephens of 307 Robert E. Lee, Wilmington, North Carolina.

Sarazen Named To Alumni Post

Nancy Sarazen has been named acting director of the alumni association at Gardner-Webb. Mrs. Sarazen filled the position in October upon the resignation of Bill Baucom. (See Alumni Update).

Ms. Nancy Sarazen

As Acting Director, she will coordinate alumni activities as meetings of the Alumni Association Board of Directors; homecoming activities for alumni, class reunions and travel programs for the Annual College Fund.

An additional responsibility will be to serve as director of the Placement Office where student and alumni credentials are maintained for the purpose of bringing together job candidates and potential employers.

She is a four year resident of Shelby, moving from Mansfield, Massachussets.

A Duke University graduate, Mrs. Sarazen has three daughters. Linda, 22, is a graduate of Cornell University and is presently in her first year as a law student at the University of Pennsylvania. Pat, 18, is a freshman at Duke University and June, 14, is a student at Shelby Junior High School.

Mrs. Sarazen, the wife of the late John Sarazen, is a member of the Board of Directors for the Cleveland County Community Concert Association, the United Fund, the Shelby Art League and a member of the Board of Advisors and college orchestra at Gardner-Webb.

Those Were The Years

The attire for Field Day banquets was once (believe it or not) more formal than dress 'jeans." Do you recognize this group of smiling faces? The first person sending the correct individual names to the Alumni Office will receive two reserved seat tickets to a Gardner-Webb home basketball game.

The winner of Sept./Oct. 1979 issue of "Those Were The Days" contest is Erick V. Elmore '69, Route 2, Box 594, Newton, North Carolina 28658.

He submitted the correct names of the 1969-70 cheerleaders which were: standing—Brenda Albea, Donna Powell, Marty Slemp, Kelly Saunders, Susan Arrington, Cindy Rupp, Gail Wasnicky; kneeling—Nancy Simpson and Sandra Howell.

We want to thank all of the people who sent in the names of these girls and hope that you keep trying to win our contest of "Those Were the Days".

G-W Offering Art Therapy

"I've never had a course anything like Art Therapy. After being in the class, I'm considering changing my major so I can do more therapeutic work with the handicapped, said Pam Brown, a G-W student

"This class has inspired me to want to assist in an occupational therapy program as the one at Broughton State Mental Hospital. Being a psychology major, I feel the course is one of the most beneficial I have ever taken," Teresa Stewart, a G-W Junior stated.

The new Art Therapy course is one of the few offered in the country. A $700 gift from Boiling Springs physician Gene Washburn enabled the department to buy equipment and tools which were necessary to start the course.

It is an introduction to the theory and practice of art therapy which includes appropriate art and craft skills. In addition, the course is complemented by studies of human psychological and physical problems which will be encountered in administering art therapy.

This is the first team-teaching course ever provided by the College. The Psychology Department is giving lectures on the psychological problems involved in working with the emotionally disturbed, the aged, and the physically handicapped individual.

This course is one of the beginnings of presenting more "Service" orientated courses at Gardner-Webb.

Alumnus Accompanies Mondale

Bruce Bowers is an 11-year alumnus of Gardner-Webb. While at the College, he became a leader-head resident of Myers Dorm, president of the Men's Affairs Council and after graduation, a member of the Alumni Board of Directors.

Bowers' interest in journalism

stemed during his college years. "My first venture into journalism came when I was in school at Gardner-Webb (1966-68), as editor of The Pilot (student newspaper)." From that time, Bowers grew more deeply involved with developing his professional journalistic abilities. Presently, he is Assignment

Editor at WBTV in Charlotte.

Recently, he experienced the excitement that every reporter yerns for in a trip to Red China by the side of Vice-President Mondale. Below, Bowers describes his fascinating and once-in-alifetime experience.

"... It all began in mid-August when I learned that South Carolina Governor Dick Riley would be accompanying Vice President Walter Mondale on the first high level political mission to China by the White House in four years. More as a joke than anything else, I made a call to the White House to see what would be involved in arranging to cover the trip...on the basis that we would like to do a Carolinas angle since Riley would be the only governor on the trip. I was told that all the press seats had been booked a month earlier . . . as soon as the vice presidential trip was announced. In fact, about 30 journalists had to make their own plans to get to Peking because Air Force II was full. Oh well, nice try, I thought. I assumed that would be the last I heard on the subject. But much to my surprise . . . and less than a day before the deadline for visa applications to the Chinese Embassy ... the White House called to say that two seats had become available on Air Force II and that I was invited to bring a cameraman and join the vice president on his ten-day trip. Naturally that was an invitation that we could not turn down. No other local television station in the country had been invited . . . so four American television crews went along: CBS, ABC, NBS & WBTV

We left from Andrews Air Force Base in Washington on August 23 . . . flew to Anchorage, Alaska then to Tokyo . . . then on to Peking in one day. Coping with the excitement of making the trip ... being on Air Force II with the vice president and all the dignitaries . . . and the jet lag was thrilling. But arriving in Peking (now officially called Beijing) was just incredible. Vice premier Deng Xiaoping was waiting on the ground to greet us ... along with about 200 Chinese soldiers. It sends a chill up your spine to hear the "Star Spangled Banner" played in a place so different from any place I had ever been.

We were invited to the Great Hall of the People three times. Twice for dinner ... Peking duck, of course ... and once for the opera and ballet. We toured factories, saw the Forbidden City, climbed the Great Wall, visited a rice commune and met many Chinese leaders.

On a number of occasions, my cameraman and I went out on our own to capture the flavor of the country. Everywhere we stopped crowds of curious Chinese people would gather and stare. Very few Western faces have been seen there in 30 years or more. We flew to a place called Xian where more than 100-thousand people lined the motorcade route to applaude Vice President Mondale and the other Americans in the party. Xian is one of the oldest cities in the world but no Westerners to speak of have been there since the Communists took control. The impressions from Xian . . . seeing thousands and thousands of peasants line the roadside ... were deeply moving and ones I shall never forget.

There is an important excavation going on near Xian. 6,000 terra cotta soldiers and horses were discovered near the tomb of Emperor Qin. This is the emperor who unified China and was concerned that his tomb would be looted because of the wealth he took to his grave. So, apparently he had the decoy army of statues built to throw grave robbers off the track. The find is considered the most important archaeological discovery in the history of China.

In Southern China we visited Guangchow (Canton) and stopped to tour the Peasant Institute where Mao Zedong taught and got an early base of support. In Hong Kong, we visited a Vietnamese refugee camp. 10,000 boat people were living there.

Through the cooperation of CBS, we were able to feed several reports back to the United States by staellite hookup. After returning to Charlotte we put together a series of reports and a halfhour special on the trip.

It was by far the most interesting and exciting assignment I have covered in eight years as a reporter.'

Over 300 Attend Parent's Day

"Parent's Day" was held on Saturday, October 6th with over 300 guests visiting the college.

Dr. John Drayer, Associate Professor of Religion at the College delivered an address on Tensions Between Faith and Belief to interested parents. Parents also had the opportunity to have conferences with professors. Dr. Robert Knott, Academic Vice President and

Dean of the college, and Dr. Craven Williams addressed parents in the Dover Chapel at 3:45 p.m.

From 5:15-6:30 p.m. dinner was served in the Charles I. Dover Cafeteria. The football game, between the Gardner-Webb College Bulldogs and the Lenoir-Rhyne Bears ended in a loss to the visitors.

Biblical Recorder Columnist Speaks

Mrs. Marian Grant, current columnist of "A Woman's Viewpoint" in the Biblical Recorder and chairperson of the Governor's Advisory Council for Persons with Disabilities, addressed the full student body on Tuesday (September 25)

"Everyone has a stewardship. My life is different from yours so I can't say what you should do with your life; but God has given you a stewardship," she said.

The subject of the talk, "What Time Do You Have?" was related to Gardner-Webb students in terms of time of their lives. "Why are you here on this earth?" she asked. "In order to make our lives count, we have to manage our time and energy. I believe we should pick up ourselves, in our present condition, and move. You might say 'when I get out of school, I'll go into action. That's in the future! What about now?" she asked.

Mrs. Grant challenged each individual to find themselves and find the stewardship God has handed down for them.
