Endowment Scholarship Established

A $1,000 Endowment Scholarship has been established at Gardner-Webb College in memory of a Rutherford County youth killed in 1941 in the crash of a Navy T-4A jet trainer in Meridian, Miss.

The scholarship was established by Mr. and Mrs. John F. Carpenter and family to be awarded to a student who has academic ability and financial need primarily from Rutherford County, but other areas will not be excluded. The recipient will be selected annually by the College Scholarship Committee.

The endowment was established by gifts from friends in Rutherford County with the Carpenter family to match the amount. Carpenter stated that the scholarship fund would continue to grow from year to year with a gift from the family. He also said this gift from other concerned people would be appreciated. Anyone wishing to contribute may send their gift to the ENSIGN RONALD FRANKLIN CARPENTER MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP FUND in care of Gardner-Webb College, or the Rev. Harvey Lutzker, pastor of the Concord Baptist Church.

The amount to be given will be determined by the college's scholarship committee with applicants for the scholarship making application to this committee.

Carpenter, in making the presentation to Gardner-Webb president, Dr. Eugene Poston, said there were many factors taken into consideration before the scholarship was set up. One of the major factors was that the institution receiving the scholarship be a four year school serving the Rutherford County area. In speaking of the scholarship, Carpenter said that he felt his son would want something of this nature. Ronald was a graduate of East Rutherford High School and the U. S. Naval Academy, in price of everything but the value of nothing."

Dr. Fisher said, "Had we listened to the prophets we might not find ourselves embroiled in many of the contemporary problems in this distressed culture." He went on to report the famous General Education in a Free Society report made at Harvard University 20 years ago and edited by Dr. Cassatt.

The report, in part, said that American Higher Education was that time had sought to imitate a scientific, pragmatic, detached and empirical methodology. It went on to say that there is a tendency in this type of thought to treat as irrelevant the whole realm of belief and commitment by which, to all appearances, much human activity seems swept.

It was Dr. Fisher's opinion that, "Until you can discover a point of reference outside yourself he is not likely to escape the abyss of relativism into which he plunges deeper and deeper. The idea that there is nothing really right or nothing really wrong in the total soup is man's swift flight from God."

Freeing your feet were into the gutter of civil order and justice under law. He asked, "Can an institution which by its very nature is guided by intelligence and reason tolerate the substitution of violence for the power of persuasion, or permit anarchy under the guise of dissent or civil disobedience?"

He said, "If young people are dissatisfied with what they believe to be a hypocritical value system of the elders, this does not relieve them in the least of a responsible search for truth and an ethical way of life. I think that we must admit that for all our scientific and technical progress we are still in many respects, barbarians. Look at our penal system. Are we serious about sentencing 15 or 16 year olds in North Carolina? Evidently we think war is the best method to settle international disputes, and in day when world citizenship is essential for survival, militant nationalism is on the rise. Racial racism is still rampant, and the treatment of minority groups remains a shameful aspect of our world culture."
