SPIDER-ENTHUSIAST CAUGHT UP IN "WEB"

If any spider ever needed a public relations throat it is the spider.

One has been found—a fine and dedicated one—in a former Gardner-Webb student, Mrs. Ann Moreton. Mrs. Moreton, today a well known expert on the subject of spiders, began the study by accident four years ago at her home in Powhatan, Va.

She attempted to photograph a spider web covered with dew. The picture was a failure. So she wondered what to do about it. Determined to get a black and white print to hang on her kitchen wall, she went to Washington, D. C. and made a study of spiders and their habits at the Congressional Library.

From this beginning has come a new career involving the study of, photographing, and lecturing about spiders. Mrs. Moreton has had more than 400 stories published in magazines and newspapers, including the May-June issue of WILDLIFE published in North Carolina.

She works closely with Dr. Willis J. Gertsch of the American Museum of Natural History and with Dr. Herbert Levi of Harvard University. Presently she is lecturing to students in North and South Dakota and Nebraska.

The founder of The National Arachnid Society, which has more than 400 members in 30 states, Mrs. Moreton publishes a newsletter after completing work in a state. There are no dues for membership with the sole purpose being to exchange information about spiders.

Her list of credits is impressive and space does not permit the listing of all here, but her work is recognized and requested by experts throughout the country. She is constantly called upon to lecture to such groups as the staff doctors of the U. S. Public Health Service Hospital in Boston and the New England Chapter of the Coronationist Officer's Association.

She was married to Fred P. Moreton and they lived in Biltmore, Mo., where he operated the Chiquapin Farm until his death in 1966. They have two children, Thomas P. Moreton and Judy Moreton (Alfred) Howell both of Mississippi. There are five grandchildren.

A full family and civic life, travel, study, and lectures have kept her busy for years and her schedule is now booked through 1970—"and all this has kept me from hanging a spider web on my kitchen wall," she laughs.

MRS. ANN MORETON

Former Gardner-Webb Student Nationally Known Expert

We caught one spider-enthusiast in our "Web" before ever getting out the first edition.

Mrs. Ann Moreton of Fauquier, Va., read in a letter from the Alamo office that such a publication was planned and that it would probably bear the name "WEB" as a lay-off from the college's name.

A nationally known and respected expert in the field of spider photography and study, Mrs. Moreton responded immediately with encouragement and some interesting information on the spider-world.

Having spent the better part of the past four years relating to humans the benefits derived from the existence of "the friends of the spiders", she was glad to hear that the college which she formerly attended would start spreading news in THE WEB.

If you will read the related article about Mrs. Moreton you will find she is quite a driving force today in research about spiders.

She reassured us that few, if any, would find the term "web" or other related terms repulsive. This had bothered us so much as we began planning such a publication. So far all reactions to the first edition has been positive, and we are looking forward to more frequent contact with each of you.

So we will keep "spinning and spinning" and hope to catch you up in "our web" of progress and growth.

One of our former Gardner-Webb students, in managing business affairs, wrote: "I have made Gardner-Webb and — College joint beneficiaries of a $10,000 insurance contract." And why not? Thanks, friend!

It yet remains to be seen just how large our web will grow, but this much we know, once you're woven in, we never let you go. This is the spirit of Gardner-Webb.

ALUMNI SUPPORT CONTINUES TO GROW

With no defined organization and the personal contact required for a successful annual fund, we consider our shared financial report to be encouraging. Daily we have additional requests.

As of this writing there have been more than 150 responses with gifts amounting to more than $1,100. Out of state people account for more than one third of the responses and about one half of the money! Thank you friends.

The national average for alumni participation in financial support is approximately 22%. Some colleges have considerably more than 50% of their alumni supporting their programs. Can we not equal the best? We have the right kind of interest.

We will likely hold our report of annual giving (not amount) of contributors until the spring. We hope this will require a special addition to THE WEB to list all the years and names.

IF YOU HAVE NOT YET RESPONDED, WHY DON'T YOU TEAR OFF THE FORM BELOW, FILL OUT AND MAIL TO US. WE WANT TO HEAR FROM YOU. Give us the latest news while you are writing.

YOUR HELP IS NEEDED

Can you imagine our having received some 500 of the first issue of THE WEB from the Post Office marked with a changed address or undeliverable? And this came immediately after 100 first class letters had been returned undeliverable (and were pulled from our mail). This means that some 500 letters reached their destination—which was different from the address we had—and we did not get a reply from the student involved helping us bring our records up to date. This meant the work involved also went for naught.

Won't you please help us? Every time there is any change in address, please advise us.

Football fortunes at Gardner-Wallace brightened Oct. 14 as the Bulldogs snared a two-game losing streak with a 34-14 win over Hargrave Military. After winning the first two games of the season over Farnam's Fresh and Carolina Military, the Bulldogs were defeated by Lees-McRae 15-0 and Cheyenne 15-0. The team goes to Ferrum at Ferrum, Va., on Oct. 21 for a 3:30 p.m. game and then returns for the Oct. 28 Homecoming game with Lees-McRae at Spangler Memorial Stadium.

The Fall Festival reached all 1,300 students through the outstanding work of Rev. Edwin Young, pastor of the First Church of Canton. The week, organized by Dr. Robert Lamb, went smoothly.

Robert W. Abrams, director of Admissions, is a man "on the go" these days as he visits high schools throughout the state explaining the Gardner-Wallace College program.

Not all the visiting is being done by Mr. Abrams --- numerous others in the administration are making a concentrated effort to visit every annual Regional Association meeting in the state. This is part of the drive for senior status.

Senior status brings about many questions and an Oct. 2 session on the "Core Curriculum in Liberal Arts Colleges" attracted such personalities as Edward Hamilton, vice-president of the First National Bank of Shelby; John V. Schweppie, manager of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company's Carolina plant, and others.

Baumfication is a key word around the quadrangle these days as students join with the wives of trustees and visitors in cleaning up and planting flowers, shrubs and trees. A difference is already evident on campus.

Many of these same students staged a colorful and surprisingly professional carnival in late September.

In that same vein, the Coffee House Circuit was initiated at the college with the first entertainer being Brian Currer, son of Art Currer of the Jackie Gleason Show. Using the Building Room in the Charles E. Over Building, students created a real coffeehouse atmosphere and had a roaring success during the week of Oct. 24.

Carpeted lounge at the Bear Gymnasium and the V. F. Hanrick Fieldhouse make being a Bulldog member even more enticing.

Wayne Oehlert and the Bulldog Club made possible a new $12,000 bus with air conditioning and comfortable seating. "Noah's Ark", which so many remember, is still in use—but briefly.

OUR TOWN, a Pulitzer Prize winning play by Thornton Wilder, was acclaimed as tremendous once more as the drama students of Gardner-Wallace produced it. Hubert Wooster, professional actor-in-residence, played the lead role under the direction of C. Robert Jones, head of the Drama Department.

Phi Theta Kappa, the campus academic honorary society, had its first meeting at the home of James Taylor, discussing the controversy surrounding William Manchester's THE DEATH OF A PRESIDENT.

The Distinguished Artist Series which began with OUR TOWN will continue Oct. 31 featuring Jack and Sally Jenkins, a vocal duet.

Alumni of "the 20's" might like to know that the pastor of the Rolling Springs Baptist Church from 1932-33 paid a visit to the campus the week of Oct. 14. Rev. J. R. Green of Chapel Hill, now 80 and retired, remembers the days of early struggle at the high school which was to become a college only months after he left for another pastorate.
