Why We're Excited

- Adding work of local authors to our collections and giving readers access to local content.
- Self-publishing is booming, and public libraries need to be involved.
- Public libraries are places of content creation, not just consumption.
- Public libraries have ability to serve as archives of community history.

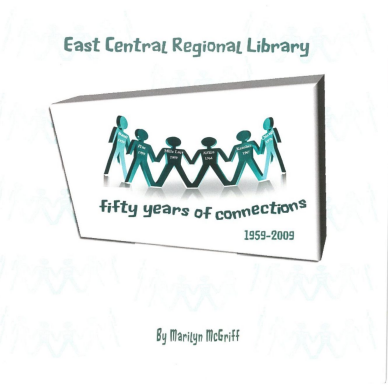
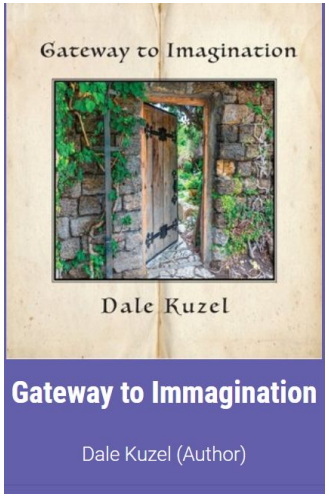
For Writers

- Pressbooks can be stand-alone tool
- Writers retain all rights to shared titles – most are selling elsewhere
- Link to purchase book in print
- Library users are book buyers
- Potential recognition in SELF-e Select

We have the tools, now to promote them!

- Link on library website
- Blog post/library newsletter
- Social media
- Public education classes
- Press releases
- Jumpstart a local writing group
- Speaking to existing writing groups
- Solicit work from individual authors directly
- Share your own creations!





Author Contest: Minnesota Author Project

- $1,000 cash prize winners in Fiction and YA categories
- Winners featured in Library Journal and honored at MLA Annual and ALA Midwinter Conferences
- Additional opportunities at public libraries statewide
- Supported by MN Library Foundation & Biblioboard
- Submission period for 2019 contest begins April 1!

Creating an ebook in Pressbooks

“I have been thinking you had better save all my letters because I plan to keep events up to date for you and in years to come my letters should be a complete diary of the doings of the Stafford family at home (for a year). You and Myron and Harriet and Gloria will then enjoy reading them—I mean in later life.”

Letter written by Ruth Stafford to her daughter Corinna, August 12, 1934

“Elvira called us last Tuesday and invited the two little girls and me to go with them to see the President. We got there at 7—listened to two bands play alternately—first the Willmar Band and then the Raymond. At 8:10 the train came and Elvira and I were so short and far behind that we only dimly saw him. He gave a short talk which we heard easily. Harriet and Gloria were in the front line with Mr. Reamer—they even saw the color of Mrs. Roosevelt’s dress.” Letter written by Ruth Stafford to her daughter Corinna, August 9, 1934

"Harriet's bike came this morning but not the handle bars and Harriet is so disgusted. She sits on it most of the time. It was right behind her while she practiced and I noticed the practice stopped often during the hour but I didn't say anything because I thot it was a special occasion." Letter dated September 9, 1934.

"It is raining again—a thunder shower this time—just a fierce one. Richard Olson plowed our garden this morning and Daddy did all the rest of the digging so now if it's nice tomorrow I shall get my seeds into the ground." Letter by Ruth Stafford, May 7, 1935

"Harriet and Marjorie went to see Treasure Island last night. When she came home she "clumped" up on the back porch and into the house singing in a terrible pirate's voice—"Yo HoHo and a bottle of rum—50 men on a dead man's chest." Sometimes she can be a regular tom boy. And of course today she has been breaking into that song every so often." Letter by Ruth Stafford, April 3, 1935.

Powerful Relationships in Leadership: A Collection of Modern Leadership Insights

Dustin S. Anderson, Carley Clinkscales, Stephen Erlandson, Brad Hak, Justin Rude Hanson, Patrick Holt, Brittany Kinney, Chenxiao Li, Vanessa Richter, Marcus E. Teachout, Brittany E. York, Jeffrey Thompson, Kenneth D. Janz, and Barbara Holmes

Powerful Relationships in Leadership caters to front runners of the leadership world who are looking for fresh perspectives into how to properly organize and create trailblazing organizations. This book is a collection of articles on aspects of leading. It separates itself from other management texts by offering perceptions of entry level personnel. It is our hope that you will begin to appreciate how entry level personnel view management and their role in guiding administrators.

Change: A Leader's Perspective

Hassan Al Tamimi, Kayleen Berwick, David Biedenbender, Nabih Elteir, Ross Hemmingsen, Kevin Horton, Benjamin Johnson, Danica Johnson, Wail Kailani, Julie Kiehne, James Lowery, Michael Mangan, Matthew Ohs, Lori Steinke, Riley Swier, Terrelle Wilson, Barbara Holmes, and Kendall Larson

Change: A Leader's Perspective represents the culmination of the Change Leadership course taught at Winona State University in the fall term of 2017. Leadership is a broad category with many facets. This book explores the subject and offers students of leadership and aspiring leaders current perspectives on leadership theories, the omnipresence of change, and personal reflections on the course material. Additional thoughts which resonate throughout this text are that leaders influence outcomes and that leadership manifests itself in change, whether by cause or effect.

Key Takeaways

Pressbooks is an easy-to-use ebook publishing tool. Load your manuscript into Pressbooks, edit as you like, publish to the web, and export into ebook and PDF/print-on-demand formats. Here's how it works:

4-STEP GUIDE TO MAKING A BOOK WITH PRESSBOOKS

STEP 1. Add Book Information

The Book Information screen is where you edit and add important information about your book: author name, publication date, publisher. You can also upload your cover here and add your copyright or Creative Commons license. You can fill in as little or as much information as you like.

1.5 WRITING FOR SUCCESS VIDEO

EDIT

Imperative

The imperative is a verb from that is used to express request, comm second person subject pronouns तू, तुम, and आप can have imperativ

An ending is added to the root of the verb to make imperative form

Subject pronoun	Ending	खाना	देखना
तू	ø (no ending, just stem of the verb)	खा	देख
तुम	-ओ	खाओ	देखो
आप	-इए / -इये	खाइए / खाइये	देखिए / देखिये

Let's take some more examples:

	तू (ø)	तुम (-ओ)	आप (-इए / -इये)
बैठना	बैठ	बैठो	बैठिए / बैठिये
आना	आ	आओ	आइए / आइये
सोना	सो	सोओ	सोइए / सोइये

Let's take some examples in sentences.

अन्दर आइए!	Get inside!
कृपया ज़रा जोर से बोलिए!	Please speak a little louder!
बेटा, अपना दूध ख़त्म कर!	Son, finish your milk!
चलो भैया, गाड़ी चलाओ!	Come on brother, drive the car!
बच्चों, बाहर जाकर खेलो!	Children, go play outside!

Keep in mind, negation in imperative sentences is expressed by मत markers come before the verb.

Example: to derive the power rule using this idea of short-term approximation, we need the binomial theorem:

$$(x+y)^p = \sum_{k=0}^{p} \binom{p}{k} x^{p-k} y^k$$

Using $f(x)=x^p$, look at

$$f(x+\Delta x) = (x+\Delta x)^p = \sum_{k=0}^{p} \binom{p}{k} x^{p-k} (\Delta x)^k.$$

Then short-term approximation tells us that

$$\sum_{k=0}^{p} \binom{p}{k} x^{p-k} (\Delta x)^k \approx x^p + f'(x)\Delta x.$$

Since we'd like to solve for $f'(x)$, rearrange:

$$f'(x) \approx \frac{\sum_{k=0}^{p} \binom{p}{k} x^{p-k} (\Delta x)^k - x^p}{\Delta x},$$

which simplifies nicely to

$$f'(x) \approx \frac{\sum_{k=1}^{p} \binom{p}{k} x^{p-k} (\Delta x)^k}{\Delta x}.$$

I'll rewrite it even more pointedly:

$$f'(x) \approx \frac{px^{p-1}\Delta x + \binom{p}{2} x^{p-2} (\Delta x)^2 + \ldots + (\Delta x)^p}{\Delta x} = px^{p-1} + \Delta x \left(\sum_{k=2}^{p} \binom{p}{k} x^{p-k} (\Delta x)^{k-1} \right).$$

As $\Delta x \to 0$, this gives us $f'(x)=px^{p-1}$, the power rule we learned in calculus. You can make this more precise by using limits throughout and using the $o(x)$ notation to keep track of the error!
