PRESIDENT ROBERT P. HOOPER

TOP MAN

When science gets around to photographing our aura, Mr. Hooper will be found enveloped in a cloud of Jeffersonian emanations; he exudes Jefferson, and to be with him is to be thrilled by the interest, devotion and industry he shows constantly to everything that has to do with Jefferson.

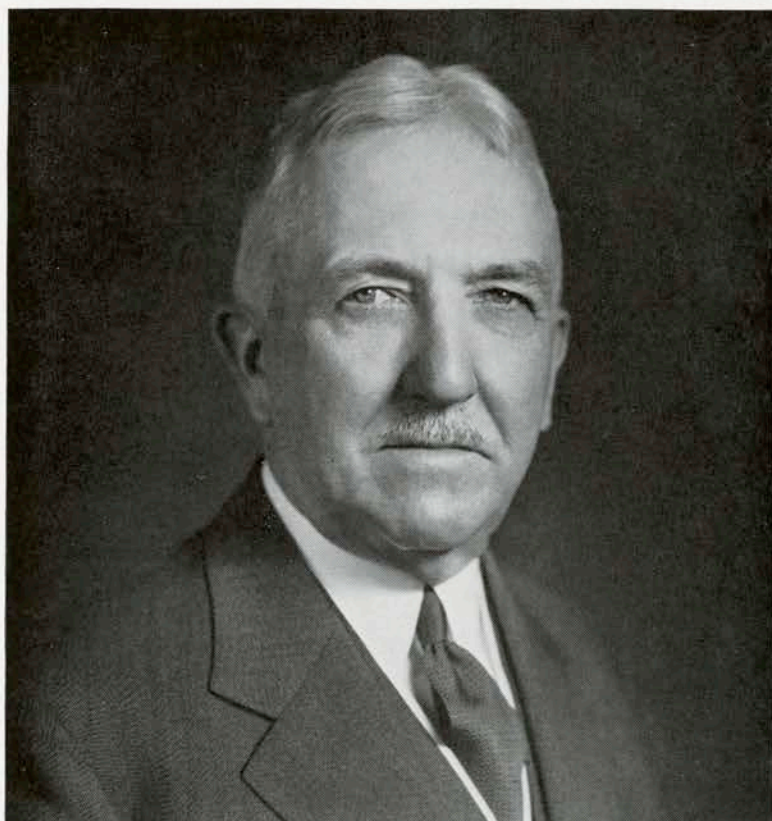

When an industrial genius, devoting untold energies to help win this war, gives all his spare moments and thoughts to the conduct of the affairs of Jefferson, that's something. But when he has been doing that for all but three of the years since we of '17 graduated, that's phenomenal.

As President of our Board of Trustees since November 18, 1936, Mr. Hooper has conducted the affairs of Jefferson as a business man would, and as a result the Jefferson Medical College and Hospital has had the same kind of success that has attended William E. Hooper and Sons Company of which he is also President.

And then there is Mrs. Hooper; a genuine, cultured, affectionate and lovable lady who presides over our President, and who is held in the same high esteem as her husband by all who know her.

Can Jefferson ask more than this? Can the Class of '17 fail to have every assurance of the future of Jefferson when it is in hands such as these?

PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD

ROBERT P. HOOPER

A F O R E W O R D

To the Class of 1917:

All Hail!

There's been many a year since we departed from the Halls of Jefferson. If you remember, this country of ours had been in war only a short time when we were graduated. Again, amidst chaos, we are in another world struggle about the same length of time, twenty-five years later. Many of us, who saw service in the World War will probably be called to the colors again and we should be proud to serve our country as we did before.

As I look at the speech I made at commencement in June, 1917, it recalls many memories. Much water has gone over our dam since that time. Some members of our class have departed. May they rest in peace! Many of us will still go along the way of life, for some time, and it will be necessary to put more effort into our endeavor. There will be much to depress us. Hope will fill our breasts only to be quenched by calamities. We have all seen the joy at the dawn of a new life and a sorrow at the slipping away of another. Apparently victory has frequently turned into defeat. Obstacles have been mounted although it has been slow. I am sure we have all been persistent and we have said to ourselves many times "it behooves us to draw more taut the bonds of our medical profession."

As I look in retrospection of the many things we have tried to attain, we have achieved those high ideals of purpose which are goodness, generosity, self-sacrifice and earnestness of purpose.

There have been many times when looking through the classbook that I wondered where every classmate was and what he was doing. I hope at this silver anniversary to find out this information. I am going to bring this note to an end, hoping to see many of you at the reunion.

President, Class of 1917,

W. L. CUNNINGHAM, M.D.

MEMORIES MIRROR

We've moved along the path of years,
Withstood the mid-day sun,
Accepted both the praise and curse,
Which come to everyone.
A few have faltered on the march
And by the wayside died,
Our heartfelt tribute here we pay,
For honestly they tried.

Now in the afternoon of life
We seek the grateful shade,
To rest and otherwise recount
The progress we have made.
Quite joyfully to fraternize,
Nor think of future fears,
But work and glory of the path
Of five and twenty years.

To all we haven't seen for long,
We mutually look strange,
Still we accept the greying locks
The mark of Time and Change,
We hear the voice, we note the laugh,
Note memories' refrain,
And all the past comes crowding back,
We're classmates once again.

Professors lose their dignity,
From which their students quake,
The dean is just the sleepy boy,
Da Costa had to wake.
The great reserve, the manner grand,
Which many try to hold,
Have faded in the distance here,
Eclipsed by friendship's gold.

Familiar classrooms, halls and lab.,
In lecture someone thinks
To 'pass him up' and then across
To Nifty Bens for drinks,
Or waiting for the prof. to come,
Another one would play,
Sets fire the paper one man reads
And then there's hell to pay.

The mannerisms each one had,
Come crowding to the fore,
We live in detail those four years,
Just as we did of yore.
We drink a sincere toast tonight,
To twenty years and five,
Both glad to be assembled here
And glad to be alive.

Twenty-fifth Anniversary Poem

JEFFERSON THEN . . . .

Not long as institutional time is measured nor even signally important in terrestrial events but certainly not dull—through one world war into a second, greater one—through collapse of a financial system, technocracy and into a so-called social reform with labor predominant. Notwithstanding, science gradually supersedes the art of practice.

Remember our great faculty? Never such group distinction before—so we thought. Then "of sudden death" the first, H. Wilson in 1919, then Stelwagon, Stewart in 1920, in like manner we lose Sweet, Loux, Metheny, Dercum, Funk, Keeler, Manges, Fisher, E. P. Davis, Burns, Nassau, Bland and Henry Mohler. Why? they ask. What's wrong with Jeff? Coplin, Klopp, Hare, McCrea at the height of their careers. Fielding Lewis and Radasch suddenly incapacitated. Jackson goes to Temple. The great DaCosta dies. Strecker goes to the University and Thad Montgomery to Temple. John Gibbon gives up teaching.

Not all bad—after a stirring campaign, the new hospital, finest of its kind, is opened in '24 followed in '29 by the building of the present college building and in '31 by the Curtis Clinic. With new buildings come new problems for the Board. Mr. Potter's loss was felt keenly. Alba Johnson, who gave us Ivycroft Farm, convalescent home for men, died suddenly and was followed in too brief time by Wilfred Frye. But Mr. Hooper has associated with him a group of public spirited men who conduct the affairs of the institution so ably.

Meanwhile, events mark progress. Jefferson, the maker of doctors, becomes research minded and the Society for Clinical Investigation is founded, embodying the necessity for presentation of clinical and experimental material before this society and others throughout the country. A new era is born. Its influence is lasting.

For better fellowship and alumni fraternity came the Ex-Interns' Society in '27. The two-day Ex-Interns' alumni clinics increase in attendance. Jeff is a more live, active Alma Mater.

Such appointments as Moon, Gruber, Thomas, Michaels give added impetus to research. Surgery looks up in Shallow's guidance. Muller is appointed. Through Gordon Pine Street becomes an active tuberculosis department with clinical and surgical divisions. Bill Kraemer interests Pierre DuPont and we have a tumor clinic with a research chemist. Mr. J. Ewing Mears' research fund is accepted for work in eugenics and hereditary disease. Meanwhile, active, friendly and instructive, Rosy starts the bi-monthly seminars at which research, clinical and experimental, is subjected to critical survey. Jake Shaeffer develops an anatomy department known world wide for research effort and all-round teaching excellence. "Daddy" Thornton, as Professor of Therapeutics, gains his birthright and continues in our hearts as a fine physician and lovable personality.

The College library is enlarged, endowed and becomes an asset to student and teacher. Baldy Keyes takes charge of Psychiatry. In '38 Mohler became Dean and Professor of Therapeutics. Through his influence a new spirit develops. In '38 the Charlotte Drake Cardeza Foundation for the study of diseases of the blood and allied conditions is founded which includes a Transfusion-Plasma Unit, hospital and college research labs and a Photographic Unit.

Following the untimely death of Doctor Mohler, Harvey "Cy" Perkins is elected Dean. We look forward to a greater Jefferson.

NOW...AND IN THE FUTURE

JEFFERSON OF THE FUTURE

The impetus of one hundred and seventeen years in all, and the acceleration of the last twenty-five which our class has witnessed, must carry Jefferson ever onward. Our interest and concern is therefore not whether we will go on but in what direction and at what speed.

Since we are not starting from scratch and anticipate no abrupt turning in our course, we should be able to project our future with some accuracy.

We of '17 are again the class of destiny with our Country declaring war on foreign powers at each end of our span of professional life to date. Jefferson continued happily on its course through the last catastrophe; it will do so again! We held firmly through the social changes of our Peace, and we will do it again!

Jefferson has no desire to live only in its past, but glories in it; it carries on in the present with a wholesome dissatisfaction and far from content; it looks forward to the future with enthusiasm and high hopes. We are not conservative, nor are we radical. If to be liberal in medical education means to be free in the selection of the best in ways and means, then we are liberal.

We feel free to try new things, to reject outmoded systems, to refuse change just for the sake of change, to show discretion in what we choose.

We have already chosen the pattern of our future: out of the past we accept the challenge to continue to turn out the best practitioners in this country; from the present we see the need to foster and encourage advancement of medical knowledge through research and investigation; in tomorrow we discern the necessity to evaluate the good and the bad in medical service.

This means we will modernize our curriculum, press research, and adapt ourselves to social progress, but we will do these things only with the best intelligence and advice that we can muster.

No one can predict the future of personalities or the physical features of our College. Men will continue to come and go and buildings have a habit of rising and falling; changes in both are inevitable.

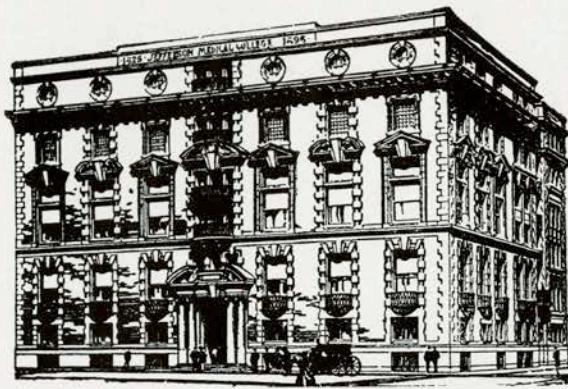

Our students of the future will be better trained than we were in 1913; our Faculty will be the best that we can raise ourselves or attract to us; our Alumni will be the better for these reasons.

Further, deponent sayeth not!

THE ROAD TO YESTERDAY

By the cozy fireside, in the quiet of your home,
Weary feet content to stay, the mind is prone to roam
Along the road to yesterday—the road of all mankind,
Though never walked by human foot, but only trod in mind.

It climbs the highest mountain with grade so very steep,
Or sinks into the valley, so cool, so dark, so deep,
Through woodland glade it sometimes leads. Again
It crosses desert barren or even treeless plain.

The way is rough and rocky or seems to fade away,
Leaving but a narrow path to guide along life's way.
Memory leads us backward with kind unerring hand,
To see anew and scenes review, in this enchanted land.

The scenes are very pleasant along this magic trail,
Hate and anger both are lost; faith and love prevail.
Everyone is happy, helping hands extend,
Acquaintances are never found, everyone a friend.

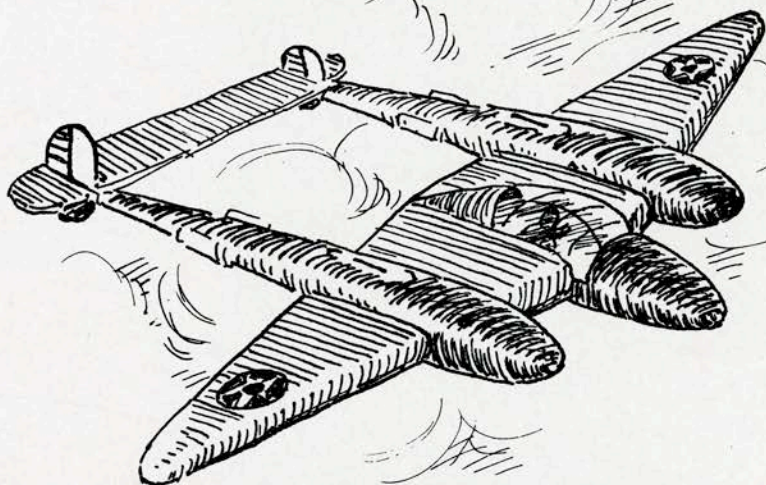

Future ne'er can give us scenes as true as these,
Memory gives us treasures more than autumn leaves.
So when the mind is troubled, thoughts are apt to stray
And search for peace and happiness on the road to yesterday.

STATISTICS

Well! Here it is. Your committee has sent dozens of letters; used many stamps, a lot of envelopes and much profanity to obtain this result. We deplore the failure in ability or willingness of some to co-operate. We appreciate the help of all participating. In some ways this book is a monstrosity; in others a hybrid. At any rate we did our damndest—angels could do no more. The following startling statistics were obtained:

THE FINAL DOOR

From darkness into light we come,
From abstract into being move
And from the door of birth begin
Our day, extending from the dawn
Of our lives, throughout the day
To sunset skies, where glow
The crimson crowning glories or
Clouds, forever darkening all.
As through each year a door
We pass into a room from which
There can never be retreat, and
'Tis filled with opportunity
For good or evil, and when
The year in time has passed on
We move by newly opened door
And leave behind a room, a year,
With deeds sublime or evil, too,
Or wasted time forever lost.
Thus year by year the structure blends
And should we stop or pause before
A room and be denied the door
Or by plan Divine cease from toil
With one year's room but partly filled,
By others are our lives surveyed
And measured by a worldly rule
As classified in terms of worth
Or service to self or others.
Towards the final door we move
And thus would pray for constancy
In effort and to see and know
Just what is best for us to do,
To fill with naught but good our years,
To cause our rooms to overflow
With deeds for others' good, and when
It comes our time to pause or cease
Our toil and go through the door
Of darkness of eternal night,
We might look back and see once more
A sunset sky of colors that
Will blend and cast ahead a ray
So bright 'twill pierce the blackest gloom
And guide us through this darkened room
To light of everlasting day.
