Firm offers to build convention center

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

An offer has been made by the National Group of Companies to build the Carbondale convention center without financial guarantees from the city and the Farmer's Home Administration.

Members of Fields, Goldman and Magee architectural and engineering firm of Mount Vernon went before the City Council on Monday representing the National Group of Companies, which is located in Madison, Wis.

Bill Rose, director of FGM business development, said the

Gus Bode

Gus says the only guarantee the city can make about the convention center is that there are no guarantees.

only requirements asked of the city would be to issue industrial bonds, acquire and sell the necessary property and build the parking garage across from the convention center.

HE SAID city officials have indicated that these stipulations could be met. The industrial bonds would be backed privately, he said.

Jack Goldman, president of FGM, told the council that the convention center would include 248 hotel rooms, a meeting room to accommodate 1,000 people, as well as an indoor swimming pool and restaurant.

Rose said the Hilton Corp. would be interested in adding the convention center to its franchise.

He said the convention center would cost about $10 million for construction with the overall cost amounting to nearly $16 million.

"WE REQUIRE no guarantee from Carbondale or any other government agency," said Clifford Fields, chief executive of FGM.

Council members expressed interest in the offer, however, City Manager Bill Dixon said several issues must be resolved before the National Group of Companies can be named as the developer.

He said the city has already agreed to allow Stan Hoyer to develop the convention center. The city is also committed to guaranteeing $4.55 million of the $14 million in bonds requested by Hoyer. Dixon said the city agreed to back the bonds as long as the Farmer's Home Administration agrees to guarantee the remaining $9.45 million and other conditions are met. Officials from FmHA have not indicated whether they will guarantee the $9.45 million.

DIXON SAID the city is also waiting for a feasibility study on the convention center, which is expected to be completed later this month.

Council considers taking on operation of Shawnee project

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

Reservations about the future of the city's energy division prompted the City Council to await further study before taking action on an offer to transfer the assets of the Shawnee Solar Project to the city.

Representatives from the SSP told the council that it will not be able to maintain its facility at 808 S. Forest St. and the resources in it beyond Oct. '81 due to a lack of funds. To save the work the SSP has done, they suggested moving the offices of the city's energy division into the facility.

The facility, which has housed the SSP for almost three years, has been remodeled by volunteers to provide the community an example of possible approaches to energy conservation for a typical home.

While most of the council members expressed support of SSP's goal to educate the community on energy conservation, questions were raised about the expenses this addition could add to the city's dwindling energy budget.

Mayor Helen Westburg noted that Carbondale has been an energy leader in Southern Illinois for years but suggested that the city's prospects for the future in this area are far from rosy.

"Our energy program is at a crossroads," she said. "There are questions about our being able to fund our energy program at its current level come May 1."

Robert Pauls, energy coordinator for the city, said, however, that he believes he could take the SSP up on its offer and not have to ask the city for any additional funds for this fiscal year.

In a recent memo to the city manager Pauls said acquiring the SSP's book, periodical, audio-visual and tool-lending libraries, educational displays and building, with all its energy improvements, would greatly enhance the city's energy services.

"I have been convinced for several years that acquiring a separate headquarters for the Energy Division will improve the quality of our public education responsibilities and improve the image of the city as a progressive leader on energy issues," Pauls said.

He also said that he thought moving the division out of City Hall will not create significant problems, nor will the minor improvements that the SSP said noted might be needed to make to the building before winter, such as installing a furnace to the existing ductwork.

Bill Richey, director of the SSP, echoed Pauls' optimism for moving the energy division into the building and thereby preserving its services. He said

It's a merry-go-living

Melvin Padgett of Gerald, Mo., sets up a merry-go-round for the Apple Festival, which begins Wednesday in Murphysboro. The fest will feature contests, a parade and bands under the theme "Life's Precious Moments." Bands from Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri, as well as floats and baton twirlers, will highlight the parade. And Captain Applesauce, mascot and guardian of the Apple Festival, is sure to make an appearance during the fest. This is the 32nd year for the Apple Festival. Last year, the fest drew 50,000 people.

Board to vote again on computer proposal

By Karen Wilberger
Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees will vote Thursday on a proposal to purchase a new main frame computer as part of a 5-year plan to upgrade the University's computer system.

Jerry Looff, business manager for Computing Affairs, said Tuesday that Computing Affairs has recommended two computers to the board — the IBM 3081-D costing about $2 million and the IBM 3081-GX costing about $2.5 million.

Looff said the actual cost of the computers will be less than anticipated because of a recent price reduction by IBM.

This will be the second time the board will vote on the purchase of a new computer. It denied a request to buy the IBM 3081-D in December because of lack of information about the request, which was first made in November.

In other business, the board will take action on a proposed budget for fiscal year 1985, and a proposed fiscal year 1986 budget request to the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

The proposed $210 million budget for FY-85 is a seven percent increase from last year's budget.

Out of the appropriations, the IBHE recommended that SIU-C increase salaries by 5 percent, and library materials by 10 percent.

It also recommended that the engineering and technology

Senate wants separate grievance policy

By Ed Foley
Staff Writer

Despite urgings from the chairman of the Administrative and Professional Staff Council to maintain a common policy, the Faculty Senate voted Tuesday to tell President Somit that it wants a separate grievance procedure.

Terry Mathias, assistant director of University Relations and chairman of the Administrative and Professional Staff Council, argued that the A-P Staff should continue to be included in the policy.

The major faculty objection to the retention of one procedure for both groups centered around what they saw as the unnecessary involvement of A-P staff in faculty matters.

Mathias responded that A-P staff did not claim an inherent right to sit on grievance panels, but that some faculty members currently prefer A-P staff members on their panels and they only want to preserve this option.

A person going before a grievance panel does not select panel members, but may reject a certain number of members.

Mathias emphasized two points in his case for a single grievance policy. First, he said that two grievance cases were heard in the last two years that involved only A-P staff. He said the A-P Staff Council was "reluctant to build a rather monolithic document" for itself to handle such a small number of cases.

The council's second concern, he said, is that the "four dozen or so" people who hold both faculty and administrative positions, or whose job description is otherwise indistinct, should have the option

Reagan, Gromyko talks set; goal is to reduce suspicion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced Tuesday he will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at the White House on Sept. 28 for his first face-to-face talk with any senior Kremlin leader since taking office nearly four years ago. Reagan, whose political opponents blame him for rekindling an arms race with the Soviet Union, said the most important thing he hopes to accomplish by the talk is "to maybe convince him the United States means no harm."

Vietnam political prisoners might be freed

WASHINGTON (AP) The Reagan administration will ask Vietnam to release over the next two years thousands of current and former Vietnamese political prisoners for resettlement in the United States, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday. The program, as outlined by Shultz before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearing, would affect some 10,000 Vietnamese, many of whom had close ties to the United States during the Vietnam war.

Pope attracts Montreal's biggest crowd ever

MONTREAL (AP) — Pope John Paul II, parish priest for a day to this bustling northern metropolis, beckoned Canadians on Tuesday to leave the "spiritual desert" of the modern world and rediscover God. "Nothing can fill the emptiness of his absence!" the pontiff, wagging a finger, preached to more than 300,000 people in central Jarry Park. It was the biggest crowd ever assembled in this French-Canadian city. The pope, whose visit has stirred protests among feminists here, also took note Tuesday of the expanding role of women in the liberal Canadian church.

Hurricane Diana slams into North Carolina

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Hurricane Diana, whirling 135 mph winds around its eye, slammed into North Carolina's southeastern coast Tuesday night, with torrential rain and tree-bending wind that threatened to push tides up to 12 feet above normal. Thousands of people fled to higher ground. At 8 p.m., winds were clocked at 100 mph at Yaupon Beach on Oak Island near Cape Fear at nightfall as the eye of the first Atlantic hurricane of the season was just off the coast, about 30 miles south-southeast of downtown Wilmington. The hurricane's storm surge of high water was expected to coincide with a full moon high tide.

Shooting death of 2-year-old ruled accidental

BRECKENRIDGE HILLS, Mo. (AP) — Police said they consider the shooting death of a 2-year-old St. Louis County girl by another toddler Sunday night accidental and said there are no plans to pursue the case. Tia Denise Neal died of a chest wound at the DePaul Health Center in Bridgeton, Mo., just before 9 p.m. Sunday, just more than an hour after the shooting. Police said 2-year-old Shea Jones, whose family was living in the same home with Tia's, pulled the trigger of a .38-caliber Colt revolver she found in a nightstand.

Teamster's local goes Dem; largest in nation backs Fritz

CHICAGO (AP) — One of the nation's largest Teamsters locals has broken ranks with the labor union's top leaders and voted to support Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale. Members of Chicago Teamsters Local 743, which represents more than 24,000 workers, expressed their preference Mondale in a poll. The results were announced at a Monday night meeting of the local. Of those responding, 2,534, or 72 percent, favored Mondale, compared to 881, or 25 percent, for President Reagan. Another 3 percent, or 105 union members, endorsed others or were undecided.

Mondale attacks deficit, calls for Reagan plan

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, renewing his demand that Ronald Reagan produce a deficit reduction plan of his own, sought to put the president on the defensive Tuesday, saying, "you can run, but you can't hide." Mondale used his appearance before the tool makers to dramatize his belief that sharply rising deficits are destroying America's ability to compete overseas.

Senate showdown

McClure says he would be most effective...

By Jane Grandolfo
Staff Writer

Gary McClure believes Illinois' 58th District "desperately needs an effective senator," and he says he's the man for the job.

The 38-year-old Democrat said he feels his business experience and work as Randolph County coroner will give him a good edge over his opponent, Republican Rep. Ralph Dunn of Du Quoin.

"The county government is one area that the elected official is close to the people," McClure said.

A former apprentice plumber and small businessman, McClure said he will also bring a good working knowledge of the labor force, the union and its problems to the job.

ILLINOIS has been losing jobs at a tremendous rate, McClure said, and he blames unemployment on the "high cost of doing business" in Illinois. McClure said this high cost will lead to population decline, and fewer Illinois residents means less influence in national policy, McClure said.

"Because Illinois did not grow at the same rate of population as other states, we lost two congressional seats," he said.

The way to revive the state job market and keep the population growing, McClure said, is to "make it profitable for industries to be here." He said one way industries could profit by doing business in Illinois is for the state to fund workers' compensation programs, instead of private carriers — a concept McClure introduced early in his campaign.

McClure said that if companies dropped private insurance carriers, they would save a lot of money. "The state charges a premium, but much less, and there are no salesmen and no profit margin," he said.

McClure also said it is vital to continue coal research as a means of preserving and creating jobs.

Finding new uses for Illinois coal is imperative, McClure said. If a strict pollution control law is passed to outlaw burning high sulfur coal, Illinois will suffer drastically, he said. "If this acid rain legislation is passed in Illinois, it will literally shut down the coal industry," he said.

McClure called Dunn an "ineffective legislator," particularly on coal issues.

"The individual has been in the House for 12 years, and only sponsored three pieces of major coal legislation — and only one of those got passed," he said.

McClure said his plans for education include making SIU-C a "major university," comparable to the University of Illinois, he said.

McClure said the only thing standing between SIU-C and national prominence is funding for graduate level programs and research facilities.

McClure said tuition at SIU-C should be lowered "rather than just holding the line."

Dispute brewing over who pays for Halloween band

By David Liss
Staff Writer

The University and the city reached an impasse at a Halloween Core Committee meeting Tuesday over who would pay for a live band for the Carbondale Halloween celebration this year.

Representatives from the Student Center and the Student Programming Council told the committee that the University would provide $3,000 for a live band on Grand Avenue, but only if the city provides matching funds.

"Last year we got stuck paying the whole bill," said Jim Biever, consorts chairman for SPC. He said the cost of the band ended up being about $4,000.

"This year it will cost more, and we can't afford to foot the entire bill," he said.

The Halloween Core Committee set a figure of $6,000 for the band plus staging costs, lighting, food and miscellaneous expenses. The event costs more this year, Biever said, because the band performed at the Recreation Center last year, eliminating the cost of staging.

Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan, representing the city on the committee, felt the SPC-Student Center proposal was unfair.

"This is an ultimatum," he said. "The city would probably be able to come up with $3,000 from the general revenue fund, but it's unfair."

Hogan said the city has no separate entities from which to draw the money, but the University does.

"If the University doesn't want to contribute, that's all right with the city," Hogan said. "The city won't contribute either."

"I think at this late date there's little left to salvage," he said.

"We need the band on Grand Avenue as a safety factor," said James Prowell, secretary of the committee. The band helps to attract people away from South Illinois Avenue, he said, reducing crowding and improving safety.

Representatives of the city and the University will meet again later this week to try to reach some agreement, Prowell said.

...while Dunn says he has more experience

By Jane Grandolfo
Staff Writer

Rep. Ralph Dunn said his main concerns are coal and education, and if elected as the 58th District state senator, he hopes to transform these concerns into action.

The Republican from Du Quoin has represented the 115th District for 12 years, and on this premise — experience — he hopes to become senator.

Dunn, 70, is soft-spoken and cordial. He said one reason he is leaving a "safe" House seat to run for the Senate is to serve a larger constituency.

"That way I can help twice as many people," he said.

Dunn and Democratic opponent Gary McClure are vying for the Senate seat that will be vacated by Sen. Ken Buzbee early next year. Buzbee was defeated in a primary bid for the 22nd District U.S. House seat.

DUNN SAID it's only natural that he'll focus on coal and education if elected. He has been a member of the House Higher Education Committee and the Illinois Energy Resources Commission since his first term. In 1981, Dunn was elected chairman of the IERC, a position that alternates between the House and Senate every two years. Dunn also feels he can bring experience to the Senate because of his membership on the Coal Research Board.

Dunn said the answer to the ailing Illinois coal industry and the acid rain dilemma lies in research. The way to expand Illinois coal markets is to find a way to take sulfur out of coal before it's burned, he said.

Scrubbers, a method of extracting the high sulfur pollutants from coal during the burning process, are not the answer, he said. "We started too late with the scrubbers — so far they haven't been too successful because they're too costly to build and operate and there are too many by-products to get rid of," Dunn said.

Dunn said he considers education to be his "her area of expertise. Dunn's plans for SIU-C include directing more funding to the University, and finding a library storage facility.

FUNDING for elementary and secondary education will also be a major issue in 1985, Dunn said.

Dunn said he would support a bill requiring the state to pay for 80 percent of educational costs. Taxpayers currently pay for 62 percent of educational expenses, he said.

Dunn said he is not worried about losing his House seniority by starting as a new senator. The only thing seniority is good for, he said, "is a low license number, a prime parking space, a good House seat."

Dunn said committee appointments are based on expertise, not seniority.

"McClure has no expertise in any of my fields, namely coal research or education," Dunn said.

Student Senate to fill committee posts

By David Liss
Staff Writer

The Student Senate will elect members to two senate committees at its meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom D.

The Committee on Internal Affairs and the Finance Committee will each have seven senators, to be elected by the senate as a whole, said Davu Strong, Undergraduate Student Organization chief-of-staff.

"The CIA makes sure that the USO constitution is being upheld," Strong said.

It also determines which organizations will be registered student organizations, reviews presidential appointments and appoints an election commissioner to oversee student elections, Strong said.

"The Finance Committee handles general funding and finance allocation," he said. The committee allocated about $210,000 to registered student organizations last year, Strong said. The committee has about $21,000 to allocate in general funding, he said, which goes to RSOs for special events not budgeted in last year's fee allocations.

In other business, the senate will decide on a bill to seat Susan Kubinak as a senator for the College of Science. She has been recommended to fill one of 10 senate positions left vacant because of resignations or lack of candidates.

"There might be floor legislation introduced to seat other senators," Strong said.

Banned Books Week

IN A COUNTRY that prides itself on individual liberties and personal freedoms, it is ironic that literature intended to impart understanding of human nature is in constant danger of being removed from bookshelves.

The list of books that have been banned at one time or another is long, ranging from J.D. Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye" and Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" to Mike Royko's "Boss," a biography of Richard Daley and the American Heritage Dictionary.

We are now in the midst of Banned Books Week, which is intended to remind the public that many people are deprived access to books considered to be classics.

Many works of literature are subjected to criticism for containing language, and religious and political beliefs that are offensive to some people. But nothing qualifies one person to say that one book is acceptable while another book is not, which is an idea foreign to many parts of the world but specified by the U.S. Constitution.

Banning reading material offensive to some people does not always accomplish the goal of suppressing ideas. In fact, it often arouses curiosity as to why a particular work was black-listed.

Reading has long been recognized as a good educator, and a well-rounded education includes exposure to ideas that are not necessarily agreeable to everyone. Banning books is an action whose time has past.

THESE ARE HARD TIMES. WE ALL HAVE TO MAKE SACRIFICES.

Drive-up windows

IT HAS LONG been known that the success of a business depends in part on its location. But that idea has taken on a new dimension.

Fast-food restaurants and liquor stores have applied to the City of Carbondale to open drive-up windows from which to sell their wares. It's convenient for customers and, therefore, profitable for businesses.

To operate a drive-up window requires permission from the Carbondale City Council, which acts only after evaluation by the city's Community Development Department. And the decisions have not been easy to make. The primary reason given by the city for rejection of drive-up window applications is the probability of interference with traffic.

It is unfortunate that some businesses can operate drive-up windows while their competitors cannot. But when traffic and pedestrian safety is endangered, the city obviously has no choice but to deny applications.

Don't blame the bees

I am writing this in reply to a letter by John Eaton, Mr. Eaton, I'm sure, has highly exaggerated his experience with what he calls "the Bees."

Being a beekeeper I have observed these "bees" on several occasions as I've walked by trash receptacles. In most observances I've made I've seen maybe two bees. The other insects are actually members of the wasp family. The few numbers of bees are collecting water for temperature control of their colony or for dilution of honey. Also, the honey bee presently in North America (Apis mellifera) do not attack while swarming. Even if they did attack while swarming the swarming season is three months past.

The beekeeping industry at the present time is suffering due to marketing problems. Negative propaganda such as that submitted by Mr. Eaton is just the type of false information which hurts the beekeeping industry. Beekeeping, surprisingly to some of you, is a complicated industry. People who don't know a few facts about bees should find out a little bit about what's going on before writing on the subject.

— Brian Taylor, Okaw Valley Honey Farms.

No simple solutions for world peace

"War and It's Alternatives, a 20th Century Survey" is an innovative class being offered for the first time this semester. The class uses creative techniques to examine all aspects of the problems of war. It is taught by five professors from the departments of Philosophy, History, Anthropology, Geography and Political Science.

The class includes discussions on such topics as the United Nations, Amnesty International, international law, Gandhi and nuclear winter. Recently, the topic of discussion was an editorial by John Dyslin, associate editorial page editor of the Daily Egyptian.

Mr. Dyslin used the film "Red Dawn" as a springboard for his

"what if" speculation on international politics. What if the Soviets are really planning to take over Central America; What if the Soviets really have their eyes on Western Europe; What if the Soviets actually intend to invade the United States through Mexico...

Mr. Dyslin quotes a former Brezhnev aide that defected in 1976 who believes we should fear the many evil intentions of the Soviet Union. Mr. Dyslin seems to agree with the Soviet dissident who suggests that the politics of the world are simply a conflict between Good and Evil (West and East) and that stability can be achieved by our using the same simplistic, aggressive techniques that we have come to deplore from the Soviets.

As we have discovered from our discussions in class, the answers are not so easily found, and we must not resort to what seem to be simple solutions. In this world threatened by extinction, the Soviet Union and the United States need to find ways of dealing with their differences; war is an awful alternative. The world is not a simple place so we should not deal with it simplistically. It is very easy to hate yet hatred cannot lead to peace.

— Tim Larson, Graduate Student, Computer Science, and Cathy Lloyd, Senior, Biological Sciences. Note: this letter was signed by 25 other people.

Print bigoted Will, not banal Goodman

This is the last straw. It's about time somebody stood up for George F. (for fear-no-liberal) Will. Sure he's a bigoted, opinionated, sexist, ultra-conservative high-browed jerk, but at least he's funny. Unlike Ellen Goodman, if he doesn't have anything to say he doesn't try to babble his way through 500 words of boring, back-to-nature banalities, or worse, fanatical feminist futilizations.

What this university needs is more intelligent political satire. Bring back George! Don't just run him two days a week either;

put him in every day! If he doesn't write a column every day then get some of his old reprints. I'll bet he was in rare form about 1974. But please, enough of Goodman's vapid, tedious chattering under the guise of journalism. — Doug Murphy, Senior, Physiology

Politics and religion mix with right touch

WITH PRESIDENTIAL candidates, governors and archbishops citing chapter and verse to back their reading of the roles of religion and politics, a clearer understanding of the issue might come from considering the life of Monsignor Geno Baroni. He died of cancer in late August at 53 after nearly 25 years in Washington that included ministries from an inner-city black parish to government service.

From 1977 to 1981, Baroni, following Senate confirmation, served in the Carter administration as assistant secretary of HUD for neighborhood development. It was the highest federal position ever held by an active clergyman. The Reagan administration, which came into office promoting itself as the true champion of neighborhoods and families, abolished the office first thing.

Whether dealing with the bureaucracies of the church or the government, Baroni saw them as the same: With a touch of gentle ingenuity, you can get around them. Marshall the facts, make some phone calls, persuade the powerful that it's to their benefit to respond positively, twist an arm or rub an elbow. That, Baroni often said cheerfully, is power politics whether you are toiling for God or Caesar. City hall and the chancery understand the same language: Lead the people or risk irrelevance.

Colman McCarthy
Washington Post
Writers Group

BARONI HIMSELF had learned the dialect well. He became the first Catholic priest to get the permission of his bishop to march in the 1965

Selma, Ala., civil-rights demonstration. Why shouldn't I be there, he reasoned. What was happening in the South he had seen in his black parish in Washington, thought the racism took different forms. In Alabama, dogs and horses were used to keep out the blacks. In northern cities, Baroni said, banks and city halls used redlining — the arbitrary line around a poor neighborhood that marked it unsafe for investment. The civil-rights laws that he worked for in the 1960s were part of the struggle that led to the passage of the 1975 anti-redlining law, the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act.

During his four years at HUD, Baroni was the first federal housing official ever to show up at neighborhood meetings in cities like Detroit, Pittsburgh, Gary and Baltimore and come to them as an old friend, not a new stranger. He had been there before as founder and president of the National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs.

IN THE meeting halls of such places as the Michigan Avenue

Community Organization in Detroit, Baroni persuaded ethnics, blacks, Hispanics and displaced Appalachians to forget their differences and form coalitions. "Neighborhoods," he said, "are the key to the problems in the city." Then he would add, "Mutual self-help — it's so simple but we are always having to learn it over."

Some of those who heard Baroni's message and realized its political potential were several ethnic women who decided to use their community activism as a base for elective politics. They ran for Congress, and won. These included Reps. Barbara Mikulski (D-Md.), Mary Rose Oakar (D-Ohio), Marcy Kaptur (D-Ohio) and Geraldine Ferraro, now running for the vice-presidency. Baroni, always a pace or two ahead, urged his allies not to become "liberal basket cases," a phrase he used to describe '60s activists who knew how to begin programs but not keep them running 10 or 20 years later.

SINCE 1966, I had interviewed

Baroni several times. When asked a question, he preferred to tell a story or build a little anecdotal irrigation ditch, and water the truth that way. For his thoughts on ethnic identity, he told funny stories about "my kind of people, PIGS: Poles, Italians, Greeks, Slovaks." When asked to explain his theological leanings, he said he believed in the power of God's grace but insisted that people could better benefit from it if they had jobs, homes and some extra money, for an occasion. Night out at the bowling alley or neighborhood restaurant, preferably Italian.

In the past few months, I visited Baroni a half-dozen times in the hospital. He shared with me, and with others who knew he was dying and went to his bedside, a calmness about death that edified even the most seasoned nurses on the cancer ward.

His personal advice to visitors was much like his political advice: form coalitions. Join the best parts of yourself: ideals with energy. It worked for me, he said.

Negotiator says administration 'foot-dragging' is causing delay

By Ed Foley
Staff Writer

Administration "foot-dragging" to gain leverage in contract negotiations is the explanation Civil Service Bargaining Organization chief negotiator Lee Hester gave Monday for the delay in distribution of pay increases approved by the union's rank and file.

Acting Vice President for Financial Affairs Charles Hinderman denied that, saying the distribution of the raises "makes no sense" until the remainder of the union's contract is negotiated.

Hester guessed negotiations would be complete in two more weeks but refused to elaborate on specific stumbling blocks. Hinderman would say only that they are "making some progress."

"We take one step forward, two steps back, two steps forward. These things are always give and take, and the process takes time."

Hester said that salary increases could have been paid a month ago. "This reflects some kind of inefficiency on their part. All they have to do is pick up the phone, call payroll, and say 'Pay the people their six percent across the board.' It's a cop-out on their part."

"That's his perception," said Hinderman. "We don't have a contract negotiated, and it's as simple as that. He knows very well that until the entire contract is agreed upon, no portion of it will go into effect."

The increases are retroactive to July 1, according to Hester.

Hester said that Illinois Labor Board ruled three years ago that negotiated salary increases agreed upon by the rank and file were to stand as agreed. A law effective the first of this year that requires contract settlement 15 days before the expiration of the old contract is not yet enforceable, said Hester, for several reasons, including the difficulties in staffing the commission charged with its enforcement.

"This same thing has happened in years past, and hopefully the new legislation will prevent this kind of delaying tactic in the future," he said.

that many community programs like the SSP have found it difficult to get funding in recent years because of a "de-emphasis on energy conservation."

"We think our offer was a valid one and one that will do the community and SIU-C the most good," Richey said.

Due to its location and the type and quality of its resources the SSP is a popular source of information for SIU-C students, according to Richey.

Among its resources are books, periodicals, and pamphlets on designing solar energy collectors and greenhouses and using heat pumps and kerosene heaters. Richey said the SSP's library also contains over 1500 scientific research reports on technical aspects of topics such as geo-thermal and solar energy.

If a solution to the SSP's problems are not found, Richey said the impact on the facility's collection of resources could be tragic.

"We'd have to fold up," he said. "It would break up what I consider a really valuable collection."

City Manager Bill Dixon said that it was his impression that no conclusion has been reached between the SSP and the SIU-C administration, which leases the building to the SSP at a nominal fee. Dixon suggested that before the council reached a decision on the SSP's offer it should check into the administration's plans for leasing the building if the city were to move in.

programs receive $576,000, computer science receive $60,000, and computing affairs receive $300,000.

The FY-86 operating costs and capital development budget request call for $142.3 million for operation of the SIU-C campus and $11.6 million for renovation of buildings at both campuses. The board is scheduled to present its request to the IBHE by Oct 1.

The board approved at its July meeting to include in SIU-C's operating budget a 16 percent faculty salary increase, a 12 percent civil service salary increase, and a 10 percent increase for the purchase of library materials.

of having either A-P staff or faculty representation on their panels.

He said there also could be cases in which a faculty member would want an A-P staff member on his grievance panel. John Gregory, professor in mathematics, asked him for some examples, and Mathias' reply — questions of research, teaching duties, and space assignments — did not impress Gregory.

"You're continually raising questions that I consider academic," said Gregory.

The senate also discussed, and tabled, a resolution calling for faculty members to be a majority of any University committee "primarily involved with educational policy."

Senators were unable to agree on the consequences of requiring a faculty majority on university "educational policy" committees.

Grad student to show film about father

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

Graduate student Steve James will present a documentary, "B.J.," at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Student Center Auditorium.

"B.J." is about the life of the owner of a small business in Hampton, Va. James, a native of Virginia, made the film for a very special reason: B.J. is Bill James, his father.

James had wanted to make a film about his father for about three years, he said.

"I know one thing that struck me about him, and that I felt would make a good film, was how much like him I was," James said. In this way, the film is not only about his father, but tells something about James, too.

JAMES SAID his father has run his floor-covering business in the same location for 30 years.

"I have a lot of personal memories of working at that store," James said. "I wanted to try to capture some of that before it's gone."

It took James about a year to make the 40-minute film, two weeks of which were spent filming in Virginia. It cost him $6,000, more than all the other films he's made as a graduate student.

James will also show three shorter films Saturday. "Daily Chores" tells the story of a wife who kills her husband after 30 years of marriage. It is based on an article James read about such a woman, who seemed to be a gentle, loving person.

"I WAS intrigued with that whole phenomena... how someone like her could do something like that." He described his film as "short on plot, long on atmosphere—very much in the mode of a minimalist film narrative. My intention in filming it was to show the psychological state of the main character, which was one of despair and confinement."

"Daily Chores" received awards at the New York Exposition Film Festival in 1982.

"No Genital Sensation" is James' response to the increasing amount of violence in Hollywood films. The film combines the last scene of the 1967 film "Bonnie and Clyde" with the Marilyn Monroe comedy "Some Like It Hot." "Bonnie and Clyde," James said, was the first Hollywood film to graphically depict violence.

"AT THE TIME it really shocked people," he said, but now violence has become accepted in films. "The new thing to do now is to mix violence and comedy." Graphic violence is shown in the film at the same time that something funny is happening, he said.

"We have become so calloused as viewers that it doesn't even shake us anymore to see things that back in 1967 would have literally devastated people," he said. "I was real concerned about that."

His film compilation compares the way violence is portrayed with sex in films. "The tension of the scenes is sort of a metaphor for the sexual act. The rising tension, the climax, violent or otherwise, and the finale," he said.

JAMES IS also showing "Energy for the Future," a documentary he worked on along with other students in a summer documentary workshop under the direction of Mike Covell, assistant professor in cinema and photography. There is no admission charge for the showings.

James has been working on his master of fine arts degree in film production for almost five years. He received his bachelor's degree in communications from James Madison University in Virginia.

Two of his films have been selected by the Oberhausen International Film Festival, held in Germany.

His plans for the future are uncertain. He said he would like to avoid doing commercials even though that is where most of the job openings in his field are. He said he would consider working in public television, and would like to arrange funding for a few independent projects of his own. With his master's degree, he could teach film production at a university, he said.

Big brothers and sisters help children with family problems

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

Sometimes when kids are having problems in school or at home, what they really need is a big brother or sister to care about them.

That is why the Jackson County Youth Service Bureau operates its Big Brother, Big Sister program. Jane Lapp, volunteer supervisor of the program, said the program "provides appropriate role models for kids who have problems in their family life."

The children's problems vary, but whatever they are, volunteer "big brothers and big sisters" try to help "just by being a friend," she said.

Lapp tries to find volunteers over 18 who are interested in being that friend for a few hours a week.

She said volunteers don't need any previous training. They just need to be willing to make a six-month commitment to spend four hours a week with their "little brother or sister."

During that four hours, which can be spread throughout the week, volunteers take the child away from home for a while. They should plan appropriate activities to do in this time, such as play games, go to a movie or bowling, talk out problems, and be a friend, Lapp said.

Volunteers are screened to weed out possible abusive volunteers, and as an extra precaution, no male big brothers are matched up with female little sisters. The screening also enables Lapp to "get a feel of what the volunteer is like, and come up with the most suitable match."

She said volunteers should be aware that "the kids are not going to have appropriate social behavior." They may be coming from homes with single parents, with parents who are substance abusers, or with parents who are in some other way unable to provide positive adult role models, she said.

"They are not going to be your normal, everyday, cute child. Sometimes they'll throw a temper tantrum, or engage in some other inappropriate behavior," Lapp said.

She did say, however, that often the children are more cooperative with their volunteers than they are with their parents.

Lapp said the volunteers can benefit by "getting a new friend, and getting the satisfaction of knowing they've helped another individual."

The child benefits by being with an adult who can provide a positive role model which may be lacking at home. She said if the volunteer-child relationship isn't working out, a volunteer can request to be matched up with another child.

Lapp said the children are sometimes brought in by parents who request that their children be in the program, and sometimes referred by social service agencies. All children are there on a voluntary basis.

The children range in age from six to 16. Lapp said there are 25 children in the program now and only 15 volunteers, and she gets more children everyday.

The whole program, she said is run by volunteer effort, including her own position. She is a social welfare student doing an internship in this program. "We get absolutely no funding," she said.

Going international

Variety of programs attracts international students

By Kyu Ho Youm
Staff Writer

SIU-C ranks sixth in international student enrollment among American colleges and universities during the 1983-84 academic year, according to the Institute of International Education's annual census of foreign students in the nation.

The findings of the Washington, D.C.-based IIE's survey were published in the Sept. 5 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education.

With 2,598 foreign students, comprising 11.1 percent of total enrollment, SIU-C moved up from eighth in the rankings for 1982-83.

In the 1981-82 school year, SIU-C ranked 30th in the nation.

THERE ARE several reasons for the steady increase in SIU-C's international students over the years, said Jared H. Dorn, director of SIU-C's International Programs and Services.

"As a comprehensive university, we're still relatively inexpensive," he said. This makes SIU-C attractive when compared to other institutions, he said. Students in our country has doubled or tripled very quickly," Dorn said. "SIU-C is just a mirror of what is happening nationally."

The University's comprehensive education is attractive to international students, he said.

"WE OFFER many programs — from non-credit special training programs to Ph.D programs," Dorn said. "Here, you can get just about everything available in higher education in the United States. Many of our programs are in great demand by international students, especially from developing countries."

He also pointed to the "reasonable" tuition and fees of SIU-C as contributing to the boost in the University's international student population.

"As a comprehensive university, we're still relatively inexpensive," he said. This makes us attractive when compared to other institutions, he said.

CITING THE findings of one IPS study on incoming international students, he said a large number of students chose SIU-C "primarily because they knew someone who has studied here before or is studying here."

Dorn also said many foreign students choose SIU-C because of the University's international faculty.

"We have many faculty members from all over the world teaching and doing research here," he said. "They give foreign students information on our school."

SIU-C's "very quick" responsiveness to prospective students is also attractive to foreign students, he said.

"THOUGH NOT always positive, we try to be very quick in our responses," Dorn said. "International students often come here because they get their I-20 form before any other school."

The I-20 forms are issued by the University; to international students when their applications are accepted by the school.

He said SIU-C's rise in the rankings also stems from its reputation as a caring school and from its location.

"The reputation of SIU-C is quite good overseas," Dorn said. "For the past couple of decades, we've been very caring toward international students in our instruction and services. The University has created a good environment for them to study in."

"WE ARE located, not in a big city, but in a quiet, peaceful, considerate and rather conservative area. People feel comfortable sending their students here," he said.

Although the final figures for international students for this fall will not be available until later in the semester, Dorn said students from Malaysia still make up the single largest group of foreign students.

Dorn said he noticed a large increase in the number of students from Western Europe this fall.

"They still can't keep up with Asian students percentage-wise," Dorn said. "However, we have more European students than we have ever had."

AS OF THIS spring semester, Malaysian students numbered 828.

Following Malaysia, countries with the most students enrolled at SIU-C include, in order of total enrollment: Iran, Venezuela, Taiwan, Singapore, India, Nigeria, Hong Kong, Japan, and Greece.

The IIE survey reported that the 10 foreign countries with the most students in U.S. higher institutions are: Taiwan, Iran, Nigeria, Malaysia, Canada, South Korea, India, Venezuela, Japan and Hong Kong.

The IIE survey listed the top five institutions with the largest foreign student enrollment as Miami-Dade Community College, 4,388; University of Southern California, 3,752; University of Texas at Austin, 3,326; University of Wisconsin at Madison, 2,775; and Columbia University, 2,638.

THE SURVEY said that more than 19 percent of the foreign students in the United States were studying engineering, closely followed by 18.6 percent in business and management. The distant third was computer science, with 6.8 percent of foreign students enrolled.

The preference among international students at SIU-C is business studies, with 392 students (27 percent) enrolled last fall. Engineering and technology is the next most popular, with 319 (23 percent), closely followed by liberal arts, with 306 (22 percent).

Professor to set up children's programs

An educational specialist at SIU-C will travel to Germany this fall to establish two gifted-children programs.

Hans Jellen, a native West German who is now an American citizen, has spent much of his career working with gifted children, a group which he says often suffers because of insufficient programs.

Jellen believes gifted children should be in regular classes, but should also be involved in special enrichment programs through the school day.

Jellen will help establish such programs this fall in Berlin and Braunschweig, and hopes these will eventually be copied by other West German schools.

The pilot programs will be sponsored by Christian Youth Works of Germany.

Faith-healing couple convicted in death of child

ALBION, Ind. (AP) — A jury convicted a faith-healing couple Tuesday of reckless homicide and child neglect in the death of their 9-month-old daughter, who perished of an untreated brain infection.

David Bergmann, 28, and his 27-year-old wife, Kathleen, were each convicted of both charges by a seven-woman, five-man Noble County jury after about two hours of deliberation.

The couple testified that they practiced the teachings of the Bible when their 9-month-old daughter Allyson became ill.

The leader of the sect, the Rev. Hobart E. Freeman, teaches followers to "rebuke" illness as the work of the devil. He says God promises healing to Faith Assembly members who shun conventional medicine and pray for recovery.

Two weeks ago, another Indiana couple who are members of the sect, Gary and Margaret Hall, were convicted in the death of their 26-day-old son

Joel David, who died of untreated pneumonia. They are to be sentenced later this month.

The Bergmanns, acting as their own attorneys, testified that they bore no responsibility for Allyson's death June 7 from an untreated bacterial meningitis.

"I didn't kill my daughter," said Mrs. Bergmann, who is pregnant according to her stand by attorney, Robert C. Way. "I gave her to the Lord."

But Noble County Prosecutor G. David Laur said the life of the Bergmanns' infant could have been saved.

Laur called their failure to seek medical help, even when the child once stopped breathing momentarily, "an outrageous, monstrous deviation" from the actions of reasonable parents.

Mondale tries to put Reagan on defensivewith tax plan

By Mike Shanahan
Of the Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale is trying hard to portray himself as the honest candidate and put President Reagan on the defensive by laying out an elaborate $177 billion plan for tax increases and spending cuts through 1989.

While there is not much new in Mondale's plan, he is the only presidential candidate willing to give voters the bad news that taxes must go up to avoid eventual economic disaster caused by the deficit.

"Mr. Reagan, all my cards

are on the table, face up. Americans are now calling your hand," Mondale said in Philadelphia.

Mondale has proposed $85 billion in new annual revenues by 1989, which would be the start of a second Mondale administration. But Mondale's rhetoric notwithstanding, there is no bold increase in taxes on the great majority of voters.

Instead, Mondale wants still another tax increase for higher income Americans. He would delay indexing, the mechanism for protecting wage earners against the double whammy caused when inflation raises their net taxes because pay increases put them in higher tax brackets while their real buying power stays the same or rises only slightly.

The deferral would come on top of previous Mondale tax plans, including a 10 percent surcharge on families earning over $100,000; elimination of the third year of Reagan's tax cut for those earning more than $60,000; and a 15 percent minimum tax on corporations.

Indexing, approved by Congress in 1981, takes effect

Jan. 1, 1985, but has only a small impact at the start, $1 a week in reductions for an average family earning $25,000 a year.

But by 1989, assuming a 4 percent annual increase in prices and wages, that family would save about $850 in taxes because of indexing, which lowers a person's tax rates if inflation is high. Under his plan, indexing for the $25,000 family would be protected.

For those earning between $25,000 and $30,000, the additional tax would be $95; for a taxpayer in the mid $30,000 to $40,000 range, about $200.

But a family earning $100,000 would pay $2,600 in additional taxes instead of enjoying the full benefits of indexing.

Mondale also said that interest paid by the federal government would go down by $51 billion. That is based on fairly risky economic projections.

In announcing the plan, Mondale said Monday, "You (Reagan) can't hide your red ink with any more blue smoke and mirrors."

Whether Mondale can smoke out the president and make the budget deficit a hot election year issue, especially in televised debates, remains to be seen.

Security personnel combat theft at campus bookstore

By Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

Shoplifters at the University Book Store are learning quickly that crime doesn't pay.

Since the fall semester began, about 15 people have been caught shoplifting. Naomi Patheal, manager said. Six plainclothes security people, all students, roam the store to prevent shoplifting.

Patheal said the student security staff must be absolutely sure that the person suspected of shoplifting did try to steal before they make an accusation. Not only that, but they must also know what the object allegedly taken was.

The security personnel name the object to the person suspected of shoplifting and then ask him to come to the manager's office.

Once it has been established that the person was shoplifting, Patheal calls the University Police. The suspect is booked and must post bond and make a court appearance.

State's attorney John Clemons said that a vast majority of people accused of shoplifting plead guilty and are placed them on court supervision if it is a first offense.

Retail theft is a Class A misdemeanor that carries a maximum penalty of 364 days in the county jail and-or a maximum fine of $1,000. The shoplifter may get the maximum sentence and fine or anything in between, depending on the circumstances, according to the state's attorneys office.

There is no pattern to the kind of items that are stolen. Most are small and most of the cases are misdemeanors, according to Clemons. However, he said, that doesn't diminish the seriousness of the crime.

"The bookstore has been pretty good at catching people. And the, 'Oh I forgot to pay' routine doesn't make it. Once the person is past the check out point, the last place to pay, the law assumes that the person was stealing," Clemons said.

Mirrors in the University Book Store are one way the staff keeps watch on shoplifters.

Patheal said that people who take things usually don't feel bad unless they are caught.

She said she gets a wide range of responses from students who've been caught. They don't know why they didn't pay, almost all of them have the money.

Most of the shoplifters that are caught are male, Patheal said.

"Shoplifters are people who feel that if they want to take something and if no one sees them, it is okay," she said. "There are people whom we know are chronic. We don't make them uncomfortable when they come into the store, but we do stay with them."

Patheal said Fridays are the worst day of the week for shoplifting attempts. Textbooks often are taken for resale. When students try to sell books during the semester, their identifications are checked and they are asked to sign a slip. It is impossible to keep such a close check during heavy times of textbook buy-back, she said.

The situation in Carbondale isn't any worse than at any other university, and Patheal said she thinks the arrests and trips to court have slowed down the shoplifting attempts.

Money earned in the bookstore goes right back into the Student Center to help support the free areas such as the television lounges and study areas, Patheal said. So it really does hurt the student body when money is lost because of theft.

"I feel like we're put in the position of watchdog and we shouldn't be. It tears me up to have kids shoplifting," she said.

Associate science dean announced

John H. Yopp, professor of botany at SIU-C, has been named associate dean for research in the College of Science. Russell R. Dutcher, dean of the College of Science, has announced.

Yopp's appointment was effective Sept. 1 and underscores new emphasis on research within the college, Dutcher said.

Yopp, a member of the SIU faculty since 1970, was instrumental in setting up SIU-C recombinant DNA research laboratory.

Scientists say golf course site is needed for nature studies

By Jeff Curi
Staff Writer

Zoologists and botanists have been overlooked in the proposed sale of about 200 acres of University farm land to be used as a golf course says a letter from a group of life scientists to an SIU-C administrator.

The land, located south of Evergreen Park, is being considered for sale to the Carbondale Park District for a proposed golf course.

Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, and George Whitehead, director of the Carbondale Park District, said that negotiations are being conducted about a possible sale of the land, but that it is too soon to know whether the sale will take place.

Robert Mohlenberg, botany faculty member, said he and William Klimstra of cooperative wildlife sent a letter in late July to Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, saying that land proposed for sale is important for plant and animal studies.

No response has been received from Dougherty, he said.

"Our main concern is that we weren't contacted before the University started negotiating," Mohlenberg said.

Mohlenberg said the forested area has been virtually untouched and three species of plants can be found there that can't be found anywhere else in Illinois. Those include the prickly ash and two species listed as endangered in Illinois.

Klimstra said the area is used for for zoology instruction and research. The area gives students a site within walking distance of SIU-C to witness animals in their natural settings. Klimstra said, however, that he and Mohlenberg do not know the exact boundary of the land being considered for the course.

Gilbert Kroening, School of Agriculture dean, said he was contacted by Dougherty in September 1983 and asked him the school would be affected by a possible sale of the land.

After he and two others looked at the area, Kroening said he responded to Dougherty in November 1983 that a 200-acre tract of University land consisting of thick forest near an old orchard would, if converted to a golf course, have the least impact on agriculture studies. The land is directly south of the reservoir.

"We're not for or against the land being used as a golf course," Kroening said, "we just responded that the area is of no high priority to agriculture programs."

Agronomy center sets field day crop display

By Rodney Sanford
Student Writer

The SIU-C Agronomy Research Center will hold a field day on Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m. The center is located on Pleasant Hill Road, two miles west of Illinois Route 51 South.

The two-hour program will consist of five short talks to be given by members of the School of Agriculture. There also will be a drive-by display of crops grown by the International Teaching and Demonstration Center.

Fashion travel program set

The Clothing and Textiles and Interior Design Departments will give a presentation entitled "Les Impressions de la Culture" at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Morris Library.

The presentation will promote the departments' travel study program. The program, the second year offered, provides experience and study in the European market in fashion design and marketing, textiles, interior design and architecture.

Juniors, seniors, graduate students, recent graduates, and business professionals are eligible for the program. Trip cost is approximately $2,800 not including tuition for five hours of credit.

Interested people must register before Feb. 1, 1985. For more information, call Kay Grise at Clothing and Textiles, 453-3321; or Denny Hays at Interior Design, 453-3734.

Bus service to the event will be provided, with buses leaving the School of Agriculture at 12:30, 12:45 and 1 p.m. Return trips will be made at 2:30, 2:45 and 3 p.m.

The purpose of the event is to provide plant and soil science majors with a better understanding of the depth of the program, as well as to introduce the program to students undecided about a major, said Don Stucky, plant and soil science department faculty member.

Center is the site of most of the research conducted by the School of Agriculture. The 120-acre site is used for growing and testing various varieties of soil, soybeans, corn and wheat, and for herbicide testing. The research is conducted by SIU-C agricultural faculty, graduate students and some undergraduate students.

Stuckey said some of the harvested crop is saved for further tests, but most of it is sold. Additional research is conducted on a 183-acre SIU-C site in Belleville, Illinois.

Credit offered for Haiti trip

A travel study course to Haiti is being offered in conjunction with the SIU-C Foreign Languages and Literatures and Geology departments.

There are no prerequisites for the course and no age limit. Elective credit for all majors is available in addition to University Honors credit.

Students will stay in the Park Hotel in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. The hotel is next to the Haitian-American Institute where students will study. Lectures will stress religion, history, civilization, culture, geology, and climate of the country.

Students will spend three days in the Roi Christophe Hotel on the north coast at Cap-Haitien and one day on the southern coast at Jacmel.

The trip will from Dec. 27 to Jan. 9. Cost is $695, which includes all lodging, transportation, breakfasts, and some lunches and dinners.

An informational meeting will be held 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 18, in the Student Center Saline Room for anyone interested.

For more information contact James Kilker, Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, 536-5571; or Doynne Horsley, Department of Geography, 536-3375.

Saluki gridders sign up with USO to tackle polls

By David Liss
Staff Writer

With the assistance of the Undergraduate Student Organization, the football Salukis tackled the illusion of student apathy toward politics by registering as a team to vote.

"They're setting a fine example for the community," USO President Andy Leighton said. The USO registered 43 players.

"We're making arrangements to go to Davies Gym and register the women's basketball, floor hockey and swimming teams as well," Leighton said.

"It's an obligation we owe to get out and vote," head coach Ray Dorr said. "I won't tell you my politics personally, but I'll tell you one thing — we want to win a football game Saturday."

The Salukis play their home opener against Western Illinois on Saturday, and the USO will be in the Student Center before, during and after the game to register voters, said Marcia Miller, drive volunteer.

The USO registration drive has netted 1,500 registrations so far, Leighton said. The goal is 10,000.

"We're registering about 400 people a week," he said, "and that's just 10 hours a week."

The USO is registering in the south lobby of the Student Center from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day through Friday. When the drive gets into high gear on Monday, USO workers will sign up voters from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"We're here today to make a point," Leighton said. "These football players are busy people. They can't come to us to register, so we're coming to them."

Voice of voter is growing, prof says

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

Though the American people are often dissatisfied with the choice of presidential candidates, they have more to say about selecting candidates than they used to, said John Jackson, professor of political science.

In a soon-to-be-released book, "Presidential Nominations and Primaries," which he co-wrote with William Crotty, a political science professor at Northwestern Illinois University, Jackson writes about changes in the nominating and election process occurring in recent years and the importance of those changes.

Jackson said in an interview that the nominating process has changed since 1972 from an elite-based system dominated by party leaders to a more mass-based system in which the average voter has more of a say. The two are more evenly balanced now, he said.

John Jackson

This has happened, he said, because the number of primaries and people who vote in them has increased drastically in the last few years. "Primaries weren't nearly as important in the past," he said. "Only 15 states had primaries in 1968. Party leadership had a lot to do with who got the votes."

In 1980, 35 states had primaries, though the number fell back to 30 in 1984. The number of people voting in primaries is about 30 million now compared to about eight or 10 million before, he said.

JACKSON said this is a result of the Vietnam War era and political party reforms which took place around that time.

"People were unhappy in 1968. Everybody was mad about the war, and, to a lesser extent, civil rights," he said.

"This was all a setting for doing something about the nominating system. The basic thrust of the reforms was to allow people who hadn't been able to participate before to have some say about who the president was ultimately going to be."

Some people see these changes as a bad thing, he said, because they feel average voters don't know how to make wise choices.

"A lot of academics and journalists say people don't know anything, and they do a lousy job of selecting candidates," he said.

But Jackson said he doesn't agree. "This fits the American political culture," he said.

JACKSON SAID he believes candidates chosen in recent years are just as qualified as candidates chosen in earlier years.

"We had some real stellar performers under the old system," he said, mentioning presidents Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge. "There was nothing magical about it."

He said Reagan and Mondale are not at all unusual choices for their parties. "They are both the epitome of what their parties are about."

He said voters often aren't well informed, and don't understand the issues. But he blames the same people who criticize the voters.

"That's the fault of educators and the media. Folks aren't going to know unless you tell them," Jackson said.

He said he blames the media in particular. "They emphasize personality, image, hoopla, and superficial things. They have no great capacity to do anything else — especially television."

HE SAID he has been doing research on the nominating process for several years, and had written several articles before he decided "it's time to write a book. You can say more in a book."

He said the book should be out in November. He is hoping for Nov. 6 — election day.

Jackson was a delegate for former President Jimmy Carter in 1980, and served on the the National Democratic Rules Committee in 1980.

SPC taking entries for College Bowl showdown

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

Students with a knack for knowing the not-so-simple have a chance to show their savvy in the College Bowl.

The College Bowl is an academic question-and-answer session sponsored by the Honors Program, Student Programming Council Center Programming, and the Student Center.

"It's a regular game show format with teams," said Keith Reynolds, SPC Center Programming chairman.

Applicants, if they have their team together, can contact SPC, fill out an application and pay a $10 entry fee, Reynolds said.

"If applicants don't have a team, SPC will help them find one," he said.

The deadline for applications is Sept. 20, Reynolds said. On that date, captains of the teams are to attend a meeting where they will be briefed on the rules and procedures of the College Bowl.

Teams consist of four people, and they are allowed one alternate. Teams do not necessarily have to be affiliated with a group on campus, and there is no limit on the number of teams that can enter, he said.

The questions asked at the College Bowl will cover math, science, literature — "any subject you study in school," Reynolds said.

"The questions are bought from College Bowl, Inc., and that's what the $10 fee is for," Reynolds said.

There will be two sessions, preliminaries and finals, he said. The preliminaries will be held Sept. 25 and 26 in the Mackinaw and Saginaw rooms of the Student Center. The finals will be held Oct. 1 and 2, in the same location.

Members of the first place team will receive $125 per person. Those on the second place team will receive $100 per person.

The prizes are being provided by the offices of the vice president for student affairs and the vice president for academic affairs, Reynolds said.

"The first place team from SIU-C goes to the regional competition," Reynolds said, "and the Student Center pays all the expenses."

"From regional, a team goes on to nationals, but that's never happened here," he said.

Reynolds said the competition is sponsored nationally by the Association of College Unions International, and they also sponsor the regional competitions.

At SIU-C, he said, SPC does all the coordinating work, and the event is sponsored by the Student Center and Honors Program.

Assessment center check-up may prevent need to check in

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

People who feel out-of-sorts and don't know if they should go to the Health Service can go to the Student Health Assessment Center, located in the south end of the Student Center.

"It's basically a place for students to come who are unsure if they need medical care. We take a look at them, and tell them if they can treat themselves," said Chris Berkowitz, director of the center.

Berkowitz, a registered nurse, said, "Nine times out of 10, they don't need medical care."

The center provides services such as blood pressure testing, measuring body fat percentages, taking throat cultures and short-term health counseling, she said.

"We have a cold center for students who think they have a cold. They can come in, take their temperature and look at their throat."

The center also has books and pamphlets on health-related topics available to students, Berkowitz said.

'The idea is for the students to take responsibility for their health. We give them good information, so they can make good decisions.'

—Chris Berkowitz

"The idea is for the students to take responsibility for their health. We give them some good information, so they can make good decisions," she said.

In order to help students maintain good health, the center also offers lifestyle sessions.

"Students fill out a sheet that deals with certain areas such as stress, exercise and diet. Then we look it over, point out problem areas to the students and make recommendations," she said.

The center also helps students with exercise programs, Berkowitz said.

"We explain to them what a good exercise program should be, what its qualities should be and to what point they should exercise," she said.

"We get a little bit of anything and everything in here. Some students just want to talk or want to know what they should do about something. A girl may think she's pregnant, and needs to know where to go to get a test."

"A lot of times, students come here diagnosed with something, and want to ask questions about it, and we provide information for them," she said.

Another function the center helps with is communication, Berkowitz said.

"We tell them what to expect from the doctor, and we teach them how to communicate with the doctor," she said.

The SHAC is part of the student health program, and a division of the Wellness Center, Berkowitz said.

"Two years ago, it was originally in Trueblood Hall, as was the Wellness Outreach Program. The idea was to make the Health Service more accessible to students. Then it moved here (to the Student Center), and is accessible to even more students," she said.

The SHAC has contact with about 500 people a week, eight to 10 of whom are referred to the Health Service, Berkowitz said.

The SHAC is open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The service is free and no appointment is needed, she said.

McGee lifts Cards; Expos belt Bucs

Cardinals 3, Mets 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie McGee sliced a two-out, two-run double to snap a seventh-inning tie and Dave LaPoint and Bruce Sutter combined on a six-hitter Monday night as the St. Louis Cardinals downed the New York Mets 3-2.

The loss dropped the second-place Mets seven games behind the National League East-leading Chicago Cubs, who beat Philadelphia 3-2 Monday. The Cubs' magic number was reduced to 12 with the Mets' loss.

Monday games

With the score tied 1-1, Darrell Porter blooped a one-out single in the seventh and took second on a groundout. After Sid Fernandez, 4-5, walked LaPoint on four pitches, McGee lined a full-count delivery just inside the right field line to score both runners.

LaPoint, 10-10, who has just two complete games in 85 career starts, was relieved by Sutter with no outs in the ninth after Mookie Wilson led off the inning with a double. Sutter went on to record his 41st save, extending his own NL record, although he gave up a run-scoring single to Keith Hernandez.

LaPoint struck out eight and walked none in the eight innings he pitched.

Each team scored a run in the fourth inning.

The Cardinals, who managed just four hits off three New York pitchers, tallied after Terry Pendleton singled, stole second and continued to third on catcher Mike Fitzgerald's throwing error. He scored on a sacrifice fly by Tito Landrum.

Wilson started the New York fourth with a triple and scored on Kelvin Chapman's double.

Expos 8, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jim Wohlford drove in five runs with a three-run homer and a single to lead the Montreal Expos to an 8-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Monday night.

Dick Grapenthin, 1-2, pitched 4 2-3 innings of one-hit relief to earn his first major-league win.

Wohlford's fourth homer of the season came in the first inning off starter John Candelaria. It followed a walk to Andre Dawson and single by Gary Carter.

Pittsburgh scored four runs in the bottom of the first off starter Dave Palmer, who retired only one hitter before giving way to Grapenthin. Lee Lacy, Jason Thompson and Tony Pena had RBI singles and Denny Gonzales drew a bases-loaded walk.

Gross paces Orioles; Sutton keys Milwaukee

Orioles 3, Tigers 1

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wayne Gross clouted his 20th home run and Mike Flanagan tossed a five-hitter Monday night to give the Baltimore Orioles a 3-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Despite the loss, Detroit's magic number for clinching the American League East was reduced to eight when New York beat Toronto. Any combination of Tiger victories and Toronto losses totaling eight would give Detroit the crown.

Gross connected off Juan Berenguer, 8-10, as the leadoff batter in the second inning to give Baltimore a 2-0 lead.

Eddie Murray later extended his hitting streak to 22 games with an eighth-inning homer, his 27th, off Detroit reliever Aurelio Lopez. Murray had been tied with Ripken, who had the longest hitting streak in Oriole history with 21.

Flanagan, 12-12, allowed only Kirk Gibson's 26th homer in the fourth.

Monday games

Sutton was replaced in the seventh by Tom Tellman, who surrendered Wade Boggs' sixth home run.

The Brewers collected eight hits, including four doubles, in less than four innings off Boston starter Mike Brown, 1-8.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO (AP) — Don Mattingly snapped a 2-2 tie with a three-run homer in the fifth inning Monday night to pace the New York Yankees to a 6-2 victory over the slumping Toronto Blue Jays, who lost their fifth straight game.

Mattingly, who doubled home a run in the two-run Yankee first inning, smashed a pitch from Dave Stieb, 14-6, over the right field fence for his 21st home run of the season.

Brewers 7, Red Sox 4

BOSTON (AP) — Don Sutton moved up on baseball's all-time strikeout leaders list Monday night and collected his 279th major league victory as the Milwaukee Brewers rode a five-run fourth inning to a 7-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Sutton, 13-11, struck out four to raise his career total to 3,194 and move him into sixth place past Ferguson Jenkins, who fanned 3,192 in his career. Sutton allowed only three hits and one run in his first five innings.

Jim Rice lead off the Boston sixth with his 26th homer and Tony Armas followed with a hard ground single back to the mound. Sutton suffered a bruised right wrist, but remained in the game.

Cardinals trade Stuper to Reds

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals said earlier this week that pitcher John Stuper has been sent to the Cincinnati Reds to complete the deal that brought switch-hitting outfielder Paul Householder to St. Louis.

Householder was acquired Sunday to fill the spot left open after George Hendrick, the starting right fielder, underwent surgery to remove a tumor from his thyroid gland. Hendrick will be out the rest of the season.

Cards' Manager Whitey Herzog said he has no specific plans for Householder, who was hitting .247 with 19 home runs and 59 RBI for the Reds' Wichita farm club.

McMahon injured, insists he'll play

By Joe Mooshil
Of the Associated Press

LAKE FOREST (AP) — Jim McMahon, his fractured right hand in a cast and his lower back aching, insisted Monday that he will quarterback the Chicago Bears next Sunday against the Green Bay Packers. McMahon suffered what was believed to be a bruised hand and back when he was leveled by Denver's Ruton Jones as he unloaded a 61-yard touchdown pass to Willie Gault in the second quarter of the Bears' 27-0 victory Sunday.

Even after he was injured,

McMahon came back to finish the half before giving way to Bob Avellini in the second half.

"It's sore, but it's not that much of a problem," said McMahon, who had the hand put in a cast after learning he had a hairline crack above the index finger of his throwing hand. "It's not a bad break."

Coach Mike Ditka said he had no idea there had been a fracture and that if he had, "We would not have sent him back in there. The x-rays we took right away were negative. It's a slight hairline crack. It's the top joint of the first finger and it is not displaced or out of line."

Ditka added: "My gut feeling is he will play Sunday, but we can't verify that until the cast comes off. The cast will come off Wednesday and we'll see how it is after he takes some snaps and squeezes the ball."

If McMahon is unable to play, Ditka said Avellini would start and that Reserve Rusty Lisch would prepare as the backup quarterback.

Trainer Fred Caito said if the injury had been suffered by a player at any other position, there would be no problem. Caito also said he felt McMahon would play.

"We'll take the cast off Wednesday, ice it, and put the cast back on," said Caito. "The cast is to immobilize the hand and to keep the pressure off. We'll have him squeeze some soft putty and find out how well it is. It's a very small fracture." McMahon also injured "the tailbone of my back" when he took the hit. "I don't know if I hit a helmet or what but I went flat on my back. I'm not ruling this week out."

Stalberger wants consistency

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

Saluki golf coach Sonya Stalberger isn't looking for a tournament trophy from the Hawkeye Invitational. Instead, she is looking for consistency and a good attitude from her golfers.

The University of Iowa, the tournament host, has invited the University of Northern Iowa, Iowa State University, Kansas State University, and the University of Minnesota to the tournament. Illinois State University and Stephens College, teams that SIU-C have already played, were also invited to the tournament.

Consistency will be Stalberger's main concern.

"I want them to play consistent," she said, "hole after hole, round after round."

Two newcomers to this year's team qualified to play in Iowa,

Freshmen Tina Kozlowski and Leslie Thompson will play their first tournament of the season at Iowa City.

Stalberger said she is familiar with the Iowa course.

"It's a little longer (than the course at Illinois State), it's wide and it's open," she said.

"This type of course is more related to their (Kozlowski and Thompson) game," she said.

Kozlowski has been hitting the ball solid, Stalberger said, but has trouble controlling it.

Stalberger helped her golfers with their putting by holding a putting drill at Monday's practice.

Stalberger drew a chalk line from a point on the green to the hole in an effort to help them see the line.

"The key to putting is seeing the line," she said. "Jill, Gi and Lisa worked real hard on putting. That's where they weren't doing well."

Senior Lisa Kartheiser and freshman Gi Magnuson were exempt from Monday's qualifying round because of their play at the ISU tournament, she said.

Juniors Pat Putman and Jill Bertram will also play in the tournament. Stalberger said she is happy with Putman's game and believes she will hold on to a fourth, fifth or sixth position. Bertram shot a 76 in the qualifying round.

Along with consistency, Stalberger is concerned with relieving her golfers from pressure. Golfers put a lot of pressure on themselves by worrying about a shot, she said.

"I tell them, take one shot at a time and don't worry about the past or the future," Stalberger said. "Pressure only creates tension, and there's no place for tension on a golf course."

Indians reluctant to trade Blyleven

By Charles Cooper
Of the Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — The Cleveland Indians say they have no intention of trading ace pitcher Bert Blyleven, although he would prefer not to toil for a perennial loser.

Bouncing back after two sore-armed seasons, Blyleven is enjoying the finest season of his 14-year major league career with a 16-6 record, second-best in the American League, and a 2.98 earned run average.

Blyleven, however, has made it clear that he wants out at the end of this year.

"I'm not getting any younger," said the 33-year-old right-hander. "This club is undergoing a youth movement, and I don't see myself fitting into their plans."

"Cleveland's been very good to me financially, but I want a trade. I think it would be best for all concerned."

Going into Monday's action, the Indians were in sixth place in the A.L. East, 28.5 games behind first-place Detroit. They have not finished higher than fourth in the East since the league began divisional play in 1969.

Since early spring, the Indians have firmly nixed any trade talk. Blyleven's $650,000 per year contract expires in two years. Until then, said Indians General Manager Gabe Paul, Blyleven "owes" the city of Cleveland and the club for "two years of non-productivity."

Blyleven injured his right elbow — the first injury of his career — in 1982 and appeared in only four games. Working with weights over the winter did not help. By the All-Star break of 1983, his right shoulder had stiffened.

"Bert is a member of this club. We're happy with him. And I'm not going to say anything more about it. Period," said Paul.

Pre-trade posturing?

"Gabe's a pretty shrewd man," Blyleven said. "He would trade his mother if he got the right deal. I can understand why he wouldn't want to deal me. I've been the team's only consistent starter. But right now, I'm in limbo."

"The front office here has always been fair with me. We're going to sit down after the season and talk it over."

NCAA: Florida receives inquiry

inquiry are 'charges,' however serious they may be," Criser said.

"The university's position will be set out in its response to those charges, and I hope the public will await that response before reaching conclusions concerning the university, its athletic programs, or its staff."

Criser said the letters of apology were sent to the University of California at Berkeley, Mississippi State, Florida State, Georgia and Auburn.

He said he offered to forfeit 1980 victories over California, Mississippi State, Louisiana State, as well as a 1981 triumph over Florida State.

"Obviously this is a regrettable step, but I am convinced it is the only one permitted by the standards of fair play," Criser said.

"It is small consolation for our sister universities, but an honorable institution could do no less," he said.

The school president said the existence of illegal scouting had been previously denied by the Florida coaching staff to NCAA investigators and university attorneys.

He said Brown's interview was the first information received substantiating the spying charges.

Philadelphia defeats Chicago on Virgil's ninth-inning single

By Edmund Lawler
Of the Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Jim Frey of the Chicago Cubs kept Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt from beating the Chicago Cubs.

Unfortunately for Frey, Ozzie Virgil and Greg Gross beat the Cubs, delivering the key hits in a ninth inning rally that produced a 6-3 Phillie victory Tuesday.

When Schmidt came to the plate with runners at second and third and none out in the ninth inning, and the Cubs trying to protect a one-run lead, Frey ordered the slugger walked intentionally.

"Mike Schmidt is one of the guys in all of baseball, who, if you have a chance to prevent him from beating you, you ought to try it," Frey said.

For a moment, the strategy worked.

Tim Corcoran drove a ball to left field but Henry Cotto's strong throw to the plate held speedster Jeff Stone at third. Len Matuzsek then struck out.

Cubs magic number still 12

But then Virgil slapped a ball through the middle, just beyond reliever Lee Smith's reach. Shortstop Tom Verzyer caught up with it and attempted a desperate backhanded flip to second baseman Ryne Sandberg. It missed the mark, however, and allowed two runs to score.

"He (Smith) might have had a chance to get a glove on it and knock it down," said Virgil. "But I got pretty good wood on it."

Phillies' skipper Paul Owens was surprised Smith didn't knock it down. "Considering the way things have been going for them. They hit one to him yesterday and it found his glove. That's the difference."

Gross followed with a two-run double and then reliever Al Holland nailed down the victory for his 29th save.

The loss was the first in six home games for the National League Eastern Division-leading Cubs, whose magic number remains at 12 — the combination of Cub victories and New York Mets' defeats needed for Chicago to wrap up the title.

Stone led off the Phillies' ninth with an infield hit and stole second on a pitchout, his second of three steals in the game. Von Hayes walked and Stone and Hayes executed a double-steal. Schmidt was walked intentionally, loading the bases.

Sandberg's two-out single drove in pinch-runner Billy Hatcher with the second of two eighth-inning runs, giving the Cubs a short-lived 3-2 lead.

WASFEY: Hard work pays off

129 saves in 17 games and allowing 1.5 goals a game for the Salukis, who finished a disappointing 9-12-3 overall.

ILLNER, WHO said she would like to see the Wasfey and Cuoco tandem allow their opponents fewer than one goal per game this year, has noticed the improvement in Wasfey.

"There are still a few things 'Cuoco' does a little better," Illner said. "'Cuoco' is a little quicker naturally, but I think Sandy has compensated for that by the work she has done the last two summers.

"I would say the biggest thing for Sandy is she's more consistent and her clears are instinctive. She really doesn't have to think about them. Instead she does them automatically."

IN THE season opener last Saturday at the University of the South, Wasfey had a light workout and had to make three saves in the Saluki 3-1 victory. The lone goal she allowed came four minutes into the second half by Jennifer Cook, who fired the ball into the right side of the cage to tie the score at 1-1. The Salukis countered with goals by Dana Riedel and Sharon Leidy to seal the victory.

"I was really happy when we came back and scored two goals," Wasfey said. "Last year we might not have come back. We looked real good considering it was our first game. We hustled throughout the whole game."

WASFEY SAID she's making an adjustment in her style of play due to the new NCAA rule, which allows a player to shoot the ball at the goalie from any point of the field. She said she'll have to come out further from the net to cut down her opponents' angle.

Wasfey, a business administration major, said she plans to graduate in the summer of '85 and would like to manage either a sporting goods store or a restaurant.

"I want to go out West," she said. "I always wanted to live in California because I like the warm weather and being outdoors. It's too cold in the East, and it's too cold here in the Midwest."

Saluki goalie Sandy Wasfy, shown here blocking a shot during practice, has used hard work and dedication to become the Salukis' starting goaltender after coming to SIU-C in 1982.

Goalie Wasfy uses hard work to crack Salukis' starting lineup

The work ethic has paid off for Sandy Wasfy, who became the field hockey team's No. 1 goalie late last season and is the starter this year.

After walking on the Delaware junior varsity team her freshman year, Wasfy transferred to SIU-C in 1982, a decision she hasn't regretted.

"I went to high school with Nancy McAuley and I knew she was on scholarship at Southern," Wasfy said. "So I wrote to J.I. (Coach Julee Illner) to see if there was any scholarships available, and she wrote back and said she needed a goalie."

WASFEY, WHO is from Trumbull, Conn., was the backup goalie behind Lisa Cuocci in the '82 season and saw limited action, making 25 saves in 12 games. But Wasfy showed major improvement in the off-season by playing in the winter indoor season and attending an Olympic Development 'C' camp in Massachusetts for a week.

"The indoor season helped me a lot," Wasfy said. "I knew I needed to work on a lot of things because I didn't play much as a sophomore. When I played indoors, I was the only goalie on the team, and I go to work with all the players, so that helped me."

WASFEY SAID she also learned a great deal from the six goalie coaches who were at the 'C' camp. She said she was invited to 'B' camp, which consists of more highly skilled players, the following week, but she couldn't attend because of a work commitment.

Last year, Wasfy had a solid season, making

Salukis drop out of poll; Indiana State still No. 1

The sportswriters who vote in the Lexington (Ky.)-Herald Division I-AA football poll excused SIU-C for losing its opening game to Tulsa, but they couldn't excuse the Salukis for losing their second game to Illinois State.

The Salukis were ranked seventh in the nation in last week's poll despite dropping a 23-10 decision to Tulsa, but SIU-C vanished from the top 20 after being beaten 35-7 by ISU in Normal last Saturday. The Salukis received one total vote and were ranked 30th overall.

Indiana State, a Missouri Valley Conference rival of SIU-

C, held on to the No. 1 spot in the poll for the second week in a row. The Sycamores are 2-0 on the year, having beaten Eastern Illinois 24-17 last Saturday. Indiana State received 15 of 30 first-place votes, and garnered a total of 253 points in the poll.

Illinois State, another MVC member school, jumped 17th to ninth in the poll. The Redbirds received two first-place votes, and had a total of 81 votes.

Eastern Illinois, who the Salukis will play October 13, were ranked 20th in last week's poll, but dropped from the spot after being beaten by Indiana State.

NCAA sends inquiry letter to Florida

By Fred Goodall
Of the Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The University of Florida received a 75-page official letter of inquiry from the NCAA Tuesday detailing 107 alleged infractions committed by the school's football program.

University President Marshall M. Criser said the university will prepare an official response to the allegations "as quickly as humanly possible."

Criser said he was releasing copies of the NCAA's letter as well as transcripts of interviews with witnesses in the probe that started in December 1982.

Among the charges leveled against Coach Charley Pell's program was that of illegal scouting of opponents' practices. The school president said he had directed officials to forward letters of apology to seven schools and add that he had volunteered to forfeit Florida victories over six of them.

Pell, saying that he assumed responsibility for "mistakes and errors," made in the program, resigned Aug. 26, but requested to remain with the squad until the end of the 1984 season.

Criser, who had left the door open to dismiss Pell at any time, would not comment on the coach's status Tuesday.

The university released approximately 1,700 pages of documents including transcripts of two taped interviews with Mike Brown, a former Florida graduate assistant who confessed to spying on opponents in 1980 and 1981, and Sonny McGraw, one-time Gator recruiting coordinator.

Both reportedly cooperated with the NCAA, which will not announce sanctions against the Florida program until after it receives a response from the Southeastern Conference school.

"Let me strongly express our desire that the public understand that in many instances a witness only presents one version of an alleged happening and that the NCAA letter of See NCAA, Page 23

Big-name defections may kill USFL

Two recent defections suffered by the United States Football League may indicate the shape of things to come.

The USFL, which has placed its chances for success on signing big-name players and coaches, lost two of those big names when Pittsburgh Mauler running back Mike Rozier and would-be USFL coach Howard Schnellenberger announced they wanted out of the league.

THE ROZIER defection had been rumored for months. The 1983 Heisman Trophy winner hastily signed a contract with the Maulers just hours after his college team, the University of Nebraska, was upset by Miami University (coached by Schnellenberger) in the 1984 Orange Bowl. Rozier apparently wishes he would have considered his options more carefully because, after suffering through a dismal year with Pittsburgh, he said he would never play for the Maulers again.

Rozier now wants to play with the Houston Oilers, the club that holds Rozier's rights in the National Football League. The Pittsburgh organization will reportedly grant Rozier his wish, as long as he agrees to refund the second year of his two-year, guaranteed contract.

THE SCHNELLENBERGER defection comes as more of a surprise. During the USFL Championship Game last July, Schnellenberger gave a glowing appraisal of the league and said he was happy to become a part of it during a television interview. But the Miami franchise that Schnellenberger was to coach folded. There are rumors that the franchise will be relocated in Orlando, but Schnellenberger isn't about to wait. He said he will jump at the first coaching offer he receives from the NFL — or go back to the college ranks — before he ever coaches a game in the USFL.

THE WHOLE scenario seems to indicate just one thing:

players and coaches are becoming reluctant to sign the megabuck contracts offered by the USFL because of the financial instability of the league. Both Rozier and Schnellenberger are turning their backs on multimillion dollar contracts.

But it doesn't end there. Steve Young, the talented quarterback of the Los Angeles Express who holds a guaranteed, 40-year, $40 million contract has said that he is interested in getting out of the USFL for a career in the NFL. The Cincinnati Bengals, a club notorious for not giving lucrative contracts, hold the NFL rights to Young. Maybe that's why he hasn't jumped leagues yet.

RECENTLY, A report was published that indicated the 18 USFL teams lost an average of over $3 million dollars last season, when they played a spring schedule. The hierarchy of the league believes this trend can be reversed once the USFL changes to a fall schedule in 1986 in direct competition with the NFL.

What ardent, full-blooded professional football fan is going to waste his time with teams like the Chicago Blitz, the San Antonio Gunslingers and the Memphis Showboats when the Los Angeles Raiders, Washington Redskins or Miami Dolphins can be seen at the same time? Granted, there will probably be a few fans who will follow both the NFL and USFL, but most fans won't have time to keep up with the USFL, which will clearly be a second-class league. Most fans will follow the NFL exclusively, because they know that's where real football is played.
