"A senior? I thought you were a freshmanl . . . Omigosh, I've missed my voice test . . . No, really, I don't hate my mother ... " The comments heard during the first few days of Freshman Week were typical of a new clasa at Bryn Mawr. But in spite of the customary confusion, the class of '59 lived through the period of Sept. 29-Oct. 1.. and even enjoyed it.

The halls opened to the incoming class at 8 a.m. Thursday, with the upper classmen (amazingly) dressed before breakfast. The freshmen were rushed through introductions, appointments, interviews and tests until their heats were spinning. The tea for freshmen and their parents provided a welcome interlude in the day's activities.

The evening of their first day at college brought the meeting with members of the Self-Government Association, at which president Anne Hobson commined the itesis and methods of the organization. Following meetings in the halls with wardens and hall presidents, members of the class of '59 were entertained with games and the memorable class and college songs.

With one day to go, it is agreed that Freshman Week has been fun, if hectic. We hope the class of '59 finds the whole year as stimulating!

Welcome

And another welcome, this time from the News. We're very glad to have you around-and not merely because you're the biggest news to hit the campus since the Class of '58 arrived, a year ago!

At Bryn Mawr, it is neither trite nor untrue to say that you are important. Your ideas, your enthusiasms, your personality are not lost in the collegiate scramble, perhaps to make their first timid appearance in the middle of your junior year. As a freshman, you can organize a Young Republican Club (nobody ever has!) under the Alliance; you can make a point in class that will lead the professor into the most interesting discussion of the semester; you can (and will) take part in a Freshman Show that can rival anything on Broadway. In these fields and in many others you are very important to the Coilege Community. Bryn Mawr is justifiably proud of its past . . . to a large extent its future depends on you.

But if you are important to Bryn Mawr, you will find that Bryn Mawr is very important to you. Bryn Mawr offers you, in a few well trimmed acres, a greater concentration of interesting people, ideas and opportunities than you will probably ever find again in your life. Take advantage of them! We cannot say, take one-third academic, one-third extracurricular, and one-third social, stir and swallow for a college education. Who can separate one from another? A course you really enjoy can be more "fun" than a dance, a gathering of friends at tea can teach you more than tomorrow's psych assignment. We can only say, open up your eyes and your heart and your mind and look around. Make some friends that aren't just like the girls back home. Take a course that doesn't dovetail neatly into your major subject. The right -and what a very essential and rewarding right-to be an "individual" doesn't mean the right to be an unchanging in-

Philadelphia Offers, Various Forms of Entertainment For Interested Student: Culture, Shops, Restaurants

By Leah Shanks '56

Philadelphia, known throughout history as the City of Brotherly Love, has many attractions to offer its citizens and visitors. If you know where to look, Philadelphia holds rich rewards for the jazz enthusiast, opera lover, art admirer, historian, shop-bound and gourmet.

The center of Philadelphia's musical life is the Academy of Music, tinental atmosphere. a mammoth wood structure located on the corner of Broad and Locust Streets and easily accessible to Suburban Station.

The Academy also features other eventa during the year: Sadler's Wells Ballet, as well as the other ballet companies; jazz festivals; chamber music concerts; and featured soloists, such as Rubenstein, Park is well worth the time. Heifitz and Milstein.

A schedule of events can be obtained by writing to the Academy or by following the Philadelphia newspapers.

Adjoining the Academy is the Hedgerow Theatre, a small but distinguished local company with a fine repertoire of plays.

Since Phliadelphia is one of the two test-towns for Broadway production, theatre-goers have the opportunity of seeing the latest hits before they become "latesta." Among the theatres which offer

> Of department stores, Philadelphia has aplenty. The three main stores where shoppers can find anything from a budget cotton to a Dior creation are Wanamaker's, Blum's and Bonwit Teller's. All three of these stores are easily reached from Suburban Station.

For more exclusive apparel, there is Nan Duskin's and for shoes, I. Miller's and Geutings. There are many other specialty shops on Walnut Street and near Rittenhouse Square. The budget conscious girl, however, is moat likely to be accommodated by the department stores.

These are but a few of Philadelphia's features. If you are an opportunist, take advantage of them. If you are an explorer there is much you can discover on your own. But whatever you are, you'll find Philadelphia worthwhile fun.

Freshmen Hall Plays will be given this year on Friday, October 14, and Saturday, October 15. The plays will begin at 8:30 P.M. in the Mrs. Otis Skinner Workshop, on Baldwin Campus. Freshmen Hall Plays are one-act plays, selected and performed by the freshmen of each hall, assisted by an upperclass advisor. The plays are judged by a faculty committee, which announces the winner on Saturday night.

"A Show Is Born" Old Cow Barn In

Every year the juniors say it. "This year Junior Show is bigger and better than ever!" But this year is the best yet.

How could it be otherwise with a script committee composed of Paula Sutter, Pat Moran, Nancy Chase, Rabbit MacVeagh, Caryl Sharlow, Anita Kaplan, Helene Rosenbaum and Ginny Gavian.

The committee met recently in the creative atmosphere of a renovated cow barn in Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, to write the a 10 per cent discount to Bryn show. Although there was no heat and no hot water, the committee survived and produced a script. The rumor is that the as yet unnamed show has little music, many lyrics and many laughs. At present, the News, like the freshmen, is in an organizational state. In addition to covering regular campus news, the paper plans to devote a much greater percentage of its pages to "critical writ- 3he doesn't have any definite plans ing" than has been done in the for other courses or graduation at past. By "critical writing" is meant such fields as book, theatre, movie, and music reviews; political analyses; discussion of current pus, and hopes to return again to campus problems, and so forth. These topica have all been included in the News many times before, of course, but this year we plan definite asset to the college comto make them regular, rather than irregular, features .

The News feels that the increased scope of the paper will make it possible for more persona with more varied backgrounds to work on the paper. The freshman who would not be interested in reporting the number of new books in the library might be interested in reviewing one of those books, for example.

This year "tryouts" for the paper will be revised somewhat to allow students with specific interests to try out for different departments of the paper. The girl who is interested in news reporting will turn in several news articles on events on the campus. The girl who would be interested in working with theatre and movie reviews, would turn in a review of a Philadelphia play, or of a new and important movie. The atudent who is interested in political writing would turn in an article discussing a current national problem. The freahman who would like to write in several fields could turn in several different articles.

Several weeks are allowed for students to write their tryouts.

Through Tutoring

Ann, who graduated from Radnor High School this spring, has not attended regular classes since 1949, when she was stricken with bulbo-spinal polio. This fall she plans to be tutored in two courses at Bryn Mawr, and she "might add something later, depending on how it works out." Ann, who plans to take freshman English and a French course, will be visited regularly by Bryn Mawr professors, Ann expects to venture "bit by bit" into her college career, and the present ,although she is very much interested in writing.

Ann has driven around the camwitness various college traditions and activities. A very charming and enthusiastic Person, she is a munity.

which are then judged by the editorial board. When the board elects a student to the editorial staff, she then takes part in staff elections and is eligible herself for the policy-making editorial board after one semester.

A meeting to discuss tryouts and announce the tryout dates will be held on Thursday, October 6, at 4:00 in the News room. Any interested freshman, with or without previous experience, is invited and urged to come to the meeting.

Students interested in proofreading and headline writing rather than news writing, are also invited to the meeting.

L. Breuer Heads Freshman Weck

"A miniature of college life" is the way in which Louise Breuer describes Freshman Week. The Den-Ligh senior is head of this year's Freshman Week Committee, a job which she feels is "the most rewarding on campus."

"Freshman Week is an opportunity for new students to become acquainted with the people, the college, and the surroundings," remarked Louise, and it is a preparation for normal college life.

Louise beaded a Freshman Week Committee of 68 students, and she in turn was responsible to Sarah Stifler, the President of the Undergraduate Association.
