Pup Banqueters Repulse Gallant Sophs in Newburyport Egg Battle as Tear Gas Fumes and Pants Fly

GILLISTOWN FRACAS DRAWS CONSTABULARY

Freshman Officers Escape Under Heavy Guard a Day Early and Make Boston Their Refuge Until Eve of Annual Banquet

A conglomeration of antediluvian eggs and potent tear gas bombs poured through the streets of Newburyport, Mass., as the Freshmen defended the honor of their class against 75 rampaging sophomores in the annual yearling banquet last Saturday night.

Wolfe's Tavern, ancient hostelry at Newburyport, was the point chosen by the frosh for their annual celebration, and Mr. Wolfe, even in the palmiest days of the Revolution, never witnessed such a battle.

Soph Sleuths Discover Spot
The ceremonies secrecy of the frosh as to the place of the banquet was shattered last Friday when word leaked out and spread through the college that the place had been discovered. The two classes battled all over the campus for two days until the general evoked to Newburyport began, and it looked as though as many sophomores were going as frosh. The main body of sophs arrived first and employed the garage of ex-Mayor "Bossy" Gillis, as headquarters. When they returned with gusto. After escorting themselves in the ancient iron frosh barges, the frosh had pickets at work on all possible entrances.

34 Storms Stronghold
Advancing from the back of the hotel and climbing to the top of the sophs well-planned attack culminated just as the frosh were waiting for something to happen. They came down the frosh barges, from the frosh windows, out from closets and up from the cellar as the bewildered '35 men rushed into action. Three well-placed tear gas bombs landed in the frosh banquet hall and the fighters hastily adjourned for a few moments to get to the street.

BOWDOIN MUSICIANS DEPART TOMORROW FOR WEEK END TRIP
The band continued anew as the men, often wrestling all the way out, came tumbling down the front porch and out onto the main Portland-Boston road, the Newburyport turnpike. A few policemen scoured frantically around the outside of the scene, but the only good they did was to provide the college men with hats. More tear gas bombs exploded on the street, and the crowd retreated, but soon came back to the ungrateful recipients of a few ily placed eggs.

Pulsifer Reviews Bowdoin Quill As a 'Well Rounded Periodical'
Mr. Harold Trowbridge Pulsifer, poet ("Harvest of Time", "The Alchemist") and president of the Poetry Society of America, kindly consented to review the March issue of the Bowdoin "Quill". Because of his lifelong experience as a writer—one-time editor of "Outlook"—and his sympathetic interest in the staff work enabled the Quill to escape at Falmouth, Fosse, however. Frosh Pursue Exit

Professor Brown Plans To Use All-French Talkie For Students Here At Bowdoin

Perhaps Bowdoin will take her place in the field of educational talking pictures for academic instruction, for small liberal art colleges, as Professor Frederic W. Brown, head of the French department, has announced plans to bring to Brunswick for the benefit of the French students, an all-French talking picture. The picture selected in the French talkie hit, "Le Millieu" of Marcel Achard, the Cumberland Theatre will give a definite decision on the matter in a few days.

INFORMAL DANCE TO BE HELD ON MONDAY
An informal dance will be held in the Mouton Union next Monday evening at eight o'clock. This planned for the students who are to be in Brunswick over the holiday of April nineteenth. The Bowdoin Polar Bear Orchestra will play. Admission both for male frosh and for a couple will be one dollar. The price of stag admission has been raised so that more students may be induced to bring girls.

BOWDOIN CONTEST IS REMARKABLE SUCCESS
Dean Nixon and Professor Smith Speak at Banquet in Mouton Union

The finals of the first Bowdoin Intercollegiate Dramatic Contest were held during the afternoon and evening of Saturday April 9 in Memorial Hall. The six one-act plays to reach the finals, "The Valiant" presented by the students of South Portland High school was awarded first place. The latter presentation was of such outstanding excellence that there was no question in the minds of the judges as to its superiority over the others. The play was superbly directed by Miss Gloria Witman, who chose the members of her cast so carefully and discerningly, that it was with difficulty that any one member could be singled out for special consideration. However, William Earles deserves special notice for his splendid characterization of Dyke, the prisoner condemned to death, around whom the plot of the play is laid.

"English is the Cleopatra of languages," declared Professor Maurice Roy Ridley, Visiting Professor of English in the Department of Arts and Sciences, at a series of three lectures on the Tallman Foundation program Wednesday, April 6. Professor Ridley, by a comparison of the merits of the Greek, Latin, and English, outlined the salient features which made each of them great and distinctive. Firstly, the speaker mourned the custom of referring to "dead" and "professors of literature." Said Professor Ridley: "If these terms mean anything, they imply an odd idea of literature." He urged students of language study to avoid problems as isolated, dependent things, divorced from the author or the age in which he lived. "To understand a nation one must read its books as well as study its history," continued the lecturer. "Reading the writings of Romans, Greeks, and Elizabethans for an understanding such as no work of history can give, since you are dealing not with facts, but with the temper which produced them. Don't merely enjoy, but ask questions!"

Duke Ellington and His Famous Orchestra Signs to Play Ivy Ball May 27

WORLD'S FOREMOST COLORED DANCE BAND
Harlem's Aristocrat of Jazz Known for Theatre, Radio and Recording Successes; late of Cotton Club

The Ivy Committee announced at noon today the signing of Duke Ellington and his original orchestra to play the Ivy Ball in the Sargent Gymnasium, Friday, May 27th. This celebrated orchestra which a year ago made the Cotton Club in Harlem famous has been on an extensive tour of the largest theatres in the nation since fall, and is rated as the finest colored dance band unit in the world by critics in general.

Unquestionably the greatest band ever to appear on the Bowdoin campus, anticipation of Ivy runs high, especially so in view of the omission of Soph Hop this year, and the reduced Junior assessments. Moreover, the approved action of the committee in setting the hours from 10 p.m. to 3 a.m. instead of 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., as former years, has been received with a happy change. The absence of favors this year has enabled the committee to reapportion former budgets resulting in a two dollar tax reduction, a very good chance of a rebate, and more funds available for music. Now at Paramount Theatre

Too Much Literacy

So much has been said about the grave dangers of illiteracy—and indeed its evils have been made so obvious—that a word or two may be allowed on the pitfalls of too much literacy.

This fear of literacy may sound like a Gilbertian paradox—particularly since it comes from one whose ostensible occupation is that of a teacher of English...

The seductiveness of literacy is far more dangerous than the lure of a gaudy participate or a split infinitive. There is a plausibility about glittering generalities which is difficult to resist...

'EPIC' IS THEME OF RIDLEY TALK TONIGHT

Differences between the primitive epic and the literary epic is the subject of Professor Maurice R. Ridley's lecture in the Union this evening...

"Sun-up" by Mr. Norman P. Easton is a colorful picture of a morning at sea. The opening sentence could be improved...

Of the four poems in this issue, Mr. A. S. Davis' sonnet is, to my way of thinking, the best, both in imaginative quality and technical execution...

Mr. Arthur Stratton's two poems are not the best which I have seen from his pen. I still remember with pleasure the publication of his "Coffin Street"...

On Kissing Hands Mr. Christie A. Moustakis handles a sophisticated subject with a good deal of delicacy and precision. His portrait of an inevitable and too successful philanderer is very well done...

Perhaps this review may appropriately close with a glimpse into the future. The unadorned "Interplanetary Prayer" is bold in conception and sonorous in phrase...

Perhaps I am wrong. Doubtless Mr. Moustakis can get the real facts in the case from some member of Bowdoin's French department.

RALLYING BRAVELY, RIDLEY IS QUIZZED

All this time our nose for news wasn't missing a trick. It noticed that we were glad not to be disillusioned that Mr. Ridley has a monocle, that a very good tennis racket was in a corner...

"No, damn it, no snow." Or it thaved and then formed a hard crust—except once, when Mr. Ridley was in Boston, of all places. He doesn't ski much; too busy in England...

What About Prohibition? You know, it pleased us no end the way it turned out. Rather apologetically we demanded the conventional: What about prohibition?

Three years ago, when Mr. Ridley was last in the United States, every one seemed to be swearing and cursing about it. Now they seriously set about effecting the ultimate repeal of the amendment...

Americans Drink Determinedly In Europe people drink, well, more casually than they do here. In America people sit down and say: Now let's drink (or get drunk)...

Here cocktails have stopped being aperitifs; they have become, instead, an institution distinct from the dinner they very often ruin, rather than enhance.

When the Shelton opened (7 years ago) we began catering to college men and women.

Gradually their patronage has increased; we feel safe in asserting that more students make the Shelton their New York home than at any club or other hotel. One reason for this is the free recreational features...

College Job-Hunters Must Be Wary of Psychological Ill-Effects of Depression

Collegiate job-hunters must beware, when they leave school for business, lest the depression have a disastrous psychological effect on them. At least, so asserted George Palmer Putnam, well-known publisher, in a United Press article recently. "The effect will show up in one way or another later. With those who succeed, I suspect the same total will be for the good. For anyone who can find a job now, and keep it, has particular merit."

Virgil the Patriot

Virgil is essentially a historian and a patriot, rather than epic poet. He is heavily literate and slow moving. He is the poet of the irrevocable and the unobtainable. Primarily he is a lyricist and by forcing himself to write epics of Rome hid his light under a bushel. Rome sacrificed art to herself and Virgil was a willing slave.

They included besides opening and closing numbers in which the Musical Clubs combined the benefit of the school songs the following instrumental selections: Arthur L. Brown's "Les Bohemians".

TROTT IS CAPTAIN; HACKWELL, MANAGER, OF SWIMMING TEAM

Varsity Swimmer Has Earned Two Letters; Hackwell Shows No Opposition

Captaincy of the Bowdoin 1932-33 Swimming Team was awarded last Tuesday to John W. Trott '33 of Brunswick.

Trott has already won two varsity letters in swimming and was a member of the Junior Varsity Team his freshman year.

Hackwell has also worked faithfully up through the various subordinate managerships and won his office Tuesday with almost no opposition.

At the time of the elections, one or two votes for the assistant managerhips had not come in a special committee was appointed to meet the first of this week to choose from the freshman applicants.

James Doak, and Edward F. Robinson are eligible for assistant managerhips.

GOLF TEAM LOOKS FORWARD TO GOOD SEASON ON LINKS

Although there has been little chance as yet to practice, prospects for the golf team are excellent this year.

Richard C. Mullin, '32, who is this year's captain, there are four lettermen back. These are: John R. De Meyer, '32; Gordon C. Knight, '32; Frederick C. Batchelder, '34, and John C. Gasley, Jr., '34.

On the spring trip starting with Amherst on May 4 the team will play five matches. For most of these there will be return matches at Portland.

SPORTSMAN'S PEN George Bennett, veteran piler swifter who reams the outer stretches for the Wellman, has been the target of many sportive gibes on the part of teammates the past week as the result of the cranial fertility of one neighboring sports scribe who saw fit to bestow upon George the title of "The Willow Winder".

The election of Johnny Rosenfeld to captain the 1933 hockey sextet comes as no surprise to close followers.

Rosenfeld played fast, aggressive, and consistent hockey last winter at the pivot post, particularly in the New Hampshire game when he accounted for four of Bowdoin's five goals and assisted Hank Richardson in netting the fifth.

If freshmen Tom Unicke and Stan Bealy maintain their decisions not to compete for Johnny Magee's varsity spliced-shoe artist, Bowdoin hopes of a state championship will receive another jolt.

Beasley's exit from track is an enforced one, owing to a bad foot, while Unicke's absence is the result of his intention to study over the winter.

On the other hand, the one and two mile relay quartet are badly riddled, the five members being Creighton Gatchell, Steve Lavender, Larry Usher, George Sewall, and Harry Thistlewaite.

If reports from foreign camps are to be taken into consideration Wells is not the only coach in the state lacking in pitchers.

King Football feeds Captain-elect Milliken, Briggs, Bakanovsky, Kimball, Reid, Hubbard, Larson, Richardson, and McKenney returning with a host of freshmen gridderies including Saravalla, Keville, Bigelow, Kent, Low, and Nason.

Bob Miller looks ahead to a great year with Captain Trott and Foster back for the varsity swimmers.

TENNIS VETERANS NUCLEUS OF TEAM

Massachusetts Trip to Take Place First Week in May

With three tennis lettermen available from last season's championship team prospects for a winning Bowdoin net squad this year are unusually bright.

Captain Short '32, Dick Sprague '32 and Jack Frost '33 are the three vets on deck who will form the nucleus of Professor Bartlett's proteges.

Although efforts to build a repeating championship combination will center around Short, Sprague, and Frost, there is a wealth of good material coming from the junior varsity roster.

Besides the state tournament carded for Lewiston and two or three dual clashes against Colby and Bates, the Bowdoin net team has scheduled its annual Massachusetts trip for the first week in May.

Among the Jayvee varsity ranks along with several frosh froth who will make strong bids for places on the varsity roster.

Among the Jayvee graduates are Stan Gould, a senior, Dick Boyd, a junior, and Phil Burnham, George Peabody, Eric Loth and Don Bates, sophomore.

MAGEE MEN SHOW FINE FORM IN PREPARING FOR TECH TRACKSTERS

Mal Walker, Milt Hickock and Creighton Gatchell in the sprints will make it hard for the Techmen to pile up points in those events, while Harry Thistlewaite and Charlie Allen in the quarter-mile field are favorites.

In the half, Art Fox and Larry Usher should place one-two, while Long Tom Unicke, Larry Usher and George Sewall stand out as excellent chances in sweeping the mile.

Steve Lavender is a sure bet in the two mile, and Usher, if he chooses to run that event instead of the half, should also be counted for a place.

Ray McLaughlin, and Charlie Allen seem able to take over the best Tech can offer in the hurdles.

Real contests seem to be the rule in the field events.

Ray McLaughlin, Charlie Stanwood and John Adams will have a hard time taking over Engineer Tomlinson in the high jump.

While McLaughlin, and Adams are all doing their best to send the pole a goodly distance out, but as yet none are world beaters.

Recent time trials have shown that the Bowdoin runners are rounding rapidly into form, and with two weeks additional training piled on by Coach Magee, are set to take M. I. T. in their stride.

The entire potential strength of the Engineers is not untested, however, and although they finished far behind the White in the University Club games, may spring several surprises.

Walrus Calls Book '1919' by John Dos Passos 'Too Darn Life-Like'

1919, by John Dos Passos; Harcourt, Brace and Company, New York; p.p. 473; $2.50.

People of Bowdoin should be especially interested in the career of John Dos Passos, for in 1925, at the first Literary Institute, he made his debut in Memorial Hall.

Dos Passos is a novelist of our time, along with Hemingway and Faulkner; and he is in many respects like them.

Hemingway in "The Sun Also Rises"; Faulkner in "Soldiers' Pay"; and now Dos Passos in "1919".

This last is a larger book both physically and in its compass. It is a distinct, individual work; Dos Passos is an extreme stylist, and has several mannerisms particularly dear to him.

These are all quite distinct from the plot of the novel—rather the plots, for "1919" is made up of the stories of four main characters, and several lesser ones.

24 Major Warnings Set New Low Record Since 1920 As Scholarship Is On Upstead

The last issuance of warnings before the final exams roll around in June showed a very encouraging result to those who are interested in Bowdoin's maintaining the high standard of scholarship for which she is known. The number of major warnings, 24, is as low as any previous number since the year 1920. Since then there has been no issuance of major warnings with a lower total. This speaks well for the prospects of a continuance of a good record. Although twice during the last decade, once in 1924 and again in 1929, a low number had been equalled, the fact still stands that the college is keeping well up to the standard that earned Harvard's well-known "Cople" to mention it as the finest small college in the country.

125 SUB-FROSH FLOCK BOWDOIN OVER WEEK END

Experience College Life in Every Aspect, Base Hits to Morning Chapel. UNDERGRADS AMUSE GUESTS WITH SHOW. Fraternities Hold Smokers for Newcomers; Have Track Meet.

Every phase of Bowdoin life, from base hits to Chapel services, was brought before prospective members of '36 as the College held open house last Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Some hundred and twenty new preparatory school students from all over New England took possession of the campus for Sub-Freshman Week End, attending classes, smokers and athletic contests arranged for their amusement and enjoying themselves generally.

The guests began to arrive Friday morning, thus they had opportunities during Friday and Saturday of attending classes in all the courses they will take next fall. Friday's program also included the Jayvee baseball game with Brunswick High School, and the evening entertainment in Memorial Hall. The swimming exhibition in the Curtis Pool and the Jayvee track meet with Bridgton Academy were the main attractions on Saturday. Most of the sub-freshmen were quartered at the fraternity houses, where they were furnished entertainment, smokers, movie parties and the like.

Crew-Racing, Water-Heaving, Clock Setting, Pastimes of Gay Nineties

With the Brunswick firewhistle tooting its reveille of eleven general alarms to Bowdoin students last Friday, and the Bowdoin students responding by rushing out of classes, and beating at forest fires with shovels, picks, brooms, branches of pine trees and tire covers, one wonders what the Bowdoin men of the gay nineties did with their spare spring morn-

Ground Broken, Carpenters Rush Chi Psi House to Beat Schedule

Ground was broken for the new Chi Psi lodge, which will be a spacious Maine Colonial structure, on April 14, and if plans go according to schedule, the house will be ready for occupancy next fall when college first opens.

The Lithgow Company, of Brunswick, was awarded the contract and has been pushing the completion of the lodge, which occupies a large plot of ground on Boody street, to the utmost. The foundation has already been laid, and carpenters are working on the first floor.

Several unique features, which represent a new departure in chapter houses, are scheduled to be installed. On the first floor the dining room and the salon will be connected by a large hall, which will permit dancing through the entire first story. A small, well equipped office to the right of the entrance will accommodate the transaction of business, while a women's room opposite will provide facilities during house parties. A library will also be a part of the first floor equipment.

A single wing off the southeast corner will house the servants, and will also contain the kitchen, serving room and delivery entrance. The plans for the structure were drawn up by H. Herbert Wheeler of New York, and the contract awarded to the H. N. Lithgow Company. Work will continue throughout the summer; and it is expected that the chapter will move at the opening of college or shortly afterwards.

Mary Ellen Chase, head of the English department of Smith College, and well-known as an author and educator, will speak on "The Peculiar Genius of Thomas Hardy," Friday night.

After being graduated from the University of Maine, Miss Chase took an extension course at the University of Minnesota. It was here that she began her teaching career, as an Instructor.

Intense optimism with which Bowdoin followers looked for an overwhelming White victory in the state track meet has received a severe setback with the dropping of several men from the squad due to ineligibility and other causes, according to Coach Jack Magee.

Tonight Brings Religious Forum to Close as Final Discussion Groups Meet

Polar Bear Jazzmen Heard On Augusta Station WRDO In First Ether Broadcast

Last night the celebrated Bowdoin Polar Bear jazz band beamed over the radio broadcasting station WRDO in Augusta. It was their premier performance over the air, and was marked by very gratifying success.

Both the Glee Club and the Instrumental Club were also invited to become radio performers, but due to the lateness of the season, and the difficulty of keeping the organization together, the procedure was deemed inadvisable.

Ineligibilities Hit Magee men Hard as Gray, Burton Drop from Squad

Jack Magee's cinder plodders, New England champions on the indoor track, open the current outdoor campaign at Boston Saturday, in the Bowdoin-M. L. T. dual engagement. The Polar Bear tracksters are highly favored to annex the meet, which is the only dual carded this spring in anticipation of the forthcoming State and New England meets.

As the Bowdoin-Tech battle is the only cinder sport attraction scheduled for Boston this week end, a good-size representation of the faithful will be on hand, barring inclement weather.

Since the indoor season ineligibilities have rocked the Magee roster, Braley Gray, a fine prospect in the quarter mile who won his spurs last winter by stepping into Harry Thierswaite's shoes on the one-mile relay team when the latter pulled a tendon, is out because of scholastic standing, as is Fred Burton, half miler, along with Mike Hunt and Johnny Kelly, prooving from start.

Optimism For State Track Victory Exaggerated, States Coach Magee

Uniacke's reason for dropping track is that he wishes to compete in the I. C. 4-A meet his senior year, which would be impossible if he could not get his schooling done in the three year rule. Magee disagrees with him in this point. "What road can a man do by staying out a whole year, and possibly losing a state meet for his team, just to run in a big meet four years later?" asks Jack.

Lots of people don't realize how hard it is to place in the Nationals, and so think Bowdoin is weak. That's why I run my men, their freshman year, through the college and it certainly doesn't do them any harm.

GET LITERATURE IN GEAR WITH LIFE" IS RIDLEY'S COUNSEL

Visiting Professor Sums Up Lecture Series with Talk on Lyric.

"In no other form of poetry," Visiting Professor of English Literature Maurice Roy Ridley declared in his brief and concluding public lecture Wednesday evening, "do we obtain such an insight into the comparative temperaments of different nations as in the lyric."

Professor Ridley discussed the lyrics of nature, love, home, death, and patriotism from the standpoint of the Greeks, Romans, and the English. The lyric in particular was graphically viewed by the speaker. The Grecian lyric of patriotism is noted for its quietness and for the feature that it is concerned with fact.

Dopesters Give Brown Bear Edge to Annex State Baseball Crown

Ball tossers of Bowdoin and the University of Maine inaugurate their State Series baseball play at Orono this afternoon, while Saturday finds the Wellsmen trekking to Waterville for the initial Colby encounter of the season.

After dropping a 6-5 decision to the Bates Bobcat in the Patriots' Day exhibition tilt, the Polar Bear pastimes seek to launch the bid for the state pennant on the right foot in today's opener. The Pale Blue, however, is a slight favorite to win by virtue of comparative pitching and the fact that Maine has already weathered six battles to Bowdoin's one.

Although dopesters are prone to concede the state pennant to a strong Maine nine, the consensus of critics foresees a close scrap among Bates, Colby and Bowdoin for runner's up position, with the detourment of the Emeralds not imparting, by the time the end of the far chase is around. By besting Bates 3-2 in a pitchers' duel the Colby Mule is one up on her ante in the series.

The starting line-up will undoubtedly be the same that faced Bates Tuesday. Boucher Favoring Knee.

SMITH, LOWELL AND MAWHINNEY ARE NEW MUSIC CLUB CHIEFS

The newly elected staff members of the Bowdoin Musical Clubs are Eliot Smith '33, manager; Richard A. Mawhinney '33, leader of the Instrumental Club; W. Holbrook Lowell, Jr. '33, leader of the Glee Club; and Vinson P. Philbrick '34, assistant manager.

The new manager, Eliot Smith '33 is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity, and has had a wide series of activities in connection with the Musical Clubs. During his three years here, he has been accompanist for both the Polar Bears and the Glee Club, assistant manager of the organization, and has directed the Glee Club in the annual New England Inter-collegiate Musical Club contest every year.

The ORIENT favors and urges serious consideration of the following: a senior dormitory, a new classroom building, a covered hockey rink, a better road through the campus; closer faculty scrutiny of the finances of publications, separation of the Bowdoin Alumni from the Bowdoin Publishing Company; student representation on the Blahnik Tax Committee; a longer reading period, closer contacts through published doctets and student referenda between Student Council and undergraduates, reorganization of requirements for degrees.

Swimming Since its creation in the winter of 1928 the Bowdoin swimming team has been following the path of an Horatio Alger hero. Under the excellent coaching of Bob Miller it has forced its way into the ranks of New England tankmen from an unpropitious beginning. In the last few years it has defeated teams representing schools much larger than Bowdoin and has placed several of its members as New England champions.

We realize that there are already four major sports here: football, track, hockey, and baseball. But we see no mystic quality in the number four that would prevent the addition of another to the list. The members of the swimming team practice as much as do those in other sports, the coach is as capable and works as hard as do other coaches.

As far as we can discern, the points that distinguish swimming from the major sports are few: the letters awarded at the end of the season are slightly different from those of the major sports; also catalogues designate it as a minor sport.

In other respects varsity swimming appears to be on a par with the major activities. A team which meets such excellent opposition as Williams, Brown, or Springfield so successfully should hardly be called of minor caliber. The only feature which might distinguish varsity swimming from the four major sports is the fact that the team takes part in no state series.

We sincerely believe that the mere recognition of swimming as a major sport would vastly improve the morale of the team. By deeming it of less importance than the four major sports, the college is casting a stigma on the swimming team which is not conducive to the finest morale. No athlete can do his best when he believes that his school judges his work unimportant.

We believe that swimming has promise for a great future at Bowdoin. We believe that the promotion of swimming from a minor to a major category would be, in essence, merely a formality. We urge that the college recognize swimming as a major sport before the start of next season.

Cumberland vs. Chase

Not long ago a group of progressive students organized the Bowdoin Forum—an organization which proposed a forward-looking program of lectures and group discussions with the ambitious plan of promulgating student thought in a wider sphere of interest. The several organization meetings were exceptionally well attended and the enthusiasm on the part of the students was heartening.

The Forum then embarked on its original plan of bringing in prominent speakers who should be well-informed as to problems of the country and the world. It arranged for a talk by Mr. Edward Chase, a prominent candidate for Congress, and scheduled the meeting for eight o'clock last Thursday night.

At eight o'clock in the Union Mr. Chase was welcomed by an audience of five students. A frantic, last minute search for more students finally increased the number to twenty; not a single member of the faculty was present.

Mr. Chase gave an excellent talk on the major issues of the forthcoming political campaign, about which he is very well informed. Yet it seems that even questions of grave import to this country and the world are unimportant when compared to the charm of the eyes of Lupe Velez: a large number of students were seen crowding from the Cumberland Theater last Thursday after the movie.

The students—and sometimes the faculty—appear to be entirely oblivious to the problems of the world. They merely march from dormitory to classroom to fraternity house to the Cumberland Theater. At frequent intervals they make a pilgrimage to Portland "to get away from Brunswick". They evidently do not realize that attendance at a liberal lecture about present-day problems is the most certain way to free themselves of Brunswick stagnation. In his talk Mr. Chase remarked that a new spirit was noticeable in the people of this country. Particularly he emphasized the fact that the younger generation is more progressive, more thoughtful, that they will correct the many faults so evident in our government. We wonder

Communication

To the Editor, Bowdoin Orient: There have been brought to my attention in the columns of your excellent publication certain more or less veiled but rather uncomplimentary references to mid-western football. The ideals and practices of football and other branches of athletics in this section of the country are established and led by what is popularly known as the "Big Ten".

Football practice cannot begin until the 15th day of September. Training in summer camps during vacation period is strictly prohibited. No student who has transferred from another college can participate in inter-collegiate contests until he has been a year at the second institution. If he was dropped or conditioned in the first institution, he must be a student for a minimum of two years in the second institution before participating.

The power of enforcing the rules of the conference is vested in a governing board, which consists of one member of the faculty (not connected with athletics) from each of the ten institutions. The rules are taken seriously. For instance, two or three years ago when Iowa was apprehended in what were considered to be unethical practices, the institution was promptly expelled from the conference—although professing victory.

At Notre Dame, I am a Protestant and a graduate of the University of Michigan. I make no claim to intimate knowledge of practices in the excellent institution which our Roman Catholic friends like to call Notre Dame. However, I am under the impression that, within their scholastic limitations, there are few colleges in the country more rigorous than Notre Dame.

In other respects varsity swimming appears to be on a par with the major activities. A team which meets such excellent opposition as Williams, Brown, or Springfield so successfully should hardly be called of minor caliber. The only feature which might distinguish varsity swimming from the four major sports is the fact that the team takes part in no state series.

First of all civil documents in America is the Declaration of Independence, which was composed of two parts: grievances against the crown, and the declaration. The former were heretofore, while the declaration is a lastingly outstanding American sovereignty. Embodying the idea that all men are created equal, this document takes a direct thrust at the old caste system and the pronouncements of political theory.

Under the "due process of the law" clause of the Constitution, every man in America has a free chance for life and liberty. But in the South, where caste lines are predominant, "Judge Lynch" takes affairs pretty much in his own hands. The Monroe Doctrine has had a far-reaching effect, and has become deeply embedded in the country's political theory; but it has now been used merely as a pretext for the invasion of those Latin American countries which the Doctrine vows to protect.

Really human nature and human character do not vary materially in different parts of the country. The only difference we live in, it is well that we cultivate good will and avoid prejudging one

AMERICAN BUSINESS IS OUR "SACRED COW" DECLARES GREUNING

(Continued from page 1) Our own business worship, spiritualism is vanishing. Why should we dress it up in a halo? "In England it has brought the dote; and in our country, unless we do away with business worship, we shall have a constantly growing army of unemployed. We must cast out business as our idol!"

A revolution is taking place, in which values are being reconstituted. For, maintained Doctor in Greuning, when a city cannot collect taxes, and therefore cannot pay teachers—that is revolutionary! He strengthened this point by other telling instances. No Dapper of Best Everett Doctor Greuning continued: "But the American heritage, and class unconsciousness is a good indication that we shall not have a real revolution. This 'American Heritage' is a combination, apparently, of all the good embedded in the Bill of Rights, the Monroe Doctrine, and other hallowed guarantees of democracy."

With the get-rich-quick prevalence before the crash, class lines were beginning to form; but when riches vanished overnight, and the leveling of equal wealth came about, these half-formed class lines disappeared. "Failure to apply reason to problems, was the ruin of the American Heritage," declared the speaker. But by using that God-given grant, we may "keep the heritage of our forefathers and hand it down to our children."

Continuing with a word about gangsterism and racketeering: "The turbulent twenties were stirred by the rackets; racketeers of all types sprang up. Doctor Greuning deplored the fact that this peculiar class of criminal marks the United States out separately from the rest of the world; racketeers are 'typically American.' Like the drowning sailor said of his ship: 'Well, it was fundamentally sound,' our country, too, is fundamentally sound; but it is a ship that is a hillyhoop in everyday use. George M. Cohan told once that 'Many a bum show is saved by the American flag.'"

"Americanism" Defined Describing what is meant by typically "American," or what causes that peculiar flutter in the average citizen's breast, he related the cause of the hillyhoop in everyday use. George M. Cohan told once that "Many a bum show is saved by the American flag." Two characteristics of the country, however, have always been optimism and a vast faith in the people themselves.

Depression has made the American people think, said the speaker: "We look to ourselves to avoid repetition of such a condition." Inability to find causes for depression make it even more phenomenal. Two characteristics of the country, however, have always been optimism and a vast faith in the people themselves.

Mustard and Cross

Well, everybody, did you remember to get all the buttons and crochets out of the way before the sub-freshmen came, or were you embarrassed?

We forgot all about it being Sub-freshman Week End, and stepped into one of the neighboring houses for a book or something. And just then, one of the Prize Trousers passed by, tenderly escorted upstairs to get a bid. Before we could apologize, whom, something hit us on the head, and we were thrown into a closet and stuffed into an old rag bag.

The usual things happened at all Houses. Absent-minded Brother lectured these times all of the time to sample the last batch, and had to be put in the attic and looked in a trunk to prevent his getting all the freshmen personality. In every House, the usual Brother Stonehouse took two hours to be persuaded that it was better to wait until next fall before giving his prize to his friends from Walla Walla. And the usual Brothers who never bother to speak to the sub-freshmen, ate all the sandwiches for the week.

And so it goes. Peace will now descend upon us until next fall. Personally we wish the pledging was done by drawing ballots out of a hat—an old hat, preferably.

Does everybody know that there is a gargyle on one side of the Library tower? And does anyone know why there isn't any on the other side?

Tak, tak, in the direction of the faculty! A long white envelope was noticed lying on the mantel piece in their dining room at the Union. After a few days, a curious student peeked inside. And what do you suppose the Powers That Be have been saving and passing around? Nothing less than the carefully hidden cover of the first issue of month's College Humour! If you don't remember it, look it up. It's quite an eye-fel.

Well, we admit it's Spring and everything, and they did leave it in a envelope away from innocent eyes; but just the same, after all, fellows! What do you think?

REVEREND METZNER GIVES INTIAL TALK IN RELIGIOUS FORUM Advises Students in Sunday Chapel to "Find Key to Richer Living"

"In our modern life let us remember to turn to the pages of the New Testament, and there find the key to a richer life." With this as his theme, the Reverend Harold C. Metzner, of the Methodist Church in Waterville, spoke in Sunday Chapel on April 24, opening the Forum of modern religious thought.

Metzner began Mr. Metzner, a funny story may have a very serious import. There were once three young men visiting in New York City. They intended to have a good time, and hired a room on the 24th floor of a hotel, but rather expensive hotel in New York. That night they went out to a show, and after that visited a night club and then they just enough money to meet the expense of their hotel room. On reentering the hotel lobby that night, they immediately saw that something was wrong, for there was a crowd all about, in which was a number of police officers. The proprietor soon approached them, saying that every elevator in the hotel had suddenly stopped, and that the guests were being put up for the night on cots in the hotel foyer.

The boys had paid for their room, so they decided to climb the stairs to the 24th floor. They just enough money to meet the expense of their hotel room. On reentering the hotel lobby that night, they immediately saw that something was wrong, for there was a crowd all about, in which was a number of police officers. The proprietor soon approached them, saying that every elevator in the hotel had suddenly stopped, and that the guests were being put up for the night on cots in the hotel foyer.

Many of us who are now on the path of life are in the same predicament as was Joe, we have forgotten the key to a rich and full life. Indeed there are those among us who believe that there is no such thing as a free lunch. Joseph Wood Krutch, the brilliant writer for an equally brilliant magazine has said that we may soon lose the key to goodness, and we may lose love itself. Then we will come to know what atheism really means.

Bertrand Russell, another brilliant writer and thinker, says that the world may fall into the abyss, even though it might not be eternal, the climb back would take thousands of years. Some people find the key, only to have it break off in the lock, as was the case of the famous caricaturist, who died recently, but whose drawings still appear from time to time in the sophisticated New Yorker, was such a person. One day someone went to look for him, but found him dead, a suicide. He had left a letter in which he expressed his inability to find the life that he had sought, although he had gotten the key into the lock. His was the key of material possessions, but it was not enough; it did not fit the lock. He had to be brought back to earth, tried over and over again to find the key, before he finally gave up.

TRADITIONAL SENIOR CANES ORDERED BY MANY MEN OF 1932

"King Mike's" Custom Furthured by Bowdoin Men; Committee Reports Many Orders

Traditional "Senior Canes" will make their appearance on the campus in the hands of the graduating class in about two weeks. This year the canes will be of a greenish-brown color, with an inlaid silver band on which is to be plain engraving. The committee in charge of the canes, composed of John Crighton, Harry Thistlewaite and Jit Reicher, has announced that an unusually large number of orders have already been placed.

For generations seniors have carried canes during the latter part of the year, especially to Sunday Chapel. How the custom originated is somewhat of a mystery, but "King Mike" probably has much to do with it. This old Brunswick character, now well on in years, has recently dropped out of Bowdoin life, having made his last public appearance several years ago at a freshman rally.

"King Mike" had a large and varied collection of walking sticks, many of which had once belonged to famous personages. Among these he had three gold ones, and one which had formerly belonged to King Philip, the famous Indian chief. Back in the days when Bowdoin's graduating classes were much smaller, "King Mike" used to present members of the senior class with canes, and in this way he probably founded what since became a rather unique custom among American colleges.

"OEDIPUS TYRANNUS" WILL BE PRODUCTION ON A LAVISH SCALE

Gay Costumes, Unique Lighting Effects Combine to Make Commencement Play Grand Spectacle

With the Commencement play still in its embryo stage, the cast of "Oedipus Tyrannus" has not yet been completely made up. An announcement states that it will not be completely confined to members of the Classical Club or even to members of the college. The female parts will be taken by members of the college office staff and townpeople. Professor Thomas Means states that he has spent approximately one thousand hours working on the production, in translating from the Greek manuscript the story which is said to be the oldest of European tales. Since it must be put into the same meter, this is exceptionally difficult.

The presentation will be comparatively lavish, $300 being spent for settings and costumes. The statue of Apollo will be moved out on the steps of the Walker Art Building and will be illuminated throughout the performance by a powerful spotlight. At no one time will there be more than three main characters on the stage. These will be arrayed in gay colored garments while the chorus will be dressed in drab. Professor Means confessed that this is his first attempt to stage a tragedy. He is confident that it will attain the same success which his comedies have reached in former years.

What can YOU do THAT OTHERS WILL PAY FOR?

OVER the past eleven years five leading companies alone, in the following industries, have taken three hundred and sixty-three Bentley men into their organizations: Banking—42, Electrical Manufacturing—55, Public Utility—65, Chain Store System—68, Shipping and Importing—133, and one public accounting firm has taken 47.

The accounting division is the nervous system of the business organization. It is the department which reports the activities and results in all the others and gives a clear perspective of the whole. That is why so many accountants become comptroller, treasurer, and presidents.

The Bentley School is widely known and endorsed by business men, public accountants, and educators as THE school where a man can fully specialize in accountancy.

Two years are required to complete the course. Send for a catalog. Thirty minutes spent with it may lead you to the career for which you are best adapted.

PI KAPPA DELTA TO BE INSTALLED HERE BY DEBATE COUNCIL

 Charter Members Include Professors
 The probable charter members of the Bowdoin chapter are: Professor Wilmet Brookings Mitchell, Assistant Professor Herbert Ross Brown, and Instructor Ralph DeSomero Childs, all of the English Department; and President Albert W. Tarbell, Manager Albert S. Davis, Jr., Lincoln Smith and Stephen Russell Deane of the Debating Council. Other members will qualify almost at once.
 The interior organization of the local chapter depends on awards of a certain number of degrees, which are commensurate with the number of debaters members have taken part in. During the first or second week in May, Dr. Libby, faculty advisor of debating at Colby, will preside at the induction of the Bowdoin chapter. It is hoped that a debate between Colby and Bowdoin may be arranged for the occasion.
 Debating Season Will Be Expanded
 At present there remain home debates with the University of Maine, Colby, and possibly Vermont. The freshman team still has debates scheduled with Brunswick and Portland High schools. The expanded debating season next year will start in the fall. The varsity team will debate Tufts at Medford and Mount Allison College of New Brunswick Province will come to Bowdoin. The latter will be the first international debate Bowdoin has taken part in since that with Oxford some years ago. It is likewise hoped that one or two debates may take place in cooperation with the recently organized Bowdoin Forum.

WET CANDIDATE, IN SMALL FORUM MEET, BLAMES PROHIBITION
Chase Says 18th Amendment is "Work of Organized Minority"

Before a rather small gathering of the "Bowdoin Forum" last Thursday evening in the Union, Mr. Edward Chase of Cape Elizabeth, Republican candidate for Congress from the first district of Maine on a wet platform, spoke on the present menaces and trials of our government. His speech was divided into two sections, and dealt with the breakdown of representative government in the United States.
 In discussing the present condition of our government, Mr. Chase briefly touched on the high spots of the changes in its form since 1913; the growing tendency towards more and more governmental control of activities, the alteration in the attitude of the people towards the government for this reason, and the consequent change in the popular interpretation of democracy. "The United States is the oldest established and fundamentally unchanged form of government in the world today," he said, "and it can readily be seen, that with the changing requirements of modern civilization there must be a similar change in government."
 The increase in the government's sphere of action resulting in the tendency for the people to turn to the government for relief in all problems; the surprising condition today of the divergence of political opinion even within each of the great parties themselves; and the deterioration in the types of our public officials, coupled with the vast increase in activity and efficiency of the system of organized minorities, all should eventually necessitate some decided modification.
 Addresses Plea to Students
 In closing, Mr. Chase addressed himself to the students approaching voting age, saying, "You young men are soon to assume the full responsibility of citizenship, and you are going to find things in an awful mess, due in a large part to half-baked thinking. For a short time you will dare to be free men, before you become enmeshed in a tangle of selfish influences which arise in the necessity of earning a living."
 "During that brief period of freedom you will despise the hypocrisy which pervades our national political activities. You will hate to observe that our political system has made the coward and the hypocrite and the pussy-footer the best vote getter. You will perceive immediately that real party government has practically ceased to be, and that neither political party stands for anything, and that both major political parties exist only as machines for getting people into office."

Answering Emergency, Student Understudies For Substitute Chapel Player

Five minutes before the last Chapel bell rang Sunday, Gilbert S. Parker '32, a student, stated that he would be called on to play the organ; he has never before played in College, and his first attempt, impromptu as it was, met with great success.
 Mr. Parker understudied for Henry Cleaves, also of '32, who is in turn understudying in the absence of Professor W. A. director of music. Just who will pitch-in in emergencies next year is still a question, for no organists have appeared in the three lower class ranks.
 Tumbling Concludes Show
 This concluded the mystification part of the program; at the close of the act, Mr. Wilder announced the second part of the program, an exhibition of tumbling. Jacob Iwanowicz '35 tumbled first alone; Richard V. Kemper '35 and Donald D. Rust '35 went through a double act, and Iwanowicz concluded the evening's performances with a second string of individual acrobatics. The tumblers, especially Iwanowicz, were severely handicapped by the shortness of the space on the stage, but their part of the program was a fine piece of work in spite of this difficulty.
 The next big event started at 1:30 Saturday when members of this year's varsity and junior varsity swimming teams provided an hour of excellent entertainment by competing against each other in all the regular swimming meet events. The mermen have been out of training since the close of the swimming season about a month ago, so the distances of some of the events were cut down from the standards in consideration of the condition of the performers.
 This was followed by the track meet, an account of which is found elsewhere in this issue, which practically wound up the program planned by the college as a whole.
 Smokers On Friday Night
 Informal entertainments were in order at most of the fraternities, however; smokers, movie parties, and card playing kept the guests amused between the feature events of the week end.

"ART DAY" WILL DRAW TWO HUNDRED MAINE WOMEN TO COLLEGE

Bowdoin will be the meeting place on Wednesday, May 4, of representatives of the two hundred organizations of the Maine Federation of Women's Clubs. One of the high lights of the day will be a lecture by Professor Henry E. Andrews, "Gilbert Stuart, a Portrait of the Early Republic." The committee in charge of activities is headed by Mrs. Kenneth C. M. Sills.
 For several years it has been the custom of the Maine colleges to sponsor some program for women from all parts of the State. A Home Economics Day recently took place at the University of Maine, a Literature Day will soon be held at Bates, and now an Art Day is to be held at Bowdoin. The entire program has been made possible through the generosity of the college.
 Program for the Day
 Events will open at the Walker Art Building. Following their registration at 10:30 a. m., the visitors will be shown through the galleries by Miss Anna Smith. At 1:30 p. m. there will be a luncheon in the Moulton Union. At 2:30 p. m. in Memorial Hall, Professor Andrews will give his illustrated lecture on Gilbert Stuart. Since this year marks the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington whose portrait the artist has painted, the subject is of timely interest. President and Mrs. Sills will give a tea for the guests at their home at 4:00 p. m.
 "Intelligent voters today continue their party affiliations only from tradition, and because there is no better place to go. Perhaps you will incline to avoid party affiliations, and act independently. But I hope that you will join one party or the other, and bring the enthusiasm and the courage of youth to work with some of us, who are tired of political hounding and hypocrisy, to restore the liberty of government, to protect the quality of our people, and to save popular constitutional government."

ADVENTURERS LEAD FORUM DISCUSSION

 Kentucky state line and ordered them back with rifles.
 To this same section, now almost a battleground as miners stalk through the hills with their long rifles, went Smith and Long. Communism seemed the gravest charge hurled against the undergraduate inspectors, by both miners and operators alike. Cleon Calvert, attorney for the operators, demanded the withdrawal of the student party: "We order you out of Kentucky. We don't want you back."
 Guns were flourished on the college men and women; and according to the account of one member of the group, unoffending students were "cracked on the head." At Knoxville, where the demoralized expedition reunited after their trying entry into Kentucky, few were minded to continue. But a handful, picking native pilots for the treacherous mountain roads, chose to go on.
 Whole Situation Mysterious
 What will probably be the meat of tomorrow's discussion in the Moulton Union lounge, is the mysterious aspect of the whole affair. Questions such as What have the operators to hide from impartial—and even student—investigators? Why should a section of presumably law-abiding United States be forbidden to a group of social workers?
 "To complete our disillusion in the forces of law and order we traveled in our buses to the capital," said Joseph P. Lash in an article in the New Republic, "where Governor Horton greeted us with an insultingly irrelevant harangue on Communism."
 All in all, the miners seemed most willing to allow the undergraduates into the disputed area of Kentucky. But the vigorous opposition offered by the operators to disinterested outsiders is quite unaccountable, according to the undergraduates who sallied into the Harlan district coal fields.
 Aid for Starvelings Destroyed
 The whole situation boils down to this: a civil war has been raging in the Kentucky mining centers of Harlan and Bell counties, and as a result miners and their families are destitute, without food or clothing. Relief dispatched from outsiders to the striking miners has, investigators claim, either been wantonly destroyed, or sent back. And others claim that the Red Cross refuses aid to the strikers.
 Briefly, this is the general topic of tomorrow evening's discussion. Whether or not the Bill of Rights can be maintained during such industrial crises, as a student commentator remarked, is a question; if not, the outcome must surely be civil war. "And if the situation in the coal fields becomes more general, then revolutionary tactics are our only recourse."

 Club features (two to guests) are as follows: Swimming pool; completely equipped gymnasium; game rooms for bridge and backgammon; roof garden and solarium. Restaurant and cafeteria service at reasonable prices.

"QUILL" STILL LACKS FICTION, SAYS DAVIS

Hampered by lack of fiction and light verse, the makeup of the May number of the Bowdoin "Quill" succeeded to come out during the first week of next month, is as yet incomplete.
 With the usual number of factual essays and discussion papers, the staff has for the first time had trouble in balancing this work with poetry. The complete list is expected to be ready in a week, however.
 Contributions from Russell Booth, Vincent Nowlis, Barry Timson, "The Walrus", Tom Folio and James E. Bassett are expected to appear. Albert S. Davis, one of the Juniors who is trying out for the 1933 editorship, will have direction of the makeup for this issue, and will direct publication.

WANTED A STUDENT CRUISE DIRECTOR

Watch Del Galbraith do big things with the hammer. No doubt John Hay and Thurston Larson will be right behind him to make the event a clean sweep. The only other possibilities for the Bears to place one, two, three, are in the two hurdle races. But this is rather doubtful with Charlie Allen, Larson's leg on the Fritz. M. I. WELLSMEN TREK TO ORONO FOR SERIES OPENER day with the exception of the moundman. It is likewise expected that the team will hit in the same order, although it was a noticeable weakness in the Bates team that of the club in the last half of the batting list connected for a safe blow.

With good baseball weather prevailing the past week the team has been brushing up on fielding, which was none too brilliant at Lewiston, especially around the hot-corner where Herby Hempel showed evident lack of experience under fire. Hempel has the stuff, though, and is looked to to deliver the goods in this week's campaign.

Boucher, one of Wells' best bats on the slab who played right field at Lewiston because of his hitting ability, contracted a knee injury the other day that has failed to respond to treatment. Saturday the injury forced Boucher to quit practice for the sidelines. However, it is expected that the injury will permit him to see some service this afternoon.

Starting Pitcher Unknown
The starting hurler for Bowdoin is uncertain. Dave Means went well in the Bates exhibition, conceding the Bobcats to three bingles in 7-13 innings. It is unlikely that Means will get Wells' nod to throw them up to the Pale Blue artillery, as Bob Dowling, Boucher, and Walker have yet to show their wares in actual competition. All of the last three mentioned fingers will undoubtedly see action in at least one of this week's skirmishes.

Pete Lewis behind the plate and Sid McKown and J. Tucker around the keystone sack are fixtures on the inner defense, with Ricker's and McKown's bowdoin's clouting strength. Jack McLeod appears certain of the first base assignment, his two smashes out of five trips standing him in good stead. The outer stretches will be guarded by Bennett in left, Koempel in center, and Boucher in right. Should Boucher toe the slab Al Kent, a hitter of some repute, would be a logical choice for the right-hand pasture.

Strong Maine Aggregation
Word from Orono is to the effect that Coach Fred Brice has a championship repeater, some of whom are the followers even go so far as to say that Maine has the crown cinched. The Orono baseballers are reputedly strong in the field and aggressive at the willow, but are minus a veteran hurling staff.

To date the Brice-men have engaged in five bouts, winning three and dropping two. The list of victories includes Colby, 7-4, Connecticut Azgies, 4-3, and Northeastern, 10-7. The two nines scalping Maine are the strong Harvard fastness by 11-2 count and Rhode Island State, 3-1.

Maine boasts a batch of heavy hitters in Kisonak, Hinck, McCabe and Smith, especially McCabe and Smith, who were one, two smashes in the last season in the matter of base-hits. Notting, Hall and Romansky are the team's leading hurlers.

TRACK OPTIMISM IS OVER-EXAGGERATED

er. He ought to end up in that event."

Sprinters Shaping Up
Speaking of the team in general, Magee said: "My sprinters, Hickok, Wainwright and Skilling, are all lined up, but there is uncertainty in the longer races. Harry Thistlewaite, George Sewall, Larry Usher and Art Fox are all good in two or more distances, and it should be interesting to watch which one of them to get out which ones to run them in. I think Sewall has the fight to win the state mile, and Larry Usher certainly has the ability, if he's running right."

"Steve, but he stands a mighty good chance to. Dave Morris is running some smart races in the longer distances, but I should be surprised to see him in there. Wainwright and Jellison of Bates and Gunn and Both of Maine are all good runners; but any one of our men, if he was going right, might be able to beat them out."

Of the field events, Jack is less optimistic. "We are depending a lot on our weight men, and if they don't go just up to form, Maine is liable to be at the mercy of New England. If Niblock keeps up his work, he ought to win, but he can't afford to slip, because if he fails, it's right in there. McLaughlin should place in the broad jump, and Johnny Adams and Stanwood in the high jump. I think they are pretty good and in that event, but Adams might beat him on a dirt take off.

Pole Vaulters Are Weak
"I don't think our pole vaulters will place, but any one of them is liable to surprise. We are depending a lot on our weight men, and if they don't go just up to form, Maine is liable to be at the mercy of New England. If Niblock keeps up his work, he ought to win, but he can't afford to slip, because if he fails, it's right in there. McLaughlin should place in the broad jump, and Johnny Adams and Stanwood in the high jump. I think they are pretty good and in that event, but Adams might beat him on a dirt take off.

Under the promotion of Vincent Belleau, Sports editor of the Bates State Journal, there is a possibility of the formation of a Maine Intercollegiate Sports Association in the near future. Both Bob Berg of the Maine Campus and Peter Mills of the Colby Echo sound favorable to this formation, while there appear to be no objections forthcoming from the Bowdoin side.

The purpose of the organization would be to keep closer in touch with the other colleges. At certain times it would be possible to cover games for the paper of the visiting college. Tentative plans as outlined by Mr. Bates Sports Editor call for two delegates from each college with two meetings a year, one to be held on the occasion of the annual State Track Meet. At each of these meetings a speaker will be secured at the host's expense. The dues will cover the cost of the dinner which will be held before each gathering.

It is hoped that the first meeting can be held in Lewiston on the occasion of the State Meet, the third of May. Here the officers will be elected and the constitution drawn up.

Jottings From Polar Bear Athletics

Johnny Boyd's 155 foot heave with the javelin seems to be the answer to Jack Magee's prayer. Now all he needs is a consistent discus twirler to completely balance his squad.

A few days ago the team walked out onto the field to see a man whirl the plate about 150 feet down the field, then go over, pick up a 16 lb hammer and send it crashing against the fence, a good 165 feet away. The squad gazed on wonderment until a little wiser than the rest, informed them that it was Larry Johnson, former Penn athlete, who is training for the Olympics on the Bowdoin field.

Swede Wallberg says he thinks he can get his time for the quarter mile swim down to 5 minutes, 10 seconds next year. If he does, he'll lower the New England record by 20 seconds, and assure himself of a place in the Eastern Intercollegiate.

Joe Stetson worked hard at fifty yards all through the swimming season, but never did he get under 28 seconds. Two months out of training, he went through that distance in 17.1 seconds, in an exhibition for the sub-freshmen. Figure that one out!

Art Fox's 52.3 second quarter mile in the recent Jayvee-Bridgton meet seems to establish him as a point winner in the State Meet. Not that Art's time was any better than several others, but because of the fact he ran the first fifty under wraps, and merely coasted the last forty. He seems good for 50 seconds or less.

J. V. CLUSTER TAKES BRIDGTON TRACKMEN TO TUNE OF 86-31

Boyd Unleashes 158 Foot Javelin Heave and is High Point Scorer

Winning all but three events, and showing exceptional times for cold weather, the Bowdoin Jayvee trackmen swamped Bridgton Academy by the score of 86 to 31, in a dual meet at Whitaker field last Saturday.

John Boyd, freshman field man, was the outstanding star of the meet, scoring 154 points, and placing in five events. He tossed the javelin 158 feet, and thus almost assured himself a place in the state meet. He swished the hammer also 158 feet out over the terrain, and ought to place in the state by virtue of that throw. He tied for first in the pole vault, for second in the high jump, and rounded off his afternoon's work by taking a third in the discus.

Art Fox was another sensational dualist. He wanted to, in an easy win in the quarter mile, in the fast time of 52.4 seconds, then came back half an hour later to 'iron-man' through the half and win that with equal ease in 2:04.

Summary:
80 yard hurdles, won by Kelly, Bowdoin; second, Redmond, Bowdoin; third, Nickerson, Bowdoin. Time 10-1.5 seconds.
100 yard dash, won by Skillings, Bowdoin; second, Keene, Bowdoin; third, Hunt, Bowdoin. Time 10 2-5 seconds.
140 low hurdles, won by Kelly, Bowdoin; second, Abelson, Bowdoin; third, Hayden, Bowdoin. Time 16 3-5 seconds.
180 yard dash, won by Keene, Bowdoin; second, Skillings, Bowdoin; third, Hurley, Bowdoin. Time 23 1-5 seconds.
220 yard dash, won by Fox, Bowdoin; second, Bridgton; third, Low, Bowdoin. Time 52 4-5 seconds.
880 yard run, won by Fox, Bowdoin; second, Hutchinson, Bowdoin; third, Thurber, Bowdoin. Time 2:04 2-5.

High jump, won by Adams, Bowdoin; second, tie, Boyd, Bowdoin and Redmond, Bowdoin. Height, 5 ft. 8 inches.

Broad jump, won by Redmond, Bowdoin; second, Robbins, Bowdoin; third, Adams, Bowdoin. Distance, 19 ft. 2 3/4 inches.

Pole vault, tie between Robbins, Boyd, Crowell, all Bowdoin. Height 9 ft. 4 inches.

Shot put, won by Nil'ock, Bowdoin; second, Bridgton; third, Hagger, Bowdoin. Distance 158 ft. 6 inches.

Hammer, won by Boyd, Bowdoin; second, Ferry, Bowdoin; third, Hayden, Bowdoin. Distance 158 ft. 6 inches.

Discus, won by Keene, Bowdoin; second, Niblock, Bowdoin; third, Boyd, Bowdoin. Distance, 116 ft. 6 inches.

Javelin, won by Boyd, Bowdoin; second, Nelson, Bowdoin; third, Ferry, Bowdoin. Distance, 158 ft. 2 inches.

BATES EDITOR HOPES TO ORGANIZE MAINE SPORT ASSOCIATION

Maine and Colby Papers Favor Plan to Co-operate on Sports Reporting

Under the promotion of Vincent Belleau, Sports editor of the Bates State Journal, there is a possibility of the formation of a Maine Intercollegiate Sports Association in the near future. Both Bob Berg of the Maine Campus and Peter Mills of the Colby Echo sound favorable to this formation, while there appear to be no objections forthcoming from the Bowdoin side.

The purpose of the organization would be to keep closer in touch with the other colleges. At certain times it would be possible to cover games for the paper of the visiting college. Tentative plans as outlined by Mr. Bates Sports Editor call for two delegates from each college with two meetings a year, one to be held on the occasion of the annual State Track Meet. At each of these meetings a speaker will be secured at the host's expense. The dues will cover the cost of the dinner which will be held before each gathering.

It is hoped that the first meeting can be held in Lewiston on the occasion of the State Meet, the third of May. Here the officers will be elected and the constitution drawn up.

EVERY MAN HITS AS JAYVEE NINE SEWS 10-4 LOSS ON B. H. S.

Mullin, in Box, Fitches Tight Ball as Game Goes on Ice in Fourth Inning with 4 Runs

With every man on the team garnering at least one safe hit, the Bowdoin Jayvee baseballers trounced the Brunswick high school outfit to the tune of 10 to 4 at Pickard field last Friday.

Coach Well's charges showed up well in both fielding and hitting, snowing the town boys under in every department. Dave Mullin's steady pitching, along with the heavy slugger of the White Cubs, put the game in the bag in the fourth inning, and allowed them to coast the best of the way. Dave Merrill exhibited some snappy fielding from at third base, and made two hits out of three tries. Mullin, Bill Haskell and Cy Perkins also made two bingles.

The game was tight for the first three frames, but in the fourth Brunswick pushed a trio of runs across the plate. Mariner made a production error, and Poullet sent him to third with a single through the pitcher's box. Sprague poked a Texas leaguer to left, but he was out on a bouncer. McCrum struck out, but Haskell caught one on the nose for a one baser to center, and Sprague came in. Mullin's quick throw caught Mariner on a bouncer, however, and turning his attention to Pletcher Foster, he whiffed him out.

Bears Take Lead in Fourth
The Whitmen went into a lead they never lost in the last half of the fourth. Bill Dunbar with perfect control and Norwood MacDonald catching him, held last year's champions, the Sigma Nu's, to a total of three. For the Sigma Nu team, Paul Beckwith '32 and Long Tom '33 in vain changed around as pitcher and catcher in the midst of the deluge. Frank Holbrook, Kappa Sigma senior, was umpire the game.

Alpha Tau's Sock Sigma Nu
The A. T. O.'s followed the example of the Kappa Sig's to the left, tallying 27 times and almost making a grove along the base path, as pitcher Bill Dunbar with perfect control and Norwood MacDonald catching him, held last year's champions, the Sigma Nu's, to a total of three. For the Sigma Nu team, Paul Beckwith '32 and Long Tom '33 in vain changed around as pitcher and catcher in the midst of the deluge. Frank Holbrook, Kappa Sigma senior, was umpire the game.

Willard Phelps, manager of Intramural Athletics, announced that, if time permits, competition between the winners and losers may take place when the first round of the League, an elimination affair, is completed. It is then planned to stage two games a day, one at the Delta, the other at the Pitches Field, which will be sufficiently dry to permit play.

Rules of the League require that each game shall last seven innings, ties played out as long as possible. Games start at 3:30 p.m. and forfeit occurs when a house fails to start a team before 3:45. Each team provides a scorer and an umpire, the latter coming from another house. Ground rules are decided by team captains and umpires before game. Each team provides a new ball for every game and its own bats. Finally, disputes are decided by the Intramural Manager, Willard Phelps.

MUSIC-MAKERS' TRIP TO BANGOR SUCCESS

On Friday, April 22, the Combined Bowdoin Musical Clubs journeyed over bumps roads to Bangor, where they gave a concert at the City Hall that evening at 8.15. Forty-three men made the trip, representing the three divisions of the organization, the Glee Club, the Instrumental Club, and the Polar Bears. Though playing before a small but enthusiastic audience, the concert was one of the best given this season. The affair assumed quite a prominent aspect with the presence of Governor Gardner in the audience.

Following the evening's festivities, a number of the men were entertained by members of the Penobscot County Alumni Association, who sponsored the concert. The Musical Clubs returned on Saturday.

Chi Psi Drops 27-4, as Sigma Nu, Former Champ, is 27-3 Loser

The Delta in all its spring splendor was bespattered with runs and error, perforated with fumbles when the first two games of this year's Interfraternity Baseball League were played last week. The lucky number, for the winners appeared to be twenty-seven, while the unlucky number for the losers hovered under five.

The Kappa Sigma and Chi Psi fraternities had the joint honor to participate in the game on Wednesday last, but the Kappa Sig's dragged off the laurels in drowning the opposition under the score of 27-4. The Barston '32, pitching with variety vigor, allowed only a few hits to elude the tight defense behind him. This fact plus his hitting strength kept the Kappa Sig's at the top of the time. Bert Robbins '34 ably supported Barston behind the plate. Dick Sherman '34, pitcher, and Lorimer Eaton '33, catcher, found the going tough for Chi Psi. Bill Dunbar '32 and Nilsen '34, a couple of A. T. O.'s, umpired the game.

ball and Del Galbraith in this event. Tech Sprinters are Strong. In the dashes Tech will unquestionably furnish the White with the most opposition, and this largely because of one Dick Bell, a soph, whose winning performance of the past have been the highlight of M. I. T.'s showing. Opposing Bell for Bowdoin will be Mal Walker, Milt Hickok, Neal Skilling, and Ray McLaughlin should Magee decide to enter his hurdler in the sprint.

Thistlewaite and Gatchell are the Bear's best bets in the 440 and both may place against the M. I. T. flyers. In the half, however, Usher, Fox, et al. will stack up with stiff opposition in Hall and Barrett, the latter particularly enjoying a reputation for being a remote possibility of one Tech timber-topper pressing Allen for third.

Opposition Shy of Weightmen
The Techmen are reputedly more formidable in the running events than in the field. Perhaps the outstanding man in the M. I. T. field is Wrigley, a broad jumper, who will meet plenty of opposition in Ray McLaughlin if Magee spots the pit. In the high jump Adams, Stanwood and Kahl should garner a good share of nine points.

In the shot-put, discus, and hammer Bowdoin is slated to monopolize the first places but to face a battle for the other two. Howie Niblock and Johnny Boyd in the shot and discus, Galbraith in the hammer, and Swede Larson in all three will bear the brunt of White scores for these events.

NOT GREAT THINKER SAYS D. U. LECTURER
Works of Hardy Contain All Varieties of Realism in Language

"The genius of Thomas Hardy is peculiar in that he is the one English author whose books contain all the diverse types of realism." In these words, Miss Mary Ellen Chase, Professor of English at Smith College, summed up the greatness of this 19th century novelist. Following a well known as a short story writer and essayist, is a prominent authority on Hardy and spoke on that author to an appreciative audience at the annual Delta Upsilon Lecture on April 29.

SILLS SCORES DEFEATISM IN MODERN CRISIS

Youth Very Often Ignores Conquering Aspect of the Church
NORMAN THOMAS IS FAITHFUL TO IDEAL
Victory in End Goes to the Determined and Not Those Who Will

Extolling the conquering nature of Christianity, and scoring the prevalent attitude of defeatism towards our problems, President Sills spoke in Sunday Chapel on the first of May. In this modern age, he said, the President, we are much too inclined to overlook the victorious nature of the Christian religion. We are forgetful of the triumphal march of Christianity through the ages; how it has made its way, conquering all obstacles, overcoming our weaknesses, difficulties, dangers and what is greater still, overcoming those perils which come from within us. We need to remember the progress of the teachings of Christ, especially when days of adversity and problems seem to be overwhelming us.

The glorious march began back in the days of paganism. It continued through the struggles of the early Church, then through a more dangerous period of prosperity. The French Revolution and the obstacles of the 19th century could not stop the march which has continued, and is still continuing in our own times, always victorious in its essence. The victory danger and what is greater still, overcoming those perils which come from within us. We need to remember the progress of the teachings of Christ, especially when days of adversity and problems seem to be overwhelming us.

College Curiosities Unearthed by Reporter Snooping Around Campus

Our energetic youths have gone about poking into underground tunnels, checking up on what famous people lived in what rooms (here's a tablet to mark Hawthorne's room, yet Longfellow, who may last in literature as long as Hawthorne, gets a hunk of stone sunk in Winthrop's walls), and doing other mental gymnastics for features. Good work and hard work. But they have over-looked, naturally, things which, though they don't deserve feature to themselves, shouldn't escape us.

The ORIENT favors and urges serious consideration of the following: a senior dormitory, a new classroom building, a covered hockey rink, a better road through the campus...

Publication Company; student representation on the Blanket Tax Committee; longer reading period, closer contacts through published dockets and student referenda between Student Council and undergraduates...

Circulation Among The Alumni

THIS ISSUE OF THE ORIENT is dedicated to the purpose of increasing its circulation among the alumni. Thirty-five hundred copies have been struck off the press, which is a record number...

Frankly, the whole effort is intended to enlarge the mailing list. That the method must smack of materialism we regret; for our appeal is not motivated by any particular need or desire for increased funds...

As a unifying force a student newspaper can serve the college only when it is distributed to a widely scattered grade body. This is especially true when its editorial program reveals circum- spection and respect for fact...

I am greatly interested to hear that the undergraduate editors of the ORIENT are making an effort to interest more of the alumni in their paper. It is in every way desirable that the alumni should know more than they do of undergraduate activities and of undergraduate attitudes; conversely, that the undergraduates should realize how important a part of the college is formed by the alumni...

New Haven, Conn., May 1.—According to the announcement made recently by A. B. Crawford, Director of the Department of Personnel Study at Yale, and President of the Eastern College Personnel Officers Association, the placement and personnel officers of many of the Eastern Colleges have determined to exert every effort to curb the long prevalent practice of door-to-door salesmen who trade upon their college connections in order to effect sales.

After an intensive survey of the experiences of college men who accepted sales jobs during the summer of 1931, representatives of Amherst, Bates, Boston University, Bowdoin, Brown, Columbia, Connecticut College, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Massachusetts State College, Middlebury, Mount Holyoke, New York University, Pembroke, Princeton, Radcliffe,

DEBATERS TIE WITH MAINEMEN ON 'CAPITALISM'

Declare Its Unsoundness as a System of Economic Organization

NO DECISION GIVEN IN FIRST MAINE TILT

Smith, Deane, and Davis are Bowdoin Team Members in Union Debate

Last night, for the first time in a good many years, Bowdoin and the University of Maine met in formal debate. The question under consideration was the same as that of the variety used on this season's southern trip, "Resolved: That capitalism as a system of economic organization is unsound in principle." Lincoln Smith '32, Stephen Deane '34, and Albert S. Davis, Jr. '35 had the affirmative, and on the whole presented a rather convincing case.

The argumentation for Bowdoin was opened by Lincoln Smith, who described at some length the chaos that exists today in the economic, political, and social worlds. Without attempting to define capitalism, he outlined several determining conditions that governed its existence.

Maine Speaker Charles Clendinning was the first speaker to take up the cudgels for Maine declared that conditions had been drawn rather too darkly, and that cyclical depression was necessary under any system. Then he proceeded to analyze the determining characteristics set up by Mr. Smith.

Stephen Deane continued for Bowdoin, reverting entirely to a theoretical discussion. He pointed out the outlined characteristics one by one, he traced each of them to its eventual probable outcome. The affirmative particularly harped on the enormous disparity of wealth that is existent, and enlarging every year, though freely admitting that under any system of government there must always be workers dependent upon labor for their daily bread.

In concluding the direct addresses of the evening, Maine seemed determined to stand by their guns on the "perversion of capitalism" claim. Some mention was made of the welfare capitalism that is sweeping thru the country.

"BLUE BOTTLE INN" AND "GOOD THEATRE" ROSTERS SELECTED

Parker, Everett, Schaffner Given Prominent Parts in Presentation

The members of the casts of the two one act plays to be produced at Lewiston, Brunswick and Bowdoin were selected at a meeting of the club held last Wednesday evening in the Union. From the generous number of students trying out for the parts, the following casts were picked.

In "Blue Bottle Inn," the original play by Phillip G. Parker '35, the author will himself take the leading role, that of Bates will be played by the cast will be Walter D. Hinckley '34 playing the part of Westcott, Mendell, a brother to Baker Mendell; and Sterling D. Nelson '35 as Shores, a general servant.

The dramatic personnel for the second play, "Good Theatre" by the eminent author, Christopher Morley, was chosen with the same care. A girl to play the part of the Girl in the Box Office. Several girls are at present under consideration, but no choice has been made as yet.

23 out of 35 State Crowns Have Fallen to Bowdoin, Records Reveal

Since the Maine Intercollegiate Athletic Association first inaugurated the State Track Meet, back in 1926, Bowdoin has won 23 out of the 35 contests run off a number far larger than that of all the other three colleges combined. Only twice has it finished worse than second, even in the lean years of 1911-16.

Plans Will Include Change in Usual Motif of Gymnasium Decoration

Instead of the usual low ceiling effect used to hide the Sargent Gymnasium, the committee has decided to utilize a high roof motif, sloping down to all four sides from the peak in the balcony, and in each corner, a series of light fixtures will be arranged in order that the balcony spectators may view the formal ball to better advantage.

The news of this decided increase in the college loan fund was coupled with an expression of satisfaction in the increased scholarship of students. No complaint of depression has been experienced at Bowdoin because of the depression, asserted the President.

Bowdoin, Maine Will Battle for State Cinder Laurels

With all the daily papers playing up the fact that Bowdoin is a heavy favorite to capture the State Meet at Lewiston next Saturday, the booster sat down to do a little doping himself. He found that each of the Maine colleges had participated in a single outdoor meet, but none had made any sure predictions. But with the aid of the indoor New Englanders, he gleaned the following on the outcome at Lewiston. Needless to say, much depends on just what events the coaches decide to run their men in, and whether they plan to double them or not.

Interest in the history, distinguishing qualities and possibilities of the Arabian Horse ran unusually high in the discussion after the talk, when Mr. Brown answered questions for Bowdoin and Brunswick horse-lovers.

Bowdoin continued its slipshod fielding and unproductive hitting that has played havoc with the team's play this season.

'You Never Can Tell' Says Magee of State Meet in Final Interview

"No team has any advantage at all," stated Coach Jack Magee in his last statement to the press before the state meet, which opens at 8 o'clock tomorrow. "We can't afford to lose a single point we've counted on, and if any of our men look good for first place fall, we shall fall too."

MEAD, BOOTH, LORING ELECTED IN MEETING OF FRENCH SOCIETY

Paul E. Everett Delivers Paper on His Travels and Studies in Europe a Year Ago

Election of next year's officers was the chief business taken up at last Tuesday's meeting of L'OURS Blanc, Bowdoin French society. C. Stewart Mead '33 is president of the society for 1932-33. G. Russell Booth '33 is vice-president, and Edward P. Loring '33 is secretary-treasurer as results of the voting.

EXTRA!

What is perhaps the severest shock to Jack Magee and his cinder cohorts since the loss of Harry Thistlewaite and Tom Umack is Maine's choice to enter the state meet at Lewiston. There may even be a first place among half-mile Black, high jumper Sleeper, or pole-vaulter Umack.

Blue's Superb Balance Makes Orono Outfit Loom as Meet Dark Horse

SECONDS, THIRDS TO DECIDE FINAL ISSUE

Bates and Colby Teams are Weakest of the State Cinder Squads

It's a tossup! Such is the consensus of opinion on the 35th annual State Track meet, scheduled to be contested next Friday and Saturday at Guelston Field, Bates. The margin between the White Bears of Bowdoin and the Brown Bears of Maine is so close that no dopester for either place should go to Moulton of the Orono squad, will be definitely decided only by the second and third places. Although Bowdoin has four first places that seem almost cinched, at least two more that are teetering on the brink of uncertainty, those nebulous positions that any upstart may cop, the second and third spots, may either spell victory or defeat for them.

Meet a Two-Team Affair

Neither Bates nor Colby has an outside chance to win, although the former team should garner a majority of the running events. The contest is distinctly a two-team affair, with the two Bruins at each other's throats from start to finish.

Mel Means of Maine is the favorite in the century sprint, with Knox of Bates not far behind. The scramble for third place should be most interesting. Colby, although Skilling or Walker of Bowdoin, or Flaherty of Colby may garner that elusive third point.

Ray McLaughlin, Polar Bear star, should also be a contender. Whether Jack Magee chooses to run him in that event, although Means or Knox may press him, is another matter.

MEAD, BOOTH, LORING ELECTED IN MEETING OF FRENCH SOCIETY

Election of next year's officers was the chief business taken up at last Tuesday's meeting of L'OURS Blanc, Bowdoin French society. C. Stewart Mead '33 is president of the society for 1932-33. G. Russell Booth '33 is vice-president, and Edward P. Loring '33 is secretary-treasurer as results of the voting.

The list of "Nouveaux Membres" now stands as follows: Albert S. Davis, Jr., Roland H. Graves and Edward P. Loring, all of '33; Edward I. Albing, John L. Arnold, Harold H. Everett, Roger S. Hall, Alfred S. Hayes, Jerome H. Kiddle, Blake Tewksbury and H. Nelson Tibbette, all of '34, and George R. Edwards, Nathan C. Fuller, Walter M. Luce and Arthur M. Stratton, all of '35.

Harry Thistlewaite, who pulled a tendon last week, is definitely out of the quarter mile, and Maine, Bates and Colby all have good men in this event. Arnold Adams is the decided favorite, but Russell Chapman may, as well as great a favorite two years ago, and Sid Foster beat him. You never can tell!

State Meet

We look ahead eagerly to the State Meet of next Saturday. Not since 1927 has the prospect of a Bowdoin victory loomed up with such promise.

Masque and Gown

After a period of indecision the Masque and Gown begins to whip into shape a program for Ivy Day. It seems that the organization was divided until recently on the advisability of conforming to its annual custom of presenting a play at this time.

CRITICISM MUST BE FOUND ON FACTS ASSERTS PRESIDENT

Every Period of Crisis Also a Time of Criticism Proclaims Sills

"Every period of crisis is also a period of criticism. An unsuccessful athletic season is in this respect like a period of economic depression," said President Sills in his Chapel address last Sunday.

DEBATERS TIF WITH MAINE ON CAPITALISM

Juniors Criticized by Some "For example, the present Junior Class is being severely criticized in some quarters because it has engaged a very exclusive orchestra for the Ivy Dance."

Mustard and Cress

Bowdoin youngsters variously engaged in hearing bears roar out windows, fixing defunct motorcars, raising the young grass playing baseball, strolling in the sun, were somewhat surprised to hear loud declamations from the Art Building steps.

Anyhow, Tommie Means' charges ought to hang up a sign to let a fellow know they're only practicing!

We were interested in a poster that one of the Polar Blades brought back with him from Jackson. It depicted—in early American style—a group of doubtful animals (bears, we imagine) drinking from bottles, and Canada thirty miles away.

Nobody will ever make us believe, though, that those pictures were our jazzmen playing instruments. Trumpets, for instance, or saxophones, or what have you?

For a few hours last Sat. night it looked like nobody would show up for the dance. Lads in the balcony vied for the bandmen, however, so everyone had a jolly time.

Two items from the Portland press occur to us: Bowdoin (god bless her name) has the current of publicity because of outside fires. Nogg, why not burn down some of our own buildings—Adams Hall, for example. After all, it seems only fair.

The other is just this: The recent Evening News Brunswick Section might better have been dubbed the "Bowdoin Orient Section". From the standpoint of accuracy and credit, that is.

Going the matelot shirt boys one better, a couple of Pai U's donned starting convict jerseys. With red stripes and what "seven-passenger Cadillac sedan" owner has cut his own throat and price, reducing the November value from seventy-five to fifteen berries?

Which last, gentlemen, merely means that Johnny Creighton is one of the few who will be carrying his own bread next Fall.

SECOND WARNING TO COLLEGE SALESMEN IN YALE CAMPAIGN Eastern College Personnel Officers Association Hits Canvassers

Bowdoin recently received a second warning from Eastern College Personnel Officers Association in regard to the "ill-disguised form of begging" pursued by college students during summer vacations.

First the report brought out that the rate of mortality is very high among summer salesmen. Only about one half of the men who reported had stayed on their job for ten weeks or more, and a large number dropped out after a few weeks of work.

Another striking fact is that the earnings brought in by student salesmen are surprisingly small, seriously challenging the statements and claims made by certain companies which employ student canvassers.

A. B. Crawford, President of the Association and director of the Department of Personnel Study at Yale points out in his statement that no salesman, or company employing such a salesman, has any right to use the name of a college to promote sales.

The Maine arguments under analysis. No decision was given. The next varsity debate will be on the afternoon of May 27, 1932, with Bowdoin at Brunswick.

GLAMOUR OF ARABIAN LIFE PORTRAYED BY MR. WILLIAM R. BROWN

The French have to go a-hoisting all over again. Mr. Brown's thrashing is in addition honored with the arrival of a bombing plane in his camp to insure his good behavior during the powwow with the soldiery.

The last reel was devoted almost entirely to Arabian horses. Horses are one of Mr. Brown's big interests in life and were the main reason for his trip to Arabia.

The exceptionally strong points of the Arabian, says Mr. Brown, are his speed, his ability to go long distances with little nourishment, and his ability to carry heavy loads.

Contributions to the Alumni Fund have thus far been piling up in a very satisfying manner as a result of the annual drive.

Statistics upon the returns thus far are as follows: almost four hundred men have already contributed, a number which is nearly twice that of the same time last year.

An added impetus was given to the drive by President Sills' inspiring message to all Bowdoin Alumni, which was sent out during the last week in April.

"IL EST CHARMANT" TO BE SHOWN HERE AT THE CUMBERLAND

French Department Brings in Foreign Musical Play for Instruction

"Il Est Charmant", musical comedy in spoken French, now showing in New York and Paris theatres, has been billed through the efforts of Professor Frederick W. Brown for a private presentation before Bowdoin French students Saturday morning, May 21, at the Cumberland theatre.

Professor Brown announces that the showing of the picture will be solely a college function and that tickets cannot be procured except on the campus, possibly through the French instructors. Arrangements are in progress to give all students of French an opportunity to see "Il Est Charmant" and it is highly probable that students having conflicts will obtain excused cuts.

If the presentation is a success, other French productions will be brought to Brunswick next year in the interests of advanced study of spoken French. Such a movement would make it possible for Bowdoin to join a proposed circuit of New England colleges, formed for the express purpose of securing the best French talks. The ambassador from France has declared that were such a circuit formed talking pictures direct from France could be transported free of duty.

The initiative in furthering this idea of a circuit originated at Harvard and was quickly picked up by Williams. Should the forthcoming production at the Cumberland go over as it is hoped, Bowdoin's joining the circuit would be practically certain.

'Far More College Spirit in Bowdoin Now than Before' Says Dean Nixon

Dean Nixon in his talk in chapel last Saturday made an earnest plea for college spirit. "We have heard much in recent years about the decline of college spirit throughout the eastern colleges," declared Dean Nixon. "We have heard very much indeed in recent weeks about its decline right here at Bowdoin," he added.

"College spirit has always existed here. But there is far more of it in Bowdoin than there used to be, far more, I hope, and believe, it will continue to increase."

"How about college spirit—love of the college and loyalty to its interests in general? A visitor to college last fall, the father of one of our Freshmen, in fact, told me that he happened to be in one of the ends and asked an unknown student whom he met, an upper-classman, how he liked Bowdoin. It's a hell of a place, was the response. While I am sure this is an extreme and untypical case, I fear I could adduce a good deal of everyday evidence that college spirit has declined at Bowdoin, as at other colleges, since the war.

Not Unreasonable Love

"An immediate, uncalculating, unreasoned, often unreasonable, but certainly genuine love of institution, loyalty to institution, is not what most clearly marks the more recent generations of college men, on the contrary. I shall not try to explain the change. The words "individualism" and "transportation" cover a great deal of the territory. But I do wish merely to state my opinion that rampant individualism and indiscriminate debunking and the bias pose, though much less apparent at Bowdoin than in other colleges I know, should by now have had their rather ridiculous day in our eastern colleges, and that it is time for us to begin again to cultivate the virtues of collective action, time to begin debunking the debunkers, and time to do a bit of homage again to the fine and admirable traits in humanity and human institutions. They are there.

"As for college athletic spirit—that has more than declined, here and elsewhere in the east. Comparatively speaking, it has sunk.

More important than Cheering

"There are more important things in college than winning football games, more important things than supporting your team by your presence and your cheering. I have no slightest criticism of any undergraduate who is doing one of these important things the day of a game, if it really is more important, if it really is some paramount duty or something that will do more to make him a valuable part of society. But if it is true that some undergraduates nowadays willfully substitute movies or auction or radio or best-seller or tea-dance or week end party for a Bowdoin-Maine football game, say, I can neither understand their preference nor do I want to, nor could I state

Water Bombs Burst As Lady Visitors Desert Dorm Warfare District

Started lady visitors to Bowdoin on Art Day last week scuttled away from the embattled vicinities of the dormitories as water began to fly in one of the Spring skirmishes. No casualties occurred, however, as stray water bags narrowly missed representatives of Maine Women's Clubs. Incidentally, the visitors were highly amused by the warm-day exhibition of horse-play staged for their benefit last Wednesday.

After their luncheon in Mesleion Union they gathered on the terrace to watch half-clad students douse each other thoroughly from dormitory windows.

The Bowdoin Club of Indianapolis, Indiana, is to hold a luncheon on Friday, May 29. Carl E. Stone '39 is president of the Indianapolis club this year; Mr. George V. Craighead '25 is secretary.

On Monday, May 16, Professor M. Roy Ridley of the English department will speak before a gathering of Hancock county school teachers. The convention of teachers will be held in Ellsworth, Maine.

at this time and in this place just what I think of it.

"The old days when it was more or less an undergraduate duty to stand around every afternoon watching the football team practice are luckily gone forever. But if we are headed for the days when it's neither a duty nor a pleasure on a Saturday afternoon to watch that football team play—the Bowdoin team, our team, the best team we've got, win or lose—if we are headed for such days, then it's high time we retraced our steps.

Seek Spirit of Cooperation
"Can we not keep on gaining where we have gained, and at the same time recover the valuable part of what we have lost? "Rationalization", "Realism", and "Individualism" have their virtues. But they can so easily, like most other qualities, be carried to excess, can so easily become barren and selfish and unsatisfying, can so easily unfit us for the joy and the increasingly close-knit world, of losing oneself in generous enthusiasms and cooperating with others for common ends."

past, the undergraduates of the present is rising well to the emergency." President Sills, departing from a general statement of student work and aid, continued by a summary of the college's own financial condition.

"The college, like all other organizations, is of course suffering from a reduction in its income. I have recently made the following statement to the alumni: The college has, roughly speaking, three sources of income: fees from students, income from invested funds, and annual contributions from alumni and friends.

"In the present emergency it would be manifestly unwise to raise tuition; a large number of undergraduates are at present having a desperate struggle to make both ends meet. As for income from invested funds, there has been so far this year a reduction of about $35,000—a loss of about six and one-half per cent of the usual income. What further reduction there may be in the near future, no man living is wise enough to tell."

Must Postpone Projects

"By very strict economy, by postponing several projects that can wait, and by using some accumulated income from a recent legacy, we will be able to come near balancing our budget this year if we receive the usual generous amount from the college alumni fund.

"The college is not a sacrosanct institution that should be protected from the anxieties that beset other organizations. That is not the point at all. It is rather the thought in days like these that we must, for the sake of the next generation, keep our colleges and our schools going, and we must realize with his holiness the Pope that in economic depressions it is always youth that suffers the most severely and the longest.

"If we can in days of adversity keep our own college serene and strong, we are to that extent helping the next generation and passing on the torch and flame undimmed."

Bowdoin Rated Two Points Behind Blue for Title Win

(Continued from page 1) a victory in the mile, although he will have more than the usual amount of competition from Booth of Maine and Usher and Sewall of Bowdoin. Any one of these four men can win without creating an outstanding upset.

Norm Whitten of Bates ought to race through the two mile in well under ten minutes for a victory, with two Maine men, Booth and Gunnink, also in the fight. Steve Lavender, Polar Bear ace, is by no means to be counted out, and should be close to first place as the runners sweep into the home-stretch.

Hurdles Look Bowdoinish

Two events that appear to be Polar Bear walkovers are the two hurdle races. Ray McLaughlin and Charlie Stanwood, who have run one-two in these races for the past two state combats, should repeat their performances, with Charlie Allen also in the running. Bill Floring, Maine's recent acquisition, may edge in for a point.

The high jump is due to be another closely contested event, with Charlie Stanwood, Bowdoin's defending champion, a slight favorite to repeat. Captain Larry Robinson of Colby and Webb of Maine may con the other two places, but John Adams, who has done over six feet this year for the White, have shown to decided advantage in comparison with the fielding and hitting accomplishments of the club.

At the present time the Polar Bear batsmen are swatting the pellet for the amazing average of .179, which, to any one who knows baseball, is over 100 percentage points below the ordinary.

Jit Ricker, meeting the ball for .333, is the only stickster on the team with an average of .300 or better, while Captain Sid McKown is second best with only .250. Dave Merrill rates a .235 standard and Bart Bossidy just chins onto a .200 mark for third and fourth ratings respectively. The rest of the club trails behind this quartet, with averages varying from McLeod's .185 to Hempel's .053.

Erratic Fielding

If Wells has been wanting in hitting strength he has been doubly wanting in defensive play. In the four encounters on the trip last week the Bears hung up a grand total of 27 errors, or an average of 7 boots per game.

MASS. AGGIES TOP POLAR BEAR NINE 5-1 IN CLOSE GAME

Dowling Features for White in Box; Thompson, Welch and Hicks Star for Opponents

Massachusetts State completely humbled an erratic Bowdoin nine 5-1 at Amherst, Thursday, when George Cain, State twirler, permitted only two singles while his teammates accented him almost flawless support and capitalized on eight Bowdoin miscues. The only redeeming feature of the game from a Bowdoin standpoint was the pitching of Bob Dowling, who limited the State sluggers to seven well-scattered hits, which would have kept the Wellsmen in the fight throughout the tilt had his teammates contributed any kind of support.

Bush scored for Mass. State in the opening round after singling and completing the circuit on three successive errors by the Whitemen. Jit Ricker was the chief offender in the comedy of errors, committing three of the eight slip-ups.

The two Wellsmen to hit safely were Lewis and McLeod, who each biffed a single. Outstanding for M. S. C. at the plate were Thompson, Welch and Hicks.

NETMEN DROP 2 ON INCOMPLETE TOUR IN SOUTH

Loss 6-3 to Amherst, 8-1 to Wesleyan; Rain Halts Two Matches

SPRAGUE IS SINGLES STAR BY TAKING TWO

Tilts with Worcester Tech and Tufts Cancelled by Weather

Old Man Jupiter Pluv and Lady Tough Luck must have been traveling companions of the Varsity tennis team when it hopped off last week for the annual spring tour. Scheduled to play four meets, the netmen lost to Wesleyan 8-1 May 4 at Middletown, and to Amherst 6-3 the following day at Amherst. And because of Plevius' disagreeable company, the racketeers could not play against Worcester Tech or Tufts.

Dick Sprague was the sole consistent point winner during the trip, winning both his singles and pairing up with Frost to take one doubles match and lose one. Don Bates, promising Soph, was the only other singles winner defeating Bryant of Amherst, 6-1, 6-4.

To open the trip, the team journeyed to Middletown, where Wesleyan welcomed it ungraciously with an 8-1 trouncing. Don Bates put up a hard fight against Howland, but lost, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5. Loth also drew his opponent, W. Parker, to three sets, dropping the match with 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

Improve Against Amherst

On the next day, May 5, a long hop brought them to Amherst where improvement was displayed, but without results in the matter of team victory. Sprague and Bates won easily in the singles, and Sprague and Frost acquitted their way to a doubles triumph, thus bringing the meet to a 6 to 3 finish.

A drizzle greeted them at Worcester Tech; and postponement until Sunday was the offer of the Technem. But returning on Sunday to Worcester meant two hundred extra miles of travel. In Medford, where they found the drizzle raising havoc with the Tufts courts, the meet was likewise cancelled.

If that ball nine will only get on to themselves now and tighten up on their fielding and slap out a few more hits, they could make a very creditable showing behind the pitching which they are now receiving. Thursday, after a needed rest from their bus tour of the New England colleges, they should be back in shape to take a whack at Maine.

Bowser Picks Two Elevens to Engage in Spring Grid Tilt, with Eye to Fall

WESLEYAN HUMBLER BOWDOIN BALL TEAM WITH SCORE OF 7-2

Eleven errors and a bad second inning paved the way for a revamped Bowdoin nine to fall before the Wesleyan Cardinal, 7-2 at Middletown, Connecticut, last Friday. Dave Means was not effective in the box for the White, though he suffered heavily from lack of support.

The Bowdoin infield, especially the shortstop post, played ragged ball, chalking up nine of the eleven miscues. Bossidy at short committed two errors before shifting to the outfield in favor of Bennett. The change did not help matters, as three more plays leaked through the shortfield before the end of the tilt. Jit Ricker turned in a creditable job behind the plate in the absence of Longate and Mathes. Wesleyan base runners fatfooted, besides playing errorless ball.

For about four weeks the spring football enthusiasts, and aspirants have had their battered noses to the grindstone, while the power at the wheel, Coach Bowser, polished up crinkles, and rounded out imperfections. With the ebbing of the season reward came. Yesterday afternoon at Pickard Field, there was a good old-fashioned drill game between two teams picked from the squad.

To insure a more evenly-balanced fracas, Bowser combined the first line of his Spring group with the second-team backfield, the whole to combat a composite of the second line and the first backfield. It was a novel experiment and produced surprise upon surprise in the way of efficiency and coordination.

"Charlie" had for the first line big Bill Davis at left end, McKenney at left tackle, Ackerman at left guard, Milliken (Capt.-elect for the year's team) at center, Dick Nason at right guard, D'Arcy at right tackle, Sargent at right end.

With these men he coupled Second-Backfieldmen Winchell, quarterback, A.J. Clark, fullback, Bob McNutt, right halfback, and Bob Cleave, left halfback. For the other eleven, he had Second Linemen Bigelow, Loring, Barbour, Keville (Freshman captain), A.J. Johnson, Drake, Ralph Kelley, along with First-Backfieldmen Henry Hubbard, Burtell, Bakanovsky, and Palmer. Find, Newman, Kingsbury, Sternberg were able reserves.

Interested onlookers are anxious to see how these men, who have faithfully braved rain and sleet, wind and flurry and have also labored on those recurrent sweat-days, who have showed up during almost all week days from 3:30 p.m. to 6:45 p.m., will fare in the Fall when Bowdoin starts its real drive for gridiron recognition. Although the inexperienced have received the most considerate instruction in fundamentals, the others have shared the constant contact-work and the manipulation of several plays and the grueling scrimmage. Whither 1933?

drives. Gazlay and Braithwaite alone came through in the singles when they defeated Longate and Mathes, respectively, by the same score of "3 and 2". In the foursomes, Mathes and Warner, stellar Wesleyan men, were hard put to down the Braithwaite-Robbins pair, winning only after nineteen holes of play.

Undaunted, the boys trekked to Wachusett country club, on the next day, played Worcester Tech, and left with a tie score, 8-all. Tech took three singles, Gazlay winning the other. Bowdoin dominated the foursomes with the combinations Braithwaite-Braithwaite and Gazlay, Robbins coming out on top, 3 and 2, and 5 and 4, respectively.

More cheerful, they sighted at Newton, Mass., where they founed the Commonwealth Country Club a beautiful setting for their whitewashing of the M.I.T. contingent. Here they took all six matches,—four singles and two doubles. Even the closest battle was none too difficult for the Whitemen, Robbins defeating Colman, 2 up. Gazlay with a "5 and 4" to his credit, and Braithwaite with a "6 and 5" displayed superior golfing skill over their rivals. On Saturday, the vindicated youths repeated the process, this time on Tufts.

McLaughlin will be in for a busy day Saturday with trials in the broad jump, high hurdles, farling and the low hurdles in the morning and the finals in the afternoon. "The little general" may possibly withdraw the Skowhegan race man from the high hurdles in which there is considerable danger of a fall. These coaches will have a great deal of doing to do in order to get their prospective point winners in the best arrangement of events. There is one thing in their favor this year: the meet being run off on a regular time schedule for the first time. This is due mainly through the pressure brought to bear upon the authorities by Johnnie Magee.

SCURRILOUS RAG

SIRS:

For crying out loud, have you seen what that scurrilous rag, the Orient has been advocating. You could have knocked me over with the Moulton Union when I saw it; but even now I cannot believe that anyone would want a new road through campus.

Preserve our relics! Keep the damn road! Put another roll of adhesive tape on Winthrop Hall, it'll hang together for any number of years. And if it collapses, who cares? Only a few freshmen and a couple of proctors will get wiped out, and we can always find new proctors . . .

As ever,

Emmet G. Demmitt, '90.

Ed.—GRIME abhors improvement, commends reverence of traditions, sees no need of housing students in dormitories, providing a highway through campus. The ORIENT, we argue is a "scurrilous rag" having only sensation-seeking, money-making tendencies, entirely lacking of vision, best interests of students and college, regard for alumni body.

AN OPEN LETTER

SIRS:

I do not believe in stirring things up and I think that radicals in college make for poorer cooperation among students in such a way that nobody can be understood by nobody else. We ought to clarify a few of the issues lying around loose-like it is about time a calm mind like I took things for a while which is the reason I am writing this letter which is called "An Open Letter" a name which I thought up by myself.

In the first place a good conservative communication ought never to take up less than four columns which is a fine thing if you should ask any editor who wants to fill space in order to be lucid that is The letter I mean. Now if the college paper if they call it a paper would just think up some swell platforms to fight about like women profs on the faculty and outdoor swimming pools and free books and furnished rooms and beer and free lunches at the Union if you call it that think how wheed up we could really get.

Hoping I have made myself clear as ever,

Cyrano Merejchcki, '35.

Ed.—GRIME believes Open Letters products of sincere, well-meaning supporters who are positive they have the solution of the Sphinx's riddle.

NOW-ER-GET THIS DOWN

SIRS:

As a professor at Bowdoin College in Government—now get this, it's going to be good—I think it's about time that we, that is to say, you, or rather, as some would put it, they—no, that's wrong. Now get this down. Up to last year we have been going from bad to, that is to say, worse. Now, (put this in your notes), in order to improve conditions in general, or rather, ah, to so-to-speak clarify the governmental attitude of the College, as it were.

Take this down: We have instituted what might be termed a, ah, where was I? Yes, a course in American History, just for what we call "Freshman". Have you got that down?

Well, it's got me down, too,

Oarum Hummell.

Ed.—"Curt, clear, complete" IS GRIME!

May 1, 1932

Sirs:

I have heard roundabout that there is going to be an OCCIDENT published this year. Before this libelous sheet appears again I feel it my duty to counsel its perpetrators concerning the terrible chance they take. Hitherto many editors have jeopardized their lives by printing such stuff. You fellows depend too much on a man's capacity to take a ride and hide beneath the blanket of long accepted tradition. You interpret the doctrine of the freedom of the press far too literally. If you print anything about me I'll sue you.

Yours truly,

Oscar Zilch.

Ed.—Sue us! Yes, go ahead and sue us! It will make all the papers and we'll get a job with some scandal sheet because of all the publicity. There are always some people who cannot be the butt of a joke with any graciousness. For instance, there's a track coach hereabouts whom we wouldn't offend for the world as he is one of the country's finest. For years he has been turning out track teams which have been great assets to us. We like to take him for a little ride as he is well-known to everybody. Yet he invariably hits the ceiling, not understanding our viewpoint. It is pointless to take as a subject someone more or less in the background. Consequently we won't print anything about you, Mr. Zilch!

Maine Hall, long the scene of riots, floods, broken doors, bottled beer, and general rioting, has again sustained its reputation with the recent grand exodus of half a dozen fire extinguishers via the window route in the midst of a midnight bacchanalian feast.

The dastardly crime was committed sometime on the night of March twenty-third (although this information may not be reliable since subsequent investigation has shown that there could not possibly be a soul within heaving distance of the hall windows). All the boys, even to the most insignificant Freshman, claim to have been wrapped in the arms of ole' Morpheus.

Imagine the consternation of George, Maine Hal potentate, when he was greeted by the sight of the mangled anti-fire cans looking gaunch like accordions. In their weird and apparently unaided flight the cans sort of got shook up and they were found battered and bleeding in a pool of brown suds on the snow that had fallen during the night.

Dean "Billy Edwards" Nixon in righteous wrath called forth all the vandals of the Maine Hotsie Totsie Club and after seventeen hours intensive grilling found nothing but yeasty suds in the bottom of some Moxie bottles. But he was not to be deterred in his efforts to ferret out the unprincipled cads and forthwith presented the incumbents of the ill-fated house with the customary ticket 'payable at the Bursars' office.' The boys very generously and loyally kicked in their buck which also included express—$1.40 and labor—$7.72. Now here's the rub; there are sixty-six men in the dormitory excluding proctors and the bill came to $65.96. What will become of the extra four cents? In such extenuating times as these it would be in order for the victims who were so sublimely fleeced to circulate a petition demanding the four cents be donated to the B.C.A.

Betsy Trotwood.

THEM ATHLETICS AGAIN

Dear Editor ole boy ole boy:

Referring to your GRIME of April 1, how do you get that way. I mean, griping because Bohunk hasn't won a marble match since the season opened. Is it our fault that our varsity men are laid up with sprained thumbs? Is it our fault that the referees don't see Bates or Colby or Maine INCHING! Yes, I said Inching!

Lay off our atheletic teams, and start taking some cracks at the faculty who ought to be taken a crack at, if you know what I mean. I was pleased to note in your last issue that Professor MacGroosh was bounced. It was him who kept our best man out of that billiard match against Maine.

Sincerely,

Roland J. J. Moral.

p.s. You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours.

Mass. Hall

Bowdoin

April 1, 1932

Sir:

It seems to me as an ardent observer of Bowdoin undergraduate reactions by means of questionnaires that the men of Bowdoin are about ripe for a beer parade. So is the Bowdoin beer.

I recently sent a questionnaire to 647 Bowdoin students, 678 of them replied in favor of beer. This is a sign of something or other.

May I propose a parade similar to that being organized by Mayor James J. Walker of New York in which the faculty and students of Bowdoin might take part.

I would suggest the parade be headed by "Nooky" Little, garbed in purest white, riding on his bicycle. This to be followed by a tableau on the Dept. of Grounds and Building truck consisting of Casey Slich, Wilmo Miskerall, Tommy Beans, Barney Schmidt and myself, seated around a crock, drinking beer and eating rye bread and cheese. After that would come the faculty garbed in beer caps and white aprons and waving bottle cappers and syphons. Last but not least would come the Bowdoin student body, en masse, waving beer bottles and singing "The Bowdoin Y. M. C. A."

In my opinion this would have a profound national effect, and I would like to have you answer "yes", or "no" in not more than fifty words this question:

Is is or is it not more or less something or other?

Yours truly,

Paul N. Dean.

MY SON EMMETT

Mr. Editor ole pal ole pal,

My son Emmett, who recently transferred to Bohunk from Dartmouth College, says he has been getting a raw deal from the literary magazine, the Goose Feather. He wrote some poetry, he did, which he submitted and they never even used it. Now I never did think much of their magazine anyhow, but I've been encouraging Emmet on account of I figured work on the literary magazine would be swell training for the Orient.

I am sending you a sample of his poetry and I hope you find space for it somewhere.

Yours till the hooky rink freezes over,

Horace Feather.

Ed.—GRIME regrets it cannot print the lovely little lyric which Mr. Feather sent in. It was somewhat about a Lehigh Valley, and we felt that it might make people think we didn't consider Maine good enough. But we found space for it, all right all right. . . .

Ed.—GRIME begs to point out GOOSE FEATHER is high-class, widely read, enjoys a gigantic circulation. Furthermore, it is one of few financially sound depression-time publications of its kind. Its area of distribution is recognized as being one highly appreciative.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS

Roses were Red, Birdies were Blue

When Roadbuilder Kenneth C. M. O'Flaherty saw the condition of the Bohunk College campus highway, last week, he thought something ought to be done. With a squad of ten brave men he attempted to push his way (we say "push" figuratively; "pull" might do just as well, only nobody'd know what it meant. GRIME is lucid, above everything else) into the heart of the Bohunk fastnesses near the almost forgotten kingdom of Moulton Union.

Seven men lost their lives in the ridges near the dangerous North Winthrop area, where the road looks more like a mountain range; another fell into a crevice in the coal pits opposite the rear Chapel district, where prowling lions made short work of his carcass. (Gory, isn't it? GRIME attempts, above everything, to be exciting.)

Bursting into President Kenneth C. M. Still's office late yesterday afternoon, Explorer-Roadbuilder O'Flaherty told his thrilling yarn, ending with a plea for a new road. "Hell, no, we don't need no road," retorted Non-Reactionary Stills. "What we need is a race track." And Explorer-Roadbuilder-Reactionary O'Flaherty agreed with him.

So there will be a race track where once there used to be a road. Said Speedman Joe College: "It's a fine thing, and you may quote me as saying that we students ought to have had a place to burn up the good ole pavement a long time ago. But if they'd just add way stations every fifty yards where coffins could be bought, that'd be the nuts."

BODY BLOW

Bear enthusiasts (and who isn't?) received a severe shock last week when Seniors at Bohunk College signed the pledges en masse. Cried Anti-drinking Seniors: "It is not right that we should follow our predecessors, allowing ourselves to be found disgracefully drunk after examinations. Heaven forbid. We'll go someplace where they can't find us!"

PRESIDENT DEMANDS WOMEN

Ruddy-faced, fast talking, President Kenneth Spills, agitating for intra-governmental reform last week, addressed his facultorial cabinet. Waving aloft his half-empty beer glass, Iconoclast Spills advocated making his favorite private projects, Bohunk College, co-educational.

"Of course we should have women," he declared to the eager cabinet. "Lots of them. One for you, and me, and you, too! Philosopher Small-neck was heard to mutter at this point, "And one for me, too, sir?"

Agitator Spills nodded and continued: "Bohunk men have been getting too rugged and seen to need the feminine softening influence. There are too many three-day beards on campus, too many dirty flannel pants, too many smelly pipes, busted-down automobiles, ratty-looking dogs, soiled sport shoes, chapel cuts. Something ought to be done."

Voicing his famous triolet of words, Reformer Spills cried: "A very real situation faces us: Women or no women? But on the other hand, beer wouldn't be so bad, either." At this point Cabinetmen Heartman, Smiff, and Meansch affirmed his last utterances by saying, in all their grand simplicity: "Hic!"

EROTICISM

Last fall thin-haired, stammering, lady-killer Ernst (Legs) Helme-reich appeared on campus in place of Thomas Curtis (Lady-Killer) Van Cleve. Latter, rabid Missouri Republican, sojourned in Europe, frequented cabarets and beer gardens, wrote letters that caused the mouths of Mes-serve, Abrahamson, Livingston, to water.

Helme-reich, unknown, ambitious, befuddled, made immediate bid for student popularity by exhibiting snapshot at his conferences of ancient lava-coated Herculaneum amusement center. Eroticist Helme-reich pointed to symbol over door, leered, lauded advantages of stag classes. Venus Vender Andrews-Andrews informed, burred with rage, said: "It can't touch mine. The boys will still go for Venus. Enyways, I've got some rip-snorters, the boys ain't seen yet." Bliarney (What did Dido Do) Smith chortled, combed classics for smut, prepared assiduously to defend his title of Harvard's Bad Boy.

In a cramped, bare, unattractive Memorial Hall classroom last week sat large-boned, bushy-haired, heavy-footed Stanley Barney ("Ain't I the Card?") Smith Associate Professor of the Classics at Bowdoin College. Before him in various uncomfortable postures sat some two dozen "students", asleep, dazed, stupid, bored, drunk. For fifty-one minutes by the watch Assopof Smith rubbed his hands, chuckled heartily, talked of Ohio State University, light wines and beers, the United States Mainres, black-powder pistols, libidinous literature, broccoli. Meanwhile students dozed, snored, laughed forcibly at Funnyman Smith's sporadic sallies of wit. Suddenly an abrupt halt was called and the class reticently engaged in a vague, faulty, unsatisfying discussion of the merits of Greek literature.* After eight painful minutes of this, Playboy Smith jovially, chuckling threatened to assign for the next meeting forty thousand lines of translation, compromised, assigned forty lines.

*—Even ardent anti-Hellenist Means is said to have admitted that Greek literature has some merits.

DEMOGRATS SPUTTER

Brunswick (Little France) trembles ever-so-slightly as town Demograts prepare for convention this June, with banners fluttering and town bums cheering groggily. Boss (Tweed) Meanings and his co-partner Politician Mugee have been active for months, buying votes and whispering tales of free beer. Betting runs high, with Demograts willing to take short odds of 3-1.

Basing his platform on planks of non-intoxicating 45% beer, on shingles of no-taxes and unlimited cuts, on clapboards of a colleke dance-hall, Electioneer Meanings plans to paint the town red. "You may quote me as saying I plan to paint the town red," he declared yesterday.

But Demogog Mugee, undaunted, plans to go his confere one better. "You may quote me as saying," he quoted himself as saying, "that I plan to paint the town GREEN!" Bums-wickians are aghast, horrified.

'SOC' EXPERIMENT

Snarling viciously at captors, rat-faced Gangster Number One Cataline allowed himself to be dragged from his third-floor handout in Adams Hall, long noted as criminals' hideaway. Four weeks had Gangster Cataline been crouching in the dark recesses of a deserted class-room while he gave pseudo-lectures to pseudo-students.

Seventy victims have fallen under Cataline's Lily-finger Mob, recently wipers-out of Gorilla Gilligan's Triple Ace Gang. Slobbering, growling, Gangster Cataline was fingerprinted, mugged. Said the prisoner: "I was only doing it in fun. It was all an experiment for my Sociology Class."

Wisenheimers know that Gangster Cataline never was a Soc prof: "He doesn't look like one," cried President Spills, viewing the snivelling ace criminal. Gangster Cataline is young, deprived, whiskered when forced to let his beard grow for three hours.

To Cataline a lonely Brunswick jail cell came pretty, painted Gangster-moll Sadie Ipswich. "He done it for me youse guys," cried Moll Ipswich. "Let him off for de wife and kiddies, I'll make a Soc Prof out of him if youse'll free him." Stern Criminologist Billy Edwards frowned down her request. "No. You nor anybody else could never make a Soc Prof out of him. Show the young lady the door, Jenkins."

*Adams Hall rooms are notoriously deserted; the beer bar in basement, however, does wide-open trade.

PRESIDENT'S WHIMSICALITIES

On bright days President Kenneth C. M. Stills and his golfing partner, Secretary of State O. C. Hormbell, usually trek to the local links, and shoot a round of 108 or so. But yesterday was so warm that Educator Stills said to wordy Taurustossor Hormbell: "Orrie, let's you'n me chuck water!"

No sooner said than done. Visiting old grads were astounded, upon entering Massachusetts Hall, to feel chill water descend violently from the floor above. Chuckling gleefully, Lit-teacher Stills shook hands with Frankster Hormbell.

But as they leaned too far out the window, Contactman Phil (the "Dapper) Wild, aided by his brother, Wilder, tossed a filled water-bag on their exposed heads. Statistician Nixonthat, present at the gay scene, fell out of a window from sheer boyish exuberance . . .

"WELL, BOWL ME OVER!"

Seated in his penthouse apartment, Newthoughtist Nixonthat pondered in his mind's eye there was a long, long room, lined with rows of seats. Down the center ran a beautiful, polished boor. "Now," thought Architect Nixonthat, "what can we do with this empty space?" Keep on using the Chapel only once a day? Let that wonderful floor go unwanted? Nevah! (Fourteen out of eight-nine members of the class of '89 hadn't answered his questionnaire for nothing, by Jove!)

So the Bohunk Chapel will be converted into a bowling alley: a beautiful, long, polished bowling alley. Three things has Architect Nixonthat in mind. 1) to provide some useful carry-over sport for tired students (athletic department please note); 2) to make use of an otherwise half-unused building; and 3) to keep impressionable youngsters away from the den of iniquity downtown.

"Bowl me over," ejaculated President Stills when informed of the project. "Damfine! And the scuppers (or whatever you call 'em) alongside the alleys will make grand gutters for alumni along 'bout Commencement time . . ."

BEER PARADE

Brunswick Democrat and Allfor-smithman Tommie Beans yesterday electrified the little hamlet by declaring himself in favor of the proposed Beer Parade. "Of course I'm for it," said Beerman Beans; "Who the hell wouldn't be?" Over 100,000 beer sympathizers from Topsham and Brunswick will participate in the pro-schnapps campaign march tomorrow.

Against the beer rally are students of Bohunk College, who feel that drinking anything stronger than 1/2 of 1% Coca Cola is contrary to the Eighteenth Amendment. Quoth Samuel Cerisenose: "I dunno what this here non Prohibition is, but it sounds like a good thing, as long as we can get our likker."

So you see that as far as Bohunk is concerned, Beerman Beans' parade is out. But Beans will not be lacking in support. Bold, ruddy-faced Agitator-for-Hard-Likker Twitchell, hawk-eyed, Campaigner-for-Repeal (Uncle Dan) Stabwood, and ruddy-eyed Barkley Skith are willing to carry banners for the cause.

So from the square in the town tomorrow will start tens of thousands of beer-lovers. One never knows where they will end.

THE GREEKS HAD A WORD FOR THEM!

XZESPION (born with wings)

EXHIBIT A. MERCURY — EXHIBIT B. PEGASUS

In the best families (or any others for the matter) that doesn't happen nowadays. Hence the United States Air Corps offers some attractive inducements to you college students for whom it has built a $10,000,000 institution at San Antonio, Texas, where they teach you to fly and while you are learning:

Pay you a salary of $75.00 per month. Pay your living expenses. Supply you (free, of course) with snappy tailor-made, sky blue uniforms.

Grant you the social and military privileges of potential officers. Pay your traveling expenses from your home to the new field at San Antonio.

700 Men are taken in each year. The course requires a year to complete and includes over 200 hours of solo flying. Those who stay the full year are commissioned as Lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserve.

If you don't like the training you may resign at any time. For Example: Should you stay three months and then resign you will receive $225.00 cash, your round trip expenses from your home to San Antonio, and about 50 hours of solo flying.

The service and associations of the Air Corps gives its members a very real distinction and a very noticeable breadth and poise.

If you have applied and are ready to go, we have compiled information and tips giving you inside angles and dope that will be invaluable when you arrive at the field. If you haven't applied yet then by all means get our information. We tell you the entrance procedure and certain twists that make your getting in easier and quicker. The information written by men who have been thru the school covers all points from beginning to end that you are interested in knowing. This information cannot be obtained elsewhere: it is complete. Nothing else to buy. The price is $1.00 or sent C.O.D. if you desire.

BURP CONQUERS OR THE KISS THAT BROKE THE GATUN LOCKS

Burp is discovered squalling in a Turkish bath as he recovers from a six-day bicycle race across the gulf of Mexico in a canoe, preparing for his next conquest, that of coercing the Bowdoin campus into electing him Chief Shevel Artist of the Eversharp Company.

Action is dull until the last act, when Burp removes pencil from mouth to sharpen, exhibiting unmistakable evidence of prominent sawish leanings. Thrill climax to this effervescent drama ensues when our hero, fresh from his conquest of renaming Petrograd, incarcerates himself in the main salon of Moochenberger's Third Avenue "Bogin Resment" (Adams Hall to you), on a convertible Kiddy Kar in raucous hilarity declaring himself unconditionally in favor of Electroplated Sideburns, Better Ventilated Handcars, and Left-Handed Swinets. Reaching the peak of his declamatory propensities, he suddenly finds a six-inch Eberhard Faber embedded in left tonsil. Removing impediment, perceiving beloved demurely juggling three sixteen pound weights with her pedal extremities, while playing a duet on a harpischord.

"Ha! My Beloved. How swallowest thee that dainty tidbit of expostulatory verbosity?"

"Verra weel Ethlbert," chortles the coy siren, haughtily.

"And my darling, wouldst't reward such momentous accomplishments with a suitable token of our mutual fidelity?" Pushing scrofula-like bug into close proximity to the battle scarred bread pan of Guenivere.

"Ah" smirks the maiden, and Grandma's portrait slides another two inches down the wall.

Ethelbert forthwith becomes excruciatingly harassed by entanglement of pencil in third bicuspisid.

"Oh drat the confounded propelrepeller anyway." Guen catches his eye, but returned it to its socket, as the pencil falls on the floor.

"Ethelbert, how like a porker your labia cause you to appear."

"Oink, Oink" spoke Ethelbert. (to self) "I thot I gave that up as a child". Drawn by her hypnotic power Ethelbert goes into a clinch in the ninth with one out, as the curtain falls with a flourish of trumpets and the house rocks with the thunderous paults of the enthusiastic fire-crazed mob—has taken up the chant:

"Oink Oink My Pencil."

The principal, Professor Dunwidde S. Burp, the beefy-brawny, fire-fighting, pouting, porkerish hero of the play was born with a pencil in his mouth. Drifting into the theatre via the Gulg Stream, The Morgan Memorial, and The Inter-Collegiate Hammer Throw, he played in several big favorites, including, "The Atrocity of the Abbatoir" or "Why 3000 People Left Town" and "The Hazardous Experiences of Mamie Zilch" ni which he played the Hazard.

CINEMA

FABRIC SHATTERER

Deploring current depraved tastes in cinema, Reformer Stan (the Dapper) Chaste declared himself for doing something about something. "Roll me down," cried Reformer Chaste, as he sipped another vermouth. President K. of C. Stills agreed that he was right, nodded his head sagely.

As a result, French-enthusiast Fred (the Dapper) Browned, sport-suited, slouch-hatted (and by slouch GRIME means slouch) has engaged a charming little Paris bit called "Une Nuit dans Paris". Fuming, frothing at the mouth was Arch-conformist Bloke, also a French-enthusiast.

"This means the shattering of the veddy fabric of Bohunk society. If that picture is shown,—I leave!"

The picture will be shown.

PEOPLE

"Names make news". Last week these names made this news.

On the occasion of his 90th birthday, Professor Daniel Caldwell (Uncle Dan) Stanwood, distributed largess to poor, gave interview to press. Discardant note was introduced when reporters, unwisely jollying the famous diplomat, international authority, brought up war time stories of his affair with the famous female spy, Mata Hari Shaking fist, angry Stanwood said, "That was all rot! . . . Mata and I were just good friends, that's all."

Later, in better humour, Uncle Dan entertained guests, told anecdotes of his career. Famous story of how he could have prevented the World-War had he been able to send telegrams to warring governments was recounted. Absent-minded Internationalist Stanwood was unable to send telegrams, couldn't remember British address number at Downing Street. Told also for first time was tale of how the Professor, then known as "The Man Behind Twenty Thrones" prophesied the War.

"I was in a cafe near the Quai D'Orsay", related Kingmaker Stanwood to rapt listeners, "toward the close of August." News came that the Austrians had captured Belgrade, the Cossacks were in Galicia, German troops were attacking Liege, and the British Expeditionary Force had landed. Turning to my companions, I said, "Gentlemen, this means War! The rest, of course, is History."

Sternfaced crusader Wells, Bowdoin baseball coach, placed on his players lockers this statement. "Teamwork is the working together of all that counts." Scholars puzzled over this cryptic message, finally agreed it was noble sentiment, poor phraseology. Said nettled Coach Wells, "I hate quibblers . . . My boys know what I mean."

o-o-o-o-o

Announced Chemistry Professors Cram and Meserve startling news theory. "We have found," declared savants, "that sterility is hereditary!" Several days elapsing before their hoax was discovered, Jokers Cram, Meserve, kept quiet, conducted classes, laughed up each other's sleeves.

Lynn Wells, "the boy-scout from the cape," twitted by friends anast Bowdoin's record in Hockey and Baseball, caustically commented, "No criticisms, boys, no criticisms, you all know I have the best shovelling squad in New England."

Students in H.R. "Herb" Brown's freshman England classes flunked finals 100%, but subsequently proved in extra-curricular activity on Mill Street, Brunswick, that they were by no means ignorant of the fine points of "comparative seduction".

"Tommy the Greek Means, leading Bowdoin dramatist, sued last week for plagiarism by proprietors of the "Old Howard", Boston-Bowdoin burlesque hangout. Questioned by the press, Means stated, "What t'hell! I seen all the Howard shows and they ain't none of 'em like mine."

Jawn J. Magee, Bowdoin track mentor, last week petitioned local authorities to keep Brunswick (B—s) off the streets while his Championship track squad was practicing. Magee alleged Bowdoin runners, clad only in scanties, found temptation for speedy work too strong.

In answer to charges made by Bowdoin Christian Association to the effect that they hadn't attended Chapel for the last ten years, answered Professors Morrill, Cobb, in chorus, "That's right and what of it?" When interviewed, Professors Morrill and Cobb were found pitching pennies, cane swinging, munching tobacco, recommending great numbers for probation.

In answer to Literary Digest Questionnaire, regarding possible legalization of manufacture of beer, Professor Stanley B. Smith and Professor Thomas Means, Bowdoin classicists replied, "We highly approve of this measure." "However," continued Professor Smith, "until the making of beer in this country is legal, you may be sure then and then only, will we make it."

o-o-o-o-o

"Whither are we drifting?" sighed eminent Six Day Bicycle Racer Little, snugly enclosed in the remoteness of the top floor of Bowdoin's Science building, where retired into an indefinite period of retrenchment, he is fed by means of an ingeniously constructed dumbwaiter. Asked for his ideas on Sex, replied Peddler Little, "I'm for it."

o-o-o-o-o

Cocking a quizzical eye on Reuben's kerness, dilettante Andrews, in expectant hush, finally broke silence "The Caress", opined Bowdoin's Iron Man of Art, "has reached an advanced stage in the background." Newshawks swooned in ecstasy. As Henry (Winchell) Johnson personally conducted relief work, Professor Henry (Arty) Andrews was born triumphantly from the class room on shoulders of cheering students. Remarkable Old Grammarian later to perispring reporter, "How about them minutiae, now, eh, kid?"

Professor adjourns, students riot.

To speak to a segregated member of his faculty, President K. C. M. Sills had to bend down, talk through a key hole. A curious student, investigating what seemed to be a daylight Peeping Tom, found out what was to Bowdoin College startling news. Professor Manton Copeland, quarantined, was to give the first adjourn in 20 years.

On Bowdoin's campus, the rumor flew from mouth to mouth, from dorm to dorm. Jeered at by scoffers, story-spreader Ed Merrill was not believed, gave up, almost doubted himself. At one-thirty a surly, growling group gathered outside Science Building doors, no one went in. Time went on, hopes rose, no Professor appeared. At one-thirty late students: Dafy Means, Christy Moustakis appeared. "Scabs—you can't go in!" cried the crowd. "We gotta go in," chorused Means, Moustakis, "we wouldn't miss this lecture for anything." In the ensuing scuffle, Students Means, Moustakis were thrown to ground, severely kicked and beaten, finally rescued, taken to sanctuary of Art Building.

Meanwhile the rappy crowd went wild, built bonfires, danced the can-can, sang the Internationale finally surged toward Professor's home. There they were met by the College President, listened to his impassioned oration from his porch, as follows: "Mumble umble . . . to announce large gift to College . . . mumble mumble . . . thousands of dollars . . . known as Zetters . . . Even this failed to daunt students.

Suddenly a window was thrown up, the angry visage of Professor Copeland himself appeared. Even the boldest shrank back before his glaring eye, piercing glance. Grimly smiling, he surveyed the dismayed mob, finally bawled out in stentorian tones "Go back to the lab . . . work on the Rumplesitzakin . . . attendance will be taken!" In a few minutes the crowd was a stream of fleeing students, Bowdoin's students riot was quelled.

For 20 years Professor Manton Copeland has had an unbroken record of no adjourns. Always present on the appointed minute, he holds class no matter how many are present, once lectured the full hour to an empty room. As GRIME goes to press, awaiting teachers at nightfall can see the old Professor moodily gazing toward the dark windows of the Science Building, pondering on a sudden topsy-turvy world, perhaps dreaming of the old days of the spotless record, of the unblemished escutcheon, when he was toasted by students as The Iron Man of Science, Old Man Zoology himself.

Twain Hells, Springfield caruso, believes in calisthenics for all ills, often places pertinent little slips of paper bearing terse ungrammatical messages into his players' lockers, yells with amazing noise at athletes who pay not the least attention. Last week Little Napoleon was still trying to extricate himself from bucket of soup with ball team composed chiefly of freshmen amassing grand all-time total of errors.

SPORTS

MAHATMA-GHEE

Wearing the emerald-green loin-cloth of the Mahatma-Ghee caste, a dark horse swept all opposition before him in the recent all-Hyderabad track meet. This was Mi Watatool of the Derkleinerbonapartbad University, Derkleinerbonapartbad, India. When the well-known small South-Bagdadian coach was interviewed as to his new find, he said, "He ain't never had a track shoe on in his life. Now look at him. I told him he would make a runner if he did what I told him." His form isn't absolutely orthodox-oothodox-oothod, well, it isn't good, anyhow!"

Mi-Watatool prepped at the small school of Mahalakshmi, near Bombay. There his record was merely mediocre. As an athlete he won no particular prominence. His sole accomplishment was in spinning, the popular carry-over sport. In fact we learn from Mahatama-Ghee that if he had no noticed young "Toolie" as his coach affectionately calls him, running after his robe in a high wind and hair not spotted him immediately as a champion, a great track man would have been lost to the world.

The wearers of the emerald green have long been noted for their polish and reserve. As Mahatma-Ghee put it one day when he waxed confidential, "When we visit Shahjahanpur, I want to feel that people looking at us will point and say, 'Them's Derkleinerbonapartbad boys.'"

Mahatma-Ghee is noted for his throwers. The present holder of the world's record in the tauros-throw will be a sub-freshman next year, if he is still eligible by his senior year, he should be setting marks every meet.

Asked as to the chances in the all-India meet to be held next week end, Mahatma-Ghee remarked cryptically, "Yes and no". Followers of the sport in these sections interpret that as meaning "yes and no", are greatly worked up over the prospects.

AT LEWISTON

"It's a tossup!"

So said Coach Magee, famed Coach of Bowdoin track, on the eve of the state meet at Lewiston last Saturday. Pessimistic always, Magee reckoned his team at worst form, not best.

After qualifying trials Friday, Magee appeared justified. Not one Bowdoin man had qualified first in javelin, discus, hammer throws. "Nuts," said Bowdoin students, seeing baseball team lose to Colby. "Maine has the edge," clamored sports writers.

Bowdoin men looked more impressive in Saturday morning trials when two qualified in quarter mile, four in high hurdles, two in furlong, three in low hurdles, two in broad jump and four in shot put, totaling 17 men. Maine, Bates and Colby were under ten.

State records started to go in first events. Webb and Hathaway, Maine men, flipped their poles from the box as they vaulted, soared 12 ft., 2 1/2 inches to new mark. Jimmy Crowley, courageous Polar Bear frosh, tied for second with Clinton Dill, Bates. Then two more Gageemen, McLaughlin & Skillings, qualified in hundred yard dash.

First of finals to be run off was mile run. Jackson, Maine, took lead on first lap, but Bates' Jellison soon scampered to front. Usher and Sewall, White bearers, stuck close and were within first four as final rush started. Usher caught Jellison, led him again on last turn, finished six yards behind in second place. Booth, Maine, was third. Time: 4 min. 27 sec.

Second record to go was quarter mile mark. Adams, Bates, winning in 49.4 sec. Hall, Bates, Hickok, Bowdoin & Wendell, Maine, followed in that order, almost tying.

First indication that scores were leaning Bowdoin way came in hundred, when Ray McLaughlin, arms flailing wildly, face contorted in grimace, rushed home to beat Knox, Bates — Floring, Maine, tribute to Magee strategy. Time: 10 sec.

Aiming for state record, Delma Galbraith, Bowdoin, fell four feet short, but won hammer throw at 164 feet, 11 ins. Perkins, Colby was second, ten feet behind. Gonzals, Maine, third. Meanwhile, Niblock & Larsen, Bowdoin, had placed first & third in shot put, with Alley, Maine, between, at 45 feet, 11 1/8 ins., and Maine had swept three places in discus throw. Score: Bowdoin 20, Maine 15.

Charges that judges, timers, officials were trying to throw meet Colby's way were investigated, but proved groundless when Bowdoin swept first & second in high hurdles. Stanwood won by four yards, Allen next. Goddard, Maine, was third. Time: 15.6 sec. Starter McGrath was reported as pouting, murmuring, "If there had been a Colby man in there, I could set the rest of them back."

Hurdler Stanwood, coming back from winning hurdles, found that everyone else was out of high jump, missing thrice at six feet. He himself had failed twice. Hurdler Stanwood looked at the height, started his run. Swerving sharply to right, he kicked high and rolled over. Landing in pit, he looked-up at bar. It was still there. Juniper Stanwood rubbed his hands in sand as token of glee, went back hurdling. Tied for second were Adams, Bowdoin, Robinson, Colby, Webb & Sleeper, Maine.

Hanging far back on the first lap, Maineman Shaw went out fast on final turn to win half mile in 1 min., 58.6 sec. Usher, Bowdoin, was second, seven yards back. Christie, Colby, took third. Score: Bowdoin 37, Maine 23.

Tossing the sharply-tipped spear proved easy for Stinchfield, Colby, who managed to get by without hitting anyone, won easily at 186 ft., 17 ins., Fickett, Maine, Larry, Bates, took second & third.

One try sufficed to let McLaughlin win broad jump for Bowdoin at 21 ft., 9 7/8 ins. Sampson, Bates, 1-4 inch behind, was second, Briggs, Bowdoin, 1-4 inch behind third.

Wearied from many trials, jumps, finals, McLaughlin went into 220 not the favorite. He was last out of his holes, last to 50 yard mark. Then he began to strain, catch his opponents. Versatile runner McLaughlin burst out in front with 40 yards left, won by two yards, tying state record of 21.8 sec. Two Batesmen, Adams & Knox, followed.

Marathon of a track meet, two mile run followed. Whitten, Bates captain, went out in front, was never headed. Bowdoin's Lavender, pressed by Jellison, sprinted so fast he almost caught Whitten, finished five yards behind. Time: 9 min. 55.4 sec.

Last event on the program was 220 yard low hurdles. Bowdoin had placed first & second in this event for three years, was favored to again. Floring, Maine, surprised by getting out in front from first hurdle. He led to last barrier, with McLaughlin at his heels. Hurdler McLaughlin, never beaten in this race, lunged for tape, won by inches. Stanwood was third. Time: 24.8 sec., anew State record.

Recapitulating, official scores announced results:

Bowdoin	67 1/2
Maine	37
Bates	30 1/2
Colby	10

Sages of press box remarked that Johnny Magee had never worked better strategy had never developed a more formidable team. They also recalled that McLaughlin's 20 points were most ever made by one man in meet's history.

Bowdoin students returned home, rang chapel bell so vigorously that Seniors studying for majors, almost wished that they had lost.

MEDICINE

DIRTY DOCTOR

Bowdoin College, rowdy institution of learning, has long flourished in Franco-American Brunswick. Astute observers attribute Bowdoin's continued existence not to the excellence of its highly assorted curriculum, but to its reputation as New England's foremost country club.

Presidents Jay and Gohnson of rival "colleges" Cates and Bolby have often classified Bowdoin and Bowdoin men as wet, rowdy, and lacking in intellectual interest. GRIME, Apr. 1, Nov. 3, Feb. 30). Pres. Vallee of the University of Maine, when questioned concerning the matter, looked up from his milking machine and simply remarked, "I could scream!" (GRIME, Apr. 1).

Known as bawdy Bowdoin's best built-up bestialisms are the Freshman bull-sessions, masquerading under the innocuous name of "Hygiene 1", which are conducted annually by refed Henry L. (Doc) Johnson, in the college latrine, Adams Hall.

Brunswick authorities (William B. Edwards, Billy Edwards, W. B. Edwards, William Edwards, W. Edwards and Chief Edwards) have long been suspicious of "Demi-john" Johnson's classes, have often held conferences concerning college corruption, have alleged "Vines" Johnson was instructing Bowdoin men in the best ways of bagging Brunswick - - -

Last April 1st, having received complaints from several residents of Mill and Cushing streets, Chief Edwards marshalled his forces consisting of "Two-Gun" Barnes and "Arty" Langford, leading spirits of the Brunswick W. C. T. U., and raided Adams "Hall". Breaking open the doors, they found "Common Corruptor" Johnson standing before a blackboard, on which was a pornographic cartoon. It is alleged that Johnson was pointing out the highspots of this at the time of the raid. He was surrounded by slobbering sensualists, eagerly taking down his remarks. Wild confusion ensued. Suddenly surprised students stood staring. "Scram youse," hissed Johnson, glaring defiantly with the courage of a cornered rat at the minions of the law.

"Cheese it, the bulls," yelled student J. G. ("Sax-appeal") Ham, suiting the action to the word by ducking out of the door, followed by the entire class.

The forces of the law followed in hot pursuit, but entirely lost the students in the maze of corridors, and eventually wound up in H. W. (Hoiby") Hartman's office, smoking Hoiby's Old Moulds.

Making their way back to the den of vice, they instituted a vigilant search and soon found Johnson cowering in one of the desk drawers. He made no resistance and was quickly incarcerated in the local calaboose, awaiting trial.

When questioned by a GRIME reporter, Johnson stated that he was going to sue Franco-American Brunwick for constructing the pavements too close to the seat of the stylish Johnson trousers.

Pres. K. C. M. (Casey) Sills, employer of alleged pornographer Johnson, when questioned by the press, said "The more thoughtful alumni think differently," leaving the inference in the minds of all that the alumni do think.

EDUCATION

"EVERYBODY'S MASTER"

Last week staid, stodgy old Bohunk College (est. 1794) received a shock. Up until last week when old Bohunk rec'd the shock, no member of the faculty had broke into print for panning anything publicly. But GRIME endeavors to give the facts, terse, from-the-good-ole-shoulder, without fear or prejudice, swelpus) last week rabid, radical Professor Willnot B. Mitchell pulled this crack. (Ed. Note: see GRIMES'S terse style here).

"I don't think that any country which is supposed to be free, ought to prohibit beer, etc., just on account of a law which makes itself everybody's master."

Beerman Mitchell advocates free beer and pretzels for students between classes, beer for the track team, beer for you and you and youse. Another ardent Beerman, Professor Murs'll Surley Scram seconded his bro. prof's statement with one which read very much the same. (In fact, it was exactly the same. Ed. Note).

"I don't think that any country which is, etc. (GRIME deletes Beerman Scram's statement because it is essentially the same as Beerman Mitchell's. GRIME is brief, to-the-point no matter what.)

SCIENCE

LABORATORY TO VAUDE

Professor Petit of the Bowdoin Physics department announces his retirement from teaching for more interesting and remunerative occupation. Beginning in June, Prof. Petit will go on RKO circuit, doing a combination turn, including exhibition of only gefser in captivif captured at great risk and expense at the Yellowstone, chalk-smoking, trap-shooting, trick cycling, and comic dialogue. In the fall the professor will proceed to Hollywood to take charge of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new superpicture, "Metropolis II".

Prof. Petit is well known to the public for his work in arranging the lightning effects in Frankenstein, the crocodiles in Tarzan, and the astounding scenes of Metropolis. Noted for his chalk consumption, he is said to be the only man in the country to publicly substitute Scott Tissue for the conventional handkerchief.

MARTYR TO SCIENCE

Another gap appears in the ranks of seekers after scientific truth with the passing of Dr. Ben Israel "Drom-edary" Hawkshaw, who succumbed to illness brought on by long-continued overwork. Until very shortly before the end, the Doctor continued his brilliant lectures in the classroom, and did not hasten from the lecture platform to the laboratory, refusing to even consider a temporary respite from the nerve-racking grind of intensive application to research. Death eventually overtook him at his workbench. His monument will be flanked by two stone camels, and will bear the inscription: "De mortuis nihil nisi bonum. Dr. Ben Israel Hawkshaw, died Sept. 25, 1914."

The funeral was attended by the entire staff of the Wm. E. Burns Detective Agency and a delegation from the Amalgamated Fruit Growers Association.

TAIL-TICKLER

Tickling earthworms tails is not an occupation which appeals to the average person. Nevertheless, Professor Nereis "Freecut" Dopey finds it fascinating. He claims to learn much about the nervous system and reflex actions of the subject by tickling their tails and observing the results. Starting out in a crude way using the index finger, he is now investigating the emotional and physiological results of the latest varieties of ticklers. The differing responses of male and female worms are of enthralling interest to the scientist. Some huskier male worms have been known to curse audibly upon being tickled, while the usual female response to the practiced touch of the prof is to close the eyes and sigh, "Kiss me, dear!"

THE PRESS

GOTTA HAVA TABLERD

Yesterday President Kenneth C. M. Stills, of Bohunk College, lifted his feet onto his mahogany desk and spat at his mahogany cuspidor. Missing, Mr. Stills frowned and spat again mightily. "Hot dam," said the Bohunk prexy, joyously as the last one found its mark. But we wander, and GRIME'S (if anything) terse, curse, and to the pernt.

Called in his undergrad eds, Mr. Stills. Or, if you prefer, Mr. Stills called in his undergrad eds. (The first is the terse, GRIME style). "We gotta hava tablerd," jittered the Bohunk chief.

Former Edtormen Stewall kicked at a mahogany bolster pillow in sheer embarrassment. "But we hava tablerd," he said. Followed a moment's silence, during which the prexy's mahogany clock could have been (we say could have been, because there really wasn't any clock. Bohunk College uses hour glasses).

"Wherza tablerd?" (GRIME endeavors to give accuracy in verbatim reports. If we're wrong, sue us. What the devil do we care. Sue us twenty-five times! A hunner! We haven't any dough anyhow. Ed. Note.)

"Say, Stillsy Willysy, haven't you ever heard of the dam Orient?" The Bohunk Prexy stifled a yawn. "Oh, that?" And he repeats the facts as near as possible; or failing that, repeats what it thinks ought to be the facts as near as possible) paused. (We'll bet you paused, too.)

"That dam Orient isn't radical enough. Blow the college all to h—n" Bust things wide o—n" Larrup the f—y, the S—t C—l", and any other d—n" thing you lay your hands on. We gotta hava tablerd and the damorient just wun't do!"

Next day the Bohunk damOrient came out with an editorial policy advocating the abolishment of editorial policies, the right of everyone over twelve to vote, free beer, and down with everything. With this platform to start on, the damOrient hopes to start things moving. Said Editor Stewall: "Poisonally, I think there's nuttin like a good, hot-water bath daily. The hott-r the water the better. Alla time in hot water!"

HAMMERING HEDONIST

Ieonoclastic, belligerent, Publisher Arthur Chaw Lillygan was 'vroun (GRIME advocates simple spelling whenever possible. In places it is somewhat simple, but that is neither here nor there. Ed. Note) into Brunswick's newly equipped, two-cylinder hosegrow, for using abusive terms describing certain passages in the French Classics.

Publisher Lillygan whose yellow-sheet "Brave en paroles" denounces all that is decent in certain authors, while advocating non-expurgation, pleaded guilty to the use of the word "D—n" in a recent vitriolic attack on censorship in the American Press. "But I'll fight till the end," cried Publisher Lillygan, "to prove that only unpurgated French translations and texts should be used in colleges. Shall we let our young (or your young) grow up wondering what happened during those asterisks? Or during that blank space? Geez no!"

—GRIME, which is always terse, short in words and wind, deletes profanity whenever possible. However, for those who really are interested, the word here was "Damn".

NOMADS SOUTHERN TRIP

Unparallel to those teams vying for records in fumbles, foul hits, innings-flunked", the Nomadst journeyed to South Poland, Me. in an effort to find opposition, relieve mental tension of undefeated champions. It is no great wonder that the Nomads "landed" in South Poland, a town famous for its good-looking caddy boys and aperient spring water, for their roaming nature has led them far into realms other than of their immediate scope. They traveled up and down the coast of Chelsea, cleaned up the slums of South Boston, crossed Roxbury Crossing, finally, enticed by the overture of a demijohn of Poland water to each man, arrived at South Poland to play against the Sunbeams, caddy team.

Thought Old Man Concensus: "Nomads' is like Diogenes'—fruitless."

Though Optimistic Manager Iserve: "It would be swell for me and my players to face a team that would furnish a real tussle and would lose by the narrow margin of ten runs." Retired Sunbeam Manager-Caddy No. 1: "We'll lik the invincibles by hook or crook or mashie."

THE GAME

At the start the clash promised to be another old-fashioned triumph for the Nomads' clean slate. With the Sunbeams up first (Being extraordinary visitors, the Nomads were granted "last bats."), Tomahawk Riddley baffled the lads with his customary lightning-speed ball. Pitcher Riddley was working with clock-like steadiness and a good team behind steadiness. Somehow in the rush it was found the Sunbeams had chailed up a run.

The umpire was ready, his stomach protected, the game on, everything set save G. Johnson who was missing. Nimble-Fingered Johnson, short stop, was delaying the diamond festivities at Ricker Field, of the Nomads, and the Sunbeams. Officials and players looked under the plate, behind the bags, between the bats, at length found Starlet Johnson dozing on nearby bunker. To lead off for the Nomads, Grabbit Johnson, now completely rested astonished excited bystanders by getting hit on the left ear. After the Grabbit had limped to first base, Duckit Brown—"seduction play" fame—drew a pass, coyly skimmed the base path to steal second in a double steal act. The Grabbit, however, slipped in his criminal tactics so that the play ended with two outs. A pass to Banana Smith set the stage for Tomasino Means, who drove the ball 225 yards for a triple and the course record. Next Man Abrason followed with a healthy swing that connected with South Poland air. He swung three times then walked to first, to pick his mitt and prepare for the first half of the second. Score: 2-1.

The game was close for one inning—the first. Thereafter, the Nomads' complexion was burnt by the sparkling play of the Sunbeams. Riddley grew rattled, began handing out passes like a drunken theatre manager. Then the cheery challeers aided by errors and lax pitching, forged ahead. Most of the Gaddy ladies hit hard and luckily to make things for the victims. Caddy No. 5 hit to First Baseman Abrason, who was enshrouded in the smoke of his pipe. Jeem did not see ball, kept on smoking. When the Little Three of the infield, Grabbit, Duckit, and Keepit failed to function oily well, Manager Iserve bit his mustache, sent in a new line composed of Istep Little, Chase Stanley, Hack Cobb. The Strategy was futile, the Sunbeams took to the field only after nine of them had blazed across the soiled platter.

Hazy was the third and last frame. Recalled, however, are a few facts: replacement of Pitcher Riddley by Ernie Longreach, who donned his Grabbit ineffectively; ensuing replacement by almost all Nomadmen, each yanked because he could seldom find plate or if he did locate it the caddies ate rapaciously out of it. Errors by Means, Gills, Istep Little, Chase Stanley, Hack Cobb, Banana Smith, Jeem Abrason, Flipit, Grabbit, Duckit, Keepit (Little Three restored to position for relief-work, team being exhausted); countless Sunbeaming faces crossing home plate.

LIST

The name of famed Dean Nixix of Bodunk College recently appeared on Gorilla Gerry Wildway's noted blacklist in Hup-(pardon!)-bert Hall. Questioned, Dean Nixix said. "Have you read my new book?"

FUNNYMAN

Funnyman Stanley ("I'm Big") Low, campus comic, enjoys throwing water on innocent pedestrians. Leaning far out windows, funnyman Low dropped torments on unsuspecting Seniors. Overzealous, water-heavy Low threw himself out along with pail, escaped with flat feet.

PRESERVER

Major General R. B. Diller, swimming tycoon, dove off Curtis pool springboard last week. In midair, tycoon Diller discovered water was missing. Undismayed, he remembered possession of life preserve, floated ashore unscathed.

ALOYSIUS

Town board last week approved new scheme of saving money. Fir whistle was scrapped, Chief William Aloysius Tedwards made to stand on station roof, call out numbers in loud voice. Town folk commented: "At least he can persuade."

IVY

Colleges authorities last week announced decision to call off Ivy day house parties, disband activities and dance gym dance, $20,000 worth of liquor was discovered, confiscated in Harpswell.

Funnyman Walter

He drank a gallon (look at him)

Last week Walter Johnson seized his bronze-limbed liniment announcing athletes romp in victorious at The Maine State Meet drank a gallon of Absorbine Jr., shook his head, walked to haberdashery, bought full evening dress and accessories, left for New York. When next seen was leading the band at the Vassar prom. Said funnyman Walter, "Have you heard the one about the Rabbi?"

RELIGION

HE PUT HIS ARMS

Recently appointed Prayermaster to Bohunk College (by the Androscoggin River near Bath, Me.) is former Dean Paul Nixonthat. Coming as a distinct shock to students and faculty alike is this promotion of the erstwhile Dean-of-what-men-there-are at Bohunk.

Reason for this promotion, says Prexyman Stills of the little Me. institution (est. 1794 a.d.), was that in time trials held recently, Prayerman Nixonthat made the best, that is fastest, time of the whole prayer squad. Students who had there dought on ex-Prayerman Milchell (holder of endurance record for prayer up until advent of Prayerman Slashy, whose time of 10:03.4 will stand for some time, according to experts) were disappointed when he bushed out completely.

Questioned on his success, Prayerman Nixonthat said somewhat as follows: "According to several letters I have rec'd from alumni, statistics which cannot lie—much!—I find that nine-tenths out of every graduating class favor what we hear can scarcely condone as being a propos of the sina qua non." (All of which proves we're all wrong. Ed. Note).

"GRIME quotes from memory, so how the hell can we tell if we're accurate. Sue us.

ANIMALS

PET

Roaming about the campus of Bohunk College recently was seen strange, Afric-looking animal. Students wondered, professors queried. Last week faculty-investigators revealed that queer quadruped was property of Professor S. Barney Smith, Burns-boosting, Smith-boosting satellite of the Latin department.

Explaining presence of this phenomenon, Professor Smith stated: "In my recent gardening experience at my well-known farm, I came across this animal bounding about the regions of northern Wisconsin. Since it was the strangest creation I had seen since the days of George III, I ambushed it and managed to capture it, after treading it. Extremely docile, it was quickly trained and I taught it tricks. I named it Nana after the Latin noun, nina, because I caught it in September. I can confidently say that there is no other dog (I call it 'dog' for want of a better name) like in the United States, if not in the world."

Books about the beast have been gathered by Brunswick journalists. It understands only Latin, although experts are convinced it knows a few words of Greek; it is sexless, although animosity to male dogs has caused Professor Smith to label it female; it shows excessive disinterest in world happenings, but was once seen climbing famed Thorndike

Oak. Its interest in Professor Smith is attributed to the fact that they both walk alike, wear the same size shoes.

BLOOD FEUD IF G

Fraternities are noted for having animals prowl about the house. Often these animals have feuds, put campus in uproar, students in turmoil. Last week such a feud started among the dogs of Bohunk college, with results approaching disaster.

It was Fritz, Zeta Psi collie-dachund-airdale, whose actions inaugurated the battles, for his strict "non-chapel attendance" doctrine divided the campus dogs into two conflicting, embroiling, separated camps.

"Refuse to attend chapel!" urged Fritz, "Make the students supply their own fun. Why should they get paid to remove us, the only consistent chapel-goers on campus?"

Immediately the dogs divided on the question. Graf, brought up in the law-abiding atmosphere of the Beta house, demanded that chapel attendance continue. "Who are we to go against the wishes of God and man?" declared Graf. "As long as chapel is compulsory, let us attend!"

Rip, Psi U mainstay, remained loyal to his fraternity teachings. "Never go to chapel!" ranted he. "Go on pro if we must, but Chapel—never." Jerry of the D. U. house side with sturdily, commensense Graf, making contestants of equal strength.

First among the pitched battles raged when Rip and Graf clashed on the Psi U lawn. Although not a word was spoken, both contestants fought vigorously, harshly. Neither emerged safe & sound, both suffering minor injuries. Jan, representing Non-Fraternity, refereed.

Still the battle rages. Neither side has shown any amount of capitulation & each believes firmly, vigorously in its doctrine. Until authorities step in with some definite ruling, fighting will continue to rampage on Bohunk campus.

FLEA'S EYE VIEW OF AN INEBRIATE—

Oscar Blotz—Scot-tissue Inc.—$2.50
(All right—make us an offer.)

One of life's gems. A stark realistic, groggy biography, very Daltonish. Local boy makes good. By means of a simple straight-forward, you-can't fool-some-of-the-people-some-of-t-the time style, author Blotz permeates the book with a bucolic, but Frank Meriwillean atmosphere. Mr. Fletcher (Babies cry for him) Castoria is born, (there is authentic evidence introduced for proof of this fact) at East Firehose in the year of the Charlestown Flood. He attends the Firehose High School, and while there is on the scrub team—at McGinty's Saloon. Then he attends College, Jerk Junction Sub-Normal Institution is the one afflicted, where he extinguishes himself after four years of continual effort to do what he can around Campus. He succeeds in "doing" nearly everybody. He makes himself famous, among other accomplishments by the oft chortled rendition of that famous old song, "She used to wash her feet in the pot she boiled the cabbage in". He is the most "natural" athlete ever to attend that institution. In fact, so successful is he, that he amasses an amazing quantity of clothes, shoes, ties, and hardware, in fact, anything and everything of a movable description except three cases of Old Tom belonging to the President. He goes out for everything, but one year the cops get him, and he "goes up" for a stretch in Ho Hum. He is the Intercollegiate Doggit (Vulgar for lay around, loaf, chew the Bologna.) Champion 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

His next appearance occurs when after graduation he proceeds for a degree of Master of Second Story Artistry. Failing at this but spurred by the indomitable spirit of Rugged Individualism and Fre Private Enterprise, he next continues his success by becoming assistant Axe Sharpener in a Split Pea Factory. From then on he rises rapidly—truth is, he is unable to assume a sitting position, he gets risen so much. Further, his accomplishments read like a book (We don't know which one to pick out, but it looks like the latest edition of "Diamond Drip"). He then becomes a member of the Committee to inspect and recondition the Lithuanian Sardine Industry. (See GRIME Vol. 4 Jul. '2p). In 1919 we find him on the Commission or Arbitration for the Disposal of The Saugus Navy. From 1920-22 the Subway Guard Business claims its own, as he follows the footsteps of his Uncle, Osmosis Dumb. (But not quite) It is in 1923 that he begins his real success, when he commences his Presidency of the Vo-Ho Corporation (Pronounced masally) Corporation. (Pronounced masally) This company produces nature's own remedy, drawn from the sap of the Gazoop a semi-tropical Marsupial inhabiting the Poo-Poo Isles.

1924 is the year that Firehoses' pride and glory received his P. Ph. D. (Doctor of Parlor Philosophy) from the University of East Sackett, —excellent description of Pres. Zilch conferring the Silver Plated Shovel. In 1925, Jerk Junction Subnormal Institution announces that after exhaustive complication, Sir Fletcher Castoria has won permanently the Intercollegiate Pick-pocket Cup, having successfully picked all comers for the Championship in the years of his career 2, 3, 4, 5.

In 1928 he is elected to the Presidency of The Wedgo Corporation, which Corp. is the one, only, sole outstanding and magnificent manufacturer and purveyor of that delactable and facily digestible delicacy, The Chocolate Covered Meat Ball, Famous Slogans "Two a day dissolved in a quick beer will make them gurgle when you miss the eight ball." "We are making this country Wedgo conscious".

The fall of 1930 sees Firehoses' gift to various parts of the Universe publish a volume of poetry. Most typical bits, "There were three men in the boat and the oars began to leak, and vice-versa." and "Discourse upon The Thundermug Plutocrats of 4th Ave."

During this time of his affluence he has made several contributions to the beautification of East Firehose, among them Steam Heated Sidewalks, Bathrooms with Fur Lined Bathtubs, non-collapsible eggshells, and 9 day hangers.

The story ends as Sir Fletch (intimate term) escapes for his third time from the local Hoosegow (See GRIME Vol. 8 Feb. 1931 Efficiency of rural minions of the law—William Edwards) where he is serving concurrent sentences for larceny, extortion, arson, and doing a folk dance with Walter Johnson.

Lousy Tripe

"Catalogue of Bohunk College", price $0.1 smackers, 8vo.

Scarcely making a ripple on the surface of the literary world, Bohunk College's latest deprecation on the fair name of writing appeared. Critics have scalded it with vitriolic abuse ever since (swelpus, Cried Artemus Glook of the Loyston Evening Journal: "Lousy!" Similar comments, ranging from "Putrid!" (which is why Boston showed its fangs by putting its foot down on the apple of the eye of Maine's oldest institution,swelpus.) Where were we?

For example, GRIME quotes "from a passage of poetry, supposedly of rare beauty, but really pretty lousy, if you speak our langwtich: (from poem entitled "Vertebrate Embryology")

" . . . treating of the reproductive cells
Maturation, fertilization
Cleavage and formation;
Series of preparations
Illustrating the early development
Of the chick and the pig
Is made
And studied."

Now you'll agree that blank verse or no blank verse (Carl Sandburg or no Carl Sandburg) this junk is, well, to employ GRIME'S customary brevity and curseness, driven. Even Rimester Herby Heartmoon couldn't love that sort of tripe; and even Walrus could do better. Even we could do better, lord knows.

Various inaccuracies crop up here and there: On p. 101 we read "No student will be dismissed from college on request unless he shall have paid all his college bills." Now what d'you suppose they meant by all that. Simply "No tiecke on shirtee."

And in the immortal words of one of our literary contemporaries and speakers, "Nobody can get away with that, no matter whom they are."

GRIME thinks the lousy books speaks for itself. On the other hand, when mail order houses start cutting down on their catalogue output, you never can tell . . .

"—By permission, we don't think. (GRIME, April 1, 1902).

Ivy Planting Begun in '66; House Parties Initiated in 1911 by Psi U

The ceremony of Ivy Day, perhaps the most hallowed of Bowdoin customs, is also one of the most recent...

The first Ivy Day was a far cry from the present ones, with no house parties, no Seniors' last chapel, no orchestra, and several semi-humorous offices that have since fallen into the discard...

October 26, 1865, marked the first Ivy Day, when the Juniors celebrated with an address, poem, and ode...

Ivy Discontinued in '70's For almost a decade after that, Ivy Day fell into partial discard...

The ORIENT favors and urges serious consideration of the following: a new dormitory, a new classroom building, a covered hockey rink, a better road through the campus, closer faculty scrutiny of the finances of publications, separation of the Bowdoin Almanac from the Bowdoin Publishing Company; student representation on the Student Committee; a longer reading period, closer contacts through published dockets and student referenda between Student Council and undergraduates; reorganization of requirements for degrees.

Once again it becomes our privilege to welcome guests to a Bowdoin houseparty - to Ivy, the climax of the spring program. And so we extend to you the warmest greetings, and hope that you may get full measure of enjoyment from the activities of these three days.

For over half a century now, Bowdoin has been observing her Ivy Day with traditional ceremonies, symbolic and fraught with meaning. But in these later years it seems that possibly the original significance of the day is being lost, buried beneath the rush and importance of a fast-moving houseparty.

Intimate Cooperation Recently an intense antagonism between alumni and the students of the College has been noticed. Heated words have passed back and forth, sometimes concerning inconsequential matters.

To the Track Team Congratulations to the Bowdoin track team on the completion of a highly successful season. The conclusive victory at the State Meet and the commendable showing in the N.E.A.A.U. games bring to a close a schedule better fulfilled than that of any major sport in recent years.

Communication Editor's note: An anxious and insignificant matter recently sent us this letter, asking for information as to what it all meant. She said she sent her boy to Bowdoin to study and wanted an explanation; so we have printed this letter for what it is worth: deer mom; go do you know what there going to have here a house party a lot of when are going to cum and dance for three days, if that they were going to be held last evening and now there going to have a wiman up for house party, say you know I'd like to go to house party mom. all you have to do is write a lot of schman and ask them to cum to house party, then if one see you go around saying as how your in a tuff fix becuz you have a wiman coming to house party and another one thinks you're having her, say mom do you think lizzie is a wiman yet. I dunno whether she is or not, anyway all the boys all ask me if im going to house party and when I say I dunno they say aw what's the matter with you and I say I'm not, they say I'd like to see you with the mather with you, pretty good boy mom, they can't put anything over on me. I always say nothing what's the matter with you, get mom I'd like to go just the same. the boys was talking for days about what the schman was going to be and then the orient came out - the orient is a funny sheet with four pages that cum out every wednesday with schman, becuz if im going to house party I should think they'd get sare, anyway it cum out and set that there's going to be a beaut band for ivy, ivy's what they call the whole business becuz all the prezidents are a piece of ivy by the chapel and they think its going to grow, the band is going to be duke elingtan and his cotun club orchetstry, gees mom and they colored fellow didnt know any colored fellow ever was a duke did you, say mom do you think lizzie would want to cum, she'll stay in the frat house becuz she can't do no body ever sleeps anyway so that doesnt make any difference. hoping you say yes with luv jeremiah.

(Continued from page 1) concluded, would carry out the two objects intended, responsibility should be put on industry, which is where it belongs, and workers should be carried over in times of depression.

Finch, speaking for Colby, replied. He first charged that the proposed system would prove complicated, since each firm employing ten or more men would become an insurance company in itself.

Unemployment insurance on this plan would mount up tremendously, Mr. Finch pointed out, and the sum that would have to be paid out would dwarf the nation's war debt.

DEBATE COUNCIL MEET INSTALL HONORARY FRATERNITY MONDAY

Bowdoin Chapter Pi Kappa Delta is sworn in with solemn rites.

Following the evening debate between Bowdoin and Colby on Monday, the installation of the Maine Beta chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, national forensic fraternity, took place. The inauguration of the Bowdoin chapter was under the direction of Dr. Libby, of the department of speech at Colby, where the Maine Alpha chapter is located.

Five Bowdoin men were initiated at this time, including Professor Ralph de Somer, Childs of the faculty, coach of debating at Bowdoin. The undergraduates who were made members at this time are: Albert W. Tarbell '32, president; Albert S. Davis '33, secretary-treasurer; Lincoln Smith '32, and Stephen R. Deane '34.

At the same time a number of Colby neophytes were initiated, and a tie-breaker election at Bowdoin. The members of the National Council of Pi Kappa Delta. Elections of the debating council were held on Tuesday evening.

Ten From '33, Two From '34 To Be Chosen To Fill Student Council Vacancies

Annual Student Council election will probably be held next week, according to an announcement made by President Lawrence Under of the '33 Council.

Two juniors and ten seniors must be elected to take the place of the outgoing members. Voting will take place in the largest Gymnasium, on Friday, Oct. 15, at the college student body.

The nine graduating Student Councilmen are: President Under, Vice President Charles Steward, Secretary-Treasurer John Fisher, Dana Goffwith, Christopher Gatchell, John May, George Sewall, Marian Storr, Harry Tishkowitz. The tenth member, Lloyd Merrill, is no longer in college. Junior representation, up for re-election, are Gordon Briggs and Raymond McLaughlin.

Sports Reporters Organize at Bates. Maine college sports writers met Friday, May 18, to organize a new intercollegiate news bureau to be known as the Maine College Sports Writers Association.

Each College To Have 3 Members. Three sports writers from each Maine college will represent their school at the Association's meetings. Writers will belong to the organization, however, after their term of office is completed.

At least once each year, at the time of the annual State Track Meet, these delegates will meet. The aim of the association is to foster good will among the four Maine colleges, and to aid sports writers in covering state athletics events.

Bowdoin newsmen who attended the Lewiston convales were Carl G. Olson and John Morris. The former is co-Sports Editor of the Orient.

With the Shelton opened (7 years ago) we began catering to college men and women. Gradually their patronage has increased, and we feel able to announce that more students make the Shelton their New York home than at any club or other hotel. One reason for this is the three recreational features plus a desire to serve on the part of Shelton employees.

Club features (free to guests) are as follows: Billiard pool; complete equipped gymnasium; game rooms for bridge and backgammon; and card tables and refreshment and outside service at reasonable prices.

Polar Bear athletics do not all end their season before June this year; after the Bates Memorial Day game Monday, there is yet another - perhaps two - events which will see Bowdoin participating. Johnny Marjole's quartet of chosen track stars will journey out to the ICAA meet in Los Angeles; and after that, any Olympic prospects lurking among the White cladmen will compete for the Red, White, and Blue. Ed Galbraith is Bowdoin's likeliest offering.

While major sports at Bowdoin, with the main exception of track, have suffered unhelpful defeats this year, the minor sports players have never had such success. Swimming, tennis, and golf are on the uphill road, and would seem. The former awaits, now, for the day when it will be officially recognized as a major sport; students already regard swimming on a par with most present major athletic events.

WAR SHROUDED IVY HOUSE PARTY JOYS IN TROUBLED 1917

Depleted College Carries On Despite Number Fighting in France. When Bowdoin was preparing for its Ivy Day, just fifteen years ago, war was raging overseas, and students were silently packing up to leave for training camps.

After seventy-five men - outstanding athletes and social leaders - departed for Plattsburg on that memorable May 8, 1917, the Orient demanded student opinion. And the answer came back: "It is a time when class or fraternity differences should be forgotten and only Bowdoin thought of. Three hundred men will still be left, and it is to you men that the task of keeping the life at Bowdoin at normal falls, and may the men who go have worthy successors."

So a veil of sadness closed in on Bowdoin that Spring; and a sorely depleted little college set about to make merry and forget the sorrows of war. Half the Junior Class officers were called away for service in 1917; but out of deference to them, it was voted to retain their names on the honor list of Bowdoin leaders, while altruistic men served without the glory of title.

SEWALL IS AWARDED $500 THESIS PRIZE

George Tinney Sewall '32 has just been awarded the five hundred dollar prize for the best collegiate essay in support of the Constitution. This is the Percival Clement Wood award, given to the student of a New England College whose paper best fulfills the requirements.
Judges in this competition, in which nine northern institutions participated, were President Kenneth C. M. Sills, of Bowdoin, and the heads of Wesleyan and Tufts Colleges. Only Juniors and Seniors were eligible to participate in this contest.
Sewall's prize-winning paper was on the topic: "The New States' Rights". The prize for this large contest was established by the will of the late Governor Percival Clement Wood, of Rutland, Vt. Though all essays were entered in the competition under pseudonyms, Sewall's essay was adjudged winner by a unanimous verdict of the judges.
A government major, himself, Sewall was eminently qualified to write this prize-winning thesis. Here at Bowdoin he has a record which indicates a tendency toward economic lines: Sewall was a speaker in the '28 Prize Speaking Contest last winter, delivering as his oration a governmental declamation entitled "Our Outmoded Attitude".
Sewall is an honor student at Bowdoin, having received high honors in his major.

"COMMUNISTS" DEVISE CONVENTION PLANS

"Communist" members of the mock-political convention which is now being conducted at the University of Minnesota, recently outlined their demands in a published party platform. High interest surges as collegiate politicians make ready to launch their final "drive for votes" this June.
Demanded the Communists: first: unemployment and social insurance at the expense of the State and employers. Secondly: opposition to President Hoover's wage-cutting policy. Thirdly: Emergency relief for the poor farmers without restrictions by the government banks; and exemption of rents or debts.
Fourthly: equal rights for the Negroes and self-determination for the black belt. Fifthly: opposition to capitalistic terror, and to all forms of suppression of the political rights of workers. Finally, they were against imperialism war; in favor of defense of the Chinese people; and for recognition of the Soviet Union.

BOWDOIN GRAD WILL HUNT GOLD IN WEST

Penetrating into the wilder sections lying on the border between California and Nevada, Edmund Lippincott, Bowdoin '31, plans to help in the establishing of a gold mine. This is perhaps the most unique occupation yet reported by any member of last year's graduating class.
Mr. Lippincott accompanies Mr. J. Watson Downs, a retired United States Army officer, who, with his wife, prospected this mine early last year. Some days, Mr. Downs reports, they mined as high as $125 worth of bullion a day! The three will leave shortly on their expedition, planning to complete the mining area, and get it into profitable condition.
While at Bowdoin, Mr. Lippincott was president of the Glee Club, active in the underclass football team, and a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.
It appears that Ray McLaughlin and Bill Floring of Maine should put on the biggest "grudge battle" of the State Meet next year. In the two races they have run together each has won the other out by bare inches. Floring, a sophomore, has the brightest of futures ahead of him, with two years of varsity competition left.

Serious Purpose Fundamental to Balanced Life Says Maine Bishop

Citing the notorious kidnappers and fakers now so prominent on our newspaper front pages, as examples of abnormal mentalities and leaders of unbalanced lives, the Right Reverend Benjamin Brewster, Bishop of Maine, delivered a timely address on "The Balanced Life" in Chapel on Sunday, May 22.
"What we may call a by-product of the deplorable crime of child-kidnaping and murder," began Bishop Brewster, "has been the revelation of wide-spread abnormal mentality. This abnormality has been shown in many ways, one of the most prominent of which was the scheme of the supposed intermediary who turned out to be a faker, but whose movements fooled the police, newspapers, and even parents of the lost child."
There now appears the teacher who sought money for information which he claimed to possess. Then people have appeared who assured the public of the safe return of the child, having absolutely no grounds for their statements to that effect. The letters and telegrams received by the parents show many other fantastic reactions to this tragedy.
Tendency Shows Lack of Balance
"This emergence of psychic twists indicates a fundamental lack of balance," continued Bishop Brewster. "What is needed is prompt inquiry in order to promote a staid outlook, and an orderly mental development. There is also needed 'an intensely serious purpose, tempered with humility.' In this age of specialization singleness of aim is needed, but that singleness need not involve narrowness of sympathy or egotism."
In his volume "From a College Window," the late Arthur Benton says, "The dog is the intentest of all animals, and throws himself most eagerly into his pursuit, but he is also the least egotistical, and the most sympathetic of creatures." This passage may not be entirely fitted for the principle in question, but it carries the same idea.
But at any event, continued Bishop Brewster, "if I may venture to give advice to you young men, be as zealous and eager as possible in the pursuit of your special vocation, but all the while strive to keep heart and mind fresh through sympathy with larger and noble interests."
Balance in Self-Culture
In our lives there should be balance in respect to self-culture and self-giving. The speaker said he did not use the word "self-sacrifice" since it usually connotes loss or disappointment, whereas the truth is, that the expansion of aim in activity means a richer and more abundant life, and a stronger hold on reality.
"Hold the balance, then," the Bishop went on. "I rather think that the religious writer is passing a false alternative, who says, 'Everything we can think or say or do is in one or the other of these directions; we are either living for self at the expense of whole, or we are fulfilling the self by serving the whole.'"
Here the fundamental thought is good, but why should we bring in the thought of service, which suggests some constant and planned activity, some put it better, when he said, "It saves a man from vulgar standards; for in the personal life of men, culture dares to criticize success. It shows its disciples that there are larger things in the world than 'getting on', and more worthy things to worship than the great goddess of prosperity."
The Attitude of Mental Hospitality
In another passage, this same Dr. Black says, "The attitude of mental hospitality, which opens the door to large thoughts and receives them as welcome guests, tends to evict the prejudice and narrowness which would otherwise dwell seemingly in the mind. Life needs new vistas to be ever opening up, to save it from atrophy of its best powers."
This ideal of intellectual and artistic self-culture is consistent with devotion of the soul to aims which reach beyond one's self. However pleasure-seeking and unworthy, which is petty, and narrows a man's view of life. This type of culture fits well with altruism.
The balanced life means "the right adjustment of vision and activity." As Marcus Aurelius once said, "Give thyself time to think, and cease to be pleasure-seeking and unworthy. This need be frequently reminded of this. Be Active But Contemplative Also. We must be active and put our best into our work, but we must also take time out for contemplation. Marshall Foch used to spend hours in retirement and prayer, even during his campaigns. The Gospel gives us a higher example of this, when it speaks of Jesus spending whole nights on the mountain alone with his Father.
Such spiritual refreshment as we need comes unbidden, but we must

SOUTH AMERICA IS POLITICALLY SOUND DECLARES MARTINEZ

Fellow in Spanish Says U. S. People Misunderstand Latin Americans

American people are wrong in believing Latin American nations socially and politically unstable, said Ramon Argimiro Martinez, Fellow in Spanish here, in a recent revulatory lecture before the Portland Rotary Club. Mr. Martinez, educated in Chile, author of a psychological work, addressed the Rotarians, warning that the United States must beware high tariff walls against South American countries.
Said the speaker: "The people of the United States have only too often been led to believe that the South American republics are similar among themselves with respect to their social conditions and political ideals. But this is far from being true."
"The Republics of South America follow closely the system of development of the American Republic. Each State of the United States has been called a political and social laboratory. Each State progresses in accordance with its social and political ideals with respect to its peculiar needs. This is even more true of the South American Republics which are not connected by any form of federal alliance."
"For instance, the people of the United States have been inclined to consider that the revolutions of South America were indicative of social and political instability, and have attributed this to the weakness of the Latin American in matters of self-government and self-control. This conception is far from true. The present remarkable technological improvements have suddenly connected the various fragments of the heterogeneous South American nations into a closely bound economic society. It was inevitable that a period of feverish reconstruction should ensue."
"For the English speaking countries this process was an easy one for these technical changes were first instituted in these English speaking countries slowly, as a result, governments were slowly adapted to suit the new environments. That is to say, both forms of government evolved together. This is not true in the case of the South American nations, where growth and adaptation have necessarily been rapid and painful. These countries have therefore experienced the growing pains which the English speaking countries have experienced over a period of 200 years."
"In the case of Chile, the revolution overthrew a five years' period of tyrannical martial law, which had ruined the country."
"In the case of Peru, the revolution began as a military insubordination and was settled by a peaceful election, which resulted in an exchange of civil government for military dictatorship."
"In Argentina the revolution was caused by the inefficiency of the Irigoyen government. Irigoyen, although honest and supported by the esteem of the Argentine people, had reached such an advanced age that he was unable to successfully cope with the economic changes incident and necessary to the development of the country. Irigoyen old as he was, could not be made to realize these reasons against his continuance in office, and after repeated petitions for his retirement, which were not granted, he was removed from office by the same people who had elected him. Thus the whole matter resolved into a change of policy in the part of the people, and can hardly be called a revolution to overthrow a system of government."
"Let us now consider the relations between the United States and South America.
"and perhaps most important at the present time, are the trade relations. Up to the present, all South American countries have been noted for their basic food products and other raw materials, such as rubber, coffee, etc. The southern nations are called the tropical fruit nations, supplying a large part of the world. Chile is famous for its fruits, wines and minerals. In fact, this country controls the market of the world in nitrate, borax and iodine. While copper production ranks Chile second among the copper producing countries of the world. Uruguay, the smallest among the 10 South American Republics, is proportionally the largest stock-raising country in the continent. Argentina is one of the greatest wheat and cattle nations of the world. It is said that an American who wanted to visit the 'wild west' not very long ago, was told to go to the Argentina and he would find it there.
"So, for a long time up to now the United States has been shipping manufactured articles to these countries in return for raw materials. And it is well known that the United States is at present doing alone more business with South America than England, France and Germany together."
"But now some of the countries beyond Panama Canal are becoming industrialized, especially Argentina that is making textiles to the amount of 41 million dollars worth a year, and shoe factories capitalized at 12 million dollars."
"This remarkable adaptation to both industry and agriculture, suggests a give it time, in quiet. During vacations especially, there are golden hours in the stillness of the woods, or listening to rhythm of the sea, or watching the Argentine mountains, 'sometimes,' asks Bishop Brewster, 'out under the open sky, may one not be quiet and alone? For in such moments there is life and food for future years.'"
The remedy for exaggerated egotism is not in quenching the zeal towards our special vocation, but by widening our sympathies so that the aim of highest self-development harmonizes with generous self-giving; and so that contemplation, vision, worship, may strengthen the powers of the soul. "The balanced life," said the Bishop in concluding, "is a disciplined life, but it is a life of true liberty."

Political Lethargy Among American Undergraduates Unlike European Interest

Politically lethargic, American youths were contrasted to intensely active European undergraduates in a speech at Vassar College by Dr. Walter Kotschnig, Executive Secretary of the International Student Service. Desperate unemployment conditions, need for intelligent leaders, and long political tradition were advanced as reasons for overseas student enthusiasm for national affairs.
Balkan countries find illiteracy so widespread that student leaders are constantly called upon to serve in leading political roles. Dr. Kotschnig was optimistic regarding Europe's future; undergraduates will be inspired, through their own intimate acquaintance with others' problems, to serve their country with a positive nationalism that will eventually lead to internationalism.—(N.S.F.A.)

great future to South America. And here is something which offers much opportunity for thought. South American countries have raised or are raising their tariff walls in proportion to the United States. Yet the advantages of free trade between the South American nations are becoming more and more plain for the reasons previously stated. If their internal barriers should be broken down as they have been in the United States, and the external tariff walls maintained in accordance with those of the United States, a very marked change is apt to occur in the trade relations of North and South America.

DO YOU NHALE?

A frank discussion at last on a subject that has long been "taboo"

"LET sleeping dogs lie!" So said the cigarette trade when first we raised the subject of inhaling. But dodging an important issue is not Lucky Strike's policy!

Do you inhale? That question is vitally important... for every smoker inhales—knowingly or unknowingly. Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette! And the delicate membranes of your throat demand that your smoke be pure, clean—free of certain impurities!

No wonder Lucky Strike dares to raise this vital question! For Luckies bring you the protection you want... because Luckies' famous purifying process removes certain impurities concealed in every tobacco leaf. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

So, whether you inhale knowingly or unknowingly, safeguard those delicate membranes!

"It's toasted"

Yes. The word "toasted" is the key to the difference between Lucky Strike and other brands.

Highlights of Pres. Sills' Baccalaureate Address

We people of Anglo Saxon descent have always prided ourselves on our love of liberty. Yet we forget that liberty not only must constantly be defended, but in the very nature of things the concept of liberty must from time to time be restated.

Christianity is thus the great religion of freedom. Again and again we hear its leaders declare that man's spirit is and must be free.

Commencement
There is a certain gravity about occasions such as these which exists in good times and bad times alike. Here the future looms up murky in the present, and the present must be relinquished with regret. The senior for once realizes that he must abandon the security of a circumferenced existence and embark upon one which is chartless and fardung. It is indeed apparent that all of us take this occasion with more than ordinary seriousness and that we become ponderous and eloquent in the expression of our thoughts.

Today especially the whole world assumes an extremely tragic outlook towards all matters and we have come to think with an attitude which seems to imply impending tragedy. Such a view of life might well be contrasted with the buoyant optimism of but four brief years ago. Then nothing but the best was in store for the future. There was never to be any summit to the heights of prosperity. The denouement came, however, and the valley has been found extremely deep.

To seniors going forth into the world the seriousness of the present grows in intensity with every passing day. There is nothing but uncertainty for those who must go forth in the working world to find employment. There is nothing but discouragement for those who would be easily discouraged. There is, however, only one worthy resolve which the senior should make for the future. He will do well to avoid an attitude of morose seriousness for one of dynamic and intelligent criticism of the why and wherefore of the present.

Why Be A Liberal?

George T. Sewall
Last year Mr. Randolph Churchill spoke here at Bowdoin on the question "Can Youth be Conservative?" He sought to prove that youth could. To my mind this is approaching the matter from the wrong angle. The question I would ask is this: "Should Youth be Conservative?" One probably could not answer Mr. Churchill categorically either in the negative or the affirmative. The response to either of these questions depends largely upon one's own personal opinion. My own impression is the youth can but should not be conservative. A good deal of has been said in the "liberal" and "radical". To many people—even educated people—a man is either a sober, steady-going conservative or he is a red, bomb-throwing radical. They forget the in-between stages and gradations of thought and opinion. The word conservatism to many of them is anathema. I do not criticize or condemn these people. Their views and doubts are honest enough, but often arise as they do out of ignorance or through the influence of a narrow-minded personal bias. It is not my purpose here to preach socialism, communism, or any of the other politico-economic panaceas that are being offered us in such overwhelming numbers today. I wish to discuss briefly the need for liberalism as a disposition in men—as that attitude of mind which enables them to search deeply, weigh carefully, and choose wisely these policies which they unthinkingly believe will be the best in the long run, not alone for them, but for society. In my conception every change in the social order must necessarily liberate us in every static condition conservative. The facts of the case involved must be stated before definite liberal action can be taken. There is no action that is not in every case, such a liberal course will attempt to reach the most satisfactory and permanent solution, in recognition of these facts. The question "Why be a Liberal?" is in many ways a hard one to answer. What does it get a man? Why is easier to get a man? Why is a God-in-his-heaven-all-right-with-the-world epiphany and let things drift along? The world always gets along some way or another and it probably will be changed much by what I do or think. Why should I worry about people I've never seen and who will never know me? It is better if I stick to my own affairs. This is the sort of arguments

HAROLD T. PULSIFER REVIEWS ROBERT QUILL

The June number of the "Quill" comes to me with a sense of surprise and expectancy for review. If my comments displease the contributors will be generous enough to bear in mind that twenty-four hours is all too brief a time to digest so varied a feast of song and prose. I might have taken something more than twenty-four hours to be sure, but a pre-arranged fishing trip is destined to cut short my time. If there are any subscribers among the "Quill" contributors, they will certainly accept this plea as justification for almost anything!

If the first piece in the "Quill" was read to Mr. Roosevelt's essay on Baudelaire as the model of how to think the editorial emphasis was well deserved. Sound in judgment, firm in perception and adequate in form, Mr. Everett's essay contained an excellent introduction to the work of this extraordinary genius. Mr. Everett's unusual knowledge of French, and his appreciation of the delicate nuances of that language, perhaps invite a form of criticism which a less studious author might have been spared. We pass over without comment a detour of the poem purchased at the "Five and Ten" when the same defect occurring in a bit of porcelain irritates.

George T. Sewall '32 Commencement Part
Examples of our grievous social ills are so numerous and so common that I need almost not mention them. Here again we fall back on "fundamental rights" and a partly-outworn individualism to justify our failure to progress. Anyone of such perception can see readily that an individual laborer has virtually no power to bargain with a great business concern, yet in the famous case of Coppage v. Kansas the Supreme Court upheld a yellow-dog contract on the grounds of the sacred right of an individual to make what contracts he chooses. Again, we have branded proposed schemes of unemployment insurance as a "dash" at the sacred right of the individual to work for his own support.

And the music of Baudelaire is perhaps the most beautiful to be found in French literature, for it is swingingly brought by a soul sensitive to life's every breath. A substitution of "loveliness" for "beauty" would give the sentence a totally new rhythm. These two criticisms are, however, and they would not be offered, did I not feel that the article deserved still further refinements of word and phrase. Let us return to the "Quill" literature is not written, it is written.

Running down the index page with a tentative footstep, I discover that Mr. Bassett has four contributions in this issue—three poems and a story. His story, I discover, is the only modern work in Mr. Bassett's issue. It is a brief article on "Vitalism". I do not think that I desire any very clear conception of the nature of a God from Mr. Bassett's article. The incorporation of a vast number of abstractions into a synthesis, Mr. Bassett is groping for an idea, but the clear expression of that idea has been lost.

Clarity of expression is the proof of clarity of thought. It is beyond a writer's power to express something which is not clear in his own mind. The poet who cannot tell his friend of mine found me struggling with a box of pistols. I lamented my ineffectiveness with the poet. He replied that he was "well" though I think this could be improved by judicious study. In a form as brief as a Triplet, no words may be wasted. The fifth line strikes me as being a bit of a waste. It could be made to carry more weight. I hesitate to suggest an emendation because I think the poet is perfectly entitled to work out a change for himself.

Mr. Stratton's Sonnet "For Susan" has, I think, an unhappy conclusion. Under the circumstances depicted, there is something unintentionally humorous in the invitation to the lady to supply the ignition. The fault, however, is not in an attitude that is amusing in its startles the reader. It is tricky where one expects dignity. When Mr. Robert Hillier spoke at Bowdoin last year on the "Tribal Scorn on the ancient practice of counting poetic feet with fingers. Mr. Hillier was implicitly right if he meant to imply that the rigidity of the feet was not a true test for poetry. The rhythm of modern poetry is judged more by the ear than by the metrical yardstick, but to measure it by the yardstick for poets, especially those who are beginners at the art, occasionally will it?

Such has been the case formerly, but we must remember that we are dealing today with greater forces, greater areas, greater masses, and perhaps greater confusion than ever before. And we are approaching not only the present situation but the whole future conduct of affairs with an attitude that is amusing in its lack of foresight. We have developed a society so ponderous and interdependent that only the utmost intelligence and devotion to its ultimate good, on the part of its leaders and its favored classes, can hope to save it and keep it moving. Conservative thought has had its chance of being successful and has failed. We can now where "muddling through", as Mr. Dillard so aptly termed it, has given us. The Liberal forces must take the lead in this new era if they are to have greater trouble. The Liberal attitude alone can meet the crisis and bring about that sensible reaction which is the only way out. But there is a limit to human enterprise that is fast being approached. It is not yet too late for the flames of destruction to be kept from the general body of our fellow-citizens by construction and re-organization of human affairs, so that, disastrously necessary in the extreme, the chance will have gone for good.

less with which the author is personally familiar. I should say that his attitude was one of wholesome disaffection, which is a much better state of mind to be in than that of complete self-approval. When an organization or social group decides that it is perfect, it has already taken a long step towards the boggy-chute. Besides there's much more fun in imperfection. It leaves something to be accomplished.
Mr. James E. Bassett's "Fournal the Ant" is a light satire also not untainted with philosophy. It is amusing, and, on the whole, well written. I am wondering whether the author intended a pun to be beginning of paragraph four, on page one hundred five. Or is it only my trivial mind that tripped over a similarity in syllables? I am hoping that the similarity is an accident.
"Big John and Little John" by Vincent Nowlis attempts the difficult task of viewing a tragic episode through a child's eyes. The abruptness of the transition which opens the third paragraph I find a little confusing, and I feel that there should be a greater change in the manner in the presentation of the story after the child becomes a young man.

Mr. Stephen P. Leo, after the manner of O. Henry, caps his story with a surprise conclusion. The story is brief, but I think it might well be even briefer, and that he devotes too much space to the approach to his monument. It is possible that such a story as this, if the introduction moved a little more swiftly, might fit into the niche which some magazines now reserve for what they call a "short, short story".

Some of our magazines are today boiling down their fiction to a point where it begins to resemble the old single-act play. It is possible to tell a tragic story in the smallest possible number of words. If I remember correctly, it ran as follows:
Joy Fun
Dust
I have saved for my last comment "Blue Bottle Inn"—the lily Day Play by Philip G. Parker. It was not my good fortune to see this on the stage, and I am therefore a little reluctant to attempt something at which even professional dramatic critics frequently fail. The art of judging the actability of the play from the text is a difficult one—so difficult in fact that the production of any play is usually a costly gamble.

Mr. Parker, within the confines of a very brief one-act play, has attempted the ticklish task of making a rather incredible situation real and moving. The exposition of the situation he has handled without too much creaking of the machinery,—but the play lacks the effectiveness which springs from restraint. Perhaps his error might be remedied by a skilful acting,—and I am told that Mr. Parker took the part of his own hero with remarkable success,—but I do feel that much of the language in the play is too theatrical to be convincing.

Mr. Parker's tendency toward what is theatrical rather than good theatre is illustrated by his last stage direction. This head, predestined in the Professor Cram garden, has no history, and is a modern piece. It formerly belonged to the Westbrook art collector, E. P. Warren, of the paper manufacturing family, and on his death it was sold to a Portland shop, where Mr. Cram found it. An Egyptian vase in the foreground of the garden was a statue, the head of a pharaoh.

"The lights slowly dim, until only the white face remains on the stage". Outside of a certain situation in "Alice in Wonderland", I can conceive of no place in which such an explained "fade-out" would be accepted as honest drama.

Garden of Professor Marshall P. Cram Open to Guests of College

When the ladies of the Federated Women's Clubs of Maine were at the college for their recent Art Day, one of the pleasures of the day was the trip through the garden which Professor Marshall P. Cram on Federal Street, and also a visit to his garden. The things that Professor Cram likes the best are the two stone canals that he brought home this winter from what President Sills referred to as a trip to "the perilous east." These canals, carved from solid rock, face each other, and seem to be sitting on their haunches, calmly chewing the cud, and dreaming of the desert sands of far-away.

world" capable of such planning because self-interest was the dominant motive in man's life. Self-interest, he said, would prevent his submitting to any regulation of his economic behavior. It is perhaps needless to point out the amount of regulation we even now endure. A business man must abide by contracts, may not restrain trade unlawfully, may not entice his workers, and many other ways too numerous to mention is business restricted. But more fundamentally, the insistence that an economic system can be run only by the motive of selfish gain is an oversimplified explanation of human behavior. Scientists, artists, and teachers certainly do not work primarily for gain. Indeed, man is actuated by a complex multitude of desires. The satisfaction of a job well-done, the prospect of social recognition, the reward of feeling that one has contributed something to the welfare of the group, and even the desire for activity itself—all furnish powerful spurrs to initiative.

Opposite the new Webber Studio

When the Shelton opened (7 years ago) we began catering to college men and women. Gradually their patronage has increased; we feel safe in asserting that more students make the Shelton their New York home than at any club or other hotel. One reason for this is the free recreational features plus a desire to serve on the part of Shelton employes. Room rates have been greatly reduced. Rates from $60 per month upward. A room from $2.50 daily. Club features (free to guests) are as follows: Swimming pool; completely equipped armatorium; game rooms for bridge and backgammon; roof garden and solarium. Restaurant and cafeteria serve at reasonable prices.

COLLECTION OF PAPER MONEY PRESENTED TO THE COLLEGE

In memory of her son, John K. Snyder, who was a member of the class of 1897, Mrs. Lucy K. Snyder of West Concord, Mass., has presented to the College a valuable collection of paper money issued by the Continental Congress between 1776 and 1779. The collection includes denominations from one-third of a dollar to eighty dollars, and there are two specimens of each piece of money. The album in which the notes are pasted has been placed on exhibition in one of the cases in Hubbard Hall, where during his undergraduate days John Snyder was employed as an assistant to the Librarian.

ALLEN'S DRUG STORE

The majority of the notes are issued in the name of "The United States" or "The United Colonies." They are designated sometimes as "Continental Currency." On some of them appear familiar designs like the Hand Grasping the Nettle, the Thirteen Inter-linked Rings enclosing a Sun and the motto "We are One." There are also a few specimens of Confederate money. John Snyder's death occurred in Germany last August. His body was brought to Brunswick to lie in the College lot of Pine Grove Cemetery. He had taught at the University of Wisconsin the last part of his life had been spent as instructor in English at Amherst College. He was among the most brilliant of the recent graduates of Bowdoin and his death was deeply mourned by a large number of younger alumni.

Highlights of Pres. Sills' Baccalaureate Address

(Continued from Page 2) calls for attachment than any other: it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us, but freedom for the thought that we hate." It will be well to keep these words in mind as we are soon to be in the throes of a re-assessment of the value of national prohibition. There is also danger to intellectual freedom in the agitation in some states of some very zealous patriots, fearful of the spread of what seems to them a pernicious doctrine, for requiring from every teacher in the public schools a signed oath of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States. That is enforced patriotism with a vengeance. It is substituting the letter for the spirit. It is an insult to the teaching profession; a sign of a lack of confidence; a mark of intolerance. Yet no one can have real liberty in his soul unless he is willing to pay the price of liberty. "We shall know the truth and the truth shall make us free." In other words, knowledge comes before freedom. The path to knowledge is arduous, steep, difficult; there are no short cuts. Liberty intellectual as well as political must not be confused with license. A man must be as sure as he reasonably can become of the soundness of his opinions before he gives expression to them. This discussion of some of the principles of intellectual liberty leads inevitably to the conclusion that such liberty is the fruit of something deeper still, spiritual freedom, to which every man and every woman is entitled as a child of God. That freedom has nothing to do with wealth or honors or pleasures or health or any other material thing. It is a possession of the soul, an idea, long quest, and the full attainment does not come in this life—but hereafter. Every man who sees this truth may be serene and free in his innermost soul. Such a conception of liberty gives meaning to life, checks cynicism and despair, raises us above the basest that perish, makes us understand even afar off therefore far more than being a champion of political and social freedom; for it means to be freed from the bondage of material things and live the life of the spirit. It is probably true that in the somewhat long history of this college no other senior class has left these portals with the immediate future more uncertain or more difficult. But despite the dark clouds in the immediate horizon, there is the Promised Land beyond. Despite too the necessity that will be work enough and to spare for your generation to redeem the time and to repair the wreckage made all over the world since the War. You must give your best thought and energy to getting rid of the tyranny wherever you may find it, in the state, in the mill, in the school, in the church. But above all else you must strive to keep your own bodies and your own souls free, your bodies clean and free from all those forces that may undermine your strength, your souls free with that freedom that comes from fearless following of the Truth. Nothing else really matters. In such freedom knowing they cannot take from you that most precious possession, in the dark and trying days that are ahead may God guard you and bless you and make you share in that glorious liberty that becomes His son.

WHITE TRACK TEAM TURNS IN BRILLIANT

(Continued from Page 1) second time in succession, Del capped the 35-pound weight crown in the N.E.A.A. meet, this time with a record of 50 lbs. 5-8 inches beating the former meet mark (by Bowdoin, Bowdoin '31), by 6 inches and falling short of the national record by barely four inches. The Olympics will doubtless be the scene of Del's future hammer efforts. Larry Usher and Steve Lavender and George Sewall, those three ever-faithful plodders of the distance contests, will too depart with diplomas in their hands, as will Crighton Gatchell and Harry Thistlewaite of the sprinters. Now, wiping our tears, let us turn to those silver lining athletes who will again compete under Bowdoin's banners. McLaughlin Will Return Ray McLaughlin crashed the headlines more than once by his versatile performances. Ray equaled the world's record in the 45 yard hurdles at the N. E. Intercollegiate in the Bowdoin Garden (sponsored by University Club). He capped all former high point marks of State Meet history, when he garnered four first places, practically pushing the team to the title with his 29 points in the Interfraternity Meet. He took five firsts, established a new record for scoring, shading that of Tootell of a few years back. He ended the season by being elected unanimously for captain, an act which surprised no one. Eraley Gray and Milt Hickok did well in their sprint performances. The next year should see them both bearing the peak in their events. Thurm Larsen scored consistently in the shot put, and though overhauled by his teammate, freshman Howie Niblock, he was no mean performer. He also will figure in future hammer and discus throwing, for Thurm is as hard as the Pine Tree State's own produce. Charlie Allen surprised all by clinging to both Stanwood and McLaughlin in the hurdles, and should ably support the latter next year. Though slighted to this point, the freshman crop of tracksters, according to the season's action, revealed some of the best prospects in Bowdoin's track mirror in years. Howie Niblock tossed the shot in the Middle Forties all season. He won the State title with his 45 feet, 11-8 inches heave. Howie is the one to watch, the sole sophomore-to-be elected to the Athletic Council has three years left to continue his stuff and should soon reach the top of the tree. He figured well in the discus and the javelin. Many Good Fresh Other freshmen winning in the State Meet were John Adams, second in the high jump, and Jim Crowell, in the second jump, the pole vault. Adams showed promise in the broad jump. Rising fresh too were Art Fox, holder of the 880 college record, and the class of the season; Johnny Boyd, a coming star in almost all the field events; Stan Beasley in the 600; Mike Hunt and John Lewis, 400 sprints; Harry Ablon in the hurdles and high jump; Mel Hughes in the discus; Harry Snow in the shot put. Unusque Great in Mile And then the 1000 mile race, one of the greatest fresh races until he dropped out of competition some time before the State Meet on account of scholastic and personal reasons. Prior to his withdrawal from competition Unusque was Jack Magee's best bet in the mile, for he holds the college record with a clocking of 4:27 registered in the Interfraternity Meet. Herein is lodged the hope that Tom decides to compete next year unhampered by probation or other troubles.

SCORING the junior and senior classes ready for their failure to support tradition. Ivy Day ceremonies, President Sills advocated serious re-consideration of their duty by undergraduates. In two successive Chautauque addresses last month he deplored what seems to be a leaning away from the more unpleasant duties, toward the gayer, social ones. In both his scathing talks the question arose as to whether Bowdoin traditions would be dropped: "It is in the hands of the classes themselves," declared President Sills, "for both Ivy Day and Senior's Last Chapel are distinctly class functions." Something very different should take place next May, if the tone of President Sills' statements is at all prophetic. It is significant, however, to note that he did not suggest compulsory attendance at either affair; responsibility was left clearly with the classes. FOLLOWING hard upon the serious Ivy Day situation, came Dean Paul Nixon's ultimatum to fraternity presidents that failure to attend the Baccalaureate and Senior's Last Chapel rather severe penalties for the recalcitrant seniors. The hint was made that degrees might be withheld under those circumstances. ORIENT editors were gratified to find themselves among those included in the John D. Rockefeller, Jr. mailing list. When the astonishing reversal of the anti-Communist thropist's prohibition sentiment was made public, copies of his letter to Columbia Prexy Nicholas Murray Butler were sent to the press. Quite incidentally, some of Rockefeller's reckoned on the wide circulation of college journals when he placed them on his "press" list; from them, he must have gathered that the ultimate victory for repeal is truly a thing of the future. HARKING back to a suggestion made by an alumnus last year, that Bowdoin men are "sloppy dresser" at least around college is an item made public on the Meulion Union bulletin board. An old grad, visiting the Lounge on a Sunday morning, saw a student attired in "dirty white duck trousers, a dirty shirt, and slippers." Perhaps, however, the alumnus failed to realize that the student was in the period, or just prior to it; it is a Bowdoin tradition that undergrads shall wear their oldest shak-downs before exams, that they should go unshaven and unshorn. Last year's humorous quarterly, "Growler," suggested slyly that Bowdoin men, deferring to a suggestion of a Visiting Committeeman—set aside one day to wear full-dress... SIGNS of the ending of business depression—if one may judge from another's unsupported word—appear in the Bulletin Board. A last year's graduate writes to Dean Paul Nixon that he is "now writing to get other men for jobs, so it looks as though the depression was over." Representatives for selling jobs—usually on a commission basis—are on campus a-fair; a few notices for summer positions appear from time to time; but requests for men from "big" companies have been strangely lacking. Most of the summer jobs are intrinsically attractive—but none carries large promise of high pay... LIKE a bombshell the announcement of Yale's proposed athletic policy hit Bowdoin men with a forceful, legitimate sports. Like a modified home-ruled arrangement, this new Yale plan advocates amateur coaching, abolishment of intersectional football games, free student admission to athletic contests, abandoning certain junior varsity teams, and increased interest in their intra-mural sports program. Somehow almost everyone would hate to see intercollegiate competition disappear; it is the spice of athletic life in colleges and universities. But what the Yale plan deplores is the high pitch of commercialism, of "big-timeism" which erstwhile pure recreational pastimes have reached. Bowdoin men cast an eye, significantly, back toward their own recent interfraternity-minor sport squabble which was the same question in a lesser degree.

Fast Commencements

(Continued from Page 1) 1824, though Bowdoin Historian Louis Hatch doubts the authenticity of the program announcing this. Hawthorne was averse to all public speaking, and he used to cut his speaking courses widely for this reason. As the years rolled by, Bowdoin undergraduate classicists took the logical route; and in 1877 the Orient announced that the Latin valedictory was "intelligible to the poorest Latin scholar." By degrees Latin was relegated to the background, and by 1883 the address were entirely in English. The first outside-the-college degree was conferred in 1824, on President Lafayette. President Allen, however, had to travel to Portland for the awarding, since the General was unable to reach Brunswick. But the following year came the grand climax of Commencements, the one which to this day is recognized as the most famous. Longfellow and Hawthorne graduated from the same class, the former third in his class, and the latter toward the middle. Longfellow delivered an address on the "Life and Works of Lady Chatterton" or at least, he would have had his father not suggested a more worldly, better-known topic. Hawthorne, who was a splendid theme writer but a mediocre, unwillng speaker, did not deliver an address.

Ex-Bowdoin Man Manages Paper on Majorca Island

On the island of Majorca, off the coast of Spain, there are many people who speak English, but no one realized that the population would support an English speaking paper...

"The Daily Palma Post" they called it, and it immediately became a hit throughout the Balearic Island group, and even achieved circulation on the Spanish coast.

The COLLEGE BOOK STORE REMINGTON PRESENTS The REMIE SCOUT in Two Models One at $34.75 - the other at $19.75 F. W. CHANDLER & SON 150 Maine Street

FRESHMEN!

Your parents are interested in Bowdoin College and its activities. Needless to say, their interest continues steadfast throughout the school year, but your activities often prevent you from writing home to tell them of current events here at Bowdoin.

Enclosed find two dollars. Put the address below on the mailing list of the Orient: Name Address

Vol. LXII Wednesday, September 28, 1932 No. 9 The ORIENT favors and urges serious consideration of the following: a senior dormitory, a new classroom building, a covered hockey rink, a better road through the campus; clear faculty security of the finances of publications, separation of the Bowdoin Alumni from the Bowdoin Publishing Company; student representation on the Board of Trustees...

Chiefly for Freshmen The college these few days passed has in its routine fashion welcomed a new class. There was nothing about this welcome which differed from that of any other year.

Yet in spite of this well-practiced absorption, there is a new gleam in the critical eye as it scrutinizes the class. We detect therein the light of expectation. There is great anticipation in the "depression generation".

The sobering effect of less money to spend brings the freshman to college this year poorly equipped to forget or make substitution for education. The flamboyant picture of "college life" dramatized at Hollywood is impossible without automobiles, week ends, liquor, and roadhouses;

We look to see evidences of a new and more genuine perspective of life arising from our midst. The dollar should tumble back into its proper position as a medium of exchange instead of being held as the measure of success.

Certain it is that the entering class realizes more acutely than ever before the hard truth that to live and eat one must work. And although work is done for what is paid for it, the freshman of today should see readily the false idealism of money and translate success in securer terms.

There is a great philosophy of living being taught. We advise the freshman to acquire its principles here at Bowdoin.

PRESIDENT RAPS COLLEGES HERE FOR PETTINESS

Staff:—we read: "The 'ambusher' is the province of the student; it is in the field for his life's adventure and it is a wide field full of beckonings. It would be a great college where the students, not the professors, asked questions; and it would be a real gain if in all our work we could get more intellectual curiosity, more of the sense of adventure, more of the thrill of change.

On the surface to be sure you will find few things different in your material surroundings, since you were here last June. The new gateway being erected by the class of 1933 shows faith in the future of the College as well as adding beauty to the present campus.

In the library you will notice a collection of military medals belonging to the late Senator General Robert Dunlap of the Maine Corps and given to the College by his wife, General Dunlap was not a graduate of the College but belonged to a distinguished Bowdoin and Maine family.

"And then the man died, leaving his death for an example of a noble courage, and a memorial of virtue, not only unto young men but unto all his kind."

Five Added to Faculty Changes in the faculty are fewer than usual. The College suffered a grievous loss by the death in Boston on August 22nd of Dr. Eleanore M. Bolander, Assistant Professor of Chemistry.

Professor Stanwood and Hornell are to be absent on leave the coming year, the former at work in Boston on the codification of international law, the latter studying in Europe some problems in connection with public utilities. Professor Ham is to be absent on leave the coming year.

So much for matters of local interest which are always of deep importance and moment. But we should not forget that Bowdoin is only one of the great institutions of the world and that we must not limit our horizon to our own campus.

College Men as 'Picked Lot' Should Prepare for Leadership Says Sills

Emphasizing the need for moral as well as intellectual leadership President Sills spoke in Chapel on Sunday, September 28, taking as his topic, "Training for Leadership in College and Beyond..."

"We are often told," began the President, "that one of the important functions of college is that of training students for leadership..."

"In present-day national life we find an example in the bonus question of college in that of training students for leadership..."

Example in American History "We find a similar example in United States history. The Grand Army of the Republic was originally founded with high motives..."

TOTAL OF FIVE NEW MEMBERS JOINS FACULTY

Dr. Elbridge Sibley comes to the college as an assistant professor of Sociology. He is a graduate of Amherst College and received his doctor's degree from Columbia.

Commander MacMillan Here The well-known Arctic explorer, Commander Donald E. MacMillan, Bowdoin '38, has joined the faculty to teach Anthropology I. He is here as visiting professor under the Tallman Foundation for the first semester. His course will be on exploration and life in the Arctic, which, because of his vast knowledge and personal experience, should prove most interesting and highly instructive.

Among the members of the faculty five received well-earned promotion. Assistant Professor Nathaniel C. Kendrick was promoted to the position of associate professor of History. Professor Kendrick has been a member of the faculty since 1926, and is a graduate of the University of Rochester, with master's and doctor's degrees from Harvard. Four instructors were promoted to the rank of assistant professor. They were: Messrs. Childs in English, Helmreich in History and Government, Stallknecht in Philosophy, and Lockwood in Economics.

When the Shelton opened (7 years ago) we began catering to college men and women. Gradually their patronage has increased; we feel safe in asserting that more students make the Shelton their New York home than at any club or other hotel. One reason for this is the free recreational features plus a desire to serve on the part of Shelton employes. Room rates have been greatly reduced. Rates from $50 per month upward. A room from $2.50 daily.

Club features (free to guests) are as follows: Swimming pool; completely equipped gymnasium; game rooms for bridge and backgammon; roof garden and solarium. Restaurant and cafeteria service at reasonable prices.

STUDENT AID NOT GUARANTEED NOW

"The college was proud of this fact last year. It was also proud that it was able to pay all its bills and still finish in the black, that is, without a deficit. But it appears that we cannot renew our pledge at this time."

"You like that old pipe, don't you?" "YES, I LIKE to smoke Granger. I have tried all kinds of tobacco; but, frankly, I have never found any other that is as good as Granger. "I think I know something about tobacco, and I should say that Granger is the one tobacco that is made just right for pipes."

running, passing and punting. Richardson and Waite will probably do most of the booting in the opening game, while all the backfield will pass and run.

State Team Powerful
State signaled that it is coming to Brunswick with a team every bit as good as last year's sensational eleven by trouncing Cooper Union, 50 to 0, last Saturday. Louis Bush, sensational halfback who ran amuck around the Polar Bear ends last year, is already in the van of eastern scoring leaders, for he counted five of State's eight touchdowns.

The Commonwealth team is almost an exact opposite to Bowdoin in the matter of material. They have backfield equipment galore, with such veteran ball-toters as Bush, Frigard, White, Sheff and Consolanti in the line-up, but are not especially well fortified in line material. If the White can figure out a plan to stop Bush, they will be well on their way to victory, but they cannot neglect the rest of a fast-stepping, snappy-passing backfield. Bowdoin has plenty of work cut out for them, if they expect to triumph.

A tentative lineup for the first encounter:

Bowdoin	Mass. State
Davis, le	lg, Jackimczyk
McKenny, R	lg, Cummings
Ackerman, lg	lg, Leavitt
Milliken, c	lg, Leary
Torrey, rg	rg, Nietupski
Low, R	rg, Guzowski
Kent or Sargent, re	re, Griffin
Burdell, qb	qb, Bigelow
Hubbard or Reid, hb	hb, White or Sheff
Backunowicz, hb	hb, Bush
Richardson, fb	fb, Frigard or Consolanti

COACH CHARLES W. BOWSER who has developed from a scarcity of material a strong line and a backfield that is powerful though lacking in reserves.

Jayvee and Frosh Schedules List Powerful Teams; Most Games Home

Playing exactly the same schedule as they did last year, with the only changes being in the dates, the Polar Bear pigskin toters will engage Massachusetts State, Tufts, Williams and Wesleyan in additions to their three game state series schedule with Bates, Colby and Maine.

As in former years, Massachusetts State will open the schedule, tackling the White next Saturday. Williams comes to Brunswick on October 8, while Tufts, with whom Bowdoin rang down its curtain last year, is the third straight home opponent. The first two state series games with Colby and Bates will be at Seavern Field, Waterville, and Garcelon Field, Lewiston, respectively, while the final state series encounter against Maine, the Alumni Day game, will take place at Whittier Field November 5.

Wesleyan is Last Game

World War and during the World War itself, repose in a cabinet built by marines in his command as a token of esteem. The cabinet is draped with his personal flag, a red flag with a white star.

General Dunlap was not a Bowdoin graduate himself, but came of a distinguished Bowdoin and Maine family. He was killed last year by a landslide in France while attempting to save a farmer's wife from death. The case of medals was presented to the College by his widow. A space has been left vacant in the case to receive the Carnegie Medal awarded him for his heroism in trying to save another life at the expense of his own.

SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

Massachusetts State appears to be a consistent team. Last year they walloped Cooper Union by 50 to 0 and last year they did exactly the same thing. Louis Bush made five touchdowns in each game. And today, as last year at the same time, he is the East's leading scorer.
O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O

Maine and Bates grabbed off their first victories of the season last Saturday from Rhode Island and Arnold, respectively. Both look formidable—but harder tests are still to come.
O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O

Howie Niblock, Maine shut-outting champ, blossomed out into new fields this summer, when he won the New England discus throw, beating Phil Coniug, Boston College's intercollegiate champ. Then the Bowdoin strong man went on to take third in the shot.
O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O

Bowdoin could show the New England athletes something in the way of cross country running this autumn, with a great team in the making. Tom Ustickie will be back to attempt to break the New England record he set last year, while a host of others will make Bowdoin powerful.
O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O

The swimming team, players and coach, seem to have weathered a hard summer. Bob Miller, the popular coach, who is in the hospital with various illnesses all summer, while Swede Wallberg is due to have a tonsil operation almost any time now.

The Sophs are casting anxious glances at the looks of the Freshman footballers. They appear to have an excellent combination on hand with plenty of material and a lot of poundage to help them along.

FRATERNITY GAMES NOT ON SCHEDULE

Mr. Morrell, head of the athletics department, announces that there will be no interfraternity football this year. He stated that only four shifts of groups of teams will be in order, namely, varsity, junior varsity, freshman, B. Any one desirous of playing football will be welcome on one of the four teams best suited for him.

Wesleyan will provide the final resistance of the season when they go on their home field against the Bears November 12. This will be the varsity's final game.

A difficult schedule has been drawn up for the junior varsity this season, with all but one of the games scheduled away from home. Hebron at Hebron, Waseskoque at Dexter and Kent's Hill at Kent's Hill will be played on consecutive Thursdays, while Fryeburg will close the season at home.

The frosh go against Bucksport on October 21, while on succeeding Fridays the pup gridders mix with Bridgton, Mt. O. I., Higgins Classical, and the Sophomores. All games are home.

LACK OF VETERANS CHIEF HANDICAP TO BOWDOIN HARRIERS

cannot offer any men capable of more than ordinary sport.

There is Perkins of last year's varsity, whose chief claim to distinction is a place among the first ten in the Tufts duel, not to forget a batch of sophomores from last year's powerful frosh outfit, including Cobb, Hutchison, Hubbell, Knowlis, LaBelle and Berg. These six, especially Hutchison, may develop into top-notchers before leaving college.

Then too, Nelson Tibbetts '34, who gained by leaps and bounds last winter and spring as a long distance runner, will be heard from. Tibbetts' surprising win over Ustickie in the freshman-sophomore indoor meet "made" him overnight.

PHI CHI LOWERS AT EAGER THIRTY-SIXERS

Let us consider these twelve in question as concisely as possible upon them.

First upon the list is the name John Holden. We have heard that name before. We have it—he is the Carr, we mean President, of the Societies, we mean sophomore class.

A great football man, Johnny is about seven feet tall—really, he is tall—and weighs over two hundred. He is a Zets.

Now we have Stan Sargent, a tall good-looking fellow with rosy cheeks. One of the mainstays of last year's frosh football team, Stan has been "around" a great deal. He expects to put in a good season this term. A Chi Psi man, Stan.

And in this corner we find Bad Bill Keville, the playboy of the Beta House. It's not as wicked as you might think. We are only trying to frighten some of the timid youngsters. Bill was freshman captain of football. He is very brave despite his medium proportions. He made the swimming team, but he is at once a good tackler and diver. And he gets his man in the first respect.

John Boyd, another Phi Chi man, was a Div. 1 was an extremely versatile track star last year. Among other things, Johnny is a high rate golfer who swings a wicked club, the inference being enough.

Big Bill Bigelow was a freshman goal tender last year, and the way he wielded his broad stick about the net won the admiration of all spectators. Iron man Ivanowicz, despite his five feet height, possesses unusual strength. He is one of the best gymnasts in the college, tumbling being his specialty. Jake also made the swimming team as diver and is a loyal representative of the non-fraternity group.

From the A. T. O. house comes Al Priley, a man of purpose. "Actions make more noise than words" is his unspoken motto. "Nuf said.

Andy Rolfe, an A. D., will be of great service to his noble organization by virtue of his experience in these matters. Andy will be busy this year. Another thing, he is extremely good natured, and was last year easily won over. We do not know about this year.

The Sigma Nu's offer Joe Hoyt, a stocky fellow, who was freshman king at his house the past year. For one thing, Joe will play a prominent part in the rum raids in an effort to keep the tainted liquor from the mouths of freshmen.

Husky Bob Lawry of the Kappa-Sig's won his numerals in track last year. Besides his efforts to earn a varsity "B" he will be busy this year in enforcing the laws of the campus.

Ned Behr, a gargantuan D. U., was an earnest football and track man last year. The summer before last he worked at a husky dog camp, training the canines for team races. So Ned is well prepared for his Phi Chi duties.

And the list ends with Alden Woodbury, the William S. Hart of the motorcycle. It is he who will patrol the campus paths on his demon bike. Besides, he is a football man, and was freshman king at the T. D. house last year.

Stop Bush! Is The War Cry Of Bowdoin's '32 Grid Team Ready To Wreak Vengeance

When Coach Charlie Bowser leads his small band of gridders into action against the swift Massachusetts State myrmidons, he will send into action a team burning to avenge a 32-0 beating suffered a year ago at Amherst. Favored to win in '31, the Polar Bears lost handsily.

Not as all confident this fall, Captain Milliken and his team meet an eleven that has been in action once already, since a lopsided victory. Four seniors, five juniors, and six sophs will probably start against the erstwhile Aggies; they comprise a team that Charlie Bowser has been two years building—a fast, charging, strong-lined outfit, ready to try what no small New England college has done: stop Bush!

JUNIORS RELEASED FROM PHYSICAL ED.

Juniors as well as seniors are released from compulsory athletics as the result of new requirements issued by the Department of Physical Education for the coming year. Members of the two lower classes must, however, as in previous years, take some form of exercise at least three days a week.

For at least one season of one year, fall, winter and spring, freshmen and sophomores must participate in some sport in either Group A or B below, unless excused because of physical incapacity. Group A consists of various varsity sports: track, football, baseball, hockey, varsity swimming and gym team. Group B is class football and frosh football.

During his four years in college each man must demonstrate a playing knowledge of some sport of carrying-over value. The sports in this group are: golf, fencing, freshmen (in fall), tennis, handball (closed to freshmen), and swimming (B or C group or class). Fencing and body-building classes are also open to freshmen.

Three attendances a week are required, but if advance notice is given a cut may be taken. Such cuts must be made up within the week. Excused cuts do not need to be made up, and men may have four excused cuts each semester.

CHI PSI'S OCCUPY NEW LODGE NOV. 1

Arthur S. Davis '33, president of the Chi Psi Fraternity, has announced that the new lodge will be ready for occupancy on November first. It was hoped last spring that the house would be ready for occupancy this month but delays in construction have made the postponement necessary.

The corner stone of the new lodge was laid on June twenty-first as part of the Commencement program. It is a spacious Maine Colonial structure containing many modern conveniences and several unique features, which represent a new departure in chapter houses. On the first floor the dining room and sitting room are connected to permit dancing throughout the first story. A small, well-equipped office to the right of the entrance will accommodate the transaction of business, while a women's room opposite will provide facilities during house parties. A library will also be installed on the first floor.

The second and third floors will be divided into two room suites to provide the living quarters of the fraternity members. In the basement there will be a game room, with facilities for billiards and pool, and billiards, while a single wing off the southeast corner will house the servants quarters and will also contain the kitchen, serving room and delivery entrance.

BLANKET TAX WILL BE DOLED OUT BY MEANS OF COUPONS

'B.T. Books' Designed to Cut Clerical Work, Simplify Admissions

Simultaneous with the opening of the grid season here next Saturday will be the inauguration of a new system of tickets for student functions. Booklets of coupons known as B.T. Books are being issued free of charge at the Bureau's office. By virtue of their name, B.T. coupons (B.T. for Blanket Tax) are to be used in exchange, gratis, for tickets to all home athletic contests, lectures, concerts, and other diversions.

Coupons in all booklets are numbered in the same way, and for each function a differently-numbered coupon is uniformly valid for exchange for a ticket to that entertainment. For example, the number for Saturday's game will be posted on the Bulletin Board a few days ahead of time. The coupon bearing the required number may be exchanged for an admission ticket at Mr. Morrell's office on any day except the day of the game. Tickets are not transferable nor applicable to a grandstand seat.

It is important to note that unused coupons or tickets will be of no value after their particular "day", and lost B.T. books will not be replaced.

All students are urged to get booklets as once they have been issued it thus far, and they should be sure to exchange a B.T. coupon for the Mass. State game before Saturday.

G. POTTLE, '32, HURT BY FALL OFF ROOF

While arranging apparatus on the roof of the Bowdoin Observatory in preparation for photographing the eclipse on August 31, George B. Pottle '32 accidentally fell from the roof and fractured his spine, causing instant paralysis. At present he is slowly recovering in the Maine General Hospital in Lewiston.

Pottle was to have entered the Harvard Graduate School of Science this fall. While at Bowdoin he was one of the most promising men of his class. He delivered one of the Commencement addresses last June. Pottle was a member of the Debating Council, the Fencing Team and Zeta Psi Fraternity.

BOWDOIN GROUP AIMS FOR STATE RHODES AWARD

Davis, Hill, Sanger, Spingarn, And Sewall Selected As Candidates TO APPEAR BEFORE STATE COMMITTEE State Nominees Compete for the Four New England Scholarships

The Bowdoin College Faculty has nominated as its candidates for the Rhodes Scholarship Robert Caswell Hill '32, of Springfield, Richard Sewall '32, of Arlington, Massachusetts, George Tilden '32, of Old Town, Albert Samuel Davis, Jr. '33, of Bound Brook, New Jersey, and Edward David Woodberry Spingarn '33, of Amesbury, New York. The men will meet with candidates from other Maine colleges, and from this group will be chosen the state nominees for the four scholarships offered by New England.

STUDENT COUNCIL WILL HOLD DANCE IN UNION SAT. EVE.

An informal dance will be held at the Moulton Union next Saturday evening after the Moulton game. The dance is to be given under the auspices of the Student Council, and is planned for the entertainment of both students and visitors. Bowdoin's own popular orchestra, the Polar Bears, will play all the latest dances. The price of admission will be the same as those of last year; one dollar for a couple, and seventy-five cents for stag.

Bassett '34, Moustakis '33 Bring Comic Magazine Back To Life M. C. REDMAN HEADS BUSINESS BOARD Program Will Include Four Big Issues of Humor And Cartoons

Once again the great Bowdoin Polar Bear, and all the little polar bears, will have good laughs, for with the brightening of the economic horizon, a group of enterprising men have co-operated, reorganized the Growler, which has been silent for a whole year. The first issue will appear at the Maine game, November 5. The 1930-31 humorous magazine had met with hearty approval on all sides. For its gay wit and brilliant art work placed on a par with the best of college comics. But hard times last year, and the venture was hushed last year.

BOWDOIN CHAPTER PHI BETA KAPPA CHANGES RULING Election Three Times During Four Year Course; No Change In Quota

The Bowdoin Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa has authorized a change in the time of year at which Seniors may be elected and initiated into the society. Beginning with the current academic year, a certain number of Seniors may be chosen at the beginning of the second semester. The regulations provide that the number then chosen added by the number chosen from the class at the preceding Commencement shall not exceed five members of the class. Seniors elected last June, the number to be selected next February cannot be more than five. At the end of the second semester the grades of Seniors will be again reviewed, and there may be an election of a very few additional members from the Senior class at that time. This new chance of making Phi Beta Kappa are diminished by the new regulations. The rule which limits the quota from a class to twelve members has not been changed. The practice of electing a certain number of members (not to exceed five) at the end of their Junior year is to be continued. In the future, therefore, there will be two initiations at each academic year, one in February and one in June. And in the four years' college course there will be three times when a man may be elected to Phi Beta Kappa: at the end of his Junior year, at the beginning of the second semester of his Senior year, and at his Commencement.

POLAR BEARS HAVE SUCCESSFUL TRYOUT

The outlook for the coming year for the "Polar Bears" dance orchestra is bright, since the first try-outs received the fact that the orchestra class there is considerable good material, especially in trumpet and cornet players. Rehearsals are taking place this week, and the orchestra will play Saturday evening at the dance in the Moulton Union. Since it is early in the year it is not known just how large a band is possible, but many directors of "Polar Bears" believe that there is sufficient material for a ten or eleven piece orchestra.

BUSH UPROOTED BY DESTRUCTIVE BEARS

Richardson and Hubbard Crash Through Openings Made By White Line; Burdell's Strategy And "Bakie's" Interference Great

They stopped Bush. A high-powered, sixteen cylinder Bowdoin football machine took Massachusetts State, with its wonder ball-carrier, Louis Bush, out onto Whittier field last Saturday and walloped them with the most convincing lacing the Statemen have suffered in two years, 20 to 6. Every man on the Polar Bear team was brilliant. The fast, powerful line opened up gaps big enough for the whole backfield to march through abreast, and Hank Richardson and Heinie Hubbard put on the best exhibition of ball-toting that has been seen in these parts since the Maine game of two years ago. Sluggo Burdell and Bakanowsky were all Coach Charlie Bowser could ask in the way of blocking backs.

Reverend John C. Schroeder Of Portland Speaks At Chapel

CHRIST ALONE HAD TRUE PERSPECTIVE

Christianity Does Not Tell What To Do But What To Be Using many examples from modern life, the Reverend John C. Schroeder of the State Street Congregational Church in Portland clearly compared the modern materialistic order of things with Christianity at Chapel Sunday evening. Recounting an anecdote he read in the New Yorker recently Reverend Schroeder spoke of the mystery excursions run by some enterprising railroads. You pay your fare, board the train, and speculate on your destination. One of these excursions was recently run out of Washington and it was jammed with passengers seeking a day's pleasure from this well known novelty. The train finally wound up at Frye Springs in Virginia. Apparently everyone had a great time and the events of the day were recounted many times over in the enthusiastic Christian sense of the word. Christianity does not tell you what to do or what not to do, but rather what to be. Christianity is it's one and only thing in this world that can give you a perspective on the world.

Communication

To the Editor:

In the years past, there has been no little ill-feeling concerning the election of football managers. For this reason and for further benefit to those concerned, the athletic council and the coaching staff have established a new system of election. It should be of interest to the student body and those concerned with the competition.

Formerly, varsity football management has been the realization of one man. His benefit, a managerial letter. It has been a lump in the throat for the defeated man after three or four years of hard work. The selection of one of the two men is a hard task every year.

The new system allows those freshmen reporting to become acquainted with football in all departments. Whatever the number entering the competition, they are divided into two groups. One group one week works with the varsity squad under the leadership of the two junior assistant managers. The other group works with the manager of freshmen. The next week the freshmen change squads and continue to alternate through the season.

It is here that the change has been made. The defeated candidate for varsity manager now takes the job of manager of freshmen, class, and junior varsity football, for which he receives a letter. It only fits that some recognition should be made of his contribution to the college and to the football squad.

This new system should encourage those men interested in managerial positions, to a more definite and fair competition. So far this year there have been seven freshmen applicants for varsity managerial department. It is the hope of the Athletic department that more will see it enter the lists. The outcome is no longer one sided; it is doubly beneficial. We are printing a resume of the system. Of the freshmen that turn out their first year, it should be understood that all are on an equal ground. Second or sophomore year is similar, with the exception that more responsibility is placed on their shoulders. From the sophomore group two men are selected as assistant managers to the varsity squad. They assume this position during their junior year. At the end of the football season the manager is elected by three votes. One by the student council as representing the student body, one by the varsity squad, and one by the coaches, captain and managers.

The election is an impartial method of voting, eliminating any unjust politics. The defeated candidate receives the job of managing the aforementioned departments for which he receives a letter.

It has been called to my attention that perhaps a fairer method would be to elect four assistant managers from whom two are elected managers. The man with the greatest number of votes, varsity manager; the other, freshman, class and junior varsity manager. This matter will be brought up before the athletic council at a future date and the student body informed of their decision.

The following freshmen have got off a great start: Berkeley, Christie, Flynn, Magill, Nicol, Philon and Verity.

Bowdoin is not the only college with vacant rooms in the dorms, for there are a number of unoccupied suites in the houses at Harvard.

Intending to enter Colgate, a man hitch-hiked from Brownville, Texas to Colgate, taking ten days for the 2700 mile trip.

Four roosters were kept in one of the Harvard freshman dormitories while they (the roosters) were being used for psychological experiments. After many complaints the birds were executed and eaten.

The enrollment at Williams has fallen off slightly this year, while at Harvard the number of students has increased a little.

At Smith College cooperative houses have been instituted where the students pay for their own house work as a means of saving money.

As the result of a recent injury to a freshman in the School of Business Administration of Boston University has been abolished.

"Proc Night" and other forms of hazing have been prohibited at the U. of Vermont.

The new Doak bill provides that students attending the U. S. for education, on a non-quota basis shall not engage in part-time or vacation work. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia, when there are over 700 foreign students is a leader against the new ruling.

Three freshmen at Rutgers are living in a 60 foot yacht while attending the university.

At Connecticut College seniors alone are allowed the use of rouge or lipstick, except on the week-ends, at which time the others may indulge. Underclasswomen are not permitted to roller-skate either.

When the U. S. Naval Academy asked William and Mary officials what could be done to make their campus while the two teams stay a pleasure while the two teams played football, William and Mary replied "Don't beat us too badly." Then Navy lost 6-0.

Don't forget the Rally Friday night. Everyone out and behind the team. They are fighting. Are we? Let's go.

ORIENT CANDIDATES TO MEET IN UNION THURSDAY EVENING

Fresh Receive Reportorial Assignments at Weekly Staff Meetings

At the time of election two of the six are chosen to manage the paper and two are chosen for the job of sports editor. The work of the managing editor is the most difficult but also the most interesting of all the work. It consists of keeping a weather eye open for news, assigning the different items to reporters, planning the arrangement of the headlines and the paper in general, in supervising the writing of headlines and articles. Work is done at the Record office. This consists of taking the type from the linotype and setting it in the forms. The sports editors are responsible for the sport page, and supervise the writing of sports articles.

Of the two managing editors one is chosen to be editor-in-chief of the Orient. The editorial policy is his responsibility with a general responsibility for the work on the paper. He writes the greater part of the editorials. The other managing editor becomes associate editor with responsibility very similar to that of the editor-in-chief. He may, if he wishes, write editorials and makes himself of general assistance. The associate editor of the Orient is automatically undergraduate editor of the Bowdoin Almanac.

Again, there will be a meeting of all those interested in this work, Thursday evening, October 5th, in the Orient room of the Moulton Union. Steady application to weekly assignments is the most important qualification and all are eligible.

ber of the Psi Upsilon and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities. Mr. Davis has been prominent in debating and dramatic and in the literary life of the college, serving at one time as associate editor of both the Orient and the Quill. He has also been assistant manager of tennis. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year, and has twice been awarded a Fairbanks Prize in Public Speaking. He has three times won a Bradbury Debating Prize, and last year received the Forbes Rickard Poetry Prize and the Hannibal Hamlin Emery Latin Prize. He is a member of the Glee Club and the Chapel Choir, and was last year chosen as poet of his class. Mr. Davis has majored in French, and is a member of the Chi Psi fraternity.

Mr. Spingarn, who majors in German, has also been interested in Biology, having done some special work under the direction of Professor Gross. He has been a member of the Quill Board, the Classical Club and the French Club, and has participated in a number of plays presented by the Masque and Gown. A departmental assistant in Greek, he has been awarded the Sewall Greek Prize, the Goodwin French Prize, and was last year orator of the Junior class. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his Junior year, and is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Mustard and Cross

Of course, we hate to give things away but it has been whispered that after a year's rest the two rivals on the family are practically joking again. We have also heard of a dark conspiracy aimed against the Van-guard of the forces on one side. It has something to do with a car (we just heard this tip) and a Topkapi repair shop. Hi Fall!

And have you heard the theme song of the recent proc night brawl? (Soft and sweetly) "Little Pal".

From far east to nature in three minutes of the beer of game and thing Guy we know who in some way wandered into the meca.

We heard mentioned in bated breath the big surprise story for the sophomores Thursday night. But when the mob moved from Whittier Field to Pickard (showing true Bowdoin spirit—they sang lustily "We want beer"), the twenty or more "surprises" had to crawl out from under the seats at the back of the grandstand.

The ever present Harry Shalman was at hand during the brawl and conceded the freshmen at the very least a moral victory. We agree that it was fine to throw the molasses back at the sophomores but why include the footsteps of the upperclassmen? Well, after all, they did tell us to scram. The brazen hussies!

We look forward to the day when the Athletic Department will really protect its ticket service. The Bertillon system for instance. Finger prints filed, a new set for each game, and compare. It couldn't take much longer. What are a few hours among friends anyway?

It would be nice if coffee could be served. Some of the boys looked a little cold after the first hour and a half of waiting.

And what were Walter Johnson's ideas concerning the rubbing down of one new Good track man. It must be fine to be able to start the old ones over again every four years.

It's about this time that freshmen find they're kings of a different feather from that which their treatment two weeks ago implied. Now do they say "sir" anymore? But we are relieved to be no longer asked what "fir" we belong to. Such barbarians they were! Were?

One good Irish member of the entering class was much embarrassed when he was forced to "fit" (his own word) from Harvard back to the proc brawl in a pair of shorts. It seems some sophomores said they were freshmen and then asked him to take a ride. Deceitful wretches!

Get the D.U. boys to tell how the glimmers were doused and scouts sent into the bushes by Dean Nixon's house to watch a suspicious looking car. And how the car belonged to the maid which works being stumbled over said scouts and ran vociferously into the house. And how one of the fellas called up to explain matters only to be asked if he were "Mr. Edwards".

It happened in the Proc night melee last Thursday evening, after one of the warriors of '35 had grabbed a not-too-belligerent freshman and bawled loudly for Proc.

"Well, if yuh been Proc'd, it's about time yuh were leaving. Scram!" "I would!" replied the bewildered "Hick of '36", "but I don't know which way the campus is."

Pointing the way to the advertised brand

Many a "sale" made by advertising has gone to a competitor because the purchaser did not know where to buy the advertised brand. Telephone men evolved a plan to make it easy to find. They created a "Where to Buy It" service in the classified telephone directory. There—beneath the advertised trade marks—Buick, Goodrich, RCA Victor, General Electric and many others now list authorized local dealers. Thus telephone men complete the chain between advertiser and consumer—help manufacturers and dealers to increase sales—help consumers to get what they want! Because they apply vision to subscribers' problems, Bell System men continually increase the value of telephone service.

DO DAILY JOB WELL URGES PROF. BROWN IN CHAPEL SPEECH

Students Prone to Neglect Daily Work and Trust To Final Frenzy

that somehow or other the team would come to life in the big game?"
De Daily Work Well
"William James' advice is still good: 'Do the day's job well and the future will take care of itself.' It often takes more energy to get by a subject than to go through it. Real triumphs are won by daily application, not by heroic seventh hour efforts on the eve of a final examination."

We can learn something from the histories of football seasons, Professor Brown informed us: "At the beginning of this new semester and on the day of our first game, let us borrow a phrase from football—let us resolve to win today's game. The hours which seem so precious at mid-year are equally as precious now—and there are more of them."

"It requires heroism to do today that which can be postponed until next week. It is easier to go to the Cumberland than to the library. But it is in the way we meet these seemingly trivial daily temptations to coast rather than work that we show the stuff we are made of."

Keep Heads Up
"We expect our football team to beat Maine by a program of rigorous by a careful campaign of work and drill."

"Heads up!" advised Professor Brown in closing. "We all need early season grinding as well as big game excitement. People with their heads up and their eyes on the ball invariably deserve the breaks."
"Let us substitute for the feverish and uncertain help of inspiration the downright gospel of daily work."

The latest Beta House paradox. Worcester to Portland and back with the finish at Brunswick. The distance in fifteen hours, rides barred, is the wager. Under the same inspiration Fred Burton did Lewiston to Brunswick in two and a half hours. By now Johnny is either tired and flush or tired and broke.

Bowdoin Literally Lifts Itself By Bootstraps In Spirited Rally

One thing that may have helped the grid team in its amazing victory over Mass. State was the spirited bonfire rally held on the Delta the night before the game. The turnout of students and their wholesome enthusiasm were such that they must have augmented the winning spark in the hearts of the White gladiators.

Before the description of the event let us offer our recognition of the lad who was most influential in its proceedings. His name is Don Rust, sophomore. Don inconspicuously visited the President, Dean, and Student Council for sanction, raided downtown stores for burnable boxes, trucked these boxes to the Delta, and with the aid of a ladder completed the "works."

To begin the evening festivities the band assembled at Memorial Hall. About seven o'clock the resounding group made its way to Maine Street. At each frigate of the boys struck up "Phi Chi." In response the houses fairly emptied themselves. Gradually procession swelled and swung down the Campus Road.

With almost three-fourths of the student body and numerous members of the faculty swarming the opening angle of the Delta, the heap in the center of the field was lighted, and it burst into flames. It rose twenty to thirty feet, and brightened the whole field.

Alumni Sec. Wilder, acting for the President, conveyed the latter's greetings and satisfaction at the spirit exhibited. He also said that the rally promised to become a weekly, night-before-the-game affair, and that the President hoped to be able to attend all those forthcoming. After putting in his own comment on the fine showing, he turned song-leader, and the words of "Phi Chi" and other songs were released from the throats of all, with the accompaniment of the band under the direction of Dick Mawhinney.

The Dean then spoke. Wittingly, he remarked upon the thorough athletic spirit which he encountered while he was teaching at Dartmouth. He ended by saying that, though absurd, foolish, superfluous as this might seem to some, he favored it.

After an interlude of songs and cheers, Captain Milliken of the team spoke in short and snappy terms. He declined to say much until after the game. He did offer, however, the prediction that the outcome would be far different from that of last year.

Coch Bowser repeatedly urged a continuance of the initial good showing in the support of the team. He added that freshmen should, with such a welcoming rally to witness as incentive, carry their enthusiasm throughout their next four years. He too held the same prediction as Milliken's.

The singing of "Bowdoin Beata" closed the meeting.

FROSH-SOPH BRAWL WATCHED BY CROWD IN FRIGID DRIZZLE

And so were those sophs. The whites of the eyes of both sides met. Again, of a sudden, cries of "proe" and "proe" were heard, and indirectly did much to the garments of some.

For they were at it. Splash, swish, two rips, and a freshman was plastered, or rather, "proed." And another, and then two at a time. For they were working systematically, in groups, and together they snared unlucky victims, subdued them.

Little by little the frosh wore off their timidly, and instigated by those of their group who had successfully checked onslaught from without the circle, ventured forward to do dirty work. Then were the sophs hard put to it. The audacity of it shook them at first, and they left their "system" in the lurch for a time.

A big blonde, about six and a half feet tall, honestly, was raising havoc and even a couple sophs at a time. At length, he was exhausted, downed, and stripped by thirteen of the enemy. Another fellow was persistent, finally withdrawing after eighth proe had taken its toll on his body. A little freshman, bold and bare, put up a hard fight. It was only after a triumvirate of sophs put the short fellow 49 feet (a new record) up against the crowd of spectators, did he feel that he had enough.

Spectators, by the way, were numerous: some, veterans of previous wars; some, townspeople; others, faculty members; and still others, feminine admirers of the manly sport and anatomy displayed.

The frosh vanguard outweighed the tackling opponents. Ofttimes when a freshman was run aground, and only awaited official stamp before release, his custodian cried "proe, proe" in vain. They were pounced on from the rear. But what they missed in poundage, they gained in craft and teamwork. They also utilized the process of elimination to great advantage, and in due time their work was consummated.

When all was over, both nudist colonies trod homeward on the same path. On one side were the chicklings with subdued heart and plastered backs. Leaving their vestiges behind, they straggled along overcome with admiration for the power and precepts of those honored sirs, sophomores, rather. On the other side, were the triumphant sophomores. But where was the difference in aspect? They too limped toward their habitats; they too were "plastered." Oh yes, there was a something, a glory in their eyes. One could discern victory there.

Per order of the Dean and per force of the Student Council, no Chapel bell, traditional signal of sophomore rule, rang upon the return of the natives.

On the morn after, alarms rang long, and heroes unsung snored.

"A jug of wine, a loaf of bread, and thou singing in the wilderness." We didn't hear about the crooner but who traded a bicycle for the former? And who found riding behind an ox cart a trifle hard on the bicycle—among other things?

(Continued from Page 1) ... up to twelve, Burdell adding the extra point on a placekick. The Maroon men woke up slightly in the second period, in an attempt to stop the Bowdoin avalanche. After Richardson had crashed through for a first down, a poor punt gave the Bowsermen on their 30 yard stripe. Sheff and Bush then shook loose for three first downs, but a long pass over the White goal line gave the ball to the Bowsermen on their 20 yard marker. After an exchange of punts, the Polar Bears reeled off two first downs and were on their way to another score as the first half ended.

plays to the Maroon two yard marker. Richardson made all but a foot of the required distance and then fumbled, only to have Sheff recover for State on the two yard line. Burdell took Bigelow's punt at midfield and ran it back nine yards before being brought down. Richardson then bucked through on two spinners for another first down, as the game went into the final quarter. After an exchange of punts, State started their first ball carrying drive of the game. Two forward passes and a lateral brought the ball 45 yards downfield and dangerously near the goal posts. A pass over the line averted danger for the moment, however. A flood of Bowdoin subs came into the game at this point, and the ex-Aggies collected a punt and again began shooting passes. A whizzing spiral, white to Bush, put the ball on the ten yard chalk-line, and Bush, anxious to increase his point total even at this late time, finally spilled across the line for the touchdown. Milliken effectively blocked the place kick attempt. In the final minutes the Polar Bears went into action again and counted up two first downs, but they were unable to get into the danger zone. The subs played their heads off with only seconds to go, again crushing the State-men. And they stopped Bush.

JAYVEE FOOTBALL OUTFIT PREPARED

Although the junior varsity football team was not sufficiently well organized to take on the Hebron gridirers last Saturday as planned, it is expected that it will be 'ready and waiting' for the remaining scheduled contests when they come. About two full teams have been working out regularly under Coach Cobb, and while none of the positions have as yet been definitely assigned, a very fair outfit may be counted on to start against Wassookeag a week from Saturday.

VARSITY SWIMMERS COMMENCE TRAINING FOR COMING SEASON

Coach Miller Looks Ahead To Finest Season On Record

On Monday afternoon Coach Miller called the first practice for the varsity swimmers. A large squad reported, and the outlook for Bowdoin's fifth year in intercollegiate competition looks unusually bright. Though hard hit by graduation, Coach Miller faces the usual schedule with better prospects than ever before. As usual, varsity practice will be held three days a week, and the training table will be started this week. Candidates for the Freshman squad will not be called out until November second.

Exhibition on Alumni Day The varsity swim team will be on swimming horizon to have an exhibition to be given on Alumni Day. The exhibition will be held in the Curtis Pool at ten a. m., and should prove an interesting addition to what promises to be an eventful day.

Three Veterans Back With but three back from last year's team, Coach Miller will mill his team out of the unusually strong Freshman aggregation of last year. The three veterans returning are, Captain John Trott '33 in the distances, Bob Carson, '34 in the dive, and Bob Post, '34 in the backstroke.

Outstanding among last year's freshmen is Art Wallberg, who should be a headline this season. Wallberg holds all the college records from fifty yards to the mile. Others who will compete this year are Benson '35, Keiville '35, Iwanowicz '35, and Selig '34, in the dive. In the distances, Cary, Farmer, Wright, and Beale, all of '35 are being counted upon. Bob Sherman '35, is expected to perform in the dashes, with the hope that Joe Stetson '34 will become eligible. Stetson has shown a lot of promise and is probably one of the best sprinters in college.

Joe Eaton '33 is expected to win the ten yard dash, and the backstroke, with Hickox '34 of last year's second team, and McLeod '35, Baldwin '34, and Nilsen '34 as potential candidates. The team was hardest hit by graduation in the breaststroke, losing both Captain Densmore and Sperry. This burden will fall on Bob Whitmore '35, and Bill Esson '35. Whitmore, by means of summer 'strenuous practice' has improved tremendously. Lastly, two second team men will be found in the 220, in the persons of Jack Arnold '34, and Kendall Abbott '34.

POLO TEAM NOT TO ORGANIZE IN FALL

Although it has been found impossible to support a polo team at Bowdoin this fall, there will be riding, and sophomores will be permitted to get athletic attendance in this sport. There are special reduced rates for college riders, and a course in riding instruction is planned. Men may enter this course or not, as they please. The instruction, which is free, will consist partially of slow-motion pictures of each rider, which are expected to show the defects in the student's riding.

In the winter when outdoor work becomes impractical there will be indoor riding. "Monkey drill" will play a considerable part in the instruction at this period. There may possibly be horse shows in Portland this year, and if such is the case a jumping team representing Bowdoin will probably be seen down.

The loss of polo is much regretted, for last fall, although the scores of the matches were unfavorable, there were indications that in coming years a competent team might be developed at Bowdoin. However, in the spring, if enough interest is shown in the game to warrant it, there is a possibility that the polo team may be reorganized.

SPORTSMAN'S PEN

That name Bush changed its status remarkably at Whittier Field Saturday. At the outset it was the strong note in State's trumpet call to victory. After the game it was the bat of vari-colored paws. "Bush is Bushed" took the prize for frequency if not for brilliancy.

Louis was a marked man before the game began and even the assistant managers knew that number forty-six was a point-per-minute scorer last year. Not was Mrs. Bush's little boy Louis fully at ease. Bewailing his lot to an official in the mid-game intermission he remarked on tackles around the legs, around the neck. In fact it seemed he cared for tackles of no kind whatsoever. The old-school official to whom he addressed his remarks replied pitifully and somewhat indignantly, "Then you'd better pull your ears in this half."

Not the least significant aspect of the game was the fact that power plays and simple off-tackle drives took the heaviest toll in yardage against State. Two years ago the Polar Bear attack rolled up a 45-0 verdict over M.A.C. mainly through a deceptive series of reverses around the ends. On the defensive in this last game Bowdoin's line cut down practically every drive and missed fire only on one or two deceptive cutbacks.

Bowdoin men gained a certain satisfaction out of noting that Bates and Yale battled on even terms. That result puts a really classic premium on victory over Bates this season. In respect to the uselessness of comparative scores for determining the odds, in 1930 some genius proved, through a series of comparative scores, that Bowdoin was the New England champion, comfortably ahead of Harvard, Yale, and Dartmouth.

The road team is still looking for a dual race. Apparently there are few N. E. college cross country teams who care to race under the Bowdoin conditions. Coach Magee stipulates that the race be run less than four miles and over fairly even ground which bars any course containing mountains, ploughed ground, barbed wire, brooks and so forth.

That is the reason for Bowdoin's lack of interest in the annual Bates-Maine duel for the "State Championship" in cross-country. Colby and Bowdoin withdrew almost ten years ago from the yearly steep-chase-and-mountain climb and have never since cared to re-enter. At Bowdoin the chief object of road racing is to strengthen and develop middle-distance runners and two-milers, not "plodders" and "hill-and-dalers" to use the sports idioms.

ART BUILDING TO SHOW AQUATINTS

From October 21st until November 6th an exhibition of aquatints by Mr. Gordon Dunthorne of Kennebunkport will be held in the Bowdoin Gallery of the Walker Art Building, Bowdoin College.

Mr. Dunthorne is the son of Whistler's London print dealer. He served in the war, and later opened a shop in the Hotel Mayflower, Washington, D. C., with a summer shop at Bar Harbor. Recently he moved his summer shop to Kennebunkport, where his work has been popularly received.

GYM TEAM STARTS PREPARATION FOR HARD COMPETITION

One of the few N. E. Small College Teams, White Malesmen Persist Hard Schedule

The 1932-33 gymnasium squad held its first meeting Monday to take stock of material and to get practice under way. Manager Richard V. Kemper, '35, is busy arranging his schedule and prophesies a busy season. About eight exhibition performances are planned in addition to the intercollegiate meet trips.

Captain Peabody, Dan and Bob Bowman, Elston Eaton, Harrington, Iwanowicz, Kemper, Rust and Watson form the nucleus of this year's team. Graduation took from the squad only two men: last year's captain, Marlon L. L. Short and Tom Clark. There is still time for new recruits to begin working on fundamentals with the rest of the squad. All freshmen interested in gym work should start with the squad immediately.

BOWDOIN FORUM TO BRING SPEAKERS

The Bowdoin Forum which organized last year and enjoyed somewhat sporadic success is already laying plans for an interesting series of lectures this year. Present plans are entirely provisional, but the committee expects to bring speakers to debate on the present political situation soon. Another debate of the same type among politically minded members of the faculty is in the offing.

The present members of the committee are as follows: G. Russell Booth, '33, Arthur E. Moyer, '33, Gordon E. Gillette, '34, James C. Freeman, '34, and Allan F. Hubbell, '35.

The organization is for members of the student body and supported by those interested. During the year it plans to bring to the college, speakers on subjects of immediate interest. All those interested in this activity should get in touch with a member of the committee.

Bowsermen Confidently Seek To Duplicate Initial Triumph

(Continued from Page 1) lieve the weary regulars were the Aggies able to carry out their adroit flat-passes, and end sweeps effectively. Nary an injury blemished last week's convincing win. Aside from that number foot which forced Bob Waite to retire from the fray shortly after he went in to replace McKenney at tackle, and which did not require medical attention, the team came out of the battle unscathed.

Another feature of the team's play that contrasted sharply with the previous season's performances was the scarcity of fumbles. There was none of the wholesale bungling of scoring opportunities as of '31, not at all discrediting Dame Fortane, who smiled on the Bowsermen on more than one occasion. On one occasion a fumble lost the ball to the visitors less than a yard from their goal line, but the misplay was not as costly as it might have proven. Nine-tenths of the Bears' plays were of "straight football" stock. What will the Bowsermen produce when they resort to deception, and a passing attack? Only once did Bowdoin resort to the aerial route, and that play resulted in a short gain when Davis completed the heave. Very few end runs were attempted.

Backfield Capable Bowdoin displayed a quartet of line plunging backs, two of them skilled in the happy but often unheralded faculty of blocking, and all four of them bears on the defense. Hank Richardson stole the show with his consistent slashes off tackle, accounting for most of the Bowdoin yardage. Charlie Burdell did a very canny job in calling opportune plays. The line, particularly Low and Milliken, sifted through the Mass. State wall to thwart many a play, and when in possession of the ball opened yawning gaps as wide as the President's gateway for Richardson, Hubbard, Bakanoway, and Burdell.

What "Handicapper Hank" Richardson lacked in loft and distance on his punting, he atoned for in accuracy. The kicks were placed as far from Bad Boy Bush as possible. Remember the one that Bush tampered with near the goal line, when Stan Low threw him in the end zone with a thud? Go-get, go-get-Williams!

The Sun Rises

ARDENT supporters of the student commons - Moulton Union - as a dining place, were rudely shocked last week when President Sills declared the over-large $14,500 loss the college has suffered from it in two short years.

DECREASES in the average American college income of from five to seven per cent last year necessitated a drastic cutting of salaries, passing up of research work and building operations.

YALE'S Daily News persists. Despite Bates' gallant standstill of the vaunted Big Blue, the New Haven paper insists it will be against football's "big time-ness" to be continued.

SKETCHES wondered, week before last, whether the heady outburst of Bowdoin spirit would continue. The rally Friday night, and wild demonstrations after the football game proved that old Bowdoin has come life, its new fervor no flash-in-the-pan.

TEXTBOOKS full of propaganda and glossed truths, are no criteria for the modern college man, said a communicant to the free-thinking Portland Evening News some time ago.

STUDENTS should "look back three or four or five or ten or twenty or thirty years" and learn something of the spirit of their forefathers... and act on what they learn.

EIGHTY-THREE and five one-hundredths per cent of the newly-advanced 3,931 members of Who's Who are college graduates. But "Nation" frowns on the selections as unrepresentative, as not idealizing the average American who produces children, has the spirit of the pioneer.

Prices Slashed as College Makes Strong Bid for Student Support

President Sills, elaborating on the stand he took last Wednesday in chapel relative to the Moulton Union Cafeteria, declared that there has been some increase in patronage during the past few days, and should this continue there is every possibility that the Cafeteria will remain open for the balance of the year.

In an effort to attract those students who take their meals out, prices have been reduced. Expenses of operating have been curtailed and the enterprise is being run as economical as possible.

The administration realizes that a student likes to "shop around" rather than confine himself to one place; but in the best interests of all they are soliciting student support.

In concluding, President Sills remarked that the administration is always willing to listen to the advice and criticisms of the undergraduate body.

Bowdoin-Tufts Tussle Back in '89 Was First Football Game in State

"Bowdoin vs Tufts" - thus read the advertisements for the first football game ever played in Maine, back in 1889.

Antedating even the ancient Maine state series, the annual Bowdoin-Tufts encounter began on October 27, 1889. The game was contested on the Portland baseball grounds, and according to the ORIENT of that time, was a thriller from start to finish.

Bowsermen Score 7-0 Win Late in Fourth Period but Outplay Purple Consistently

WHITE WILL TACKLE STIFF OPPOSITION IN FORMIDABLE JUMBOS

Bears Must Prime to Combat Expected Passing Game of Tufts Gridders

After out-hammering the bulky Mass. State and Williams aggressions on successive Saturdays, Charlie Bowser's great football eleven anticipates the most virile non-Series assignment on the schedule, the adamant Tufts Jumbos, who so ably disposed of the heralded Bates crew.

Tufts is reputed to be fortified with an ordinary line but a formidable quartet of backfield men. Of these four Clayman, the quarterback, overshadowed the others.

Though brilliant in both tussles, the play of the Bowsermen in last week's encounter with the Purple was in direct contrast to that of the previous week. Beside the straight line smashes that crushed Mass. State the White unleashed a galaxy of reverse plays, particularly the pass.

Likewise from a defensive standpoint the Bowsermen demonstrated continued strength. With such rugged jaspers as Stan Low and Capt. Millard, the Purple backs, bowdoin with consistent ease Bowdoin prevented Williams from penetrating her territory any farther than the twenty-five yard mark.

Yet there is room for improvement. When Williams found itself powerless against the great Bear line, they resorted to a passing attack that for a moment seemed destined to prove the ruin of Whitemen.

Smashing Power Plays Succeed Again as White Rolls Up Fourteen First Downs to Visitors' Eight

Thrusting aside the charges of a heavier line, a snarling Polar Bear eleven crushed the Purple of Williams to the greensward of Whittier field for the first time in the eleven-year football history of the two colleges, by the score of 7 to 0 last Saturday.

Led by Captain Johnny Milliken, who intercepted a Markoski pass and returned it 40 yards downfield to turn what looked to be a scoreless tie into victory, the Bowsermen outplayed, outmanned and outplayed their weighty opponents. They rolled up 240 yards from scrimmage against the Purple's 79, and made an average gain of 3.6 yards every time the ball was flipped from center.

The staunch Bowdoin line repeated the fine work it had shown against Mass. State, and the knifing of the Purple's line by Hubbard and Hubbard continued to shred the opposing line. Bakanovsky was brilliant on the White's double reverse, particularly in the second half, calling a smashing game at end for the Purple, while Thayer made a sidekick for the Purple.

Bowdoin's scoring was as unexpected as it was sensational. Williams was in direct contact with a desperate attempt to bring the game out of the fire, with five minutes left to go.

Then the White backfield went into action, Hubbard, Richardson and Bakanovsky alternated in carrying the ball to three straight first downs on the eight yard line. Then Richardson walloped the line for four more.

PRESIDENT'S GATE LACKS NAME-PLATE

Save for the still-lacking brass name-plates, the new 1907 Memorial Gateway to the second play by Harvard 54 to 0, Dartmouth 42 to 0, Williams 50 to 0 and defeated M. I. T., 9 to 0.

With the first state games following soon, Bowdoin started off auspiciously by thumping Bates 62 to 0. The following year they trounced Colby 66 to 0, and Maine 12 to 10. They extended their winning streak for seven years when they lost a State game until 1897, when Colby won finally 10 to 6.

Bowdoin continued to march in the rank and file of college football teams after that until 1920, when they turned out the only undefeated team in the East. They trounced Tufts 20 to 0, Maine 14 to 7, Colby 18 to 6, Bates 14 to 0, Trinity 9 to 0 and Williams, the eternal nemesis, 0 to 0.

Herbert Ross Brown, Bowdoin's dynamic English professor was the principal speaker from the Art Building rostrum last Friday night when three hundred students turned out for one of the biggest football rallies held in years.

He told of Coach Charlie Bowser's undergraduate days, when the Polar Bear mentor was one of America's great backs on the Pittsburgh team.

President Sills broke a two year precedent and appeared in person at the rally, urging the undergraduates to continued and greater support of the fighting team.

DRINK TAKES TOLL FROM EVERY CLASS

Points Out Three Everyday Evils: Of the World, Flesh, Devil

Prohibition came forward as a vital topic last Sunday, as President Sills made a partial condemnation of the Eighteenth Amendment in his chapel talk.

Deplored the effects of over-indulgence in undergraduates, the President declared: "In every graduating class during the past few years there have been two or three members whose lives have been ruined because they succumbed to the temptation of drink."

We are concerned primarily with temptations of the devil. The first temptation in academic life is the desire to get ahead by any means.

In any academic body, went on the President, there is a strong feeling of selfishness. The desire to get ahead is a temptation in academic life.

Another temptation of the devil, dishonesty, assails us both in intellect and spirit. We tend to cut corners and, although there are a few exceptions, there are very few who do not.

YEATS LECTURE TO OPEN INSTITUTE OF MODERN LITERATURE

Noted Irish Poet With Lady Gregory Organizer of Abbey Theatre

Bowdoin's Institute of Literature, held so successfully for the first time in 1925, will be renewed this year, from April 4 to April 17.

"We desire to have come to the college a number, ten or more, of the best creators and critics of literature that we can secure. It is hoped that the students with literary gifts will be stimulated in developing them and that all will gain a wider sympathy and keener discrimination in regard to the present phase of our literature."

The committee in charge of this Institute of Modern Literature is as follows: Wilmore Brookings Mitchell, Litt.D., chairman; Frederic Willis Brown, Ph.D., Stanley Perkins Chase, Ph.D.; Charles Harold Gray, Ph.D.; Herbert Ross Brown, A.M.; Philip Sawyer Wilder, B.S., Ed.M.; Herbert Weidler Hartman, Jr., Ph.D.; Ralph de Somer Childs, A.B.

Mr. William Butler Yeats's present tour is especially timely in view of the fact that the Abbey Theatre Irish Players are spending thirty weeks in the United States, presenting their famous Irish plays to audiences in nearly every large city from Boston to Kansas City.

Vol. LXII Wednesday, October 12, 1932. No. 11

THE ORIENT favors and urges serious consideration of the following: a senior dormitory, a new classroom building, a covered hockey rink, a better road through the campus, cheer faculty secretary of the firmness of publications, separation of the Bowdoin Alumnae from the Bowdoin Publishing Company; student representation on the Blanket Tax Committee; a longer reading period, closer contacts through published debates and student reference between Student Council and undergraduates, reorganization of requirements for degrees.

The Test
On two successive Saturdays now a magnificent Bowdoin team has won. It has been a team not of erratic brilliance but of fighting grit and staying power. It has been a team able to deliver a punch throughout the game, not in one quarter only. It is a team which will give a good account of itself in the hard games ahead. Behind this team the Bowdoin student body has stood enthusiastically. In well attended rallies they have promised loyalty. On Whittier Field they have given hearty support to their coach and their representatives.

Thus far Bowdoin has shown this kind of loyalty. And the team has proven its worth. Before the season is over both are to face a test, perhaps several. It may be that the team will meet bad breaks and have to overcome them to win. It may be that it will lose a game and have to come back fighting to win the next, or the next after that. And the students may have to stand wholeheartedly behind a team which is fighting gallantly against greater odds. It may have to face a defeat and turn out the next week with undiminished acknowledgement of the fight and determination of the team. But in some form the test will come.

The present Bowdoin team has the kind of fight that keeps going when the tide is against it as well as when the tide is with it. From them we turn our attention with not unjustified confidence in the grit of its supporters. A college spirit can be great as well as its team. We have all heard stories told with pride of student bodies who with bared heads stand up to cheer their team which has gone down fighting, giving everything it has. And a team which continues to fight, which has behind it a student body maintaining its loyalty no matter what the outcome, will not lose for long, if at all. In such a college are the elements of greatness. We have that kind of a team. Whether or not we have that kind of support is the individual business of the students themselves. We, each one of us, have to decide. No one will do it for us. We must face the test.

The Bowdoin Forum

Nearly a year ago a group of progressive undergraduates, realizing that a growing provincialism was dulling the minds of Bowdoin students, organized the Forum, a liberal club, whose purpose should be the stimulation of student thought on problems of world importance. They saw that undergraduate interests had previously been limited to campus affairs. They saw the graduating classes setting out into the world with strong convictions on college life, but with not the slightest opinion on international and national policies. This cavity in the student mind the Forum undertook to fill, assisted by a sense of mental responsibility which had been conceived in the undergraduates under the stresses of the business depression.

In general we can say that the Forum was successful. The organization met with the approval of all students and with heartfelt enthusiasm on the part of a few. A series of speakers, chosen from the campus and from neighboring cities, supplied the impetus which was needed to spur the lagging brains of the students.

This fall a new group of men are reorganizing the Forum. They have prepared a tentative program for future meetings, the first to be at an early date. In every case they have tried to meet the need and desire of the student body - the broadening influence of student discussions on world problems, conducted by some individual whose personality and conviction will arouse a keen interest in the undergraduates. Although they will select speakers whose ability can not be questioned, they believe that the value of future meetings will lie rather in the individual opinions voiced by the students than in any particular doctrine which the speaker may propound.

College authorities have asserted that the past year has exhibited a new feeling of responsibility in the student - not a responsibility for himself but a broader interest in social and political controversies. This tendency was manifest last year in a marked improvement in scholastic records, in the renewed vigor shown by a number of the older student organizations, and in the movement that resulted in the organization of the Bowdoin Forum. Sincerely do we hope that this spirit will be even more active this year. The emotional morale of the college is at present riding high on a wave of gridiron success. Let the mental morale rise to equal heights, manifested as it will be by the interest shown in the Forum. Conducted by the students, designed to prevent the inroads of provincialism, the Forum affords a much needed medium for enlightenment and debate on problems of greatest importance to all.

WHIMSY'S JAUNT TO POLE DASHED AFTER HEARING MacMILLAN And Rockwell Kent's N by E Refuted in Interview with Commander.

We have decided that everyone in college ought at sometime between now and February to sit in on one of Commander MacMillan's lectures. That is of course if you aren't taking the course - the exact title of which escapes us at the moment. Also all professors ought to be made to observe and closely explore's method of lecturing. The voice is clear and easy, the manner and personality of the speaker are delightful, and the hour very short. Mr. MacMillan tells delightful stories; thrilling ones, too; about falling down crevices and coming out very chilly eight years later. This is the first summer out of the last thirteen that he has not spent in the Arctic lands. But he sails next June 20th again. We're very glad he is spending this semester here. Next spring he plans to lecture in the Middle West and on the coast. Then, as we've said, he leaves for Greenland's icy mountains. We may never see him again. "D'you know," we spoke up, "Really, is it worth this sacrifice of lives, this very dangerous business among the Eskimos, white wolves and foxes, four kinds of seals, musk oxen and reindeer?" "The actual value is debatable. To the ordinary man it seems useless waste. Yet it is interesting and educational, and valuable to such people as geologists, ornithologists, zoologists and anthropologists. We discovered the largest seam of coal yet found up there. That meant that unimaginable years ago there was a tropical climate up there, no ice, no snow." "Yes, and those interbred Eskimos you found, that tribe where the husband rents out his wife, and everyone is his or her uncle or aunt: what of them? Aren't they exceptional to medical history?" "They are very strong and healthy. The trouble with inbreeding here is that it develops the weak, diseased characteristics of the parents in the child. Where there is only strength, without disease or defect, inbreeding is not only safe but it strengthens the race. This system wouldn't work in the United States, though, we decided. Too personal, wife might object. Shows how civilization is not always best. These Eskimo people live like animals. And are happy." "We were glad to be backed up in our belief that Mr. Rockwell Kent's book, N by E, was very bogus. A lot of lies. Not well illustrated (to our tastes) either. They say Mr. Kent's pilot and crew had a hard time with him; had to sock him down every now'n again. Nor will we go to the North Pole soon, either. Far as we can see the only reason people go is so that they can be glad they got back alive. We can go out here on the Bath road of a night and be glad to get back alive. Cheaper, too." "Coach Roly Cobb's Jayvees swing into action in a practice game against the Brunswick high outfit. Coach Cobb will send his power backfield of McNutt, Fox, and Hayden into action, probably. A week from Monday is the date set for Alexander Speaking trials, open to the three lower classes. A prize of $45 for the winner, and $30 for the runner-up makes the contest particularly attractive.

BOWDOIN GRADUATE WRITES "DOWN EAST" Is a Third Volume of New England Verse by Wilbert Snow '07

An authentic interpretation of New England in its many moods, a vivid balladic narrative of the rugged lands of the North, is Wilbert Snow's new volume of poetry, published late last month. He has captured the beauty of the sea and the simplicity of New England people in his lyric poetry and sonnets. The book is from the facie pen of a man whose early work - many of them - have found permanent places in verse anthologies. The first edition, in advance of publication, was nearly sold out. Mr. Snow, who is a Bowdoin man of the class of 1907, has won praise from leading critics for his earlier "Maine Coast" and "Inner Harbor," so the appearance of his new work is a literary event of some importance. He has also contributed to Harriet Monroe's Poetry Magazine, Saturday Review of Literature, The Forum, Nation, and others. He was born in Maine, of old Yankee sea-captain stock, and grew up in rustic sea-coast villages, studied at Bowdoin, and later taught in Alaska, Oregon and Indiana. He is now professor of English literature at Wesleyan University at Middletown, where he has been a member of the faculty for the past ten years.

CHOOSE 3 MEN TO DEBATE MT. ALLISON

"That the principle of competition has retarded the progress of the world" was the mooted point in the try-outs for the Mount Allison debate Monday evening. President Albert S. Davis of the Council, Stephen F. Leo, and William W. Pearnside have been selected to compete. Both Davis and Leo are members of the senior class, while Pearnside is a sophomore. Speeches against the Mt. Allison oral dualists will consist of five minute direct arguments, with three minute refutation. Davis has seen three years variety debating competition, while this will be both Pearnside's and Leo's first big-league debating.

(Continued from page 1) time to study for an impending exam. It is much easier to hand in another's work rather than our own. This sort of dishonesty is constantly met with out in the world. There is an appalling amount of dishonesty in banks and in business houses, increased considerably by the stress of the past few years. Although this dishonesty is not entirely intentional, it is only natural that when a man is caught in a tight corner he will do things that he will not stoop to under normal conditions. In an academic community especially there is temptation of irreligion. This is not merely the omission of church-going, but the omission of the entire spiritual side of life. Spiritual Faith Necessary These problems are only slightly different from the problems which assail all men. Although we have all heard people say that a man can be good without religion, there is no way to meet temptations without spiritual faith, religious exercise, and reliance in some power greater than oneself. In college life, concluded the President, we fail to see the importance of religious spirit, thereby missing a large part of our education.

22 FROSH REPORT FOR ORIENT BOARD

Twenty-two freshman candidates assembled in the Orient office at the Meukon Union last Thursday evening in the first meeting after the call for candidates. M. A. Perry, editor-in-chief, gave a talk to the newcomers congratulating them in having chosen the Orient as an extra-curricular activity. Then J. C. Freeman and James E. Bassett outlined briefly the duties of the aspirants and informed them of various traditions of the paper. The members of the class of '36 who applied are as follows: Robert P. Ashley, Zeta Psi; Thompson C. Baxter, A.T.O.; Francis S. Benjamin, Jr., A.D.; William F. Carnes, John Chapman, T.D.; George F. Chisholm, D.U.; John Davis, A.T.O.; Warren A. MORSE IS SELECTED QUILL BUSINESS MGR.

Edward H. Morse '33, has been appointed business manager of this year's Quill. Morse was an assistant manager of the Bowdoin Publishing Company in his junior year. His assistants will probably be named some time this week. Immediately they will start to comb the countryside for advertisements.

Production of the actual literary side of the Quill is being withheld until enough advertising space has been sold to assure the financial success of the magazine.

Albert S. Davis, Jr., the Editor-in-Chief, expects to call a meeting of the staff at an early date. He plans to have four issues of the Quill, the first of which should be ready sometime in December.

$200 OFFERED FOR HISTORY THESIS

With a $200 award in view many aspiring essayists will undoubtedly compete this year for the Class of 1875 American History Prize, awarded annually to the author of the best essay on a designated topic in American History. Contestants have their choice of two subjects on which to write, papers being due about May 25 of next year.

These subjects are: (1) Railroad and Steamship along the Maine Coast, 1818-1875; (2) Woodrow Wilson's Policy toward the World War, 1914-1917. Last year's prize went to Barry Timson, a member of the graduating class for his writing on "The Progressive Movement." George Pettengill '33 received honorable mention with an essay on "Speculation in Maine Lands."

The judges have not yet been selected, but will be men of broad historical knowledge, not however, Bowdoin faculty members. Professor Kirkland is the faculty adviser to whom all contestants are urged to turn for advice.

'Whither the Coal Cars?' Queries Loyal Son of Bowdoin's Old-School

We note with sadness in our hearts that Bowdoin is losing its romanticism. Even this venerable institution, exalting antiquity, tradition, and conservatism from the ivy-covered walls of its imposing edifices, is becoming modern and practical. The latest atrocity is the installation of oil as the college fuel.

The Orient correspondent, assigned last week to this subject, chortles with apparent relish that "steam made in most modern and efficient way will be sent into Mem. Hyde, and the rest."

Oil is expected to produce an appreciable net saving as time goes on, and "Via trucks from Portland oil will be kept pouring into the twenty-thousand gallon reservoir". A son of Bowdoin condones the inauguration of this monster because it is modern, efficient, and economical! Just imagine! Oil trucks, hoses, pipe lines! Whither the Coal Cars?

Where are the electric coal cars whose majestic rumbblings on the track behind the heating plant have thrilled the occupants of North Winthrop for so many years? Where the grinding of wheels and the screeching of brakes which so agreeably distracted them from studies? Where the delightful odor emanating from nearby smokstacks? All are gone.

Will the Winthropites be without the coal dust and cinders which filter through their windows to cover their books and furniture, infect their hair, and lodge in their finger-nails? Will they now have to watch oil squirted through a hose from a truck to a tank instead of the intricate switching of the electric from the Bath-Brunswick line to the spur track, instead of the thrilling unloading of the coal which has so delighted them from time immemorial?

Our answer is No!—not if there is any romance left in the souls of Bowdoin men. There will be a meeting of all poetic souls in the coal car behind the heating plant at midnight, October 32 to protest against the oil outrage. Come dressed in white flannels. The poetry of coal and the coal car shall not pass from the Bowdoin campus.

CURTIS PORTRAIT IS ART ADDITION

A portrait of exceptional interest to Bowdoin students, of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, one of Bowdoin's most prominent benefactors, has recently been placed in Sculpture Hall of the Walker Art Museum.
This work was done by Joseph R. Kahill, a Portland artist, who has incorporated in the picture the character and distinction of Mr. Curtis. Mr. Kahill is already well known to Bowdoin students by his other portraits among the college collection.

October 21 will be the opening day of an exhibition of aquatints shown by Mr. Gordon Dunthorne who, on the same day, will be in the gallery to answer questions concerning aquatints. In the evening Mr. Dunthorne will talk informally on this type of painting. All students and the general public are cordially invited. Admission to the exhibition and the lecture is free.

Three Houses Hold Dances After Tufts Game Saturday With Night-Affair in Union

Three fraternities will show hospitality Saturday afternoon with tea dances following the Bowdoin-Tufts football game. Psi Upsilon has combined with Theta Delta Chi, and each will entertain in the Theta Delt charge house to the strains of Lloyd, Raffell's snappy band from Lewiston.

Alpha Tau Omega will also be holding an afternoon dance, while Saturday night, from 8:30 until midnight the Polar Bears will again swing into dance tempo for the post-game Union dance. Mr. Don Lancaster is in charge of the Union affair's arrangements.

On the fourth of April, Mr. Yeats is to speak on the second of November. The general subject is to be understood in the most inclusive sense and may comprise social and other backgrounds, affiliations with other countries, and the literature of the past in its bearing upon the present.

It is intended that no exhaustive survey of the subject or any part of it should be given; that general ideas and tendencies should be treated, preferably, in an allusive manner; and that personal opinions and concrete instances should be kept in the foreground. Speakers are invited to develop for the occasion whatever topic, or piece of literary work, is engaging their main interest at this time.

Round-Table Conferences
Each speaker is asked to give a public lecture and to hold the next day a conference to which are admitted a limited number of students who have shown particular interest in the field represented by the individual in charge of the group. A real benefit to the student body can be expected through these informal sessions.

The audience at the public lecture will be composed partly, and perhaps largely, of students and faculty of the College, but it will also include people from the village of Brunswick and from neighboring towns and cities who are interested in literature. The conference will be simply an hour's coming together for informal discussion, of questions arising from the lecture and of any further matters the speaker may care to bring forward.

The speaker is requested to let the college know his subject as soon as possible, to give up a choice of several topics to aid in arranging a preliminary program. It is hoped to make this a notable event in the life of the college.

Towle is Named Debate Council Manager at June Meeting

Last June, the Debating Council held its final meeting of the year and elected Albert S. Davis '33, president. Seven members of the council were present. They were Paul Sullivan '35, Frederick Burton '34, Lincoln Smith '32, Harold Tipping '35, Carl Olson '34, George Towle '33 and Chandler Redman '34. Mr. Burton held the proxies of Edward Uehlein '34 and Stephen Deane '34.

The first business followed a motion of Lincoln Smith to abolish the use of proxies in subsequent meetings. The motion was passed by a unanimous vote. There followed a discussion on the advisability of electing two assistant managers instead of one. It was moved by Sullivan that the Debating Council hereafter elect two assistant managers for the college year 1932-1933. The motion was passed.

The Council then proceeded to elect Samuel Davis '33 president for the coming year. Towle and Deane were nominated for the position of Business Manager with the vote favoring Towle. Nominees for Assistant Business Manager were Paul Sullivan '35, Ward Fearnside '35 and Frederick Burton '34. On the third ballot, Burton and Sullivan were elected as assistant managers.

A motion by Burton to the effect that the minutes of the meeting be published in an early issue of the Orient in the fall was passed. The Council acted favorably on a motion to admit Charles Chalmers '33 to the Council in recognition of service rendered.

75 COUPLES ATTEND FIRST UNION DANCE

Seventy-five couples attended the first post-game Union dance last Saturday night, and danced from eight-thirty until midnight. The next affair will be this week, after the Tufts grid fry.

Chaperons for the dance were Professor and Mrs. Boyd W. Bartlett, and Professor and Mrs. Edward C. Kirkland. The attending couples came to the Union after the afternoon tea dances, held at the Alpha Delta Phi, and the Sigma Nu houses.

The Bowdoin Polar Bears, all-student dance unit, furnished up the necessary syncope for the affair.

The people should elect Hoover rather than Roosevelt for president." Try-outs will be held Monday night in the Debating Council room in Hubbard Hall.

Debating for Hoover are Hagar, Woodworth, Charles and Swift. Those who will contend for Roosevelt in the trials are Cope, Ross, Pelletier and Solar.

Soph trials postponed
Sophomore try-outs for the debating contest between the classes have been postponed until next Tuesday night, also in the Debating Room, library.

"GROWLER" EDITORS POLISH MATERIAL OF COMING ISSUE

Staff Meeting Reveals Lack of Cartoonists for Comic Magazine

Ominous snarls of the "Growler," Bowdoin's humorous quarterly, are daily grating more audible as its staff grooms the first issue to rumble at the heels of the U. of M. football field on November 5.

At a staff meeting a week ago Wednesday, October 5, the general policy of the magazine was outlined, new ideas considered, features discussed, and assignments given out. A lack of cartoonists was evident, so any cartoonist minded individual should file himself immediately to 13 Appleton Hall. All drawings should be completed by October 17, while all written material is due the 22nd.

Those concerned with the editorial end of the "Growler" are as follows: Fred Demillon '31; seniors, Bernard Crystal, Albert Davis, Debes Evans, Stephen Leo, Allan Perry, William Perry, Robert Sperry; juniors, Russell Dakin, James Freeman, Joseph Ham, John Hickox '34; John Baker, Wyman Holmes, Donald Smith, Harold Tipping, Donald Usher '35; Roger Smith '36 will take care of the business management.

TEA DANCES AT A. D. AND SIGMA NU HOUSES

Following the Williams game, two of the fraternity houses on campus held tea dances, which a large number attended. At the Sigma Nu house, Ernie George's orchestra furnished the music, and Mrs. W. L. Haskell and Mrs. J. A. McLean were chaperones.

From 4:30 to 7:30 another tea-dance was given by the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity. The hostesses were Mrs. John Winchell and Mrs. C. T. Burnett. Music for dancing was provided by Earl Hanson's orchestra.

College Fall Relieves All Bates Freshies From Bules Causing Bank Servitude

Bates College, minus fraternities, has always had a problem with its freshmen; just how to keep the yearlings under control. But a late edict taken directly from a college-wide poll has abolished all fresh rules. That means no garnet "sinks", no green socks or neckwear, and no campus servitude or discipline.

Fresh women merely have to wear a green hair ribbon, symbolic of their class, until Thanksgiving; but in addition, they will be denied the ulterior pleasures of co-education, in that they may not ride with a status man except to certain dances, nor may they entertain or walk with a Bates man.

RALLY PLANS INCLUDE BONFIRE FOR BATES TILT

While last definite plans for Friday night's rally have not been completed, Don Egan, publicity expert for the cheering squad and band, has announced that it will probably be held on the Art Museum steps as last week.

The next bonfire will be before the Bates game, away next week. The plans are to send off the Polar Bear eleven in a burst of spirit, so roving box-collectors have been furtively gathering tinder together for a week from Friday night.

SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

Best line of the week (headline in Bates Student): Yale Holds Bates to 0-0 tie. Subtle, Mr. Editor, subtle.

Several of the home-state men among the 50 odd Fresh grid candidates under Dean Lancaster came up with good reputations, as witness Wellman from Lewiston High and Fearon from Thornton Academy...

D. U. looks like a certain repeater in the annual interfraternity X-country grid, especially if Art Fox, ineligible for varsity competition, runs for his house team.

Williams turned out to be a stubborn loser and not at all the set-up that pre-game optimists would have you believe. The Purple aerial attack kept the secondary defensive on the jump, yet was directly responsible for Bowdoin's victorious march...

That the Bates eleven which fought on better than even terms with Yale should a week later come to grief in the Tufts Oval is surely a gridiron paradox. Sporting experts will be more than cautious when they predict the Bowdoin-Tufts result.

The rather mysterious demise of interfraternity touch football is probably for the best interests of Bowdoin's varsity sports. Only one feature of last year's play is missing, the fraternity as an incentive for rivalry, as the sport still thrives with teams A, B, C, D, and so on.

FOUR TEAMS NAMED UNDER NEW TOUCH FOOTBALL SYSTEM

Forty Men Report for Sport Now Under Intra-mural Management

With a system excellent that of any previous year, the revolutionizing of touch football is rapidly progressing as almost two score proponents of the sport indulge in contests three times a week on the Delta and Pickard playing fields.

Under the direction of the intra-mural manager, Gordon E. Gillett '34, four teams composed principally of Freshmen and Sophomores have been organized. The captains of the teams are Homer R. Cilley '35, Robert W. Breed '35, Charles W. Lewis '36, and William T. Hodges '36.

Two games are played at the same time, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 3.45, one on the Delta and the other at Pickard Field. The schedule is so arranged that each team plays every other team once a week. There are seven men on a team, and the rules are those of last year's Interfraternity League.

Almost all of the thirty-five men out for touch football are of the two lower classes. Since juniors and seniors are not required to take athletics, there are only a few out for it, but all who wish to participate will be welcome.

Varsity Road-race with Amherst Here will Renew Ancient Rivalry

Renewing a cherished athletic rivalry, nearly a half-century old, Amherst College will send her cross-country team to Brunswick to do battle with Jack Magee's harriers on Wednesday, November second. The agreement stipulates a four and one-half mile course, and Bowdoin will journey to Amherst for a return meeting next year.

To facilitate training, Coach Magee has divided the varsity squad into two groups whose makeup may vary from time to time as improvement is shown. Group A consists in present of Frederick W. Burton '34, Neil H. LaBelle '35, Elmer Hutchinson '35, Jack Morris '34, David Morris '33, Vincent Nowlis '35, H. Nelson Tibbetts '34, Thomas Uniacke, Jr. '35, and Ned Packard '33.

Captains Elected. David Morris was elected at an early season meeting to captaincy of the road team. He is a veteran of last year's varsity, and scored low in every meet. Robert Prouty was chosen last week to lead the freshman harriers, and Gordon Gillett assumed at that time his post as manager of the varsity road team.

The team will be away to a good start this season in new equipment. At their first competition, the Harvard Intercollegiate Open meet, the Dean Nixon and Professor Kendrick, finalists in the "Record" tournament, will stage an all Bowdoin affair at Pickard Field this afternoon to determine the tennis champion of Brunswick.

Bowdoin entries will appear in white training suits with a yoke of black across the shoulders and black lettering on the chest. Varsity men have been equipped with new cross-country shoes with rubber heels, a model well adapted to the requirements of road racing.

DEAN AND KENDRICK DISPUTE NET CROWN

Dean Nixon and Professor Kendrick, finalists in the "Record" tournament, will stage an all Bowdoin affair at Pickard Field this afternoon to determine the tennis champion of Brunswick.

To enter the finals the Dean eliminated Mr. Edwin Hill, who had an impressive record behind him. The Dean swept the first set, 6-0. Then, after a lapse which netted 5-7 against him, he came back and revived the score of 6-0, to win the match handily.

"I fully expect to be defeated", was the Dean's laconic remark when the question of the championship match was put to him.

Colorado is Haunt of Giant Bird Described by Speaker; Rare Birds Shown

Unusually clear movie close-ups of Colorado bird life were the feature of the first Mayhaw lecture of the year, "Haunts of the Golden Eagle," given by Dr. A. M. Bailey, director of the Chicago Academy of Sciences, in Memorial Hall, Friday night.

In introducing the speaker, President Sills lauded Dr. Alfred Gross' selection of the lecturer. Dr. Bailey, before showing his pictures, expressed his preference for research in Colorado, since that state contained a larger variety of birds than practically any other, and outlined the trip described in this current lecture, a trip which he began with two assistants a year ago last May, on the prairies, and concluded on the crown of the Rockies four months later.

Shots of Prairies

In the opening motion pictures, some excellent "shots" were shown of the sparrow-like hawk, nesting high in the cacti of the prairie. Following this reel, lantern slides of the natural beauties of the lowlands were presented. To many, the most interesting pictures of the evening were those of two mirth-provoking young horned owls, not sufficiently aged to have acquired the omniscient look of their parents. Round the neck, pocket hoppers were shown; the prey of these prairie owls. Upon visiting a nearby reservoir, long-necked herons were found nesting in the branches of the surrounding trees. Leaving the valley and ascending the mountains, the party passed through fields of primroses which dotted the landscape. It was on this day that Dr. Bailey again encountered a large rattlesnake, which he photographed from an astonishing proximity. In this dissection from the theme of birds, interestingly, some birds were shown which were constructed with such skill that dynamite was necessary to open up the stream, allowing it to pursue its normal course.

Rare Bird Photo

Two unusual scenes were revealed in the closing reels, preceding which, lantern slides of the famous snow-bird, the crest of Pike's Peak, were exhibited. The first was of an albino falcon, perched high on a ledge, eyeing hungrily the prairie dogs below. The second, an infant golden eagle devouring a rabbit which had been supplied him by his mother.

The timber line having been passed, the researchers gained the summit of the mountain, where they captured the rarest photograph of the expedition.

After extensive searching, the camera saw a nest of the Rocky Mountain borer, a bird which, Dr. Bailey asserted, had been viewed by less than a dozen men. This clever bird lives by his ability to steal from his more laborious neighbors, but takes pains to conceal his own abode from similar raids.

In the final scenes of the lecture, the chameleon-like ptarmigan was disclosed, the eggs of which were so hard to detect that after Dr. Bailey's tobacco-chewing assistant had searched fruitfully for them, some were found hours later with tobacco juice on them. These ptarmigan are gifted with an ability to change their color so perfectly that they are barely discernible against the background of nature.

BOWDOIN MEN TO BE PRESENT AT 26TH M. T. A. CONVENTION

When the thirtieth annual convention of the Maine Teachers' Association is called to order on October twenty-sixth at Bangor it will find many Bowdoin men among its delegates.

James A. Hamlin '00 of Sanford is first vice-president of the organization while George K. Gardner '01 and Percy S. Turner '19 are members of the Committee on Legislation.

Dean Paul Nixon will be the speaker at the annual banquet of the Bowdoin Teachers' Club to be held in Bangor during the convention. Professor Herbert Hartman will address the Department of English choosing as his topic "Red-Perching," Professor Rowland H. Cobb is chairman of the Department of Physical Education.

Of the nine past presidents of the Maine Teachers' Association seven of them have been Bowdoin graduates.

ATTENTION !!! ATTENTION !!! ATTENTION !!!

The presidents of the various fraternities have been supplied with ballots for a campus straw vote upon the candidates for president. The purpose of the vote is explained more fully in an article on this page.

- 1 Check opposite the party of the candidate for whom you wish to vote.
- 2 Sign your name. This is to prevent inaccuracy in counting. The names will not be used except for this purpose. Any ballot without the name will not be counted.
- 3 Give your ballot to the president of your fraternity or if you are a non-fraternity man leave it in the ballot box by the office in the Moulton Union.
- 4 All vote. Get your vote in by 6.00 P. M. Thursday, October 20th. Members of the faculty will be furnished with ballots and are asked to cooperate with the straw vote. They may send their ballots to the Orient in care of the Moulton Union or leave them there in person.

ORIENT CONDUCTS STRAW BALLOT HERE BY FRATERNITIES

Republican, Democratic and Socialistic Parties Represented

Of increasing interest each election time is the influence of college students upon politics. Through college newspapers and straw votes campus sentiment in many instances has been definitely expressed. The Bowdoin Orient taking a disinterested stand on the question is printing in this issue a ballot. Its purpose is to find out as accurately as possible the trend of Bowdoin student thought as regards the coming election.

In maintaining that no vote of this kind is of any value unless it be honest, the paper requests that the ballots be signed. There will be absolute secrecy in many instances and the request is that a stuffed ballot must be avoided. Votes will be checked off on a list.

The Presidents of the various houses have been requested to provide for the collection of the ballots from their respective fraternities and a ballot box in the Orient has been provided for the non-fraternity group.

Colby Votes For Hoover

Of interest is the result of the recent straw vote at Colby. Of the 405 votes President Hoover received 265. The surprise of the ballot was the comparative strength of Norman Thomas. The socialistic candidate was voted for by Roosevelt by one vote, Roosevelt receiving 70 and Thomas 69.

The poll itself aroused a great deal of interest in Waterville. Clubs supporting the various parties formed and proposals spread in the political fashion. To quote the Colby Echo:

"Speeches, meetings, mud-slinging, and even cigars have been in order. The big bosses have laid awake nights figuring their possible power on the campus."

Of the 405 votes cast 247 were from men, 133 from women, and 25 from the faculty. Hoover polled 150 from men, 99 from women, and seventeen from the faculty. Roosevelt received 49, 19 and 2 in the same order and Thomas 48, 15, and 6.

College vs. Town Brawls Were Popular In '90's Says Edwards

Drawing from his recollections of the last forty years Captain William B. Edwards, Brunswick chief of police, described to an Orient reporter the more feudal days in Bowdoin history. Thirty-six years ago, according to Mr. Edwards, no Bowdoin man could cross the railroad tracks without risk of mayhem. PEACE SUBJECT OF DOUGLASS' CHAPEL TALK

Secretary of National War Prevention Council, Urges Strength of Purpose

SEES NECESSITY OF WORLD COOPERATION

International Relief Plan Will Soave Depression, Says Speaker

Stressing the importance of international ideas, Gaylord W. Douglass, New England Secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, spoke in Chapel last Sunday, and urged the student body to greater strength of purpose, character, spirit, and initiative. He compared the world today to a ship at sea with a broken rudder. Men must be trained in the colleges, he said, to lead the less intelligent masses in their international relations. His leadership is a huge task, requiring the best efforts of able and good men.

Three things must be borne in mind, said Mr. Douglass, if one would in this age be a real citizen: First, a sense of world unity; second, the necessity for world cooperation; and third, the significance of world organization. One must realize that the interdependence of one country, of one part of the world, on every other part. After all, there is but one community—the world. He compared the body to the world, pointing out the uselessness of one hand (or one country) without the body (or the world).

Continuing in this vein, he demonstrated the futility of, say, Belgium shutting itself off from the rest of the world. He pointed out that in any country, even the Union of Soviet Republics or the United States, in its present advanced state, he would, or barely able, to exist alone. The peace of the world, he said, one nation depends on the peace and prosperity of another.

There is now a world-wide depression which is trying its own panacea for this depression. In lieu of these more than sixty remedies, how much better it were there one international relief plan.

Even Senator Borah approves of world organization. No matter in what language spoken, Borah thinks this organization essential to world peace and prosperity. Borah is well known abroad, his speeches being for the most part printed in full in many foreign languages. He understands foreign relations, he has a splendid conception of the difficulties of world peace, and yet he has never been to Europe. More men of his calibre are needed.

The church, the state, the local government are all organized, but why not the world, Mr. Douglass demanded. Some institutions are needed to minister to world needs. This institution will not be the work of plodding, contented, middle-aged men, but the work of youth, vigorous and unafraid of the work, youth is alert.

Green, a Yale man, was sent to the Geneva Conference to represent the college men and younger workers in the United States. Mr. Douglass quoted in part from his (Green's) speech delivered at Geneva:

"The other speakers have much at stake; we (students) have more, for literally we are fighting for our lives. I stand before you as an attorney for the world."

COLLEGE HERO TYPE NOT ALWAYS REAL STUFF SAYS BROWN

Prof. Brown Describes as Ideal a Student He Once Knew

Mentioning that this was the day for visiting fathers here at Bowdoin, Professor Herbert Ross Brown spoke of his chapel talk Saturday morning with a reference to our rivalry of forty-three years' standing with the Amherst College. He spoke of the well-known college hero type as one whose fame is likely to be short lived,—gained only after a long apprenticeship during the first three years. This freshman year, he said, is the time when a student had best describe himself as a college hero. Prof. Brown considered a real college hero.

To illustrate that point, Professor Brown described as a college hero worthy of the name a young man who had no athletic letter. He never swore or smoked every day, he wrote a long letter to his mother. He was, moreover, a talented musician, a poet of some ability, and clever in the art of fencing. His record showed straight A's for two years. By diligence and conscientious work he raised himself from sixteenth to thirtieth place in his class by the end of his freshman year. He was not a student leader, but his influence was not what it should be. There are, indeed, few freshmen who would dare suggest such a thing.

After such a description, Professor Brown was sure his listeners would say, "Ah, the ideal of a chapel talk!" On the contrary he assured them that the ideal he had described was a real person, a hero who did not stand out as one superior to his classmates, but rather as an all-around good sports man, who by virtue of his application gained real merit from his college life. "All who can take this example show real heroism," concluded Professor Brown. "That is how real heroism is made."

Heavy Tufts Jumbo Deadlocked By White's Stubborn Defensive Play; Bowsermen Prep for Series Games

Colby First White Hurdle; No Setups Expected in Three Series Games

BATES LINE, MAINE BACKFIELD, FEARED

White Mules Expected to be Barometer for Bowdoin Chances

Standing as only undefeated team in Maine with the curtain about to go up on the 42nd annual football series, the Bowdoin pigskin pugilists look forward to playing the star part in one of the most bitterly contested Maine conference battles ever waged. Four strong teams will come to grips for the privilege of wearing the coveted flannel that now rests with Coach Lancaster, an achievement that has shaded brilliant early-season forms and convinced the critics that they are not set-ups.

First on the list of hurdles that the Polar Bears must step over comes Colby. The Waterville boys, inactive last Saturday out of respect to a deceased professor, have lost only one game this season, a close game with Amherst in which they failed to take advantage of their scoring opportunities. In their two other frayas they have decisively trounced the Coast Guard Academy and Trinity.

With a fast line and a deceptive backfield, the Mules appear to be anything but an easy foe. Coach Eddie Roudy has whipped a team into shape that appears to be every bit as good as the aggregation that trounced Bowdoin last year, 32-6. The Peabody brothers, Bob Violette, Jack Locke, Johnny Alden, and a world of replacements make the backfield a constant threat, with a hardy line to open holes. Hersey, Malcolm, Dexter, Wilson and Foley all stand ready to take advantage.

Although the Mule is considered to be less potent than the other two Maine squads, it packs plenty of punch in every department. A 19-7 thrashing of Bates, and a 21-0 trouncing of Coast Guard Academy fill the win column of the Waterville boys, while a 18-6 defeat handed to them by Amherst is the only blemish in the schedule.

Waterville First

With no injuries suffered against Tufts in the latest game of the Polar Bear schedule, the Waterville squad is at full strength. A stern scrimmaging drill and thorough study of the Colby strong points will be Coach Lancaster's specialty in this week's practice, with the subs working the Colby formations. The

FRESHMAN TEAM TO MEET BUCKSPORT PREP NEXT FRIDAY

Ample Backfield Material Features Large Squad

An exceptionally fast backfield with plenty of reserve material is the main feature of one of the largest and heaviest freshman football squads in recent years, which is being groomed by Coach Lancaster and assistant Gordon Briggs and Dave Merrill for the opening game Oct. 21 with Bucksport at home.

Because of the number of men out under the marked concentration of candidates for certain positions, no one, not even the coaches, can at this time have a definite idea of how the team will look for the season opener.

Backfield Strong

It is, however, fairly apparent that if their present work continues, the frosh will supply next year's varsity with what this year's lacks, namely, sufficient backfield strength. The number of frosh seeking backfield posts is far in excess of that seeking other posts.

Although many of the lads come here with brilliant high and prep school records, they will go unheralded until they prove their worth here. Some already are showing up well. Among them is another promising one, can block well. Gowell comes from South Portland and was picked on the All-Maine team. Griffith, from Worcester Academy, is another promising man. Although now out with a foot injury that will keep him on the sidelines for a week or so, he started in the varsity last year. He is a ball carrying ability Lancaster is converting him into a back. Connor of Stoneham, also Massachusetts halfback, is fast and shifty. Other backs worth noting are Ferrin, from Thornton Academy; Putnam from Houlton, Me.; Linemen Drummond from Portland, Morse from Brunswick, Larkman from Dedham, Mass.; Drake from Deerfield, are also showing effectiveness in their duties.

Teams A and B

This season's squad will work under a plan similar to that of the varsity-jayvee system. There will be two teams, A and B, both playing independent schedules. Brunswick and Morse high schools are already tentatively listed to play team B. The divisions have not yet been made, but it is expected that Lancaster will decide upon the two groups by the end of this week.

Frederick W. Pickard, Chemical Tycoon, Was Leader at Bowdoin

This is the first of a series of feature articles which will cover a group of the best known benefactors of the college. They are to be published that the students may become acquainted with the names of those who have donated buildings, land, scholarship funds, etc. to Bowdoin College.

Frederick W. Pickard is a well known name in the college as a former student. He was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, college tennis champion, editor of the Orient, vice-president of E. I. Du Pont Company, and donor of Pickard Field at Brunswick. Pickard's life that should make him a figure intensely interesting to every Bowdoin man. Following in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, he matriculated at the College in 1890. Since his graduation in 1894, he has become one of Bowdoin's most distinguished sons and one of its greatest benefactors.

"His college career was far from the 'country club' type, as may be gathered from the record of his intellectual achievements. The Pray English Prize and the Keene Extemporaneous Commencement Prize fell before his able command of grammar and elocution. He was awarded the Pray Scholarship, awarded to the highest ranking man in each class from Portland High School. His activities as a scholar at Bowdoin were

BURDELL'S TRY FOR GOAL FAILS

Medford Team Hurdled Back Thrice at Goal as Polar Bear Forwards Rise to Great Heights; Fumbles Costly to White

A determined, fighting Bowdoin eleven, outplayed for three periods, lashed an attack through the Jumbo line in the final chapter that came within an ace of resulting in a score, to stem the invasion of the highly vaunted Tufts aggregation 0-0 on Whittier Field Saturday.

Fighting to complete exhaustion, the gallant band of Polar Bears staved off thrust after thrust of a reputedly superior Brown and Blue machine, and chiefly due to Hank Richardson and a great White line, mowed some tall hay on their own account.

Many times unsuccessful through Bowdoin's great line Tufts resorted to the air as was anticipated. Although the Medford aggregation did not toss a single forward against Bates, the Jumbo backfield, mindful of Bowdoin's weak defense against aerial capers in the past, uncorked a barrage of 13 air slants, one a spectacular Clayman-Grinnell heave that soared 50 yards. The Polar Bear student demonstrated acquired ability in the pass-knocking-down department, however, as but two of the thirteen slants were completed.

FATHERS SPEND DAY ON BOWDOIN CAMPUS AND ATHLETIC FIELD

Football Game at Whittier Field is High Water Mark of Day

Fathers' Day, an event which has come to be Bowdoin institution, was held for fourth annual time here last Saturday bringing many fathers of the freshmen to the campus. Some of them were slummi returning to the Bowdoin of a new generation.

An interesting program climaxed by the Bowdoin-Tufts football game was arranged for the fathers by Donovan D. Lancaster. From 9:00 to 9:30 the parents registered at the Moulton Union and became acquainted; following this they had an opportunity to visit the campus, the buildings, inside and out, and to attend the freshman classes.

Meeting in Union

At 11:30 the group assembled in the main lounge of Moulton Union to meet many of the faculty. Among those professors present were: Kenneth C. M. Sills, Dean Paul Nixon, Professors William A. Moody, Charles T. Burnett, Marshall P. Cram, and Thomas C. Van Cleave; Noel C. Little, Thomas L. Means, Charles H. Livingston, Edward S. Hammond and Donald B. MacMillan; Herbert R. Brown, Phillip S. Wilder, Herbert Hartman, Ralph deS. Childs, Ernest C. Helmreich, and Dr. Henry L. Johnson. At 12:00 o'clock Donovan D. Lancaster summoned them to an excellent dinner.

In the afternoon, accompanied by sons, they thronged the grandstand at Whittier Field to witness the battle between Bowdoin and Tufts. After the game some of the fathers whose sons had pledged to a fraternity visited the houses and had supper there to round off an enjoyable day.

When the ball is brought out to the 20 yard line Richardsonbuffs the middle of the line for three yards and with head forward Hank bares away at the Medford punter. The ball, being felled by McGonigle, Hubard carries for the first time in the afternoon, and slams off three notches for a first down. A double wing back formation "Bucky" labors his way five yards to the 36. Richardson realizes four on a double reverse and then two sucking to center. First down, Bowdoin. Hubbard is snipped for no gain and Grinnell, smart Jumbo end, steps Backy for a four yard gain. Richardson kicks to Clayman and Charlie McKenney is down with the ball to half Clayman in his tracks on the Tufts 39.

Burdell Returns Kick-off 22 Yards

Clark, Brown and Blue fullback, took the opening kick-off to Charlie Burdell on the 10 yard line. Slugger Charlie side-steps the entire Tufts team save one lone safety, staggers, and bumps into McMahon on the 32. For the moment it appears that Burdell is to repeat its early advance characteristic of the Bowsermen's play in their two previous tilt at Bowdoin. Burdell picks up two off right tackle and Bannowsky scoots around left wing for six. However, on the next play Richardson nulls the subside behind the line of scrimmage, giving Tufts possession of the ball on Bowdoin's 37.

Staffon, always a Medford threat, announces the subside behind the line of scrimmage, giving Tufts possession of the ball on Bowdoin's 37. Staffon, always a Medford threat, announces the subside behind the line of scrimmage, giving Tufts possession of the ball on Bowdoin's 37.

"B-J-I" CHOSEN BY MASQUE AND GOWN AS CHRISTMAS PLAY

To inaugurate the season, Masque and Gown held a meeting in the Union on Oct. 12th, laying plans for an excellent play which promises to fete the college something above the ordinary in acting. Mr. Stephen King-Hill's play "B-J-I", a fascinating and stirring drama of the war, was selected to be presented at Christmas. The play is a splendid work that has not yet been decided upon, but the bulletin board will soon inform those who are interested in acting.

THE ORIENT favors and urges serious consideration of the following: a senior dormitory, a new classroom building, a covered hockey rink, a better road through the campus...

On Voting

Republican, Democrat, or Socialist? This week the ORIENT asks that question of the undergraduate body. Not only for the mere interest involved, but also to arouse, if possible, something of an organized consideration in the presidential election...

The cooperation of the fraternities is sought to aid in the balloting. Every effort will be made to complete the vote in a serious and honest manner. The non-fraternity men are urged to use the ORIENT blank ballot which may be cast at the Union.

The ORIENT straw ballot follows in the wake of many such movements throughout the nation revealing a somewhat surprising trend toward Norman Thomas in collegiate circles. This is unfortunate although not at all unnatural.

When we hear reports of organized political activity in other colleges, we think of the future of our country with slightly more optimism, and note with passing satisfaction these instances in contradiction to the frequent criticism placed upon the undergraduate mind. For in all truth the typical student is apathetic on political problems.

It is hoped that every student will realize the privilege of participation at the November polls. Seldom has the need for intelligent voting been so great.

Footbal

On the eve of the initial State Series test the Bowdoin football team finds itself rated on even terms, if not the favorite. The world of gridiron devotees has been forced to recognize the power of a determined, Bowser-inspired machine.

The Bowdoin eleven faces the usual two-fisted Colby team at Waterville Saturday with the proper degree of confidence. It should be needless to urge a large body of students to follow the Polar Bears to their first game on a field away from home.

Communication

To the Editor of the Orient: honestly have been incurred when local restaurants, who appear to be offering the Union competition, can give service at cheaper rates and still make a profit. Most of us who do not belong to fraternities have to watch our finances with care; therefore we are inclined to eat where food can be got the most cheaply.

Mustard and Cress

Among the choruses from the faculty, Professor Chace's glowing account of a conversation he had had at the football game. "Now, Milton Sills is a movie actor. This isn't the guy. This is Kenneth Charles Morton Sills." "I'm not sure."

Hanmy crossed up some of the boys in German 5 the other day when he waited till the end of the period before taking up the grammar work. And after they had waited around for him to pass all the sentences out to the first corner, too!

Talking about Romeo J.: "Tuk, tuk, tuk. Is that so, Mr. Such-and-Such. Too bad!"

We hear that Tommy Means is going to vote for Norman Thomas. Why Thomas? Because, we hear, he got a break with Hormie in Europe this fall.

You wouldn't think that Clara Hayes' Doberman (we mean dog) received two ribbons at a recent Portland Dog Show, but he did. And one was a blue one! Just think, boys. He's one of the best of the local males.

High lights of Billy Edwards' talk in chapel the other morning: "And remember this! Nevertheless, we haven't seen so many of the boys on the hard wood benches for a long while. And it seems Phil Wilder has a drag with Billy."

Get Billy Edwards to tell you about his gun collection some time. He has quite an arsenal of all reports.

All Russ Dakin and Mal Walker need for their Lady Fatima act now is a drum. If you want to see Walker fly through the air get them to do the act for you.

And what is this we heard about Skipper Hayden? A sailor cap and a mariner's book in the privacy of the Zeta Psi Yacht Club. And, oh yes, a bucket of briny water to dunk his feet in while he reads. Heave ho, me hearties.

And then there was the Tufts "bro" who after having his meals, sleeping in your bed, and getting confidential on your pint, assured you, especially if you lived out west somewhat that the house at Tufts was always open.

Just the same we thought they were a pretty good bunch of fellows. The Elephant and the Polar Bear were pretty fraternal between the halves. We'll take our basket-writer and the Tufts formations. Of course we have to make allowances for the lack of practice of the White outfit, but we'll take them. More Donlin sleep room all over the field with the cymbals when the rest of the band really wants to form a T. And we hear that when the new cymbals arrived Bang Leader. Marwinney insists that Morse get the right touch on his instrument before using them.

It's a cinch that all the big heads Sunday morning weren't entirely due to pride in the football team.

The song hit of the week: Pink Elephants. (All right, boys, go easy. We can't be up to par all the time.)

CUMBERLAND PREVIEWS

Three cheers, a hooray, and a couple of well nows. Grand Hotel, and the you've been hearing so much about is coming to the Cumberland on the 7th of November. It won't be long now. You'll be glad you went to see it.

Sports fans will marvel at the show Thursday, tonight, "Madison Square Garden," it is light, and it has in it, with Jack Oakie and Marion Nixon, who's the wrestler, More Donlin the old time ball player, Jack Johnson the colored champion, and one lad named Tom Sharkey, another good boxer. There are other world famous people in it, and it sounds like a show.

Friday it is to be "Phantom President." This is a comedy of good sort. Saturday another one of the "thirteen" pictures comes, "The Thirteenth Guest." We had the night of June 13, the thirteenth chair, and so on. This features Ginger Rogers.

Monday and Tuesday "The All American" comes, and it has All-American football players therein. Richard Arlen, June Clyde, for the actors.

On Wednesday Dick Dix comes, after a long absence, in "Hell's Highway," and they aren't referring to the Lewiston road.

might be eating at a far more attractive place, enjoying more appetizing food and still be saving at least fifty cents a week? Now, can you wonder that we wonder?

We have merely tried to express general and current thought upon this situation with the sincere hope that some one may perhaps take our views into consideration. We would say that since President Sills' chapel talk many of us have dined at the Union and find it somewhat improved; the new management especially seems to be trying to make the best of matters by arranging a different scale of prices and in general endeavoring to make the place more attractive.

defense, pleading for a reprieve. It is any generation which will be wiser upon to surrender all we consider worth while in life, in order to become targets for machine-gun bullets and victims for the latest poisonous gas. It is the young men and women of my age who will be commanded to commit suicide. It is my generation which will be requested to destroy the best of human culture, perhaps civilization itself, for causes which future historians will discover to be erroneous, if not utterly stupid or actually vicious.

"In a sense I am presenting an ultimatum, rather than a petition. The students whom I represent are watching critically every action of this conference. For behind your deliberations stands staring down at us the specter of Death. We desire to live and to live at peace. We desire to construct a world society providing freedom, equal opportunity, and a sense of security. We desire to make possible for every human being full development of personality in terms of the highest human and spiritual values we know. Those of us who have retained a concept of a loving and purposeful God, desire to live in peace lives which will reflect that concept. We therefore petition you for a substantial reduction of armaments, in order that we may have a civilization in which to forward this creative purpose."

_quotes From Babson In speaking of the business side of world unity, Mr. Douglass quoted Roger Babson, the eminent economist. "This depression, like every other depression in due to human, rather than natural causes. It is a bad type of principle, motive, desire, and action of people that causes depression, and it will be a good type of principle, motive, desire and action that will finally bring recovery. Prosperity will return only as righteousness and justice supplant unrighteousness and injustice. A determination to give better service, to be of greater use, to deal fairly, to follow the Golden Rule is essential to the return of any sound and permanent prosperity in the world."

PICKARD A LEADER WHILE AT BOWDOIN

(Continued from Page 1) affiliations with the Du Pont Company began. His progress, with that concern is typical of those phenomenal rises in American industry which we read about but seldom witness. From secretary of the King Mercantile Company (an offshoot of Du Pont) to sales manager of the Du Pont Cincinnati district was his first of the Denver office of the company, to manager of the Pittsburgh office, to director of sales for the whole industry. Finally, in 1920, he was elected vice-president in charge of sales. In addition, he serves as director and advisor of several of the attached concerns.

In 1899 he was married. His son, John C. Pickard, graduated from Bowdoin in 1922. Mr. Pickard's residence is at present just outside of Wilmington, Delaware, but he divides much of his leisure time between his property in the Adirondacks and a New Brunswick fishing club. In addition to the gift of the sixty-six acres of Pickard Field, the College is indebted to Mr. Pickard for two substantial fellowships. He is serving Bowdoin still further by his work on the Board of Trustees and on one of its committees. But forty-two years ago, freshmen, he was paddled even as you and I.

Desert air is wet ... by comparison! Making telephone equipment presents many an interesting problem to the engineers of Western Electric—manufacturer for the Bell System. A case in point is the drying of telephone cable before putting on the protective lead sheath. This step is of utmost importance, for the tiny copper wires cannot carry your voice properly unless their paper insulation is thoroughly dried. To this end, Western Electric engineers devised special drying ovens in which the air is thirty times drier than desert air! The same ingenuity and thoroughness go into every step of making cable, telephones, switchboards and many other kinds of telephone equipment. Billy Edwards Outlines Fire Hazards And Gives Thanks For Cooperation

While reminding Bowdoin's student body that it is far better "to have one chair intact than to have a whole suite left in pieces", Captain William R. Edwards thanked the men for the help he had received from them as volunteer firemen.

After a short introduction by Mr. Philip S. Wilder, the Thursday morning chapel-goers were addressed by Brunswick's busiest town official, who spoke in observance of the National Fire-Prevention Week. He pointed out to the students the tremendous loss of life and property caused annually by fire illustrating this fact by statistics which proved that the Americans were the most wasteful people in the world.

Advising the chapel assembly that "an ounce of prevention was worth a pound of cure", he warned them to be very cautious regarding their cigarettes which he asserted caused many fires. Captain "Billy" Edwards was received by an appreciative audience which accorded him an enthusiastic wooting.

FOUR HOUSES HOLD DANCES AFTER GAME

Psi Upsilon combined with Theta Delta Chi, holding their dance at the Theta Delta house, Lloyd Raffnell and his Georgians supplying the music. Mr. and Mrs. Kendrick and Mr. and Mrs. Webster-Brown served as chaperons.

Meanwhile the Delta Upsilon house held open house to their Tufts Chapter and the college in general. The Bowdoin Polar Bears furnished the dance music and later a buffet supper was served to over 100 people. Mrs. Sumner and Mrs. Gillette acted as patronesses.

Alpha Tau Omega also entertained their sister chapter at Tufts, importing Nate Gold and his Commanders from Portland to play at their dance. A buffet supper was served at seven o'clock. Dr. Gross, A.T.O. faculty advisor, Mrs. Gross, and Mrs. Appleton chaperoned the dance. Arrangements were in charge of Joel Y. Marshall.

KENDRICK DEFEATS NIXON IN RECORD TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Putting up a closer fight than the score indicates Dean Nixon went down before five placements of Professor Kendrick in the finals of the Brunswick Record tennis tournament last Wednesday afternoon on Pickard Field. The score was 6-2, 6-1.

Kendrick opened the match in a big way winning the first game without a point being credited to the Dean. Nixon came along strongly and took the third game by a love score. The next two were close. Kendrick placed his shots keeping Nixon on the run. Again the Dean came back to win another love game. Kendrick stopped his comeback with some hard work at the net. Score 6-2.

With an improved service and stronger net game Kendrick took the first game of the second set. Nixon using placement shots to good advantage evened up the score at one all. Contesting every point the Dean went down for five straight games. The fifth he nearly won. Deuce was called six times before the champion broke through. Score, 6-1.

GYM TEAM MAY JOIN ASSOCIATION; PLANS TO BE MADE SOON

According to recent reports, prospects for a successful Gymn team are bright. Under the tutelage of Professor Means several veterans are now at work. Among them are: D. J. Bowman '33, R. Bowman '35, E. R. Eaton '33, R. W. Harrington, Jr. '34, J. Iwanowicz '35, G. F. Peabody '34 (captain), D. R. Rust '35. Due to the great number of freshmen out for football it is not known how many will report, as it is there are three candidates: Cambell, Savage, and Todd.

Negotiations as to joining the Gymn Team Association are being carried on. If this goes through the Gymn team will have exhibitions at Annapolis and Princeton. Manager R. V. Kemper '35 has arranged three exhibitions to be held at Hebron Academy, at Fryburg, and at West Point. These will take place sometime after Christmas. The remainder of the schedule will be made up in the next two weeks.

MAINE WAS THE FINAL STOPPING STONE on Bowdoin's way to a title, and it proved to be almost insurmountable. After a hard game that was replete with injuries, but devoid of the bare runs and spectacular plays that dotted the other two games, Bowdoin finally pulled out a victory, 12 to 10.

Lois was Bowdoin's wait before another team like that was developed. Bowdoin has everything to win and nothing to lose. No matter how they play, their season is bound to be better than last year's, and already alumni are beginning to look forward to another season, which will give them reason to talk about Bowdoin football.

JAYVEE TEAM WINS IN WORKOUT WITH LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL

Last Wednesday the junior varsity football team defeated Brunswick High School at Pickard Field. The game was limited to four periods of six minutes each. During the first period the Jayvees made a steady march up the field from the kickoff, and Boyd ended the grind by carrying the ball over the line for a touchdown. In the second quarter the score was raised to 13-0 when Boyd made a second touchdown for Bowdoin and Barton kicked the goal. Neither team was able to gain many yards by rushing, and both Coach Cobb and Coach O'Brien, the latter from Brunswick High, sent in reserves during the last two quarters. Late in the game, Brunswick made a long pass bringing the ball up to the twenty-one yard line. Another pass was then attempted but was incomplete. Boyd, Hayden, Kelley, Rounds and Begg were among the outstanding players for the Jayvees.

Bowdoin First State Champion; Had An Undefeated Team In 1921

Standing as one of the oldest organized football conferences in America, the state series will swing into action next Saturday in its 42nd consecutive year. Throughout New England this series has become famous, both for the calibre of the teams and the closeness of the six games that make up the annual schedule.

It was in 1900 that the first State Series was battled out on the grid. It also marked the first year that Bowdoin was successful. They hung up a record in point scoring that has never been equalled in modern Maine football. As touchdowns then counted but five points, the score is even more impressive.

The Polar Bears started out with a point-a-minute policy in trouncing the Bobcat of Bates, 62 to 0. Never in the history of the conference has any team been so completely outclassed as was the Garnet on that day. Bowdoin simply rolled up and down the field, scoring at will and never being threatened.

Colby was the next stopping stone in that initial year, and the White stepped on them with almost the same score, rolling up a 56 to 0 count on the Mule. It was in the last half that Bowdoin overcame a stubborn Colby resistance and piled up touchdowns after touchdown.

Maine was the final stopping stone on Bowdoin's way to a title, and it proved to be almost insurmountable. After a hard game that was replete with injuries, but devoid of the bare runs and spectacular plays that dotted the other two games, Bowdoin finally pulled out a victory, 12 to 10.

Lois was Bowdoin's wait before another team like that was developed. Bowdoin has everything to win and nothing to lose. No matter how they play, their season is bound to be better than last year's, and already alumni are beginning to look forward to another season, which will give them reason to talk about Bowdoin football.

Mawhinney '33 and Tipping '35 are the Party Leaders

As the present political campaign goes into its last weeks of fervent activity, it is arousing particular interest among college undergraduates, and following the lead of other colleges a group of students here at Bowdoin headed by Richard A. Mawhinney '33 and Harold C. Tipping '35 have undertaken the organization of the Student Republican Club of Bowdoin College.

Membership in the club is open to any student in sympathy with the Republican Party. The club asks for no aid or contributions other than the support of the party.

Gordon D. Briggs '33, James E. Bassett '34, Carl Olson '34, Donald K. Rust '35 are members of the Executive Committee and will supervise the enrollment of members. Professor Boyd Bartlett will serve in an advisory capacity for the club.

The club plans to bring to the college Republican speakers of prominence during the next few weeks. The club requests that all Republicans, both faculty members and undergraduates, cooperate in voting on the non-partisan ballot being run elsewhere in this issue of the ORIENT.

FROSH, JAYVEE ROAD TEAMS TRIM MORSE, BRIDGTON HARRIERS Prouty Leads Yearlings to Perfect Score; Juniors in Easy Victory

Negotiating the three and three-quarter mile jaunt in good early-season time, Coach John J. Magee's junior varsity road team received little competition from the Bridgton Academy harriers in the first road-race of the season here last Friday afternoon.

Thurber, Bridgton's only bid for a thrilling finish, found the pace too fast and failed to climb above third place where he finished a few seconds before Ned Behr, whose time was 19:54 1-5.

Frosh Shut Out Morse High In the second race of the afternoon, the Freshman road team scored a perfect 15-point win, taking the first five places against a weaker but spunky Morse High delegation.

Prouty won easily by a margin of 15 seconds. Cowan and Mann finished next, turning in times of 13:14 4-5 and 13:17 1-5 respectively, while Grey and Elgison followed to complete the winning quintet for Bowdoin.

This competent showing of both Bowdoin teams makes the trip of the Varsity and Frosh to the Harvard Open Intercollegiate Meet the 21st of this month of real interest.

Blue and Brown Fails To Capitalize On Breaks As White Defends Grittily

BOWDOIN STIFFENS WHEN ON DEFENSIVE

On the next play Unna circles right end, shows three Bowdoin men aside in succession and races 19 yards down the sideline before being tackled by Burdell. Clark and Unna net three apiece and Clayton plunges through for six and a first down.

Hank Matches Grinnell's Kicking The second chapter commences with a see-saw battle in mid-field with the respective punters of the combatants, Richardson and Grinnell, staging a duel, with Grinnell having only a very slight edge over the Bowdoin fullback.

Richardson fails to gain. However, he hammers the ball for two on the next formation, which also results in a fifteen yard advance for the Whites as Tufts is penalized for holding. Again Richardson catches, grabbing three when tackled by Grinnell. Backy loses two and Heine Hubbard, shooting the first of two Bowdoin forwards, sees his heave swoop to the ground as no player on the field is within ten feet of the ball.

60 Yard Punt O'Brien sneaks through the Bowdoin line on the following two plays, hauls in Richardson to earth for a five yard loss and mixing up a Richardson to Hubbard lateral. Richardson's kick is returned five yards to the 34 and two plunges by Hymanson net four.

Whitman Stave Off Scoring Bid As in the first period Clark kicks off to open the half, booting to Hubbard on the 17. Hubbard is checked at the 20. He gains one and then fumbles, Clark tumbling on the spheroid. This fumble marks the third occasion that a Bowdoin bobbie has handed the Jumbos a scoring opportunity.

The Bowdoin defense rises to great heights at this juncture to kill off another Tufts incursion. Staffon is toppled for negligible gain of right tackle in two attempts. Richardson and Burdell continue the great defensive work on the following two plays, each adding a pass-knock-down to his credit. A five yard penalty for two incomplete drives and Bowdoin regains possession of the ball on the 30. After Richardson and Backy fail to nick the Tufts line for gain, Hank punts to Hymanson who is spilled by Milliken on the Jumbo 37.

Clark and Hymanson push the ball ten yards in three smacks for a Tufts first down. Low makes all three tackles for Bowdoin. Staffon bungles the ball on the following play when Low smother's him behind the line, but Woodworth recovers for a two yard loss. Nothing of consequence occurs for the remainder of the period, each team scoring a first down, Bowdoin's coming as a result of two center smacks by Burdell with Richardson back in punting formation and Tufts' as a result of a nine yard end sweep by Hymanson and a one yard stab by Staffon. With Captain Milliken stretched out, winded, the Bowdoin faithful gasp with the thought of his probable demise from the fray and accordingly breathe much easier when he rises and resumes his post.

Ackerman, Johnny on the Spot With the ball resting on the Bowdoin 35 stripe Hymanson shoots two passes, the first incomplete and the second intercepted by Burdell who runs eight yards to the 23. Attacks at the line unavailing, Richardson sends a hurried punt down to the Tufts 47. Unna gains four, but Clark fumbles on the following play, Ackerman retrieving the ball for Bowdoin on the 48. Heine Hubbard raps the line for two, tackled by Oliver. Backy is hurt on the play but continues in the game. Richardson knives right through the wall for six. Hubbard nips another yard and Richardson fogs the line for still another and a first down for Bowdoin. A flat pass, Hubbard to Davis, is good for seven yards as the Polar Bear stands go wild. Hubbard again plows straight ahead to garner four more and a first down.

As the Bowdoin backfield pummels the Tufts line steadily by short but sufficient gains, the game has all the earmarks of last week's Williams' encounter, won in the final period by a similar drive. Bowdoin's ball on the 31, Richardson picks up a yard, being snubbed by Cochrane and Batchelder. Twice again Richardson carries, battering his way to a five yard advance through left tackle, and two yards in the center. Hubbard skirts right end for eight and a first down for the White on the 15.

D. U.'S FAVORED IN FRATERNITY ROAD RACE WEDNESDAY

Chi Psi's to Make Strong Bid for Honors in Annual Track Event

With last year's leaders, the D.U. team making a strong bid to repeat the performance again, the annual interfraternity road race will be run next Wednesday, October 26. The Chi Psi distance men will give the D.U. runners their strongest competition. Basing predictions on the time trials held Monday the D.U.'s unofficially are given about 40 points and the Chi Psi's 57. The following men came in in the order given: Fred Burton, Elmer Hutchinson, Dave Morris, Neil LaBelle, Tom Uniacke and Nelson Tibbetts.

As usual there will be a plaque given to the winning team and medals to the first three place winners, possibly the first ten.

SOCCER MAY TAKE PLACE OF FOOTBALL FOR FRATERNITIES

Recently the Intramural Athletic Board conducted a vote among the various fraternities to see if there would be any interest on the question of maintaining intra-fraternity touch football. The popular opinions on the vote were decidedly against it. The reason for this seems to be that the majority of the men are out for major sports, leaving not enough men eligible for a football eleven. However, there is a possibility of carrying on soccer in place of touch football if fewer men are needed to form a team.

Field Goal Try Fails Three rested first string Jumbos trickle onto the field to reenter the battle: Woodworth for Fox, O'Brien for Batchelder, and McGonagle for Spaulding. On three successive tries at the line Richardson realizes a total of three yards. Fourth down, seven to go. Charlie Burdell slings off his helmet and it is evident that he will try for a field goal. Kneeling at a slight angle from the uprights Bakanowsky receives the pass from center and Burdell place-kicks, but the boot is awry and Bowdoin loses its one big opportunity to grab the bacon.

Tufts' ball on the 20. Hymanson registers four, as Backy is again injured. Reid for Bakanowsky. On nine straight plays Tufts rushes the ball from its own 24 to Bowdoin's 28. During this parade Bowdoin is fighting hard and marking time with the Ingersoll. The Whites are dog-tired after their grueling battle, but rather than trust the final minute of play to his untired replacements Bowser lets the regulars brace and stave off the impending thrusts. They do, and after Hymanson, Monier, and Clark reel off three straight first downs it's a weary but jubilant, Bowdoin eleven that hears the final gong. Final: Bowdoin 0, Tufts 0.

SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

Of the fifty-eight times that Bowdoin rushed the ball last Saturday against the Jumbos that versatile Polar Bear back, Hank Richardson, punctured the line on thirty-eight occasions.

We learn more or less according to the Bates Student, that Bates will take the State Series crown. Bowdoin will be runners-up and Maine and Colby will follow in that order. Also through the Bobcat sports-commentator comes the declaration that Bates didn't care how the Tufts-Bowdoin game came out, for, as we are given to understand, Morey's eleven will beat Bowdoin on the 22nd. Just like that!

Prize gems of our own McNamee: "Two and a half minutes to play". (The game ended four brief plays later). "Penn 27, Dartmouth 0 at the half." (14-7 actual final score).

It is a distinct pleasure to Bowdoin football followers to read of Louis Bush of Mass. State running wild through all opposition and clicking up amazing point totals, after witnessing the Bears throttle the State flash so completely a few weeks ago. Bush is accredited with 24 points in last week's marathon with the Conn. Aggies.

Tufts was not a little peeved over the turn of events on Whittier. Although the Medford players responded to the final outcome by helmet slinging and varied verbal comment, the thousand-odd Tufts supporters on deck including a 30 piece band were glum as so many Egyptian mummies.

Be it herein stated that the human frame of a certain Sunday newspaper cartoonist, whose love of animals has been duly attested long since, would have sold for nothing other than its scrap value in the Brunswick market last Sabbath.

That Slugger Burdell was justified in attempting a field goal instead of calling for a pass on that crucial fourth down is evident to those who saw Burdell toting them through the uprights before the game. Kicking from all angles the Bowdoin quarter invariably succeeded in this warm up.

A baker's gross of Colby matriculators: students, coaches, and players, observed an idle-day Saturday viewing the Bowdoin-Tufts fracas with eager eyes and flourishing leg-pencils. It must be that they were seeking pointers on how big-time football managers tote the water-pail onto the field. Or were they drawing diagrams of the field layout so that they'll have the good posts in the right place Saturday?

Poses for Neil LaBelle and Fred Burton, two of Magee's road-runners who will be heard from considerably this fall. Although neither Burton nor LaBelle was a member of the road team last year they have been training on their own this summer and are right up there with the leaders in practice runs.

All Series Games Promise To Be Close And Hard

presence of the entire Mule team at the Tufts game indicates that they will be well prepped in Bowdoin formations.

The following Saturday will see Bates receiving the Polar Bear at Lewiston. A tie with Yale constitutes the major part of the Bates season so far, but they will be conclusively tested next week when they come to grips with the University of Maine. The best line in Maine is ripping open holes for a backfield that is flashy but erratic. Picher, sensational soph star, whose punting was one of the features of the Yale game, will be the man to guard, but without him the rest of the backfield would still be good. Knowles, Gay, McCarthy, Valenti and Lenti are all capable.

The line is the real threat of the Bates eleven, however. Soba, Clemons, Stone, Berry, Gilman, Italia, and others make the forward wall a threat that cannot be denied. All are heavy, fast and mobile. They will present an admirable defense, and will be the most difficult barrier the Bowdoin linemen will have all year.

Alumni Day will see the Black Bear versus the White Bear, when Maine comes to town. The backfield of Romansky, Robertshaw, Favor and Wilson has shown good form this year, and although they have been beaten and tied, still have plenty of power left. A line that is lower of strength both on the offense and defense is another consideration that cannot be denied.

No one let-up will be permitted in the rest of the Bowdoin schedule, and with good fortune, the White may come through the season undefeated. Much of this has not come to pass in Brunswick since 1921.

The Sun 'Rises'

ALL question of the importance, prophetically speaking, of collegiate straw-votes aside, the Bowdoin results point to two significant facts. First, that nearly every man is willing, and even anxious, to cast his ballot. And second, that there is a strong trend toward the Socialist party among the undergraduates.

Music

Appreciating the necessity for creating in the student body an interest in non-academic pursuits, the college in the past has sponsored frequent lectures by noted speakers, covering nearly every phase of civilized culture.

Next Tuesday evening marks the opening of a new musical season with a recital by the Boston Orchestral Club, a stringed ensemble composed of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

We commend Mr. Linscott for his efforts. Sadly have we seen the beauties of symphonic music topple before the barrage of synopticated jazz.

On the other hand he rightly wishes to have such concerts appreciated. He has guaranteed that, providing the interest shown in the concert Tuesday night is encouraging, he will sponsor in the future a series of programs of fine music which the college may enjoy.

Still Fighting

We were present last Saturday at the football game in Waterville, together with an encouraging number of the students from Brunswick. In all probability we saw the better team win.

In the previous games the Bowdoin supporters have been vociferously behind their team at all times. Though this support was appreciatively diminished in defeat last Saturday, it was still comparatively strong.

The loss of the game itself is not disastrous. Though it was the first game of the state series, two more important encounters are to come. Last Saturday's mishap may prove more a blessing than a disaster.

36 FROSH LARGER. STATISTICS REVEAL

This year's entering class is taller and younger than any one of the five preceding classes, but is lighter than the present sophomores by 14 pounds.

The average age of the first year men is 18 years, 7 months. This is one month less than last year's average, and three months less than that of the class of '34.

considered, except for the class of '34, which boasted 173 members at the time of admission. Present Freshmen Taller. The frosh of this year are taller than in preceding years. They exceed the sophs by .3 of an inch, the seniors by a full half inch or more, and they tower above the class of '31 by a whole inch.

COMMUNICATIONS

To the Editor of the Orient:

Following the example set by ultracooperative editorial pages all over the country, the Orient last week deplored the trend toward Socialism, visible in so many collegiate straw ballots.

Perhaps the most obvious fallacy in this ancient argument is the contention that a vote for the candidate of a hopeless minority is always thrown away. The student said that "if there is anything in a democracy worthy above all else to be so characterized it is the duty of every citizen to vote in accordance with his honest conviction."

To all people who are dissatisfied with present conditions and with the general state of the world, the Social Party offers a leader, whose personal superiority is unquestioned, and a platform which is comprehensive and consistent.

To the Editor of the Orient: At a time when hysteria and mob psychology seem rampant with the approach of the national elections, may I ask for space in your paper as a modest Republican?

To the Editor of the Orient: I should like to take exception to a statement appearing in an editorial in the Orient of the nineteenth of October.

Theoretical, the principle of an elective type of government is that the candidate receiving the largest number of votes wins.

The vote should in all cases register as near an honest opinion and desire as possible—in ALL elections.

Exception has been taken to the implication of the word "honestly" in the phrase "how such a huge deficit can honestly have been incurred" in my letter concerning the cafeteria published in the Orient of last week.

REV. GLASIER CALLS GOD "ADVENTURER", MAN "AN ADVENTURER"

Paradoxically Quotes Modern Scientific Thought With Bible

Offering the scriptures and the whole sweep of modern scientific thought as proof of his assertion, the Rev. J. Arthur Glasier, Deane of the Episcopal Church, Poland, characterized God as an "adventurer" in his chapel address Sunday.

Dr. Glasier asserted that the theories and literature of modern science also demonstrate the truth of his conception. Science portrays creation as a Titanic accident, an endless experiment and enormous risk.

Man Is An "Adventurer" Substantiating his belief with more examples, Dean Glasier pointed out the mystery of organic and inorganic matter and, as a supreme example of his character, he changes his equipment in creation, man who can produce remarkable creations and yet hates and loves with the brutality of lower animals.

Dr. Glasier spoke next of Jesus, describing Him as another proof of the theme of his address. Jesus, because of his character, has influenced the entire trend of humanity.

Religion a Heroic Enterprise As God is an adventurer, Dr. Glasier continued, the true religion is a heroic enterprise. It is no hiding place or retreat but rather a recognition of existence in the universe.

Those who attempt to follow in the way of Jesus, said Dean Glasier in closing, are entering upon an adventure that matches the "divine adventure," and that is in accordance with the great purpose of existence.

To the Editor of the Orient: I might add that my only intention was to represent a certain current critical state of mind and to offer suggestions for the improvement of the cafeteria, certainly not to be instrumental in influencing against it, as some seem to have construed from the unfortunate letter.

Exception has been taken to the implication of the word "honestly" in the phrase "how such a huge deficit can honestly have been incurred" in my letter concerning the cafeteria published in the Orient of last week.

Mustard and Cross

Coling like a "Woodman apace that tree" falls is the story of Tommie Merritt's sacking his Aunt Miter's hair name and honor.

Pitiful, too, is the tale of the patrolman who lost his cap in the Union, and could not leave town with it. Sympathetic spectators suggested that the Cat Herberth might have run off with it, that the yachting fraternity brothers were absent, walked away with it; that non-Rah-Rah men thought it was a beer hat, burned it.

We finally got around the library the other day. It being our third year at Bowdoin, we felt it was about time. Even at that, we were forced, in a way, because our major group was being shown the works.

Among other things we'd like to gripe about at this time are: the uncertainty of a glass pane in the Cumberland (Theatre, your rat!) seating arrangement; turtle-neck sweaters and Clark Gable complexes; scarcity of hymn books in chapel; the staid of three Christmas-card salesmen to one customer; the copy of Judge that has been in the binder in the Union for three weeks; the lack of copies of New Yorker in the Union.

HISTORY PROCESSES OF AQUATINTS ARE DUNTHORNE'S TOPIC

Early English Development Traced by Art Speaker in Lecture

Mr. Gordon Dunthorne gave a lecture on the history and process of aquatinting during his lecture room of the Art Building last Friday.

Mr. Dunthorne is well acquainted with this subject, having been in the business of collecting and distributing aquatints and painting all his life. His father was one of James McNeil Whistler's dealers in London; brought up in an atmosphere of art.

English Prints. Aquatints. All early English prints were done in aquatints, and the popularity of these prints really followed the return to nature movement in the last quarter of the eighteenth century.

WOMAN'S ALLIANCE GIVES RECEPTION

Last Thursday evening in the parish house of the First Congregational Church of Brunswick, the Woman's Alliance Club gave a reception and supper to which the members of Bowdoin's Freshman class were invited.

At the conclusion of supper, Dr. Asbury acted as speaker to those assembled, inviting them to participate in church activities during the coming year.

The First Congregational Church is rich in tradition and has had many famous people of the past among its parishioners. In 1717 it was founded in the Presbyterian creed by the Scotch-Irish settlers.

Bates "Student" uses a new filler in its latest issue. Under the block caption of "Open Forum" are placed these words: "This space is dedicated to that student who was going to write that letter praising or criticizing his college but postponed it."

In the same issue the "Student" continues to supply novel heads: "George Oida New '35 Member of Student Council."

For next year if Bowdoin defeats Colby it will be fitting to start soon feeding a polar bear to show up the white mule that Colby sported before and after the Waterville deluge last Saturday.

Some students at Maine U. deviated from the ordinary course of collegiate misconduct last week when they painted the campus, and not the town, red, administering a blushing crimson coating to the historic cannon and cannon balls that recently were presented to the institution.

"As Maine colleges go, so go the nations" may be an appropriate version of a similar adage as the straw votes take place at this time. Colby straw voted as follows: Hoover, 266; Roosevelt, 70; Thomas, 69. Bates opted: Hoover, 249; Roosevelt, 60; Thomas, 40.

REjuvenated BAND BEGINS YEAR WELL; AIMS AT N. E. TITLE

Well-balanced Outfit Best in Years; Reflects Campus Spirit

A rejuvenated Bowdoin band has appeared on the campus this fall. At the first meetings of the year, a large number of musicians turned out, and from this material, Manager Richard A. Mawhinney has been able to build a band as good if not better than any the college has had in recent years.

The band is unusually well balanced, and has a large number of versatile and talented musicians. Manager Mawhinney is very optimistic over the outlook that he says there is a possibility of going to the New England Interscholastic meet at the Boston Garden on December 4.

Make-up of the Band The following men are in the band: R. A. Mawhinney, leader and cornet; W. D. Currier, manager and tenor sax; D. D. Rust, drum major; clarinets, J. S. Baker, S. Bellinckhoff, A. G. Dixon, P. E. Hartmann, A. Kern. The cornet players are D. A. Bartlett, Jr., I. G. Bowman, R. F. Hayden, O. R. Lawry, Jr., H. H. Milliken, R. D. Peakes, W. F. Philbrick, H. S. Shaw, and N. T. Skillings.

CONCERTS FOR YEAR

The regular college concerts for this scholastic year have been announced, as follows: November 21—Pianist. January 17—String Quartet. February 28—Violin Soloist.

B. D. Wright. Alto horn men are R. C. Daugherty, J. C. Hayward and J. A. Rodick. The baritone players are G. F. Peabody and R. E. Read. W. F. Crosby plays the bass horn. R. L. Goldsmith the bass drum, T. O. O'Brien the snare drums, and E. H. Morse the cymbals.

Nixon, Bartlett, Magee Comment on Youth's Socialistic Tendencies

"Socialism can do only a limited amount of good except when we become socially-minded and the success of the whole plan depends on the elimination of human selfishness. I am not a Socialist but I do favor unemployment insurance and old-age insurance, and our present situation points to some reform along these lines." Dean Nixon added that he was not a Socialist because it presumes too much of human nature.

In concluding Dean Nixon termed himself an "unenthusiastic Republican." Pressed to clarify this remark he declared that he had always been a Hoover supporter but the events of the past four years have convinced him that Hoover is not the super-man of pre-election days. "The policies of Hoover," said the Dean, "made liberal by the stress of his administration are far more constructive and sound than those of Mr. Roosevelt."

Professor Bartlett interviewed "Inasmuch as socialistic principles are idealistic, it is natural that the younger generation should be socialistic-minded." Although Professor Bartlett, advisor to the newly formed Bowdoin Student Republican Club, intends to cast his presidential ballot for Hoover, he is strongly in favor of several features of the socialist program, and views with favor the evidence of increasing interest in the movement on the part of college men.

There is a general trend throughout the countries of the world at large toward socialistic forms of government. Professor Bartlett believes, England's Labor Party has out several socialistic principles to work in that country. In the United States, the direct primary and the Child Labor Law, to cite examples, while not passed by a recognized socialistic group, are evidence of the socialist influence on legislation. Concerning the socialists as a national party, however, Professor Bartlett thinks they have had little effect thus far.

G. O. P. AND MULE OPPOSED IN FRESH-SOPH DEBATE THURS.

Freshmen and sophomores will meet Thursday, November 3, for their first debates. One will take place in the afternoon in the Lecture Room of the library; the other, that evening at 8 o'clock in Modillon Union.

The question for debate is: Resolved that Hoover rather than Roosevelt should be elected the next president of the United States. The converse of the above subject will be the most question in the second debate. The teams have not yet been made up although the probable sophomore lineup will be; for Hoover—Philip Parker and Harold Tipping; for Roosevelt—William Pearnside and Paul Sullivan.

In 1925 and 1926 the winners of the Freshman-Sophomore debate met in Amherst. The sophomore winners defeated the Amherst sophomores; in 1926 the Bowdoin freshmen defeated the Amherst sophomores. This precedent was discontinued in 1927 though it aroused much enthusiasm and was well-attended.

A senior co-ed at a Boston College pond became pretty indignant when an incoming freshman "cut" while she was dancing with one of the college's greatest athletes. After she told the youngster what she thought of him, he hung his head and replied: "I'm sorry lady, but you see I'm working my way through college and my partner was waving a five-dollar bill at me."

INDIVIDUALISM NOT KILLED IN COLLEGE STATES DEAN NIXON

Trend to "Same Clothes, Thoughts, Everything" Not Present

A belief that college does not rob a youth of his individuality was expressed by Dean Nixon in his Chapel talk, "Standardized Undergraduates," Saturday.

This theme was occasioned by a remark made some years ago by Secretary Mellon, who, upon receiving an honorary degree at a Yale Commencement, took occasion to bewail the standardization of American people. "Same clothes, same thoughts, same everything," he was quoted as saying. "I hope to God the colleges will put some individuality into American citizens."

Taking exception to the assertion of certain writers and speakers that individuality is one of the things colleges primarily suppress, the Dean stated that he could remember very few cases where real individuality had been stifled by undergraduate or faculty conventionality. He had observed many cases, he said, where self-seeking, self-display, and self-applause found no warm welcome, and where the most conspicuous students were laughed out of existence, and others in which unnecessary eccentricities were made rather expensive for the owners, who eventually were convinced that eccentricities alone do not always establish the genius that is supposed to be entitled to them.

He had also observed that a certain kind of intellectual independence, that comes spontaneously close to intellectual cockiness, and a certain kind of spontaneity, that often reminds one of instability, found no warm faculty class room or on the campus. Concerning spontaneity, the Dean mentioned Samuel Crowthers' remark that Walt Whitman could exist in spontaneity, because he was paid for it. It is unfortunate, however, to find this quality too prominent in a college student.

CUMBERLAND PREVIEWS

"Night After Night" features George Raft and Constance Cummings, at the Cumberland theatre, Friday evening. An ex-prize fighter finds that all is not fair in love any more than in ring. While running a high class speakeasy, he falls in love with one of his customers. His girl is jealous and proceeds to lay down the rules to bring him around. Her methods make the fight for love a real movie.

"Rackety Rax" on Saturday, takes the great American game of football into the racket. Victor McLaglen, a racketeer, goes to see a football game and wonders why the players work so hard for nothing. His efforts to make a racket out of football, makes one of the best comedies the screen has had for some time. Greta Nissen stars with McLaglen.

"Smiling Thru," the popular play by Jane Cowell and John Murfi, comes to the Cumberland on Monday and Tuesday, featuring Norma Shearer and Fredric March. It is a drama of love that outbonds the feuds of parents and engulfs like a tidal wave.

"Life Begins" at the Cumberland on Wednesday of next week, has its setting in a modern maternity hospital. Loretta Young and Eric Linden are the stars. The routine of the hospital is mingled with the sufferings of mothers and the anxiety of fathers. Loretta Young as the mother, dies on the operating table but the baby is saved, and "Life Begins."

"Cabin In The Cotton" at the Cumberland on Thursday of next week is from the novel by Harry Harrison. The play depicts a southern cotton plantation where the workers get credit in food for their labors. A young man finds that the owners of the plantation keep a double set of books for their employees and that the workers are losing a good deal. He exposes their tactics and finally brings them around to fair-dealings with the workers. Richard Barthelmess is the young man and Dorothy Jordan is featured with him.

I thought I'd examine the tobacco in a cigarette. Look here... this is Chesterfield tobacco. Notice its lighter color... you don't see any dark heavy types, do you? I guess that's why Chesterfields are milder. I'm told that uniformly lighter color is due to cross-blending. It sort of welds all the tobaccos into one. And here's something else. Notice that these long shreds are all cut the same width. It stands to reason they burn smoother and cooler. I don't pretend to be an expert but it looks to me as if they make Chesterfields right. Depression Significant The fate of socialism will depend a great deal on how the world works out of the present economic depression, according to Professor Bartlett. "If the capitalist group can satisfactorily solve the problem of the present depression and steer us clear of others, there will be little likelihood of a socialist reform. But if financial conditions grow worse, a complete overthrow of the present-day economic system may be expected."

Coach Magee Interviewed "Two types of students are switching to Socialism and its principles," according to John J. Magee, Bowdoin track mentor and chairman of the Brunswick Democratic committee. "One is the man who is eternally seeking for a new theory, eager to test it out and accept it. The other is one who seeks relief from the mistakes of the present administration, and wishes to lodge a protest."

"The fact that socialism in itself does not attract many is proof of the statement," asserts Coach Magee. "If there were a third, non-partisan man in the present race, I believe he would poll more votes than the socialists, for the reason that the voters seek not a new method of government, but a relief from the present one. There are few rabid socialists in the country, but many who will vote the socialist ticket as a mere protest."

"The college men who accept socialism and its theory completely are few and far between. It is generally accepted that the socialistic principle would be impractical for the American government, and a majority of those who will vote for Thomas in November know this. They merely consider neither Hoover nor Roosevelt the man for the highest office in the land, and seek to go on record against them both by voting for a man who they know does not stand a chance to be elected."

Few Rapid Party-Shifters "There are few people in the country who are willing to switch directly from the Republican to the Democratic ticket, or vice versa. The man who will not do this does not object to switching to Socialism, although he does not coincide with all its principles."

"Of course there are college men who see in Socialism the way out of the economic distress that now is present. I don't agree with them, however. Socialism is a fantastic theory, and could never be practical enough for stable government."

"There are many who are voting for Socialism because of the candidate alone and not because of the principles he stands for. There is no doubt that Norman Thomas is an unusual character, but it is hard to visualize him in the presidential chair."

"The mistakes of the present Republican administration are responsible in the most part for the turn to Thomas. There are any number of staunch Republicans who see the weaknesses in their party but would not vote the Democratic ticket. They are the silent boosters of the Socialists, and the ones who will count for his largest vote in November, in my opinion."

In closing, Dean Nixon stated that the individualism he is based on such traits as these, traits which a college education certainly does undermine. He has yet to be convinced that real individuality is much affected by anything that a student body or the faculty does to it. The more it is real and really owned individually, he said, and not merely some excremental social, intellectual, moral, physical, or artistic exercise, the less can it be impaired by anything or anybody.

COPELAND COLLECTS RARE ALPINE PLANTS

Collecting Alpine plants is a new and fascinating hobby for Professor Manton Copeland. The specimens, all varieties which thrive above the timber line of New England peaks, are primarily intended for a rock garden at his summer place at Wood, Hole. It will be interesting to know how the plants will adapt themselves to such a low altitude.

Last week end three mountain climbing parties contributed greatly to the professor's collection. One group, consisting of Professor Copeland, Manton Copeland, Jr., Richard A. Mawhinney, and John Bangs, was the first to attempt a new trip to the summit of Mt. Bigelow in Maine.

A second expedition of eight people, led by Mr. Edith Edwards, a faculty member of Brunswick High School, climbed Mt. Webster in New Hampshire. The herbage on Mt. Chichewa was selected by the third party, whose members included M. C. Greeley and F. J. Stoddard.

Just recently a few Yale Freshmen were blackmailed by a couple of young women who came into the men's dormitory just as the 6 o'clock rule went into effect concerning women in the dorm. They stated that if they were not given money that they would call the campus police.

White Bears Seek Vengeance As Bates Game Looms

WHITE TOPPLES UNDER COLBY'S ALERT OFFENSE

 for the first score. Violette failed to convert on a place kick.
Burdell Runs 47 Yards
 The most sensational play of the game came on the thousand kick-off. Burdell collected the ball on his six yard line and cut to the right side of the field. Aided by perfect interference, he weaved through a cordon of tacklers, and with the safety man cut down, set out in a straight line for the goal. Peabody finally brought him down from behind on the Colby 43 yard stripe, ending the longest run of the fray, 47 yards.
 Two wild passes netted the Bears only a five yard penalty, and Richardson punted outside on the Blue twenty. Peabody and Davan reeled off a first down, and then punted. Bakanowsky took the ball on his 36 yard line, and ran it back to the 40, where Hersey hit him so hard that he was injured and forced to leave the game. Reid replaced him, and was stopped cold on the first play.
Wilson Again Intercepts
 Wilson once more leaped into the air, snared a Hubbard pass, and carried it to the Bowdoin 36 yard line. Foley and Peabody smashed through to a first down, and a pass, Davan to Ayler, netted another Peabody run through center for still another, and once more the ball was but five yards from the White goal. Violette plowed into the line and was stopped. Peabody then tried three straight bucks and was slammed to earth every time for a slight gain. Bowdoin had held.
 Taking the ball on the one yard line, Richardson punted to the 42, where Peabody ran it back to the 36. Peabody whipped through the line for a first down, and then punted over the goal line to give the ball to Bowdoin on the 20. Burdell surprisingly took to the air again, and the infallible Wilson intercepted it at the 25 and ran it back to within ten yards of the goal. Three line bucks against the stalwart White forward wall proved fruitless, so Peabody fumbled a pass to Wilson over the line for the second touchdown. He then converted a place kick for the extra point. The half ended after Richardson had taken a kickoff back to the Bowdoin 32 yard line.
Signals Mixed
 The discouraging Bowdoin play recommenced in the second half when on the first play after the kickoff, signals were mixed and the ball passed into empty space. Hersey fell on the ball for Colby on the ten yard mark.
 Once more the White forwards rose to heights, and in four plays the Bears found themselves exactly five yards behind the place from which they had started. Richardson punted out forty yards, and Davan returned it to the 31. Colby was set back 15 yards for holding, but Davan made it up with a brilliant 22 yard dash around end.
Milliken Receivers Fumble
 Johnny Milliken once more stemmed the tide by recovering a Peabody fumble on his 15 yard line, and Richardson pulled off a beautiful 60 yard punt to the Colby 35 yard stripe. The Roundmen immediately took to the air, but after two first downs they were stopped, and Peabody punted over the goal line. Richardson and Bakanowsky skirted the tackles for a first, but once more the Mules held, and Richardson tied off another long punt, to the Colby 29 yard line. Peabody immediately returned it to the Polar Bears' 35, as the quarter ended.
 Mal Walker, entering his first Bowdoin game, substituted for Bakanowsky to start the final session, and on the first play used his spritling legs to carry him around end for 13 yards and a first down. A pass, Hubbard to Davis, was good for 16 more and another first down. The Bowdoin stands went wild as three line bucks by Richardson moved the stakes forward once more, but the White chances went glimmering as Peabody intercepted a pass on the 33 yard line.

Spurred by Colby Drubbing, Bowsermen Hope to Shatter Maine Series Hoodoo

Two fighting teams, smarting from last Saturday's defeat, will romp onto Garcelon Field this week with vengeance and blood in their hearts. A bruised Polar Bear meets a scarred Bobcat Saturday in what promises to be the battle of the week.
 Not at all disheartened at their surprising setback from the Colby Mules, Charlie Bowser's eleven good men and true are ready to crash into the state contest win. Colby, too, unfortunately, are the Batesmen. And thereby hangs the makings of a mighty grid struggle.
 A comedy of errors was dramatized up at Waterville last week, when the leviathan Peabody Bear, on the bad business end, ill-starred fumbles and passes at ill-timed moments boosted the score. And the same fate befell Maine as it waged a nip-and-tuck battle with Bates, to win 6-0—a close squeak for the Braves.
Season Like That of '38
 Bowdoin grid fans point to '38 and shake their heads. The State Series kick-off held of Bowdoin then, too, as the White entered the Maine combat untested and tied once. But the psychological odds are all on Bowser's lads Saturday.
 Perhaps the partial solution to the White mentor's dilemma—that of backward seconds—was solved in the fading moments of the Colby fiasco. There, a product of Jack Magee's track tutelage, entered the game in the fourth quarter and on his first attempt, reeled off fourteen good yards.
 Walker never played college football before this, his third. He was naturally suffering from nervousness, and from lack of ball-carrying practice. But Mal is a hard-running back, with high knee-lift and an unbeatable start. Given good interference, he should account for substantial gains in his next fray.
Means Looms As Passer
 From the Bowdoin pitching squad comes Dave Means, whose pass-heaving would have done credit to an All-Masters in that darkest last century. Given a pair of waiting arms to receive his bullet heaves, and Dave should account for extra yardage. His line plunging stood out in his few moments of play last Saturday.
 Fear that Captain Johnny Milliken had not been in the game yet seemed nearly quashed yesterday, and Bowdoin supporters heave sighs of relief. Though substitute Johnny Holden played heads-up ball during his brief moment at Waterville, the loss of their captain would handicap the Bears to an untold degree.
Battle of Pluggers
 Unless the hitherto unheralded Walker enters the game and cuts loose, the game promises to be a battle of stone-wall versus stone-wall, and battering ram versus battering ram. Coach Morry boasts a powerful line, with the all-too-familiar names of Jerry, Murphy, Sola, Stone, and Clemons outstanding. In the Garnet backfield are McCarthy, Richer and Knowles.

Coach Morry boasts a powerful line, with the all-too-familiar names of Jerry, Murphy, Sola, Stone, and Clemons outstanding. In the Garnet backfield are McCarthy, Richer and Knowles.
 There is a slight chance that Bud King, the juggernaut of the Bates '37 eleven, will enter against Bowdoin. King has been on the shelf since the first Boston tilt.
 But Charlie Bowser's line, which gave splendid account of itself against the Blue and Gray last week, is still strong as ever, and the same line-up will probably enter against Bates Saturday. In the spirit of union still there, and the team has played consistent ball with few replacements all season. Dick Nason and Carl Ackerman may alternate, while Gargent and Kent may also shift off during the game.
Colby Loss Only Skin-Deep
 Pessimists nod their heads over the 25-0 Colby lacing, but fail to take into account the fact that three of the touchdowns resulted from break-aways. And that Bowdoin's thwarted touchdown in the opening canto might have spelled victory for the Bowsermen. But the slim margin of chance has always dogged Polar Bear outfits. The team is set for Bates, with no alibis, and in perfect shape. Though preparing for a fray in which they will be the underdog, Bowdoin has not lost confidence.
 Underdog teams often upset the pre-game calculations!

SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

Best line of the week (with due regards to Ned Lehan's depiction of the Bates-Maine strife): "Isn't it Romany?"—Bates song of requiem. Clever, Ned my boy, clever.
 Speculation as to the species of the Colby mascot finally came to the conclusion that "Two not a Mule, but a white horse." Who ever heard of White Mule in the flesh anyhow?
 Saturday's play uncovered two promising ball carriers in Mal Walker and Dave Means. Dave knew what he was about in there and hit the line for substantial gain on more than one occasion, while Walker showed to advantage around the ends, though apparently unfamiliar with the Bowdoin formations and the duties of a backfield man on the defense. With sufficient seasoning under fire Walker will use his spritling pistons to garner much yardage for Bowdoin.
 To gain an idea of the futility of the Bowdoin passing attack it is interesting to note that the Bears handed Colby eighty-three yards through intercepted passes as well as the ball on five separate occasions, while only netting about forty yards on their four completed rockets.
 Though often lackadaisical in their inter-State tilts, the White Mules each year put a pennant contender on the grid. Their repeatedly good showing gives rise to the question as to whether the Colby way of playing generally considered easier opponents outside of the Series is not superior to the Bowdoin way of stacking up with a major opponent in each clash.
 Or is it the Colby scouting system? Besides Goodrich and Millett Colby sends out many student spies to foreign fields. Paddy Davan, conspicuous by his consistent ground gains in Saturday's fiasco, scouted Bowdoin and other Maine colleges prior to the Mule-Bear encounter while his own team did battle with out-of-state eleven.
 At 11:30 A. M., Sunday, Coach David Morey of Bates, wending his way homeward from the Orono skirmish, dropped in on Coach Roundy for a now-wow. The topic of discussion—well, gents, we won't go into that, huh? through for 35 yards, and again for 25, but each time the scrappy Fryeburg eleven held. Copeland, starting as quarterback for Bowdoin, was clipped from behind and received ankle injuries, which will probably keep him out for the remainder of the season.

YEARLINGS TROUCE BUCKSPORT PREP IN OPENING GAME 12-0

Conner, Putnam, Gowell Star in Backfield; Drummond, Drake, McGarry Line

Playing their first game of the season against a team that had outtraced Boston College freshmen ten first downs to four, the Bowdoin freshmen handed Bucksport Prep a 12-0 trouncing here Friday afternoon. With Putnam as fullback supporting the line, the yearlings' defensive playing outshone their offensive team play. The first score came after a drive in the opening period. Following a pass, Conner to Shaw, which brought the ball to the 15 yard line, Conner swept wide around end to score.
Yearlings Show Balanced Strength
 In the last half, despite the icy-cold rain that had just begun to fall, Bowdoin played hard, heads-up football. Early in the fourth period a blocked punt paved the way to their second and final score, made by Putnam, who probed to be a shifty line plunger. For Bowdoin, Conner, Putnam, and Gowell played well in the backfield, while Drummond, Drake, and McGarry starred in the line.
 Bliss and Sparks were outstanding in Bucksport's line, with Staglino carrying on effectively as quarterback. The line-up:
Bowdoin (12) (0) Bucksport
 Drummond, Dana, le, r, Bryan, Cassidy
 Shreve, McGarry, le, rt, Bliss
 Peterson, Fortier, lb, r, Chenev, Sparks
 Drake, c, Douglas, Celest

SCRAPPY FYREBURG ELEVEN HOLDS JR. VARSITY EVEN 0-0

Unable to break away in a scoring drive, Bowdoin's junior varsity gridmen were forced to content themselves with handing the invading Fryeburg team a scoreless tie Thursday afternoon. Time after time the Bowdoin backs knifed their way deep into their opponent's territory, but the soaking field and drizzling rain made their gains inconsistent, downing them on many a potential scoring thrust.
 In the first period Dick Boyd, Bowdoin's fullback, broke into the open for a 55-yard dash. Later Hunt went

SABRINA ROAD TEAM TO RACE BOWDOIN HERE

Amherst and Bowdoin Resume Relations After Half-Century Breach

Dave Morris Leads Harriers Next Wed.

Coach Magee is at Present Dissatisfied with Team Showing

Returning home athletic relations with Amherst after a breach of almost half a century, the Bowdoin harriers will meet up with the Sabrina road-racers over the local 4 1/2 mile course next Wednesday.
 Led by Captain Dave Morris, the cross-country men, fresh from their second-place win in Harvard Intercollegiate, will run up against an Amherst squad that has lost to Yale in its only start of the season. As yet they are untried against small college competition, and thus no real estimate of their strength can be established.
 Coach Magee was none too pleased at Bowdoin's showing at Harvard, although the plodders captured second place in a field of eight, losing first place by a mere two points. "Some of the boys did not punish themselves in the race," he said, "and I am sure that if every man did his best we would have won."
Home Race Will Be Easier
 Running on the home course will be an entirely different sensation to the White runners, however. The nervousness of the men was apparent, while the roughness and muddiness of the roads made the going difficult throughout.
 It is anticipated that the Lord Jeffs will send a squad of about ten to the race, and Coach Magee is prepared to equal but not surpass the number of Amherst entries. The following will probably run: Dave Morris, who captured eighth place at Cambridge and who led the Bowdoin pack home; Fred Burton, who is the most improved man on the squad, leading every time trial home and finishing but two places behind Morris in the last meet; Elmer Hutchinson, brilliant spot star, who finished fourth in his first varsity race last Friday; Tom Ujacek, holder of the New England freshman cross-country record, who has not yet rounded into mid-season form, but cannot be counted out until the finish; Neil LaBelle, Vincent Nowlis and Emmons Cobb, three other sophomores who have come along fast; Ned Behr, Walt Travis, Jim Guptill, John Baker, and others, depending upon the number the Sabrins send up.

D. U.'S FAVORITES IN FRATERNITY RUN

Delta Upsilon is favored to win the annual interfraternity meet for the second successive year this afternoon. With the captain of the varsity and several other seasoned performers, the grid is likely to be a runaway for the D.U.'s.
 Chi Psi is figured to give the defending champions their biggest struggle, with the Zeta Psi plodders favored for third. With Dave Morris, Fred Burton, Bob Prouty, Ned Behr, Bill Travis, Jack Morris, and others, the D.U.'s are well ahead on paper.
 Elmer Hutchinson, Nelson Tibbets, Ned Packard and others will lead Chi Psi over the 3 1/2 mile course, while Zeta Psi's front runners will be Vincent Nowlis, and Brad Robinson.

HARRIERS ARE CLOSE SECOND AT HARVARD

 After Cobb, however, Tibbets, LaBelle, Guptill, Ujacek, Johnson, Baker, Nowlis and Travis finished in close order, beating out many of the other competitors.

THE STRIPED TIGER
 "Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great animal artist, Paul Bransom... inspired by the savage ferocity of the striped tiger, known throughout the world as the terror of the jungle. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted." That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

SILLS SPEAKS ON YOUTH AND MODERN CHURCH

Church Has Responsibility of Attracting Our Allegiance

Stating that youth in general is not interested in organized religion, President Silles spoke in Sunday Chapel, October 30, taking as his subject "Youth and the Church".

Reasons for not attending church are many. As enumerated by President Silles, they are: students are too lazy, are indifferent, have other things to do, dislike the ministers, or don't because their parents do not.

Responsibility on Church According to President Silles, some responsibility should be placed on the church as to why our allegiance is given to the modern world.

GROWLER WILL MAKE FIRST APPEARANCE OF YEAR SATURDAY

Bowdoin Humorous Magazine to Come Out with Different Form

Growler will send its whimsical roar over the Bowdoin campus simultaneous with Alumni Day and the Bowdoin-Maine classic this Saturday.

Playing on the topic of the day—Bowdoin versus Maine—the cover depicts a spirited subject, dear to the hearts of Bowdoin graduates and undergraduates alike.

President Silles comes in for his share of the raucous; a page of biography in the lighter vein with several little-known side-lights of his career touched on for the first time.

Several pages of queer, amusing anecdotes will narrate, and all on pertinent themes—continue the New Yorker tradition. Rushing week, the Depression, unrented college rooms, and fraternities all fall under Growler's all-seeing glance.

Following the presentation exercises, lunch will be served to the alumni and their wives.

CANADA DEBATERS MEET WHITE TEAM IN FIRST CONTEST

Competition is Main Point of International Debate in Moulton Union

"Resolved, that the principle of competition has retarded the progress of the world" was the subject of an informal debate between Mt. Allison University and Bowdoin last Thursday evening in the lounge of the Moulton Union.

The first of the ten minute speeches was delivered by Stephen Leo 34, of Bowdoin, who upheld the affirmative.

Ernest Weeks, first speaker for the negative (Mt. Allison), devoted the foremost portion of his talk to some of his impressions of Maine—this being his first experience in the State.

The main theme of his argument was the "Fostering of the Industrial Revolution". He spoke of the competition brought about by machines in the cotton industry, and the way that they have forced more efficiency in multiple production.

Pearl, Published Work of Bowdoin Undergraduates Credit To College

The Pearl (The Bowdoin Edition) Bruce Humphries, Inc., Boston, Mass. $1.50.

This trim little book should be eagerly received by students and general reader alike. Because it represents work of a group of undergraduates studying Chaucer (English 21-22) under Professor Chase at Bowdoin College, it is bound to be the object of considerable local interest, while its future as an auxiliary text in literature courses is assured.

WHITE BEAR MEETS BLACK FOR LAST TUSSLE ON OWN GROUNDS

GAME CRITICAL FOR PALE BLUE ELEVEN

White, Still Underdog, Plans to Give Bricemen Hard Battle

With all thought of the state championship erased by an unsatisfactory victory, Bates that automatically eliminated both elevens, Bowdoin will plunge into its final state series engagement determined to capture second place with a triumph over Maine.

Unhindered by injuries and the tension that will no doubt be present in the Black Bear lineup, the White is set to pull the "hat trick" they accomplished two years ago when they ousted the Black Bear from title rating after taking trimmings from Colby and Bates.

Although the tie definitely barred Bowdoin from the championship, the desire to beat Maine is as strong as ever, and the Polar Bear, still the underdog, will attempt to gratify the hundreds of alumni who will return for Alumni day by wreaking vengeance on the Pale Blue squad that trounced them last year, 20 to 0.

The Bricemen have eked out two 6 to 0 wins, over Colby and Bates respectively, in the past two weeks, and will attempt to win their sixth state series game in a row when they clash with the Polar Bear Saturday. Both games have been won by desperately hurled passes by Don Favon, but Maine has something besides a passing attack. Six good ball-carriers and ten smart linemen usually see action, and that combination has lost but one game this year, a decision of 26 to 0 administered by the powerful Holy Cross Crusaders.

In the backfield Coach Fred Brice has plenty of material. Don Favon, former Deering high star, is outstanding. He is a real triple-threat, with perhaps the most educated punting leg in the state. Jim Romansky, Maine's star back, is also a real show, Mel Means, Jim Wilson and Butler, as well as several others, are likewise spectacular.

CAPTAIN JOHNNY MILLIKEN stellar center, who will play his last State Series game Saturday.

In the line theories "Kack" Aldrich, "Sugar" Kane, Sam Calderwood, Cobb, Reese, Craig, Parsons, Judd, Hill and others who will provide the White forward wall with plenty of opposition. Each of these men is fast and well drilled.		The probable linemen:

With the advent of alumni Saturday, the Alpha Eta, Bowdoin Chapter of Chi Psi fraternity will dedicate their new lodge on Body street, Albert S. Davis '33, president of the chapter, expects that the men will move in November 1. They will certainly take possession by November 5.

The Alpha Eta is particularly indebted to Brother John W. Anderson, Michigan '90, sometime (1923) national Chi Psi president. His law office, which organized the original Ford Motor Company and until recently controlled a large part of its stock, donated $40,000 toward the new lodge.

The donation of the new lodge is Chi Psi's tribute to Alpha Eta's steadfastness and loyalty, its list of distinguished alumni, and its honored prominence on the Bowdoin campus.

STATISTICS SHOW GAME CLOSE IN ALL PHASES

Both Teams Prove Steady in Defensive Play; Hubbard Nearly Breaks Away for Score; Milliken, McKenney, and Low Outstanding

Bowdoin came back. Two great adamant lines—Bates and Bowdoin—buffeted each other all over Carleton Field on even terms Saturday, neither frontier conceding an iota of ground, with the 0-0 final score the inevitable outcome of the pitched battle.

Outrushing a reputedly superior Bobcat eleven, five first downs to three, the Polar Bears came within a hair's breadth of dramatically lugging off the undisputed honors of the day. For it was just that much that Heinie Hubbard lacked to shake off a final garnet safety man from behind after a spectacular thirty-five yard jaunt down the side-lines.

DELTA UPSILON OF BOWDOIN 75 YEARS OLD OCTOBER 28TH

Chapter Founded 1857 But Broke Up in Civil War; Refounded 1892

Seventy-five years ago on October 28, 1857, a chapter of the Anti-Secret Confederation, which was destined to be the present chapter of Delta Upsilon, was founded at Bowdoin. Little is known of the actual early history of the chapter, due to the loss of records at its demise in 1861.

However, we know from the second charter of the "Bugle" that there were ten charter members. They were Levi R. Leavitt, first president; Winthrop Norton, vice-president; James L. Phillips, corresponding secretary; Marcus Wright, Jr., recording secretary; Nelson F. Cram, treasurer; uncle of Professor Mr. Shell P. Cram; Edwin A. Harlow, John E. Butler, Albert Def. Palmer, Gustavus S. Palmer, Reuben A. Kilduff and Wm. S. B. Smith.

In the three original years membership grew rapidly, increasing from the original ten to twenty-two in 1859 and twenty-four in 1861. Finally in 1861 a nation divided by war caused the death of the Bowdoin chapter, which gave up its sons grandly to the Federal cause.

After its disappearance from the campus in 1861, the chapter remained dormant until 1892, when it was renewed at the 58th annual convention of Delta Upsilon. This convention was held at the Colby chapter in Waterville on October 12, 13 and 14. Here the petition for a restoration of the Bowdoin charter was submitted and accepted by the convention.

This seventy-fifth anniversary will be celebrated in conjunction with the annual initiation to be held on Friday evening, and with the banquet which will be given Saturday evening following the Maine game. Chief among the speakers on this occasion will be Guy Sturgis, Bowdoin '98, of Portland, Justice of the Supreme Court of Maine.

MIDNIGHT RALLY

On the eve of the important game Saturday there will be a big midnight rally, weather permitting. The time is set at midnight because of the activities of the various fraternity houses. Special speakers have been planned for, cider and doughnuts will be furnished by the Student Council.

General Hubbard, Donor of Library One of Bowdoin's Most Devoted Sons

It is the usual thing here on campus to think of Thomas Hamlin Hubbard '57 merely as the donor of the Library building. We thus dismiss from mind one of the most heroic, gifted sons Bowdoin has ever nurtured; as well as a man responsible for more of the material equipment of the College than any other single individual.

Brevet Brigadier-General Hubbard—he earned that rank by gallant fighting in the Civil War—has been a member of the Board of Overseers and served for some twenty-five years on the Board of Trustees. He was one of the most successful lawyers the country has ever known. We are indebted to him, not only for the gift of Hubbard Hall, but also for the tablets in Memorial Hall, for the Whittier Field Grandstand and Field House and in large measure for the Searels Science Building.

PROFESSOR GRAY AND BARTLETT TO SPEAK FOR FORUM

Republican, Democrat, and Socialist to Explain Party Platform

On Monday November 7th in the lounge room of Moulton Union, the Bowdoin Forum will hold its initial meeting. The Executive Committee who have charge of this activity consists of Arthur E. Moyer and G. Russell Bouts, '33, James C. Freeman and Gordon E. Gillett, '34, and Allan F. Hubbell, '35. These men are assisted by the two faculty advisors, Professor Albert Abrahamson and Professor Ernst C. Helmreich. The Bowdoin Forum was begun last year as a sort of liberal club. It was partially intended to supplant the old Government Club.

As an innovation it created a good deal of interest this year. Now with this year's experience behind it should increase its attendance and the interest of its members. This year it will attempt to get faculty members to speak and to obtain other good speakers from outside. Tentative arrangements have been made with such men as Governor-elect Louis Brann. Such an excellent outlook, and such a worthy purpose should do much to popularize the club.

STUDENT COUNCIL WILL HOLD DANCE IN GYM SAT. NIGHT

Alumni Day Dance The annual Alumni Day Dance will be held Saturday evening following the Maine game in the Sargent Gymnasium at eight thirty. The dance is being given for the benefit of the Student Council, and the customary price of a dollar a couple and seventy-five cents a tag will be in order. The music will be furnished by Bowdoin's own band, the Polar Bears.

Alumni Return. Alumni returning for their day next Saturday will find a welcoming student body in no way suffering from the defeatism we heard so much about last spring.

As revealed at the recent review of freshman scholarship, and as indicated by the academic record of the entire college last year, the alumni will be renewing acquaintances and memories in the company of students who are serious in their purpose at college to a degree noticeably greater than ever before.

As has been stated many times before for the spirit here at college has been better this year than for several years back. One might ask the question 'what is meant by college spirit?'

Institute of Modern Literature. With the fortunate privilege of having the eminent William Butler Yeats speak to us tonight, Bowdoin College opens in a somewhat premature fashion the sixth biennial Institute.

When in 1901, Dartmouth College honored with special observance the 100th anniversary of the class to which Daniel Webster belonged, Senator Hoar of Massachusetts remarked that there were very few Americans whose colleges would celebrate the centennial of their taking their degrees.

These remarks of the President were introductory to a program which included: Robert Frost, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Hatcher Hughes, Margaret Deland, Carl Sandburg, James Stephens, Henry Seidel Canby, Irving Babbitt, Willa Cather, Professor Edmond Esteve, John Rodrigo Dos Passos, and Christopher Morley.

Memorial Hall shall be too small. COMMUNICATIONS

To the Editor of the Orient: My interest was aroused by the phrase 'unethical Republicanism' which Dean Nison gave as his attitude toward the coming election.

A second cause for the unenthused attitude toward the major parties is dissatisfaction with the mediocre leadership which they offer. As Dean Nixon states, 'Hoover is not the super-man of pre-election days.'

The result of the lack of enthusiasm for the Republican and Democratic parties is a tendency toward Socialism. As Coach Magee states, there are two classes of Socialists. There are those who believe in the 'test vote' on the Socialist ticket.

On the other hand there are those who are of the same frame, namely the status quo or radical social changes, and who believe in a progressive stand such as is offered by the Socialist party.

I have been told that alert students should keep themselves informed concerning unemployment, the Presidential campaign, war debts, and disarmament.

Mr. Hoover, in his first campaign speech, declared that this government was nearly forced off the gold standard. But this, according to the Democratic Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, is a 'wilful perversion of the truth.'

Mr. Hoover, in another part of his speech, charged that Gov. Roosevelt has never said that he favors a reduction of tariffs on farm products which can be shipped into this country.

Mr. Hoover, in another part of his speech, charged that Gov. Roosevelt has never said that he favors a reduction of tariffs on farm products which can be shipped into this country.

President Hoover, in a third part of his speech, termed Garner's Bill on public works a pork barrel legislation. If the Garner Bill is a pork barrel bill then Mr. Hoover's policies should, at this time, be dropped in an effort to win the support of the responsible author for that kind of legislation.

'A Bill of Divorcement' is on the bill for Wednesday. John Barrymore plays the character part, co-starring are Billie Burke. It is a powerful story of a woman who has divorced her husband committed to an insane asylum.

'The Crash' at the Cumberland on Thursday, reveals to the screen the problem that has faced many American families during the period from which we are now emerging.

Garner Bill therefore, simply puts into effect Mr. Hoover's proposal. Throughout his first campaign speech, Mr. Hoover pictured himself as a man who would observe, however, that none of his prophecies can be demonstrated until the election is over.

In conclusion, I have never known a man whose policies have been so unopposedly rejected to the office of president of the United States.

As has been stated many times before for the spirit here at college has been better this year than for several years back. One might ask the question 'what is meant by college spirit?'

Mr. Hoover, in his first campaign speech, declared that this government was nearly forced off the gold standard. But this, according to the Democratic Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, is a 'wilful perversion of the truth.'

Mr. Hoover, in another part of his speech, charged that Gov. Roosevelt has never said that he favors a reduction of tariffs on farm products which can be shipped into this country.

President Hoover, in a third part of his speech, termed Garner's Bill on public works a pork barrel legislation. If the Garner Bill is a pork barrel bill then Mr. Hoover's policies should, at this time, be dropped in an effort to win the support of the responsible author for that kind of legislation.

Wanted and Cross

The Dala nanny, eternal Hell week mascot, is no pal of Albert Samuel Davis, Junior. In pursuit he saw to the disappearance of the animal. Later in the evening Samuel was gently escorted to a waiting buggy and taken to the wife of Bowdoinham.

Entertainment at the festivities was provided by the principal of the drama, 'We're a jolly bunch of boys, and we like a lot of noise,' resumed the accompaniment of his hard wood.

Wild Indian Davis has been seen around campus in a scalped condition. Ho, hum, live and learn, Sammy.

While we're speaking of Professor Little, we hear Clara Hayes is chafing in on his bicycle monopoly, and also his bicycle, when Becker, official messenger boy, peddles swiftly across campus.

It seems that Tommy 'Socialist' Means entertained ideas of swimming down the river, but his entire class Point, took one look at the briny deep, and beat it. 'He could ditch it out but he couldn't take it.'

Every Bowdoin man should feel enough love and appreciation for his college, enough pride in being a Bowdoin man to lend his entire self support of the team to which he looks for victory.

To the Editor of the Orient: I should like to say a few words in defense of the idealist class of condemned individuals I confess to be a member.

Socrates was a great idealist who was scoffed at in his own day by the vast majority. Christ was perhaps the greatest idealist of all time and He too was ridiculed.

Now the Socialist party is idealistic. Thank God there is such a party! Yes, it is idealistic. Marconi held a theory one day and today by the simple turning of a dial we have music and entertainment whenever we desire it.

A number of protests have already been provoked by the editorial, 'On Voting' appearing in the Orient of the 15th. These protests have pointed out almost all the fallacies in that article.

Do you always have to get something out of everything to feel that it is worthwhile? Did you ever think that you might be putting something into a rally by coming in? That is exactly what each fellow does when he attends a rally.

ANNUAL RED CROSS

ROLL CALL COMING

Bowdoin will participate again this year in the annual Red Cross Roll Call which will begin the Sunday after Armistice Day, November 13. Dean Nixon is District Captain for the College (10th district). E. L. Haskwell is student chairman. The appeal will be made through the heads of the fraternities and a committee of non-fraternity men. It is hoped that the response will be even more generous than it was in 1933 when 486 members were enrolled in the College.

although commensurate, is encouraging competition in many forms, realizing that this competition has prevented stagnation, lowered prices to the consumer, and raised the standard of living.
Fearside Second Speaker for Affirmative
William W. Fearside '35, the second speaker for the affirmative, by pointing out how we have recognized the defects of competition, amplified and completed the argument set forth by Leo. He further pointed out how we have overcome these defects by government regulation, trade associations, and labor unions.
The second man upholding the negative was Joseph A. Berridge, an Englishman studying at Mt. Allison. The glaciars, he said, forced men to either think or die. As soon as man began to think he began to compete with his neighbor. Naturally the most intelligent and far-seeing people survived. Countries, such as Mesopotamia, were settled because of their relative advantages in competing with other countries. Even Rome would not have attained her greatness save for the principle of the survival of the fittest, of man competing against man. He carried his exposition up to the Industrial Revolution, where his argument dove-tailed with that of his colleague.
The seven minute rebuttals were delivered by William W. Fearside for the affirmative and Ernest Weeks for the negative. The debate was closed with a few appropriate remarks by the chairman, Mr. Daggett.
Weeks and Berridge stayed in Brunswick over night, in order that they might witness for the first time an American football game, and that they might have a better glimpse of activities at Bowdoin.

Bowdoin G. O. P. Club Booms Party Campaign With Big Political Rally At

The first speaker at the Republican rally held last Wednesday evening in Memorial Hall under the auspices of the Student Republican Club, was Raymond S. Oakes, hardworking chairman of the Cumberland County Republican Committee.
After a clever introduction by presiding officer Dean Nixon, Mr. Oakes launched himself into a strong plea for people to demand facts and to analyze those facts before they cast their votes. Beginning his speech with a commendation of "Ducky" Holmes, the popular Brunswick chairman, for his excellent work during the September campaign, he related how the county committee had covered all the territory and developed an organization, the result of whose fine work was the twenty-three hundred plurality by which they carried the county in the September election. In this connection he voiced the opinion that had there been a similar organization throughout the state, the result would have been of a very different nature.
Chairman Oakes then went on to say that the result of the September election had changed the aspect of things completely. A greater effort is required than usual if this unfortunate turn of affairs is to be reversed in November. To further this end, a Hoover Club is being started in the county, the purpose of which is to have all those who are going to vote for Hoover to sign a membership card with their name and address. These cards will enable the town and ward workers to know who their followers are, and who they can be sure to vote on election day.
Voters More Serious This Year
After a few jokes, Mr. Oakes then began on the main portion of his speech. He stated that he considered that President Hoover had made a remarkable presentation of the National issues, as compared to the Democratic candidate. This is a time when everybody is looking at the election much more seriously. Formerly the vast majority took it somewhat as a game, but now they are considering it from the standpoint of bread and butter. He went on to state the figures given by the President concerning unemployment conditions, and also to announce for the first time the Maine unemployment figures for the summer months. Employment, he stated, had increased, while increased 100,000 in August, 268,000 in September, and the prospects for October are even brighter.
When it comes to information supplied by the Department of Labor, employment increased from June fifteen to September fifteen twenty-two percent. These gratifying results represent the hard, constructive work done by the Republican administration.
People Will Not Analyze Facts
He then quoted largely from an editorial in the Portland Evening News which criticized Hoover for proving the fallacy of a Roosevelt statement, and then making a similar statement himself. The editorial, based mainly on Hoover's Detroit speech, told how Hoover made a strong contradiction of a statement by Governor Roosevelt to the effect that he, if he got in, could reduce the revenue from the excise on liquor to one-half its present value. Mr. Hoover in his speech asked how Governor Roosevelt proposed to make this reduction, and then gave figures showing that he could reduce excises one billion and a half. But Mr. Oakes hastened to show that Hoover spoke of a reduction of one billion, while Roosevelt's estimate in 1932 budget, while Roosevelt intended to achieve his reduction from the ordinary running expenses. In this connection, he quotes from the Hoover speech, "If the economies proposed this year had been adopted by the House, there would have been a further reduction of one half a billion." Thus Mr. Oakes showed how Hoover, at the point of the President's speech, and gave an incorrect editorial to the public. It is the many cases like these that make it necessary for everyone to analyze facts correctly.
Closes with Plea to Students
In closing, Chairman Oakes reiterated his plea for correct analysis of the facts, and said that if the intellectual people take the trouble to analyze these technical points in Hoover's speeches correctly, there will be trouble in his reelection.
Attorney-General Clement F. Robinson '04, the second speaker, emphasized President Hoover's personal qualities, making a pertinent appeal to men voting for the first time to get at the facts surrounding each candidate. Before beginning his argument, Mr. Robinson, a former editor-in-chief of the Orient and associate editor of the Bugle, and manager of baseball, indulged in a reminiscence or two. Among other memories he recalled the last time he had spent in Memorial Hall platform. He was to deliver an Ivy Day Presentation. He double-crossed the newspapers, his friends in the audience, and the inimitable "Mitch", by giving an address entirely different from the one he had originally composed.
Mr. Robinson stated his argument with an analysis of the public feeling toward the coming election. "People starting life for themselves," he began, "have a great scorn for idealism and loyalty." Here Mr. Robinson commented effectively on the present standard of politics, greatly improved over that of the sixties and nineties. People today, he believes, are far more ready to declare themselves than ever before. The results of nation-wide college polls are evidence that young people are universally interested in the affairs of the nation. The voter of today wants accurate statistics, facts in figures, not the threats and promises of past campaigns. These minds, even for straightforward information, should be deeply impressed by President Hoover's "almost painful experience" in his campaign speeches.
Socialist Party of Protest
"Both old parties are putting the campaign issues forward fairly and squarely," said Mr. Robinson. "Hand with some of the ideas on socialism expressed in last week's Orient are some of his views on the third party."
"Any third party is merely a party of protest," he said. "The Democrats have the slightest chance of accomplishing his ends as a third party man." The third party votes will never gain their object in a practical way, Mr. Robinson added. He sees no possibility of an absolute socialist control for some time; the fact that "the old parties are still functioning and will continue to function" is a guarantee against that change.
Having disposed of the Socialism question, the speaker proceeded to the Republican-Democrat dispute. He treated the issues here involved almost as briefly as he had the third party question, remembering, as he quoted himself, that "no souls are saved after the first twenty minutes."
He explained the Democratic view as blaming the Captain of the Ship of State for the boat's rocking. The ship is experiencing heavy weather, Mr. Robinson admitted, but it is from a storm uncontrollable on the part of the shipper. He asserted that had not Hoover been at the helm, the situation would have been much worse. "We may prove this by reading all of Hoover's addresses."
See Hoover
"See President Hoover himself," and compare the marks of work and strain upon his face with the mere promises offered us by the Democrats, pledged Mr. Robinson. Dig out the records of the men to whom Mr. Roosevelt is hopelessly indebted and who would in-elder brother was killed in battle, saw him Lieutenant-Colonel of the 20th Maine Volunteers. Boldly winning higher commissions, he became a colonel and finally, in 1865, a brevet brigadier general.

Upon his honorable discharge from the army, he again started practicing law in New York. His progress in that field was comparable to that he had made in the war. To some extent specializing in railroad rights cases, he made remarkable advances through the business world. The full list of his titles and directorships would fill a small volume. A few of them are: President of the International Banking Corporation, member of the American Bar Association Committee, Chairman of the New York State Bar Association Committee on Legal Ethics, director and vice-president of the Pease Acetic Company, Some of his non-business offices; are Commander, Military Order of the Loyal Legion, President of the New England Club of New York City, President of the Pease Acetic Club, Overseer and Trustee of Bowdoin and Trustee of Albany Law School.
Gave Grandstand, Hubbard Hall
His first gift to Bowdoin was the grandstand, dedicated by him in 1893. His greatest gift, and that which has been most valuable to the College, was the Library building, still one of the finest of its kind in the country. (It has been recently estimated that to replace Hubbard Hall today would cost in the vicinity of a million dollars.) This edifice was erected in 1902-03. Gifts were previous to this he had donated to Memorial Hall the tablets bearing the names of Bowdoin men who fought in the Civil War.
He has saved a client's estate by means of his skill as a lawyer, and since the client, Mr. Edward F. Searles, felt giving an exceptionally fine recompense for the service, General Hubbard suggested that he give vent to his generosity in the form of the gift of a science building for Bowdoin. The building was erected in 1894.
His liberal policies were elected. The stock market is the barometer of national economies—follow the catastrophe it experienced as a result of Democratic House mismanagement. Follow the results of past issues of fiat money such as that proposed by the Democrats. Then cast your ballot as you see fit.
"People whose living depends on business going on," concluded Mr. Robinson, "know that to trust the navigation of this ship to an inexperienced navigator at this point would spell disaster." Let us on the contrary stand by the man who has not spared himself in guiding the Ship of State through one of its worst storms, and upon whom we can depend to bring us through the remaining difficulties that confront us.
The last speaker was the Honorable Ralph O. Brewster. His opening anecdote concerned President Taft. When Taft came to Portland to speak he was unexcusably rude. In his opening talk he remarked that "he could take care of his producers but God help his introducers."
However, Ex-Governor Brewster considered the meeting an alluring chance to renew experiences of youth, as he had spent his own college days here. He remained here came here with some trepidation at the result of the Orient poll.
The Republican Party, said Ex-Governor Brewster, represents the spirit of ascent and of the men who stood for the concept of federal power. As vital as it was for Washington to found the country, as vital as it was for Lincoln to save it, the need for federal power. In certain European countries the idea of "again the government" is predominant. There is danger of that here. We must support the body which gives the most stability. "I speak as a rebel." But the Republican Party was founded for the interests of the people. The sanity of the Republican attempt to grapple with these problems is evident when compared with the Democratic attempt, comparatively radical. Their competitive tariff would introduce foreign competition which now we cannot oppose.

It is not so much for these books and honors, however, that we should remember and respect General Hubbard. Our debt to him arises from another phase of his personality; it is not for his titles that he wanted Bowdoin men to remember him. As he said in concluding his speech in presentation of the Grandstand, "If contestants and spectators will sometimes think of him who gave this structure as of one who believes in athletics and who loves fair play, he will be well content with such recompense."
Each Democrat moreover wants his own product protected. In this country centralized control is most important. It can be in the interests of the public good. The idea of less government in business is rapidly passing into the discard. Billions have been recently put into business. America is becoming socialized. We won't emerge from chaos until the principle of centralized control is realized.
Nations either go on or go backwards and disintegrate by lack of leadership. That is why I am a believer in Republicanism, said Mr. Brewster. America possesses the necessary genius and vitality.
We in the decade of national prohibition can see its evils. The Republican attitude is infinitely more sound and reasonable than the Democratic. The party presents a new law for the voters. The Democratic platform simply offers repeal of the present law.
The leader of the Republican party represents a broader and greater experience than any man at the helm of any nation in the world. Let us resolve to use the ballot individually. Let us also serve as an example to other struggling nations so that they may see that our flag is still waving aloft and that America is still constant in its part.

What is Cross Blending?

an Art

might explain it this way...

"Let's say you're painting clouds. You've got your primary colors here on the palette. But you haven't the clouds until you blend certain colors into the special tone you want.
"This is very much what happens in making a good cigarette. And I gather that what Chesterfield means by Cross-Blending is what an artist does with colors. Their Domestic and Turkish tobaccos — many varieties of each — are the primary colors.
They blend and cross-blend these tobaccos until they get the special tone they want—in other words, the Chesterfield flavor.
"And just as each color you use acts on the others to change and enrich them, so each Chesterfield tobacco partakes of the fine qualities of every other.
"You 'meld' different kinds to get a better kind. That's Cross-Blending!"

SCRAPPY YEARLINGS DIVIDE HONORS WITH BIG BRIDGTON TEAM

Freshmen Prove Real Worth in Close Encounter; Gowell Stars

Tying Bridgton Academy 0-0 in four, finishing 12-minute periods of fast, rugged football, the scrappy, fresh grid team proved to onlookers Friday afternoon that it had the fighting edge on the heavier invaders in one of the closest encounters ever seen on Fickard field. Although they failed to produce a scoring drive, the yearlings showed improvement in their second game of the season, and clicked more effectively on the offense than before.

Gowell Avers Possible Disaster

That the game did not end disastrously may have been due to the quick thinking of Gowell, quarterback for the White. It was half-way through the fourth quarter when Gowell, who had been doing the kicking for Bowdoin, stepped back to punt out of danger, as usual on the third down. He kicked hurriedly as the Bridgton backs came through and the ball travelled in a high arc, coming down a free ball about 25 yards to his right still behind the line of scrimmage on Bowdoin's 20-yard line. For a second things looked bad for the frosh; then Gowell went into action like a flash. Dashing over to the bounding pigskin, he picked it out of the air on the run and wheeled up the side-lines for 60 yards before the astonished Bridgton backs caught him. After a heated discussion the ball was brought back to the point where Gowell had caught it; he punted again, this time out of danger. The game was remarkably full of penalties inflicted on both teams.

For Bowdoin Gowell, Conner and Putnam starred as backs, with Drummond and Shreve shining in the line. McLaughlin and Polansky starred for Bridgton in the backfield, while Lavagna and Rendall were outstanding in the line.

AMHERST HARRIERS INVADE BRUNSWICK TO SEEK FIRST WIN

Smartering from three successive defeats, the Amherst road team comes to Brunswick on Wednesday, November 2nd, determined to break their streak of losses at the expense of the Bowdoin harriers. The Jeffmen first bowed to a powerful Yale team by a score of 55-15. The following week the Tufts runners managed to eke out a 29-27 victory over the Sabrinas, and this past week end Amherst succumbed to Mass. State to the tune of 37-18.

Among the Lord Jeff runners, Bill Hill should give the Polar Bear team difficulty. In the Yale race, the time of which was exceptionally good, he was the first Amherst man in, finishing in seventh position. He is second in the Tufts duel, and crossed the line sixth against Mass. State. His teammate, Sweet, is also a threat, as he was fourth in the Mass. State encounter.

Competition from Chase, Huppe Competition should also be provided by Chase, who finished sixth against Tufts, eighth against Yale, and eighth against State. Huppe has also been doing well, crossing the line 6th against Tufts, and ninth against Mass. State. Miner, Cobb, Minnick and Warren are other Sabrina runners who must not be overlooked. Amherst will probably send about ten men for the contest. The following will probably run for Bowdoin: Captain Dave Morris, who led the Polar Bear runners at the recent intercollegiate meet; Fred Burton, who has been showing up well all fall; Elmer Hutchinson, winner of the interfraternity road race a week ago; Ned Packard, Tom Uniscke, Neil LaBelle, Vin Nowlis, Emmons Cobb, Ned Behr, Bill Travis, Jim Guphill and John Baker.

yard loss and Low ranted through the Garnet exterior on the next play to smug Pricher for another three yard setback. Pricher punted to the Bowdoin 49.
Bucky slipped off three notches through right tackle but Burdell lost two. Richardson gave rise to a kick that travelled over 60 yards into the end zone. Charley McKenney's expansive frame galloped down on the punt and he touched the ball inches from the goal line and rolled into the end zone with the pigskin. The field judge who was in position to see McKenney's valiant dive, placed the ball in play a half-foot from the goal stripe and it looked like a great chance for Bowdoin. But Referee (My Pal) Swaffield ruled that McKenney did not ground the ball before it passed over the goal line and thus gave the ball to Bates out on the 20. The play demonstrated smart football on the part of McKenney and would have been a real opportunity for the Bears had it been allowed.

Hubbard on 14 Yard Sally
Bowdoin opened the second quarter with a pass. Hubbard zoomed the oval to within the finger-tips of Davis, but Knowles cut in on the Bear end and ran back a yard, being smothered on his own 35. Bates fumbled and Bucky retrieved for the White but the whistle had blown signifying a dead ball. Pricher, who covers more ground in a single stride than Gallant, Fox and yard advance. When Knowles thrount Bucky for no gain, Richardson booted to Valicenti on the 25 and Milliken smote the Garnet spark-plug after a four yard runback. Low and Davis scuttled through to set Bates arrear by a yard and then Torrey spanked Valicenti to earth for no gain. Burdell scooped up Pricher's ball on the 36 but bumped into Murphy and Berry on the 41. Richardson rapped the center for five. On the next play Richardson was illegally tackled and a fifteen yard penalty on Bates gave Bowdoin a first down on Bates' 44.
Brud King Enters Fray
Play see-sawed without either side realizing any material gain. Then Brud King, noted Bates cripple, absent since the opening game of the season, ball on the 38 King shot and completed pass and right then figured in one of the cleverest gasps of the conflict. He dropped back as if to punt, but it was only the second down and so a forward rarely but in doing so slowed Hubbard just long enough for two flying Bobcats to come up from behind to fell Hubbard on the Bates 40 along with the help of Valicenti.
After Richardson dropped two yards and Bucky added five on a reverse around the Bates right end, Hubbard and Davis combined on a flat pass that was good for eight yards and a first down. Davis leaped into the air to hog the spheroid from Pricher's waiting hands and complete the forward. Two immaterial line smacks and a mix-up in signals wherein eight yards were lost stemmed the White onslaught.
Bucky Helps Self to First Down
When Bates regained possession Brud King found the Bowdoin line for ten yards and a first down on the Bates 38. Then what seemed a very, very dumb bit of football transpired when Pricher kicked on the first down. The kick went floozy and soared outside on the dead-center bar. This was a distinct break for Bowdoin. The White-men were apparently due for another surge for Richardson pummeled the wall for three and Bucky labored his way twelve yards more to the Bates 35 as the third quarter came to a close.
The rest of the period saw a pitched battle of the two combatant forward walls, with Davis, Low, Kent, and McKenney scoring tackle after tackle, often breaking through the Garnet line to flog Pricher et als to earth for two and three yard losses.

SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

A word of approbation from Colby (Ben Toomey in the Waterville Sentinel): "Bow done? A team that can take a 25-0 shellacking and come back to the Bates is far from done. And, boy, will Colby be cheering for a Bowdoin victory against Maine Saturday?"

Old Man Jinx continued to tag the Bobcat on Saturday in the matter of men-left-on-accident... Gilman, first string Garnet guard, was carried to the hospital the morning of the Bowdoin game with a case of appendicitis.

Delms Galbraith, brilliant Bowdoin weight performer a year ago and at present in the insurance business in and about Portland, stepped in the Bowdoin cage last Monday and heaved the thirty-five pound ball over 54 feet. This is two feet better than Del's previous figure and but two feet less than Tootell's college record. In addition to his 54 foot groan, Del whisked the boulder out there a half dozen times at 53.

This from the Colby Echo's description of the Bear-Mule conflict (opening line): "A typical Bowdoin team came to Waterville..."

The famed "Iron Men" of Brown a few years back couldn't hold a candle to the Whitemen at Lewiston. Not a single substitution was made for Bowdoin until the last minute of play... and that was apparently a so-called "informatory" substitution.

That was a furious pace those interfrat road plodders set last week in their annual grid. The first eight men to break the tape—Hutchinson, Burton, Morris, Packard, Cobb, LaBelle, Guphill, Tibbetts—came in under the course record held by Tom Uniscke. Uniscke, who has worked up considerably since last season, could do no better than twelfth.

was sensed. King received the ball, waited until the Bowdoin linemen pressed him, and then, instead of shooting it over the scrimmage line he plugged it to Valicenti, who stood back of the line directly ahead of King and facing him. The Bowdoin linemen and secondary that did not rush King scrambled back to combat the expected pass and so Valicenti had plenty of time and space to tuckle around the Bowdoin left end and advance the ball fourteen to the 23. As the end of the half nearest Slugger Burdell intercepted one of King's heaves that had deflected from a Bobcat receiver.
Good Boy Hubbard
Later in the period Bowdoin cut loose in the most effective drive of either team, a drive that resulted in an advance of fifty-one yards in five plays. Davis cuddled a Garnet fumble on the Bowdoin 20. On a spinner Hank Richardson battered the line for five. On the following play Heine Hubbard emerged with the ball around the right end of the line after a triple reverse. In spite of the fact that his interference was sapped before he reached the scrimmage line, Hubbard continued down the sideline, dodged or feinted past a half dozen Garnet-jerseyed performers, and seemed headed for a sure touchdown as Davis cut over in hot haste from his own end to approach Valicenti, the lone Bates safety between Hubbard and an open field. Davis did take Valicenti out tempo-

HUTCHINSON BREAKS ROAD RACE RECORD AS CHI PSIS LEAD

Eight Men Follow to Break Record; Chi Psi's Lead Only Two Points

Sprinting furiously across the campus to win by inches, Elmer Hutchinson brought victory to Chi Psi in the annual interfraternity road race last Wednesday, over the 3 1/2 mile Mere Point course. By racing Fred Burton, the favorite, to defeat in the last few yards, Hutchinson gave Chi Psi the trophy by the margin of two points, 49, to Delta Upsilon's 51.

Although he had shown up well in previous races, Hutchinson was not conceded a chance to beat Burton and his teammate, Dave Morris. Coming with a terrific lunge at the finish, however, he got out in front to break the tape barely in front of Burton. Morris, outdistanced in the flashing spurt, trotted in third.

WITH CLIVE IN INDIA
"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the noted artist, Karl Godwin... inspired by the fierce and brilliant assaults by Clive and a handful of followers, outnumbered 20 to 1 by savage hordes of bloodthirsty natives, at the Battle of Plassey—the birth of the British Indian Empire—as described in the famous Henry book, "With Clive in India."

—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes

They are not present in Luckies ... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked
WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better meat-strap than his neighbor, let him build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door." —RALPH WALDO EMERSON
Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

To The Fraternities - A Suggestion
There is one controversy that never dies in educational circles. Whenever college men get together the old topic of the relative merits and demerits of the fraternity system receives its share of attention.

Although here at Bowdoin a high place is given by the fraternity to scholarship, we have always believed much more could and should be done toward aiding the freshmen to get oriented in their studies.

Perhaps the most forcible criticism flung at the American undergraduate club is that they too frequently get the narrow vision; they look for service to be done them instead of serving. Here is a definite means by which a chapter may serve the college, the student, and itself.

An Orient To Every Alumnus
A weekly copy of the BOWDOIN ORIENT sent to every living alumnus free of any subscription charge—that is an aspiration which we hold with great fondness.

Both inadequate and disappointing is the treatment of Bowdoin news in the metropolitan newspapers. Widely scattered as the alumni body of any college becomes, it is a difficult task to reach out and furnish each member with the material necessary to hold his interest.

Naturally, the ORIENT must await a benefactor in this project, for although the Bowdoin Publishing Company turns over a balance each fiscal year it would be able only to establish a fund which could grow through annual accumulation very slowly.

COLLEGIAN CURIOSITIES

Mustard and Cross

There is an Oakland reader perked at North Wintrop which seems to have a popularity of rumba-east riding; on the starboard bulwark of the stern locher is an enterprising and flourishing growth of fungus.

One of our learned professors, hard put to it to describe the various types of humor, picked Doc Johnson as an exponent of that genus which is "for men only."

After last Friday's rally a group of the lads went down Federal St. to the A.T.O. House, where they delivered the best of rousing cheers. The inmates came to the windows and responded by cheering Zeia Psi to the echo.

The round-table conference with William Butler Yeats was held on Friday night, when a bolt from the blue, came the query: "Didn't you once identify Beauty and Truth as one and the same thing?"

Saturday, half an hour before the scheduled dedication of the new gateway, the Buildings and Grounds Department stretched a nice big hawser across the campus roadway, fastening one end to South Wintrop, and the other to a sturdy tree.

That highly-publicized cider which the student Council denounced to last Friday's rally proved to be more than the traffic would bear, or more than the Bear would traffic. Anyway, the left-over stock which Hickok was holding for the command of his colleagues worked out its own salvation the other day, and foamed all over the proctor's room in North Hyde.

But one (Question: Whimsy, what are his?) is understood by the kindness of the man. So one is with Mr. Yeats. He is infinitely kind, and a little red, and very human.

FROSH SURRENDER TO POLITICAL LOGIC OF SOPH DEBATERS

Fearnside and Parker Win Top Money in Debate Over Hoover-Roosevelt

Arguing on the resolution that Hoover rather than Roosevelt should be elected President, the Sophomore debating team was judged a winner over the freshmen in their annual debate last Friday night.

In the afternoon session, which was held in the Debating Room of Hubbard Hall, the Sophomores team supported the negative side of the argument. Professors Abrahamson, Stalkmecht, and Miller, the judges for that time, decided that W. W. Fearnside and P. E. Sullivan, of the Sophomore team, were more forceful and convincing than E. L. Swift and W. A. Hagar, of the Freshman team.

In the evening session, held in the lounge of Moulton Union, the Sophomores supported the affirmative side of the question. At that time Professors Brown, Abrahamson, and Stalkmecht gave the decision to J. O. Parker and E. C. Tipping, of the Sophomore team, over E. H. Charles and L. L. Pelletier, of the Freshman team.

Each member of the Sophomore debating team will receive an award of eight dollars; each member of the Freshman team an award of four dollars. The two men voted the best speakers will receive additional awards.

By the first debate the Sophomores were given six points to the Freshmen's three; by the second the Sophomores were given seven and the Freshmen two, making the final score in points 13 to 5 in favor of the Sophomores.

Non-smokers rank higher scholastically than do smokers, regardless of whether they belong to the highest, the middle or the lowest intelligence quotient, according to a study made recently by Professor C. Ham of Washington State University.

NEW CHI PSI LODGE OPENS WITH HOUSE WARMING BANQUET

Seventy-one Give M'Intire '24 Rising Tribute for Work on Lodge Erection

Probably none of the fraternity houses was the scene of greater festivities or keener excitement than the house-warming banquet at the new Chi Psi Lodge. The low moon, skimming the pines to the south, gleamed from the tiny-paned windows and threw in long shadows the old fashioned lines of its colonial architecture.

Other speakers of the evening were Fred Chadbourn, Bob Filmore, and Arthur Scott, all of Alpha Eta, '17; a student representative from Alpha Alpha at Wesleyan; Edwin O'Neil '12 of Alpha Mu at Middlebury; and Warren Stearns, president of the Bowdoin Alpha and a graduate of last year.

ARMISTICE DAY IS SOURCE OF TALES

Yet the excitement was mixed with a degree of sadness, for Bowdoin had lost twenty-nine sons, while a dozen more were still in army hospitals. To these twenty-nine men, the Memorial Flagpole was dedicated two years ago.

At the dedication of the Memorial, President Sills said, "It is a good thing to have on a college campus in concrete form a reminder that life is not always pleasant and easy and that the liberties we enjoy, the privileges we share have been made possible for us by the sacrifices of those who have gone before."

Bowdoin's Summer Warriors
During the summer of 1916, Bowdoin was well represented in the various branches of military service. At Plattsburg twenty men were enrolled for summer training.

On February 6, 1917, it was decided to send seven or eight more ambulance drivers to France. One ambulance had already been provided, and another was under consideration.

Many Undergraduate Enlistments
April 24, 1917. At this time forty undergraduates had already enlisted in the many departments of the Army and Navy service, and the majority have been called to active duty.

Bowdoin Men Active in the War
In June 1917 there were 163 Bowdoin men in active service in the great war. There were 73 in the R. O. T. C.; 34 in the Coast Patrol; 13 in the Ambulance Corps; 43 in the various branches of the Regular Army.

Professor Meserve Commissioned
October, 1917 Professor Meserve was summoned to Washington to receive a commission as first lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps of the National Army. He was assigned to gas defence service. Lieutenant Meserve was the seventh member of the Faculty to enter the military service.

Bowdoin Man A German Prisoner
Henry Crosby Emery '32 was reported in March, 1917, to have been taken prisoner in the Aland Islands. He was trying, with a party of British, to get out of Finland on a neutral ship. The party was taken on a German vessel to Dantzig, Germany. Mr. Emery held a major commission in the officers reserve corps of the U. S. A.

First Undergraduate Dies in Service
During the Easter vacation of 1918 Michael J. Deichanty, Jr., '20, was killed as the result of an accident which befell his plane at Pensacola, Florida. Deichanty was a special student at Bowdoin. As he was too young for a commission in the army, he joined the aviation branch of the naval reserve, and was soon commissioned ensign. While training, his plane dropped 400 feet, and death was instant.

Jack Magee "Over There"
In the Spring of 1918 John J. Magee was chosen to go to France as an athletic trainer. He went almost immediately to France, and landed at Bordeaux the twenty-third of May.

Lt. Forbes Rickard, Jr. Killed
On the 19th of July, 1918, Lieutenant Forbes Rickard, Jr., '17, was killed in action. Rickard met his death gallantly in the Chateau-Thierry drive.

1,110 Bowdoin Men In War
February 5, 1919. According to reports 1,110 Bowdoin men served in the European War. Of that number 24 paid the supreme sacrifice, while 18 others were wounded.

Chesterfield's are Milder - Better
You know how it is. If a cigarette is mild—that is, not harsh or bitter, but smokes cool and smooth—then you like it and don't worry about how many or how often you smoke. And if it tastes right—that is, not over-sweet, not flat—then you enjoy it all the more. The right kind of ripe, sweet Domestic and Turkish tobacco... the right ageing and blending... make Chesterfields milder, better-tasting... They Satisfy!

TEAM OUTPLAYS MAINE ONLY TO BOW, SCORE 7-6

Maine was not to be denied, however. Following Hank Richardson's punt out to the 35, Robertson and Wilson hammered through on three plays to the fifteen yard line. Four straight power-plays with Robertson carrying netted a first down on the five yard mark, and Favog, plunging into a mass of players, scrambled over for the touchdown. Wilson took a perfect placement directly between the uprights for the winning point.

Rest of Game All Bowdoin
The rest of the game was completely and conclusively Bowdoin's. Never did Maine threaten again, and the Polar Bear was constantly stepping on his Brown brother's tail. It was midway in the third quarter that the Whitemen girded up their loins and scored. Set back to their own fifteen yard line by a holding penalty, Favog got off a magnificent boot to the White forty yard stripe, but Charlie Burdell ran it back to midfield. Then the Polar Bear started to run. Burdell, hammering the weak left side of Maine's line, slithered through tackle for seven yards, and Richardson whipped into center for two more. Hubbard took a fake reverse around Aldrich for seven yards and a first down. Richardson took the ball on the same play and made eight yards.

A triple reverse went astray and the Bears were momentarily set back two yards, but Richardson churned through right tackle for nine yards, which set the line ahead again. Completely blown up, Maine called time out, but the delay was futile, for Hubbard took the ball off-tackle for twelve yards and another first down on the eight yard line. Richardson lugged center for two, and Hubbard again spun and slipped off-tackle for five yards. Burdell called on Richardson to make the final plunge, and he whaled into the very center of the line. He was tumbled back viciously, but he had gone over the line, the first man to score on Maine in this year's series. Burdell's point for point was barely off, and Maine was still in front.

White Drive in Last Period
The second White drive came with but five minutes to go. Charlie Burdell caught a Favog punt on his own 25 yard line, and ran it back 20 yards. A short pass, Hubbard to Richardson, netted eight yards, and Richardson bucked the center of the line for 13 more. On four plays, Hubbard and Richardson carried the ball to the Maine 12 yard line, and the stands pleaded for a touchdown. Richardson

Ready to Vindicate Record by Taking Little Three '11'

Iron Men All
The Bears emerged from the slashing Maine game without a scratch and thus should be physically fit for Wesleyan. Richardson was temporarily dazed but returned after a ten minute rest. Totally unlike last season when seemingly half the team was on the sidelines at each conflict, the Whitemen have been extremely fortunate in the matter of injuries. Despite the hard-played games Bowser made only two substitutions Saturday and only one in the Bates dual. As a consequence the first string have been absorbing a great deal of punishment, especially Bakanowsky, 140 pound half, who has been sprained out two and three times per game but he comes back each time for more.

The Bears cut loose their entire repertoire of plays on Whittier in a gallant attempt to flay the Brown Bruins from Orono. Both offensively and defensively, the Bears are a well developed machine. All that remains to be done is to maintain that edge. The punting problem is conclusively solved by Richardson, who is booting the ball on even terms with the best of them, Richardson should have little difficulty in matching hoofs with the Wesleyan punners, who are reported to be below standard.

As the season draws to a close it is evident that Heinie Hubbard is the most consistent ground gainer on the eleven. Heinie does most of his travelling around the end. Richardson, however, is the better carrier through the center of the wall, while Backy shows to advantage on off-tackle snafus. Bowser's "power" play that has had them all guessing to date, calls for Hubbard to carry around either end and a quartet ahead of him to pave the way.

spun off-tackle for five yards, but Burdell was forced to carry the ball out side. This was the fatal play. It lost the Bears a down, and forced a pass, which Favog promptly batted down. It was a tense moment as Burdell stepped back to try a placement kick. The ball was snapped, and the White line functioned perfectly to hold the Bricemen out. Burdell booted, and the ball went out in a true arc, straight for the goal posts. It was not quite high enough, however, and passed a foot under the crossbar.

Maine immediately kicked out of danger, and the White line was powerless to gain in the moments that were left. They tried a long forward pass, which was knocked down, and the game was over. There were no outstanding breaks. Not one forward pass was intercepted, and no fumbles were recovered by the opposing team. The one possible "break" was a point after touch-down; it was the sole point that Jimmy Wilson had been able to convert from placement all year.

Wells Issues Early Call For Hockey Regulars To Report For Conditioning

Coach Wells announced to his hockey regulars that conditioning practice would start soon, probably the last of this week or the first of next. In preparation for a gruelling season, and with an eye to shaping his squad, Coach Wells will start rounding his men into physical fitness; roadwork and dummy drilling will be the order of the day. Misfortune dogged the Bowdoin six this fall, when Captain Johnny Rosenfeld, last year's star performer on the ice, failed to return, along with Dick Robbins. Neither men were among the list of graduates, so their loss was unexpected.

White Cubs Worn Out by Hell Week Play Hard, But Drop 12-0 Tilt
Worn out by Hell Week trials and vainly bucking adverse breaks, Bowdoin's freshmen stumbled to their first loss of the season at the hands of Maine Central Institute by a 12 to 0 score on Friday field here last Friday. The yearlings played stubborn but uninspired football to hold the M. C. I. line plunger but they lacked the speed to subdue an aerial attack. Near the end of the second period a Bowdoin back was hit just as he was getting off a pass. Falling short of its goal, the ball was intercepted by Reed, who, by some clever broken field running, kicked his way into the clear past the White secondary and sprinted down the sideline 53 yards for the score. An aerial mishap for the Bowdoin forward wall.

SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

What's this furor over the gym team? From a boiling-pot of conflicting rumors it appears that Professor Means is not now coach of the gymnasts—at least not in a salaried capacity. It would also seem via whispered info that outside pressure has been brought to bear on gym and that the future of this sport at Bowdoin is decidedly uncertain. Still further rumors have it that this is but the start of a vigorous move to stifle minor sports here. Whatever the hubbub over gym really is and to just what extent the above information approximates the truth is not known by the Orient, but it goes without saying that the frasca should be aired by the authorities and that these rumors should be either denied or substantiated. Gym was founded in 1925 as an official minor sport. Since then no Bowdoin gym team has won a single meet, but supporters of gym point out that this record is not unlike those results attributed to other Bowdoin sports in their infancy. Last winter the team came as near as it ever has to winning a meet when the White gymnasts held the M. I. Engineers to a 31-23 victory.

Bowdoin Places First Six Men to Take Meet Easily from Sabrinas
HUTCHINSON SETS NEW COURSE RECORD
Polar Bear Harriers Chalk Up Perfect Score in Only Home Dual Meet
Striding together in a compact group over the difficult Mere Point course, the Bowdoin harriers finished in the first six places to collect a perfect score over Amherst, 15 to 47. In a renewal of athletic relations with the Little Three college, Elmer Hutchinson, sophomore runner, led the field home to a new course mark, that left the wearers of the Green far in the rear. An automobile breakdown had handicapped the Sabrinas before the race even started, for they arrived in Brunswick at one o'clock, the morning of the race. They were never in the running from start to finish, and Hutchinson, Burton, Morris, Packard, Cobb and Labele all finished in front of the first Amherst man, Edwards.

and the boys were not at the peak of their form, they would give their best. He added that the exhibition was arranged to duplicate a varsity meet, so that the visitors might get an insight into the kind of work being accomplished in the up-to-date natatorium. Coach Miller then announced a feature dash, the 100 between Wallberg and Osborne. Wallberg, though still recovering from tonsillitis, spent 1:09 in 57.3, three yards the winner. A 200 breaststroke was won by John Beale (13 sec. handicap), by Essen (7 sec. handicap) and Bob Whitmore (scratch) close behind. The time was 3:15. Bob Foster, who Miller said has been kept from national Olympic honors by the fact that the country's four best backstroke men are in New England, gave a solo 100 backstroke exhibition in 1:12 to end the "show". He has done 1:09.

THE SEA WOLF
"Nature in the Raw" - as portrayed by the noted artist, N. C. Wyeth... inspired by the infamous Captain Kidd's fierce raids on the gold-laden Spanish galleons (1696), which made him the scourge of the Spanish Main. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild" - and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

"Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"
No raw tobaccos in Luckies - that's why they're so mild
WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

KICKOFF SCORE PAVES WAY FOR WESLEYAN WIN

Cardinals Blank Bears 20-0 as Larry Schlums Plays Havoc with Line

WHITE HANDICAPPED BY LACK OF SPIRIT

Hank Richardson Injury in Second Quarter Dulls Bowdoin Attack

Disheartened by a 74 yard dash to a touchdown on the opening kickoff, the Polar Bears grimaced during the season with a 20 to 0 loss at the hands of Wesleyan, at Middletown last Saturday. Larry Schlums, brilliant Cardinal back, grabbed Milliken's opening boot on his 26 yard line and spun away to a score with it, putting the Whitesmen at a disadvantage from which they never recovered.

Charlie Bowser, already pointing for next year, broke up the "iron man" eleven which has functioned so perfectly in the state series encounters in order to give the subs who will return next year a chance to show their wares. Dave Means, who was consistent in angling the line, and Don Reid, who made the longest Bowdoin run of the game, showed up especially well.

Handicapped by the loss of Henry Richardson, who was injured in the second quarter, Bowdoin was always on the defensive, staving off the thrusts of Schlums and Company for the White goal line. Three times they made goal line stands, but twice Wesleyan managed to shove the ball across the dual stripe for a score.

Schlums played one of the best games he has ever shown at Middletown. His line bucking was powerful and his broken field running deceptive. Wolanek, Frost and Meyes starred in the line, and Housley and Fricke proved able running mates to Schlums in the backfield.

Milliken, Torrey, McKenney and Davis did the best work in a Bowdoin line that was not up to standard. Hubbard, Means and Richardson were the most consistent backs, while Schlums, although Reid flashed brilliantly.

Calamity came on the first play as Milliken toed a short, low kickoff down the center alley. Schlums picked up the ball, passed it to Meyes at his interference collected, and then started.

HIGGINS SMOTHERED BY FRESHMEN 32-0 ON ARMISTICE DAY

Conner Plays Stellar Game; Fumbles and Punting Costly to H. C. I.

Slashing off tackle and around either end, hamstringing the line, passing and tackling with equal ease and success, the fresh grid team received the experience of real value as they administered a 32-0 shellacking to Higgins Classical Institute on Whittier field Armistice forenoon.

Conner played the outstanding game for Bowdoin as he crashed through time and again for long gains. The first touchdown came in the opening period as the climax of a 45-yard march in two plays. In the second quarter Conner swept around right end for 23 yards and a touchdown.

Fresh Score on Fumbles At the opening of the second half Higgins fumbled on their own 14 yard line, permitting Bowdoin to score in five runs. Immediately afterwards they fumbled on the kick-off and Conner ran 38 yards on the next play to a score. Later in the third period an alert fresh intercepted a pass on Higgins' 43-yard line. The White Cubs hammered through for their fifth touchdown in four tries. A pass and a line-backer picked up two points after touchdowns.

Higgins' greatest weakness lay in its sheer inability to punt out of danger, their longest punt carrying only 25 yards.

WANING INTEREST IN MUSICAL CLUBS THREATENS FUTURE

The attendance at the rehearsals of both the Glee Club and the Instrumental Club has, for the past few weeks, been very poor, said Manager Elliot Smith recently to a representative of the Orient. "I am sorry to say that the musical clubs have not received the support that was expected at the first of the year."

The three upper classes have been negligent in attending the rehearsals. In the face of lack of interest there is difficulty to keep the organization together. Definite cuts in membership are in the offing. The basis of the cuts to be made will be regularity of performance regardless of the relative merits or ability of the men involved.

William Lyon Phelps in Interview Terms Student 'More Mature Than Before'

"The average undergraduate today is intellectually more mature than the student of my time," stated Professor William Lyon Phelps recently in an interview with a representative of the Princetonian. "He is interested in politics and the League of Nations. In talking with him you can assume that he has an acquaintance with the arts."

Asked the cause of this relative maturity of interest, Professor Phelps ascribed it to the increase of foreign travel among students, to the spirit of more world-wide interest engendered by the World War and above all to the growth of America in the culture, tradition and education which make for the more mature outlook of European students.

RELIGIOUS FAITH IN INTELLECTUAL LIFE IS CHAPEL SUBJECT

Reverend Lee I. Hanchett Makes Strong Plea to Student Body

Speaking in chapel on Sunday last, the Reverend Lee I. Hanchett, of Lewiston, showed the relation of religious faith to intellectual life. He pointed out that the vast number of scientific discoveries and theories which are present in these times have, necessarily, a great influence on philosophy and religion. Modern scientists, he said, are willing to offer all they know of man and of life to the one who seeks such knowledge. It is a challenge to all the youth of today to see what they will make of it; to discover if they can see God as well as science.

Re-echoing the sentiments of Milliken, the great physicist, the Reverend Hanchett said that the true scientist, who delves into the secrets of creation, is a creature who believes that all truth is the ally of Him who is truth.

In speaking of the Bible, he said that is a religious manual, full of God's revelations for human life. All studies give back to it more than they take from it.

"Go out," he entreated, "and help others who are handicapped mentally and religiously and mentally strong. By your attitude you can make the world more sane, and widen the narrow conception of religion."

The Reverend Hanchett believes, with Dr. Francis G. Peabody, that increasing ignorance, not increasing learning, threatens the future of our civilization. He urged that the scholarship have warped the true conception of religious truth, it is for higher scholarship to put right the wrong.

FOOTBALL BANQUET PLANNED FOR FRIDAY WILL NOT BE HELD

Support to the annual Red Cross campaign by nearly all the fraternities on campus was largely the reason, because of which a banquet, planned as a tribute to the 1932 football team had to be called off. The cost of the banquet was a dollar a plate, and due to depleted resources on campus, fraternal taxes in connection with the Red Cross, not enough were able to attend to make the dinner possible.

Donald Beck, 35 who has been instrumental in keeping the football rallies up to their fine standard this fall, worked hard on plans for the banquet and gave up the idea only at the last moment.

Speakers had been secured from the faculty, coaches and squad. Professor Herbert Ross Brown, whose colorful watchwords are "win, win, win" once made the campus sit up and take notice, was to be toastmaster.

'End Women' of Yore Were Chosen For Ugliness to Check Scandal

Culminating seventy-five years of struggle for cleaner rooms the student body succeeded in causing the abolition of the "end women" system at Bowdoin in 1901. Under this regime the dormitory rooms were cleaned and the beds made by a squad of four or five women. Since 1824 there had been continual bitterness between the college chambermaids and the Bowdoin ladies. Undoubtedly both sides had cause for ire. The students thoughtlessly caused the ladies unnecessary work and the laziness of the latter has become a Bowdoin legend.

The first female sweeper made her appearance in 1806 by order of the faculty, but it was not until 1824 that the system was firmly established. Naturally the presence of women in the ends became a dire problem for the faculty. In the words of Historical Hatch of Bowdoin, "Women in a student's room might give rise to scandal, perhaps even cause for it, and much care, was taken to remove temptation." The "care taken" demanded extreme ugliness as the important prerequisite for an "end woman."

MASQUE AND GOWN BEGINS REHEARSAL OF PLAY "B-J ONE"

Professor Childs Conducts Tryouts Last Monday; Rehearsal, Tues.

The Masque and Gown for the 1932-33 season has been organized and, under the direction of Professor Childs, has started rehearsal for its first play of the year, which will be produced sometime in the Christmas week. The play, "B. J. One," is a melodramatic comedy of the Naval War and was written by Stephen King-Hall. Although it had a successful run in London, it has never been produced in this country by professionals. When the Harvard Dramatic Club, which is the only amateur dramatic society known to have produced this play, presented it some two years ago, it received very favorable criticism from Philip Hale, of the Boston Herald, and W. T. Parker, of the Boston Transcript.

E. P. Goodenough, who coached the Harvard players at the time of this presentation, was then manager of the Copley Theatre in Boston and is this year assistant manager of that same theatre with E. E. Olive. It was through Mr. Goodenough's courtesy that the Masque and Gown was able to obtain the play.

"B. J. One" has a male cast throughout. Although some twenty-five men responded to the call for players and were tried out, Professor Childs has, as yet, no announcement to make concerning the assignment of parts. He expects, however, to reach definite conclusions in that respect within the week.

SILLS INTERRUPTS TRIP FROM SOUTH WITH CONFERENCE

Washington Lanesmen Follows Gettysburg Trip; Now in New York

President Sills has reached the final stage of his trip and is now in conference at New York University, the subject of which conference which started yesterday and will last through tomorrow is "The Obligation of the University to the Social Order."

The first stop on the President's schedule was at Amherst last Friday for the inauguration of Dr. Stanley King as 11th president of that college. The presidents of 27 other colleges and two former presidents of Amherst swelled the host of distinguished persons. Presenting Representative Calvin Coolidge, Joseph B. Ely, governor of Massachusetts, and Walter Lippmann, New York columnist. Exercises began at 10:30 with the singing of the "Memorial Song to Amherst." At 11 o'clock in the midst of Dr. King's acceptance address a two minute silence reigned in recognition of Armistice Day. After the noon luncheon Dr. Ernest Martin Hopkins, president of Dartmouth, and Walter Sills, president of Bowdoin, were invited to the dinner.

Saturday afternoon President Sills returned to his hotel in New York. On the way he attended the 102nd anniversary of the Civil War memorial at the Gettysburg memorial to General Oliver Otis Howard '50. This distinguished soldier attended Westminster College, and was an educator for his part in the establishment of Howard University at Washington. November 8 marked the 102nd anniversary of his birth. President Sills included a noted Maine delegation including Governor Gardner.

DARTMOUTH TO SWIM BOWDOIN TEAM HERE

Miller's Aggregation Faces Hardest Schedule of History

Tackling the most ambitious schedule in the short history of swimming at Bowdoin, Mr. Miller's swimmers will travel all over New England and duel some of the most potent swimming aggregations in the East this winter. Three new colleges appear on the varsity schedule, this year, Dartmouth, at Brunswick, and Trinity and Amherst, at Brunswick.

Pre-season forecasts seem to indicate that the Whitesmen will not be distinct underdogs in any of the regularly scheduled dual meets, although the character of competition is not yet known. Springfield, Dartmouth and Amherst should provide the most difficult competition. With the entire season now slowly rounding into shape, Coach Bob Miller is pointing to the first meet with M. I. T., less than a month away. Last year a favored Bowdoin team, handicapped by an eight hour bus journey, lost to the Engineers by a six point margin, and the Polar Bear swimmers are anxious to avenge this defeat. With Swede Wallberg, Bob Foster, Mike Selig, Bob Carson, Bob Whitmore, Bill Esson, Bill Parmelee, Bob Sherman and Captain Jack Trotter, ready to swim the first meet, Coach Miller has rounded out a powerful squad (Continued on page 4)

Competing with the cream of English competition Charles F. Stanwood, Bowdoin track captain last year, won the high and low hurdles and the high jump in Oxford University's fall Senior-Freshman track meet, recently. Along with Ben Hollowell, Harvard's great middle distance star, Stanwood was the sensation of the meet, coming close to the Oxford record in both hurdling performances and winning the high jump with ease. On the first day of competition he ran away with the high barrier race by eight yards in the good time of 16 seconds, and then captured the high jump with ease on a 5 foot 11 inch clearance.

On the second day of competition, Charlie flashed through to a sensational win in the 220 yard low hurdles in the excellent time of 25.4 seconds. His margin of victory was twelve yards.

The London press has already started to acclaim Stanwood as one of the leading trackmen in the University. His performance at the recent outstanding performance of the afternoon was the hurdling of the American Freshman C. F. Stanwood (Bowdoin College, Maine) of Bowdoin in College. He won the High Hurdles in the splendid time of 16 sec., which was an excellent effort under such bad

Bowdoin Places Six Among Eleven of Rhodes Scholarship Candidates

Booth, Davis, Hill, Spingarn, Undergraduates; Sewall, Sanger are of '32

Of the eleven candidates to appear before the committee, six are Bowdoin men. Two of these, Richard N. Sanger '32 of Arlington, Mass., and George T. Sewall '32 of Old Town, Maine, are graduates. The other four Bowdoin candidates are: Albert R. Booth of Cincinnati, Ohio; Albert S. Davis, Jr., of Bond Brook, New Jersey; Robert C. Hill of Springvale, Maine; and Edward D. W. Spingarn of Woodbridge, Vermont, New York. All are of the present senior class.

Of the other five candidates two were from Colby, two from Maine, and one from Bates.

Among the members of the Maine State Committee of selection for the Rhodes Scholarships this year who received notice of their appointment recently were from Bowdoin Professor Thomas Means and Dean Nixon. Professor Means is the secretary of the committee. Of the five members on the committee, Bowdoin has two representatives to one from Maine and one from Colby. The committee is as follows:

Chairman: Guy P. Gannett, Esq. Secretary: Professor Thomas Means (Connecticut and Merton, '11) Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine.

Members: Professor S. R. Ashby (Texas and Merton, '04) University of Maine, Orono, Maine; Dean Paul Nixon (Connecticut and Balliol, '04) Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine; and Professor C. J. Weber (Maryland and Queen's, '14) Colby College, Waterville, Maine.

The committee meets to make its selections on Thursday, December 8th.

Freshman Warnings Show Very Slight Increase Over Last Year's Total

At the annual freshman fall check-up, twenty-one major warnings were received by members of the Freshman Class. The percentage is slightly higher than that of last year, there being then nineteen. The faculty does not feel that the scholastic ability of the incoming class is lower than usual, since in 1930 there were forty-one major warnings issued, and for the previous ten years they were never under thirty.

Heading the list with no major warnings on record were Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Theta Pi, and Theta Delta Chi. Next with only one warning only were Chi Psi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Sigma and Sigma Nu. In third place with two warnings was Theta Upsilon, Zeta Psi and the Non-Fraternity group each had four major warnings. Psi Upsilon had six.

F. R. KLEIBACKER JR. OF 1931 SUCCESSFUL IN YALE DRAMATICS

'The King's Coat' Opens Dec. 14 at U. Theatre; Begun at Bowdoin

Fred R. Kleibacker, Jr., of the class of 1931, is the author of 'The King's Coat', which will be produced in the Yale University Theatre on December 14th as the opening play of the season. Mr. Kleibacker since his graduation has been a student in the drama department of the graduate school at Yale under Professor G. P. Baker.

'The King's Coat' is the final form of a play about Benedict Arnold which was planned and partially written as a story by Kleibacker since his graduation has been a student in the drama department of the graduate school at Yale under Professor G. P. Baker.

Mr. Kleibacker was also the author of 'Durga', a one-act play adapted from a story by Rudyard Kipling, which was produced under his own direction in the Barn Chamber two years ago and later at Bangor under the auspices of the Masque and Gown.

CUSHING, CATLIN IN THICK OF SCHOOL BOARD'S LATE FRAY

Confusion Over Resignation Clears; Faculty Members Get Appointments

When the smoke of the recent Brunswick school committee battle had cleared, Professors Warren B. Catlin and Harold I. Merrill found themselves installed as members of the board until March.

When the Rev. Harold I. Merrill recently resigned, leaving the other two members of the committee, Dr. Gilman B. Elliott and Mrs. H. D. Lovell, to appoint a successor, Dr. Elliott temporarily withdrew his pending resignation until the appointment could be made.

The Democratic town committee had recommended that the vacancies be filled from a list of four men among whom were Professors Thomas Means, Warren B. Catlin, and Charles T. Burnett. Dr. Elliott who was not to be dominated by politics supported Professor Cushing whom he had defeated in the last election. Finally after several conferences were held and the imminence of a special town meeting rapidly was crystallizing into more than imminence, it was agreed that Catlin be appointed. Finally that he and Mrs. Lovell should appoint Cushing. So Catlin was appointed, Dr. Elliott resigned, and Professor Catlin and Mrs. Lovell welcomed another faculty member to their midst.

Bowdoin Students Cruise By Motor Boat From Greenwich To Florida

Raynal C. Bolling '32 of Greenwich and Hawthorne L. Smyth '31 of M. V. N. Y. are on a 5,000-mile cruise from Greenwich, Connecticut to Florida via the Hudson River, Barge Canal, Great Lakes and Mississippi River. The article here is taken from the Greenwich Press and is written by Bolling. The story of the cruise will be continued in a later issue and kept up to date.

As far back as last February two young fellows had conceived the idea of a motor boat cruise to Florida. That is, the cruise itself had been well plotted but at that time neither the "captain" nor the "mate" knew what sort of a cruise could be purchased with a 1932 depressed pocketbook. The search began, a long and difficult one. Ship yards were visited from New York to Maine. Loose-tongued oil sea captains flung many nautical terms in praise of this boat or of that one. Some of the boats were too long, some too short, but one did stand out. It was either in the last stages of decay or too hideous to be considered.

FRANCES NASH NOTED PIANIST TO PLAY MON.

Brilliant Lady Artist Comes to Bowdoin Nov. 21 with Classical Program

ACCLAIMED AT HOME AS WELL AS ABROAD

Praised as "Endowed with Perfect Technique" and "Force and Vivacity"

In referring to the brilliant pianist, Miss Frances Nash, who will present a recital at the Memorial Hall on Monday, November 21st, the "Vanderburgher" said: "In days gone by, a lovely lady and a sound musician were two separate people. Today they are one and the same."

Not only has Miss Nash's talent captivated the audiences of this country but also has received enthusiastic acclaim abroad. A Roman newspaper, while praising her concert of the night before in that city, remarked, "The habitues who thronged to the S-Hall yesterday made a very pleasant acquaintance that of the American pianist, Frances Nash, who is endowed with a perfect technique and remarkable powers of interpretation." In Hamburg she was hailed as an artist, "who belongs to that class of pianist with wonderful style and clean-cut technique, possessing forceful and vivacious temperamental playing."

One of our own American critics seems best to describe Miss Nash's ability in reporting her as a pianist who has a recent wealth of experience, satisfying mixture of brains and temperament vivified by flashes of poetry.

Miss Nash's piano solo recitals have included on her program is to be one of the conductors of the N. Y. Philharmonic Symphony, and the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra. She has also given a Chopin Etude recital with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, Mr. Dobrowen, who was conducting the orchestra, stated in performance that he arranged for her to play for the first hearing his own piano concerto with the same orchestra.

The program is as follows: Prelude and fugue, A minor ... Bach Sonata, number 3, C major ... Mozart Prelude, arpeggiated, Cesar Franck Intermission

Sonata, opus 10, I. ... Dobrowen Chromatic Ostinato ... Marion Bauer Tocatta ... Ravel

Scherzo, opus 39, C sharp minor Nocturne, opus 62, number 1 ... Chopin

HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL WILL HOLD "DEPRESSION" TERM

Several Bowdoin Grads Now Attend the Regular Session

The Harvard Business School announces an extra session which will start January 30 and continue to August 16, 1933. It is designed to meet the needs of college men graduating at midyears with a business career in mind but no present position in view, and of those graduates who have not yet secured permanent positions. This action was recommended and approved by Mr. Walter S. Gifford of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, Mr. Jesse Isidor Straus of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc. and Mr. George Whitney of J. P. Morgan & Co. It is also approved by Mr. Walter C. Teagle, Chairman of the Share-The-Work Movement. They point out that the facilities of the School for constructive training in business management, during the winter as a substitute for the demoralizing effect of waiting around for jobs or repeated failures to get them.

BOWDOIN DANCE AT OAK MANOR, MELROSE, OVER THANKSGIVING

For the Bowdoin men living near Boston the Polar Bears will hold a Bowdoin Dance on Friday evening November 25, from 9 to 1 o'clock at Oak Manor in Melrose, Mass. The dance will be a normal one, at $1.75 a couple may be obtained from Eliot Smith or Robert Hayden. They will also be on sale at the door.

Starting active work around Brunswick the Polar Bears will play at the Codman House Saturday evening.

A Toast To The Heroes

Perhaps it was a moment of genius that prompted the tendering of a banquet to Bowdoin's great team of 1932: great because the men travelled the long road from last year's dismal season to this, meeting every obstacle in their way, and fighting them. Breaking bread with their own team is the noblest gesture of confidence a student body can bestow.

True, Bowdoin made a false start in the Maine series: but from past experience, that would seem inevitable. In three heartbreaking years, the White has won only one Series battle—the memorable clash with Maine in '30. As always, the State games loom like jinxes before a Bowdoin team, even after three opening games—against eleven reputedly equal to the Pine Tree outfits—have been successfully passed.

But Bowdoin sent Louis Bush home with a beaten team; it defeated Williams for the first time in many, many long years; it tied a redoubtable Tufts jumbo; and it deadlocked Bates—which, in turn, had held Yale scoreless. The other games were unfortunate, but incidental. The bitter part of the whole Series arrangement is that Bowdoin must someday win a title even before considering a change.

The banquet is not to be held. It is unfortunate. Happily it is due not to lack of spirit but to financial causes which are unavoidable. But here we pledge our toast to the future—to the future of 1933!

A Bowdoin Renaissance

Every four years a Presidential election occurs, serving to bolster up undergraduate interest in politics—national and otherwise. For a time it seems almost as though there might be a revival of the Gay Nineties' tradition of economics with the Bull-Session. Talk waxed furiously keen as November Eight came nearer the surface on desk calendars; but now that it is all over, now that the results have been published, now that bets have been collected—where is that table-talk interest?

Perhaps one evidence of it is in the timid proposals, in the form of unobtrusively placed notices, to form a Bowdoin Liberal Club. A splendid proposal, but like the Forum, launched auspiciously with the mailing of two hundred postcards last year, it may go the way of all flesh. Oblivion is a powerful claimant of all-too-many useful undergraduate activities: Ibis and White Key—both of which might, if judiciously organized, serve useful purposes—now exist only as quaint little watch charms. (And there seems to be some doubt of even that, as regards White Key.) L'Our Blanc, The Mathematics Club, and Pi Delta Epsilon have all passed down the primrose path of yesterday, apparently.

The Quill, though, is still among the alive, though feeble. A rejuvenated magazine appeared last year; and it was one which should remain among permanent Bowdoin publications.

At any rate, though politics need never become the gigantic racket they are in the University of Minnesota (where abduction of candidates and ballot-box stuffing are yearly occurrences), they should not die at Bowdoin. College elections will never occupy the center of the stage here, because the electoral offices involved are too purely honorary, and too little administrative. However, a formulation of campus opinion would be a step toward the ultimate interest in economics which American colleges lack.

Concerning The Red Cross

Professor Morgan Cushing officially launched Bowdoin's Red Cross drive, last week, from the Chapel pulpit. There is no need of explaining the need of its support, nor of outlining statistics describing the Red Cross' benefits. But if fraternities (which went nearly 100% strong last year) would co-operate, the Bowdoin quota will be readily filled. Blanket assessments in several houses last fall resulted in unusually strong, loyal aid. Unemployment relief this year brings a crisis, one which concerns our own country for the first time in many years. Give generously.

J. E. B.

To the Editor: Your sketch of Bowdoin's gridiron triumphs in the current issue of the Orient is extremely interesting to the alumni of the period strictly adjacent to the turn of the century, but not all of them will agree there was a jump from 1890 to 1921 without a "wonder team."

clash which immediately preceded the Harvard-Yale game. The Blue, of course, was in the pink at this time. Incidentally the Class of 1901 was represented by the following regulars on that team: "Fat" Bodwell, Harry Cloudman, Jack Gregson, Paul Hill, "Bud" Laferriere, "Dudie" Leighton, Dan Pratt, Don Snow, "Zube" Sweet.

Dustard and Cross

Just as a matter of life speculation we wonder who will be given the best concession at the Moulton Union after March football. And will it be German beer or English ale? Come, you you classicists, how about the vine? You voted Democratic, didn't you?

Franklin Deane's remark would have found a most appreciative audience had he dropped into Chapel last Monday morning. Stanley Perkins Chase, the man of the hour, galloped to the top over the mechanical coffee, and some two hundred odd forgotten men sat around buttoning their vests while awaiting something constructive from the lectern.

An A.P. story with a New York date-line said that the wind rushed past the Empire State Building last week at a 60-mile clip. That must have been a little bit too much, even for Al.

This one is a bit reminiscent of the story about the mail-man who went for a hike on his day off. The genial Officer Hamilton, who motor-bikes his weary way from Postville to Brunswick seven days a week, has gone on his vacation. With him is his trusty, albeit somewhat rusty, artillery, and rarer than that, our hero is hunting.

While we are on the subject of the Portland road it might be well to pass on the fact that whoever abandoned the old Dodge touring-car down Yale garage way ought to call in at that garage stop the hill in that community. If that is the case the order of Officer Hamilton, and the bill for storage is progressing nicely, thank you.

The article on the chimister in the recent Gfoteric issue that worthy, er heady effort upon that worthy, judging from the strange strains which rang out over the campus last Sunday afternoon. Or maybe it was that edier again. Anyway, for the benefit of the three hundred odd students who were out of earshot at the time of his synopsis, it is hereby divulged that the bill for too late for part of the program: the third hymn came to a blundering and embarrassed conclusion in the middle of the road, and has not yet been rearranged.

Let us forget the identity of the big push around here, let us recall the wisdom of the present. For our part, we have come to the conclusion that the first part, rushing, is not sound. It is too much a hit or miss proposition. (It can and does in most cases work satisfactorily, but there are times when it does not.) Under the present system fraternities can become acquainted with but a limited number of the incoming class; in turn, the Freshman can visit only a few of the houses on the campus.

FRESHMAN ANGLES

By a Freshman

Freshman angles on campus situations have a peculiar interest in that they are fresh and unspoiled by too long collegiate contacts. Hence this column, written by a first yearman, will be devoted to the freshmen's problems and outlooks.

Now that hell week is over and most of us are full-fledged members of fraternities, we can look back over the whole process: rushing, pledging, riding and initiating. The most perplexing of us have pondered the wisdom of this process. For our part, we have come to the conclusion that the first part, rushing, is not sound. It is too much a hit or miss proposition. (It can and does in most cases work satisfactorily, but there are times when it does not.) Under the present system fraternities can become acquainted with but a limited number of the incoming class; in turn, the Freshman can visit only a few of the houses on the campus.

The main defense of the present system is a negative one: that if the rushing were deferred until winter, as we think it should be, the strong fraternities would pledge the strong candidates. Consequently, the defenders of the present system say, the weak houses would always remain weak. We do not believe this is true. A Freshman joins a fraternity because he thinks its members a congenial group with whom he can live four years happily, not because such and such a house has a fine scholastic record or has a large number of players on the varsity football squad.

Therefore, we favor the postponing of the pledging of students until December, in order to give the Freshman a fairer chance to adjust himself properly. This extension of time will afford the houses an opportunity to size up the neophyte correctly. The Freshman will be able to visit and judge all the Bowdoin houses and to discover what preferences his own friends have formed. In this way a natural group of friends is more likely to join one fraternity and form a harmonious and unified delegation.

All these improvements can be accomplished, we believe, in the manner suggested without in any way perpetuating the superiority of a few houses. Incidentally the Class of 1901 was represented by the following regulars on that team: "Fat" Bodwell, Harry Cloudman, Jack Gregson, Paul Hill, "Bud" Laferriere, "Dudie" Leighton, Dan Pratt, Don Snow, "Zube" Sweet.

Bowdoin Started Dr. Sargent On Road To Illustrous Career

Three score years ago Bowdoin had for its instructor in physical training a sophomore from Belfast. This twenty-three-year-old student earned the recognition that led to his appointment through homemade gymnastic skill on homemade apparatus, exhibited in the yard of his hometown high school. In 1824 the instructor died "one of the greatest directors of physical training that America has ever produced."

Dudley Allen Sargent was the son of a ship carpenter and sparmaker, who, after having made a stab at circus performing, started his college career in 1871. In that eventful sophomore year, athletics were compulsory for the first time in the history of the College. The athletics, by order of President Chamberlain, were to be taken by each student not incapacitated "half an hour every day, five days a week, the exercises consisting of thirty movements lasting a minute each."

Until 1885, Bowdoin gymnasts had had to be content with an old Commons building, with bare, drafty bottom floor of Memorial Hall or with half a floor of Winthrop Hall as rooms in which to perform their capers. In that year, Mr. Sargent, then Assistant Professor of Physical Training and Director of the Gymnasium at Harvard, lectured here on physical training, and closed his address with the statement that if Bowdoin would build a gymnasium, he would equip it himself.

In 1875 he graduated with an A.B. degree. Bowdoin also conferred upon him the degree of M.A. in 1887 and that of Sc.D. in 1894. An M.D. degree had come from Yale in 1878. Soon after his graduation from Bowdoin he left for Yale, where he remained as an instructor in gymnastics until 1879. He then shifted to Harvard, where he spent many years, first as Assistant Professor of Physical Training (1879-1889) and then as Director of the Hemenway Gymnasium (1889-1919).

He was affiliated with several normal schools for training instructors of gymnastics, and was Director of the Normal School in Cambridge, Mass., from 1881 until his retirement. From 1900 to 1906 he was President of the American Association for the Promotion of Physical Training. His influence in training teachers has been said by an authority to be "more widely felt than that of any other man in America." During his years both as teacher himself and as teacher of teachers he developed instruction in his field in several branches. Perhaps the most important of these was worked out during his stay at Harvard, where, from the measurement of each man he prescribed a definite set of exercises suitable for the individual in question. From the measurements of many students that had come under his tutelage, he had studied made of "typical persons" of both sexes and of various ages. As early as 1876, he was writing descriptions and diagnoses of his methods, some of which were later gathered together into the volume Physical Education, others of which were published only individually. He was strongly opposed to the abuse of military drill in public schools and attacked this practice in one of his papers. Health, Strength and Power and Universal Test (for the strength, speed and endurance of the human body) are two of his other writings. Besides these he made contributions to other books on physical education.

But after a few years even this building (which we now know as the Heating Plant) became inadequate for the needs of the growing student body. In the half-dozen years before the last war funds were raised, mostly by subscription, to build the gymnasium which so completely fulfills our requirements today. The Orient of Jan. 6, 1913 happily announces the opening of the new building to the student body. And though we find no records of its official christening, a grateful Bowdoin continues to give it the name of her most illustrious Director of Athletics, Dudley A. Sargent.

The faculty at Michigan State is extremely thoughtful. They have decided that all students attending the spring dances may cut classes from three o'clock on the day of the dances and all the classes the day after.

BOWDOIN ALUMNI OF 1932 CRUISE FROM GREENWICH TO FLA. (Continued from Page 1) The work that had to be done on the boat took about six months time to effect. The captain at that time was finishing his last year in Bowdoin College and could only work intermittently on the boat or should I have said on his studies. The mate had a job in Washington which lasted till May so that it wasn't until near the end of June after commencement that we could devote our entire time to getting the Utawana into shape. Her history is a rather interesting one. She was originally (38 years ago) a steam tender in the English government service. She was later the tender to Allison Armour's yacht, the Utawana, and during that period of her life carried at various times such persons as King George, King Edward and Kaiser Bill. After Armour sold her, she went to Maine and changed hands two or three times before we got hold of her. It wasn't until about the second week in July that we were ready to weigh anchor and say good-by to Maine and to all the old fishermen and boatmen up there who had given us infinite help and many suggestions. It is almost unnecessary to say that without the help of these experienced men we would never have been able to get the old Ute ready for an ocean trip. Finally the day came for us to embark on our 400 mile journey home. We slipped down the New Meadows River early in the morning with a light fog settling around us as we neared the ocean. We were in the best of spirits as anyone would be when homeward bound after so many long months of hard work on our little boat. Just for the fun of it we decided to plot our course on the chart and steer by compass. We had no sooner figured out the course and set the compass, than we noticed a great white wall of fog coming up from behind and blanketing everything as it came. In less than five minutes we were completely enveloped in fog and couldn't see more than a hundred feet from the boat. We were at sea all right in more ways than one. Fortunately we had plotted our course, as we were absolutely helpless as far as visibility was concerned. For four hours we sailed blind depending entirely on the compass—the first time we had ever tried it. Our goal was Cape Elizabeth and all that we could do was to hope that we would hit it. For some time we had heard the blast of a fog horn dead ahead. All of a sudden out of the grey wall in front of us we saw a long line of green-white foam with an occasional menacing black rock glaring out at us. At the same time a lonely fisherman loomed up from out of nowhere and we hailed him. He told us that we were at Cape Elizabeth but that we had better follow him into Portland harbor. We took his advice and trailed him as he threaded his way through hidden reefs in an absolutely blind fog. We spent the night in the harbor.

"The first of the month" used to be a time of feverish activity for ledger clerks. But the Bell System accounting staff—breaking away from tradition—simplified the keeping of accounts and rendering of monthly statements to customers. They applied a modern system of rotation billing to the telephone business which now spreads this work evenly throughout the month. In cooperation with manufacturers, they devised special typewriters and bookkeeping machines. Thus they did away with inefficient rush and achieved greater accuracy, speed and neatness. This is but one example of a point of view found throughout the Bell System. Even long accepted routine is constantly studied—it's always worth looking for the more efficient way! HARMON'S

HANDFUL HERE AT SIMPLE ARMISTICE DAY CHAPEL SERVICE

Professor Wilmot B. Mitchell conducted the annual Armistice Day Chapel last Friday morning. The service was brief and simple, but impressive through its simplicity.

After a passage from Psalms, Professor Mitchell read the names of those sons who lost their lives in Great War. The handful of students, faculty members and townspeople present stood in silence for a short interval out of respect for the dead sons. A prayer for continued courage in the present peace-time crisis ended the service.

At North Carolina more than half the students taking a certain exam had to be put under a female proctor. The girls were cribbing so much from notes hidden under the folds of their rayon skirts that it had gotten beyond the control of the male instructors in charge.

HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL WILL HOLD "DEPRESSION" TERM

Home and Company, Altshuler is with the U. S. Air Reserve Corps in Washington; Mr. Ballard is working in the production division of the J. M. P. Coster Company in Providence, Rhode Island; Chapman has located in Portland with the Case Mercantile Trust Company; and Stein is with the W. T. Grant Company in New York City. J. S. Donworth, D. F. Prince and F. A. Wingate, all of whom graduated from Bowdoin in 1931, have returned for their second year's work, and four of last year's seniors, Gilman Arnold, Gordon Knight, Norman Lovell and Fred Eric Farley, have registered as first year students in the school this fall.

Students who attend the newly introduced session will have the same classroom instruction under the same Faculty as the regular first-year class. They will be entitled to full academic credit, thus enabling them to enter the second-year class next fall. Midyear examinations will be eliminated. Three week-end vacations of four days each will be substituted for the recesses of the academic year. The extra session is open to college graduates and to those who have had executive experience in business. The usual provision regarding college graduates will be in effect, whereby college seniors lacking a single course for their degree may be admitted provided they make satisfactory arrangements for the completion of their undergraduate work.

The shorter period covered by the extra session permits a reduction of about 25% in room and board. Tuition remains unchanged, at $600, but room and board will amount to less than $400, so that the total school expense for this session, including necessary textbooks, will not be over $1,000. A limited amount of financial aid from the Loan Fund will be available to properly qualified students.

Only about 10% of last June's class of 895 men, the school reports, have their names on the school's active list as seeking jobs. This is close to a normal condition at this time of year. Even under present conditions, says the school, there is need for specially equipped young men trained in the theory and practice of business.

A University of Alabama student who flunked a course entitled "How to Study", passed all other subjects with an average of B.

Students at Santa Clara are required to attend en masse daily cheer practice in order that the cheering section will make a formidable showing at the football games.

College Owe Chapel To Woods, Second Youngest President

November 24th will mark the 100th anniversary of the birth of one of Bowdoin's presidents, Dr. Leonard Woods, the second youngest leader in the history of the College, and a man who did much in its constructive up-building.

Bowdoin men too often forget that they owe the erection of King Chapel to President Woods, who served from 1839 to 1866. It was he who bent his efforts more than anyone else to build a desirable chapel, and it was through his influence that its plan was at once simple and stately in design.

Professor Chase's description of the chapel from a speech delivered on Dr. Woods a number of years ago, deserves to be set down. "It is a Romanesque Church, built of undressed granite, the facade being marked by twin towers and spires which rise to a height of one hundred and twenty feet. The aisles and chancel are shut off by partition walls from the nave, which is the chapel proper. There is a broad central aisle, from either side of which rise the ranges of seats, after the manner of a cathedral choir. The roof-screen and wainscoting are of carved and paneled walnut, and along the sides between the wainscoting and the clerestory windows are large panels in which are mural paintings representing Biblical scenes."

Beside his efforts for the chapel stands Dr. Woods' equally important accomplishment—the securing for the College its revisionary interest from the estate of James Bowdoin by James Temple Bowdoin. Dr. Woods' intense interest and legal knowledge persevered successfully throughout the long litigation of the matter.

Leonard Woods was born in Newbury (now West Newbury), Massachusetts, November 24, 1807. The cultural refinement and Congregational orthodoxy of his environment (his father was a professor of Christian Theology at Andover Seminary), did much to shape the man that was to become an educator, and a leader of religious thought. Upon graduation from Phillips-Andover Academy he entered Dartmouth, but after less than a year transferred to Union College. At Union he astonished his professors by his learning and prowess in debating. Catholic taste and moral integrity underlay this broad, active mind. He secured his A.B. in 1827, and following this, spent three years at Andover Theological Seminary. While teaching there for a short time after completing his course, he busied himself with translating Knapp's Theology, an undertaking which was to place him among the leading theologians in the country.

In 1833 he received ordination from the Third Presbytery of New York, and soon afterwards he was appointed editor of the "Literary and Theological Review" in New York City. He was Professor Wilmot B. Mitchell who spoke at the Brunswick Town Hall last Friday evening at the Washington Centennial exercises.

CUMBERLAND PREVIEWS

"Washington Merry-Go-Round" is the kind of book that got one of the authors first, and it is reported to be a movie that explains why. It tells things about Washington, D. C., that, true or not, don't sound so well. This comes Friday the 18th to the Cumberland.

City theatres are just getting Boris Karloff in "The Old Dark House", and Manager Murch of the Cumberland can offer it without much fear that anyone will have seen it before. It's a romance in an old house, with a crazy man and his likewise son. It comes on Saturday.

Some of the radio headlines appear, as movie people. "The Big Broadcast" comes Monday and Tuesday with Stuart Erwin and Miss Hyams, Burns and Allen, Bing Crosby, the Borwell sisters, Mills brothers, et al., appear in a picture of radio people.

Stuart Erwin comes again in "He Learned About Women," (and who doesn't?) for next Wednesday. Peter Potter Kendall III is the stage name for Erwin, whose funniest role was as a lunatic Napoleon, and who sure can play the funny things.

Next Thursday Tallulah Bankhead and Robert Montgomery play in "Faithless." The summary doesn't sound much like Montgomery's style, but it sounds good just the same. He's an advertising man, gets soaked by the depression, and there's a peck of trouble for him and pretty Tallulah—his wife.

And if you follow the picture releases at all, you'll see that the Cumberland is getting some new shows betimes. Most of the late good ones are so new that Manager Murch doesn't have press books on them to help him with advertising.

More than half of the persons fortunate enough to be listed in "Who's Who" are college graduates. Massachusetts ranks fourth for producing people of fame.

down the field. His blockers did a good job, and he was not touched until he reached midfield. He twisted free, twice, and evaded two other White tacklers, and then set full speed ahead for the goal, and went over standing up. He missed the try for goal as Milliken broke through and swatted the ball down, but the Bowdoin spirit was lacking from then on.
The remainder of the first period was a plume and punt affair from midfield, with Bowdoin having whatever advantage there was. It was in the second quarter, however, that Wesleyan was favored with another break.
Steamrolling their way downfield, the Cardinals reeled off 55 yards before they were finally halted 27 yards short of the White goal line. Fricks punted out of the end, but the Bowdoin was once more in difficult circumstances. Richardson ducted out to the 25, where Schlums fumbled and a horde of White jersied figures fell on the ball. As there was less than a minute to play in the half, Burdell took a chance on a forward pass. Hubbard faded back and tossed the leather, but Fricks snatched every trick in the book and sped to the four yard line before Burdell and Bakanowsky stopped him. With time for but one more play, Schlums whipped a punt over to Huntress who took it in the end zone. Schlums converted the point via the place-kick route.
The polar Bears found themselves on the defensive once more in the third quarter when the alert Fricks dropped on a fumble on the 12 yard line, but the line without every trick in the book, Cardinal bag, and took over the ball on the four yard line. Then the Bear started an advance of his own. Moving out from the danger zone rapidly, with Dave Means doing a large part of the ball-carrying, the Bruins marched fifty yards downfield, only to be brought to a halt at midfield. A short punt gave the ball to Wesleyan, and once more they started to steamroll downfield. Six plays brought the ball to the White 15 yard marker as the quarter closed. Fricks went over on the second play of the final stanza.
Still at full steam, the Cardinals again moved downfield, but another Polar Bear snatched a punt and brought a halt to two yards from the final mark. Then the attack of the Bears reached its full fury for the first time. Fricks and Means whipped it gain after gain, Reid starting with a 33 yard sprint wide around right end. Bowsermen were still going strong, and with the Cardinal 50 yard line as the game ended.
The Bowdoin offense seemed powerless to gain in Wesleyan territory, except in the last period drive. Five times they moved smoothly to midfield, but then stalled abruptly. Except for the one time they went over by straight rushing, Wesleyan looked much the same way.

WELLS MUST WORK MOST WITH GREEN MEN THIS SEASON
S' simultaneous with the close of the football season comes the call for candidates for hockey. Coach Linn Wells will begin working on the material immediately after Thanksgiving holidays.
Prospects for the season are none too bright. The loss of captain-elect Johnnie Rosenfeld was a blow. What the new material will include can not now be predicted. Thirty-two new men, of whom the greater part are freshmen, have signed up.
Richardson, Billings, Dakin, and McKinney are the lettermen who will do much of the work. Bob Dowling although not a letterman has had some experience. To complete the varsity squad, Wells will have to weed out and develop the green material.

SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

The Bates-Colby fracas at Lewiston, Armistice Day, was as wild and woolly a game as one could wish to see. Colby clearly prevented the victory, even though it was only an 85 yard run that deserved another scoreless tie.
Twice Peabody, with long runs, rapped on the door of the Garnet goal, but the referee brought the ball back and paced out penalties, instead.
How Alden managed to slip through the Bates secondary defense on his touchdown run is still a mystery to those present. He slipped and slithered his way clear of Valentici, King, Clemons, and Wilmot, and then put on the steam.
The field was as muddy as the State Series has seen in two years, and the many Bowdoin men present at the game were glad that the Polar Bears were capering on some far-off grid that week end.
The Massachusetts State paper doesn't seem to think that the Polar Bears put the brakes on Bush. Yet we fail to find any other game Bush has played in this year or even last year when he gained but 51 yards from scrimmage.
Jim Gustill, finishing in 25th place, was Bowdoin's large size hero in the New England cross country race. Jim passed five men within a hundred yards from the finish, and those five points subtracted from the Polar Bear total boosted them ahead of Maine in the rating.
Which makes the team what we might call "the uncrowned state champions." Whether they could have smeared Maine and Bates in a triangular meet is another matter, however, and one to be debated upon by all and sundry.
If Bowdoin is successful in scheduling a game with Amherst in the near future, it will virtually turn the Little Three into a Little Four, as there are already games set for Williams and Wesleyan.
Bill Parmelee is threatening to become one of the best quarter mile swimmers in New England, according to the times he has been recording lately. This will help Bob Miller considerably in planning the swimming events for the meets.

Intercollegiate Column
"Ring Around The Rosie", "Farmer In The Dell" and other similar games are being indulged in with much gusto in the informal fraternity and sorority parties at the University of Washington.
Twenty radio controlled clocks have been installed at key points on the Iowa State College campus in an attempt to get students to classes on time.
Coach "Heinie" Miller has introduced cocktails or the bill of fare for the Temple football squad. These, when taken during a game, serve to stimulate zeal and pep.

Post-Series Game May Go
This Waterville fiasco and the disappointing climax at Wesleyan last Saturday are the only sore spots on an otherwise successful season. Prompted by the Wesleyan run, many Bowdoin followers are speculating as to the fitness of scheduling games after the Series conflicts. All other Maine colleges, Bates, Colby, and Maine, wind up with the Series and thus do not have to contend with psychological let downs, et cetera.
In the Bates and Maine encounters, the Bowsermen clicked as of yore. Bowser cut loose his full stock of plays in a gallant effort to cop a Series conflict. Though outplaying, outrushing, and outshining both opponents Bowdoin dropped the verdict to Maine 7-6 in a terrific straight bang duel and held Bates at bay 0-0.

Galaxy of Backs
Nor will the backfield be wanting in man power. Added to the formidable trio of Slugger Burdell at quarter, Hans Richardson at full, and Heinie Hubbard at one of the halfback assignments, Bowser will have Joe Kenely, a first prospect who was ineligible this year, and Reid, Walker, Hurley and Palmer, second stringers. There will be a mad scramble for the halfback post vacated by Bakanowsky, the chief contenders of which will be Reid, Hurley, Palmer, Walker, Kegely, and at least four freshmen, Conner, Griffith, Gowell and Fearon.
This galaxy of bell tofers gives Bowdoin assurance of ample reserves to bolster up a fast regular quartet. This is in direct contrast with the present year, when substitutions have been few and far between.
The above resume of '33 prospects may appear pleasing on paper, but it presupposes that all men will weather scholastic difficulties, for Charlie Bowser is one coach who from past experience is too mindful of the eligibility bugbear to swab back in confidence that all men will be available.
Opportunity Knocks for Bowser
The past two seasons have presented Bowser the thankless tasks of building two aggregations from inferior material. It goes without saying that next year will be Bowser's big chance to bring his first Series championship to Bowdoin.
Before the opening game this fall, Bowdoin will not concern an even chance to win a single game. But when the White ran roughshod over the powerful Mass. State machine with its spark plug Louis Bush, which team incidentally has gone through the season undefeated since their Whittier Field debacle, the critics of are first string varsity men. They are Stan Low, tackle; Dick Nason, guard; and Stan Sargent and Al Kent, ends. These men form a line that appears impregnable on paper. Combining with Low, Nason, Kent, and Sargent are Holden and Harrison, tackles; Keville, center and captain; of last year's frosh; Hughes and Begg, guards; and Barton, a center.

- But three men in the backfield are out for varsity, Hurley, Palmer, and Cleave. Although all three of these men will see plenty of service Saturday, the sophomores will undoubtedly rely on Joe Kenely for most of their advances. Joe, who was ineligible for varsity competition this year, is well remembered as the triple threat of the '35 yearling club. Abelon, Baravalle, Dixon, and Merrill, all mainstays of the '35 freshman team, were not out for football at all this season, but at least two of this quartet are expected to come out and bolster up the weaker soph backfield.

BIG SEASON AHEAD FOR WHITE GYMNASTS
Through the efforts of Manager Richard V. Kemper, an ambitious program has been arranged for the gym team for the coming year. Manager Kemper has just returned from a trip to New York, where he concluded arrangements for the season.
An individual meet in the gym on November 15 will open the year. Anyone who wishes may try out in this meet, and those making the best time in the rope climb will probably go to West Point later on. This excludes freshmen, since they are not allowed travel with an athletic team before mid-years.
An exhibition meet at Bridgton Academy will be held sometime before Christmas. There is a possibility of a meet with Brooklyn College of New York, but this is as yet very indefinite. A tentative contest with West Point is scheduled for January 14. A meet with Temple and M.I.T. is on the cards for March 3, to take place at Tech. On March 24 the Dartmouth team will invade Bowdoin, and on April 8 the Polar Bear team will travel to West Point for the intercollegiate meet.

Intercollegiate Column
Dr. Tassilo Schultheis, of Berlin, is believed to have brought to Germany the world's record for number of languages one person can read, write and speak, as well as understand. The professor has mastered 140 languages, which is supposed to be all the languages there are in the world.
Last year the Galloping Gaele from St. Mary's college, Oregon, put on a trained animal act. They conquered the Southern California Herd, California Bear, Army Mule, Gonzaga Bulldog, Santa Clara Bronc, San Francisco Seal, and the Southern Methodist Mustang.
Under the present system of substitutions in a football game, it appears that Edward Rozmarzynski (and Adolph Gorychka, guard and end respectively, on the Marquette squad, will have to write their own substitution slips.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Scholarship In the wake of statements praising the scholarship of the "depression generation" comes the worst deluge of warnings reported at the Thanksgiving review of classes in five years.

What is the cause? Why the sudden relapse? Here at Bowdoin as throughout the collegiate world there has been undeniable indication of a more serious undergraduate attitude. The sobering effect of less money to spend has, until the present inglorious moment, set scholastic ratings on a higher level.

Are entrance requirements at Bowdoin rigid enough? Does Bowdoin get high-class timber? We do not think so. We feel that it is a mistake to set entrance standards so far below the scholastic standards of the college. An investigation to determine how many men at Bowdoin came here after they failed to gain admittance at other institutions, would reveal a surprisingly large number.

An Invitation In these columns we intend to print a study of the college lecture system as applied at Bowdoin. As a preface to this analysis, which will be presented from the premise that the system is out-worn, the ORIENT invites expressions of opinion from undergraduates.

Seven good teams met the Polar Bears on the gridiron during the past season. The Bowdoin backs crashed through seven sturdy lines, and the White forward wall fought with seven elusive sets of backs.

In several of the positions there were brilliant men, whose fitness for their job could not be challenged, but in some, particularly the middle of the line, the selections were difficult and made only upon advice from team members.

Several Stars Out The Orient does not attempt to rate the "all" team as it played throughout the season, but only in the form shown against Bowdoin.

Good ends were plentiful throughout the Polar Bear season, and it is only with difficulty that the two outstanding ones are distinguished.

Richardson and Kimball To Serve As Co-Captains Pro Tem On Hockey Team

Henry R. Richardson and Thomas Kimball are at present acting as co-captains of Linn Wells' hard-working hockey outfit. Both men have seen this service for the past three years.

The co-captaincy is merely tentative, and will be passed on by the team in a vote which is expected to take place within the next two weeks, when the squad will have developed more into a unit.

Although graduation only took Blodden and MacLachlan, a series of complications in the meantime has deducted six prospective blade riders from the roster.

With Bill Haskell, one of the best goalies Bowdoin has ever produced, unavailable, and a scarcity of experienced reserve material on hand, Wells has plenty of work ahead of him to shape a winning sextet from the remnants of last year's mediocre team.

Less spectacular but quite as serviceable were the tackles. Bates had a sterling pair in Captain Berry and Stone, while Wolanek of Wesleyan, Dexter of Colby and Fox of Tufts were all brilliant men.

Captain Cochrane of Tufts and Paul Steigler of Colby were far and away the outstanding guards the White Bumped of Colby and Fox of Tufts were exceptional men.

Louis Bush, of Mass. State and Arnold Colby appear to have a corner on the halfback position. In spite of the fact that Bush, the country's leading scorer, was partially held in check by the Bears, he was really one of the most effective backs to operate at Whittier field this year.

Ineligibilities Add to List of Those Graduating; Post of Goal Tender in Dispute; Six Vets Left

Forty-four hockey team candidates, including six lettermen of last winter's outfit, are daily plodding the countryside and going through their calisthenics routine under Coach Linn Wells in preparation for the opening puck duel with New Hampshire early in January.

Although graduation only took Blodden and MacLachlan, a series of complications in the meantime has deducted six prospective blade riders from the roster.

As if the loss of these two regulars was not enough to crimp the hopes of any coach, Hayden and Haskell were declared ineligible at the warning period; and so were Jimmy Birch and Tom Kinball.

Still, there remain Hank Richardson, Russ Dakin, Bart Godfrey, and Doc Billings, forwards; one of this quartet for center; Tom Kimball and Charlie McKenney, defenses. These men, together with Heinie Hubbard, Jack Morris, Dick Nason and a handful of men from the Jayvee contingent will give Bowdoin a fair combination outside of the goal post.

The weather situation brings up the old discussion of a covered rink again. Bates has access to a covered rink in Lewiston, although the regular college glaze is Lake Andrews, so-called.

The current schedule includes eleven tilts, five at home, with one date, January 14, as yet undecided.

Outside of those men already mentioned the following are priming for either the Varsity or Jayvee sextets: Sophomores: E. Benson, W. F. Cross, A. G. Dixon, J. Dook, R. H. Grant, T. M. Park, F. J. Stoddard, W. J. Woodger.

Freshmen: Ray S. Baker, Hugh Barnsdall, Gordon Campbell, Howard Dana, H. E. Deane, Richard C. Gaslay, Willis Hay, George E. Hilbreth, Will F. Kierstead, John L. Knight, Andrew W. Lane, John W. SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

A coach's "all" team always proves more professional and searching than a newspaperman's, and Coach Roudy, Goodrich and Millet of Colby prove this point when on their all-Maine squad they give Ron Torrey, Bowdoin's steady guard, a first team position.

Other Bowdoin men to make the Colby mentors' first and second teams were Stan Low, Johnny Milliken, Heinie Hubbard, Charlie Burdell, Henry Richardson and Bill Davis.

Swimming has its official inauguration for the '32-'33 season when the Millermen take on M.I.T. at the Curtis Pool. And so stiff is the naturals' schedule this year that they count the Engineers as one of their easiest foes.

For sheer difficulty, the swimmers have a schedule unparalleled by any other team in the college. They take on Dartmouth, Worcester Tech, Wesleyan, Amherst, Trinity, Boston University and Tech before meeting their strokes with the best men in the country at the New England Intercollegiate, the Eastern Intercollegiate, and the National Collegiate Meets. Which is some task!

And as far as early season prospects go, there isn't a single one of the above mentioned teams who will be a favorite over the Polar Bears when the meet starts. This is a tribute to Coach Bob Miller, who has built the swimmers up from an impotent aggregation into possibly one of the best in New England.

While the state track meet is still a long, long way off, the team in general and the hurdlers in particular have occasion to rejoice at the news that Bill Poring, the U. of M.'s New England low hurdle champion, has not returned to college.

One of Coach Mear's particular quandaries during the next track season will be to decide what events Captain Ray McLaughlin will compete in. He can do the hurdles, the high jump, broad jump, 100, 200 and 400 meter runs, but it's scarcely possible for him to do all seven in one meet. Just another one of a track coach's worries!

On a wet and slippery field the freshman football team scored a 6-2 victory over their sophmore rivals in the annual interclass battle on November 19. The game, played at Whittier Field, was marked by many fumbles and intercepted passes, and both scores came as the result of breaks.

The sophomores' two points came in the first period. The frosh partially blocked a kick by Palmer, sophomore left half, but the ball rolled to the five yard line, where Low recovered for the second-year men.

Fresh Score in Last Period Hughes Duddy, rg rg, Hughes Duddy; r r, Low Manton, re re, Sargent Gowell, qb qb, Hunt (Kominsky) Connor (Savage), lh lh, Palmer Griffith (Pearson), rh, Fox (Hurley) Putnam, fb fb, Cleary Score by periods:

Sophomores 2 0 0 0-2 Freshmen 0 0 0 6-2 Touchdown: Gowell, Safety: Gowell (tackled by Low). Referee: A. S. Morrill. Umpire: R. B. Miller. Head linesman: C. G. Gibson. Time of period: 15 minutes.

ATTENTION WINTER SPORTS DEVOTEES All undergraduates interested in any or all of the following winter sports events see John Holden at the Zete House sometime before December 9: cross-country, downhill or slalom ski-racing, 2-mile snowshoe racing, 440-yd. and 2-mile skating, and figure skating. Please don't delay this until later in the winter.

Coach Miller cannot safely begin to gloat over the prospects of his team, made up as it is largely of green men. His squad is still improving, some individuals developing faster than others, and will naturally be considerably stronger in February and March. But he feels that his charges now have enough power so that the team with the edge in condition should win.

TANKMEN PRIME FOR TECH MEET HERE SATURDAY

Expanded to its performances to meet the higher requirements of the Olympic diving rules. The New England league has been one of the first to adopt the new standard of diving, and the handicap on all its members is about equal at present.

The freestyle list has always been a weak spot in past Bowdoin teams. It is a very valuable prize to the winners, however, for it means eight points to them and nothing to the losers.

M. I. T. brings four lettermen to the Curtis Pool Saturday evening, members of a team that last year nosed out Bowdoin's natators by a slight margin in Boston. They are Flanders and Turner, a pair of outstanding breast-strokers, probably the best in their event in New England; Lykes, an excellent diver, who won the New England Intercollegiate Diving Championship at Bowdoin three years ago, and Vaughn, a strong quartermer and a first-class man in the hundred. Henning, of last year's Tech team, also swims these events.

With these veterans come recruits from last year's winning freshman team, Grandberg and DuRoss, a brace of able sprinters, are among these. Paige, one of the best prospects the Red and Gray has ever had in the dive, is another. In the backstroke, Tech presents Edmunds, a transfer from Minnesota.

Coach Miller cannot safely begin to gloat over the prospects of his team, made up as it is largely of green men. His squad is still improving, some individuals developing faster than others, and will naturally be considerably stronger in February and March. But he feels that his charges now have enough power so that the team with the edge in condition should win.

FROSH TRAMPLE ON SOPH GRIDMEN, 6-2

On a wet and slippery field the freshman football team scored a 6-2 victory over their sophmore rivals in the annual interclass battle on November 19. The game, played at Whittier Field, was marked by many fumbles and intercepted passes, and both scores came as the result of breaks.

The upperclassmen held their scant lead securely until the last period, when both teams, in desperate attempts to score, resorted to the air. A number of passes were intercepted by both teams, when, finally, Drake, freshman center, took a soph pass on his own 45 yard line, and went to the two yard mark before he was pulled down.

Gowell plunged over the line for the touchdown. The attempt to run the ball for the extra point failed. The game ended shortly after, with the sophs in the midst of a frantic passing attack that for the most part failed.

"Nature in the Raw" is seldom MILD - and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes. They are not present in Luckies ... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked. WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes. "It's toasted" That package of mild Luckies

MRS. STAFFORD DESCRIBES TRIP TO CAPE YORK

"Memorial Expedition" This Summer Made to Erect Peary Monument

MOTION PICTURES ACCOMPANY TALK

Bowdoin Architect, Felix A. Burton '07, Designed the Monument

The daughter of the distinguished arctic explorer, Mrs. E. B. Peary, Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford, this last summer made a trip to Cape York to erect a sixteen foot monument to her father.

On June 15th the Effie A. Morrissy set sail for Cape York from New York City, Captain Bartlett of the ship it a member of the family which supplied skippers for all Peary's expeditions.

The second reel showed the arrival at Cape York. Before they arrived there, they had to cautiously and carefully wend their way among the ever-present icebergs.

The third reel revealed the inception of monument and all tiresome work which preceded the beginning of its erection. The indefatigable Eskimos and their dogs were the main burdens three times a day up the slopes.

The beginning of the next reel completed the hunt which was cut off in its middle in the last. Thirty huge walrus were killed. These were to be used to feed the dogs and to supply the Eskimos with food for the winter.

Pres. Sills Scores New Rhodes Scholar System

President Kenneth C. M. Sills believes that the recent revision in the system of selecting Rhodes scholars is a change for the worse; he says frankly that he "doesn't like it."

Under the original scheme, two representatives from each of the forty-eight states were at residence at Oxford. The two candidates were chosen by a state committee from students of colleges in that state alone.

In New England, including a relatively great number of colleges and universities of high scholastic standard, the plane of competition for most of the smaller colleges has been raised by the new plan.

COUNCIL GIVES FALL LETTERS

Varsity Letters and Fresh Numerals Given in Track and Football

The annual fall award of letters to men on the varsity football squad, the cross country squad, and numerals to men on the freshman squads was made Saturday morning, December 10 at a meeting of the Athletic Council.

Nineteen football letters were given, six letters to the cross-country men, and twenty-two numerals to freshman football men. Of the eight seniors receiving varsity letters, three were on the football team.

The majority of letters in football as well as in cross country were awarded to members of junior and sophomore classes. These were Carl A. Ackerman, Charles S. Burdell, Byron S. Davis, Henry B. Hubbard, Charles H. McKenney, Donald E. Reid, and Henry W. Richardson, all of '34, and Albert W. Kent, Stanley H. Low, Richard B. Nason, and Stanley A. Sargent, all of '35.

David Morris was the only senior receiving his letter in cross country. Frederick W. Burton and Ned W. Packard of the Class of 1934 received their numerals and Emmos Cobb, James E. Guphill and Elmer Hutchings of the Class of 1935.

With the Bowdoin Bugle of the class of 1934 already reaching the halfway mark in its preparation, the only serious difficulty has been overcome in the matter of photography. The matter of personal pictures for the juniors, which last year caused so much trouble, has now been solved by the use of the new Kodak process. This year the contract for all personal pictures last year. Since most of the juniors preferred to use old photographs or have ones taken in studios of their own choice, the contract was violated almost universally, and Webber received much less trade than his contract demanded.

FRESHMAN ANGLES

(Ed. Note: This article is not written to represent Orient opinion, though it may.)
In last week's Orient appeared a condemnation of the lecture system as an inevitable and undesirable adjunct to the material we garner from the subject. By way of response to this challenge may we be permitted to devote this week's Freshman Angles to a presentation of one Freshman's observations upon lecturing at Bowdoin?
In one Freshman course the lectures duplicated the material we garner from our outside reading. Here indeed is an "extraordinary misuse of time which might be used in a different manner with better results." How much more profitable would be a classroom bull session, an opportunity to ask questions and to discuss a subject openly with your classmates and professor. It seems to us that we are always imbibing someone else's opinions. We never have a chance to express our own except in quizzes—a pleasurable chance! Out of three hours of lectures six hours outside reading we are allowed one half-hour to reveal our own thoughts—and that on paper. We are permitted to write to compare notes and other's conclusions. The scales of self-expression do not balance those of absorbed knowledge.
The worth of a lecture depends upon two things: the capability of the lecturer and the value of his subject matter. A lecturer must be interesting, witty, or fascinating to hold attention of his listeners. It is true that there are a few Bowdoin professors whose lectures are an ordeal which must be passed through and have an extraordinarily soporific influence. But there is a greater number of brilliant speakers among the Bowdoin faculty to whom we would willingly listen for hours on end. The lecturer must be a genuine, and a bright spot in the drab routine of daily classes and recitations. The beauty of these lectures lies in the fact that the lecturer is human, personal, and the subjects are while the text-book is an inanimate and distant object. Are we, by damming the lecture system, going to deprive ourselves of this greatest enjoyment of our education?
We do not believe that the lecture system is "outworn", but misused, abused, and overused. We do not favor the abolition of lectures, but we do favor their use with more respect, especially by the inelegant professor, if any pedagogue can be made to acknowledge that failing in himself should be formed which shall hold meetings at regular periods;
3. The chief value of a subject should be secured to address the lecturer in the field.
4. The chief value of such a club would be in the contacts made.
1. Lack of Opportunity
The fact is that the fact that one sixth freshmen took part in the Frosh-Soph debate. As a matter of fact, only four took part. The significant thing is that those four were chosen from a small group of interested applicants. At the beginning of the season, Mr. Daggrett, Paul Sullivan and I talked to a group of sixteen freshmen professing interest in debating. The attendance at this meeting which was held in my room, gave us high hopes of enthusiastic support. But soon after that, some had come because they had seen other freshmen coming and had thought that the Proctor had called a general meeting. These few, excepted, they had come to see or "all Freshmen interested in debating." And of this number, only seven showed up for trials. Another call for all freshmen interested in debating who had not previously tried out was issued soon after the Frosh-Soph debate.
The "red-blooded" exponents of oratory must have been suffering from temporary anemia. Anyone who failed to attend these meetings has himself to blame, and anyone who did not come out, who nevertheless desires the "slump" in debating at Bowdoin, is pretty much of a grandstand player. While we are willing, and even anxious, to receive constructive criticism, we prefer that it come from those who are actively interested in working to improve conditions, and giving the college their time and support, as well as the criticism.

Students at Texas University are around the grounds in order to give a good impression to a visitor who needed in getting a really worth while audience to support a varsity team.
1. Importation of Speakers
One of the thesis of the proposed club would be the presentation of some "noted public speakers." This is a good idea, but it conflicts with the "Forum" which is already established. The supply of audiences for such meetings is inelastic; more for one club would probably result in a smaller audience for another. I agree with the writer, however, that a mixture of formal debates and forum talks would be a good thing. With this same idea in mind, I suggested that the Forum and Debating Council cooperate to hold informal Forum debates, which would be plain forum controversies on subjects of interest to college men. I did this three times last year and twice this year. The result has been what you might call a pocket-veto. If our friend can succeed in this respect, he deserves considerable credit.
2. A Contacts
The last argument advanced was that the chief value of this proposed club would be in the contacts made. Probably this is true. It seems to me, however, that the present contacts between freshmen and upperclassmen interested in debating offers a somewhat wider range than contacts made in a group composed solely of freshman debaters. With all their deficiencies, some of the upperclassmen in debating know their subject better than the freshmen, who are inexperienced. As for purely social contacts, I have no doubt that on examination, a few of them would be found to be almost human. In any event, I should recommend that an attempt be made at revision inside the Council first. Then, if the freshmen feel too much hampered by us old dodderers, they can form an organization of their own. (Signed) G. F. TOWLE, JR., Debate Manager.

IBIS HOLDS SECOND MEETING NEXT SUN

The second meeting of the year for the Ibis, Senior honorary society, will be held next Sunday evening at the Alpha Delta Phi house. Professor Stanley E. Smith will lecture on the poetry of Robert Burns. Eliot Smith will play the music written for some of the poetry.

Mustard and Cress

It was a pretty large day for Dore, N. H., when a Bowdoin freshman started back for Brunswick after a pleasant week with the folks. He came down to the station, stood around for a few minutes, and the cynosure of all eyes, and then he stepped seditiously aboard the train. Despite the cruel wind, his frock cap stuck to his head as if it were glued.
The baby-carriage wheel for which Mr. Lancelotti of the Union was conducting such a vigorous search has at last been recovered, and the notice has been removed from the bulletin board. Too bad—it was a swell notice. Mr. Lancelotti, when interviewed, declared that the wheel was not off his premises, and that he didn't see anything particularly significant in the fact that he was looking for somebody else's wheel, so back to your autumns, you reformers. There's a bigger and better arcana to be solved.
We were kept up a bit beyond our usual bedtime the other night, and decided to walk down town as a final gesture at the old ten-thirty boniface. It was a worth-while trip, for as we rounded the corner from Pleasant St. into Maine, the gaudy Christmas lights which line the business section were suddenly darkened. O. K., Central Maine, you fair-weather friends. If you can't wish us merry Christmas and happy New Year after 12 M., we'll have none of you. The Greenings'll get yuh, of yuh don't watch out.
The rapid-calculation prize for this week goes to Samuel Brasley Gray. When quoted the price of two-farthings on some items, the local Einstein complained, "Two for a quarter! Why down in Old Town you can get them for fifteen cents apiece." Ah, well-a-day, la-de, the exchange has played havoc with commerce.
And the prize for the nearest translation of the words to Ben Clouston, the life of the party in Spanish 3. "And so", Mr. Clouston rattled on, he bought himself a boat, and went fishing on his own hook. And the moral is—the worm will turn. Is that right, Senor Clouston?
Strutting into the Union the other night for a cup of coffee, a little conversation about friends and losses, who "get their man".

Lecture System

Tradition rules over an extended and glorious realm. In no province is its prerogative more strongly felt than in the college where traditional observances break the monotony of academic life, and prescribe the functional duties of student and professor alike. Slowly but surely we have seen the decline of such time-honored customs as hazing, flag rushes, and fights with the townies. So it has been everywhere. Yet tradition has held its grip on New England small college educational methods in a surprisingly complete manner. Today the lecture system at Bowdoin is in full swing just as it was before the advent of the printing press in England centuries ago.
The spread west and south of education from the New England center gave birth to new and "progressive" methods of teaching, most of which were more novel than valuable. They do, however, indicate a trend away from the ancient routine. We believe that the day is inevitable when the lecture will become largely incidental, more an auxiliary instrument in many courses than a fundamental method.
We would not for a moment suggest dropping lectures entirely. To some courses they are indispensable. The President's Comparative Literature course is an example. To subjects like Zoology 1-2, wherein the lectures vary scarcely by a word from one year to the next, we recommend a mimeographed edition of the lectures be sold at each fall containing such annual rearrangement and additional data as is deemed necessary. This procedure would give the information to the students in no second hand, garbled fashion; moreover, the professor would thus be granted more time for the student in the conference. To our minds, nothing is more stupid and ineffectual than the lecture which re-hashes the material of the prescribed text-book in the course. What conceivable reason may be offered in defense of this waste of time is a mystery to us. Courses conducted offering two such lectures a week which cater to the lazy mind after the modern cancelled manner, are too numerous, and are our chief objection to this system as we meet it in Bowdoin. Commendably, the Economics department have had sufficient trust in the conference to suspend all lectures. We earnestly hope that results are so successful that notice will be served on all other curricular groups.
The Bowdoin mode of education is, as we understand it, a combination of the aged lecture system and the time-tried Oxford tutorial method in a modified form. We feel that one stifles the other, preventing proper flexibility and expansion. A more complete adoption of the Oxford plan at the expense of the lecture would seem desirable. True is the objection that the strict tutorial arrangement places the undergraduate too steadily in the light of a single mind, and is the undesirable extreme. But why not more conferences and fewer needless lectures?

December 7, 1932.
To the Manager and Captain of the 1932 Bowdoin Football Team:
As one of the older alumni, I want to express my gratitude for the hard work and personal sacrifice which you gave to the college in what I consider to have been a successful football season. True, you had two lapses—but that happened even to great Notre Dame when it allowed an obviously inferior Pitt team to defeat it by 12 to 0 in the last few minutes of play. I followed your team closely and especially admired what I discerned as good coaching to bring out all the team had in it and your fighting qualities on the field.
May I ask the members of the squad, while they are still undergraduates engaged in the study of public problems, not to forget that they have still another fight ahead of them during the next ten years. That is to preserve American ideals and American institutions!
Our country has met this crisis, fed its people, prevented suffering and preserved order and maintained mutual goodwill better than any other country anywhere else in the world. The American flag is worth 100 cents in gold. The bonds of the United States are as good as gold. Our banking system has been preserved by wise legislation. Our economic structure is intact. Our workmen, refusing to be beguiled by Communist agitators imported to wreck our institutions, have been grim, patient and patriotic. Factories have staggered employment, rearranged time schedules and drawn upon their reserves to extend work. The family has functioned relatively helping relatively. The neighborly spirit has functioned,

With all their deficiencies, some of the upperclassmen in debating know their subject better than the freshmen, who are inexperienced. As for purely social contacts, I have no doubt that on examination, a few of them would be found to be almost human. In any event, I should recommend that an attempt be made at revision inside the Council first. Then, if the freshmen feel too much hampered by us old dodderers, they can form an organization of their own. (Signed) G. F. TOWLE, JR., Debate Manager.

IBIS HOLDS SECOND MEETING NEXT SUN

The second meeting of the year for the Ibis, Senior honorary society, will be held next Sunday evening at the Alpha Delta Phi house. Professor Stanley E. Smith will lecture on the poetry of Robert Burns. Eliot Smith will play the music written for some of the poetry.
The members of the Ibis at present are: G. Russell Booth, President; Edward D. W. Spingarn, Secretary-Treasurer; Albert S. Davis, Jr., Francis H. Donaldson, Roland H. Graves, John F. Jenkinson, Daniel Krause, Stephen Leo and Christy C. Moushakis.

It was a pretty large day for Dore, N. H., when a Bowdoin freshman started back for Brunswick after a pleasant week with the folks. He came down to the station, stood around for a few minutes, and the cynosure of all eyes, and then he stepped seditiously aboard the train. Despite the cruel wind, his frock cap stuck to his head as if it were glued.
The baby-carriage wheel for which Mr. Lancelotti of the Union was conducting such a vigorous search has at last been recovered, and the notice has been removed from the bulletin board. Too bad—it was a swell notice. Mr. Lancelotti, when interviewed, declared that the wheel was not off his premises, and that he didn't see anything particularly significant in the fact that he was looking for somebody else's wheel, so back to your autumns, you reformers. There's a bigger and better arcana to be solved.
We were kept up a bit beyond our usual bedtime the other night, and decided to walk down town as a final gesture at the old ten-thirty boniface. It was a worth-while trip, for as we rounded the corner from Pleasant St. into Maine, the gaudy Christmas lights which line the business section were suddenly darkened. O. K., Central Maine, you fair-weather friends. If you can't wish us merry Christmas and happy New Year after 12 M., we'll have none of you. The Greenings'll get yuh, of yuh don't watch out.
The rapid-calculation prize for this week goes to Samuel Brasley Gray. When quoted the price of two-farthings on some items, the local Einstein complained, "Two for a quarter! Why down in Old Town you can get them for fifteen cents apiece." Ah, well-a-day, la-de, the exchange has played havoc with commerce.
And the prize for the nearest translation of the words to Ben Clouston, the life of the party in Spanish 3. "And so", Mr. Clouston rattled on, he bought himself a boat, and went fishing on his own hook. And the moral is—the worm will turn. Is that right, Senor Clouston?
Strutting into the Union the other night for a cup of coffee, a little conversation about friends and losses, who "get their man".

COMMUNICATION

December 7, 1932.
To the Manager and Captain of the 1932 Bowdoin Football Team:
As one of the older alumni, I want to express my gratitude for the hard work and personal sacrifice which you gave to the college in what I consider to have been a successful football season. True, you had two lapses—but that happened even to great Notre Dame when it allowed an obviously inferior Pitt team to defeat it by 12 to 0 in the last few minutes of play. I followed your team closely and especially admired what I discerned as good coaching to bring out all the team had in it and your fighting qualities on the field.
May I ask the members of the squad, while they are still undergraduates engaged in the study of public problems, not to forget that they have still another fight ahead of them during the next ten years. That is to preserve American ideals and American institutions!
Our country has met this crisis, fed its people, prevented suffering and preserved order and maintained mutual goodwill better than any other country anywhere else in the world. The American flag is worth 100 cents in gold. The bonds of the United States are as good as gold. Our banking system has been preserved by wise legislation. Our economic structure is intact. Our workmen, refusing to be beguiled by Communist agitators imported to wreck our institutions, have been grim, patient and patriotic. Factories have staggered employment, rearranged time schedules and drawn upon their reserves to extend work. The family has functioned relatively helping relatively. The neighborly spirit has functioned,

FRESHMAN ANGLES

(Ed. Note: This article is not written to represent Orient opinion, though it may.)
In last week's Orient appeared a condemnation of the lecture system as an inevitable and undesirable adjunct to the material we garner from the subject. By way of response to this challenge may we be permitted to devote this week's Freshman Angles to a presentation of one Freshman's observations upon lecturing at Bowdoin?
In one Freshman course the lectures duplicated the material we garner from our outside reading. Here indeed is an "extraordinary misuse of time which might be used in a different manner with better results." How much more profitable would be a classroom bull session, an opportunity to ask questions and to discuss a subject openly with your classmates and professor. It seems to us that we are always imbibing someone else's opinions. We never have a chance to express our own except in quizzes—a pleasurable chance! Out of three hours of lectures six hours outside reading we are allowed one half-hour to reveal our own thoughts—and that on paper. We are permitted to write to compare notes and other's conclusions. The scales of self-expression do not balance those of absorbed knowledge.
The worth of a lecture depends upon two things: the capability of the lecturer and the value of his subject matter. A lecturer must be interesting, witty, or fascinating to hold attention of his listeners. It is true that there are a few Bowdoin professors whose lectures are an ordeal which must be passed through and have an extraordinarily soporific influence. But there is a greater number of brilliant speakers among the Bowdoin faculty to whom we would willingly listen for hours on end. The lecturer must be a genuine, and a bright spot in the drab routine of daily classes and recitations. The beauty of these lectures lies in the fact that the lecturer is human, personal, and the subjects are while the text-book is an inanimate and distant object. Are we, by damming the lecture system, going to deprive ourselves of this greatest enjoyment of our education?
We do not believe that the lecture system is "outworn", but misused, abused, and overused. We do not favor the abolition of lectures, but we do favor their use with more respect, especially by the inelegant professor, if any pedagogue can be made to acknowledge that failing in himself should be formed which shall hold meetings at regular periods;
3. The chief value of a subject should be secured to address the lecturer in the field.
4. The chief value of such a club would be in the contacts made.
1. Lack of Opportunity
The fact is that the fact that one sixth freshmen took part in the Frosh-Soph debate. As a matter of fact, only four took part. The significant thing is that those four were chosen from a small group of interested applicants. At the beginning of the season, Mr. Daggrett, Paul Sullivan and I talked to a group of sixteen freshmen professing interest in debating. The attendance at this meeting which was held in my room, gave us high hopes of enthusiastic support. But soon after that, some had come because they had seen other freshmen coming and had thought that the Proctor had called a general meeting. These few, excepted, they had come to see or "all Freshmen interested in debating." And of this number, only seven showed up for trials. Another call for all freshmen interested in debating who had not previously tried out was issued soon after the Frosh-Soph debate.
The "red-blooded" exponents of oratory must have been suffering from temporary anemia. Anyone who failed to attend these meetings has himself to blame, and anyone who did not come out, who nevertheless desires the "slump" in debating at Bowdoin, is pretty much of a grandstand player. While we are willing, and even anxious, to receive constructive criticism, we prefer that it come from those who are actively interested in working to improve conditions, and giving the college their time and support, as well as the criticism.

Students at Texas University are around the grounds in order to give a good impression to a visitor who needed in getting a really worth while audience to support a varsity team.
1. Importation of Speakers
One of the thesis of the proposed club would be the presentation of some "noted public speakers." This is a good idea, but it conflicts with the "Forum" which is already established. The supply of audiences for such meetings is inelastic; more for one club would probably result in a smaller audience for another. I agree with the writer, however, that a mixture of formal debates and forum talks would be a good thing. With this same idea in mind, I suggested that the Forum and Debating Council cooperate to hold informal Forum debates, which would be plain forum controversies on subjects of interest to college men. I did this three times last year and twice this year. The result has been what you might call a pocket-veto. If our friend can succeed in this respect, he deserves considerable credit.
2. A Contacts
The last argument advanced was that the chief value of this proposed club would be in the contacts made. Probably this is true. It seems to me, however, that the present contacts between freshmen and upperclassmen interested in debating offers a somewhat wider range than contacts made in a group composed solely of freshman debaters. With all their deficiencies, some of the upperclassmen in debating know their subject better than the freshmen, who are inexperienced. As for purely social contacts, I have no doubt that on examination, a few of them would be found to be almost human. In any event, I should recommend that an attempt be made at revision inside the Council first. Then, if the freshmen feel too much hampered by us old dodderers, they can form an organization of their own. (Signed) G. F. TOWLE, JR., Debate Manager.

GRID ATTENDANCE 15 PER CENT LESS

The following appeared in the Lewiston Daily Sun this week:

New York, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Football attendance figures gathered by the Associated Press from all over the country indicate that the football fan of 1932 could either take his football game or leave it alone, staying home in his car or elsewhere before the radio if the game wasn't promising.

Among the big losers in attendance were New York University, playing only one less game than in 1931 but to 124,000 less persons.

Creighton U. Was Plus One Touchdown But Minus Pair Of Goalposts On This One

It happened out in Creighton University, in the Middle West, and should easily qualify as the prize football game of 1932. Creighton was playing a night game. The fullback faked back, sometime in the middle of the first quarter...

The team were in a turmoil for a few moments, but finally the lights flashed on again, as suddenly as they had gone off. There stood the quarterback, over the goal line, with the ball in his hands. But that wasn't the biggest surprise. The Creighton goalposts had disappeared as though wiped from the ground with a giant hand. And to this day no one has found them.

1932 FROSH TRACK SQUAD IS LACKING EXPERIENCED MEN

Though Several Come from Prep Schools Bringing Good Records

Freshman cindermen practicing daily in the cage are slowly rounding into shape. In contrast to last year's Freshman squad which boasted numerous high class accomplishments, this year's group lacks experienced tracksters according to Coach Magee.

This does not preclude the possibility of the '32 crop's equalling '31's record, but it does mean that the coach has plenty of work ahead to shape the candidates into a team. It will not be known for two weeks or more just what the prospects are.

Phil Good, George Griffith, Vale Marvin, Bill Soule, Bob Prouty, and Cap Cowan are among those who come here with reputations behind them. In the Bowdoin Interscholastic Meet last March Good was high scorer, placing first in the hurdles and second in the 300. Marvin won several 600 yard runs in Massachusetts, the most conspicuous of these being in the State Meet.

Soule and Griffith Have Honors
The broad jumping honors of Class C at the Harvard Interscholastics last spring were captured by Soule, who also earned a third in the 220. Griffith enjoys an enviable record as a sprinter on the Worcester Academy.

The Zetes with the acquisition of Good, Soule, and Marvin have boosted their chances of retaining the Interfraternity Cup. Good and Ray McLaughlin will form a formidable Zele hurdle duet. Prouty in the distances, Cowan in the 600, and Dick Grey in the 300 will be the D. U. freshmen line. The most conspicuous of these being in the State Meet.

38 feet, 11 inches. 2nd, J. Boyd; distance, 37 feet, 9 inches. 3rd, Niblock; distance, 36 feet, 2 inches. 4th, Roberts; distance, 35 feet, 5 inches. For the remainder of the meet the schedule is as follows: Tuesday; 40 yd. dash, trials, 100 yd. dash, 100 yd. dash trials. Wednesday; low hurdles, trials and semi-finals, and one mile run. Thurs; low hurdles finals, 40 yd. dash finals, 100 yd. dash semi-finals, and 800 yd. run finals. Friday; high hurdles, trials and semi-finals; two mile run, and high jump. SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

It's a long, cold winter. But that it always is for Maine intercollegiate sports. The tepid rivalry furnished by the State Series gridiron round-robin, the spring track meet and baseball series gives way to a five months' athletic calm. Joe Bowdoin never makes the circuit of Maine, Colby, and Bates in sports competition in the winter time sports program.

In hockey, swimming, basketball, winter sports, gym, and fencing this is conceivable, for all four Maine colleges do not sponsor any one of these sports in common. However, in the one sport that all four Pine Tree colleges do participate, namely indoor track, there is no round-robin.

To meet this situation and give Maine college sport fans more than a mere-log-on-a-sledge event, why not a State Indoor Track and Field Meet, run on the general plan of the four-curved spring classic? If not a full-fledged meet, at least a rally carnival.

Opposition to such a proposal will have its biggest refuge in the "lack of suitable facilities" hue and cry. It is quite possible that the Bowdoin, Bates, and Colby field houses are not ample enough to quarter the event, and, of course, it would never do to stage it solely in the Maine exhibition. But there is a remedy for this.

The Portland Exposition Building offers an ideal location for the meet, which could alternate between Orono and Portland. If Bates, Colby, and Bowdoin insisted on having the performance in their respective cages, some division of events could be effected to satisfy all four sides. The relay, for instance, could be staged in Waterville, Lewiston, and Brunswick on different years, so that all gyms would be visited.

And then there will be those who will claim that the University Club meet in Boston provides, in effect, such a meeting. But why not consider this the New England indoor meet, which it really is, and put on an annual show in Maine that all the fans can attend?

When the Bowdoin grid team treks to Amherst, Mass., to stack up with Amherst, the difference in travel expenses of the season will total the charge of the mileage between Maine. State and the Sabrinas' stronghold. In other words, across the town.

And while on Amherst, view this from Pete Mills' column in the Colby Echo (written before the announcement of the scheduling of Amherst): "Several issues back we find the Bowdoin Orient expressing a hope which has prevailed on the campus of years. It is that of breaking into the 'Little Three' and turning it into a 'Little Four' at least as far as football is concerned... while we are speaking about it the games which Bates plays next year with Harvard and Dartmouth come to mind... with Bowdoin doing its best to crash into pink tea football and Bates lunging into big time stuff we guess that Maine and Colby should get together and dope out something original... if, in the next few years, Bowdoin wants to extract itself from the 'Series' and Bates makes good in the big show Colby and Maine should organize and put on every fall a contest such as couldn't be seen but once a year."

Now that the scheduling of Amherst is a reality, Peter is perhaps preparing a peroration to the above rally. But before digressing further, it would be fitting for the Waterville commentator to note that Bowdoin is very much in the series and will continue to be. The proposition of a Maine-Colby classic to replace the series seems a gesture of Colby "to crash into pink tea football" on their own, for the fact that Maine competes in a side affair, the N. E. Conference, so-called, is cautiously overlooked.

You can't get around this McLaughlin. In spite of the fact that he drew his sword in the Novelty Meet, or better the Turkey Sweepstakes, from a hat as the other pupils of Magee, Ray is highly favored to take the meet in a walk. His events are the high hurdles, high jump, 140, and broad jump. He is practically conceded first in the hurdles and broad jump, and on the basis of past performance, his only contender in the high jump will be Johnny Adams. The three-cornered hockey drama looks like a song for Colby, say the boys on the up-and-up. Violet, goal ace, Captain Mal Wilson at center, and the experienced and experienced wings and backs, defense, are all available for Miller's sextet. That leaves only a single defense post vacant from last season's championship outfit. Ross, who played hockey last year, is one of the best prospects Colby has had in years.

New Hampshire faces the season optimistically, albeit the demise of Hanley, "All-American defenceman", and Wark, a great goalie, through graduation. The New Hampshire student publication of the Durham Institution, describes the Wellmen's first opponents as "undoubtedly... a scrappy team, that will give a good account of itself before the season is over". Bates, too, expects much from its blade riders, as witness such names as Berry, Ken White, Murphy, Swift, Heldman, Sob... all on hand to greet Dave Morey on his return to Maine hockey after a two years' respite.

Still the All-teams pour in. On Captain Leary's All-Mass. State-Opponent line-up are Hubbard, Richardson, Milliken, and Torrey of the Bowser crew. That 20-6 lambasting certainly made its impression on the minds of the States.

Then there's the All-Opponent team offered by the Tufts Weekly. Millions of Bowdoin rates the center post and Berry of Bates is at left guard. The Weekly said the following on Milliken's selection: "We have placed Milliken at center of his big great defensive strength shown in the Bowdoin game." Richardson was given honorable mention in a backfield that included Chase and Gammino of Brown, Clem of B. U., and Bush of Mass. State.

Four students doing post-graduate work in the Aerodynamics Laboratory are experimenting with a three-inch model of an automobile in a water channel and hope by means of their experiment to determine just how the progress of a car is affected by its streamlines. The car is electrically driven and the work consists of photographing the water currents surrounding the car while it is in motion. Their purpose is to perfect an ideal car whose shape will not greatly interfere with its speed.—Carnegie Tartan.

hundred in 58 2-5 seconds; to win easily over Granberg, of Tech, with Henning taking third. The Swede was in front from the start, and finished a body length ahead.

The 200 yard freestyle relay was a thriller from start to finish. Carson swam even with Henning on the first leg, but Hull touched off a four head of Foster on the second fifty. Parmelee caught DuRoss on the turn and the two swam their final length stroke for stroke. Wallberg and Granberg, the anchor men, hitting the water together. Wallberg, tired from his previous exertions, lost a foot on the first length, but churned down the homestretch to win by the barest margin possible.

The summaries:

300 yard medley relay: won by Bowdoin (Foster, Whitmore, Sherman); Tech (Antonson, Flanders, Vaughan) second. Time: 3:30.2

220 yard freestyle: won by Wallberg, Bowdoin; Henning, Tech, second; Trot, Bowdoin, third. Time: 2:37.60 yard freestyle: won by Parmelee, Bowdoin; Granberg, Tech, second; DuRoss, Tech, third. Time: 2:26.2 sec.

150 yard backstroke: won by Foster, Bowdoin; Benck, Tech, second; Edmonds, Tech, third. Time: 2:09.2

200 yard breaststroke: won by Flanders, Tech; Muller, Tech, second; Beale, Bowdoin, third. Time: 2:51

440 yard freestyle: won by Parmelee, Bowdoin; Vaughan, Tech, second; Carry, Bowdoin, third. Time: 5:47

100 yard freestyle: won by Wallberg, Bowdoin; Granberg, Tech, second; Henning, Tech, third. Time: 58.2 sec.

200 yard freestyle relay: won by Bowdoin (Carson, Foster, Parmelee, Wallberg); Tech (Henning, DuRoss, Hall, Granberg) second. Time: 1:46.4

Richardson Leads White Grid Scorers, Tepping Hubbard, Davis, Bardell

Henry Richardson, hard plunging fullback for the Polar Bear football aggregation, led the team in scoring for the 1932 season. White led the team. He ranged through the Massachusetts State forward wall for two touchdowns, and whacked the center of Maine's line to chalk up the only score recorded against the Brown Bears in state competition.

Heinie Hubbard and Bill Davis tied for second with six points apiece, the former coming against Mass State and the latter's winning the Williams game. Charlie Bardell's three placement kicks for points after touchdowns against Mass State and Williams gave him the only other tallies.

FENCING PROSPECTS GOOD THIS SEASON

Eight prospective fencers attended a meeting of the fencing team on Wednesday, Nov. 30, to form plans for the coming season, and on the following Monday practice began in earnest. There is but one member of last year's team on hand, Douglas Anello, '33, who becomes this year's leader. The coaching of the squad is a problem, but it is hoped that Mr. Stevens, of Portland, who last season gave his services two nights a week, will again be able to act as coach.

Tentatively scheduled are Boston College, Dartmouth, and Boston University with a definite match with Harvard on Feb. 18th. Plans are being made to form a fencing league consisting of Bowdoin, Williams, Amherst, Lafayette, Hamilton, Union, and the Yale Junior Varsity, and if successful, matches will be held this season.

Upperclassmen candidates for positions on this three man foil and epee team include E. A. Smith, S. Merrill, Kline, Fernald, and Hamburger. Two freshmen, McCoy and Mitchell, are aspirants, the latter of whom last year captained the New England interscholastic Fencing Champions at Loomis school.

MILLER PREDICTS STRONG OPPOSITION FOR SPRINGFIELD

White Swimmers Have Short Period of Relaxation Before Next Meet

When interviewed after the M. I. T. meet as to the outlook for the rest of the swimming season with one meet to base a judgment on, Coach "Bob" Miller summed up the White's prospects for the meet with Springfield Jan. 7 as follows: "Our chances of success in the coming meet rest upon the ability of the men who took third places for us in the M. I. T. contest to take seconds in the coming competition. However, if our men continue to show their present strength we shall have a chance to defeat them, a feat that we have never yet accomplished."

The White natators will have a short period of relaxation before beginning concentrated training for the Springfield meet which will be in home waters. The Jayvees will swim the Portland Boys' Club at the same time, alternating their events with those of the varsity meet. This meet will open the 1933 season for Springfield, Springfield, who has always placed high in the New England meets, will bring a well-balanced team to Brunswick. They are captained by Fowler, crack backstroke man. In the dashes they have strong material added from last year's freshman team.

At a time of year when victims of depression have been carried off by the snow to pallid cells glowering about houses...

In short, our fair guests, paraphrasing a popular song of yesterday: "we don't bring any flowers to you"; and we are unfortunately, merely what we are...

Perhaps it is futile, this perpetual endeavoring to relate things of the campus to those of a strange outer world...

But it is not this weariness rather the unconcern of disinterest? And it is easy to mistake ignorance for disillusionment...

Of course, there are men who have counted newspapers and perused analytical magazines to learn the situation...

The "happy and permanently associated marriage is possible and most probable when the actual "married state" of matrimony, chastity, and duty are unobscured...

...the strike of most, these citizens will feel Christmas cheer from the town...

COLLEGE LINKS SIX SEMI-ANNUAL DEBATE LEAGUE

Question of Liquor Control to be Debated Under New Forum System

A contest sponsored from the college in debating circles has been organized by Bowdoin College. A debating league under the name of "The Semi-Annual Debate League" will start its first debate on Saturday, September 1, 1934, at Brunswick in the debating room of Bowdoin Hall.

The school, in the league are: Bowdoin College, Brunswick; Portland High, Portland; Academi, Winslow; Dover-Fennett Union, Dover-Fennett; Central High and Academy, High. The question to be debated is: Resolved—That the Outlets System of Liquor Control Would Best Solve the Problem of Liquor Control in the United States at the Present Time. The competition, instead of ordinary debating team, will be conducted under the forum plan. There will be two forums, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. Each school will have one speaker in each forum. The morning forum will consist of the affirmative speakers of four schools, and the negative speakers of three. In the afternoon, the forum will consist of the affirmative speakers of three and the negative of four.

Judgment By Point System
The speakers, instead of debating directly against other speakers, will be debating for or against the proposition under discussion, much as do our representatives at the state or national legislatures. Each speaker is allotted twenty minutes, and may divide this time as he sees fit. There are three judges who will judge contestants both on effectiveness of delivery and also on the number of points in favor of their side of the question which they put forward and successfully defend, and the number of points of their opponents which they break down. The judges rule on the basis of 100. The school whose two speakers receive the highest average rating, wins.

This method of debating corresponds to the Oregon Plan, which has been championed by the state of Oregon. The first champion of this method is the state of Oregon. The plan is to have a speaker for each side of the question, and the judge will judge on the basis of 100. The school whose two speakers receive the highest average rating, wins.

TITLES OF COLLEGE CATALOG CHANGED

To conform with regulations of the Post Office Department concerning the clean mail, the title of the new College Catalogue has been changed from "Annual Catalogue 1934-1935" to "Catalogue Issue for Students of 1934-1935". This change appears on the cover of the catalogue, and the change has been made on the inside this page.

The reason for this innovation is that the U.S. Post Office Department requires that all first class matter be published at least four times a year. The former title implied one single issue per annum. The new title and title-page, with the month of issue substituted in place of the year of issue, make the publication a quarterly, and thus follow a reasonable saving in postage of the catalogue.

It is noted on the West Coast, it developed more positive on the part of the student, and often feeling which will be useful in later life. Professor Childs says that this change and form of catalogue is a very interesting experiment. He has talked with Mr. Richard Parsons, a notable graduate of the Class of 1928, now at Bowdoin High School, who suggests that there is a very real interest about trying this type of catalogue.

Hear the Chesterfield Radio Program, Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays—7:30 p.m., Thursday, Thursdays—7 p.m. N.B.T. Columbia Network.

Turkish tobacco is to cigarette what seasoning is to food... the "spice," the "sauce." You don't want too much seasoning in food... in a cigarette. But you do want enough!

Chesterfield was just the right amount of Turkish tobacco. Not too much, but just enough to give to Chesterfield the finishing touch of better taste and aroma.

Smokes a Chesterfield... and taste the difference.

... ..

ALL GAMES WILL BE PLAYED IN THE Gymnasium, Wednesday and Thursday, each League having a game at each of these nights. Thus the fans will be treated to double bills three consecutive nights weekly. Also by this arrangement each will play once a week. The winners of each league will meet for the grand championship.

THE D.U.V. (Dartmouth University Volleyball) will have to work hard to maintain a superiority in the face of the abundance of all material uncovered in the past.

Very Little but persistent appears to be the outlook for the track team this year, according to Coach John Manning. "We have a few outstanding men," he said, "but no weight man, almost no runner, high jumper, pole vaulter or distance man has appeared."

Harvard's Graduate Fellowship

The creation of a "Society of Fellows" at Harvard University providing opportunities for independent creative work by a limited number of young graduates, announced Monday, is one of the most commendable contributions made in the spirit of modernistic scholarship in recent years. The plan, which is unique in the entire history of education, harmonizes with the note we have endeavored to strike in these columns during the lecture system discussion. At last here is the "scholar's paradise".

Under the plan a group not exceeding 24 picked men, recently graduated, will be selected "for their promise of notable contribution to knowledge and thought." Known as "Junior Prize Fellows," these men will receive for a three-year term, free board and rooms in the various Houses, a yearly stipend of from $1250 to $1500, and free use of all the facilities of the University, such as libraries, laboratories and all privileges of instruction. Under special circumstances, Junior Fellows may be appointed for a second term of three years, but no longer.

It is stated that the Junior Fellows shall "devote their whole time to the projected scholarship, and preparation therefor, free from academic regulations for degrees," and that they "shall receive no credit for courses and shall not be candidates for any degree."

The newly-established Society of Fellows follows in general the plan outlined by President Lowell in his Annual Report for 1920-21, and referred to in subsequent reports. As stated in the report for 1920-21, it is designed to meet the problem of "separating future creative scholars into a distinct body that will have a greater attraction for ambitious men of talent. . . Such an atmosphere should carry intellectual contagion beyond anything now in this country."

The new plan provides for a managing body of seven "Senior Fellows," which includes the President of the University and the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences as members ex officio. This body will select the Junior Prize Fellows from among the recent graduates of Harvard and other colleges who have shown promise of original and important creative work in the several branches of scholarship. First appointments, it is stated, shall not be made after the age of 25, and it is expected that in many cases they will be made even younger, from students who have just graduated from college.

The Junior Fellows will be assigned rooms and board in the various Houses in the Harvard House Plan. The Society of Fellows will have its own headquarters in Eliot House, where a special suite of dining, common and serving rooms are already built. The new plan provides for weekly dinners of the Society there to furnish "frequent social commingling of men who are aiming at one goal by different paths." The funds to make the plan possible are a special gift to the University.

Appointment of the Senior Fellows will be made at once, it was announced, and it is expected that the plan as a whole will go into effect this year. Details of the method of selecting the Junior Prize Fellows will be announced following the appointment of the managing body.

The proposal of a Society of Fellows was outlined by President Lowell in his annual report for 1920-21 as follows:

"Closely connected with the training of thorough scholars for the doctorate is that of recreating young men of rare capacity for contributing to thought and developing their power early in life. This is, of course, one of the aims of the Graduate School; but after training its best students, and giving them a chance by writing a thesis to learn the mysteries of research, it cannot enable them to carry the subject farther. It has been suggested that a group of fellowships for men not over twenty-five on appointment, who should be members of a society with scholars eminent in various fields, living where they are naturally much together and frequently meet for meals, would have a highly stimulating effect. This is what James Russell Lowell had in mind when in his oration at the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary in 1896 he said:

"The friends of university training can do nothing that would forward it more than the founding of post-graduate fellowships and the building and endowing of a hall where the holders of them might be commensals, remembering that when Cardinal Wolsey built Christ Church at Oxford his first care was the kitchen. Nothing is so great a quickener of the faculties, or so likely to prevent their being narrowed to a single groove, as the frequent social commingling of men who are aiming at one goal by different paths."

"The prize fellowships at some of the English colleges, especially at Trinity, Cambridge, are of this nature, and they have produced an extraordinary number of distinguished men, one half of the British recipients of the Nobel prizes having been holders of Trinity fellowships.

"We hear much today about cooperation in research, and that is

It is a year-extended system, whose main feature is that it allows the student, though large as it is, to have the maximum opportunity for the most complete education. This system is not an end in itself, but a means to an end, and it is designed to give the student the opportunity to give the maximum to the college, while the student is in the college, and to have the maximum to the student, when he is out of the college. 6 o'clock means nothing to telephone service!

Bell System service must go on all the time. Day and night, Sundays and holidays, it must handle with speed and accuracy not only the usual traffic but also the unexpected rush of calls.

To meet this obligation, Bell System men tackle problems of many kinds. At Bell Telephone Laboratories, scientists develop new kinds of apparatus. At Western Electric, engineers find ways to make telephones, switchboards and cable more and more reliable. In the telephone companies, traffic engineers devise improved operating methods that make service faster, more accurate, more dependable.

Result: at noon or in the dead of night, the public reaches confidently for the telephone, knowing that Bell System service never stops.

Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Science degrees? There is no essential difference. At the present time the determining factor as to which degree will be conferred upon the student in June is the amount of Latin offered for work. The instances when this is not true are in the minority. The number who take advantage of the strenuous opportunity to qualify with Latin and Greek and thus move from the B.S. to the A.B. are steadily decreasing.

Why not grant the degrees according to the nature of the major work done?

A survey made by the dean reveals that those offering A.B. subjects are on a higher academic average for their ensuing four years of college work than those who came to Brunswick as "candidates" for the B.S. As is frequently the case with statistics of this sort, we feel they prove practically anything. The A.B. intelligentsia are for the most part those who have had their steps directed toward college since their beginning in high school having consequently a solid background. Moreover, it is perhaps true that marking is generally more lenient in the A.B. courses. Whatever may be the reason for the superiority, we see no valid defense therein for the present pointless discrimination.

Is it appropriate that a major in zoology receive a Bachelor of Arts degree? (He has taken to meet the "English requirement" only, let us say, English 1, 2, English 11, 12).

Is it appropriate that a major in English literature receive a Bachelor of Science degree? (He has taken to meet the "science requirement" only, let us say, Chemistry 1, 2, Psychology 1, 2).

Modern Religious Thought
 First of undergraduate extra-curricular affairs after midyears will be the second annual Forum of Modern Religious Thought. The most significant aspect of this convales, for which the College is indebted to the Bowdoin Christian Association, is the fact that student and faculty demand has made genuine reality out of mere experiment. When a round dozen of young clergymen approached the Bowdoin campus last spring, it may well have been with a feeling of diffidence: the reception of such a novel undertaking — almost the forcing upon undergraduates of religious consideration — was a moot question.

But crowded after-dinner "bull-sessions", when students found their guests real flesh-and-blood men ready to battle knock-down drag-out arguments on any point from Aristotle to Companionate Marriage, proved that youthful interest in things farther from the campus than Whittier Field was not wholly absent. This second meeting of the clergy and the college is one of significance. Such an innovation may in time become an institution, when religion and undergraduate thought can meet on common grounds.

Mustard and Cross

This may break up an implicit romance, but we can't hold back on that account. One of our more literary freshmen was endeavoring to convince his lass that it would be a grand idea for her to come down to Bowdoin on Wednesday night to hear John Masfield. He expatiated at great length on the virtues of poetry in general, and of Mr. Masfield's in particular. He told her often and earnestly of the good to be derived from a few moments of attention to well-contrived verse. As he stopped for a brief breather, the little woman smiled shyly. "Do you think he can make me cry?" If you'll pardon us now, we'll get back to our Eddie Guest.

There's no use talking, our Commander MacMillan GETS AROUND. Last Friday night he was down in Wiscasset to give a chat before the Women's Club down there, and the following night he was in Portland, lecturing away in the Falmouth before a Bowdoin Night crowd. We weren't at either, but we wonder if the Commander doesn't find it a bit hard to say the right thing in the right place. Having lived in fraternity houses ourselves, and made breaks during vacation — well, it's at least a thought.

We don't like to carp and criticize, but it does seem rather queer to us that the Alumni and the Orient are both convinced that Marion Lewis Lovell Short '32 is in Hartford, Connecticut, slaving away in Messrs. Pratt & Whitney's fine factory. They have Mr. Short all wrong; that is where he would like to be, but the times being what they are, and money being so tight, and — well, young fellow, drop around next Tuesday, and we'll see if we have anything. It takes a humorous column to set a matter like that straight, Mr. Wilder. We liked the rest of the paper.

When the President accepted that new gateway which '07 gave to mark the spot where the road will be built when Bowdoin feels the need for communication with the world outside, he said, "It is interesting to reflect that this gateway will be here long after we are gone." It may be interesting, but we find it awfully depressing in a lot of ways.

 HERE THIS EVENING

Foot Laureates from Chaucer to Bridges have invariably been chosen to reward their glorification of rank and privilege. Chaucer, Spenser, Jonson, Dryden, Southey, Wordsworth, Tennyson, and Bridges were markedly sympathetic toward the upper classes. Kipling was rejected as Tennyson's successor because of his poem Recessional and his flippant reference to Queen Victoria as the "Widow of Windsor".

Masefield's championship of the despised and rejected is revealed in the following lines from one of his poems, "Not the ruler for me, but the ranker, the tramp of the road, the slave with the sack on his shoulders, pricked on by the goad." Consequently, the Labor Government's selection in 1930 of Masefield from a field including Kipling, Noyes, Drinkwater, Chesterton was a departure from tradition; yet the choice was too good to be criticized.

When Foot Laureate Masefield visits Bowdoin tonight, he will bring something besides his reputation, for in 1926 Mr. Masefield's speaking tour, without the prestige of his laureateship, broke several attendance records. He is one of the few poets who knows how to read his own verse. His grave musical voice which above all can be heard, his long study culminating in mastery of the art of interpretative reading, his picturesque and forceful personality, all combine to make his rendering of his own work a thing of beauty.

John Masfield

Bowdoin whole-heartedly welcomes John Masfield here today. Perhaps more than any other contemporary English poet he is widely read by undergraduates. The College is glad to welcome him both the man and the poet.

The appointment of John Masfield in 1930 as poet laureate of England was a peculiarly happy one. Above all other things Masfield is the poet of "the scorned, the rejected", the "man with too weighty a burden, too weary a load." At a time when the common man, the worker who more than anyone else must keenly feel the economic injustices of our time, can find unprecedented opportunities for access to books, at a time when the influence of the Labor Party in England is still a thing of recent history, it is fitting that such a man should be poet laureate.

For long the laureateship has been an aristocratic office. It has been traditionally a court position. Its official history extends back to John Dryden, poet laureate in 1670 by virtue of letters patent with a pension of three hundred pounds and a butt of Canary wine. Its actual history extends back as far as Richard Coeur de Lion who kept at court a "versificator regis". Chaucer, whose influence on Masfield has been great, was given a perquisite of wine and a pension by Edward III. In the fifteenth century John Kay described himself as Edward IV's "humble poet laureate". Queen Elizabeth gave Spenser a pension.

Thirteen poets have preceded Masfield. Many names on the official roll have faded into oblivion. Dryden, Southey, Wordsworth, Tennyson, and Bridges, the last untested by time, are still with us. Southey, brave and upright, though a serious social reformer even in the Tory days of the latter part of his life, did not approach the common man. Part of Wordsworth's greatness was his isolation, but his want of varied contact with men in the broad highways of public life narrowed his outlook. Tennyson, morbidly shy of strangers, shunned the general intercourse of men. In Democracy he had no confidence and while he showed genuine sympathy with the masses it was obviously the sympathy of an aristocratic outsider. Bridges, master craftsman, was poetically an aristocrat.

In an introduction to his collected poems, an introduction written from Oxford in 1925, Masfield analyses the position of a group of young poets who felt in the last decade of the nineteenth century that "the poets had gone sufficiently far in their striving for the faultless and that a change, however harsh, should be welcome." He says, "These poets also knew that the school of Tennyson had created poetry for the few, who had the money to buy books and the leisure to read them. They saw that outside the small comfortable class was the mass of the race to whom poetry meant nothing. This they knew to be wrong. They felt that the art, which appeals only to a limited section of the world, can be but a limited and faulty art. As Michael Angelo finely said, 'The only light which counts for a work of art is the light of the piazza.'"

Even a cursory glance over the work of Masfield reveals the influence of this spirit. And his own experiences in the world of men have fitted for his work. The man who wrote The Everlasting Mercy and The Widow of Bye Street, the man who said of the character from whom he drew Dauber, "He would not have become a good painter, but he had courage and the will to succeed, and these things are in themselves a kind of genius", the man who wrote Reynard the Fox partly because the fox hunt brings together on terms of equality all sorts and conditions of English people, the man who wrote King Cole partly as a tribute to the circus, the art of which is of a reality not common in the art of modern times, this man has his finger on the pulse of human life. He feels with the sick man and rejoices with the strong.

Lectures and Degrees

We expressed recently a sincere belief that a large portion of the lecture hours held within the local classrooms, was time wasted and misused. On unofficial inquiry we discovered to our satisfaction many faculty members who share this view — completely or in part; nevertheless, the prospect of any progressive changes being made in the near future is small. The reasons are obvious. First, a period of close study of the present situation and the more effective methods to substitute would precede any action, secondly, the funds necessary would not be immediately forthcoming, thirdly, and what would be the most unfortunate, the most trying obstacle, is the binding force of custom and precedent. And so we anticipate nothing. Perhaps Bowdoin will follow in the course taken by sister institutions when the awakening comes.

What justifies the existence of lectures when it is possible for students to neglect them totally and yet receive better than creditable marks in the course?

There is one important change, however, which might be made with little delay. The grievance is not a new one. Seniors in particular often ask, "What is the essential difference between the

You smoke a Pipe

and we'd like to talk with you about it

All races of people since the beginning of time, so far as we have been able to read, have had some kind of a pipe and have smoked something—whether they called it tobacco or what not.

AND since smoking a pipe is so different from smoking a cigar or cigarette, we made a most painstaking, scientific study in an effort to make, if we could, a tobacco which was suited to pipes.

We found out, first, that there was a kind of tobacco that grew in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky called White Burley, and that there was a certain kind of this tobacco which was between the tobacco used for cigarettes and the tobacco used for chewing tobacco. It is this tobacco which is best for pipes.

We found out that Mr. J. N. Wellman, many years ago, made a pipe tobacco which was very popular. But it was never advertised and after he passed away nothing more was heard about it. We acquired this Wellman Method and that is what we use in making Granger.

Next was the cut. We knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times. So remembering how folks used to "whittle" their tobacco we cut GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco—"Rough Cut." It smokes cooler, lasts longer and never gums the pipe.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco —right process—cut right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has become a popular smoke. And we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

GORELL PREDICTS PERMANENT PEACE BETWEEN ENG., U.S.

 pit? What is the future of it? Answering the first, he divided the empire into three distinct periods. The first was from the colonization of America to the Declaration of Independence. The second lasted from the establishment of Canada as an integral part of the British Empire to its practical independence on either of three dates: August 4, 1814; August 20, 1917; or the summer of 1926 during the sitting of the Imperial Conference. The third phase is now at hand; but during this phase it has not been England which has been expanding, but Britain as a whole.
 Lord Gorell passed over the first period as well-known to all. The second came about through the act of Lord Durham which absorbed the French and other inhabitants of Canada into the British Empire. He did not try to make the French English, but included them in the British dominion. So in the rest of England's vast colonies, all the varied peoples are united under British rule.

Britain's growth
 Thus the empire grew, always held together by the conception of British sway. During the war all colonies remained loyal to their mother country. But in 1922 Canada declared that it was no longer a colony, but an equal partner in the British Empire. In 1926 at the Imperial Conference, Lord Gorell quoted that the "autonomous Communities within the British Empire are founded in states in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by common allegiance to the Crown and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations." Now England, though nominally the head, does not attempt to govern, though the does use her influence. But as George Washington said: "no influence is not to govern."
 In India, England has another problem. Although the sovereign prince rule despotically over its population, they acknowledge England. This is the anomaly which Britain has to solve. She has been attempting to solve in her Round Table Conferences.

The third division of England's vast possessions are the dependent nations which range from childhood to conditions of almost complete independence. He cited two examples of problems to be solved in West Africa and East Africa.

England's Black Races
 The first is how can England build up an almost entire black population into a sufficient, cultured, self-governing African civilization? In the second, How can she keep the few whites from exploiting the predominant black population, and cause them to live harmoniously together? Of the progress already made he stated an example in Zanzibar where a cathedral has been erected in this ancient home of slavery in the old slave market with the altar resting over the former slave block.

When one thinks of the future it is to be, it is very difficult to predict. The problems have to be worked out for the majority of the people. There is only one constructive principle: duties before rights. The component parts must work out some formal cooperation. Unless they do, it may mean the bankruptcy of western ideals, for it is impossible for the little English government to look up on the problems which come before it from any one point of view. "We are condemned to a world-wide policy," said Lord Gorell.

War With U. S. Unthinkable
 "In the future, conflict with America is unthinkable, for we both have Canada to consider; you because she is your next-door neighbor; we because she has the right to refuse to back our war declarations", was the speaker's declaration. In Europe, England cannot judge from a European point of view. She must take the middle course and avoid any controversy. The British Empire is the greatest bulwark against war because war would disrupt it.

"People wonder how this strange conglomeration can hold together. We have done it with all written constitution in order that we might have no hindrance. We go slowly from one conference to another, never writing down anything to break, so nothing can be broken. One common interest holds us together."
 "Gradually the meaning of nationality is changing", concluded Lord Gorell. "It is changing to internationality with Great Britain and the United States in that that great and new patriotism we (the United States and Great Britain) may be more closely molded together."

WILDER PRESENT AT DEPRESSION COUNCIL

Friday and Saturday Alumni Secretary Philip S. Wilder, attended the Annual Meeting of District 1 of the American Alumni Council at Wellesley College. The discussion was primarily devoted to the management of Alumni officers, funds, and magazines during this period of financial depression. Delegates were present from thirty New England colleges and preparatory schools.

 run. He outdistanced the field early in the first lap and came home strong to show down the rest record by second and a half, in 1 minute, 17 3/8 seconds.

In but one event, the broad jump, did the yearlings secure all three places. Soule out-leaped all his competitors by more than a foot with Lyons and Good cleaning up the other two places. Grey then galloped through the 1000 yard feature in record time to garner the cube an additional five points. The judges were forced to scrutinize sharply in the shot put, for Roberts, a Magalloway, won by little over an inch, with second and third separated by an eighth of an inch. One of the most hotly-contested races of the day was the 300 yard dash, in which Maxxy led Good to the finish in a result-winning time. In the meet's concluding event, Solari, Grey, Soule and Marvin, the 38 relay quartet, ran away from the Croppers two-lap, and took a third in the van.

The summaries:
 40 yard dash: Johnson, S.P., first; Darling, S.P., second; Soule, E., third. Time: 4-5 sec. (equals meet record).
 Low hurdles: Good, B., first; Gowell, S.P., second; Solari, B., third. Time: 6-5-5 sec. (equals meet record of 5-5-5).
 Mile run: Prouty, B., first; Mearns, S.P., second; Elgoin, B., third. Time: 4 min. 58-1-5 sec.
 High hurdles: Good, B., 36 ft., 5 inches, first; Curry, S.P., 36 ft., 8 1/2 inches, second; Johnson, S.P., 36 ft., 31 inches, third.
 High hurdles: Good, B., first; Gowell, S.P., second; Hill, B., third. Time: 6 sec. (breaks meet record of 6-5-5).
 600 yard run: Marvin, B., first; Shute, B., second; Hughes, B., third. Time: 1 min. 17-4-5 sec. (breaks meet record of 1 min. 19-1-5 sec.).
 Broad jump: Soule, E., 20 ft., 7 1/2 inches, first; Lyons, B., 19 ft., 3 inches, second; Good, B., 19 ft., 3 inches, third.
 1000 yard run: Grey, B., first; Romano, S.P., second; Con, B., third. Time: 2 min. 29-3-5 sec. (breaks meet record of 2 min. 30-4-5 sec.).
 800 yard dash: Maxxy, B., first; Good, B., second; Gowell, S.P., third. Time: 2-1-5 sec. (equals meet record).
 High jump: Good, B., and Swan, B., tie for first, 5 ft. 5 inches; Beck, B., 5 ft. 4 inches; Greenleaf, S.P., 5 ft. 3 inches, tie for third.
 Pole vault: Lyons, B., 10 feet, first; Whitzen, S.P., 9 feet, 8 inches, second. No third.

Relay race: Won by Bowdoin, Solari, Soule, Grey, and Marvin. Time: 2 min. 16 sec.

FRESHMAN ANGLES

Phi Chi's announcement in the early part of December that freshmen would henceforth be permitted to wear sweaters pleased us immensely. Under the influence of this rule our only suit had become rather threadbare. It was too chilly now, and something over a shirt, Phi Chi would not allow us to wear a sweater, and consequently we could not wear a coat belonging to our only suit.
 Phi Chi must have overlooked in promulgating the 1936 pros that, since the depression is still in existence, most freshmen would possess but one suit. We have, therefore, come to the conclusion that Phi Chi is an aristocratic organization of rich men's sons, that Bowdoin's democratic spirit of all for one and one for all has become extinct, and that a revolution is necessary to bring about a rule of the students, by the students, for the students.

The majority of Phi Chi's rules are sensible and have definite purpose underlying them. The freshman hat brands every frosh with the mark of his class, puts him in his place, and aids the upperclassmen in becoming acquainted with the newcomers. The traditional "hi" is a symbol of Bowdoin Fellowship and also a means of getting acquainted. The prohibition of great school insights serves to take any freshman of his high horse and to remind him that his past accomplishments don't mean a thing at Bowdoin. The banning of loud clothing prevents the freshman from becoming too obvious and pretentious.
 We don't know just why there is a smoking law unless Phi Chi, suddenly become benevolent, hopes to save the freshmen some money. The gram regulation, by removing one fourth of those eligible to commit atrocities on the campus lawn, saves it thereby a good deal of wear and tear. We suggest, however, it might be applied as justifiably to upperclassmen. The prohibition of drinking is a sincere but ineffective effort to start the yawning off on the right track. The restraint of local "social swimmers" is an equally honest but futile attempt to remove from the freshmen the temptations of the sea; but, we have a suspicion, also to keep the philanthropic field open to the upperclassmen without dangerous competition from underclass lady-killers. As for the singing of Phi Chi, who wants to sing it anyway?

Library Renowned For Longfellow Collection, Bibliographical Data

A college library, an interviewer was informed by Mr. Gerald Wilder, is not meant to be a collector of rarities: books worth several hundred dollars which may be bought in other editions for a few cents, and serve their purpose just as well. Hubbard Hall contains very few books of this type, and those which it possesses are almost entirely gifts.

However, despite this lack of rarities, our Bowdoin Library is famous for several things which it prizes highly, chief being the Longfellow Collection.
 Many years ago Bowdoin, influenced by the fact that Longfellow graduated from here, decided to make a collection of his work. It was laid in the days when first editions of his works were not so much in demand, and consequently a great foundation was laid. Today the Longfellow Collection is one of the most valuable collections of its type in the world, considered from a standpoint of size and completeness.

What the Collection Contains
 It contains besides first editions sometimes a dozen or fifteen other editions of each copy which may be used by the scholar for comparative purposes. Editions of the great poet's works which have been translated into foreign tongues have also been procured. One of the most interesting features of this collection is the one of all the music which contains Longfellow's poems as lyrics.
 The fact that there are between five and six hundred pieces gives a splendid idea of Longfellow's popularity. A singular fact connected with this music is that the majority of the compositions are by Englishmen.

Strength in Bibliographical Material
 One of the great prides of the Library is the fine assemblage of bibliographical material which is being built up. Most valuable in this department is the Depository Catalog of the Library of Congress. This catalog contains about one million and a half cards, and about fifty thousand cards are added yearly.
 The value of this acquisition can be imagined, when one realizes that there are only forty-six such catalogs in the country, and no more to be had. Besides the letter, the Library contains also the Catalogue General des Livres Imprimés de la Bibliothèque Nationale, the General Catalog of Printed Books in the British Museum, and the Gesamtkatalog der Preussischen Bibliothek. All of these are in publication, and should be complete in about one hundred and fifty volumes each.

MUST PREPARE FOR POST-COLLEGE LIFE STATES PRESIDENT

Undergraduates Should Not Isolate Themselves by Training

Colleges are no isolated places where the preparation received has no bearing on after life, maintained President Kenneth C. M. Sills in his chapel address Sunday. He emphasized the necessity for academic training with an eye toward the future.
 President Sills gave an informal talk, stating that the address in the evening by Father Riggs of Yale University would be the principal religion exercises for the day. He made known that Father Riggs' visit to Bowdoin was the first time in his memory, at any rate, that a Catholic representative has spoken under Bowdoin auspices.
 The speaker's text for the afternoon was the story of Jesus, who as a youth astounded the elders of the temple with his learning. President Sills paralleled this example of a man who later led the world, to collegians who fall in later life because of blind, one-sided preparation.

REFUTE MAINE ED'S JABS AT HARRIERS

 A newspaper story recently reported that Coach Ray Thompson of Bates is seriously considering a plan to introduce road running at the Lewiston college. For years aversion to the long, arduous climb, popularly known as Pole Hill, which is the bane of many distance running supporters, has been intense. If the reported gesture of Coach Thompson is fact, it appears that the future of road-running is established. Coach Chester Jenkins of the U. of M. trader, has not as yet publicly committed himself on the matter.

CUMBERLAND PRELIMINARIES
 This Friday night it's "Billion Dollar Scandal", with Constance Cummings and Robert Armstrong, and on Saturday George O'Brien performs with his customary agility in "Robber's Roost". The book was popular.
 Just around the corner—of Cumberland street, Monday and Tuesday, that's "Prosperity", and Marie Dressler and Polly Moran appear in this moving picture to what critics call their great credit.

CASH GRAD AID IS LACKING SWIMMING

 gets out of college he can't play football or baseball, but he can always swim, and he always does. The only reason that Bowdoin doesn't have one of the outstanding swimming teams in New England is that it is a minor sport. The words "minor sport" are discouraging when you're trying to get a good swimmer to come to college. I think it should be made a major as soon as it is practicable. Most of the students are in favor of it, and as far as I can see, there's no reason why it should not be."
 Sport in Five Years Old
 For five years swimming has been a minor sport at Bowdoin, but it has thrived far above the rank of the other minor, and is at present equalling some of the major athletics. Coach Bob Miller has four teams actively competing in outside competition, "varley", minor "varley", second junior "varley", and C group. Over seventy-five men use the pool daily, and all of these men are in one of the four squads.
 Bowdoin has as long and as difficult a schedule as any other college sport, major or minor. This year they are taking on M.I.T., Springfield, Boston University, Dartmouth, Worcester Tech, Trinity, Wesleyan and Amherst, as well as the three intercollegiate meets, in which they compete with teams from all over the country. No other school in Maine has a swimming team, a fact which forces the matadors to go far afield in their competition.

"I'm working and Smoking overtime... hence a Milder Cigarette"

"WHEN I work hard, I usually smoke more; and when I smoke more, I usually work harder—and that's why I want a cigarette that's milder." We use in Chesterfield Cigarettes mild, ripe Domestic and Turkish tobaccos which have been aged and re-aged. These good tobaccos in Chesterfield are used in the right proportions—that's a very important matter. These good tobaccos in Chesterfield are blended and cross-blended—welded together; that, too, helps to make a milder cigarette with better taste.

HUSKY RINKMEN SWAMP BRUINS 8-3 AT ARENA

Richardson, Billings, Kimball Score White Goals As Netminders Fall

LETOURNEAU BIG GUN FOR NORTHEASTERN

Tallies Four Goals, Teammate Gallagher Figures in Six at Debut

Bowdoin's hockey team got off to a discouraging start when the Northeastern sextet, notably a powerful and fast line, riddled the Bear net profusely to win in a walk, 5-0, Friday night in the Boston Arena. The White bludgeoned the Husky defense with brilliant during the Husky fusillade, but could not find themselves until the final period; and then the verdict had been sealed.

Going into the third chapter with a 6-1 handicap, Wells' first line of Richardson, Godfrey and Billings pieced the opening defense persistently and effectively in that last round to make it a contest. Big Tom Kimball was not exactly plerogmatic as he golfted a pass from Billings through goalie Dingwell and made things spasmodically hot for the Huskies.

On the combative side of the tussle Bowdoin was outshine, Goalies Keville and Bigelow failing to exhibit any marked degree of finesse. Keville was yanked after the opening two minutes of play when a barrage resulted in two quick tricks for the opposition. Bowdoin's second Bill relieved the stress momentarily but could not stay the continual assault.

JAYVEES TROUNCE AUBURN SWIMMERS

Breaking a meet record was of little help to the Auburn Y.M.C.A. swimmers last Friday evening, who despite some brilliant individual performance lost to the Bowdoin Jayvees 45-20. With a smooth, powerful stroke, Stone of Auburn shattered the 100-yard breaststroke figure, covering the century swim in 1 minute, 21 seconds.

Clint Osborne was the other outstanding winner of the evening, cleaning up his usual first in the dive and touching on his teammate McKinley for another backstroke victory. Quincy and McKee boomed up and down the pool in a hot battle for first in the hundred freestyle; the former finally winning the decision.

The Auburn-Jayvee summary:
50-yard freestyle—Won by Seagrave, Bowdoin; second, Brown, Bowdoin; third, Zalecki, Auburn. Time: 28 1-5.
200-yard freestyle—Won by Smith, Bowdoin; second, Wing, Auburn; first Bowdoin tally at 4:24 in chapter one, foxing Dingwell on a quick thrust of Kimball's tap. That score inspired the "Whetstones" with the result that Northeastern was held at bay for five minutes before Letourneau broke the lag with the third notch for his outfit.

Team Hits Stride
The farewell third of the contest produced a slam-bang skirmish for the Arena public, scoring honors being even at two-all. Bowdoin registered twice at 4:57 and 9:57. Doc Billings and Tom Kimball teamed on the first, while Doc converted a pass from Godfrey for the second and final Bowdoin statistical change of the session.

The summary:
Northeastern Bowdoin
Cahoon (Emerson, Makela, Farenau, Flynn) 1w .rw, Billings (Dowing) Letourneau (Rice, Roddan, Patten) c c, Richardson (Benson) Gallagher (Irving, Read) rw
Wah (Furion) ld . . . rd, Kimball Leverone (Johnson) rd ld, McKenney Dingwell (Ricker) g
Keville (Bigelow) g

Score—Northeastern 8, Bowdoin 3.
First period—Northeastern, 3-0; Letourneau (Leverone), 1:58; Northeastern, Gallagher (unassisted), 2:20; Bowdoin, Richardson (Kimball), 4:24; Northeastern, Letourneau (Gallagher), 7:40; Northeastern, Gallagher (Cahoon), 7:40; Northeastern, Letourneau (Gallagher), 13:35.
Second period—Northeastern, Makela (Leverone), 13:28.
Third period—Bowdoin, Kimball (Billings), 4:57; Bowdoin, Billings (Godfrey), 8:57; Northeastern, Letourneau (Gallagher), 9:08; Northeastern, Gallagher (Letourneau), 16:51.

Penalties—Leverone (stripping); McKenney (hooking); Walsh and Richardson (roughing); Kimball and Leverone (roughing); Letourneau (interference). Referees—Duplin and Murphy.

SPORT SIDE-LIGHTS

That genetic apt, fencing, worms its way into prominence. It seems that Prof. Edwards of Colby is introducing fencing at the Waterville institution. In view of this, this column suggests the obvious—an engagement of the Bowdoin and Colby fencers.

A recent fencing at Colby, Bob Williams writes punnily in the Colby Echo: "Fencing is a sport which runs in an under-current through most colleges. Personally, I could never see the point to it, but I take it that there is a point to it for the sport itself persists in many colleges. A plea for candidates for the team has been issued and this week will see the old struggles on their way. Fencing is a good sport though, if it does nothing more than steeves the art of self-defense, a sadly neglected art in this day of over-solicitous parents, this day of pampered offspring, this day when the younger generation is exasperatingly ignorant of the value of the dollar—all of which leads us where? On the fence, you twirp!"

Before Bowdoin can expect to make a mark in hockey there is a glaring gap that must be bridged, and that is the development of defense men. On the week end trip to Boston and New Hampshire only two backs were carried, Tom Kimball and Charley McKenney. As a matter of fact they are the only two men in college who have shown any marked ability. Even the J. V.'s are sorely in want in this respect, so Coach Wells cannot look for any boost from this quarter even when his freshman proteges are eligible.

If McKenney and Kimball can bear the entire burden this season, the Bear icemen will manage through the schedule all right. But what if substitutions are necessary? And what about next year when Kimball leaves and no aid is forthcoming from the freshman ranks?

In connection with one Mr. Borg's numerous outbursts regarding the Bowdoin track policy, which are viewed in detail elsewhere in these pages, we would retaliate in kind. Why did the University of Maine refuse to run Bowdoin on the boards, where both colleges ARE represented by teams, when the B. A. authorities extended invitations to both the Polar Bear and Brain mile relay teams last winter? Bowdoin accepted, but Maine declined to compete on the pretext, according to Boston papers, that the U. of M. did not want to race Bowdoin out of the state. Yet the U. of M. did race against Bowdoin in the New England last fall. Circumlocute that, either by road running or cross country!

It would appear that Coach Chester Jenkins of the Maine track forces would do well to resign his post voluntarily in favor of this individual whose apparent qualifications for, and knowledge of, track may be just what the Maine track department is seeking.

We're in a suggesting mood today. But there is one thing that has seemed to us a grave mistake, though perhaps only technical and unintentional. Both the Bagle and Bowdoin College Catalogue list Charlie Bowser, head coach of football, as head coach of hockey, and the catalogue does the same of baseball. It is our belief that credit should be placed where it is deserved and accordingly Linn Wells who has sole and complete rule over Bowdoin hockey and baseball should be so recognized in these publications.

100-yard breaststroke—Won by Stone, Auburn; second, Dudley, Bowdoin; third, Benjamin, Bowdoin. Time: 1:20.
100-yard freestyle—Won by Quint, Bowdoin; second, McKenney, Bowdoin; third, White, Auburn. Time: 1:06 1-5.
100-yard backstroke—Won by Osborne, Bowdoin; second, Parmelee, Auburn; third, Tripp, Auburn. Winning score: 93.5.
Medley relay—Won by Auburn; Bowdoin disqualified. Auburn (Lepinsky, Stone, Zalecki); Bowdoin (McGary, Dudley, Meiville).

Three Veterans Pave Way For Magee's Best Relay '4'

Mile Cinder Outfit Looms as Best in White's History; Track Mentor Doubtful About Two Milers

With a wealth of material on hand from last year's successful season as well as a large group of underclassmen, the prospects for a pair of brilliant one- and two-mile quartets are good. Braley Gray, Charles Allen, Milt Hickok and Art Fox, veterans of former baton-handling combinations, are back to resume their old places, while a number of men developed in road-running may fill the shoes of Usher, Sewall, Lavender and Catchell.

The one-mile team was least hit by graduation. Gray, Allen and Hickok all ran in the Boston meets of last year, and a fourth man to fill in should not be a hard problem for Jack Magee. In Captain Ray McLaughlin he has the best quarter miler in the college, but the lanky leader's proficiency in so many events will probably prevent him from running the quarter in the University club meet, although he will undoubtedly fill in for the B.A.A. relay. Phil Good, a freshman, may edge one of the regulars out of a job, for his two furlong marks have been sensational so far this season.

Veterans in Top Form
Gray, Allen and Hickok have all been running at top form thus far, and the college record of 3 minutes, 28 2-5 seconds, created in the I.C.A.A. two years ago, seems set for a shattering. With McLaughlin, they should average almost 51 seconds per man, unequalled in Bowdoin competition.

The two-mile team is more of a quandary. Art Fox is the only member of last year's aggregation back, and his eligibility is still a question. Fred Burton, Elmer Hutchinson and Ned Packard, all of whom showed good cross-country form, may replace Tom Unickie, who is rapidly rounding into form, may be the mainstay of the team, if he can maintain his eligibility. Unickie was well under two minutes for the distance last year, but his recent slump from form may have set him back irreparably. Burton and Hutchinson are both consistent runners at the distance, victors, capturing two events apiece and swimming on the relay team. Bill Parmelee was the only other man to score in more than one event, taking third in both the 50 and the 440.

Bob Foster, weakened by a flu attack, was forced to take second to Steele in the backstroke, with Captain Trott third, while Bob Whitmore and Johnny Beale waged a terrific battle with the same Steele in the 200 yard breaststroke, only to fall back at the end and capture second and third.

Highlights of the meet were Saunders' college record in the hundred over a tired Wallberg, and the Swede's victories in the 220 and 440, both clean cut and decisive. Although the Bowdoin relay team put forth every effort to catch the fast flying Boston four and win the meet, the ace of the Terrier squad proved too much for them.

The summaries:
50 yard dash: won by Saunders, B.U.; Guyette, B.U., second; Parmelee, Bowdoin, third. Time: 25 4-5 sec.
100 yard dash: won by Saunders, B.U.; Wallberg, Bowdoin, second; Paige, B.U., third. Time: 56 4-5 sec.
220 yard freestyle: won by Wallberg, Bowdoin; Cary, Bowdoin, second; Hartford, B.U., third. Time: 2 min. 28.2 sec.
440 yard freestyle: won by Wallberg, Bowdoin; Guyette, B.U., second; Parmelee, Bowdoin, third. Time: 5 min. 37.2 sec.
150 yard backstroke: won by Steele, B.U.; Foster, Bowdoin, second; Trott, Bowdoin, third. Time: 1 min. 53.3 sec.
200 yard breaststroke: won by Steele, B.U.; Whitmore, Bowdoin, second; Beale, Bowdoin, third. Time: 3 min. 2.2 sec.
Dive: won by Selig, Bowdoin; Carson, Bowdoin, second; Storey, B.U., third.
200 yard freestyle relay: won by B.U. (Guyette, Steele, Hartford, Saunders); Bowdoin (Carson, Foster, McLeod, Parmelee) second. Time: 1 min. 45 sec.

ILLUSION:
One of Houdini's most spectacular escape feats was performed with a huge milk can filled with water. He invited persons of the audience to bring padlocks and lock him into the can. He got into the can, the lid was put on and fastened with several padlocks. A screen was placed in front of the can. Assistants stood by with stop watches and fire axes to save him from drowning after a certain time. About a minute later, the screen was removed, Houdini was seen panting and dripping...the padlocks remaining intact!

EXPLANATION:
The usual method of escaping from a milk can is as follows: The lid of the can is apparently securely padlocked to the lower portion, but actually the metal band to which the staples are attached is the top of a short inner lining. The performer, after being locked into the can, pushes the lid upward with his head and the shorter inner lining is forced out of place, permitting his escape. The screen is then removed.

...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

What exciting magic there is in cigarette advertising!
Let's look at one of its greatest illusions...that cigarettes can be mysteriously given superior "FLAVOR."
THE EXPLANATION: Just three factors control the flavor of a cigarette. The addition of artificial flavoring...the blending of various tobaccos...and the quality of the tobaccos themselves. Quality is the most important. Artificial flavoring can never wholly disguise the poor flavor of cheap tobaccos.

The blending of several cheap, raw tobaccos cannot improve the flavor of any of them. A fine cigarette is a cigarette blended from costly, ripe tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.
This is why the Camel flavor has never been rivaled... why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.
In more costly tobaccos lies the secret of Camels' delicate "bouquet"...of their rich, cool flavor...of their non-irritating mildness. It's the tobacco that counts.
All the natural goodness of Camels' tobacco is kept fresh and rich for you by the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack. Don't remove it. Its moisture-proof cellophane also protects your Camels from dust and germs. Put a pack in your pocket today.

Individual Goodness Is Not All-Important Says Chapel Speaker

Declaring that the world must be made good before the individual can be made good, the Reverend Gardner Day of Williams College delivered the opening chapel address of the second annual Forum on Religious Thought, on Sunday, February 12.

CHI PSI AND KAPPA SIGMA HOLD HELL WEEK INITIATIONS

Ceremonies and Banquets Mark the End of Activity

Chi Psi and Kappa Sigma fraternities held the first initiations of the final Hell Week period last week end, and fifteen neophytes, eight of Chi Psi and seven of Kappa Sigma, were officially admitted into their respective houses.

PHILIP WILDER WILL MEET BOWDOIN MEN ON WESTERN TOUR

Graduate Secretary Attends Meetings of American Alumni Council

In his double capacity as alumni secretary of Bowdoin and director of regional conferences for the American Alumni Council, composed of alumni secretaries of United States colleges and universities, Philip S. Wilder left Bowdoin Thursday morning, February 9, for a tour of the Western States.

BOWDOIN GRAD WILL LECTURE IN FRENCH

Paul Everett Will Speak at Meeting of Alliance Francaise at Pulsifer Home

The winner of last year's Longfellow Scholarship, Paul E. Everett, will speak Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at a meeting of the Alliance Francaise, to be held at the home of Mrs. Harold T. Pulsifer. Everett is to be the chief speaker. His paper, on the medieval French churches, will be read entirely in French.

"PEARL" SHOWN IN MANHATTAN EXHIBIT

In the exhibition of the "Fifty Best Books of the Year" now being sponsored by the American Institute of Graphic Arts at the New York Public Library is included Professor Stanley P. Chase's edition of "The Pearl". It is among a group of books selected annually not for their literary content but as good examples of American bookmaking.

Game Marked by Fast Third Period as Colby Threatens

Chalking up an early three-goal lead, the Bowdoin puckmen downed the Colby sextet, 4-3 in a fast hard game on the Delta rink Monday afternoon. The victory was very encouraging to followers of Bowdoin hockey; by it the Polar Bear team has proved itself to be a serious contender for the championship of the Maine series.

Colby threatened early in the second period, and only stellar work by Bob Hayden, White goalie, saved the Wellmen from having their lead cut. But the Bears got the puck, and Billings tallied on an assist from Russ Dakin, after having pulled the Colby defense out of position.

A.T.O.'s Take Scholarship Cup; Non-Fraternity Group Heads The List As Usual

Alpha Tau Omega has been awarded the Student Council Cup for highest scholastic standing, over Kappa Sigma and Theta Delta Chi, which placed second and third respectively. It was the first time that O. A. was in second position.

Non-Fraternity attained its perennial niche with a greater point average than any of the fraternities, but is ineligible for the award.

The complete standing as announced by President Sills is as follows:

Warnings

Twenty-five per cent of Bowdoin's students received either a major or minor warning, announcement of grades for the first semester reveals.

There were forty majors and ninety-six minors issued this semester. This represents an increase of Delta Phi and Phi Upsilon last year's standing at mid-years when thirty-three majors and ninety minors were allotted.

2nd Annual Forum of Modern Religious Thought Ends Today

Johnson, Stellar Hammer Thrower, May Come Here

Bowdoin may have another Fred Tootell next year if Larry Johnson, one of America's greatest hammer throwers, enters the college, as he plans to do now. Last year Larry was one of America's outstanding weight artists, his disqualification because of three consecutive fouls in the tryouts being the sole reason he was not a member of the Olympic squad.

CLERGYMEN LEAVE AT END OF SESSION

Denominational Groups In Afternoon; Fraternity In Evening

To stimulate religious interest on the campus, the second annual Forum of Modern Religious Thought, sponsored by the Bowdoin Christian Association, has been held here during the past three days.

4 MEN JOIN PHI BETA CHAPTER

Four new members have been nominated to the Alpha of Maine chapter of Phi Beta Kappa fraternity. The list of those appointed was read at the chapel service last Friday morning by Prof. Chase, secretary of the chapter.

DANCE AT UNION FEB. 21

On the evening before the College holiday of February 22 there will be an informal dance in the Union Union. Admission will be 40 cents a person and the dance will start at 8:30 o'clock.

GLEE CLUB TO GO ON AIR; COMBINED CLUBS PLAN TRIP

According to a statement made by Manager Eliot Smith, the Bowdoin Glee Club will broadcast from station WMAS, the Stonehaven Hotel, at Springfield, Mass., on Friday, February 24. This broadcast is to be one of the highlights of the club's trip to Springfield, where it is entered in a glee club contest with many of the finest colleges in New England.

SCOTTISH VOLUMES ADDED TO LIBRARY

Most notable among the books that have been added to the Bowdoin College library collection since January 1st, is the Literary Guild's selection for the month of January, "Never as the End" by Isabel Paterson. Other new books are "Fourteen Stories from One Plot," based on Mr. Fothergill's plot, by John Milton Berdan, "The Coloured Dome" by Francis Stuart, and "The Kennel Murders" by S. S. Van Dine.

Students Show Concern For Home In Depression Says Pres. Sills

President Sills, in last Wednesday's chapel service, captured the attention of the mid-year examination convalescents with two statements to the effect that there was a "general restlessness" apparent about the campus, and that at the present time he could see no signs of the depression lifting.

what it can accomplish in the individual, for the minister proceeds on the misonstrued belief that in making man good he is making the world good.

In reality, the contrary is true, for the world must be made better by the addition to these two, however, there upon A effects another cut, which must in turn be made by B. B may in every respect be a good Christian, although his cuts are causing misery among his employees. But no matter how much

B may desire to keep his rates up, he must cut them or else be forced out of business.

As another example, the Reverend

Day mentioned the case of a group of manufacturers in the South, 90 per cent of whom agreed to abolish the employment of child labor at poor wages. For a while they competed with the other ten per cent who had not entered into this agreement.

But finally, because of lower wages and increased production, all manufacturers, the smaller group understood the larger, and forced the cancellation of the agreement. Men are caught in such a trap, said the speaker, because the social order and not the individual determines the policy. Some system must be devised which will enhance the piety of the world, and not detract from it.

Two Principles Antithetical

Two principles found in the world are antithetical, continued the speaker.

Christ said "Do unto others as you would they do unto you." In church and in religion we do lip service to this command, but in the outside world it is quite different. In magazines we read articles telling "How I Rose from Office Boy to Boss." Fatherhood tells sons that the life of trade competition—cutthroat competition. In the business world it is every man for himself, but in the religious world it is every man for all. Individual piety can be enough to improve conditions, for we must guide those underlying principles which direct society.

Jesus meant that men should not accumulate wealth, and that their generosity should be spontaneous. But any business man will say that a person would they do unto you? In church and in religion we do lip service to this command, but in the outside world it

Linn Wells has been recognised working under the grave handicap of inexperience as coach. We feel that his persistent efforts and his hard work deserve public recognition. They have proved their worth.

The team has worked under handicaps, one of which has been inherent in the handicap of its coach. And lack of opportunity to practice has not been the least obstacle to forming a first class team. The team too merits public commendation, and hearty commendation.

2ND ANNUAL FORUM OF B. C. A. HERE ENDS

John Schroeder, of the State Street Congregational Church in Portland, a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, was the speaker at the present student body through his frequent visits here. The Rev. Gardiner Day, of St. John's Church, Williamsport, Mass., leader at the Psi Upsilon house was graduated from Yale in '22 and was the following year a professor at Dartmouth College. He served on the Choate School and Yale University's varsity football. At the Chi Psi lodge the Rev. Wallace Anderson of the Franklin St. Congregational Church, Manchester, N. H., was guest. A member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity at Amherst, Mr. Wallace was very active on the campus. Theta Delta Chi's leader, the Rev. Richard Preston, of Grace Church, Newton, Mass., was captain of his class hockey and soccer teams at Princeton, and a member of the varsity hockey squad.

The Rev. Steven Webster, of St. Peter's Church, Boston, Mass., who heads the discussion, the Delta Kappa Epsilon house, graduated from the Virginia Theological School at Alexandria, and was for two years a missionary in Africa. At the Zeta Psi house was the Rev. Robert Fay, of Christ's Church, Cambridge, Mass., who played on the Amherst College football team, and was a member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity. The Rev. Norman Goshing, of the Lutheran Church in Cambridge, Mass., was the leader at the Sigma Nu house. He received a degree in M. A. at Harvard and was an editor of the Crimson, the University's daily newspaper. Discussion was held by the Kappa Sigma house presided by the Rev. Harold Jensen, of the First Baptist Church, Melrose, Mass., who after graduating from the University of Des Moines in '22, was principal of the high school in that city, and its coach in football and basketball.

Group leader at the Alpha Tau Omega house the Rev. Robert Putsche, who after graduating from Portland College in '25, and the Harvard Theological School in '31, now heads the student work at the First Congregational Church in Cambridge, Mass. At the Delta Upsilon fraternity the Rev. G. Leslie Glenn, of Christ's Church in Cambridge, Mass., was guest. A graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Mr. Glenn had as last year's senior warden in his Junior Varsity at Harvard, the well-known W. Harry Wood. Among the non-fraternity group, the Rev. Harold Metzner, of the Methodist Church in Waterbury, chaplain at Colby College, led discussion. Alternate group leader was Mr. Nathaniel N. Noble, Yale '28, a member of the Chi Psi fraternity, now a student at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass.

The committee in charge of this Forum was headed by Gordon E. Gillett '34, and included E. Lloyd Hackett '34, Vincent Nowlis '35, and H. Clay Lewis '34.

Chandler Redman, Bangor; Bradford Robinson, Concord, Mass.; William D. Rounds, Rockland; Harold L. Selig, Portland; Bertram H. Silverman, Portland; Carl F. A. Weber, Portland. Sophomores: Leon A. Dickson, Portland; Allan P. Hubbard, Rockville Centre, N. Y.; Elmer Hutcheson, Portland; Walter M. Luce, Anson; Deane S. Thomas, Jr., Falmouth Foreside; Isadore Weiss, Portland. The only sophomore to receive straight "A's" is allowed unlimited cuts, as are the upperclassmen on the Dean's List.

(NSFA)—An enterprising Carnegie Tech engineering student, who spends his idle hours tinkering with a short wave set, received a calculus problem which was quite difficult. Exasperated, he finally appealed for help over the air waves. The solution promptly came back on a radio, dictated by a student at the University of Texas.—Michigan Daily.

(NSFA)—A series of "Dawn Dances" was held at the University of Alabama for the benefit of those students who study late. The dances ran six to eight A.M.—Swarthmore Phoenix.

(NSFA)—It is traditional that "the show must go on", regardless. Fresno State College players, staging one of their productions, the night an earthquake rocked the Pacific West, upheld the tradition in true trouper style. Although frightened, the amateur players continued to speak their lines, as chandeliers in the auditorium ceiling swayed, and the scenery "flats" threatened to crash down on them. Their courage was rewarded by a small applause, as they among the audience.—Athenscup.

Mustard and Cress

This week's short story prize goes to the Boston Herald. In the edition of Jan. 25 and under the caption "Solomon's Record" they said, among other things, "May 20, 1923—Arrested on a charge of negotiating cases defaulted. July 9, 1923—Default removed and cases dismissed." Ho hum, all the news that's fit to print.

We are all more or less conscientious, and we'll have to lead pretty meticulous lives if we are to compete with one of this year's Ec Majors. When he admitted this much, the material in certain text was of great pertinence and value to the thesis of this righteous senior, he ran off in great glee, only to come back with the defeat pronounced, "I can't see it." "Why not?" asked the startled Don. "Because there is a little paragraph in the front of the book which says 'reproduction of all material in whole or part is forbidden. Permission must be obtained from the owners of the copyright.'"

And this little gem from the Editorial Column of the Portland Evening Express: "These times when there is so much confusion and groping for guidance knowledge appears as the best guide and for this it's natural to look to the professors so they are more prominent than ever before and their statements and propositions are being given increasing attention. Picking your professor's random, however, is dangerous business." Yes, and it must have been pretty risky in the English Department, even when you were at Colby, Mr. Editor.

In his broadside against professors in general our editorial friend continues: "Professors also have the seductive power of exaggerating the importance of knowledge. For them facts are the best things in life and the more they can get of them the happier they are. Now take us for example. We were last back there at the first omitted comma, and we gave up hope at the 'also-additional' construction."

Hildegard Hawthorne, granddaughter of Bowdoin's literary luminary, gives an itemized account of a term-bill inflicted upon Nathaniel when he was an undergraduate. The total was $14.49, and eight dollars of this went right straight into tuition. That book, "Romantic Rebel", is well worth reading.

The New Bursar discovered that a good many men have been so glad to graduate that they have forgotten to collect their extra-course fees of $7.50. He decided to do something about it. One of our alumni received a rather neat little note which read something like this: "Dear Sir: We find that you have not collected $7.50 which is due you as a refund on extra-course fees. Shall we mail you a check for this amount, or shall we credit it to the Alumni Fund?" Kummer had it that one—only classes before the following reply came in from the alumnus already mentioned: "Don't be silly! He got a check, more the pity! If we were Bursar, and we were a letter like that, the Alumni Fund would promptly swell $7.50 worth. (Not a campaign-promise.)"

We thought we had uncovered something pretty hot when we heard about the professor who met his first class after exams with the remark, "For you for goodness sake, boys, this is the worst set of papers I have ever seen." But come to find out, this prof is simply trying to break himself of the habit of saying, "For crying out loud!" Sort of put him in a hot line that talk, and we feel it's only right to explain.

And this personal: Phil—Come back. The Test Plan has two a's on the qualifying word.

Intercollegiate Column

(NSFA)—The School of Education of New York university conducted a survey of football injuries in high schools and colleges last year, and will conduct the survey on a much larger basis this year. A total of 880 institutions are to be asked to cooperate in the survey.—Ring-Tum-Phi.

(NSFA)—Dr. E. R. Groves, professor of Sociology at the University of North Carolina has been giving a course in matrimonial training to eligible young men for the past eight years. And now Dr. Groves has published a text for his and similar courses at other schools. Dr. Groves was a pioneer in this field, and his recently published book is probably the first text of this type.—Daily Tar Heel.

(NSFA)—A professor at New York University recently told his class they must read eighteen books in lieu of books. He said that he had told them to adopt a practical attitude toward labor problems. After a whispered conference of the students, one of them rose and said: "We believe your statement is unfair. We are taking a practical attitude toward labor problems. We are ready to reach a compromise through collective bargaining. If you don't agree I'm afraid there will be a strike. We can, of course, employ sabotage." Professor Edwards compromised at six books on social control of business.—State College News, Albany, N. Y.

(NSFA)—Antioch College is the locus for a sleeping experiment during this five week period. The purpose of finding out just what results will accrue from having early and regular sleeping hours. Seven girls are participating in the test. They have agreed to be in bed no later than 10.30 every night except Saturday, when they are allowed to be up till 12.30. The girls say, "We want to be able to go to sleep as we want or need."—Antiochian.

These five factors illustrate the magnitude of the present economic problem. In the words of the speaker "The country cannot become richer by making the quality of its social life cheaper." Growing Distrust in Capitalistic System

Cartelization of the luxury trade was the fourth of Dr. Frankfurter's factors in future economic life. As the last of the five he mentioned the growing distrust in our capitalist civilization. In the last few years the disbelief in the capitalistic system has increased tremendously. These five factors illustrate the magnitude of the present economic problem.

In the words of Justice Brandeis of the Supreme Court, "the present situation is more serious than war". To attain some economic sanity deliberate planning is necessary. Professing that readjustment in America would mean juristic readjustment, Dr. Frankfurter continued his lecture with a consideration of the importance of the law in the economic problem. The constitution itself, he said, is sufficiently flexible for the changing needs of a new generation.

Loose phrases in the constitution can be applied to widely varied situations. Power of a state to achieve a form of some ill evil hinges on its reading by the Supreme Court. The vitally important economic reform cannot be effected without the aid of this judicial body. Any constitutional interpretation depends on the ability of the Supreme Court judges, because of this judges are arbiters of social policy. Taxation Problem of Great Importance. In our age, Dr. Frankfurter explained, the pace of social adjustment must be quickened. Law, the only factor able to accomplish this, cannot continue to give unrestricted rein to the acquisitive motive. From the point of view of the economic reformation the taxation problem is of great importance. Great inequality of property would be the downfall of any nation, no matter how freely governed.

In America there must be a taxation investigation. Change in the present system can be brought about only by the court. One explanation of the economic troubles of today, according to Dr. Frankfurter, is the people's hostility to taxation. This hostility is often shared by the Supreme Court itself. In a discussion of the problem in general the speaker employed an illustration several specific cases such as that of the St. Paul Railroad.

New Reason Must Be Translated Into Action. "New premises must fit present needs," Dr. Frankfurter stated in closing. The faith and enterprise that built the nation are unimpaired. Great physical resources are at hand. The American people need only determination to translate new reason into action. We are masters of our fate if we learn how to be. The economic problem which casts the shadow over our lives must be reduced to a place of lesser importance. Only then can the people attain some happiness.

(NSFA)—Carpulent campus cops, almost a tradition at Yale, have been told they must reduce their waitlines. The university's health department has issued an order requiring them to report in the gym for daily workouts.—Daily Princetonian.

In the words of Justice Brandeis of the Supreme Court, "the present situation is more serious than war". To attain some economic sanity deliberate planning is necessary. Professing that readjustment in America would mean juristic readjustment, Dr. Frankfurter continued his lecture with a consideration of the importance of the law in the economic problem. The constitution itself, he said, is sufficiently flexible for the changing needs of a new generation.

Loose phrases in the constitution can be applied to widely varied situations. Power of a state to achieve a form of some ill evil hinges on its reading by the Supreme Court. The vitally important economic reform cannot be effected without the aid of this judicial body. Any constitutional interpretation depends on the ability of the Supreme Court judges, because of this judges are arbit

Dakin Scores Unassisted and Billings on Pass from Godfrey

Despite a furious third period rally that netted two goals and stopped their opponents completely, the Bowdoin hockeymen lost the first State Series game of the season to Colby, 4 to 2, at the Delta rink on Feb. 6.

The inability of the Bowdoin wings to check out the Polar Bears on the short end of a 3 to 0 score after two periods had been played, but they came back in the third cant to rush the Mules of their feet and dent the net-corders twice.

Russ Dakin went down the ice on a solo jaunt after nine minutes of the last session had elapsed, and showed the rubber past Goalie Violette.

Doc Billings, connected for the last goal on a pass from Bart Godfrey with three seconds of play left.

POLAR BEARS TAKE ON BATES HOCKEY OUTFIT IN 5-2 WIN

Richardson, Billings Show Most for the White; Hayden Good

Bowdoin realized its first State Series hockey victory in two years when the Polar Bear pucksters sprung a surprise win over Bates, 5-2, at the St. Doms Arena in Lewiston, Wednesday night.

The Bears exhibited smarter hockey, and capitalized on scoring opportunities to round out a clean-cut decision over the Bobcats.

With Richardson and Billings advancing the puck beautifully, Bowdoin was never headed during the entire evening. These two White linemen, along with Hildreth, conducted a clever passing game, that was amazing, considering the dusty surface.

Play was rough and checking rugged; and as a consequence Referee Jeremiah meted out an even dozen chastisement for the entire game.

By virtue of this win Wells' aggression definitely asserted itself as a potential contender for the state title, since Bates had previously set back the Colby icedrib.

McLaughlin Once Again Ties World's Record Officially

McLaughlin Back to Defend Championship Won Last Year

For the second successive year, Captain Ray McLaughlin equalled the world's indoor record for the 46-yard high hurdles, thrilling a capacity crowd in the Boston Garden at the 44th Annual B. A. A. Games Saturday night.

Competing against a field of such crack stars as George Lockwood, Yale, E. D. McKennie, Northeastern, Grady, Harvard, and Bob Elliot, Tulsa, McLaughlin was never headed in four starts.

The world equaling time came in the semi-final heat when Bowdoin's stellar timber-topper led Grady home with bursting speed to the time of 5 4-5 seconds.

In their triangular relay clash with Amherst and Williams, the Polar Bear quartet were deprived of duplicating their last year's victory by Amherst, losing a bitterly fought contest by the margin of 5 yards.

Good Outstanding At the crack of the gun Phil Good leaped away to a quick lead over Washburn of Amherst, and keeping a lively pace through the whole distance was able to lead the Lord Jeff in, and hand Mill Hickok a scant 2 yards advantage.

BOWDOIN ENTERS U. C. GAMES SAT.

Twenty-two trackmen will leave Saturday morning for Boston to take part in the annual University Club Games. The team is competing as usual in Class B, which includes most of the small colleges in New England, and will run its final heats in the Boston Garden Saturday evening.

Although the Hanoverians took a 62-19 lacing at the hands of Yale last Friday, that defeat certainly cannot brand them as weak, since the Bulldog swimmers have won some 110 consecutive meets.

The Green defeated Springfield, 45 to 32, on February 4, so some estimate can be made on their strength. Springfield trounced the White, 55 to 22.

JAYVEES LOSE 5-2 TO BRIDGTON ACAD.

Bridgton Academy took over the Bowdoin Junior Varsity last Thursday to the tune of 5-2. The Academy team scored four of its five goals before the Jayvees had a look-in.

In the shot put, Coach Magee has Howie Niblock, captain of last year's frosh outfit and Thurm Larson, a veteran of two years' standing. This pair will perform again in the 35-lb weight event.

Saturday, the White outfit will have to get along without the services of Larry Usher and Del Galbraith, holders of the meet records in the 1000-yard run and 35-lb weight throw respectively.

WHITE WINS SECOND SERIES GAME OVER COLBY MULES 4-3

Game is Marked by Fast Third Period as Colby Threatens

Colby again as Paganucci pierced Bowdoin's defense unassisted, and whipped the rubber past Hayden. The second line took the ice, and brought the play out of the Bears' danger zone.

Barb Godfrey missed an almost certain score when he tripped in front of the Mules' cage. At 6:55 Mills realized a pass from Godfrey, bringing the White total up to 4. Colby was sending five-man offensives down the ice, when Charlie McKenney was sent off the ice.

The rubber was kept in Bowdoin territory until McKenney returned to the play. Doc Billings was then penalized, but the game ended almost immediately with the Mules' five-man offense desperately trying to tie the score.

With the discouraging Amherst-Wesleyan trip behind them, the White swimmers are looking forward to giving Dartmouth the best battle possible. The defeat by Wesleyan, 42 to 35, was in some measure expected, but Amherst's overwhelming victory 59 to 18, was unlooked for.

Among the home state men whom the White cohorts will have to look out for are Jillison of Bates, Miller, Means, Maine dashman, and Alley, Maine shotputter, all recordholders.

Tobacco to smoke right has to be a different kind of tobacco from that used in cigarettes... and it has to be made by an entirely different process... OUT in Kentucky, where they have pretty women, fast horses, and blue grass, there grows a tobacco called White Burley. It doesn't grow anywhere else in the world. There is a type of this White Burley that is best suited for pipe smoking. It is neither too thick nor too thin. It is not light and chaffy; at the same time, it is not rank or strong. "U. S. Type 31" is the government classification for White Burley. Since no other pipe tobacco has yet been found which seems to equal White Burley, this is what we use in making Granger Rough Cut. Next, we use the Wellman Method, a famous 1870 method of making pipe tobacco, to give Granger its fine flavor and fragrance. Then, too, Granger is "Rough Cut"—just like they used to "whittle" their tobacco off a plug with a jack-knife. It smokes cool, lasts longer and never gums a pipe. And finally, we want to sell Granger for 10 cents. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package. Granger has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. Folks seem to like it. Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. TEN CENTS The Granger pouch keeps the tobacco fresh

MANAGERS' POSITION TOPIC AT SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING

Elections, Cheer Leaders, Diplomas, Take Up the Remaining Time

At a special meeting of the Student Council held on February 14th at the Delta arena, the house it was decided that the diplomas for this year's graduating class would remain the same in design as those of last year, and that there will be no White Key Society this year.

The purpose of the meeting, however, was to decide concerning the three vacancies, left through resignation, in the Sophomore assistant football managers. As was announced, all applications for these positions must be in the hands of the Student Council not later than February 24th.

No Diploma Change President Raymond E. McLaughlin '33, introduced the move that the present type of graduation diploma be changed to the folder type, but after debating the matter it was voted to have them remain unchanged.

Assails Legion's Washington Maneuvers as "Purely Selfish" Acts

PRESIDENT SHOULD FORCE LEGISLATION

Nationally-minded Congress Members Unseated, Says Professor

"Greatest racket in Washington" was the appellation given the American Legion lobby by Edward C. Kirkland, Frank Munsey Professor of History at Bowdoin, in an address to a capacity audience at the Woodfords Forum, Sunday.

Legion lobbying in the interests of a minority, maintained Professor Kirkland, is "more selfish than those of the Communists."

Typical of the self-centered interests of the American Legion, said the speaker, was its demand for full payment of the soldier's bonus. It was the result of "minority, sectional, and purely selfish interests."

Congressmen Swayed by Lobbyists Perfectly reputable, but very vocal lobbyists, representing class interests, tell the Congressman what to do on matters of public concern, says the speaker.

The present time is auspicious for a revival of methods which will make democracy more real, said Professor Kirkland.

"Can a democracy function with efficiency in a moment of crisis which demands action?" is a question far more vital than the more depression problem, or how can it be kept, said Professor Kirkland.

The impressions of Congressional failure have been stirred by presidents from Harding to Hoover, who have not liked its policy; and it has been re-echoed by business interests and their journalistic allies who have felt that the best way to keep the government from regulating them was to picture it as inept.

Political deadheads or representatives who dare to think of Country first, the speaker said.

FRESHMEN TROUNCE HEBBRON BY 72-27 IN CINDER BATTLE

Good Sets College Mark of 32.4-5 Seconds in Three Hundred Sprint

To maintain its undefeated rating, the Bowdoin Freshman track outfit last Wednesday gave a small center setback from Hebron Academy a 72-27 triumph, in the victors' third indoor event of the year.

Winning all but one first place and collecting easy triumphs in the other events, Bowdoin's javve swimmers trounced Hebron, 53 to 12, in a preliminary to the Dartmouth meet Thursday night.

From beginning to end the Polar Bear swimmers completely outclassed the prep school boys, allowing them one first and one second throughout the meet. Clint Osborne turned in the best performance for the White, taking the dive by a margin of 30 points, lapping the field in the backstroke to triumph easily, and swimming anchor on the final relay.

The summaries:
50 yard dash: won by Seagrave, Bowdoin; Brown, Bowdoin, second; Neal, Hebron, third. Time: 27.4 sec.
100 yard dash: won by Brown, Bowdoin; Metville, Bowdoin, second; Main, Hebron, third. Time: 65 sec.
200 yard swim: won by Neal, Hebron; Quint, Bowdoin, second; Nelson, Bowdoin, third. Time: 2 min. 31 sec.
100 yard backstroke: won by Osborne, Bowdoin; McGarry, Bowdoin, second; Leshay, Hebron, third. Time: 1 min. 53 sec.
100 yard breaststroke: won by Carpenter, Bowdoin; Emery, Hebron, second; Pach, Bowdoin, third. Time: 2 min. 26.6 sec.
Low board dive: won by Osborne, Bowdoin; Carpenter, Bowdoin, second; Williams, Hebron, third. Winning score: 82.45 points.

NUS LEAD HOOPMEN

After a hard-fought first quarter of rugged basketball ending in a 2-3 tie, the non-fraternity basketball team forged rapidly ahead of the Chi Psi delegation to carry the game 58-30 Monday night. This game, however, does not change the relative standing of League A, as non-fraternity still holds third place, Chi Psi fourth.

The Sigma Nu-A.T.O. game, scheduled for Monday, has been switched to Thursday afternoon. Thursday evening the Kappa Sigmas face the Dekes to decide first berth on League B, which they now hold jointly. Friday afternoon the Betas and the T.D.'s will fight out their tie, while Friday evening will see the Psi U's and the A.D.'s in action.

RUNNERS TAKE FIRST

both Walker and Skillings running in the same heat and a shut out for both.

Win 800 Heats
The 800 mile having no White finish, saw Burton and Fox place second in their respective heats. Fox running far behind the greater part of the way, in a surprising last lap surge managed to pull up to what looked like a first in 2.28. Burton ran a good steady race in second place the majority of the way finishing in that position in 2.06. The slowing of their times resulted in their failure to place.

Bowdoin's Johnny Adams jumping against Urner of Williams the outdoor champion followed Niblack's jump and lost out by the slightest of margins. Urner, favored to win, established a new record of 6 feet 1-8 inches. Adams met out to 5 feet 1-8 inch. Both these marks were better than any of the class A performers were capable of.

Allen Falls Tension
The rivalry between Bowdoin, Technology, and Dartmouth turned into one of the saddest affairs of the evening, when Charley Allen, Mages's favorite, was killed in a chronic tendon near the beginning of the second lap, and was finally forced to drop out, spilling what was one of the most thrilling events of the evening. The injury is the same as that which laid him up last year, and will undoubtedly prove a great loss to the team.

Second Leg Close
Like the first leg the second was hotly contested the whole distance with Gray valiantly fighting off Schwartz of Tech. At the exchange mile Hicks always a scrapper was given a fair lead which he early lengthened into very sizeable dimensions. However Technology's Schwartz riding hard managed later to close up the gap, and the two legs Dartmouth by a fair margin finished in almost a dead heat.

Bowdoin lost a little at the outset of the sprinting overtook Wrigley of M.I.T. While fighting for the lead on the corner just before the finish of the first lap, Allen pulled and was forced to drop back. Still fighting pluckily but limping badly Allen was forced to drop out at the end of the lap. The relayists who followed had a probable win, and the team a stellar performer. Technology's winning time was 3 minutes 30 1-2 seconds, the third fastest of the evening.

Cross-section Slant on Undergrad
Reading Discloses Scant Results

This is another of those cross sections of college life. However, this is the result of no survey work, but rather to do with beer or the like. This is harmless, and has to do with the intellectual side of things. "What are we reading in Bowdoin College?" An enterprising reporter picked out twenty-four students at random from all classes, made the results into a neat chart and served it over to the feature writing department.

It seems amazing and somewhat incident to discover the small amount of reading perpetrated during the college year. Six of these men had read "no books". A single statement, that one which does away with books, the frivolous things. What good are they, anyhow? Merely regretted thoughts.

Another gentleman has read one book since September. It has a singularly suggestive title: "Youngster Sister". Who wrote this book, one doesn't know.

Institute Stimulus
Now we are getting to the meat; now we come to deal with those enterprising lads who have read books (the plural means two or more). We have here an evidence of great worth. The literary institute has so far stimulated one person (of these some twenty-four) to read something: Mr. Masefield's "Collected Poems". Another has read Mr. Yeats' "Plays". This is fine. It really should make the committee feel warm and happy.

The most popular book is "Madness on the Bounty"; four people have read that. Two people have read "Ann Vickers", Mr. Lewis' latest. Two have read (this is remarkable) Mr. J. F. Tennyson's "Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man" and "Ulysses". About all the rest of the books make single bows. Surprisingly enough "The Fountain", Mr. Morgan's splendid labor, appears but once (in the list of a confirmed reader, who has also included one of Miss Cather's books, both books of A. E. Housman's poetry and Mr. Robinson's "Nicoledum").

Faulkner and Hemingway are listed only in the other captured literature lists. Thomas Wolfe's "Look Homeward Angel" belongs in this category, too. He evidently likes the cult of earnestly Eugene O'Neill and Somerset Maugham are here, too. On the course, is caused by the mother who is so anxious for her child's well-being that she sacrifices all and devotes the best part of her life to her one joy. Undoubtedly the mother receives pleasure from so much sacrifice, but in so doing she often spoils her child's future.

The chapel speaker then took up the self-sacrifice which is directed towards a great cause; but again he believed that this too is only a help to those that desire to live. To illustrate this, he told of a friend of his who is a missionary in Japan. At one time his friend had become quite ill because someone had given him for his self-sacrifice. "Don't call what I'm doing self-sacrifice," he cried, "because I enjoy it!" Therefore, the Reverend Manning believes that the philosophy of self-sacrifice is neither sacrifice nor the philosophy to guide our lives.

Another of these shamelessly crucified people has ended John Galavorthy's saga with "Flaming Wilderneck" and "Maid in Waiting". One other good juxtaposition was Tolstoy and Conrad. This man takes life seriously. The one, however, who listed "Time Worn Town", "Tupper Takes a Trip", and "Night Life of the Gods", prefers the lighter side—humor and allegorization.

Mr. P. G. Wodehouse almost gets overlooked. That would never do, for three of his very entertaining novels have just been announced, by "Jasvys". Do you know, there's something wrong? One boy, outstanding and of proven worthiness is to explain something impossible to him. Unless he decided something had to be done about this depressing condition of things, and then said what the hell—First he read "Man and Technology". Then he read "Call Her Savage". Et tu, Clara Bow?

other hand Rosamond Lehmann's "Invitation to the Walls" shows its pretty face. The most surprising list includes "42nd Street", "Brave New World", the "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" and "Antigone".

first turn and held it around the last corner, but Maxey then filled the gap, so that at the finish, only God's greatest shoulder proved him to be ahead. Marvin secured Bowdoin another first place by racing around the 600 yard stretch, far in the van, in 1:17.3-5, for a new meet record. The fourth of the shattered marks was fractured by Soule, who succeeded in leaping 20 ft. 8-1-4 in., to eclipse his Hebron rival by nearly a foot.

Hebron broke Two Firsts
Hebron's strength lay primarily in the shot put and the high jump, where her only first places were garnered. In the former event the Frosh have been decidedly weak all season, having taken but one place in it in each of the previous meets. The visitors were handicapped greatly by a lack of participation in each event, and in many instances one or two Hebronians were forced to compete against a half dozen freshmen.

The Green's high point scorer was Hiltchorne, who placed second in the shot put and the broad jump.

Well, that's something about cigarettes
I never knew before

I'd never thought much about what's inside a Chesterfield cigarette. But I have just been reading something that made me think about it.
Just think of this, some of the tobacco in Chesterfield—the Turkish—comes from 4000 miles away! And before it is shipped every single leaf is packed by hand. All because Turkish tobacco is so small and delicate.
Of course I don't know much about making cigarettes, but I do know this—that Chesterfields are milder and have a very pleasing aroma and taste. They satisfy—and that's what counts with me!

GREEN SWEEPS SWIMMING MEET; 3 RECORDS FLY

Banfield, Ballard Shine in the Freestyle Sprints; Relay Speedy

Flashing through the most scintillating meet ever held in the Curtis pool, the Dartmouth swimming team outpooled the Polar Bear natators, 61 to 19, last Thursday evening. Three new pool records were set, and the times as a whole were by far the best ever created in a single meet in Brunswick.

Mike Selig took Bowdoin's only first when he won the low board diving with a total of 102.50 points, the highest count a Bowdoin man has yet made. His tentative performance was nearly flawless, outdistancing the second man, King of Dartmouth, by twenty points. Bob Carson was a close third for the White.

Pool marks were set by Dick Banfield, Dartmouth's intercollegiate champion, in the 50, and Ballard in the 220. The Green relay quartet won by ten yards in the time of 1 minute, 38 seconds, to shatter the standard by five seconds.

Ballard swims own race. Ballard's furlong was a smoothly swum race in which he led from start to finish, ending in a burst of speed which left George Cary far behind and set up a new pool mark, eclipsing by exactly a second Swede Wallberg's best time for the distance. Banfield scored an easy win in the fifty over his teammate, Docher, winning by a yard in the new figures of 24.1 seconds.

Bill Parmelee gave F. Specht, of the Hanoverians, a close battle for two laps in the 440, but finally dropped back as the Green star drove to victory in 5 minutes 34.4 seconds, a full ten seconds away from the record. Cary collected third place.

The closest race on the program was the 150 yard backstroke in which Captain Monagan of Dartmouth and Bob Foster staged a nip and tuck battle for the six laps. Monagan triumphing by a yard. Again the pool record was saved by a split second, Monagan being 3-5 away from the 1.48 standard.

The Bears in two days.
White Passing Features
Outside of Heldman's miraculous stop the play was full of advancing of the Bowdoin team impressed. The first line of Billings, Richardson, and Hildreth continued its passing finesse that has been Wells' chief assault weapon, and consistently dribbled the disc deep into the Bobcat stronghold.

The game started lackadaisically, a pucky rink impeding play considerably. But when the two sextets came out for the second period the surface had been scraped and proceedings immediately enlivened.
Doc Billings guided the Bowdoin attack and kept Heldman plenty busy with a bombardment of drives. On one occasion Doc missed a second by a hairline as one of his men continued over the top of the net. Another close shave came in the second session when Heldman was forced to drop to hands and knees and cuddle the rubber against the pokes of Richardson et al for a half-minute until Referee Jeremiah broke up the free-for-all.

At 12:15 the first chapter came the climax. With both aggregations anxious to draw first blood Soba tore Misses Breaststroke Record
Atkinson of the Green had little trouble in collecting in the 200 yard breaststroke, triumphing by ten yards in 24.51, less than a second from the pool mark. Johnny Beale stayed close to collect third for the Bruins.

Unofficial times for the four were as follows: Crouse, 24.8 seconds; R. Ley, 25 seconds; Docher, 24.6 seconds; and Banfield, 23.6 seconds. They trounced the White four of Carson, Foster, McLeod and Parmelee by an easy ten yards.
The summaries:
50 yard freestyle: won by Banfield, Dartmouth; Docher, Dartmouth, second; Carson, Bowdoin, third. Time: 24.1 sec.
100 yard freestyle: won by Orenstein, Dartmouth; D. Ley, Dartmouth, second; Parmelee, Bowdoin, third. Time: 58.2 sec.

With the hockey season rapidly waning, rehearsals as to what's-been will thrive. Without further enlargement this column presents its conception of the 1933 All-Series sextet: left wing, Billings, Bowdoin; right wing, Ross, Colby; center, White, Bates; left defense, Berry, Bates; right defense, Dakin, Bowdoin; goalie, Violette, Colby.

Veni, vidi, but not vici! The University of New Hampshire puck stars journeyed to Brunswick last Saturday in anticipation of the scheduled Bowdoin-N.H.U. engagement. The visiting players looked over the sweltering ice and then immediately boarded for Durham. Coach Wells loaded a baker's dozen of hockey men into the ole Chevy and showed off to the Hub and the University Club games. Thus went a Saturday of sport in Brunswick.

As last year the class B competition of the University Club Meet served as an indicator of the trend of the State Meet in May. If nothing else, the fact should be clearly impressed in the minds of Bowdoin track followers as a result of the Boston meeting that the Bear cinder men are weak in the running events. Not a single Bowdoin performer placed in the runs, though Skillings in the dash, Fox and Burton in the 880, and Hutchinson in the mile showed to advantage.

Of course the relay usurped the quarter-milers, as there was no 440 on the University Club program. Hickok and Gray are 440 men and Allen is normally a hurdler. It looks as if McLaughlin will be called upon to negotiate the shorter dashes as well as the hurdles again this spring.

Freshmen Good and Marvin will also be available for the shorter trials but the mile and two-mile, and possibly the 880 present real problems to Magee.

The state is well blessed with distance men, and with new faces appearing as potential placent in foreign folds, notably Bates, little wood can be sawed before the gun in May.

Magee has Fox, Marvin, Grey, and Burton as likely half-milers. Ambler, Hutchinson and Barton in the mile, and the latter two again along with Knowlia, Tibbets, Morris, Cobb, and Packard in the two-mile. Of course some of these milers and two-milers can run either distance equally well. While they all have prospective futures on the cinder paths, none have reputations above the ordinary and will require a full routine of priming.

in upon a loose puck that was resting dangerously close to the White cage and zoomed the puck over Hayden's bended shoulder in a wink. The play caught the Bowdoin defense napping for the moment, for the rubber had no business idling in such vital territory.

In the fatal third Charley McKenny, brilliant Bear defense man, was badly slashed on the leg by a truant bender, and three stitches were required to close the wound.

Throughout the contest fatigued and rugged play prevailed. Captain Richardson was Bowdoin's prime bad man, drawing the referee's wrath upon four occasions, while Soba rivaled the White leader for Bates, with three disbarments.

The summary:
Bates (1) (0) Bowdoin
White, Toomey, rw
Bates, rd
Moynihan, Secor, c
Swett, Mendall, rw
Berry, rd
Kimball, Mills, McKenney
Soba, rd
Heldman, r
Third Period
Bates, Soba (unassisted) 2:10
Penalties, Richardson, illegal checking; Soba, illegal check; White, holding; Hildreth, Soba, fighting; Richardson, tripping; Soba, tripping; Richardson, high stick.
Referee: Jeremiah.

Betas Weakened
Only one of last year's winners is left to compete again this year, Bob Foster. The Theta Delt combination of Foster, Sperry and Page, which almost single-handed won first place last year, has been split by graduation and other causes, while the Betas, who were considered almost prohibitive favorites a month ago, were struck an undeniably fatal blow, when Swede Wallberg left college.

Non-Frat Favored to Win over Greeks in Swim-Fest

Parmelee and Selig Make Formidable Opposition; Deke and Sigma Nu Slated as Runners-up

For the first time in the history of the competition, non-fraternity is favored to win the Interfraternity swimming meet, to be contested in Curtis Pool next Saturday night. Delta Kappa Epsilon appears to be the only combination capable of questioning the superiority of the favorites.

With Bill Parmelee and Mike Selig leading the parade, and several others to bolster up the team, non-fraternity seems sure of 24 points in the ORIENT dope sheet, more than enough to come out in first position.

A three man team in McGarry, Whitmore and Cary should lead Deke into second place, while Sigma Nu, with a wealth of material in Bob Carson, Joe McKee, Captain Jack Trot, W. Holmes, Charlie Hatch and others, seems to be due for third place.

The Depe Sheet
The Orient dope sheet is as follows:
50 yard freestyle: Osborne (D.U.), first; McLeod (Psi U) second; McGarry (D.K.E.) third; Carson (Sigma Nu) fourth.
100 yard freestyle: McLeod (Psi U) first; Sherman (Beta) second; Brown (A.D.) third; McKee (Sigma Nu) fourth.
220 yard freestyle: Parmelee (non-f) first; Cary (D.K.E.) second; Quint (non-f) third; Smith (Psi U) fourth.
440 yard freestyle: Parmelee (non-f) first; Cary (D.K.E.) second; Troit (Sigma Nu) third; Nelson (non-f) fourth.
150 yard backstroke: Foster (Theta Delt) first; Trot (Sigma Nu) second; McGarry (D.K.E.) third; Newman (Theta Delt) fourth.
200 yard breaststroke: Beale (Zeta Psi) first; Whitmore (D.K.E.) second; Esson (Beta) third; Carpenter (Beta) fourth.
Medley relay: D. K. E., first; Theta Delt, second; Beta, third; Sigma Nu, fourth.
200 yard freestyle relay: Non-fraternity, first; Sigma Nu, second; Psi U, third; Theta Delt, fourth.

Low board diving: Osborne (D.U.) first; Selig (non-f), second; Carson (Sigma Nu), third; Carpenter (Beta) fourth, U, third; Theta Delt, fourth.

PUCKSTERS BOW TO BATES RINK SIX, 3-2, THURS

Series Hardest Battle Goes to Bobcats in Last Period Rush

Fighting the most bitterly-contested battle of the series, the Bates hockey sextet, by virtue of an early attack in the concluding canto, edged out the Polar Bear puck pushers on the St. Dominic's Arena rink in Lewiston last Thursday night by a 3-2 count. Bowdoin pushed the attack through a major part of the game, but were unable to get the rubber through goalie Heldman, of the Garnet.

The Bobcats jumped to a quick advantage, when, with less than two minutes of the match in history, White whipped the puck from the blue line, low along the ice into the bottom of the Bowdoin net. Ten minutes of poke-checking then elapsed, with Hayden rejecting the rubber twice to Heldman's once. At this point, Dakin, skating near the left boards, snapped the disc high into the trine behind the Bates goalie to end the period in a deadlock.

Billings Puts Bears Ahead
Play accelerated in the following stanza, and with practically every collision a man was found guilty of a foul. As the time neared the halfway mark, Billings coasted into Bates' short center ice and drove the puck hard into the Bobcats' cage. This lead was still intact when the farewell period got underway.

The first ten minutes of play saw an improved Bates forward wall carry the battle deep into Bowdoin territory, and after two had elapsed Sweet sank the puck from near the left side of the blue stripe. A while later, Berry, enemy goalie in the Polar Bears' previous victory, forced the disc home from practically the same position to give the Garnet its successful lead.

Low board diving: Osborne (D.U.) first; Selig (non-f), second; Carson (Sigma Nu), third; Carpenter (Beta) fourth, U, third; Theta Delt, fourth.

ILLUSION:
Josie, the lovely trapeze artist, stands upon a small platform. At the will of the magician she leaps twenty feet into the air to reach her trapeze. She uses no ropes, no ladder! A phenomenal leap for a woman... or a man!

EXPLANATION:
Josie didn't jump... she was sprung! The twenty-foot leap is not dependent on Josie's ability, but on a powerful spring mechanism hidden beneath the stage which propels the artist upward through the air! The force is so violent that the lady wears a light steel jacket which protects her from injury as she starts her astonishing leap.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED

... IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

Magic has its place...but not in cigarette advertising.

Consider the illusion that there is a mysterious way to give cigarettes a superior "flavor."

EXPLANATION: Cigarette flavor can be controlled by adding artificial flavorings. By blending. And by the quality of tobacco used.

Cheap, raw tobacco can be "built up" or "fortified" by the lavish use of artificial flavorings.

Magic, however, seldom holds the audience. Your taste finally tells you the truth.

The cigarette flavor that never stales, never varies, never loses its fresh appeal, comes from mild, ripe, fragrant, more expensive tobacco...blended to bring out the full, round flavor of each type of leaf. It's the quality of the tobacco that counts!

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that CAMEL are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobacco than any other popular brand.

Because Camel actually pays millions more every year for choice tobaccos, you find in Camels an appealing mildness, a better flavor.

And Camels taste cooler because the welded Humidor Pack of three-ply, MOISTURE-PROOF cellophane keeps them fresh.

M'MILLAN GIVES LECTURE HERE ON ARCTIC TRIP

Motion Pictures Feature in Final Lecture of Explorer

M'MILLAN TO GO ON TRIP THIS SUMMER

Capacity Audience Packs Memorial Hall Monday Evening

Armed with 6,000 feet of moving picture films and as many hundreds of slides, Commander Donald B. MacMillan lectured to the audience gathered in Memorial Hall Monday night at 8:15 to hear his farewell address to the college. This summer around June 15 he will leave on another of his many and valuable arctic exploration trips, this time a three month investigation of bird life on the Button Islands off the northernmost point of the Labrador. So Memorial Hall was filled to overflowing by college students and townpeople availing themselves of this last opportunity to hear this most popular of lecturers.

Professor Wilmot B. Mitchell introduced Mr. MacMillan with a few brief reminiscences of his travels when the latter was a pupil of his. In a short prelude Commander MacMillan explained why men explore the arctic region. It is his desire to know the things that impels brave men to penetrate the frozen north.

LONGFELLOW VICTIM OF INDISCRIMINATE CRITICISMS, SAYS BROWN

English Professor Defends Poet as the Favorite of the Millions

Quoting Dr. Samuel Johnson's warning against quarrelling with the critics of the "Common Reader," Professor Herbert Ross Brown defended Longfellow, the victim of both too great and too little praise. His remarks are as follows:

Next Monday will mark the one hundred and twenty-sixth anniversary of the birth of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. Since the poet's death a half century ago many "barbaric ravages" have been wrought over these States. Fifty years ago Longfellow was the laureate of New England's literary renaissance; today he is patronizingly condescended to by most critics as a children's poet of the gentle pae and milk school of verse. Mr. Mencken has feelingly described him as a "poor pious surfer of a Puritan." His most recent biographer has familiarly referred to him as our "Henry," the latest historian of our letters would limit his poetry to the fifth grade reader.

This amazing reaction which has set in against his poetry may be accounted for in a number of ways. Longfellow has been the victim of much unkind criticism by his well-meaning admirers. Several years ago I heard a eulogist declare, "Longfellow is one of the five poets of the world; Homer, Virgil, Shakespeare, Milton and our Longfellow." This sort of thing has made the poet an attractive target for debunkers. It is no small praise to be compared with discriminating critics have at times compared him, with Scott, Gray, Landor and Tennyson.

Longfellow's simplicity has too often been confused with shallowness. His detractors, whose knowledge of the poet is confined to The Village Blacksmith, brand him as juvenile simply because he has sung his way into the hearts of common readers everywhere. This is the Ivory House of pseudo-critics: Let me be dreary, O God of the garage can, Let me be dreary and largely obscene.

WILDER AT WESTERN ALUMNI GATHERINGS

Continuing his tour through the country to meet Bowdoin Alumni Mr. Philip S. Wilder will attend several meetings in the Western states during the next week. Last Saturday he represented the college at a meeting of District 8 of the American Alumni Council which was held in Walla Walla, Washington. That Sunday there was an alumni gathering in Seattle.

Yesterday Mr. Wilder arrived in Portland, Oregon, and was present at a meeting of Bowdoin alumni in that city. Tonight he is scheduled to attend a gathering of a similar nature in San Francisco. During the following week end there will be a meeting of District 9 of the American Alumni Council at San Jose, California. By attending these gatherings Mr. Wilder as representative of the college is able to renew contacts with Bowdoin graduates and to interview anyone interested in the college.

MASQUE AND GOWN PROGRAM DIFFERS FROM '32 EXHIBITS

Although the plans of the Bowdoin Masque and Gown are not yet officially determined, the program this year will probably differ somewhat from that of last year. In the first place, it is very unlikely that there will be a final lecture by Ivy House Party, for the skit given last year was not too successful. That was partly due to the number of students away from campus at the time. The Masque and Gown expects to give no more than two plays, a Shakespearean drama at Commencement time,

PREXY SCORES STUDENT STAND ON PUBLIC LIFE

Undergraduates Indifferent, Defeatistic Says Sills

NEED SCHOLARS IN AMERICAN POLITICS

College's Duty to Develop Critical Faculties Student

Speaking before the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Dartmouth last Wednesday, President Sills scored heavily the American undergraduates' lack of interest in politics.

"There is, I believe, amongst American undergraduates a lamentable indifference to politics. That indifference is engendered by a kind of defeatism which is unworthy of the younger generation. They look upon a world no confused and so bewildered that they put the blame on their elders, shrug their shoulders and dwell largely on the corruption and inefficiency of American public life. Their attitude toward politics is a good deal like that of the small boy who defined water as that stuff that turns black when you put your hands in it."

President Sills' speech follows in part:

"It seems appropriate on this national holiday and at this college which has always noted the importance of good citizenship, to consider in this assembly of scholars the relation of the university and the college to the social order of our time. This is a subject very much to the fore (Continued on page 2)

SCHOLARSHIPS GO TO ONE FOURTH OF BOWDOIN STUDENTS

$24,000 Given Out; Average Award Amounts to About $148

The Committee on Student Aid at Bowdoin College announced on February 24 the award of scholarships, making the total for the year over $24,000, which would be made immediately available to 160 students of the college, or more than one fourth of the entire student body. The average scholarship for the group was about $148.

This included eight State of Maine Scholarships, amounting to $500 each, given to the Maine boys chosen last spring as a result of competitive examinations throughout the state. These were awarded from funds provided by the terms of gift for award to Maine boys only.

The largest award was the Stanwood Alexander Scholarship, given preferably to a boy from Stanwood, which was given to Paul Edward Jack '33 of that town. Interesting awards for proficiency in certain fields were the Edward F. Moody Scholarship for proficiency in Chemistry, won by Seth Holt Road '34 of Belfast, and the William Law Symonds Scholarship for students showing tendency to excellence in mathematics, which was awarded to Clyde Robert Johnson '33 of West Poland, who has majored in English.

LANCASTER HINTS AT ANOTHER UNION DANCE IN SPRING

In view of the fact that the dance held in the Moulton Union last week was comparatively successful, another one is expected for next year, according to Donovan D. Lancaster, manager of the Union. Although no definite plans have yet been made, Mr. Lancaster hints that the next dance, at which the Polar Bears will probably play as usual, will be held before Easter vacation, though likely not for two weeks at least.

Johnny Holden Maps Out Ski Plans, Tuckerman's Ravine, Mt. Moosilauke

Bowdoin's one-man winter sport team, John S. Holden, '35, who recently returned from the Seigniory Club in Quebec, where he secured two points for the college by placing third in the intercollegiate down-hill ski race, will leave the state twice within the next month to enter further ski competition. On Washington's Birthday, Holden participated in the Massachusetts Ski Association's jump contest held at Lancaster, and scored 89 feet, ten short of the winning leap.

IDELEL GIVES VIOLIN CONCERT

Young Violinist Appears in Memorial Hall Program

Presenting a programme of classical selections, Edwin Idelel, violinist, played in Memorial Hall on Tuesday evening. Mr. Idelel, a musician of international reputation, selected the program from the work of Grieg, Bruch, Chopin, Brahms, and others. His playing was characterized by great technical skill coupled with original interpretation.

Still young man, Edwin Idelel has been a musician since the age of seven. At that time he presented his first concert. Among the men who have a deep responsibility to quicken their interest in the game. It is a theory of Coach Wells that there is no such person as a "natural-born athlete." "It is the game," says he, "that brings forth the best grade of baseball in the world. It is in this game that Wells is making coaches out of ball-players, to increase their technical knowledge of the game and give them a sense of their own responsibility.

QUILL EXPECTED TO APPEAR ON MARCH 28, BASSETT IN CHARGE

On March 28 or thereabouts, the next issue of "Quill" will appear. The Make-up Editor of this edition will be James E. Bassett, Jr., '34. The magazine will contain specifically an article by M. Pierrot, on the place the late Mr. John Galworthy held in French Letters. Other features will be "A Letter to a Colleague without a Theatre" by Philip G. Parker '35; poetry by Albert S. Davis, Jr., '33, Arthur Stratton '35, and John Schaffner '35; Stephen F. Leo '33 will write another "Ambrose" story and several different men will combine to write "A Collection of Trivia: short paragraphs of the philosophy of the commonplace." Other contributors will be Christy C. Moustakis, Witold R. Lenczycki, Albert S. Davis, Jr., and any other writer or poet who cares to submit material before the deadline which is the end of this week.

ONE HUNDRED AND ELEVEN YEARS SINCE LONGFELLOW ENTERED HERE

Note: This article is being printed in recognition of the anniversary of the birth of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, born 126 years ago last Monday.

A man in the sophomore class had his sixteenth birthday last Monday. He was named Longfellow. He was probably a hundred and ten years ago some of the most-moustrated senior announced this conclusion with an air of having said something really remarkable. But he did not know that man if he passed over him as a mere statistic, a 'youngest kid' exhibit. For that young graduated second in his class, and subsequently had an excellent student credit to but one other graduate of the college.

Longfellow had a strong inclination to poem in his college days. He had red, or, if you prefer, auburn hair. He entered at fourteen years of age, after almost having been sent to Harvard. He was an excellent student. Four years after his graduation he returned to become Bowdoin's first professor of modern languages and literature and remained in that chair for ten years. These are the features of his connection with the College as a student and instructor.

THETA DELTA UPSSET DOPE TO EDGE NONFRATERNITY TANKMEN IN 5th CONSECUTIVE VICTORY

Foster Tops Osborne for Single Honors; Deke Relayist, Parmelee Feature in Smashing Two Records

In a wildly exciting meet that held closely fought races from start to finish, Theta Delta Chi provided the biggest upset in the history of interfraternity swimming competition, by noising out Non-Fraternity and Delta Kappa Epsilon for the title last Saturday night in Curtis Pool.

Led by Bob Foster, who virtually carried his team to victory, the Theta Deltas took advantage of every break to score a totally unheralded win, after having been conceded no better than fourth place before the meet began. Non-Fraternity, top-heavy favorites, defeated themselves when the relay quartet, which won by five yards, was disqualified for swimming out of its lane.

GLEMEN LOSE AT SPRINGFIELD

"Ave Maria" Wins for Amherst in Intercollegiate Competition

Under the direction of Eliot Smith the Bowdoin College Glee Club recently participated in the seventh annual Intercollegiate contest held at the Municipal Auditorium in Springfield, Massachusetts. Philip L. Garland, Bowdoin's coach, was present at the contest. The competing clubs were: Williams College, University of Vermont, Wesleyan University, Bowdoin College, Clark University, Middlebury College, Trinity College, Amherst College, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

This year it was voted to have the prize song sung on the afternoon of the contest in order to spare the audience the tedium of hearing it sung nine times in succession as has been the practice in former years. However the three highest ranking clubs sang it again in the evening, following the singing of the prize song. None of those clubs were told whether they had been placed first, second or third, until the close of the evening program. It was announced that the winners of the prize song group could actually be the winners of the entire contest.

DEAN BUDGETS DAY OF COLLEGE MAN IN SAT. CHAPEL TALK

Ten Hours Maximum for Daily Study and Six for Relaxation

Advising the student body not to worry vainly over financial conditions, and to set aside six hours a day for amusement, relaxation, and exercise, Dean Asa Nixon in his Saturday chapel talk entitled "The Job in Hand" asserted that no college man putting in a ten hour working-day can be accused of slighting his job by his studies or to his parents, and, addressing his talk to those who come from homes where parents are making sacrifices to keep them in college, budgeted the day into three periods: eight hours for sleep; six hours for amusements, relaxation, correspondence, etc.; and as much of the remaining ten hour period for study as necessary. The address follows verbatim:

"My talk this morning, which might be entitled The Job in Hand, and my next two or three Saturdays chapel talks, are meant only for those of you who have your own way to make in the world and who come from homes where the parents are making sacrifices to keep you here, often greater sacrifices than they do know of.

Worry is Detrimental

"If you men from homes such as these had one this last semester a much larger grade of academic work than usual, it would not have been surprising. For, in financial conditions in the family; worried, often, about the consequent physical (Continued on page 2)

IVY DAY WILL SEE CLASS '34 BUGLE

All engraving material is to be in by March 12th," says the Bugle. "All those Juniors who don't have their portraits in by March 10th will not appear in their regular alphabetical position," it continues, "but will be put in a separate section in the back of the book. So far it will be out of time by Ivy Day. We are gradually accumulating material and getting loose ends together—such as the color of the book, the decorations, etc."

HARVARD PROFESSOR IN FRENCH LECTURE

For the second time this school year Professor Andre Moris of Harvard University is to give a French talk at the college. He will speak at Moulton Union next Saturday, March 4th, at 8:00 p.m. on the subject, "The Literature Modern." As before he is brought to Brunswick through the combined auspices of Bowdoin College and the Alliance Francaise.

Professors: Social Outcasts. When men discuss the relative qualities of the small liberal arts college and the great university, they invariably praise the intimate relationship existing between faculty and students at the smaller schools. When the freshman enters Bowdoin, he cherishes the fond hope that he will meet his professors informally, that he can maintain friendships with faculty members which will be an asset to him throughout his life. Alas! he is soon disillusioned. The student cannot live in Brunswick many months before he realizes that professors and students live in separate worlds.

It is said of the colleges in the southern part of the country, even of the large universities there, that a wonderful attitude of informality has grown up between professors and undergraduates. Students frequently spend an evening of bridge or of quiet discussion at a professor's home, without fear of being socially ostracized by their fellow-students. In fact, such visits are considered one of the most important phases of college life here. But people in New England, at least as represented in the student body of Bowdoin, seem to lack the cordiality of the Southerners.

COMMUNICATION. February 22, 1933. To the Editor of the Orient: Much criticism has been recently directed toward the Masque and Gown. It seems that we have been censured for the caliber of play produced, and has been suggested from many quarters that it would be well to consider light farces—plays more "suitable" to the occasion on which they are presented.

Mustard and Cross. We have been to still another city since we last reported on the contest that we can honestly maintain the cosmopolitan atmosphere racket. Last Wednesday we spent in Boston at the Dog Show, of all places. Among other things we saw a Basenjois which reminded us. We also saw some solicitors for Boston's Emergency Relief Campaign. One of them, rather comely also was, was seated at a table just inside the door at Mechanics Hall. On the table was a cylindrical box for the donations of the anxious citizenry, and on the outside of this box we saw: No.

And this in Boston? We moved over a pace or two, rubbed our eyes, and tried again. Now! We dropped a quarter, just for the thrill we had been given. It is with a feeling of conscious pride that we note two rather significant and opposed tendencies which have been in recent evidence on an annual basis. The sense of peace is in full reign on College St., as the Yuletide decorations retain the position of honor on the facade of Prof. Hildell's residence. The sense of peace to each wreath, may we add, and in these hard times. Over on Porter St. the spirit of Mars flared forth the other evening, and Fridaire's general Gutz led his small but effective army in extensive, not to say expensive, maneuvers. It is rumored that the general awarded bulletins with bitter brevity to his reserves, and then turned to fly. They all lived to fight another day, at any rate.

We couldn't get this column out if it weren't for the Ec. Department. Last week we were sitting around over in the Union when Prof. Lockwood was making in just fresh from the Bulletin's door. He seemed that he had just read the announcement of an impending debate with a college of an unfamiliar name, but one with associations in some sphere other than the academic. "Where is this Junata College?" hummed Mr. Lockwood. And what a blow to Romanians when we informed him that Junata was the name, if he didn't mind too much.

By way of saving our own Neckties Trick of the West Department allow us to submit the following headline, taken from the pages of the Boston Herald: Find Man in Lost Girls' Case. The most ludicrous note in our campus scene is the "Stop" sign just inside the new gateway. We have tried in vain to get rolling, fast enough so that we could feel it really worthwhile to halt our vehicle before entering on Harpswell St. But the sign is the work of some valiant ingenious denizens of Windrop Hall have been using it for target practice. Their aim has not been all that it should be, and they should be able to pare off a few inches.

The battle which is being waged by the Yankee Net-work and the Gannett interest in Portland is a rather intriguing affair. We have been following it in the Press-Herald, and we are being slowly convinced that this man is the Secretary of the Treasury, who has gone from the Republican to the Democrats at a very neat time. We hope that we'll be very wealthy soon, or have a nickel or two, perhaps.

We were standing down in lower Maine St. the other nights when the fire was in progress, and we noted with interest the reactions of the fire ladders to the loud cheering of the gowns. It went on for some time before one of the smoke-eaters queried us: "Is it possible that you are here if your house was burning up?" We didn't say a word, because we try to help at these fires, rather than hinder, but it did occur to us that we pay quite a considerable sum of money, and that if we chose to speak, we could answer that question with a note of hope.

On that little printed card which the Bath Opera House sends around we find that on Wednesday of the week of Feb. 27th the feature will be: The translation which I append will, I hope, convey some idea of the original in vain to get not German. Yours, James Pettigrove, Bowdoin '33. Für Us! Fern, fern im Osten da glüht ein Grab; Da senkt man's tausend die Toten hinab. Für uns! Im Westen da ragt manch' Kreuz schlicht und klein. Da liegen sie stumm in langen Reihen. Für uns! Und wo im Winde raucht die Meer, Da gaben sie freudig ihr Leben her.

To the Editor of the Bowdoin Orient, Dear Sir: How do the German youth remember the War? This is a question which might interest some of your readers. The enclosed composition is, I think, fairly representative of the mellow temper of recollections of the late war in all parts of Germany. This particular memorial is a much-loved and oft-read favorite of the younger generation in South Germany. Inscribed by a pupil in a gymnasium to his fallen teacher, its earnest simplicity touched the tender steps of the patriot. Its non-partisan tone commemorates the dead of all the participating nations, and looks forward to more intimate international relations. Für uns! Denn es gibt keine Wort für das Opfer zu danken, Und es gibt keinen Danke für sie, die da sanken. Für uns!

CUMBERLAND PREVIEWS. Tonight at the Cumberland you will be given the opportunity of seeing a happy-go-lucky farce, as the authors put their brains together to mold a movie from the Liberty magazine story "The Woman Accused". The theme attempts to reveal an answer to the not-too-new question of whether or not murder is justifiable, but is capably and emotionally enacted by Nancy Carroll and Gary Grant. A man's plots come to a head in "The Crime of the Century", being shown in town on Thursday, and starring Jean Harlow, Stuart Erwin and Wallace Gibson. Fine if you like to be fooled.

"Broadway Bad", with Joan Blondell, Ginger Rogers, and Ricardo Cortez, Friday's feature, tells a rather mediocre story of a girl who attempts to "cash in" on the excitement of Broadway reputation which she believes to be undeserved. Saturday's attraction, "Clear All Wires", provides the best entertainment of the week, as mentioned here. Les Tracy, a brahminical correspondent, turns Moscow upside down with his fake assassination plot, life ably supported by a cast including Benic Hume, Una Merkle, and James Gleason.

LONGFELLOW VICTIM OF INDISCRIMINATE CRITICS, SAYS BROWN. English Professor Defends Poet as the Favorite of the Millions. Grant me obscurity, grant me impurity, But for the sake of the anguished humanity. Make it not easy to see what I mean! In the raw and braving materialistic America of the mid-nineteenth century, Longfellow brought some of the color, melody and legend of the world beyond the sea. Walt Whitman, who knew an America unknown to our poet, was the first to declare him a mere money-making machine.

"Of all my boyish dreams. To someone of our bustling sea port cities was the name of a ship. I remember the black wharves and the ships. And the sea tidals tossing free; And Spanish sailors with bearded lips. And the beauty and mystery of the ships. And the magic of the sea. His spirited ballads are not the pallid echoes of other men's writings. They have a high place among the comparatively few fine literary ballads of our common tongue. Longfellow is unquestionably the finest in American literature. Many moderns would have written the incomparable A. Dutch Picture. But the difficulty with most of Longfellow's critics is that they have not read him since they memorized The Psalm of Life."

Dr. Samuel Johnson once warned critics of the dangers of quarreling with the judgments of "the common reader." Longfellow is far more widely read than Poe and Whitman, both here and abroad. Few poets have been reserved for the destiny of a professional Longfellow-baiter. I can confess difficult expression with profundity, clarity with shallowness, sentimentality with the rare ability to touch the springs of the heart. It is not likely that Longfellow will ever again attain the high position he enjoyed during his life. He will continue to have his hearts quickened by his music.

BOWDOIN 50 YEARS AGO. With the romantic season of the year merely three weeks away, as coincidentally it was on the first of March a half century ago, it is fitting that we print a few excerpts from the Bowdoin style-sheet of that date. "For the benefit of our patrons we present the following table of local styles for the Spring of '83, compiled from our leading authorities on fashion: Gents' Shoes—Pointed tips and worn under the coat-tail when you can't pay your bill. Trousers—Extremely tight—after a trip to Bath. Beer—Stout, and trimmed about with hops. Bills—Very common, cut high in the neck, and very long. Sophomore Plugs—Queen Anne style revived, no embellishments in the way of dead-eye or gait.

That predominant idea is the ideas of a class or group that is losing power. There are a great many prominent ideas in our present social world today, ideas that prosperity is just around the corner, ideas that by a little more thrift and a little more saving we shall all be saved, ideas that after the usual cycle of depression things will be as they used to be. There are other predominant ideas that social injustice will disappear automatically with the return of more prosperous times. It seems to me that colleges must be ready to face these changes and to prepare their students for them. It is very largely because our colleges and universities have not conscientiously recognized their obligations to the social order outside of college halls that there has been so often lack of leadership and in many cases avoidance of all responsibility. I believe that our colleges and universities owe something to the public, and that in particular our students and scholars should be kept constantly aware of such responsibilities."

AMHERST, PRINCETON LEAD COLLEGES IN ENTRANCE CHANGES

The much debated question of college entrance requirements has been brought to the attention of the public forcefully twice this year, once by the move taken by Princeton to make its entrance requirements more comprehensive and again this last week when Amherst dropped a 112 year Latin requirement.

The Amherst Student announcing the change said:
"After 112 years of strict adherence to the requirement of classics for entrance, Amherst College today announced that outstanding men will be admitted to its Freshman Class with but two years of Latin or with no Latin at all. The new requirements allow a man who has completed 15 units in the list of acceptable subjects to enter without Latin or Mathematics provided he has sufficient other credits and shows promise of high intellectual ability."

"Greater flexibility in admissions is the aim of the new system, according to official press releases and President King's statement. The action does not mean a lowering of the present standards but rather allows the admissions office a greater degree of freedom in choosing men. It is hoped that the new plan will draw to Amherst men of unusual ability who might lack one or two units of the present rigid requirements but be capable of doing extraordinary work in some particular field. Men of all-around ability will thus be allowed admission despite their deficiencies under the old system, while the men who had the required 15 units under the old system although not outstanding in any field will be passed up."

"No action has as yet been taken on the curriculum so that it is at present impossible to state what subjects will be required of men presenting vastly different credits for admissions. It is apparent to the Student that the discontinuation of the required freshman courses in some subjects is likely due to the limitations of the Department if for no other reason.
"The College, by allowing more flexibility in its admission requirements, is following a modern trend of placing greater reliance upon the judgment of the secondary schools as to the men they offer. The introduction of the personal element in the choice of candidates has been widespread in other institutions, and has been advocated for Amherst for some time.
"President King, in commenting on the action, said in part, 'the new admission requirements... are an attempt to give greater flexibility to the administration of admissions and are not in any sense an attack upon the classics. Amherst is recognizing the fact that secondary school education has made marked changes in the last decade and that the educational prothe six members (1824) of the Unitarian Society, apparently a forerunner of the present B.C.A. He and fifteen other men of his class were elected to the newly formed Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Later he was a contributor to 'The Bowdoin Portfolio', predecessor of the Quill. At a class reunion in 1876 he was chosen class poet, and for that occasion wrote the immortal 'Moriturus Salutamus'."

Changed Part Assignment
His part at Commencement, an English oration, was assigned as "Chatterton and his Poems", probably as a result of his purchase and study of a set of Chatterton. Longfellow's father, who was a trustee of the College, believed this name would mean little to the audience and suggested a change of subject. So the oration was "Our Native Writers", and the change so noted in ink on the program.

The professorship of modern languages and literature, considered at that time to be quite an innovation, was made possible by a fund originating from a gift of $1,000 from Mrs. Bowdoin. The chair was "almost created for him". Though only nineteen when he accepted the position, and after some study abroad, wrote his own textbooks for the several language courses and began teaching "Outre-Mer" and "The Schoolmaster" also appeared during his career as a teacher here. He is reported as having been a very popular instructor, one who "neither sought popularity, nor avoided it," who "neither flattered nor repelled." In 1855 he was appointed professor of modern languages at Harvard.

So ended his Bowdoin career, but not his Bowdoin connections and loyalty. And, as through the rest of his life, he merely passed on to a position in life where he was able to give greater benefits to the race at large.

es from school to college is continuous. Amherst is placing greater emphasis on the implications of the school record and less emphasis on the specified subject which the student has studied. The aim of the requirements is to secure students intellectually qualified to do the work of the College.
"I myself believe that a thorough study of the classical civilizations and languages of Greece and Rome is a sound preparation for college but not the only one. In brief, my point of view is that Amherst is seeking men

NOTED GRADUATES HAVE WON '38 PRIZE SPEAKING CONTEST

Many of the winners of Bowdoin's Class of '38 Prize Speaking Contest have achieved prominence in their chosen profession after leaving college. Most immediately familiar to Bowdoin students is the name of Donald B. MacMillan. Hardly less familiar is the name of Robert Peary. Included in this list of names very familiar to contemporary Bowdoin men is also that of John Clair Minot, editor of the book page of the Boston Herald and author of many books including two collections of Bowdoin reminiscences, college stories and legends.

Edward F. Mitchell '71 first journalist and then editor of the New York Sun is included in the roster. Still keeping to those with a turn toward writing we come to C. Wilbert Snow '07, poet of Maine, who recently read here.

Samuel Cole '74 once president of Weston Seminary and later of Weston College is on the list. He was a prolific writer, chiefly, about religion or the college.

of sound character and intellectual capacity to do the work of the College rather than students that have accumulated the required number of credits through any narrowly specified course of study."

About the recent change at Princeton the N.S.F.A. had recently the following to say:
Princeton, N. J., (NSFA)—Princeton University's new plan of admission approved by the Board of Trustees at its winter meeting is designed to meet the advances made in secondary education in the last decade," a detailed explanation of it declares.

The new plan which "involves a fundamental change in the relation of school to college" has three major features: Opportunity for advanced college work is given to the exceptional applicant; greater flexibility is millions of grooved teeth, and spikes which fell thousands of years ago; that from inland they all came, progressing toward the sea at the rate of about one inch a day; that a long line of hundreds of feet above the water extends as many thousands of feet below water; that all Greenland is slowly being covered by the great glacier; that walrus are the most dangerous animals of the polar regions because of their uncertainty; one day they are cowards, the next they will rip a boat to pieces with their long sharp tusks.

Dogs, Ducks, Polar Bears
The audience watched two Eskimo children gleefully playing with a camera; saw two Eskimo dogs, who would attack the largest polar bear but who had never seen a bird, quail before a little duck which advanced toward them, boldly flapping its wings in their faces; saw an exhibition of drawings by Eskimo children; saw pursued and killed the polar bear now in the gallery of the Sargent Gymnasium; thrilled at a walrus hunt; saw the mammoth harpoon and rolled up on the beach; watched the skill of the Eskimo dog-barking at the swift, dangerous; muck or pulling the sleds over slippery, treacherous ice and snow.

The audience saw the expedition start from Wiscasset, Maine; followed the boat Bowdoin over the open polar sea as it cracked its way through the ice flow; saw it put up for the winter, frozen in a solid field of ice, surrounded by a six foot wall of snow to keep the warm, the only entrance to which was by a tunnel; returned with the expedition to Wiscasset where Teddy Roosevelt, Jr., Dean Nixon, and others welcomed it back.

permitted in the course of study pursued by the applicant in his preparation for Princeton; and recognition is accorded courses which are the equivalent of, but do not specifically meet, College Entrance Examination Board requirements.

"The new scheme," the announcement states, "abolishes the concept of admission as a goal or end in itself. The conception of admission to college as a general admissions ticket paid for in units is discarded. The new method is not designed as related solely to admission, but will enable Princeton to continue the individual's own educational program as it has already been partially developed in the school. The admissions problem has been looked at anew as a transfer from one educational institution to another.
"The advantages of the new plan to Charles Sheffield Burdell '34, of that city, while Abraham Kerr '36 and Arthur M. Lieberman '36, both of Bangor, were given the G. W. Field Scholarships available under certain conditions for students from Bangor High School.

Scholarships from the Lawrence Foundation, the first scholarship fund ever established at Bowdoin, were awarded to Abraham E. Abramovitch '36, of Beverly, Mass., and to Thomas Bradbury Card '33, of Somerville, Mass. Fred Whittier '33, of Winsor, Conn., received for the fourth time the John P. Hale Scholarship, one of the few awards made consistently to the same student throughout his course.

John King Davis '36, of Webster, Mass., was given the Beverly Scholarship, established by the Beverly Men's Singing Club in 1923.

The 1938 Scholarship, given primarily to descendants of members of that class, was assigned to Albert Perry Holt, Jr., '34, of Braintree, Mass.

should be obvious," says the Daily Princetonian in an editorial. "It enlarges the schools to extend their range of studies, particularly in the field of the social sciences and the fine arts. Too often there is a tendency to regard secondary school training as a separate part of education, without properly relating it to college. By permitting an extension in the range of school studies, the new plan should encourage the development of more maturely-minded students—students with a wider background for their college work. In the third place, the development of honors programs in the schools should be stimulated. Of even greater value should be the direct effect upon the man admitted to Princeton. The changes instituted view the problem of entrance as a transfer from one educational institution to another. There is a direct appeal to the interests of the incoming student and a continuity of interest is established, based on the educational value of those interests and not on the conformity to College Board rules. Finally an attempt is made to grant to the exceptional student the opportunity to progress in accordance with his abilities."

"Chesterfields Satisfy"

WHEN smokers keep buying the same cigarette day after day... it's a pretty good sign that they're getting what they want... mildness, better taste—a smoke that's always the same.

So we're going right on making Chesterfields just as we always have... selecting choice, ripe tobaccos... ageing them... blending and cross-blending them... making them into cigarettes in the most scientific ways that are known.

As long as we do these things we know that smokers will continue to say, "They Satisfy". For that's what people are saying about Chesterfields.

If you smoke, why not find out about them? A package or two will tell you the whole story.

THETA DELTS WIN INTERFRAT SWIM FIFTH YEAR IN ROW

 was the slowest Foster has done this year, 2:05.1.

In the 200 yard breaststroke, John Beale, Zete, pulled a mild surprise by trouncing Bob Whitmore by five yards. Bill Eason's valiant fight to catch the Deke leader was futile, however, and he had to be content with a third, inches behind. The time, 2 minutes, was the best a Bowdoin man has done this year.

Bill Parmelee snatched victory in hundred from Jack McLeod, Psi U, with Carson, Sigma Nu, and Melville, Chi Psi, close behind.

The deciding event of the meet was the 200 yard relay. Seagrave gave the Non-Fraternity team a short lead over Sigma Nu and Theta Delta Chi in the first lap, with the A.D. team never in the running. Quint, the second-legger for the Barba, lost his bearings, however, and crossed two lanes, almost colliding with two swimmers. Selig increased Non-Fraternity's lead and Parmelee brought them home five yards ahead, but disqualification followed. Bob Foster, swimming an inspired anchor leg, caught Sigma Nu's anchor, Bob Carson, on the final length, and beat him to the touch for what proved to be first place, giving his team the meet.

The summaries:
 300 yard medley relay: won by Delta Kappa Epsilon (McGarry, Whittles, Cary); Zeta Psi (Reid, Beale, Hunt) second; Theta Delta Chi (Newman, Baker, Chase) third. Time: 3 min. 50.3 sec. (New interfraternity record).

220 yard freestyle: won by Foster (T.D.); Cary (Deke) second; Trott (Sigma Nu) third; Quint (non-F) fourth. Time: 2 min. 45.2 sec.

50 yard freestyle: won by Osborne (D.U.); Seagrave (non-F) second; McLeod (Psi U) third; McGarry (Deke) fourth. Time: 2:6.4 sec.

150 yard backstroke: won by Foster (T.D.); Trott (Sigma Nu) second; McGarry (Deke) third; Newman (T.D.) fourth; Reid (Zete) disqualified for illegal turn. Time: 2 min. 51 sec.

WELLS HAS BATTERY MEN LIMBERING UP

Practice for this year's baseball team began last Monday when Coach Linn Wells called a meeting of all battery candidates at the gym at 3:30. He also called for all aspiring freshmen who wished for managerial positions. He expects the rest of the team in about two weeks. There are about 50 candidates signed up already and with seven letter men and Captain David Means, the prospects for the future are brightening. The other varsity men are: Bart Bosaidy, David Merrill, Doug Walker, Herbie Hempel, Jack McLeod, Al Kent and George Bennett.

Edward DeLong '34, of Bath, varsity manager of baseball, has issued the current schedule of games, the only new opponent being Amherst, to be played in place of Massachusetts State. The schedule is as follows:

April 19—Bates here
 April 24—Colby at Waterville
 May 3—Amherst at Amherst
 May 4—Wesleyan at Middletown
 May 6—Northeastern at Boston
 May 6—Tufts at Medford
 May 10—Maine here
 May 12—Colby at Waterville
 May 17—Maine at Orono
 May 20—Bates here
 May 22—Colby here
 May 24—Maine here
 May 26—Colby here
 May 30—Bates at Lewiston

200 yard breaststroke: won by Beale (Zete); Whitmore (Deke) second; Eason (Beta) third; Benjamin (A.D.) fourth. Time: 3 min.

100 yard freestyle: won by Parmelee (non-F); McLeod (Psi U) second; Carson (Sigma Nu) third; Melville (Chi Psi) fourth; Brown (A.D.) disqualified for swimming out of lane. Time: 63.2 sec.

200 yard freestyle relay: won by Theta Delta Chi (Trotter, Walker, Dakin, Foster); Sigma Nu (Trott, Holmes, Halas, Carson) second; Delta Upsilon (Stetson, Woodger, Wright, Osborne) third; Alpha Delta Phi (Krause, Monell, Moustakis, Brown) fourth; Non-Fraternity (Seagrave, Quint, Selig, Parmelee) disqualified for swimming out of lane. No time.

MERMEN, IN FINAL TRIP. SPLASH WITH TRINITY, WORCESTER

Both Polar Bear Opponents Will Give White Rub Records Assert

Leaving tomorrow on the last trip of the year, the swimming team encounters Trinity College, at Hartford, Conn., on Friday night, and on Saturday will go to Worcester, where they will meet Worcester Tech that afternoon.

The meet with Trinity should be close. Trinity has had a swimming team only three years, and is a new competitor on the Polar Bear schedule. They have had a fairly good record this season, and defeated Union by one point. Trinity is strong in free-style sprinters, which will be a difficult handicap for the Bears to overcome. Bowdoin should take the dive without much trouble. Foster should win the breaststroke, and Parmelee ought to take his events. The outcome of the meet will probably depend on the results of the short dashes.

Worcester Tech should prove to be formidable. Last year they had a good freshman team, and this year's varsity is composed largely of new men. They have a star in Franklin, who swims the 440 and the backstroke, but of the others little is known. Their record this year has also been fairly good; a week ago they beat Boston University by a close score and took over Amherst last Saturday. This will be the third meeting of these two teams; last year Bowdoin came out on top, and the previous year, at Worcester, the Polar Bears were defeated.

BOWSER WILL HAVE SPRING GRID WORK

Coach Bowser has discontinued winter football because of the lack of interest shown. He said that so few men were attending that it was useless to continue, but he also announced that spring football will begin in about six weeks.

LARRY JOHNSON stellar weight man who is rumored to be planning on coming here next year.

BEKES HEAD LEAGUE A WITH HOOP WIN OVER KAPPA SIGMA

In the paramount hoop tilt of the past week, the Deke quintet Thursday night somewhat hesitantly asserted its right over the Kappa Sigma aggregation to the League A supremacy by eeking out a 27-25 victory. Supremacy in League B is to be decided this week when the two remaining unbeaten teams, the Sigma Nus and the D. U., do battle.

The favored Kappa Sigma opened the volley in the initial quarter of their encounter, and closed it with a three point lead of 7-4. At the midway halt, however, the Dekes had launched on their scoring campaign, and held the dubious lead of 14-13. This advantage was preserved unto the end by some timely baskets when minutes were precious.

Vincent Harrington was high scorer of the evening, while Louis Stearns was in great measure responsible for the Deke triumph.

SPORT SIDELIGHTS

Before the meet, you could have had odds of 50-1 that the Theta Delts would be able to defend successfully their interfraternity swimming championship. All of which proves that you can't tell about swimming; there are too many things swimmers can do wrong.

Of the three disqualifications in the swimming championships, the Theta Delts were directly benefited by two. It appears that the Gods don't want anybody but Theta Delta Chi to hold the cup. This victory was their fifth in a row.

No amount of figuring can place anyone but the Zetes as probable winners of the track trophy on March 10, however. With Ray McLaughlin, Phil Good, Howie Niblock, John Adams, Vale Marvin and a host of others, it appears that no one can come within twenty points of them.

The swimmers have their last two dual meets this week end, with Trinity at Hartford, and with Worcester Tech at Worcester. The Hillmen will find these opponents both tough, but stand a better-than-even chance to win at least one of them. The New England meet will be their next goal.

A sudden warm spell wiped out what remained of the hockey season, leaving the league standings in mid-air. With a Bowdoin-Colby game unplayed, Bates has clear title to first place, with the Mules two points behind in close second, and the White a single counter shaft.

The schedule makers for the State League will be the most harassed persons in Maine until permanent rinks that insure good ice are situated in every college. The fact that the Bears played only three games on scheduled dates shows the handicap they work under. Perhaps they'd better give up and announce "The State series will be played on the three coldest days of January and February."

The hiatus of a month and a half between the winter and spring sports seasons is now in full swing. Only the swimmers are continuing, and their meets are all away. Baseball gets under way April 19, and the tracksters buck B. C. the 21st of the same month. Until then, "Train" is the watchword.

 cared for. Each of the three is to play at least three practice games every two weeks, and a Junior Varsity from among these teams will play a regular schedule of six or eight games. As the player is responsible to his coach, so will the varsity player-coaches be answerable for glaring tactical errors made by their respective proteges, in games among these minor teams. They will get used to "thinking first under competitive conditions" to use the words of their coach. Probably no training regime was ever as well calculated to develop in a player a good baseball mind.

New Field Sought

"There are only two factors that can interfere with the success of this program," Coach Wells asserted, "lack of sufficient playing area or a dearth of interest. An unselfish team spirit is essential above everything else, even though the boys may have heard that before. The way that hockey team worked together was the sort of play that I want to see on our ball club."

There is a strong possibility that the area most recently levelled at Pickard Field may be available for baseball. Mr. Malcolm E. Morrell, director of athletics, expects that the question will be settled very shortly. It will be recalled that the field was the scene of a polo game last spring, and is apparently firm enough to allow baseball.

3 HEADED Woman
 SHE WINKS—SHE SMILES—SHE FROWNS
ALL AT ONCE!

ILLUSION:
 Look at this remarkable lady... with three lovely and perfect heads... all attached to a normal body. She appears to sit on the stage, with the lower part of her body concealed by flowers. She can wink, smile, and nod. She can talk, laugh, and sing—all at the same time. Thousands of people have seen this feat of magic and pronounced it a wonderful sight!

EXPLANATION:
 Audiences used to pay an extra fee to go behind the scenes to see how this trick was worked. They discovered that the three-headed woman was merely a reflection in a mirror. The glass showed the heads of three girls but the body of only one. The other two were cleverly hidden so that only their heads showed in the mirror.

It's fun to be fooled — ...it's more fun to KNOW

This "three-headed woman" trick goes way back to the early days of magic. Also old is the suggestion that protection for your throat and freedom from coughing can be achieved through some magic trick.

Throat. Ripe, costly tobaccos are mild, mellow—gentle. The question is whether a cigarette is made from cheap tobacco or the more expensive grades.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that CAMELS are made from finer, MOSE EXPENSIVE tobacco than any other popular brand.

American men and women have smoked more billions of Camels than any other brand because of the appeal of more expensive tobaccos and matchless blending. Won't you stack up your own experience with a cigarette made from milder, costlier tobaccos... against magic claims about "cigarettes" and your throat?
 Try fresh Camels—in the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack that seals the freshness and coolness, the mildness and flavor of Camels...inside.

THE EXPLANATION: The easiest cigarette on your throat is the cigarette that is made from the choicest, ripe tobaccos. Cheap, raw tobaccos are, as you would naturally expect, harsh to the

The Sun Rises

INTENSE interest in never-quite formulated policies of Masque and Gown leaped up, last week, when word went around that a small group was advocating a college little theatre.

And along with growing discussion of this Little Theatre movement came a hint of dissatisfaction with "B.J. One's" antics to Portland. Whether or not that play can be shaped into an adequate example of Bowdoin's dramatic ability is a debatable question.

EMANATING from China's war-torn cities of Peiping and West, came a courageously pitiful bundle of letters addressed to the Orient. Students at Yenching University are in the thick of Japan's vicious drive through Jehol, and as loyal patriots they are eminently capable of presenting China's side of the situation.

"OUR ONE and earnest hope is that they may contribute in some way towards the promotion of understanding between our two nations." Both men and women have written this series of articles which will appear in The Orient. These items are of highest interest, and throw light on a subject which can only be treated from a first-hand point of view.

BOWDOIN'S ill-fated Forum which began so auspiciously last Spring under the ardent leadership of George Sewall, Huber, Barton, and Philip Allen, has evidently been created to become the active body of its founders contemplated. True, a lecture was sponsored by the group; but they have overlooked speaking opportunities.

LABORATORY and the forensic art have been occupying the center of the campus stage during the past month, as the trials of the Ketchikan case come. The annual early Spring crop of contests headed by the '68 Prize speaking has arrived.

SIGNIFICANT it is, too, that topics in the '68 Speaking Contest hinged closely to national problems—Depression and economic disorder, as well as a new social order and the eventuality of revolution, were among the orations. One message toward national political health. Another glumly showed the path that leadeth but to destruction, yet stated: "I have no solution."

PUSSY-FOOTING columnist on the Record believes in some occult way that Bowdoin's athletic policy is about to undergo another upheaval. Just what this entails, or from which direction the change will come, is left unsaid.

NOW THAT Doctor Johnson's infirmary has undergone an avalanche of cold and gripe victims, the College really should take under serious advisement the laying of a board walk across campus from the pitiful extension that juts out into the wastelands near the Chapel to Memorial Hall.

TRACK MOTION PICTURES Coach McFee will exhibit motion pictures of the International Olympic track meet following the inter-scholastic meet here Saturday. The show is scheduled to go on about seven thirty p.m., after the last schoolboy event has been completed.

Chinese Students Decry Japan's Warfare in Stories for 'Orient'

Last week Mr. William W. Lockwood of the Economics department turned over a series of letters from Chinese students of Yenching University, Peiping West. They were addressed to The Orient, and are a part of a campaign by Chinese patriots to cement alliances between the United States and China, and to correct fallacious impressions given by the American press.

Mr. Lockwood commented: "It is the work of a group of Chinese college students (including women), and shows their concern over the national situation. It is expressed in excellent English and shows surprising restraint and moderation, considering the intensity of feeling."

George Keepi Kao, writer of this first article, is a senior student in the Yenching Journalism department. He plans to continue his study at the University of Missouri, and is at present a regular contributor to the school publications. Mr. Kao's article follows:

The Sino-Japanese Conflict People everywhere are more or less acquainted with the Sino-Japanese conflict which began in September, 1931, with the Japanese invasion of Manchuria, and has since resulted in various complications. The daily papers have been reporting the war Eastern situation as it developed from time to time—the Japanese military occupation of Manchuria, the Shanghai War, the establishment and recognition of "Manchukuo" by Japan, and, latest, the capture of Shanhai and the invasion of Jehol.

While up to the present nothing has as yet been accomplished that will effect a real solution of the problem (or rather, a final cessation of armed aggression) on the part of Japan, there are a number of facts which cannot escape the world's notice. First, thousands of innocent civilians have been killed and a much larger number rendered homeless and destitute and their properties destroyed as a result of Japan's military operations in Chinese territories during the past fifteen months. Second, China has not been able to offer armed resistance against her aggressors except in

TRINITY DRENCHES MILLER'S COHORTS IN 50-27 SPLURGE Selig, Foster Each Capture Firsts as Parmelee is Taken III

Facing a Trinity outfit that swam over its head throughout the meet, the Bowdoin swimming team lost last Friday evening at Hartford by a 50-27 score. Mike Selig and Bob Foster took the customary 100 and 200 yard pieces, but the remaining Polar Bears were held to seconds and thirds. Bill Parmelee, Number One freestyler, was shut out of his usual dozen or so points by unexpectedly being placed on the sick list. Close races throughout, with records going in great profusion, gave the gallery plenty of excitement.

Portland to Have B. J. One on Mar. 17 Masque and Gown Society, having lain in a more or less dormant state since Christmas, sprang into renewed activity last week upon the completion of certain negotiations between Manager Perry and the Portland Dramatic Guild, with the securing of the Playhouse in Portland, definite arrangements have been made to present "B. J. One," the Christmas Houseparty play, starting on the evening of Friday, March 17th. Members of the cast have brushed up on their lines and one rehearsal has already been held, at which time a few necessary revisions in the play manuscript were made. The Dramatic Guild, whose representatives reported favorably on the play when it was first produced, has assured the Masque and Gown a large audience.

WHY TO TELL INDIA'S PROBLEM TOMORROW EVE.

British Lecturer to Picture Home Rule Situation in Mem. Tomorrow

Former President INDIAN ASSEMBLY Sir Frederick One of Widest Known Authorities on Asiatic Problem

Bowdoin's second lecturer from England this year, Sir Frederick Whyte, LL.D., Knight Commander of the Star of India, takes as his subject, "The Road to Home Rule in British India." He lectures tomorrow night in Memorial Hall, at 8:15 o'clock.

Lord Gorell, in his lecture on January 16th, outlined in broad terms the future of the British Empire, serving as a fitting introduction to Sir Frederick's more detailed lecture on India, one unit in the British Commonwealth of nations.

As Sir Frederick has spent a great deal of his life in India, he speaks with authority on India. While President of the Indian Legislative Assembly he was responsible for laying out the foundations of the Parliament in the East. He has also seen service in China as Political Advisor to the Chinese government.

World-known Authority In 1927 he was the leader of the British group at the Honolulu conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations. Because of his intimate association with T. V. Soong during his stay in China, and because of his background in Oriental affairs, Sir Whyte has been frequently consulted by the United States Government.

He was formerly private secretary to Winston Churchill, and for many years was in the House of Commons as Liberal representative from Perth City. Sir Frederick has travelled widely in Europe, America and Asia. He has been honored by the degree of LL.D. in his own University of Edinburgh, and well-known through his many active interests and contacts during the two successful tours in 1919 and 1926, he has received the same honors from McGill University, Montreal, the University of Michigan and Dartmouth College.

He was one of the founders, and from 1917 to 1920 was Joint Editor of the New Europe, the well known weekly paper read by leaders and students of politics. He is author of "Asia in the Twentieth Century," "China and the Foreign Powers," an historical review of their relations; also, "India a Federation," a survey of the principal constitutions of the world with special reference to the relations of the central to the local governments in India.

Prof. Morize of Harvard Describes French Books in Fireplace Parley

Bowdoin College combined, for the second time, with the Alliance Française of Brunswick in bringing Professor Andre Morize of Harvard to the college to deliver a lecture in French. He spoke in the Mouton Union, Saturday evening at eight o'clock on the subject "Qu'est-ce que c'est que la littérature française moderne?"

What romanticism there is in French literature is due chiefly to foreign influence, such as came from Byron and Keats, and from Goethe and Schiller. Poe is among the foreigners responsible for instilling symbolism into the literature of France. Although sometimes difficult for us to understand, French literature is because it is not easily understood. According to Professor Morize their literature is essentially realistic. No Patriotic Usit Revolution Strange as it may seem to us, the literature of France was absolutely free of any expression of love of country until the seeds of the French Revolution were planted in 1789. Not until then has the people of this country loved their land, before they had been fighting to aid their king, now an entirely new idea was placed before them—the country is in danger, fight for France! From that time on humanism and patriotism blended to make up French literature.

Growler's March Issue To Give Lowdown On Profs, Fraternities And Activities

The regular features returning this month include the "Eat the Growler" section devoted to things-not-seen, and heretofore not divulged by the victims, and the brief satirical-biographical sketches of two prominent faculty members.

DAVIS' ORATION 'RED SATURDAY' TAKES '68 PRIZE

Kline, Leo, M'Cormick, Booth are Other Speakers in Senior Competition

A. S. DAVIS RECEIVES UNANIMOUS DECISION Capitalism, Education, Psychology, Labor, Patriots are Subjects

By unanimous vote of the judges Albert Samuel Davis, Jr., was declared winner of the '68 Prize Speaking, held in Memorial Hall last Thursday evening. With his address entitled "Red Saturday." The three judges, Rev. Chauncey W. Goodrich of Brunswick, Mr. Clarence W. Peabody of Portland, and Prof. J. Murray Carroll of Lewiston, chose Davis as the best of the five seniors who had reached the finals in the annual speaking contest.

Delivering the opening speech of the evening, Will M'Cormick, Jr. presented an address entitled "Professional Patriots." Because they attempt to inculcate false principles, the speaker asserted, the professional patriots are a menace to the nation. Organizations like the Woman's Patriot Union interfere in government and educational matters attempting in their false patriotism to replace the truth with falsity.

Former Mayor Thompson of Chicago, a notorious example, attacked the school text books because he considered some of the statements in them traitorous to the nation. In kind patriotism, declared Kline in closing, is one of the chief elements that leads to war and hinders a return to prosperity.

COPELAND TO SHOW MOUNTAIN FLOWERS IN BOSTON ON 13TH

To Feature Natural Scenes of Mountain Growth in Early Spring

Bowdoin's contribution to the annual Horticultural Exhibit to be held in Mechanics' Building, Boston, on the 13th under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be a display of New England mountain flowers set in a miniature rustic scene as they are found in the mountains above two thousand feet. The flowers were gathered by Prof. Manton Copeland from their native environs during the past few months and the display is entirely the work of Prof. Copeland.

Late Bulletin Sets Speaking Dates as April 4 Through 14

DRAMA, FICTION, POETRY, CRITICISM ARE TOPICS List Includes Theodore Dreiser, T. S. Eliot, Elmer Rice, Norman Foerster, Dorothy Canfield, Marc Connelly, and Carl Van Doren

Late yesterday afternoon Professor Wilmot B. Mitchell, chairman of the committee of the faculty in charge of the sixth biennial Bowdoin Institute of Arts and Sciences, announced a list of speakers perhaps unparalleled in the college's history. The Institute of Modern Literature, which will last from April 4-14, includes as lecturers Theodore Dreiser, T. S. Eliot, Elmer Rice, Norman Foerster, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Marc Connelly, and Carl Van Doren.

Although the Institute opened officially on November 8 with William Butler Yeats, and continued on January 18 with John Mansfield, the April session will mark the Institute proper. Round table conferences will be held with each of the speakers on the morning after the formal lecture has been delivered, giving the men of Bowdoin an insight into all the phases of modern literature.

Dreiser to Open Institute Theodore Dreiser, the initial speaker on April 4, needs no introduction to the American reading public. His novels, Sister Carrie, The Genius and An American Tragedy, are familiar to all literate men. His imagination combined with his realism has made him unequalled in the literary world. His topic will be "American Realism."

On April 6 T. S. Eliot, who has been called "the high priest of the younger English poets and essayists," and, by Paul Elmer More, "perhaps the most distinguished master of letters today in the English-speaking world," will speak on "The Poetry of Edward Lear." He has written The Sacred Wood, Ash Wednesday, and The Waste Land, all of which caused literary controversies. At present he is occupying the Charles Eliot Norton Professorship at Harvard.

Rice to Discuss Theatre A most popular and distinguished American dramatist, Elmer Rice, will speak on April 7, on "The Theatre as a Social Force." His plays, such as For the Defense, The Adding Machine, Counselor-at-Law, The Little Rascals, The People, and Street Scene, the 1929 Pulitzer Prize play, have enjoyed huge successes in New York.

Norman Foerster, one of the greatest of the present American novelists, will speak on April 10, using for his topic, "The Humanitarian Illusion." He is known as the editor of the widely-discussed symposium, Humanism

DEAN COMMENTS ON HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL RATE PLAN Talks for Particular Benefit of Men Working Way Through College

Discussing the qualities demanded by the Harvard Business School on its rating sheet and the application of these qualities to college undergraduates, Dean Nixon spoke in Chapel last Friday morning. His talk was intended for the particular benefit of those students who are making their way through college at a sacrifice to themselves and their parents. "My text this morning is a rating sheet which has been used for admission by the Harvard Business School, for this morning I wish to call to your attention the kinds of qualities and business concerns about prospective employees, and this Harvard rating sheet is typical."

N. Y. U. DEBATORS TO COME HERE MARCH 15 New York University will send a two-man debating team here March 15 to face a Bowdoin delegation in a return debate on the subject "Resolved: that the United States should agree to the cancellation of the Inter-allied war debts." The contest will be held in the Mouton Union lounge. Speakers, who will represent Bowdoin on the negative side, have not yet been selected.

BANKING HOLIDAY Prof. Morgan B. Cushing will discuss "The Banking Holiday" this evening at eight o'clock in the Union, under the auspices of the Bowdoin Forum. Everyone is urged to attend.

Financial Plight

Pointing toward a none-too rosy future, President Sills last fall predicted that the economic condition of the United States would become worse, instead of better, during the ensuing year. Last week banks all over the country suspended operations temporarily—but for an extremely embarrassing interlude, short though it may be. The pinch caused by lack of hard cash is being felt keenly even within Bowdoin's comparatively sheltered academic confines.

Along with the sudden financial moratorium ordered by President Roosevelt, came an even more bitter piece of news for Bowdoin. It is one which will affect faculty members in particular, though the psychological effect may be felt throughout the undergraduate environs. Curtis Publishing Company, in which the college is a large stockholder, passed a quarterly dividend; and faculty members, whose salaries have already been nominally reduced ten per cent, will receive no bonus this year.

With college revenues already curtailed by decreased income on stock-holdings, Bowdoin faces a cramping—if temporary—curtailment. President Sills' Wednesday Chapel talk was darkly foreboding, though he expressed confidence—and a measure of hope—for the next few months to come. The campus realization of the country's financial plight must needs come in an indirect way, cut off as the college is from actual contact with broader economic centers.

Moulton Union will extend reasonable credit and accept checks, though literally speaking there is "no gold in the coffers". The college office is prepared, should an emergency arise, to provide a cash fund for unusual situations. Hardest hit for the moment are fraternity treasuries and stewards' departments. The one bright ray of comfort is the fact that grocery establishments have unanimously declared for credit extension. A radio news flash yesterday stated that "the one worry of University of Pennsylvania students is 'how will we eat?'"

At least Bowdoin will eat, and profiting by the humorless situation, an opportunity-seizing Moulton Union may regain lost prestige by a lenient credit system, and an exhibition of Good Samaritanism.

Hour Examinations

The scheduling of hour examinations next Monday and Tuesday is unfair to a great number of fraternity men who are forced to play the host over the week end to a number of visitors to the Bowdoin campus. The week end of the Interfraternity and the Inter-scholastic Track Meets is recognized as one during which a number of sub-freshmen are expected to visit the campus.

The participants in the schoolboy meet, a great number of whom are Bowdoin sub-freshmen themselves, swell the list of house guests. It is not a hard duty to act as host to these men for a period of two or three days. But if the College sponsors such activities, it seems only fair to recognize the responsibilities of the undergraduates during that period. It would hardly seem that the two days immediately following are the only convenient dates for hour examinations.

Referenda

Practical expedients for the crystallization of "campus opinion" are not quite as scarce as the usual vagueness of undergraduate opinion on various recurring problems would seem to show. Anything of enough importance to demand definite statistical measurement of the desires of the student body is generally referred to the fraternity houses. Ordinarily this is the only way in which a vote of any kind can be taken with the assurance that most undergraduates will be reached. Summons to meetings, notably class meetings, are very often met with indifference. Occasionally the ORIENT has been optimistic enough to hold a student poll. The results have not been very discouraging there.

But there is still another method—the use of referenda at the annual elections of the Student Council. The simplicity of this method is obvious, so obvious that it can easily be overlooked. But it may well serve some useful purpose. A single line at the bottom of the ballot with space to check for or against would be enough. It would take little cooperation between student organizations and the Student Council to put this into practice. And it would be a welcome opportunity for the President, the Dean, the Student Council itself, perhaps, and various Bowdoin organizations to get statistics and possibly to find the answer to campus problems.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor: The Masque and Gown of Bowdoin College at the present time is facing a most serious crisis. This club today stands in the mind of the undergraduates at a level decidedly below any organization profiting from the beneficence of the Blanket Tax.

B. J. One is the play selected as representative of Bowdoin's craft and best efforts. The several reasons for this choice do not in any degree offset the serious deficiencies of the play itself. B. J. One is an investment of some hundred dollars, B. J. One must go to Portland to pay for itself financially. Too, any presentation consuming so much time originally rehearsal is considered by the players as a waste of effort if no series of performances follows the first playing. The drama-comedy is of that sort which does not with conflict in men's souls but rather with the attack and counter-attack in a price war on international steel markets.

Of the play when it was described to him by one of the leading players, John Masfield said that doubtless it was written by a man who had something to say but who knew nothing or less of the rules of dramatic expression. Said he in addition, that drama and comedy are the two sides of a coin, the two sides of the same conflict between two minds, and the lookout watches to know the stronger of the two souls. In B. J. One the final act, the only commendable scene, was the play within the play. The drama of the piece is but a prelude to a realistic setting of the Anglo-American situation in the 19th century.

It appreciate the sincere interest which certain members of the Masque and Gown are taking in modern drama, but I do not feel that the College and the club should suffer because these members desire to express their interest in a production as hopelessly unfit as B. J. One. Much better to devote that effort and energy to the creation of a little theatre where frequent plays may be produced at small expense. The ballyhoo of such an initiator expression of Bowdoin's interest in the world would be as advantageous to this nucleus as it would be dangerous to that interest were the players to take B. J. One on the road.

THE BOWDOIN ORIENT

Six Honorary Bowdoin Alumni Die Between December-February

During the last few months six prominent holders of honorary degrees from Bowdoin have died. Numbered among these were two distinguished members of the literary world, a famous engineer, a former Bowdoin professor, a minister and a retired naval captain.

These included: Melrose E. Hersey, A.M., Dr. Lawrence F. Abbott, Litt.D., John J. Carly, M.S., Charles H. Smith, Litt.D., Rev. James S. Williamson, M.D., and Capt. Charles H. McLellan, M.S.

By Miss Hersey's death, on February 2nd; there remain only two more living women who have received honorary degrees from the college.

A distinguished author, editor and business man passed away at the death of Dr. Lawrence F. Abbott, February 7th, in his seventy-third year. Dr. Abbott was born in Brooklyn in 1859, and was graduated from Amherst in 1881. From 1891 until 1923 he was the publisher of the Outlook magazine. Through his association with the New York Life Insurance Company, as its secretary, he became an intimate friend of the late Calvin Coolidge.

Dr. Abbott was secretary to Theodore Roosevelt during the latter's European tour made in 1910. He also edited Roosevelt's European and African addresses when they were published in 1910, and was the author of the article in the Encyclopedia Britannica on this former president. Bowdoin conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters on Dr. Abbott in 1922.

John J. Carly, M.S., one of the country's most famed telephone engineers, Mr. John J. Carly, died on December 27, 1932, at his home in New York City. From 1916 until 1930, when he retired, Mr. Carly was a vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Charles H. Smith, Litt.D. In the death of Charles H. Smith on February 14 Bowdoin has lost an old friend who had served on its faculty sixteen years. He was born in 1862 in Beirut, Syria. In the year 1882 he was graduated from Bowdoin College, where he was taught for two years following his graduation. The next year, 1874, he came to Bowdoin, and for thirteen years was engaged as a professor in mathematics and for three more years as professor in history and political science.

He returned to Yale in 1894 where he served on the faculty until 1919 when he was made Professor Emeritus. Professor Smith had been actively connected with the Royal Historical Society and with the American Historical Society. He was an honorary member of the National Geographic Society as well as the Maine Historical Society. The College conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters on Professor Smith in 1894.

Rev. James S. Williamson, D.D. On December 2, 1932, an automobile accident brought the life of the Rev. James S. Williamson tragically to an end. He was born in 1850 in Scotland. He received his training for the ministry at the Bangor Theological Seminary. After his graduation from this institution he held many pastorates throughout Maine before he went to New York, where he served as pastor in the Kingsburgh Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn. The Rev. Mr. Williamson received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity by Bowdoin in 1910.

Capt. Charles H. McLellan, M.S. Although Captain McLellan was not a Bowdoin graduate, the fact that he was a native of Brunswick has always connected him closely to the college. He died on January 25th in his ninety-third year. Captain McLellan's naval career began in his sixteenth year when he went away to sea. During the Civil War he rendered invaluable service to the Navy. He also saw action in the Spanish-American War in which he commanded convoy ships. To many, he will be remembered for his invention of the self-baiting surf-bait used in the coast guard. Bowdoin conferred the honorary degree of Master of Science on Captain McLellan in 1920.

MASTERY OF MOODS TOPIC OF SPEAKER IN SUNDAY-CHAPEL

The Rev. Charles H. Helsey Says Self-Knowledge is Also Important

"Religion is the strongest power available when we are sunk in despair." This was the theme of the Reverend Charles H. Helsey of the High Street Congregational Church of Auburn, who spoke in Chapel last Sunday.

"An one time," began Mr. Helsey, "we say, 'How good it is to live'; a little later on this becomes 'What's the good of doing anything?' At one moment we are filled with exaltation, and the next we are plunged into the valley of despair. It is true that we are all animals; always we carry with us certain characteristics of the ape and of the savage. These again we are still more like peevish babies."

Just how can we master our various moods? To this question the Rev. Mr. Helsey replies, that one way to do it is to keep the best on top; that is, to hold ourselves resolutely to the highest level. Jesus said that we must become humble minded. We also need self-knowledge, a knowledge of how we stand in relation to the world around us.

There are various points at which we break down and let moodiness get the best of us. It is a result of physical fatigue or after a series of periods of spiritual stress. When others achieve success, we may become discouraged and lose self-control in the face of unfair criticism, or when we are in the society of people whom we dislike. In order to overcome all this it is necessary to know what one's breaking point is, and to know what pattern it follows.

There are two leading moods, according to Mr. Helsey. Sometimes we want to abandon all ideals and let passion rule us, or else we may become cynical, saying life is hard. During the Revolution, Washington is said to have spoken these simple words before a group of discouraged Connecticut soldiers: "I have great confidence in the men from Connecticut. This message, because it came from a great man, inspired the soldiers greatly. Religion is the strongest motive power available for those in the black mood of despair. However, God doesn't do the work for us; we must help ourselves since we have the power. We must meet problems in a victorious sense. When friends fall we can still go to the greatest power of all—Religion. Religion can make us free."

DEAN COMMENTS ON HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL RATE PLAN

(Continued from Page 1) Personality "Appearance and manner, ability to meet people, tact." Well, we don't change overnight to an Apollo, Belvedere, Beau Brummel, or the young Achilles of the automobile ad, even if we want to—though even one outfit of the right clothes, and a decent attention to one's toilet can help tremendously. One of the most successful, and most likeable, Bowdoin graduates I know was born homely as well as tall, and has stayed so; but he didn't long stay unmanly and ungracious. His acquired character traits made him who lost their jobs because their employers couldn't stand their dirty finger nails and general uncleanliness. But you can improve beyond recognition his manner, his ability to meet people, and his tact, if he chooses to and keeps his eyes open and uses his opportunities. And I know of no better time and place for a start than Freshman year in college.

Industry "Energy, perseverance, application to work, interest, ability to concentrate." All of these traits are more natural to some than to others, of course. But if there's any man with brains enough to get into this college who thinks he can't improve from 100 to 500 per cent in these particulars, I wish he would call at my office from 1-5, or at my house from 8-11.

CARPENTER TAKES ALEX. SPEAKING BY RECTIFYING "KONGO"

Charles Williams, Carpenter '34 won the Alexander Prize Speaking contest Monday night, with his stirring rendering of Vachel Lindsay's "Kongo". Philip G. Parker '35 was awarded second prize in the Memorial Hall contest. Six men competed.

First to speak was Charles Williams, Carpenter '34, the winner of the contest. He gave "Kongo", a poem by Vachel Lindsay. Depending largely on tone modulation for its weird effect, it was remarkably well handled by the declaimer.

Next Speakers Second on the program was Raymond Pech '36 who rendered five varied selections of poetry. They were given in the following order: the third and fourth stanzas from the ode on "Intimations of Immortality" from Recollections of Early Childhood, by William Wordsworth; "Ode to the West Wind", by Percy Bysshe Shelley; "Reluctance", by Robert Frost; "Jim Bludd", by John Jay; "Blades of Grass", by Stephen Crane.

Next, Lew Tenneyson's poem, "The Voyage of Maeldune", was rendered by Caspar Frank Cowan '36. It was a difficult piece to interpret, but was given competently by the speaker.

Charles Fox Kahlil '34 who followed, gave "Soldier of Fortune", by Robert Service. His deep voice was admirably suited to the spirit of the poem. The final selection of the evening was a scene from Lord Lytton's play, "Richard III".

Round tables will be held with each of the speakers on the morning after they have spoken, giving the student a chance to interview them personally and ask questions concerning their respective fields.

UNION CREDIT EXTENSION

Manager Donovan D. Lancaster of Moulton Union has announced that the college common cafeteria will extend credit to undergraduates, or accept checks. He cash change will be given for the latter. He also suggests that purchase of the coupon books, giving a five percent discount, would aid both students and the Union during the bank moratorium.

INSTITUTE NAMES ARE RELEASED

The widely read novelist and short story writer, Dorothy Canfield Fisher (Dorothy Canfield) will lecture on Tuesday, April 11, on "The Short Story." Mrs. Fisher has written The Moulton's Mother, The Brimming Cup, Rough Hewn, among other works, but is chiefly known for her short stories, which appear regularly in the popular magazines. Second Pulitzer Winner Will Speak Marc Connelly, second playwright on the Institute program, has both written and directed plays which have been among the most successful productions in recent years. With George S. Kaufman he has written Duley, The Ladies, and The Beggar on Horseback. His Green Pastures, adapted from Board Bradford's negro stories, was the Pulitzer Prize winner in 1931. He was also one of the founders and contributors to "The New Yorker" magazine. He will speak on April 12, discussing "The Actor-Manager".

Carl Van Doren, author, editor and critic, is editor-in-chief of the Literary Guild. He is the author of biographies of Swift, Peacock and James Branch Cabell, and of a recent study of Sinclair Lewis. He will be the final speaker on "Criticism as Experience".

Round tables will be held with each of the speakers on the morning after they have spoken, giving the student a chance to interview them personally and ask questions concerning their respective fields.

Coal... silk stockings... meat — and the telephone

Keenly aware of the problems of business, large and small, Bell System commercial men are constantly devising special telephone plans to custom-fit service to the user's needs.

For example, a plan they worked out for a coal distributor helped him to contact 50% more dealers. A manufacturer, using a telephone selling plan, sold 700 dozen pairs of hosiery through one Long Distance call. A great meat packer handles complex sales and distribution problems efficiently with the aid of planned Long Distance and private wire services.

Systematic telephone plans are helping many users to build business—cut costs—handle collections—unify nationwide organizations—increase profits. And Bell System men are seeking still other ways to make the telephone more useful.

BRADBURY DEBATE TRIALS ON FRIDAY

Trials in the annual Bradbury Prize Debate will be held next Friday evening in the Debating Hall of the Library. The subject selected for this year's contest is "Resolved: that the United States Government should establish and maintain a bureau of consumer's research". Names of those wishing to participate in the trials were to have been in the hands of Prof. Childs last Sunday. No definite date for the final debate has yet been set, although it probably will take place before the Spring vacation.

Expressing doubt as to the seriousness of the bank moratorium called by Pres. Roosevelt, Pres. Silis stated that if the period were greatly lengthened the college would probably arrange a cash fund to aid students in emergency cases. As the tuition bills have been paid the college itself will not be inconvenienced by the bank holiday. Because of the sound condition of the Maine banks, the temporary closing should not involve any serious consequences.

great men" the speaker considered the importance of psychology in modern civilization. Since it was discovered that illness is not confined to the body alone the psychologist has held a vital place in the modern world. Because he is searching for underlying reasons he is the apostle of improvement. If his technical language is obscure to us that should not brand him a faker; it is clear to him, in the courtroom, the school, and the college the psychologist is found today holding a position of vital importance. Denouncing the Victorian Age for its smugness and sentimentality, Donald P. McCormick spoke on "Facing Reality: A Requisite of Progress". The only natural law, that has proved practical, the speaker said, is the law of progress. Because man has been ignorant of life he is an idealist. We cannot hope to rise if we cling to worn-out ideas. Capitalism, practical before the war, is no longer a success. The self-satisfaction of the Victorians was an enemy to progress. The world war has wiped out much of this and has left us with a more rational attitude toward life. Intelligence is the keynote of progress and the healthy spirit of dissatisfaction is a good sign in modern life.

Cleric's Talk

The Reverend Ralph W. Sockman, well known as an author, clergyman and scholar, is to speak on the subject of "International Relations" on Monday evening March 13 in Memorial Hall. Mr. Sockman, who is at the Madison Avenue Methodist Church in New York City, is especially well fitted to speak on this subject, as he has made a study of the field, and was in Europe during the World War. Mr. Sockman has frequently substituted for Dr. S. Parkes Cadman in the latter's weekly radio broadcasts, and is widely known for his radio talks. He is also an author of note, and his books "Map of Mysteries" and "Morals of Tomorrow" have earned him an enviable position among contemporary writers on religious themes. Among other activities, Mr. Sockman has been secretary of the Intercollegiate Y.M.C.A. During the war he went abroad in the service of the Y.M.C.A. At present he is President of the Federation of Churches, Director of Union Theological Seminary, and a member of the Board of Methodist Missions.

announced a victim of pleurisy. He was withdrawn from the meet, and sent to a hospital, taking with him chances for a few more points in the quarter mile and final relay. Parmelee was fortunate in being attended by Dr. John A. Wentworth '09 and later by Dr. Blanchard, another Bowdoin graduate.

Trinity Sweeps Dash

The 50-yard dash was swept by Mowbray and Hall of Trinity, while Kit Carson trailed in for third. Mike Selig, still smarting from a couple of mean tumbles taken during an afternoon workout, showed complete control of the board in the diving event, and easily took first with his spectacular spins and twists. Carson followed Parmelee by a single point in his share to take third.

In the 440-yard grind, Cary beat out a second place, well ahead of Ellisworth, who threatened early in the race. Bob Foster next just missed a new pool record in the backstroke without serious competition, and Jack Trout made off with third place honors. Coit, Trinity breaststroker, shook off Johnny Beale after half the 200-yard swim, and proceeded to create another record for his college. Bill Esson closed up fast to snare third, his first scoring in varsity competition.

Bob Foster, who had already swum twice, took a close second in the 100-yard freestyle event, pushing Mortimer to near-record time. The final relay went to the home team by a goaly distance.

The summary:
300-yard medley relay—Won by Trinity (Adams, Coit, Mortimer); second, Bowdoin (Foster, Whitmore, McLeod). Time—3m. 30.5s. (New College record).

220-yard freestyle—Won by Moten (T); second, Parmelee (B); third, Cary (B). Time—2m. 38.5s. (New pool record).

50-yard freestyle—Won by Mowbray (T); second, Hall (T); third, Carson (B). Time—26.7s.

100-yard freestyle—Won by Mortimer (T); second, Foster (B); third, Day (T). Time—49.1s.

SIGMA NU FIVE DOWN
D. U. TO TAKE LEAD

Led by Palmer, the Sigma Nu basketball team tripped up the Delta Upsilon five 33-18 last Thursday night, thereby winning first place in league B, and the right to meet the powerful Deke team in the play-off for the interfraternity championship. The same evening the Non-fraternity basketballers, with Carter and Crystal scoring heavily, upset the Kappa Sig outfit to the tune of 40-24. By virtue of this victory, Non-fraternity stands in second place in league A, having lost only one game.

In the Sigma Nu-D.U. game Ross Palmer scored 20 points alone. The Delta U's could not keep him covered, and he sank his shots almost at ease. Uehlein and Travis did most of the scoring for the losers, but the team lacked the coordination of the Sigma Nu's. A D.U. surge in the last quarter served only to keep the score from being larger. By his work in this game the Sigma Nu star, Palmer, demonstrated that he is easily the best shot in either league.

The league standings are as follows:

League A
	W	L	Pts.
D.K.E.	5	0
Non-F.	4	1
Kappa Sig	3	2
Chi Psi	2	3
Beta	0	4

FROSH TRACK TEAM DEFEATS BRIDGTON

In another spectacular contest, Captain Good and his cinder mates, increased their wins to three when they overcame Bridgton's track cluster with a score of 59 2-3 to 35 1-4 here last Wednesday.

The strength of the Freshmen in the running events amassed for them a comfortable margin of points, so that the meet was almost in the bag before the field events began. Good, as usual the backbone of the running events, continued his glowing performances by turning in record-equaling time for the 40 yard dash. In addition to this, Phil smashed the record for the high hurdles, but the mark will not be officially recorded as Good toppled two hurdles.

Marvin in the 600, Grey in the 1000 and Soule in the broad jump, contributed brilliantly to the Fresh and of the score, taking firsts in their respective events.

In the 300 Keene of Bridgton, winning the pole on the low, ran a fine race to nose out Good and Marcy in 33 4-5, a whole second short of the Good-Marcy performance in the Hebron meet a week previous. Stevens of Bridgton ran a rather slow mile but it was good enough to edge Prouty of Bowdoin by less than a second.

In the abot and high jump the Freshmen were unable to offer real competition, but chimaxed the contest when their relay team of Maxcy, Soule, Good, and Marvin won with new fast time, eclipsing Bridgton and making it Bowdoin's meet by a wide margin.

College Owns 6000 Shares of Curtis Pub. Co. Stock

A gift from Mr. Cyrus H. K. Curtis in 1929, the college possesses 6000 shares of the Curtis Publishing Company cumulative preferred stock. The $10,500 loss which the college will suffer because of this omission of payment on April 1 will mean the suspension of salary bonuses. When Mr. Curtis made this present to the college he specified that the income should be employed to increase faculty salaries and create pensions. The fund is divided in two parts, one of $500,000 for the increase of salaries, and the other of $100,000 to take care of faculty pensions.

Although this omission of dividend payment is a serious blow to a part of the college finances it will probably do no lasting harm. As the Curtis Publishing Company is extremely sound financially the omission of payment will be only a temporary measure. Any increase in salaries will be postponed for some time.

"MAYBE it's back to Nature. Maybe it's something else. I don't know just what it is, but somehow or other I've just got to slip out in the woods and sit down on a log. I always take the old pipe along. Thinking somehow seems easier when you are smoking a pipe. I can fill up my pipe with Granger, and somehow just seem to see things clearer than at any other time.

"Don't know what it is about Granger, but it must be made for pipes—real pipe tobacco.

"Somehow, there's a flavor and aroma about Granger I never found in any other tobacco. When I pack my old pipe tight and good with these big Granger flakes, it's about the coolest smoke I ever enjoyed. It makes me downright pipe hungry every time I look at the package."

Some years ago we made a painstaking, scientific study to find out, if we could, the kind of tobacco best suited for pipes. Down in the Blue Grass regions of Kentucky, we found a tobacco called White Burley. There is a grade of this tobacco between the kind used for chewing and the varieties suitable for cigarettes that is best suited for pipes. This tobacco is used in Granger. This tobacco is prepared by a method worked out many years ago by Mr. J. N.

Wellman. It gives Granger a fragrance and mellowness that pipe smokers like, and makes it burn to a clean, dry ash. Granger never gums a pipe.

Granger has not been on sale very long, but it has come to be popular, and there is this much about it: We have yet to know of a man who started smoking it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

N. E. SCHOOLBOYS VIE FOR TRACK SUPREMACY SAT.

Thirty Prep - High Schools
Send Tracksters to Hyde Fric

Bowdoin's field week end Indoor Track and Jamboree reaches its climax Saturday in the Hyde Cage as the schoolboy cinder tracksters vie for honors in the annual Bowdoin Interscholastic.

These games, which are yearly increasing in popularity, will attract top-notch competitors from preparatory school track fields throughout New England and one from New Jersey. The Prep school division lists sixteen institutions, while the high school section will find some fifteen schools entered.

For the first time in years Huntington School of Boston, champions in the '32 Prep field, will not be represented at the Interscholastic. Everett High, winner among the high schools last year, is also not expected to defend its division title.

The record-book favors St. John's and Newark in the Prep division and South Portland, Deering, and Lynn Classical in the high school competition.

Against the B. U. freshman tracksters, St. John's monopolized every first place and took all others excepting two seconds and a third, in a recent dual meet. The Danvers contingent has entered twenty-six performers in Saturday's meet. Newark Prep, well remembered for the time when its four man team ran riot in the Interscholastic games a few years ago, will send ten men.

Prep school division: Brewster Academy, Bridgton Academy, Browne and Nichols, Coburn Classical Country Day School of Newton, Fryeburg Academy, Gould Academy, Maine Central Institute, Hebron Academy, Moses Brown, New Prep, St. John's Prep, Newark Prep, Wassookeag, Clark School, New Hampton.

High school division: Berlin, N. H., Cony, Crosby, Deering, Edward Little, Fairhaven, Mass., Worcester High School of Commerce, Lynn Classical, Morse, Portland, Skowhegan, South Portland, Thornton Academy, Lawrence (Fairfield, Me.).

WHITE MERMEN TAKE DRUBBING AT HANDS OF WORCESTER TECH

Mike Selig in Dive and Bob Foster in Backstroke Take Firsts

The final dual meet of the season saw the ridden Bowdoin swimming team go down in a dismal defeat at the hands of Worcester Polytechnic Institute last Saturday at Worcester. Franklin of the victors was the outstanding performer of the engagement, setting a new college record in 220-yard swim and equalling college record in the century dash. Only two first places went to White tankmen, to Mike Selig and Bob Foster in the dive and backstroke respectively.

McNulty, Worcester, backstroke, opened the show by piling up a lead in the medley relay which Bob Whitmore and Jack Trotter could not seem to overcome in their laps. Bob Posten, filling in as a distance freestyler, lost a hard tight race for second in the 220 to Wiley. The 40-yard dash was another hairbreadth decision, for Carson touched just behind McElroy and Force.

Diving Close Tilt

Less than a point separated second and third place in the dive, with Fogg totalling between Selig and Carson for number two position. Notably showing the effects of strict training, Captain Jack Trotter, usually a backstroke, stayed in front of Bergstrom to take second in the tough quarter-mile pull. In the backstroke, Posten and Trotter, in a fast finish well ahead of McNulty, only other entry.

Falvey and Luczynski swept the breaststroke, the former breaking the pool record in 2 minutes, 43 2/5 seconds. For the first two-thirds of the 100-yard freestyle race Jack McLeod held even with both Franklin and Wiley, but turns came a little too often and slowed down the Bowdoin dashman enough to give him third.

The final relay was closer than might have been expected, Carson, Selig, Foster and McLeod each swimming about the same time for his forty yards. The fact that each of these men had gone through his paces at least once before is some evidence of the loss of man power the team has suffered. Three men were called on to enter the maximum legal number of events.

SPORT SIDELIGHTS

That Interfraternity 880 between Art Fox and Vale Marvin will be THE race of the evening in our estimation. With both performers capable of 1:16 at the regular 100 yard indoor distance, it's going to be a terrific battle over the half-mile route. The Interfrat record of 2:00 3/4 for the distance is almost certain to take it on the chin.

With the Zeta Psi tracksters highly favored to take the meet in a walk, interest shifts to the scramble for second place, notably among Chi Psi, Delta U., and individual showings. The universal query is: How many firsts will Mac get?

Coach Magee's new ruling that only those men who will go out for varsity track in the spring will be allowed to compete Friday night, has slashed a number of competitors from the list of starters. However, most of those who are thus shut out are of "second-sixteen" classification, though there are a few exceptions such as Robbins of Kappa Sigma, a placeman in the '32 pole vault.

A little color is promised for the State Series baseball loop through the offer of Bill Carrigan, former Red Sox pilot, to coach the Bates diamond hopefids. Dave Marey, regular coach, is still recuperating in Boston from a stubborn illness.

Ow! What a bombshell that was that wrecked Mike Ryan's track cluster at Colby. No less than twenty track and field men, including some of the best cinder artists in college have either left the Waterville institution or are ineligible for competition. The scholastic ban has been dealt to such stars as Cliff Veysey, who was an Olympic prospect a year ago in the 10,000 meters, Jack Springer, the best weight man at Colby, Stan Beane, former Bowdoin frosh star, and a host of others.

Bowdoin's band of gymnasts jump from the frying pan into the proverbial fire later in the month, when they take on the Dartmouth tumbler. After trimming the Bears 44-9 in Boston, Temple journeyed to Hanover Saturday and lost to the Big Green 33-21. That leaves Bowdoin, un-sh.

There's one man on the varsity track squad who has always held the admiration of the writer. The gentleman in mind is Johnny Boyd, who comes as near as anyone in these parts to a natural athlete. Johnny can put the shot, throw the discus, high jump, pole vault, broad jump, and hurl the javelin with equally impressive marks. If there were a state deatation event we'd extend the palm to Johnny without content. And his golf score, boy, what a men!

GYM TEAM SUFFERS DOUBLE TROUNCING

Bowdoin gymnasts went down to defeat twice on the same day when they met the Temple and M.I.T. gym teams in Cambridge last Friday. The Engineers defeated the Bowdoin team 44-10, while Temple smothered the Polar Bears with a score of 44-9. Peabody, Iwanowicz, Kemper and point ahead of Holy Cross and half a point behind Dartmouth.

Join failed to place in the parallel bars, in the flying rings and in the rope-climb.

NIBLOCK TAKES 4TH IN NATIONAL MEET

Howie Niblock of Bowdoin took fourth place in the 16-pound shot put in the I.C.A.A.A.A. games in New York last Saturday night. Tom Gilbane of Brown took first in the event, and Niblock's heave was 45 feet, 3 1/2 inches. In the final summary Bowdoin had scored two points, one on the side-horse, and Iwanowicz took 2nd in the tumbling, while Kemper was fifth in the same event. Bow-

Balanced Zeta Track Team Conceded First in Fri. Meet

DEKE, CHI PSI, DELTA U., DISPUTE SECOND
Inter-Frat Records in 440, 880, and Shot Likely to Go; McLaughlin, Good, and Shot for Individual Honors in Annual Intramural Cinder Festival

Zeta Psi, with scoring potentialities in every event on the program, is the universal favorite to repeat its romp of last season over the brilliant field in the Annual Interfraternity Indoor Games Friday. As a year ago, the battle for runner up honors, notably among Delta Kappa Epsilon, Chi Psi, and Delta Upsilon, will provide the real team competition of the meet.

The names of McLaughlin, Good, Adams, Niblock, Marvin, Soule, et cetera, all of the Zetas loom largely on the horizon, and boost by far the greatest balanced assembly of cinder stars of all entrants. This organization as a complete team in itself would gladden the bristles of nine-out-of-ten track coaches as a team worthy of most any intercollegiate line-up in the business.

The Dukes, represented by such performers as Briggs, Gray, Larson, J. Boyd, Maxey, and Lyons, have some degree of balance and are the logical troupe to push the Zetas. However, their strength is problematic, and faced with the likelihood that the Zeta headliners will double up in events, and in the cases of Good and McLaughlin enter five or six with equally good prospects of dominating, the Dukes appear on paper as no match for their sister College street mecca of tracksters.

D.U. and Chi Psi Will Press

Although Zeta Psi and D.K.E. should save the day, the Delta Upsilon and Chi Psi outfits will be in there with formidable entries to dispute the Dukes for second money. Headed by Freddy Burton, Art Fox, and freshman Grey and Prouty, D.U. will do much to monopolize the prominence in the distance hops, but as for the field events they will be absolutely nil in power outside of Gerdson, who may garner a point or so in the pole vault, with Stan Low, Burton, and Fox remaining from last year's championship relay quartet. D.U. will show to advantage here. Grey will undoubtedly complete the four.

Chi Psi looks to Elmer Hutchinson, Nelson Tibbets, Ned Packard, and Fred Mann to assert their authority in the longer grinds, Skillings in the dash and hurdles, Ingalls in the shot, Tewksbury in the weight, and Jimmy Crowell in the vault.

The lower flight will afford a warm scrap for scoring distinction, and although Kappa Sig, T.D., Psi U., A.T.O., Sigma Nu, Beta, A.D. and

BATTERY CHIEF PROBLEM AHEAD OF COACH WELLS

No Tried Backstops on Deck and Moundsmen Few and Far Between

Development of two or three workable battery combinations will be the major objective of Coach Lian Wells during the early baseball priming sessions, now being conducted daily in the cage.

With Pete Lewis, the only regular backstop of last season's team, unavailable, and Bob Dowling, first string southpaw of the zone too strong '32 mound staff, also an absentee, Wells faces no simple task.

Veteran infield

The remainder of the nine shapes up well, with a veteran on hand for each post. Jack McLeod at first, George Bennett at second, Bart Bosidy at short, and Dave Merrill at third, will give Bowdoin a seasoned infield, while Al Kent in right field, Herbie Hempel in center, and Arno Koempel in the left pasture, appear on paper as a powerful trio for the outer-stretches. To bolster these regulars are a host of yearlings of unknown caliber along with a cluster of ball tossers up from the J. V. groups, notably Cy Perkins, who should give McLeod a stiff fight for the initial cushion assignment.

Lettermen Doug Walker and Captain Dave Means are losing the rubber for Wells a second year, and Bryant Emerson and Russ Hall come from the junior varsity to swell the pitching roster. Of these four Emerson has the most natural ability, but has encountered endless difficulty in keeping his stuff under control. Frosh slamben of repute include David D. Savage, Orville B. Seagrave, and Wilbur E. Menter.

Unlike the fairly strong aggregation of last year, the current Psi U entry appears woefully weak with Paul Ambler the chief hope. T.D. looks to Mal Walker, Bob Porter, or Johnny Baker for points and the Betas are banking on Mal Hughes in the 35 pound weight.

GIRL DISAPPEARS
IN THIN AIR

ILLUSION:
The Oriental girl reclines on a sheet of plate glass supported by two slaves. The magician waves a white sheet in front of the pretty maiden... pronounces a few magic words... Fresto! She has disappeared in thin air.

EXPLANATION:
"Disappearing" acts are among the most popular in the repertoire of the magician. Dogs, horses, girls, whole rooms disappear—whisked into wings, dropped through trapdoors, hidden by mirrors. But this "disappearance" is a bit different. One of the "slaves" is a hollow dummy. When the magician holds up the sheet the little lady disappears completely—into the convenient figure of the dummy.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED ...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

There is also a trick of cigarette advertising, whereby a few magic words are used to create the illusion of "Coolness."

EXPLANATION: Coolness is determined by the speed of burning. Fresh cigarettes, retaining their full moisture, burn more slowly... smoke cooler. Parched, dry cigarettes burn fast. They taste hot. This makes the method of wrapping very important.

Improperly wrapped cigarettes begin to dry out as soon as packed.

Camels are cooler because they come in the famous Humidor Pack of welded, three-ply, MOISTURE-PROOF cellophane... and because they contain better tobaccos.

A cigarette that is fresh, full of natural moisture, and blended from choice, ripe tobaccos tastes cooler than one that is harsh and acrid. For coolness, choose a fresh cigarette, made from costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Try Camels... give your taste a chance to sense the difference. You'll appreciate it!

YEARLY the stewards of the eleven Friday house, cheer on their hands in holy horror as an avalanche of scholastic athletes tumble upon the college. Approximately twenty men must be quartered and fed at the house, at the latter's expense. The cost of food is considerable—in trying times when unpaid bills cause many a gray hair to worried stewards whose books are generally in the red.

But outweighing these disadvantages—perhaps—are the benefits derived from having potential college men see Bowdoin in activity. Criticism directed at these meets usually centers around the fact that premen and high school athletes often depart feeling their reception has been cordial.

PERHAPS the whole atmosphere of these meets is one of hastily prepared receptions, of rooms begrudgingly loaned, of meals served at inconvenient moments in overcrowded dining halls. A suggestion directed to the Athletics Department would be to start arrangements earlier in order that fraternity houses expending fifteen visitors host to not suddenly find themselves most to twenty-five.

OF ALL institutions where the pinch for ready cash should be felt little—if at all, said President Sills recently, “the college is the best example.” Bearing out his statement, Bowdoin men exhibited little concern over the embarrassing bank moratorium, even after it had been extended a week longer than originally anticipated.

JUNIORS meeting in conference with President Sills were offered free reign rather to make or break the memorial custom of Ivy Day. Where, as there was never any doubt as to the continuance of social festivities and the annual Mas house-party, the question of the hour is: Shall formal Ivy ceremonies be dropped? Representatives from eleven fraternities, and from the non-fraternity groups and numerous in favor of retaining traditional rites; they declared as traditional in need for building up campus-wide interest in the ceremonies.

WHY NOT, it was suggested, hold outdoor exercises, instead of keeping the Ivy Day observances cooped up inside a gloomy Memorial Hall? Given a bright day, open-air games of some sort would be the sort of things of ill-fated previous years might regain their pristine glamor.

Modern houseparties, and picnics which Bowdoin men favor, are merely significant. If a changing undergraduate order. But it would be a pity to forego Ivy Day ceremonies.

RUMOR HAS it that there will be no Ivy play by Messing and Gown this year. While the late Ivy dramas have become almost an institution at Bowdoin, it may not be entirely a bad plan to let this year's go by the boards.

EDITORIALS in the Orient have been finding popular and official favor of late, and last week the Student Council met, discussed the examination system (which has been treated at length in the editorials), and the arguments have taken last week for undergraduate referendum on campus opinion.

DERIBATING at Bowdoin is an activity which has seen the uphill turn within the past year. Starting with the formulation of the Debating Council, and continuing to extended trips, the arguers have established a reputation as a thriving organization. When such institutions as New York University travel to Brunswick to meet the Bowdoin team, undergraduates are well to take notice—even, possibly, to attend the session Friday night.

WHYTE TALKS ON ROAD TO HOME RULE IN INDIA

Indian Problem More Social and Religious Rather Than Political

SPEAKER PROMINENT IN INDIAN AFFAIRS

Ghandi's Influence Lies in His Religious Power; to Unite Classes

Describing the influence of western world culture on India in the last fifty years, Sir Frederick Whyte, LL.D., delivered a lecture on “The Road to Home Rule in India” in Memorial Hall last Thursday evening. Formerly President of the Indian Legislature Assembly, Sir Frederick has had a wide experience in Indian affairs and is acknowledged as one of the leading experts on the affairs of that turbulent country.

Because the Hindu belief refuses to accept the material world as anything but an illusion, Sir Frederick stated, the natives of India until lately cared nothing for politics or government. This denial of the material world has, however, not entirely permeated their lives. Naturally the question of good or bad government has had little importance in their eyes. But today the Indian mind has been awakened to a realization of this question because of the influence of ideas from the western world.

Probably the first influence exerted on India by the outside world, the speaker continued, was England's sending the great historian Macaulay there in 1834. It was Macaulay's duty to attempt a reorganization of the Indian government. At that time the problem of education was being bitterly fought in India. Macaulay, by his famous paper on the English language, decided the question. From then on English was used as the language of the schools. The use of English as the implement of education caused the gradual spread of English ideas and English political theory in India. Young Indians were brought more and more under the influence of western thought.

In 1884 the Indian National Congress was organized. Here was the first expression of the desire of English political thought fifty years before. Although the greater part of the organizers of this first congress were Englishmen, and although it actually accomplished little, it was a step forward. While England has been much criticized for her tardiness in developing India's attempts at a more advanced government, actually the growth of political democracy in India has developed at an almost

On account of the present banking situation, the Portland Theatre Guild, backers of the production of B. J. One in that city have seen it expedient to postpone the production of B. J. First Literature Institute Held Here in Anniversary Year, 1925

In 1925, on the one-hundredth anniversary of the graduation of Longfellow, Hawthorne, and that illustrious class of 1825, Bowdoin held the first Institute of Modern Literature, the second of which takes place this spring. The Institute, introduced by Brunswick a series of twelve lectures, each one delivered by a leading figure in literary circles. From May 1-16, lectures were held in Memorial Hall, open to the public, and on the following following these lectures, round-table conferences, open only to Bowdoin undergraduates, were held.

The first lecturer in the series was Robert Frost, the New England poet, who amused crowded Memorial Hall with a witty discussion of “Focal Imagination.” This was a theory that the appeal of words to the senses should depend on the manner in which they are spoken, and Mr. Frost explained the theory with examples, and with readings from his own verse. The next day Hatcher Hughes of Columbia, author of “Hell Bent For Heaven,” and other successful plays dis-

Dreiser Not To Appear At Institute According To Latest Information

According to unofficial but reliable information which the Orient uncovered just before going to press, Theodore Dreiser, scheduled to appear on a concert at Bowdoin with the Institute, will be unable to keep his engagement. The Orient understands that his agreement to speak was made with certain reservations.

The Institute Committee has been working today to decide upon another speaker and at the time the Orient went to press was undecided as to what man they would try to get.

PREP SWIM MEET AT COLLEGE SAT.

World Breaststroke Record Holder May Appear in Curtis Pool Fest

Schoolboy natators from a score of Maine schools will flock to Curtis Pool next Saturday when the Bowdoin swimming department will conduct the first strictly interscholastic Pine Tree swimming meet. Although the premen will supply the backbone of the program, several added events in which some of the most noted swimmers in New England are scheduled to compete, will add to the attraction.

To interscholastic swimming, which has become a sport of major proportions in Maine during the last two years, mainly through the leadership of Coach Bob Miller of the Polar Bear team, this meet will be the culminating event of the season. The winner will be adjudged high school champion of Maine, and individual champions will be crowned in every event.

The major drawing cards, however, will be the open events, which a number of Pool records should tumble. The outstanding hundred-yard breaststroke swimmer in the country, Hayward, of Huntington School, is expected to come to Brunswick, and demonstrate his wares. A month ago Hayward cracked the world hundred yard breaststroke mark, churning out the record in 1:14.6 seconds, and breaking the record set by Walter Spencer, Rutgers' Olympic swimmer.

Another Huntington swimmer, Lathrop, who has been approaching George Kojac's world mark in the hundred yard backstroke, will probably be another competitor. He is one of the best backstrokers in New England.

QUILL TO APPEAR WEEK OF MARCH 20 FEATURING G. B. SHAW

To Include Letter by Shaw "Churches Amateur and Professional"

Of special interest to readers of the Quill will be a letter by George Bernard Shaw which was submitted by a member of the faculty for the forthcoming issue. The letter, on “Churches Amateur and Professional,” contains much material which is included in Mr. Shaw's latest book, “The Black Girl's Adventures in Senegal.”

A new feature has been added to the Quill entitled “The Earnest Reader.” This column is devoted to criticism of the latest books.

Another page will be given over to a feature titled, “Olla Podrida,” a collection of selected short topics.

In full the table of contents is as follows:

PREXY SCORES JUVENILITY OF STUDENT BODY

Forum Showed Immaturity of Collegians in Religion, Says Sills

"BOYISH INITIATIONS" RAPPED IN CHAPEL

"Professors Guardians, Not Rulers in College," Says President Sunday

With the declaration that the chief weakness of the modern collegian is its juvenile attitude toward the undergraduate and vice versa, President Sills keyed his address to the Sunday chapel attendees. He congratulated the students on many exhibitions of many courage, thoughtfulness, and self-sacrifice such as their behavior in the scholarship situation. But if the undergraduates are to “Come here as boys and leave as men,” certain immature tendencies must be amended.

Professors are Guardians not Rulers

Said the President, “There has recently been a growing tendency to use the name ‘school’ to describe the college. Reading periods instead of being devoted to the observation of the students for other purposes. College has come to mean the taking of so many courses and the securing of so many credits not as the acquisition of power. There has been an increasing reluctance to ask questions or seek help from members of the faculty, as was pointed out by a recent editorial in the Orient. Students have come to regard professors as their rulers not as their guardians. Fraternity initiations have often-times passed the bounds of moderation.”

Immaturity in Religion

The young clergyman gave a few weeks ago for the forum of religious thought reported to President Sills that the conferees showed great degree of maturity and intelligence in the selection of social, economic and intellectual problems, but in the treatment of religion were immature and juvenile. President Sills declared his belief that it is mainly not to go to church. One tribute lack of not attending church is lack of time. This, the President belittled by the observation that the President of the United States, perhaps more than any person on the Bowdoin campus, found time to attend church services.

Sills Writes Letter To Maine State Legislature On Prohibition Question

TUFTS, N. Y. U. TO MEET DEBATERS

U. of Maine Team to Come to Brunswick March 18; N. Y. U. Tonight

Bowdoin's varsity debaters tackle their most ambitious assignment of the year this week, a home debate being scheduled with New York University tonight, an engagement with Tufts at Medford tomorrow, and a second home debate with the University of Maine on Saturday.

This evening's meeting with N. Y. U. will be in the Moutoulin Union lounge, finds Stephen F. Leo '33 and Edwin G. Walker '36 speaking for Bowdoin on the negative side of the currently popular War Debts question; Resolute Costello and Daggett should agree to the cancellation of the Inter-allied War Debts.”

Earlier in the season a one-man Bowdoin team of Albert S. Davis '33 against New York University representatives in a debate broadcast from a New York radio station.

White Leo has participated in varsity competition before, the debate tonight will mark Walker's first intercollegiate venture. However, the Bowdoin freshman debated extensively when a student at Hebron Academy.

Debate Costello and Daggett have announced the Bowdoin team for the Tufts encounter which is composed of Stephen F. Leo '32 and Davis. Leo and Daggett will uphold the negative stand on the question. Resolved: “That the United States Government should establish a Bureau of Consumer's Research.”

On Saturday evening Leo and Walker will again argue the negative of the Debt controversy this time against a team from Orono. As the N. Y. U. debate is scheduled for the same date as the State of Maine election, such a chance. They want definite clean cut action from this legislature. It may be said that such a plan for a concrete issue is unusual and unprecedented; but these are unusual and unprecedented times and the great strength of the Constitution and the United States lies in the fact that it is adapted to unusual and unprecedented times if we have the ability to make the right provisions.

In my opinion the present legislature can perform a most useful service by giving voters the best possible opportunity, under the most simple and direct plan possible, the opportunity of saying for themselves whether they wish the Eight Amendment retained or repealed.

JOB OBTAINABLE SAYS DEAN NIXON IN CHAPEL SPEECH

Choosing of Vocation Vital Factor in Life; Standing in College Important

Declaring that there is not reason for undergraduates to lose hope of obtaining jobs after their graduation, Dean Nixon spoke in Saturday Chapel on the choice of a vocation. Because qualities necessary for success in after life can be developed in college, the undergraduate should maintain as high a scholastic standing as possible. A small college like Bowdoin affords a man ample opportunity to determine for what business he is most particularly fitted.

In choosing a vocation, the Dean continued, there are three or four ways to aid one in making a decision. There are always books that are concerned entirely with the selection of a career most suited to different individuals. For fifty or seventy-five cents one can obtain the best business aptitude book that will do much in helping such a decision. And lastly, particularly in a small college, there is ample opportunity to associate with older persons who are more experienced in the world of work.

It is highly important, the Dean said in closing, that the college man should come to some decision as to his career before the end of his junior year.

Student Activities During China Crisis Explained by Undergrad

By Frances Pei-yueh Ch'en

(The following is the second of a series of articles written by students of Yenching University, Peiping, China, as part of the work of the International Correspondence Committee, one of the patriotic organs recently formed in that institution. The article gives an account of student participation in the movement for the ousting of the pro-Japanese ministers in 1919 to the reaction against the Shanhaikuan outbreak, 1933.)

In trying to understand the various conflicts that rage within the breast of a college student at the present moment in China, it is well to bear in mind both the student environment and viewpoint. There has been a great deal of misapprehension in the minds of the public generally as regards the patriotic work of the Chinese student. He must undertake the ever-changing and unstable conditions of the Chinese Government have encouraged the boldness in the student movement. Westerners, many of the resulting actions have appeared nonsensical or unduly radical.

The article is an attempt, on the part of one student, to interpret among the numerous patriotic activities among the students in China today. In

Delta Kappa Epsilon Trails For Second as Larson Takes Two Firsts

Tenth-Second Stop Watches Might Have Shown New World's Records

Led by Captain Ray McLaughlin, who sent two college records into the discard and tied two world records in an all-time high point scoring effort, Zeta Psi romped off with the 15th annual Interfraternity Track Meet last Saturday night in the Hyde cove, with a total of 78 points. Delta Kappa Epsilon, Chi Psi and Delta Upsilon followed in that order, the only teams scoring more than ten counts.

The placement of tenth-second watches was the only circumstance that robbed McLaughlin of two new world records in his hurdle races. In the high barrier race, two watches caught him in 5.6 seconds, four others giving him a low 5.8, the world record. The same held true in the low hurdle race, where a barrier majority of the timers showed 5.4 seconds, the rest being 5.2. Tenth-second watches would undoubtedly have credited him with 5.7 and 5.3 seconds respectively, new international standards.

Three College Marks Shattered

Three other college marks were sent by the board, two of them by the indefatigable McLaughlin. He won 6 feet 3 inch into the air to shatter the 5 high jump mark, then leaped 22 feet 2-5/8 inches in breaking the broad jump standard. Howard King, a sophomore, won the pole vault by 2 feet 8 inches over the old record. Zeta Psi when he tossed the 16 pound shot 47 feet 1-2 inch into the ether, destroying the old record by exactly two feet. His mark also bettered the existing state record.

From beginning to end the Zetas were supreme. They scored at least two points in every event but the mile run and the pole vault. They scored victories in seven of the fourteen events.

MATHEMATICS CLUB HEARS ACCOUNT OF CALENDAR SYSTEM

George Pettin'gill '33 Gives Talk of Elimination of Main Errors

An interesting account of the different systems of calendars which have been in use at various times in history was given by George Pettin'gill '33 at a meeting of the Math club last Thursday evening.

The various nationalities have had their own separate calendars such as the Chinese, Egyptian, Babylonian, Hindu, Greek, Roman, and Mexican, said Pettin'gill. The two calendar systems that one hears not infrequently in these times are the Hebrew and the Gregorian. The latter is in common use which has come into the old Roman calendar. In the time of Julius Caesar the civil equinox differed from the astronomical one by three months; consequently he abolished the use of the lunar year and regulated the year by the sun.

Nevertheless, the Julian Calendar involved an error in supposing the year to be only eleven minutes and fourteen seconds. After several centuries this error became so noticeable that in 1582 Pope Gregory 13 directed that days be left out of the calendar, those being between October 5 and October 15. Many people not realizing any practical value of this measure began to protest since they thought they had been robbed of several days. As the error was found to be about three days in 400 years, he ordered an extra day be inserted every four years but every century which is an odd multiple of 400 it was to be omitted.

This new calendar was immediately adopted by Denmark, France, Holland, Italy, Portugal and Spain. It was not until 1700 that Germany and Switzerland adopted this measure and were followed by Great Britain in 1752.

By this time the error had amounted to eleven days which accounts for the fact that we have to correct for four days in our early American history.

New Error Is Small

This new correction that we have would not cause an error at the beginning of the year greater than one day in 20,000 years. Mr. Pettin'gill explained the use of a perpetual table of Dominical letters by which the first day of any year can be easily calculated. Using any other table of the week of any day of the year can be found directly. The date of Easter and movable feasts are found in a similar manner.

It is interesting to note that if ever the proposed plan for a thirteen month calendar is adopted, the present complete set of calculations will be abolished, and the new difficulties will be for dates of the past.

In the business meeting of the club, James Pupill '33 was elected as a second member of the debating committee, of which Marshall Davis is

Vol. LXII Wednesday, March 15, 1933. No. 26

"Unborn Tomorrow and Dead Yesterday"

This editorial marks the close of Volume LXII, THE BOWDOIN ORIENT. Before the efforts of the 62nd year of publication are consigned to the files, however, we wish to make our final appearance in print before the new board assumes control, a summation of our program and policy. Believing from the first that the ORIENT could best serve itself and the College by regaining confidence from student and alumnus, we embarked upon a mild-tempered editorial journey propelled by the spirit of suggestion. We carefully avoided creating or pouncing upon "issues," although in truth we must admit that the term now fulfilled was singularly free from momentous upheavals, scandal and clash of opinion. Each week we expected the lid to blow off in some quarter but it did not happen. Had it done so we would not have scurried for a place of disinterested aloofness, neither would we have babbled and condemned to regret afterwards. The middle course while not sensational we feel with some pride has added to the prestige of the ORIENT which has been on a gradual, belated increase in the past few years.

Earnest efforts have been made to avoid errors of judgment, fact and detail which attempt although not entirely successful has served, we hope, to make the ORIENT, a more readable, a more reliable institution. While the editorial column has not been the repository of screaming color and far-flung undergraduate presumption, we trust at least it has contributed something of value; moreover, we are confident the managing editors have kept the journal in good dress; also have supplied it with interesting, newsy matter.

The fall months saw a remarkable trend away from what our friend Mr. Chandler chose to call "defeatism." Much was written to add impetus to the mounting enthusiasm, to what — Reader, forgive us! — is known as school spirit. We lay aside the pen with a prayer for its continued existence at Bowdoin during this spring, next fall, and unending seasons to come.

With the mere mention of our pleas for swimming as a major sport, circulation among the alumni, freshmen to acquire the principles of living as are being taught to the "depression generation", sports for all, an ORIENT to every living alumnus gratis, and closer relations between students and faculty, we turn to what we consider the two major planks in our platform.

The first is our contention that degrees are awarded at Bowdoin on an absurdly inappropriate basis. We quote from an editorial of January 18th:

"What is the essential difference between the Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Science degrees? There is no essential difference. At the present time the determining factor as to which degree will be conferred upon the senior in June is the amount of Latin offered for entrance. The instances when this is not true are in the minority."

After putting the question to a number of faculty members and receiving in answer not the slightest defense for the present practice, we wonder just why something is not done about it. At least the undergraduate would appreciate some enlightenment on the subject from the seats of the mighty. Our recommendation for a change suggests that if both the A.B. and B.S. degrees must be given out, the basis of distinction be made on the nature of the candidate's major work.

Our second, and what we consider the most important topic in the entire volume, is the analysis — if we may be so presumptuous — of the lecture system at Bowdoin. Although the study was not pursued as long and as deeply as we desired, due largely to an apparent lack of interest among our constituents, we were gratified subsequently to hear President Sills announce that a study of the major system was to be made.

From an editorial on the subject printed December 14th, we quote:

"To our minds nothing is more stupid and ineffectual than the lecture which re-hashes the material of the prescribed course. (Injection of the teacher's personality into the subject is valuable when it may by rare good fortune exist, but this is rare). What conceivable reason may be offered in defense of this waste of time is a mystery to us. Courses conducted offering two such lectures a week which cater to the lazy mind after the modern canned manner, are too numerous, and are our chief objection to the lecture system as we meet it at Bowdoin. Commendably the Economics Department has had sufficient trust in the conference to suspend lectures in Economics 1-2. We earnestly hope that results are so successful that notice will be served of some other curricular groups.

"The Bowdoin mode of education is as we understand it a combination of the aged lecture system and the time-tried Oxford tutorial method. We feel that one stifles the other, preventing proper application of either. A more complete adoption of the Oxford plan at the expense of the lecture would seem desirable in many courses."

An impromptu survey made by a representative group of students yielded the following interesting, if incomplete comments, on lecture courses:

Philosophy 1, 2—material of lectures in text; more conferences recommended.

Philosophy (advanced courses)—conference system prevail as when possible, consequently classes are interesting and valuable.

History 7, 8—material of lectures in text although there is some addition of details; well organized; monotonously delivered; conferences good.

History 9, 10—same comment.

Chemistry 1, 2—hopeless in present method of presentation.

Psychology 1, 2, 3, 4—same comment.

Economics 9, 10—lectures waste of time.

Zoology 1, 2—same comment, although well-organized and well-delivered. Why take notes when many excellent editions of lectures are to be had on campus?

Physics 1, 2—lectures worthless.

And so we go our way. With faith in the ability and policies of the administration to come, we wish them good fortune and prosperity.

COMMUNICATION

March 13, 1933.

To the Editor of the Orient: Once again the Intercollegiate Meet has come and gone and we find no effort on the part of the Athletics Department was taken to see to it that the Athletics are properly housed. The inefficient way in which it is carried on is only bringing strong criticism from the visitors instead of better relations.

In an informal address last Monday evening, Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, D. D. of the Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church of New York City, discussed international affairs, especially pertaining to world peace, before an audience assembled around the fireplace in Moulton Union.

Not A Specialist After a short introduction by President Sills, Rev. Mr. Sockman began an address by saying that he came to Bowdoin not as a student and not as a specialist of international affairs. He also said that he thought that, in such a position, he could discuss this subject more intelligently as he and the audience would think together, and thus would do away with the aloofness that many specialists naturally adopt before an audience.

In these hectic days, when everything seems to be going wrong, when our efforts towards world peace appear to be thwarted by Japan's aggressive policy in the Far East, when economic depression has left millions of our people unemployed, when men like Sinclair Lewis return from abroad prophesying war and the awkward stage of our civilization, Rev. Mr. Sockman is inclined to view these days of turbulence as the twilight of our civilization.

He compared these days to a young child who also is going through an awkward period, when it walks and talks with difficulty. No matter how many books on Greek dancing or on rhetoric one teaches to this child, it will not learn the art of talking and talking gracefully until the simple rules of local drill and personal guidance are taught to it.

In this comparison, Rev. Mr. Sockman sees the chief difficulty with our present relationships. He believes that, as the skylark, we should build our nests on the ground while at the same time we could soar heavenward. He cited the case of Lincoln, who seated in the White House, could visualize with the same degree of aptness the effect of the Civil War on the Union, and its effect on the commonest man.

Bifocal Attitude Necessary Rev. Mr. Sockman believes that such a bifocal attitude as Lincoln displayed is necessary today, when we view international relationships. We must not accept the viewpoint of our fellow countrymen but must be able to see things through the eyes of the country with which we are dealing.

In this, he believes, we must have an almost Christ-like imagination. In order to bring about an international brotherhood, we must be able to realize life from the point of view of a Japanese, Chinese, Negro or what ever the case might be. Rev. Mr. Sockman believes that the Christian religion should take the blindfold from the statue of Justice, so that it might be able to realize points of view more accurately.

If international brotherhood or world peace is to be brought about, education must play an important part in the scheme of affairs. He believes that a passion for world brotherhood should be instilled in the youth of the nation by the educational system. The schools should help to take the peace movement out of the academic circles and give it impetus, as a living force, in the minds of students and the common man of the street. He also believes that the movement for peace must be emotionalized; that unless some lustre is given it, there will be more wars, merely from the emul of life.

Organization For Peace Rev. Mr. Sockman said that no matter how many peace organizations there are in this country, they will be of little effect until the rank and file of the people become partners in these academic associations.

More than patrons, Americans are, in the eyes of foreigners, the greatest patrons in the world. As patrons of art, our capitalists have helped to repair damage done to the great cathedrals during the war; as patrons of world peace, we often uphold the League of Nations but will not join it.

Rev. Mr. Sockman believes that if our country would join the League it would have a profound effect, and would go far to further the cause for world peace.

Peace Movement Increasing During the last ten years, there has been a rapid trend toward the peace, according to the speaker. He cited a vote taken in the Oxford Union in which two hundred and seventy-five students said, that in case of another war they would not take up arms. In another case, a student at the University of Maryland was finally upheld by a court, to which he

Provisional Commencement Speakers Announced By Sills At Chapel On Friday

Names of ten provisional commencement speakers were announced by President Sills at Chapel last Friday morning. From this group, selected on the basis of scholarship and speaking ability, four seniors will be chosen later to speak at the Commencement exercises next June.

The present selections of the faculty committee in charge are the following: George Russell Booth, Newton Kimball Chase, Albert Samuel Davis, Jr., Jacob Saul Fine, Roland Hooker Graves, Clyde Robert Johnson, Donald Pearson McCormick, Henry Allan Perry, John Duncan Schultz, Jr., and Edward David Woodberry Spingarn.

Mustard and Cress

Like Tom Gray's cat, our "conscious tale our joy declares." At the '68 Prize Speaking, President Sills marked us teased and approved by declaring the benefit of all with hearing that mustard and cress is a good thing, it is not necessarily so—unless you see it in Mustard and Cress." Among those present were Messrs. Bassett and Freeman, and if this gets at the Commencement we can be sure that you'll always find it in the news that fits the print in this here department.

John Milliken of Psi Upsilon is a capable judge of fine music. He went in to Ricker Gardens the other night to hear the renditions of jazz by the famed Casa Loma contingent, and after a cold winter's night in Eben Drake's college quarters, Mr. Milliken returned to Brunswick a sadder and wiser man. It seems that there was a bank holiday and John misadventure with his finances, who was to meet him at the box-office. Without money or fire-escape, Mr. Milliken and John misadventure had a jolly ride back after the concert.

Master J. Benjamin Drake was the missing link in this chain of circumstances, but he took notes and told us oh all about the band next day.

We heard that there was an addition to the family of a Bowdoin professor, so we cut right up to the usual congratulating. "So the story has visited you!" we quipped into the transmitter. "No," we missed the connection. "It was the other way around. The professor had simply assumed the care of an infant for a short time, and congratulations were of doubtful appropriateness."

It takes quite a good deal to shake the confidence of Ken Walsh, the major-domo at Harmon's. The bank holiday had just been declared, and the undergraduates were a bit puzzled as to how their checks could be converted into currency. Mr. Walsh cashed all checks under five dollars until his change gave out, and had a week of leisure in which to repent. We dropped in one day last week and asked if he would mind cashing our checks over five dollars, and he said that he had sort of changed his policy.

It was with good will and a firm resolve that we listened to the Sunday talk of the President on putting away childish things, and we were encouraged at his remark that there was less infantronic conduct in evidence this year than in others. We left the Chapel with glowing spirits and went over to South Hyde to survey a Model T Ford lying levelly on its side beneath a dormitory facade rather disfigured by broken windows, shattered bulbs, and glass-strewn window ledges. Then we went over to the Heating Plant, where there were several young evergreens ($10.00 apiece) sheared to the ground by the passage of an undergraduate's car through forbidden territory.

We concluded our tour by grimly glancing at the tennis court by Wintrop, and wondering how Don Potts' lads would find time to remove the wheel from their cars to get in touch with Mr. Briggs in re the deplorable nature of all collectors.

Attention of Prof. Thomas Means: The tax collector of Bangor, Maine, opens a letter to Undergraduate Briggs with the sentence, "I have wrote several letters."—We feel that it would be worth your while to get in touch with Mr. Briggs in re the deplorable nature of all collectors.

Al Madeira told us that he would give a lot of dirt on Perry and Hayden if we would leave him unmentioned; Hayden imposed on us in the same manner; Perry was the only one of the triumvirate with a shred of honor, but he's editor anyway. We have received no news from any of the three, but we hope that this revealing little item will bring grist to our mill.

pleaded, when he was forced to leave the university because he refused to take compulsory military training. Then there was the case of Dr. McIntosh who, in 1929, was denied entrance to this country because he refused to swear that he would take up arms in defense of it. This decision was upheld by a very slim majority in the Supreme Court.

Rev. Mr. Sockman believes that as soon as the human race learns to fight for rather than against something, peace will be realized. If, like Christ and Ghandi, we could learn to fight for a cause such as peace, and could go about it with the same enthusiasm that characterized the Allies' fight against the Central Powers, the battle for international brotherhood would be won. Before any such stage is reached, however, the leaders of the peace movement must bring about a radical change in the atmosphere of human thought.

WHYTE TALKS ON ROAD TO HOME RULE IN INDIA

From the period when the congress was organized to the early part of the Nineteenth century, India's interest in government was awakened to the extent of numerous uprisings, and assassinations, Sir Frederick Lugard and if this gets at the Commencement we can be sure that you'll always find it in the news that fits the print in this here department.

Concluded President Sills, "I realize that much of the fault lies with the faculty in not inspiring you to attend church. The gain of maturity on senior classes is an encouraging sign. I hope to see both the faculty and the student body unite in raising the undergraduate to the measure of the post-grad."

the outlook for the future is bright. Shortly the new constitution will be brought into use and this should bring about a period of comparative peace. Independence has no immediate meaning in India. The problem is one of correct relationship with the British Empire.

equal pace with that of England herself.

At the recent round table conference which Ghandi attended, the speaker continued, it was decided that steps should be taken to ultimately bring about a Federal union in India. The old constitution was revised. The difficulty of attaining any definite decision at such a conference in connection with India lies in the number of widely opposed elements in modern Indian politics. England has been working constantly toward a conciliation. When Ghandi began his fast that received so much publicity he was not attempting to influence Ramsay MacDonald and the English government. His objective was the same as that of the English, to effect a conciliation between the various hostile forces of his country and to unite all the classes more closely.

Indian Outlook Bright The real struggle in India today, the speaker declared in closing, is being carried on in the souls of the people themselves. The strife between the English and the Indian Nationalists is to some extent a sham battle. Essentially the problem is in social and religious reform, in spite of this.

teen events, and took second in six. D.K.E. made the next best showing, garnering points in eleven events and showing unusual balance. Chi Psi's strength in the distance events gave it third place, while the D.U.'s showing in the same events earned them their fourth position.

Larson Takes Two Events
Thurm Larson set the Deke out into a good lead in the two events contested in the afternoon. After he and Howie Niblock had tossed the discus into the balcony of the cage five times, the Deke leader came out ahead by a scant foot with a toss of 127 feet, 1-3-8 inches. Larson also won the 25 pound weight throw with the best toss he has ever made, 48 feet 10-1-8 inches.

McLaughlin started on his 31 point rampage by winning the 40 yard dash by a foot over Mal Walker in 4.4 seconds. The finish was close, the judges debating for five minutes over Phil Good and fourth place winners, Phillings, Chi Psi, fourth, and Briggs, Deke, fifth.

Brayley Gray, coming from behind with a terrific last lap rush, won the quarter mile for the Dekes, with Gardner Macxy, the surprise second placer for the same fraternity, Milt Hickock, who had led until the last hundred yards, faded unexpectedly and came home third. Soule, Zete, and Hatchfield, Kappa Sig, completed the roster of placers. The time, 52.4, was close to the record.

Hutchinson Grabs Mile Run
Going out ahead on the second lap and keeping his lead all the way, Elmer Hutchinson took the mile for Chi Psi in 4:41.1. Fred Burton fought him tooth and nail throughout the final two circles, but failed by about two feet to catch the flying sophomore. Vin Novlis, Zete, was a distant third, Bus Lawry, Kappa Sig, a surprising fourth, and Marshall Davis, A.T.O., fifth.

The two hurdle races were McLaughlin's from start to finish. In the highs he was pushed by Phil Good, winning by about two feet, but he scampered over the low barriers to trim the field by two yards. Vale Marvin showed unexpected strength to win the half mile by eight yards for Zeta Psi over Dick Gray, D.U., in the excellent figures of 2:01.6. Staying back in second position.

Good Chief Worry of Soph Team in Class Cinder Scrap

With Niblock, Adams, Boyd, & Co. affording them tremendous strength in the field events, the Sophomore tracksters are slightly favored to edge the yearlings in the annual Frosh-Soph cinder meeting, Friday afternoon.

The first year men possess acknowledged superiority in the hurdles, dashes, and middle distance runs, but with clean sweeps in the shot, discus, and 35 lb weight, and first in the pole vault, high jump, mile and broad jump inevitably sophomore, the upperclass team is conceded the advantage. The two lap relay will go beyond question to the Frosh quartet of Soule, Macxy, Good and Marvin, who have been threatening the college record all season.

The Orient dope sheet shows a 16 point margin for the Sophs and a score of approximately 60-44. It requires no strain of the imagination to pick the winners of each event, but the battles for second and third money should be hotly contested.

Uniacke to Run
Tom Uniacke, Eastman-proportioned sophomore who became ineligible for varsity track at midyears, has announced his intentions of competing in Friday's meet, and in the event the scholastic ornament is lifted later on, Uniacke will run in the spring.

Tom will race with less than ten days' training behind him, but even at that it is certain to give a good account of himself in the mile and 880. Elmer Hutchinson, winner of the Interfraternity run, along with Novlis in the mile and Fox in the half, will team up with Uniacke in the two longer treks for the sophomores.

Against Hutch and Uniacke Freshman Protuy will do well to take third in the mile. However, the cubs look powerful in the half with Vale Marvin and Dick Gray, placemen in last week's meet, running for 36. There will be no two-mile on the program. Captain Phil Good, who is expected to emerge high point man, though being pressed by Niblock in this respect, leads a speedy trio of freshman quarter-milers. Although the race should develop into a walkaway for Good, Macxy, and Soule, there are Art Fox and Mike Hunt to watch. Even so, a third place for the Sophs in this event would be a mild surprise.

The identical situation prevails in the short sprint. Hunt, however, is given a slightly better chance of breaking through for a place here. Niblock aims at two records. As for the high fences it's a foregone conclusion that Good will head the field with ease. Harry Abelson is the main sophomore favorite to beat Nicol or Mann of the Frosh, and Johnny Adams, who soars over the sticks occasionally, holds creditable time and may compete.

Past performances assert that Niblock, Boyd, and Snow, all of '35, will finish one, two, three in the discus, and likewise sweep the shot put. The meet records of 45 ft. in the shot and 123 ft. in the discus are due for a sizable boost, Niblock doing the honors in each instance.

Along with Gil Harrison and Mel Hughes, Niblock will pave the way in the weight throw, a Frosh hammer flinger being hopelessly out of the picture. The jumps are headed for the sophomore column of points, with Johnny Adams ruling both the high and broad. Johnny leaped a handsome 22 feet in Interfrat meet, with a half-inch toe preventing the mark from going down officially. The Frosh will show Soule, Lyons, and Favour in the runner-up for an expected four points. Broad-up positions in the high jump will go to the winner of a Boyd, Good, and Swan battle, Boyd seeming to have the edge.

Pole vaulters are scarce and of those on hand sophomores Crowell and Boyd are liked to cop, though if the all-around yearling captain chooses to vault, it may be a different story.

and Hutchinson. Chi Psi finished behind him in that order. Medley Goes To Chi Psi
The one and 7-8 mile medley relay, contested on Saturday, was another runaway for the fast Chi Psi distance men, Elmer Hutchinson, Nelson Tibbets and Ned Packard, who, with Neal Skilling's running aptituder, raced away from the field to win in the mediocre time of 8 min. 15.6 sec.

McLaughlin, Good and Marvin gave Fred Burton's final rush for D.U. D.K.E. and A.T.O. trailed in that order. The high jump was perhaps the finest state mark, and established him

ST. JOHN'S PREP AND SO. PORTLAND WIN IN TRACK MEET HERE

Eight Meet Records Broken as Individuals and Relays Star

In a record shattering orgy St. John's Prep and South Portland High school dominated their respective divisions convincingly as 400 schoolboy track and field competitors galloped about the Hyde Cage in the 21st annual Bowdoin Inter-scholastic Meet, Saturday afternoon.

The day provided a bumper crop of amazing individual performances but was void of any upset in team competition, unless it was the failure of a highly regarded Lynn Classical team to score more than two points.

Trailing St. John's in the preparatory school section were Bridgton Academy with 18 points less than the leaders at 371; Brown and Nichols 9, New Prep 7, M.C.I. 6, Hebron 6, Jersey City Prep 5, Wassong 1, Jersey City Prep accounted for its five points through Lenowitz, who heaved the 12 lb. shot 49 feet for top honors in this event. After the event was officially concluded Lenowitz got the ball out over 50 feet.

South Portland led the high schools with 321 points, followed by Brookline with 234, Cony with 171, Newton 145, Fairhaven 138, Deering 121, Portland 7, Thornton 3, Lynn Classical 2, Fryeburg 1.

Eight Records Shattered
Before the meet wound up at 8:30 with a handful of pole vaulters and fairs on deck eight prep and high school marks were lowered. Hallahan of St. John's clipped the timber-topping mark of 6 seconds flat and Scanlon of St. John's stayed a step ahead of Keene of Bridgton for 300 grueling yards and a new prep school record of 53 seconds.

In this race Keene fought hard to pass Scanlon and traveled many more yards than the winner in an effort to do so, but the Danvers speed merchant nosed him at the tape. The Newton High relay four of Sloan, York, Wilkes, and McLellan created a new two-lap mark of 2 minutes prime favorite in the outdoor event on the interfraternity program, showing a calibre undreamed of in Maine competition. Six men cleared 5 feet 10 inches, and two reached six feet. McLaughlin finally pulled out a win over his teammate, Johnnie Adams and barely failed at 6 feet 2 inches, brushing the bar on his way down. Thurm Larson established new heights for himself by taking third, with Charlie Kahill, Kappa Sig, and Bob Porter, Theta Delta, tying for fourth. McLaughlin's height, 6 feet, 3-8 inch, established a new college indoor record.

Niblock's gargantuan shot heave of 47 feet 1-2 inch showed the giant Zete to be at top form of his career. The toss was fully half a foot beyond

SPORT SIDELIGHTS

Ray did it!
Just what every mother's son said he couldn't do, and Ray himself said he didn't expect to do, he completely and spectacularly did when he not only scored as many points as last season, but also exceeded his own record figure of twenty-nine by two, equalling world's records in the hurdles and creating new meet figures in the high and broad jumps in the bargain.

Were this chance to fulfill his ambition faithfully he would begin with the word McLaughlin, end with it, and make every other word look exactly like it.

Ned Packard, a competitor whom one would naturally think of as "being tickled" after his brilliant two mile exhibition, in which his victory was clean-cut, was anything but that after his race. Ned had visions of cracking the college indoor mark, and had laid careful plans for his attempt, even chartering Jimmy Crowell to keep him posted on his time. But it seems that Ned could not hear Crowell's voice above the din.

Had he been able to know his time right along Packard would have certainly threatened the record, since he finished with a rousing kick and had plenty of reserve left after he breached the tape.

Reliable opinion holds that Keene, sensational Bridgton Academy flier, who has turned in some remarkable performances this winter, is Bowdoin bound.

Wuxtri! Bates has a field man! Yes sir, after years of disheartening results, the Garnet seems to have landed a real find in one Kramer, who is credited with 5 ft. 11 1/2 in. in the high jump and 130 feet in the discus. That is natural light they were baffled at the sight of the ball and had to unlearn and learn the knack of meeting a ball all over again.

There will be no better for Wells' baseball men until they adjourn to Pickard Field in April. The inferior lighting of the Hyde Cage makes batting practice harmful to the swatters' optics, last year's experience clearly revealed. When the men reached open air and natural light they were baffled at the sight of the ball and had to unlearn and learn the knack of meeting a ball all over again.

High school records were set by Butler of South Portland in the 600 at 1 minute 18 3-5 seconds; Romano of South Portland in the 1000 at 2 minutes 26 3-5 seconds; Fitzgerald of Newton in the mile at 4 minutes 1-5-8; and Dubiel of Fairhaven in the broad jump at 20 feet 2-1-2 inches.

Griffin and Dubiel High Men
Griffin of Bridgton Academy lugged games. Thurm Larson copped another second, Harry Snow, non-fraternity, third, Milt Walker, Theta Delta, fourth, and Johnny Boyd, Deke, fifth.

Ray McLaughlin set still another college record in winning the broad jump over Briggs, Adams, Soule and Hickock. On his last trial he came from fourth place to span 22 feet 2-5-8 inches, two inches farther than his old mark.

Gerdesen Hart in Winning Vault
Carl Gerdesen, vaulting higher than he had ever done before took the pole vault at 11 feet 9 inches, beating out Crowell, Gray, Pope, Boyd and Hickock. In attempting to create a new indoor record, Gerdesen suffered a badly torn ligament in a leg when he landed heavily.

SELIG ONLY SCORER FOR WHITE AT N. E. LEAGUE SWIMFEST

Tankmen Held to Last Place With Single Point as Brown Cleans Up

Though four Bowdoin men reached the final races in the New England Interscholastic swim last week end, only one place rewarded their efforts. Mike Selig alone broke into the scoring column with a fourth in the dive, as a capable Brown team swept seven first places to take the meet by a wide margin.

The White diver qualified with points to spare in the trials Friday afternoon. His teammate Carter just missed a chance at the finals. Following them, Foster, Whitmore and McLeod, medley relayists, unexpectedly proceeded to smash their way into the finals in spite of fast competition. Foster again qualified in the 150-yard backstroke, coasting in well ahead of the field in his heat. The next set of trials, however, saw both Whitmore and Beale dropped from the lists of the 200-yard breaststroke.

Find Going Tougher
In record-breaking competition Saturday afternoon, the medley team found itself considerably outclassed. Brown winning in the new low of 2:15.8. Bob Foster met with tough going in the backstroke, losing to a fast Brown-Springfield field.

Selig, who had drawn the unfavorable first-man-up position, looked excellent in a number of his dives, but his score was pulled down by a few plunges rating two's and three's. Consistent high scoring won first for Lyman of Brown, who left White of Wesleyan and Cate of Springfield in second and third places respectively.

New meet records were set in the medley relay by Brown (Stanton, Anthony, White), in 2:15.8; in the 220-yard freestyle by Lee (Brown), in 2:24.3; in the 400-yard freestyle by Sylvia (Springfield), in 6:26.8; and in the 100-yard freestyle by Lewis (Brown), in 53.8. The team totals were as follows: Brown, 47; Springfield; Wesleyan, 12; Williams, 7; Amherst, 5; W.P.L., 4; M.I.T., 2; and Bowdoin 1.

WHITE SENDS 2-MAN GYM TEAM TO ARMY

A two man Bowdoin gym team, Jacob Iwanowicz and George Peabody will compete in the Interscholastic Gym Meet which is to be held at West Point, April 17. Iwanowicz is to enter in the tumbling and parallel-bar events while Peabody is to compete on the high-bar.

Cigarettes, like Foods, need Seasoning

That's the part Turkish
Tobaccos play in making
Chesterfields Taste Better

SMOKERS notice a certain "touch" in Chesterfields that comes from having just enough Turkish tobacco in them . . . a spicy, aromatic flavor that's much the same to a cigarette as seasoning is to food.

For only by blending and cross-blending the right amounts of mild Domestic tobaccos with the right amount of Turkish can we get the flavor and aroma that Chesterfield smokers enjoy.

Next time, ask for "The Cigarette that Satisfies". . . you'll get Chesterfields, with Milder, Better Taste.

MOST worried by the Orient's attack on the lecture system was Professor Philip G. Deffler, who properly speaking (and who doesn't?) has no lecture system in his course, "Education." Or maybe it was "Education." At any rate, Prof. Deffler's course is well known as the one subject which can justify occupying the high pinnacle held by anthropology.

Prof. Deffler is well-known around Bowdoin for his varied career. Actor, scholar, and what-not, is the best characterization we can give him. But not the worst, by any manner of means. His article in the March ALUMNUS, called "Westward the Course—" is unparalleled. QUILL editors were in tears, and Editor Davis cried: "It is too good a man to waste on the Bowdoin Publishing Company!"

LECTURES at Bowdoin have been talking "pride" in the "school paper" recently, according to certain people whose names are withheld for obvious reasons. For who does not appreciate that extra hour for sleep one has in a thirty thirty class whose lecture-material is gleaned from the text-book? Or who would carp (nay, even criticize) a system which permits of taking notes which would be valuable in years to come. The Class of '43 will be happy to purchase certain course notes. Heaven knows they are the same as when Grand-daddy was in good old Bowdoin.

INTERScholastic ping-pong tournaments during the last few years have caused a grave problem to long-steadfast. But this year they created a crisis even beyond that. The schoolmen arrived eight-hundred strong, seized three "restless" members, and pocketed the silver (to say nothing of one (1) leather divan, three ash-receivers, one (1) radio, and sundry photographs of the brothers— feminine acquaintances).

APPEARING from nowhere last week, a wandering tribe of Indians approached President Stills and demanded that the land on which Bowdoin now stands be given back to them. "Ugh," said the chief of the Hot-cha-cha, "give-usm back land. Then his old wife and four children, light, "at let-Adams Hall." The President was equid to the situation and offered to give up Adams Hall if the Indians would remain in the Campus Area. (The Indians have not been heard from since that time...)

STUDENTS who feared last week that Bowdoin publications would merge with the Portland Press Herald, left a sign of relief when Orient "editor" Berry denied it all. "Our policy," he said, "is one of passive resistance. The red-blooded, high-handed editor of the Press Herald would kill the Orient's reputation for verbiage misstatement."

LAST WEEK the French Department (to whom we are always indebted for many a hearty laugh, God bless 'em!) had a showing of a French motion picture, entitled, "Des Nuts on Paris" or something (Why bother to look it up? We'll be wrong, any audience revealed that there were how). A hurried tabulation of the present, from the English Dept., 47; from the Ec Dept., 31; from the Psych Dept., 43; from the German Dept., 89; and from the French Dept., 3.

DEAN MIXIN and President Stills last week both came out un-equivocally in the "Hard Winter Plan." They would put all Bowdoin on a diet of gruel and grind, and abolish all non-curricular activities except morning chapel. This asserted the Dean, "It is an institution. Indeed—an institution, like the W. C. T. U., or Prof. Abrahamson's "Non-slogan" League.

President Stills scored the present undergraduate attitude of scholastic interest, last week, in an interview with a reporter who had nothing better to do anyhow. "What is affecting the world at large," he said, "is likewise affecting the student at large." He gave the impression that these were entirely too many students at large, particularly in Portland on Saturday night.

He castigates the undergraduate inactivity in ways which left no doubt, if there were any in the first place. "The average undergraduate has the mind of a two-year old child; the average Orient editor has the brain of a one-year old child, and a moron in the bargain." Reminded that at best this was no bargain, the prexy merely smiled, declined to comment.

Psycho and Nookie Supply Topic For Bull Sessions In Fraternities

By A. S. D., 3rd

One of the questions that always come up in bull sessions, whether the be in the arid wastes of the Bone-Dry Zete House or in the dingy room of the meekest freshman, is "Who is the greater drawing card, Psycho or Nookie?" In a speed test of these two are the outstanding showmen among the members of the faculty. Daily, students leave their classrooms, moan as graptologists they marvel at the craftsmanship of these two scientists. My problem is to present the true facts to the public eye and let it determine the better.

Assistant Librarian's Childhood Replete With Revealing Incidents

CHILDHOOD INCIDENT
An old friend of the family recounts this incident about him as a child. It is always been on the most familiar terms with the Sawyer family. Naturally I was interested in the children. I felt at an early time that this was a most interesting child. I often came into the playground to browse around. Special books were kept on the best-high bookcase surrounding his high-chair, one might almost call it his throne.

SEVENTEEN VOTES APPROVE BILL TO FORM GALS'S SCHOOL 'Should be Fun' Says Prexy Stills in Ribald Meeting of Faculty

Passing with a majority of seventeen the bill to establish a woman's branch of Bowdoin College in Topham was accepted by the faculty last week. This is partly an emergency relief measure to bolster college finances...

The proposition, as read into the college by law, was as follows: A women's college shall be established in that section of the State of Maine known as Topham, Maine.

President Behemoth C. Stills... Always admiring of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Bowdoin faculty men voted this measure, because it seemed like the emergency beer bill.

Representative G. D. Gancaster of the Union, spoke on behalf of the Union, voicing the college's defense against non-union men. 'If we have a women's college, he stated, 'it would be a good idea to charter the Union into a night club with an orchestra and everything. We might,' he suggested with a weary gleam in his eye, 'even get the Polar Bears.'

Prof. Outlime Plans... At this point President Stills, who had been dozing peacefully under the table, arose and stamped his head un-tilly. 'Any women?' he asked un-tilly, 'what about them?' But Professor Twitchell shut him up with a vicious, 'Shush! Of course there'll be women, 'cause a girl's college is a woman's school.'

Prof. Smallneck wanted to know: 'What's anything without women? What's anything without men? What's anything without Plato, what's Aesthetics, what's Logic, what's He went under gasping as Dean Mixin pumped him full of lead. So the matter was settled, though it leaves the un-tilly student distinctly unsettled. The more's the pity.'

BOWDOIN 50 YEARS AGO... Fifty years ago there was a group of college students who not only were not menaces like the Orient staff members but to the contrary were public spirited and patriotic in their achievements...

1. No board walks in front of the library or diagonally across campus from the chapel to the science building.

2. Masque and Gown absolutely not to give any Ivy plays with humor in them. They are to appeal to the group of serious minded, serious thinking young men and women who are on campus at the time.

3. Hour exams are to be scheduled only on Saturdays and Mondays and Tuesdays of the week ends during which there is some big social or semi-social function such as sub-freshman week end or the interfraternity track meet.

4. Professors are definitely not to make their lectures humorous, colorful, or interesting because they cannot profess to be covering their courses and be both interesting and accurate. In their lectures than what is in the textbooks of the class.

5. Under penalties of being social pariahs, undergraduates are not to attend lectures or concerts given under the auspices of the College nor are they to show any enthusiasm over such affairs.

6. Fraternity dances and house party dances are to be run on a competitive basis. Slogan—"Keeping up with the Joneses". No gym dance at a house party can have an orchestra less expensive than the one held at that time the year before.

7. Adams Hall because it is a building replete with tradition must be kept. The mellowness of a building ready to fall apart is one of the joys of college life of which students to come must not be deprived.

Bowdoin 25 Years Ago... Student Council sets honored precedent which is to become a tradition of the College. Precedent: Members are to be elected because of campus popularity or prominence or something, never because they have ideas that the Student Council might do something about something, never because candidates might have ideas that there is something about which something might be done.

William B. Deadwoods... longtime fire-chief, man-about-town, and second lieutenant in the police department, yesterday displayed this device for fighting fires to a startled public. 'It looks like a washing machine,' he told reporters. 'Well—it is!' That is, he went on, not a REAL washing machine, but one that will wash, rinse, and dry the dirtiest fire inside of ten minutes. There has been a need for cleaner fires, he explained, looking toward the Theta Delta house.

COMMUNICATION

Gentlemen: It has recently been brought to my attention, through the columns of your little paper, that approximately ten out of every nine Bowdoin men consider the Masque and Gown to be more or less of an acute gluteal disturbance.

This attitude I view with alarm, Gentlemen, and I wish to point with pride to the sterling standards maintained by the "Masque" (as we call it among ourselves) during the last few years.

Not once have we lowered the barriers so rigorously maintained against humour. Not once, gentlemen, have we given the audience chance to reveal their class vulgarly by bursting forth into peals of merry laughter. (That they have, occasionally, has been no fault of ours.)

Of course, my fine friends, you must realize that the Masque and Gown has been forced to struggle along bearing burdens that would instantaneously crush an organization such as the Orient, unbolstered by such gargantuan personalities as we are fortunate in possessing.

In first, my lads, we are immensely handicapped in having but one my naming myself, so he shall be good actor, (modestly really forbids himself) and, great as he is, one can hardly expect him to cope with the terrific burden imposed by casts that, at their best, attain but mediocrity.

Then too, the rumor has been bruited about that Bowdoin is a men's college, and, after due thought, I have concluded that it would be hazardous to recruit female players from the student ranks. Of course, the aforementioned disciple of Thespia could disagree with me on that part, but he has, of necessity, to play the male lead.

Added to this, there is the difficulty of selecting quaint vehicles for presentation. You cannot, believe me, imagine what a task it is to find a play in which every member of the cast, including the cuckoo clock, has an English name. Plus the difficulty of getting the cast agreed upon just what is an English accent.

However, we consider it the duty of every Bowdoin to drag his houseparty guest (By the hair, if necessary) to our stulticoquod dramas twice yearly, and to applaud lustily during the big dramatic moment in the play, while allowing my pince-nez by the ribbon and sonorously declaim "I say, Parkins, this tea is top-hole."

What if one does have to give up cigars for a couple of months to buy the tickets? Money in every thing, you know (and as for the blanket tax committee, phoo!) E. Booth Karcker. "I'd rather be right than president," -Washington.

Mustard and Cress

(Ed. note: President Stills was right. Mustard and Cress is the only reliable feature in The Orient. But we fooled 'em this time... Charles Stanwood, '32, former Bowdoin star hurdler and high jumper, took three of Oxford's eight frills in all their annual meet at Cambridge, Oxford won, 3-3, for the first time in eight years. Stanwood took both hurdle events, and the high jump.

Theodore Dreiser will speak at the Institute of Modern American Literature, his health permitting, it was learned late last week. The announcement made in last week's Orient was invalidated by a recent letter to Chairman Mitchell.

Bowdoin's debating team, composed of Stephen P. Leo, '33 and Albert S. Davis '33, will meet Colby tomorrow night, at Waterville. The topic, in which Bowdoin takes the negative, is: Resolved: that the United States should cancel her inter-allied war debts.

Two student-written plays, "House of Fate", by Christy U. Muschler, and "The United States", by James Bassett, Jr., '34, will be presented tonight in the Barn Chamber at 8 p.m. The dramas are scheduled under the auspices of Masque and Gown. Direction of the first was under Donald McCormick, '33, while Bassett supervised the second. Public is cordially invited to attend.

Last week's Debating team met New York University, on the subject "Resolved: that the United States should cancel its inter-allied war debts" on Wednesday; and on Friday they met Tufts at Medford on the subject of a Federal Bureau of Consumers Research. Last Saturday they met the U. of M. on the same topic as the one on which they debated N. Y. U.

Stephen F. Leo, '33, debated in all three contests; with him was Edward Walker, '36 in the N. Y. U. and Maine debates, and Albert S. Davis '33 in the Tufts debate. Coach Childs accompanied the team to Medford.

The Quill, according to an announcement by Managing Editor Bassett, should appear tomorrow afternoon. The printers have guaranteed shipment of the magazine before vacation.

Alumni Secretary Philip S. Wilder is back from his Western trip, and has resumed business at the old stand. The Dean is At Home on Wednesday, and the students are invited to pass the evening in conversation.

Josiah Drummond, of Portland, was elected President of the Freshman Class at week... The Colby Athletics will meet the Bowdoin team Saturday night in basketball and bowling... Arthur Stratton, '35, will be managing editor of the May issue of The Quill. Donnell Lancaster, Moulton Union manager, plans an informal dance sometime next month... High Schools will meet for their annual dramatic league contests this week end, with Bowdoin as host.

MICKEY MOUSE AND DURANTE NECK AND NECK IN COLL POLL Riots, Brawls Follow Attempt to Elect Favorite Movie Star

Holding a student poll, last week, the five hundred odd undergraduates, to say nothing of the fifty odd professors, voted unanimously in favor of Mickey Mouse as their favorite screen star. President Stills, misquoted in the Orient, is said to have said: "I was all for holding out for Greta Garbo; but if the boys want Mickey Mouse--then I want Mickey Mouse!" Riots and street brawls were the immediate result of this unexpected voting toward the Mouse faction.

Though disgruntled cinemadicti Missever and Clam swore that the ballot box had been stuffed, that they had been railroaded into the Mouse contingent by political agents, Henry Andrus (who was all for electing Janet Gaynor) until the radical left Mouse wing swung his vote, and Herbert Heartman (who studies ways and means of pepping up the Eng. I class through the cinema)--but where were we?

This voting is significant if for no other reason than to show how damn silly straw votes are in the first place. That notorious sheet, The Orient, last fall concocted a presidential campaign, and what did it prove? Nothing--except that it got a lot of suckers overconfident, and made betting easy game for some of the city slickers who were on the inside.

Playing Favorites "Unless you have every member of the faculty voting," cried one disgruntled pedagogue, who saw his favorite candidate for cinematic honors (Jan Harlow) being defeated by an overwhelming majority, "the votes don't count." But professor Charles (Running) Brooks calmed him with: "Don't worry, Phil, my gal Marlene ain't doing so hot, either..." At ten o'clock this morning guerrilla warfare has broken out on the streets as the Mouse faction closed in with the Wheeler-Woolsey group. Surve-

BOOK REVIEWS

Across Bowdoin Campus with Submarine and Camera... Donald B. MacMillan. Quite the best book MacMillan has yet written. Tells in graphic detail of MacMillan's perilous dash across the Polar wastes from Mem Hall to the Chapel. To date the most dangerous trip ever taken by the famous explorer. Vividly illustrated with photographs of the skeletons of students, who, lacking the experiences of the white wolf of the North, collapsed in defeat on the treacherous ice-sheet.

What Every Young Man Should Know... Henry L. Johnson, M.D. Largest circulation per single copy of any book on campus. In constant demand by student body and faculty, and vacation procedure, combined with a human touch that makes it absorbingly interesting.

Weekly Program, Cumberland Theatre... Consistently the most widely read magazine out. Style amateurish, make-up and format terrible, information misleading.

Bowdoin Orient... Author unknown. Pornographic tabloid, issued weekly by alleged Bowdoin students. Has unfavorable reviews from the faculty, the athletic department, the department of Grounds and Buildings, and, in fact, everybody except the editors. Four pages of strictly unreliable (except Winchell's column) dirt (including Winchell's column). Impudent, obscene and unrighteous. As it stands, strictly for stag consumption.

SPCA--President Stills, prexy of a small N. E. college somewhere near the Canadian border, today affixed his name to a bill which would legalize bear little camp meetings. "It will pull us out of an awful hole," he said, "as well as be a lot of fun for the kiddies." Bowdoin has always been bone dry, has frowned on liquor--or at least on the stuff you buy in Brunswick.

The battle for his perch atop the science building, Professor Mantou (Knock'em-Dead) Coppenhagen smiled. "The idiots," he said, "little do they know that I have stolen the ballot box." Coppenhagen's candidate Durraite won by a nose.

ORDER SLUSH, GOO FOR BOWD. CAMPUS

Bowdoin's Committee on Buildings and Grounds announced late yesterday afternoon that twelve carloads of slush and goo were being imported from the Colby Campus for use on the Bowdoin grounds between the Chapel and Mem Hall.

Faculty members of the committee, when asked for a statement, "The Preserve and Barklett, nodded wisely three feet of water and snow there at present was not enough. We plan to develop a lake, have a ferry service, and charge a nominal fee for passage across." Have the college out of debt by Christmas is the board's motto.

It takes resourcefulness...

Time and again, Bell System engineers have demonstrated their pioneering bent in working out unusual telephone construction problems. For example, they laid a huge conduit under the Harlem River. They dredged a trench in the river bottom, lowered enormous sections of iron pipe, sent down divers to join the sections, encased the finished tube in concrete. Through this they ran telephone cables forming one of New York's main lines of communication. Across the Gila River in Arizona they constructed a catenary span 2373 feet long. To bridge oceans, they developed radio telephony. They have built telephone lines over mountains, across deserts, through swamps. Their resourcefulness in getting through, over or under natural barriers makes possible telephone service that is practically world wide in reach.

Head, hands and feet protrude, and are held by spectators while the magician takes a crosscut saw and, with the help of an assistant, saws through the center of the box and apparently through the woman." "EXPLANATION: There are many explanations for this illusion. One method of performing this illusion requires the presence of two girls in the box. The other girl is doubled up in the right half of the box, with only her feet showing. Nobody is sawed in half."

The addition of artificial flavoring. The blending of various tobaccos. And the quality of the tobaccos themselves. Quality is by far the most important. Domestic cigarette tobaccos vary in price from 5¢ a pound up to 40¢ a pound. Imported tobaccos vary from 50¢ a pound to $1.15." "No wonder, then, that cigarettes differ in taste—since distinctive, pleasing flavor depends so largely upon the blending of the costlier tobaccos." "It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand." "Try Camels. Give your taste a chance to sense the subtle difference that lies in costlier tobaccos... a difference that means all the world in smoking pleasure... in pure, unalloyed satisfaction." "NO TRICKS... BOWDOIN ATHLETICS
GO ON NO DECISION BASIS, B. A. COUNCIL

Bow Done With Winning Games After Greatest
Year in History

All future Bowdoin athletic contests will be non-decision exhibitions, the Athletic Council decreed this morning after one of the most turbulent sessions ever experienced by that body.

The Council's announcement of this drastic change in policy comes on the heels of a completely undefeated winter season for Bowdoin teams. Difficulty in arranging schedules with New England colleges, owing to their fearfulness and attendant "conflicting dates," was given as the reason for the adoption of the non-decision scheme.

In addition the Council unanimously sanctioned the requests of the Fencing and Gym teams to have their sports assume major ranking. "It's only fair and in due recognition of their tremendous success of the past winter," declared a Council member to the Occident.

As a matter of record Bowdoin's fences have merely dubbed Coward 13-0 and would have smeared any other competition in New England were it not for the scenarios of opposing teams. And the gymnasts tumbled Technocracy and Pimple so beautifully two weeks ago (the scores were 44-10 and 44-9 respectively) that there is clearly no question of the any one organization in the East. Superiority of Bowdoin gym men over Even Tarmouth cancelled an engagement after reading newspaper accounts of the Polar Bears' convincing victories.

Although the swimmers drenched Tarmouth 59-18 and ran up an amazing string of 30-or-more point wins, major sanction was disallowed swimming on account of a rather belated start. It was opening averred that the waterdogs opening loss to Technocracy did not help them a bit, although they plainly outplayed-outswam - and outdid - their opponents in every - department - of the game.

SPORT TAIL LIGHTS

Bowdoin's latest move to import tramp athletes met with strenuous disapproval from the powers that be. "What," demanded Leonard Q. Sloopskide, of the Ping Pong Dept, "are we to do when such colleges—if we call them that—as Maine and Colby are proselyting men, and even paying them to play for them?" With four of their varsity men out with housemaid's knee, the ping pong outfit is indeed on the verge of despair.

Chances of making it a major sport seem low at this moment. The Council would be loath to admit any sport into the major category unless it won at least one-tenth of its games. "We have a good many athletics that don't do so well right now," said President Mc-Snoerf yesterday.

The proposition of converting Adams Hall into a covered hockey rink was given the kibosh by Presy Still's late yesterday afternoon. "No," he is misquoting as saying, "We plan to use it as a museum, or put it into a museum, or just let dry rot take its toll, or something."

Those who saw the White plumes in their encounter against Belby must have noticed the astonishing improvement of "Poeg" Daphey's ponding smashes in returning the Dolby man's lobs. White men showed admirable grit throughout the match. Daphey finished the match in fine style after being disarmed and "Net" Froshits showed his old time spirit and won a fair a six weeks' lay off in the infirmary.

Dr. Demi-Gogueson, with one leg hung over his desk, remarked to a reporter, "Propheetz is a great athlete. He would never have been able to pull through his sickness, much less come back to play, if it had not been for his fine constitution, built up by rigorous training in ping-pong."

New System Acclaimed

Approval of the new non-decision policy is forthcoming from all quarters. The first to express himself to the Occident was erstwhile Thomaso Beans, University of Maine grad, who phoned over the phone: "Well! schedule Yale!"

When informed of the Council's action in his palatial Freeport residence, Donald H. Mulligan curly ejaculated: "Dammit!" Later on Mr. Mulligan prepared a written statement for the Occident which read in part: "Get the picture. Up where we have to compete against all odds we need men who have 'seen' the world, not simply exhibitionists. Frankly I'm incensed."

Not the least enthused over the novel project is Casey Morton, local newsdealer and college presy, whose reply has been lost but the Occident is certain that it closely resembled the following: "Hot-cha! Now we'll get Bobby!"

SPCA—At the University of Massachusetts a radical history professor recently got into hot water with college authorities. Points of accusation: Part of a lecture on his delivery also was interesting. A sense of humor was discovered to underlie one statement.

QUILL TO APPEAR
SOON SAYS DAVIS

"Editor" Davis of the Quill, Bowdoin literary "magazine," has announced that due to some damn bone, the Quill which has been successively scheduled to appear on March 29, April 7, and May 11, will be issued next fall under the title, "The Bowdoin Groveller," a merger of the Quill and Groveller. Included among the drool in this month's issue are drives by Bottom C. Roocotettat, '36, who writes on "The College as a Summer Vacation," and by Dunkit J. Orremizle, '35 who writes on "Wild Animals I have Known." The editors, as usual, will write the other sixty pages.

DEBATE TAKEN ON DEBACLE COLLEGE

Before an enthusiastic audience of 3, the debate with Debabelle College was held last night in the Moulton Union telephone booth. Both sides spoke nicely, with firm, deep voices, and afterwards drank coffee and doughnuts in the canteen. The subject was unimportant.

Stephen F. Bleo, of Bowdoin, was the first speaker, but in the excitement of the moment your reporter failed to note his topics. (But a guess doesn't catch me, I'll hazard a guess, is better than nothing, so if the editor he talked on the "Relation of Prosperity to the College Student, or, The Road to Ruin as Extending from Harpswell Street to College Street via the Campus.")

Samuel A. Davis, of Bowdoin, spoke next, or maybe it was fourth, on practically the same thing. The debate was marred somewhat by the fact that the Debate team failed to show up.

COLLEGE GOLF COURSE COMING

the one at the summit of which now stands the gymnasium. The sacrifice of digging up the smooth even surface of the way which is under discussion is an—er—a enormity which I cannot comprehend. Irrepressible Professor Preserver bounced jocularly up munching a Swiss cheese on rye and brandishing a bottle of milk with the other hand. "Hear, hear!" He sat down. He's down, he's up; he's down, he's up.

"Gentlemen, there is a depression." (Long and loud applause. Side remark, "Brilliant fellow, Preserver. Just said in such a circumstance.") "There are unemployed." (See preceding side remark.) "There are college students who need money. There are not sufficient funds with the Grounds and Buildings Committee to make this golf course. I propose that some scholarship money be paid students to work on this course and make it."

Long Silence
A long silence. Loud hand clapping by Professor Beans.
President Bills. "Gentlemen, I think it is appropriate at such a time as this and here at a meeting of men, selected men, that my subject today is 'the relation of the faculty to the student.' There is no doubt that we are facing a grave situation. But with a little digging—'Violent hands pulled President Bills to his seat."

Professor Beans jumped up. "I was not going to say anything more today but I feel that I have to (in Vigel). Is there anyone here who would place against a man of the intelligence of President Bills the opinions of any two men here?" (Loud laughter. Hear! Hear!)

Professor Clam arose slowly to speak. Faculty members sitting in front of him pulled out handkerchiefs and held them before faces defensively.

Biggest Thrill
"Gentlemen. One of the biggest thrills of my life has been holding on grimly to the wheel of my Packard, tearing along that road at thirty miles an hour, nodding graciously to undergraduates, and wondering at every turn, rise, bump, and rut whether or not I shall suddenly come upon another car headed in my direction. If anything is done to change this twisting, rising and falling, delightfully rustic road, I shall almost be tempted to resign." (Cheers)

Fire alarm. Faculty members became silent. Heads nodded in rhythm to the whistles. Sudden action. As one man they rushed for the door. A Packard outside was mobbed by frantic professors eager to get to the conflagration. Packard drove away leaving dazed and bearded Professor Clam sitting in the middle of the road watching the car-recede in the distance.

PING-PONG SEASON
"SATISFACTORY" THO SINGLE MATCH WON

Tough Luck Follows Outfit
As Wowermen Drop 3 of 4 Tussles

Although they won but one match all season and scored but twice, the Polar Bear Ping-Pongers had what Coach Wowzer termed an "extremely satisfactory year," considering the losses the team suffered throughout the three months the team competed. Riddled by ineffectual and injurious, the White Pongers put up plucky fights against every opponent, only to lose close battles. They scored one notable victory over Colby when the Mule racket-wielders failed to appear.

In the first match of the season against Bates, the Wowermen received their first setback, losing 12 matches to 0. Captain Luther Park, Bowdoin's ace portside batsman, was put out for the rest of the season when he suffered a sprained thumb in attempting a difficult backhand pong.

Team Ineligible
At midyears before the second match, the entire first string Polar Bear lineup was declared ineligible, but the jayvees, all English majors, survived to carry the name of Bowdoin into foreign ping-pong courts. At this time Coach Wowzer issued a of us left to carry the name of Bowdoin into foreign ping-pong courts. The first game after midyears was an inter-sectional combat with New Hampshire, which Bowdoin also lost, 12 to 0. The team put up a magnificent fight, but failed to come through in the pinches. Another player was lost by injuries in this match, Homer Hoffin, who sprained his ankle while trying to jump over the net between sets.

Colby was scheduled to come to Brunswick on the 15th, and the White collected an overwhelming 12 to 0 victory when their opponents did not appear for the match.

The grand finale of the season was the game with Maine, in which the Wowermen put up a magnificent fight but lost, 12 to 0. Every event was close, but the White racketmen lost every tight match.

BOGER'S YOUTH IS INTERESTING

Mr. Sawyer as a Boy
Another man who knew Mr. Sawyer when the latter was a boy had this to say about his peculiarly well-developed qualities. "Zenith was a great reader. Very often his parents used to buy new books for the library. Zenith would take these new books into his bedroom and keep them there until he had thoroughly assimilated them. I remember at the time that we felt almost resentment at the talents of the boy. We had grown used to dropping into his room to read a bit and somehow we had begun to consider the library ours. I remember once especially when several new books came out he took them as usual to his bedroom and kept them there three months. We were extremely anxious to get hold of them, unreasonably so. Perhaps a great deal of our resentment was caused by the fact that we were envious of his power of concentration, it being impossible for us to spend three months on one new book."

The same acquaintance goes on to say more. "There was one peculiar thing about this library of the young Sawyer. Of the books on the wall (and these were not all his books, he had a store-room full of more) there were not many which were of any use. Space was occupied by the most curiously outdated and unserviceable editions and authors. Baby Zenith used to watch us with amusement as we would futilely try to find something there which we could use. If we finally turned to him he would, delightfully, get us or show us, the book we wished. Or at least he would get us one near enough to what we wished so that by using several others (which we usually picked ourselves to save him trouble) we could find what we wanted."

"I'd rather be right than president."
—Zangara.

A resume of the season is as follows:
Bowdoin 0, Bates 12
Bowdoin 0, New Hampshire 12
Bowdoin 12, Colby 0 (forfeit).
Bowdoin 0, Maine 12.
"I'd rather be right than president."

THOROUGHLY COWED
by out-of-town police, three Bowdoin bad-men surrendered late yesterday afternoon. They were cornered in a local stable, and when asked to come out they replied: "There's nobody in here but us cows, mister." There will be no trial. They will be shot.

BAD ATHLETES

being slaughtered unmercifully by the players since the inception of the crew a month, or so ago. Many who intended to take up the game withdrew from a proposed league early in the season when they became aware of its rather cruelly to animals and when they observed how violent certain players were becoming.

Z. E. Nertz, inventor of the game and graduate student of a well known Bridgewater college, appeared before Chief Deadwoods in a radiant defense of the Bowdoin men, but insistent pleadings of the petitioners swayed the Brunswick officer. It was their contention that so viciously were "birdies" assaulted that they were unable to fly more than two feet over the net before falling to the ground, and the players, they looked like perfect boob with the thing hopping a scant foot or two after they had wrought themselves into a lather by almighty cuts with their rackets.

papers and plays up this fact in the following fashion: "Astrology as your extra course. $7.50 worth of entertainment or your money cheerfully refunded. Why take Music 2 or Latin 12 when you can take Astronomy for the same price?"

Nooky's classroom has all the attributes of a three ring circus. In the center is the Official Astronomer of the motion of the Earth with himself playing the leading roles. How the hearts of the student body have thrilled to watch him spinning around on a tiny platform, brandishing a bicycle wheel on the end of a pole and singing "Here Comes the Sun".

Trained, Dog Act
If one gets weary of the actions of this Wonder-man the trained dog act will furnish a welcome respite. There are always several canines of various descriptions which Nooky keeps circulating about the room to lap the faces of the sleeping members of the class. Even at the present time class and bring them back to combe he is dickering with Stanley (145 lines right) Smith for the use of the awful Nana in his act.

In the manner of presentation of his material and the variety of the subject matter, Nooky is the equal if not better than Psycho. His lectures may not be as carefully planned as those of his adversary but he has a subtle and uncanny method of staggling them. He always can say his hands on whatever instrument he needs and he makes no waste motions. Whenever interest lags he trips over something or pretends to make an error. His favorite joke is the water trick which consists of turning on a stream of water which wets the entire front row.

Yet even this gentle and meek soul is not left alone. His friendly feet. At his Saturday night party which he gave for the faculty, false rumors were circulated that the punch was spiked and the radio was not paid for. However, the Great Mind keeps quietly on his own one track and lets the envious world
